These are such as I have met with, who had the Favour of this first Indulgence, Two and forty in all. I shall only add the Council's Acts anent Mr. Robert Douglas, and Mr. John Baird, as being a little distinct from the rest. That for Mr. Douglas runs, September 2^d, 'Forasmuch as the Kirk of Pancaitland is vacant, by the Death of Mr. Alexander Verner late Minister there, and a Process depending anent the Patronage of that Kirk, and the Kirk will vaik if Remeed be not provided: The Lords of Council have thought fit, in pursuance of the King's Letter, for this Time, and during this Vacancy, to appoint Mr. Robert Douglas, late Minister at Edinburgh, to preach, and exercise the Functions of the Ministry thereat, but Prejudice of the Patronage, when declared by the Judges ordinary.'
The Act anent Mr. John Baird, is dated December 16th, and runs, 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, That Mr. Matthew Ramsay, who is appointed to preach, and exercise the Function of the Ministry at Paisly, is not able of himself, by reason of Infirmary of Body, do, in regard of the Patron's Consent, and that of Mr. Matthew Ramsay, appoint Mr. John Baird, late Minister at Innerwick, to preach and exercise other Functions of the Ministry at Paisly.'
No more offers to me this Year anent the Indulgence, unless it be an Act of Council, December 29th, which, I imagine, has some Reference to this. Its Tenor is, 'The Council being dissatisfied with the Transaction between the Parishioners of Stewartoun, and their Minister Council's Act about Mr. R. Douglas.
Concerning Mr. Jo. Baird.
Council's Act about the Parish of Stewartoun.

1669.

Minister Mr. Alexander Ogilvy, whereby he hath agreed to desert the said Kirk, declare they will not allow the Cure at the said Kirk to be served in any Time hereafter, but by Persons of loyal and orthodox Principles.

It would seem, that upon the granting Indulgences to so many Parishes, others who were overlooked, offered the Curates a Piece of Money to leave them; and some of them were willing enough to do it, and to try their Fortune elsewhere: And by this Act the Council endeavour to prevent these Transactions.

This reckoned by some the best Shape of the Indulgence.

Its Effects on both Hands.

Thus I have given a plain Narration of Matter of Fact, as to this first Indulgence, from the publick Papers I have met with. This was the first, and, as many thought, the best Shape in which this publick Favour to Presbyterians stood.

The Bishops feared it, and opposed it very much; and when no better could be, they endeavoured to make it the Apple of Dissention among Presbyterian Ministers and People. Upon the other Hand, it is beyond Denial, the Lord, in his holy Providence, had much Good to bring out of it, to the famishing Souls of Thousands; and eventually, through the sinful Passions, venting themselves upon all Hands, undoubtedly much Evil followed upon it.

Things grava-
minous in it.

As it was very satisfying unto many, in the first Reports of it, so they were much disappointed when it appeared upon so narrow a Bottom, and clogg'd so much with Restrictions. They lamented that it flowed from the Exercise of Regal Supremacy, which none of the Takers professed any way to allow of. The Want of the Call of the People, or their Consent, when the Patron's was expressed, was gravaminous; and yet nothing is more certain than that the People most willingly received the Ministers when they came. The Ministers were required to do Evil, but they did it not, and were made a Kind of Prisoners in their own Congregations, and their Neighbours discharged to partake of their Ministry; yet the Prohibition was not obeyed.

Different Sentiments as to it.

Very knowing, judicious, and solid Christians and Ministers differed in their Sentiments of this Indulgence. Upon the one Hand it was looked upon as the opening a Door to a larger and clearer Liberty unto the Presbyterians in Scotland; and indeed Grounds were not wanting at this Juncture, for entertaining Views of this Sort: But in the Event it proved otherwise. Its first Appearance was fairest, and afterwards it turned darker. Further, it was said to be a mere Removal of the unjust Restraint put upon Ministers by the Council's Act at Glasgow, and a nullifying of the Prelates Sentences of Deposition, pronounced against such who were not reached by that Act; neither of which the Ministers had ever submitted to, but in so far as they were forced by Violence.

Upon the other Hand it was reasoned, That the Laws now in Being, having cassed and rescinded the Act for the Reformation-privileges of this Church 1592. and those since the 1638. and taken away the intrinsic Power of the Church, and its due Constitution; the Council's Actings, in Consequence of this Rescission, could not but be highly Erastian, in transporting Ministers, fixing Relations to other Congregations, and restricting and limiting them in the Exercise of their Function.

It was urged, That the Indulgence would never have been assented to in Council, had not its Advocates made it out, that it would weaken, if not ruine Presbyterians, by breaking that close Correspondence and Harmony they had hitherto maintained among themselves, by their being precluded from new Ordinations, which was what the Bishops feared above all Things; and by their being bound up from visiting the Country, and watering the People up and down, who were dissatisfied with Prelacy.

Lastly, It was feared that this Licence to a few, would be accompanied with Severity to the rest of the Ministers, and a Persecution of that Body of Presbyterians up and down, who could not have Access to the Ministry of the Indulged; and might now come to be deprived altogether of the Gospel. Within a little indeed the Presbyterian Ministers were banished from Edinburgh, and Conventicles punished with greater Rigour; yet 'tis sure they increased under this Indulgence.

What was generally agreed
to.

Notwithstanding of those different Sentiments, in a Matter which indeed could only be fully judged of by its Fruits and Consequents complexly taken; yet it seemed agreed to, almost by every Body, That, in this troubled State of the Church, Ministers might warrantably accept of this Liberty to preach in their own Congregations, from which they had been violently forced, or in other Places, until a Door was opened in Providence, to return to their own Charges; provided a due Testimony were given against the Manner of granting this Favour, which all reckoned gravaminous.

All Ministers named accept, and none refuse to hear them
at first.

Accordingly, the whole Ministers pitched upon were willing to accept; and, by the Consent of their Brethren, the whole Presbyterians through Scotland cheerfully submitted to their Ministry, as they had Access. Matters continued thus, as far as I can learn, till some of the banished Ministers in Holland, perhaps at first upon Misinformations, or at least incomplete Accounts from Scotland, some time after this, wrote over some Letters, and sent Home some Reasons against joyning with the Indulged. This began a Flame, which, by Degrees, rose to a very great Height.

It must be owned, the LORD eminently countenanced the Labours and Ministry of the Indulged; and they could not but acknowledge they had as great and sensible Assistance in the Work of the Gospel, as ever they had formerly known; and their Success among their Hearers was not small: So, whatever Scruples came, in Process of Time, to be raised among some of the People; yet the Bulk of Presbyterians kept by them, and Persons of Rank went on to use their utmost Interest with the Council to have more and more indulged; till, about Half a Year after, the Council shut the Door, and would allow no more. The Difficulties they met with, and further Pressures laid upon them very quickly, will come to be noticed in their own Place, next Year.

Indulged Ministers eminently countenanced with Success.

S E C T. III.

Of the Proceedings of the Parliament, which sat down October 19th, 1669. in as far as they relate to the Church.

I Come forward to the Actings of the Parliament, which succeeded the Indulgence, and passed such Laws as were to the Prelates some way a Balance to it; and shall give some Account of them all together, and then gather up several Particulars throughout this Year, I have hitherto passed, of design to put them together in the last Session.

A Parliament after the Indulgence.

The great Design of this Session of Parliament, was, to give some Beginning to a Project now on Foot, in order to an Union with England. This Matter being mostly Civil, I leave it very much to such who write the History of this Reign. It was thought by the most discerning Persons, that this projected Union was designed for advancing arbitrary Government, and the encroaching upon the Liberties of the House of Commons in England, who at this Time made a Stand against Court-measures. The Lovers of Liberty did then apprehend, That Two distinct Parliaments were less liable by far to be brought into arbitrary Measures, than one united Parliament. Accordingly, next Year, after the Scots Parliament had given into the King's Measures, and empowered him to nominate Commissioners for Scotland, the Commons in England turned peremptorily against it, and could not be brought into what they reckoned everfive of their own Constitution.

The Design of it to forward an Union with England, which came to nothing, and why.

A Proclamation was issued out, July 15th, for calling a new Parliament; and Care was taken to dispose the Elections so as the King and the Bishops might be exactly served, and any arbitrary and illegal Steps taken by the Council, approved. I find the King's Advocate, September 2^d, is ordered by the Council, to pursue before the Parliament, a Process of Forfeiture against those guilty of Rebellion, 1666. who are excepted forth of his Majesty's Indemnity, and are not already forfeited, or had not received his Majesty's Remission. And, October 11th, Lawderdale's Commission to represent his Majesty in this Parliament, is read, and recorded in the Council-registers.

Elections to be taken Care of; Lawderdale's Commission to represent the King, read October 11.

October 19th, this Session of Parliament was opened with reading the King's Letter, which relates only almost to the designed Union. The Commissioner, who is entrusted with this great Affair, in a Speech, which is in Print, recommends this Matter most earnestly; and, to engage the Bishops and their Party in Parliament, whom he had grated a little in the Business of the Indulgence, to fall in the more heartily, 'He insists at great Length upon the King's fixed Resolution, unalterably to maintain Episcopacy; he commends it highly, and assures them the King will not allow of Conventicles, especially since he had granted an Indulgence, and presseth the bearing down of them: And, at the Conclusion of his Speech, effectually to carry the Prelates to his Side, he again repeats all the Assurances formerly given in their Favour.'

Begins October 19. King's Letter, and Commissioner's Speech.

The Parliament, in their Return, which is likewise printed, take Notice of the King's Letter in every Branch of it, and express Abundance of Loyalty; but do not notice the Commissioner's Harangue against the Bishops. All the Members sign the Declaration, which obliged them to maintain Episcopacy. Generally they had taken it before, for there was no great Alteration of Members from the last Parliament. I restrict my self to their Actings, with relation to the Church and Presbyterians; and there are only a few Acts which look this Way.

Parliament's Return to the King.

Their First Act this Session is, that remarkable and high-flying one, asserting his Majesty's Supremacy in all Cases Ecclesiastical, and over all Persons; which I have insert, App. N^o. 35.

Their Act asserting the King's Supremacy. App. N^o. 35.

What hath been observed in the former Book, upon the Oath of Allegiance, as it was termed, the Declaration, and the Acts of Parliament 1662 and 1663. will save me the Trouble of many Things which might come in here; yet so odd and extraordinary an Act natively offers not a few Remarks.

Remarks upon it.

Acts of Parliament to which the Indulgence seem'd contrary.

Such who violently opposed the Indulgence, tell us, This Act was framed to save the Council from the Treason they were guilty of, by granting it contrary to standing Laws and Acts of Parliament. Indeed several Acts of Parliament do seem to run cross to it: The Act of Restitution, 1662. says, 'That all Church-power is to be regulated and authorized in the Exercise thereof, by the Archbishops and Bishops, who are to put Order to all Ecclesiastical Matters and Causes, and to be accountable to his Majesty for their Administration.' And by the 4th Act of that same Session of Parliament, it is expressly ordained and statuted, 'That none hereafter be permitted to preach in Publick, within any Diocese, without the Licence of the Ordinary.' And, Act 1st Sess. 3^d. 1663. the King seems to bind up himself in this Matter, and promises, 'Not to endure, nor give Way or Connivance to any Variation from the established Church-government.' And the same Act recommends it to the Council, 'To punish all Preachers without the Bishop's Licence, &c. as seditious Persons.' From these it would appear, that the King and Privy Council had taken upon them to cast those Acts of Parliament: And, as was now ordinary, the Voters in Council needed a new Act of Parliament to save them from Guilt in this respect. The Two Archbishops indeed pleaded the Indulgence was contrary to Law, and would never be present, or vote in any thing relative thereto.

The real Spring of this Act.

But I do not think the Lords of Council were in any great Apprehensions of their Hazard this Way. The King's Will was declared by the Parliament to be their Law. The Bishops were in their Management of Church-affairs entirely subjected unto the King, their Power was entirely derived from the Supremacy, and all with respect to the Church had been very fairly, tho' most iniquously, put into the King's Hand; and the Counsellors, by the present unhappy Constitution, seem safe enough, since the King was made absolute, and Parliaments and their Acts were but Pieces of Form, especially as to Ecclesiastical Matters. The real Spring of this Act anent the Supremacy, seems to have been the little Sputter made by the Archbishop of Glasgow, and his diocesan Synod, this Year, against the Exercise of the Supremacy, when it struck against them; of which some Account shall be given in the following Section.

Observations on the Narrative of it.

To return to the Act it self, the Narrative containing the Reason of making this Act now, is, The Good and Peace of the Church and State, which required a clear Assertion of his Majesty's Power, in relation to Matters and Persons Ecclesiastical. How far the Procedure at Glasgow needed such an Assertion, I shall not say: But how the Good and Peace of any right constitute Church, can be advanced by the utter Removal of all Church-power, I cannot see. It was well known however, our Managers opened so plainly against all Power Ecclesiastick, this positive Discovery of the Mind of the Imposers, did very much put an End to the former Debates about the Oath of Allegiance, as it was called; and is so plain a Sense put upon it, that it does not appear how any after this, who had not abandoned our Reformation, yea, the owning of all Spiritual Power in the Church, as a Christian Society, could fall in with it.

On the assertory Part of it.

What follows in the assertory Part of the Act, supreme Authority and Supremacy over all Persons and Causes Ecclesiastical, is as full as Words can make it, and hath been already considered. What is comprehended in the external Government and Policy of the Church, I do not well know; but all included in that, is now to be disposed according to the Royal Wisdom: And if the World, to which the Things of God are Foolishness, think proper to take away all external Government and Policy, certainly the King is here impowered to do so. If he shall see good to remove the Lords the Bishops, I know not how they can well complain, since they have consented to it. If a Parity in the Government of the Church be found best, the King hath a Door set open to him: But the Prelates, no doubt, were perswaded of better Things concerning the King. Yea, if Royal Wisdom should see good, as some of the King's Predecessors had done, to write Letters unto the holy Father the Pope, if he should be owned as the universal Bishop and Centre of Unity to the Western Churches, if his Authority and Jurisdiction should again be introduced; all is but what the Law permits to be done; none of the Clergy who went into these Measures must complain, and probably few of them would.

Though so vast a Power was found proper to be lodged in the Hands of so religious a Prince as King CHARLES II. yet, who knew who was to be after him, a wise Man or a Fool? It appeared then very hard to all real Protestants, that such a Trust was put likewise in the Hands of his Successors; especially when the apparent Successor was a Papist, and his Principles obliged him, and this Act allowed him to put this Church, as to its Government and Policy, in the Hands of the Pope. I own, if that which follows were true, that this Disposal of the Government and Policy, is an inherent Right in the Crown, it must natively devolve with the Crown to the Successors: But I hope, none who read the Bible with any Reflection, will allow this to inherc in any Crown, but his on whose Head are many Crowns.

That the King and his Successors may settle, enact, and emit such Constitutions anent Church-government, Persons employed in it, Ecclesiastick Meetings, and Matters to be proposed and determined determined therein, as they in their Royal Wisdom shall think fit, is such a Thrust at the very Being of a Church, as an organized Body with a Head, and a modelled spiritual Society, that I doubt if ever a greater was given under colour of Law. A Set of Gentlemen of the Principles of the Tale of a Tub, the Rights of the Christian Church, the Essay on free Thinking, and others who are a new Increase of Sinner's, unknown to former Times, might be excused, had they sat in our Parliament: But for Scotsmen, many of whom had taken the Covenants, and known better Things, to enact such a Law, is somewhat more than surprising. The Sovereign may act, not only in the Government and Discipline of the Church, which by this Law are mere Cyphers, but in all Matters which come before Church-judicatories, and make Constitutions, as he pleaseth, without any Consent either of Church or Parliament. I see nothing to hinder the King, acting according to this Power, from establishing a new Religion, and palming a new Confession of Faith upon Scotland. This is a Grant paramount to the Claims of the Pope, or a general Council either. Indeed nothing of Church-power that I can see, is kept back from the Sovereign here.

Next, such Acts and Constitutions of the Royal Pope, being recorded in the Books of Council, and published, be what they will, are to be implicitly obeyed by all Subjects, without asking Questions: And by virtue of this Power, the King and Parliament rescind all former Acts of Parliament, that is much; but, which is more, all Ecclesiastical Acts, which may be found inconsistent with this Erastian Power in the Sovereign. It is well this Law is a non habente potestatem, and more than any Court on Earth can do, and materially a casting and abrogating the Scriptural Rule.

I shall only further notice, That this Act was not only gravaminous to all Presbyterians, but many of the Prelatists themselves were dissatisfied with it. Mr. Collier speaks of it as strong and comprehensive Language; and Bishop Kennet says, It was the dispensing Power at the greatest Height, and while Indulgence was Part of the Politick of England, all Hopes of it were removed in Scotland. It would seem the Author knew not, that another Indulgence was given in the Year 1672. However, the present Set of Bishops in Scotland, as far as I know, what from one View, what from another, went into it; yet as many of their Clergy as had a Regard to Protestant Principles, or owned any Spiritual Power in the Church, and were unwilling to give up all the Rights of the Christian Constitution to the Civil Magistrate, disliked it. However, it passed, and was a very good Mean to advance the present Scheme of absolute Government in the State. Slavish Principles very soon introduce Tyranny in Practice; and Erastianism, as well as Popery, is a very good Handle for introducing arbitrary Government; and a Papacy in the State, natively leads to Tyranny.

This Act dissatisfying to some Prelatists

This was the First and most remarkable Act of this Session, and I find it very natively followed by the Second Act, anent the Militia, wherein the Power of arming the Subjects, and raising them in Arms, is likewise placed among the inherent Rights of the Crown: Although by many former Laws Weapon-shewing, and the fencible Men in every Shire, their being armed for their own Defence, is declared to be the Privilege of Scotsmen. Thus in the first Room our religious and Reformation-rights, and next our Lives and Civil Liberties, are laid at the King's Feet, to be trampled upon.

Remarks on 2. Act about the Militia.

Their Fifth Act is for the Security of the Persons of the Clergy, whom the Law now calls orthodox. This upon the Matter hath been already considered, upon the Council's Proclamation above, to the same Effect. I find it comes to the Parliament, from the Privy Council. Upon the 20th of November their Records run, 'An Act to be brought into the Parliament, ratifying two Acts in Favours of the orthodox Clergy, being read in Council, the Lords approve thereof, and ordain the same to be transmitted to the Lords of the Articles.' This Method of transmitting of Acts of Parliament from the Privy Council, was both needful to the Managers, and of a considerable Use to them; but I leave it to be examined by Lawyers. No more Observes on the Act it self are necessary: Every reflecting Person must see the Necessity of all just Measures for the Safety of a Gospel-minister in his Parish; and the Clergyman's suitable Carriage to his Station, and the Rules of it, will be one of the best Guards about him. But this Act, when I read it, appeared calculated to serve a Party, and containing several unreasonable Clauses. It seems hard, that if wicked People shall attack a Minister's House or Person, and his Parishioners, if they do not apprehend and bring to a Trial the Persons guilty, be made liable to make up the Minister's Damage, with the Interest of it; when it may be, it was plainly impossible for them to apprehend the Rioter; and probably they knew nothing about the Attempt, and were never called to assist their Minister when insulted. However, as those Attacks were designed at first for Pretences to keep up a Standing Army, so afterwards they became a good Handle for extorting large Sums of Money from Presbyterian Heritors in Parishes, perfectly innocent of these Riots; and a good Occasion for some of the poorer Sort of the Curates, to get a swinging Sum from their Parishioners. No more was to be done, but casting themselves in the Road of a Rabble, and endeavour to get some small Thing to be taken out of their Houses, and then, to be sure, they had it made up with Interest, Cent per Cent Profit.

On the 5. Act for the Security of the Persons of the Clergy. 'Tis transmitted from the Council to the Parliament.

However unreasonable this Act appears to be as to the particular Congregations where the orthodox Clergy were, and whatever Misimprovement some of them made of it, I would not be understood by these Remarks, to vindicate any irregular Attempts made upon their Persons. It hath been observed, that few or no Presbyterians were engaged in those Attempts, as far at least as my Information bears; but if any were, I leave them to answer for themselves. Upon the Whole it will appear, that nothing by some was thought too high at this Time, for the orthodox and established Clergy, and nothing too severe for Presbyterian Ministers, and the suffering People who adhered to them.

Remarks upon
Act 11. concerning the Forfeiture of Persons in the Rebellion, 1666.
App. N^o. 36.

The 11th Act of this Session, December 15th, 1669. Concerning the Forfeiture of Persons in the late Rebellion, deserves a Room in this Collection; and so the Reader will find it, App. N^o. 36. It is a Ratification of what the Council and Justiciary had done formerly, as we have heard. From the reading of this Act, the Reader will easily perceive, its Design is to cover and cloke former illegal and arbitrary Actings, when done. The People concerned were conscious to themselves they had gone contrary to Practick and Reason, in forfeiting Gentlemen in Absence, and that they had assumed a Parliamentary Power, in forfeiting the King's Vassals in the Methods they took: Therefore, ex post facto, they must have this new Law to save their Bacon. It is further plain, That in this Act there is a Parliamentary Forfeiture passed upon those Persons in Absence, and, as far as I can understand, never cited before the Parliament, that what the Gentlemen had to say against so extraordinary a Step, might be heard. In the last Room it may be observed, that a Parliamentary Right and Power is here made over to the Lords of the Justiciary for the Time to come; to wit, the Forfeiting of all Persons of all Conditions and Ranks in case of Rebellion, or Rising in Arms upon any Pretence whatsoever. I need not show how hard this is, to subject the Lives and Estates of Noblemen, Gentlemen and others, to the Caprice, Humour, and Party-spite of Two or Three Men; and all in the Absence of the Parties.

The Parliam-

The rest of the Acts of this Session relate to Civil Matters, in as far as I have noticed, and so I meddle not with them. The Parliament rose upon the 23^d of December this Year. I come now to cast together several other Things relative to Presbyterians during this Year, which I have passed in the former Sessions.

S E C T. IV.

Of the continued Sufferings of some Persons who had been at Pentland, the imprisoned Gentlemen, and some other Things this Year 1669.

Remarkables
this Year omitted in the former Sessions.

MY Accounts of the Sufferings upon the Score of Conventicles, of the Indulgence and Procedure of the Parliament this Year, have run to so great a Length, that I shall dispatch what further offers, as to the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, very quickly.

A few Lists of Papists brought into the Council.

The Council's Letter to the Archbishops last Year was noticed, anent the sending in Lists of Papists. I find, February 4th this Year, they bring in some Lists, and lay them before the Council: But it seems their Heart was not so much in that necessary Work, as in hunting down Presbyterians; for the Council record it, that many Lists are wanting, and refer the whole Affair to a Committee, whose Report I do not meet with this Year; and in prosecution of an Act made last Year against Quakers, upon the 24th of June, the Laird of Swinton is sent Prisoner to Stirling Castle. How long he continued there, I know not.

Cunningham of Bedlane sent over Prisoner
from Ireland.

Hardships are continued upon such who had been concerned in Pentland. Ireland had been a Retreat to some of them; but all Pains was taken to discover them in their Hidings there; and so John Cunningham of Bedlane came to be apprehended there. Notice was soon given to our Managers, and he sent over to Scotland. February 4th, 'The Council being informed, that John Cunningham sometime of Bedlane, who was in the late Rebellion, is apprehended by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, appoint the Magistrates of Air to receive him as Prisoner, when sent over.' The same Orders are sent to Irvine and Greenock, if he shall be brought into any of these Ports, and Bedlane is ordered to be forwarded to Dumbarton Castle. In April, I find he comes over; and, after some little Time in Glasgow Tolbooth, he is sent to Stirling Castle: Here he continued a long Time, and in Dumbarton Castle, as we may hear upon the after Years.

Upon

Upon the 10th of June, the Council pass a Sentence of Banishment upon Robert Gibson, Robert Paton, Robert Harper, and William Cuthbertson. They were brought in by Major Lockburn, from the Parish of Finwick, and the Country about, and confessed their being at Pentland, and were ordered to be transported to the Plantations. I hear many others, whose Names are not come to my Hand, were served the same Way.

Cannon of Mardrogat, of whom before, when 'tis found his Discoveries are not so important as they expected, and yet they find him willing to serve their Purposes, upon the 7th of January he hath the Liberty of a free Prisoner granted him: And, upon September 2^d, he gets his Remission from the King, and afterward proved worthy of it, and not unuseful to the Persecutors. Robert Chalmers, of whom likewise in the former Years, gives in a Petition to the Council, April 6th, and they recommend him to Lawderdale for a Remission; and upon the 5th of July it is granted.

The West-country Gentlemen before mentioned, are this Year a little more favourably dealt with, but still continued in their Confinement. Sir George Maxwell, February 25th, is allowed to stay some Time at Edinburgh about his necessary Affairs; and, upon March 4th, the Council prolong his Liberty to continue there till May; and, upon May 5th, it is continued till June: And Cunninghamhead, upon the 25th of February, is allowed by the Lords to go to his House at Kirriemuir, until the 15th of March, and that to search for some Writs which nearly concern his Affairs. This is all I find about them, till the End of this Year, these worthy Gentlemen were put to no small Trouble and Charges, in petitioning for these little Favours now and then granted; and I take them to have been still in Prison at Stirling, except at these Times forementioned.

Another Gentleman I have not met with before, brought under Confinement from mere Jealousie and Suspicion, without any Thing laid to his Charge, which has come to my Knowledge, is Colonel Robert Barclay. July 29th, the Council, upon his Petition, allow him to reside at his own House at Urry, and confine him within Three Miles about it, until January next: And in August 1670. I find the Council take off his Restraint. This is all I have anent him.

This Year likewise, the Council now and then are doing some Acts of Justice to Gentlemen, and others, who had been oppressed by Sir William Bannantyne. Upon the 8th of July, I find, upon a Petition, Gilbert M'Adam of Waterhead, is ordered to receive up from the Clerk one Bond of Six hundred Merks, and another of Seven hundred Merks, extorted by Violence from him by Sir William: And upon the 29th of July, Wallace of Carnel, in the Shire of Air, gets up a Bond of his, extorted by the same Man. Many other of Sir William's Oppressions escaped the Council, and cannot now be recovered.

When the Indulgence was resolved upon, and about the Time of the granting of it, some Lenity was shewed to some Presbyterian Ministers, who had been long confined, and had no Occasion to keep Conventicles, save in their Rooms in the Prison, whither some came and joyned with them in Worship. Thus Mr. Thomas Wylie, of whom before, after he had been, since the 1663. or 1664. confined to Dundee, and in October 1667. had been permitted to come besouth Tay, with an express Prohibition to come within Four Miles of Edinburgh, is, May this Year, allowed to come to Edinburgh about necessary Affairs; and, June 4th, his Liberty is continued without a Day, upon his giving Bond to appear before the Council, when called. This Way several of the Ministers and others got out their long Confinements.

August 3^d, the Privy Council being informed of the soder and good Carriage of Mr. Robert Duncan, late Minister at Dumfries, under his Confinement, and that he hath been under Restraint for several Years, take off the Restraint, and declare him free to go about his lawful Affairs. And, September 1st, Mr. Donald Cargill gives in a Petition to the Council, begging that his Confinement beyond Tay, may be taken off, and he allowed to come to Edinburgh about Law Affairs. The Council allow it to be taken off, providing he enact himself not to reside within the Town of Glasgow, upon any Occasion whatsoever, nor in the Town of Edinburgh and Suburbs thereof, without Warrant from the Lords of Session and Exchequer.

I cannot leave the History of this Year, without taking Notice of some Actings of the Archbishop of Glasgow, and his diocesan Meeting there, at this Time, about the King's Supremacy, which made a very great Noise, and issued in the Dimission of the Archbishop, and a Council-proceeding against Two of the Members of the Synod. Most Part of this Account I shall draw from the Records of the Council.

The greatest Part, by far, of the indulged Ministers, were in the Bounds of the Diocese of Glasgow; and the Liberty granted to Presbyterian Ministers, did exceedingly gall the Bishop and his Underlings. Accordingly, when they meet in their Synod, in September this Year, the Bishop and they agree upon a Paper, entituled A Remonstrance. I have not seen it; but by Papers writ about this Time, it is said to contain a heavy Complaint against the Indulgence, and the Council's placing Persons, lying under Ecclesiastick Censures, into the Ministry at their old Charges, or elsewhere, when neither the Bishop or Synod had ever given the least Shadow of Relaxation from those Censures.

it.

This Paper likewise bore pretty hard upon the King's Supremacy in Ecclesiastick Matters; and no great Regard was shewn in it, either to the Acts of Parliament made about this, or the Oaths the Members of the Synod were under to maintain and support it. The Prelates and passive Obedience Gentlemen, when the Sovereign goes their Way, have nothing but the Praises of the Prerogative, and unlimited Power of the Prince in their Mouth; but when they are crossed, and touched in their own tender Points, they can kick and fling against a Court, as well as others. As long as the King's Supremacy was exerted for the Inbringing, Support, and Maintenance of the Bishops, none are so fond of it as they; and 'tis preached up as an inherent Right of the Crown, and what not. Let the Tables be turned but a little, and a few Presbyterian Ministers indulged, and some Restraint laid upon their persecuting Spirit, Nature rebels against Principle, and the passive Prelates alter their Note. How happy a Thing is it, when all Matters and Persons are kept within their just and reasonable Limits and Boundaries!

The Council's Act about it,
September last,
requiring its Production.

Such a Paper as this could not but very soon make a Noise, being so plain an Attack upon the Managers; and so I find, upon the last of September, the Council have this Affair before them. I shall intert their own Words. 'The Lords of Privy Council being informed, That, in the late Synod holden at Glasgow, some Papers were agitated, debated, and passed, under the Name of Petition, Remonstrance, or Grievances, which may tend, in the Consequences thereof, to the Prejudice of his Majesty's Authority, and of the Peace of his Government; They do therefore recommend to, and require the Lord Archbishop of Glasgow, forthwith to call for the foresaid Papers, in whose Hands soever they be, and to present them before the Council, at their Meeting October 14th next. As also, that he require Mr. James Ramsay Dean of Glasgow (the Deans of Hamilton, where he now was, were Deans of Glasgow likewise, as I am told) and Mr. Arthur Ross Parson of Glasgow, who were the Persons who formed and drew these Papers, and were nominated for presenting and prosecuting the same, to compear before the Council the same Day: And further, require the Archbishop to produce before the Council, the Day foresaid, the Clerk of the Synod, and the publick Records thereof, with all the Minutes, Votes and Acts passed therein; and that he take a special Care that no Copies be given of these Papers, nor no further Proceeding therein, nor Prosecution thereof, until the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having seen and considered the same, give further Orders thereanent.' I find the Archbishop is in this Sederunt of Council, and 'tis the last Time I find him there for several Years.

'Tis produced,
October 14th, and a Committee ordered to consider it.Council's Act condemning it,
October 16th.

Upon October 14th, the Commissioner Lawderdale produceth before the Council, a Paper sent by the Archbishop of Glasgow; and, after reading, 'tis remitted to the Consideration of the following Committee, Duke Hamilton, Earls of Tweddale and Kincardin, the Register, Advocate, and the Chancellor who is Supernumerary.

Their Report is made, October 16th; and the Council form the following Act, condemning a Paper passed in the Synod of Glasgow.

INASMUCH as the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council being informed, That in the late Meeting of the Archbishop, and a Part of the Synod of Glasgow, there was a Paper agitated and passed, in Name of the Archbishop and Synod, tending, in the Consequences thereof, to the Prejudice of his Majesty's Authority, and the Peace of his Government, did ordain the same to be produced before them: Which being accordingly now done, and owned by the Archbishop, Dean, and Parson of Glasgow, to be the true Paper; and the Council having considered the same, and having also considered the Depositions of the said Dean and Parson of Glasgow, who were employed in the drawing thereof, do find and declare the same to be, in it self, a Paper of a dangerous Nature and Consequence, tending toward the depraving of his Majesty's Laws, and misconstruing of the Proceedings of his Majesty and his Council, and in the Manner of conveying thereof, to be most illegal and unwarrantable; and do therefore ordain the same to be suppressed, and no Copies thereof to be kept by any; and discharge all his Majesty's Lieges, of what Quality or Function soever, from owning or countenancing the said Paper, or any other Paper or Purposes of that Nature hereafter, under the Pains contained in the Acts of Parliament made thereanent; and desire his Majesty's Commissioner, humbly to offer his Majesty an Account of their Proceedings in this Matter, together with the Paper it self, to the end his Majesty may declare his further Pleasure: And ordain the Clerks of Council to deliver up to his Majesty's Commissioner, the principal Paper passed in the Synod of Glasgow, with the Depositions of the Dean and Parson of Glasgow thereanent, and an Extract of this Act of Council to be transmitted to the King.

Letter from the King in Dec.
laying aside the Archbishop's

When this Matter was considered by the King, a Letter came down about December, laying aside Archbishop Burnet from acting any more as Archbishop of Glasgow. He must submit to the Royal Supremacy, the Author of his Being, as a Bishop. His own Vote, That the the Management of the external Government and Policy of the Church, and the ordering of all Church-affairs belonged to the Crown, bound him down to this Piece of passive Obedience. 1669.

Accordingly, January 6th, 1670. the Commissioner represents in Council, That the Archbishop of Glasgow had demitted his Office and Dignity in his Majesty's Hands, and desired his Name might be put out of the Rolls of Council, as being no more a Member of it. The Archbishop demits

Mr. James Ramsay Dean of Hamilton, and Mr. Arthur Ross Parson of Glasgow, the Bishop's great Tools in the Remonstrance, were examined very narrowly by the Council; and, as we have heard, declared all they knew, upon Oath; and, after having owned their Fault, and got a Reprimand from the Council, the King pardons them, and they are remanded back to their Charges: But the Archbishop is made a Sacrifice to the Royal Supremacy, and falls, for a while, a Kind of joyn't Confessor with suffering Presbyterians. The Dean of Hamilton and Parson of Glasgow reprimanded and pardoned.

- - - - - Nec lex est justior illa, &c.

And, for some Years, Mr. Robert Leightoun, Bishop of Dumblain, had the Archbishoprick of Glasgow in commendam, till Burnet was restored again; which, as was then believed, was by gross Simony. And that I may call the Whole of this together, the Archbishop's Restoration was said to be thus. The Bishop's Daughter was married to the Heir of the Estate of Elphinstoun, and had a very large Annuity secured upon the Estate; her Husband died very quickly from her: The Gentleman who fell next to the Lordship of Elphinstoun, came in Suit of my Lord Haltoun's Daughter. My Lord knew very well how to bestow his Children, and was unwilling to engage in an Estate so considerably burdened with the Bishop's Daughter's Jointure. At length this Expedient is fallen on; The young Lady is prevailed upon to give a Discharge, and make a Renunciation of her Jointure upon Elphinstoun's Estate, and my Lord Haltoun found Means to get the Archbishop her Father restored to his Office and Benefice. This made some say, That the Bishop's Money, who gave his Daughter an Equivalent, was taken, and that of Simon Magus was not. Mr. Leightoun Bishop of Dumblain gets Glasgow in commendam. The Archbishop restored, and how.

From this Account we may notice, how much a Stranger to this Affair Mr. Collier is, in the Narrative he gives of it, Vol. II. p. 895. Justly enough he observes, That the Act assertory of the King's Supremacy, is penn'd in strong comprehensive Language: But what follows does not agree with the Facts already laid down. 'By virtue of this Act, Burnet, Archbishop of Glasgow, was dispossessed of his See, and Dr. Leightoun put in his Place. This Remove was made by the High Commissioner Lawderdale. However, the Court being sensible that this was pushing the Regale to an unusual Extent, gave Leightoun only the Title of Com-mendator of Glasgow, till Archbishop Burnet was prevailed with to sign a Resignation: But this being looked upon as an involuntary Cession, the Scottish Bishops were shocked at it. The Archbishop of Canterbury likewise, and the rest of the English Prelates, thought the common Interest of their Order affected, and that the Episcopal Authority was struck at in the Glasgow Precedent. In short, they solicited so heartily in the Cause, and represented the Business in so persuasive a Manner to the King, that his Majesty revoked his Proceedings, and Archbishop Burnet was restored.' Mr. Collier's Account of this Affair, with Remarks.

This considerable Change in the Diocese of Glasgow, made some Alteration in the Treatment of Presbyterians in the West, as I shall next Year have Occasion to observe: And particularly, it seems to have opened a Door for the setting at Liberty the West-country Gentlemen, who had been so long under Confinement. Burnet had been a most violent Pusher of the Persecution; and, it was generally believed, that it was through his Influence, and from some base Design he had in View, that several of them were incarcerated in the 1665. This is certain, that he had been at Court; and, as soon as he came Home, Warrants were issued out for apprehending Cuninghamehead, Rowallan, and Nether-pollock, and the others before named. The Gentlemen were living peaceably at Home, expecting no such Treatment, and a Reason was never given them, why they were imprisoned; and, by all the Informations they could have, the Archbishop was the Spring of all their Trouble. Upon Mr. Leightoun's coming in, the West-country Gentlemen dealt favourably with.

The Three just now named, we have heard, were continued under Confinement, when others got out upon the Bond of Peace, 1668: And, towards the End of this Year, as far as I can guess, they gave in the following Supplication unto Lawderdale, who was Commissioner and Secretary.

To the Right Honourable the Commissioner his Grace,

cation.

The humble Supplication of Sir William Cuningham of Cuninghamhead, Sir William Mure of Rowallan, and Sir George Maxwel of Nether-pollock,

Sheweth,

‘THAT whereas, being detained more than these Four Years Prisoners, to our heavy Prejudice in our Persons, Families and Affairs; and seeing we are, through the Grace of God, still resolved to continue in all faithful Duty and Loyalty to our Dread Sovereign, and due Respect to the Peace and Welfare of the Kingdom; May it therefore please your Grace, in Consideration of the Premises, to order our Releasement; whereby your Grace shall not more evidence his Majesty’s Goodness, and your own Affection to his Majesty’s Service, than oblige, to all thankful Acknowledgment’

Your Grace’s most humble
Supplicants and Servants,

Cuninghamhead.

Rowallan.

Nether-pollock.

Observes upon
it.

The Reader will observe with me, the Caution and Faithfulness of those honourable and excellent Confessors for the Truth, and Presbytery. Like good Subjects as they were, and still had been, they engage to continue in all faithful Duty and Loyalty to the King, and due Respect to the Peace of the Kingdom: And yet, as became covenanted Presbyterians, they prudently keep themselves free of any Promises to subject to, or approve the Supremacy and Constitution of the Church.

Sir James Stuart,
liberate.

Upon this Supplication, Lawderdale, as Commissioner and great Manager, orders their Liberation from Stirling Castle, where, I think, all the Three were. I suppose it was much about this Time, that the other two worthy Gentlemen, Sir James Stuart, and Sir John Chieffy, were liberate, since I find no more Account of them in the Council-registers after this Year; but I have no particular Accounts of the Circumstances of their Liberation.

An Attempt made upon Mr.
John Row Curate of Balmaclellan, with the Council’s Assent.

Nothing more remarkable offers this Year, unless it be Two Attempts made upon Curates by some Persons in the End of the Year; some Hints of which I find in the Council-books. Upon October 20th, the Privy Council being informed of a horrid Insolence, committed upon the Person of Mr. John Row Minister at Balmaclellan in Galloway, do ordain all accessory to it, to be cited in to Edinburgh, to compare before the Council; and likewise the Parrishioners of Balmaclellan, to hear and see themselves fined, and otherwise censured, according to the Acts of Council in March and June, 1667. Mr. Row’s Complaint bears, That Three Persons, upon the 30th of September, came into his House in Womens Clothes, about Nine of the Clock at Night, and took him out of his Bed, and beat him, and broke up Trunks, Presses, &c. and took away what they pleased. All this is libelled, and Mr. Thomas Warner, James Grier of Milmark his Father in Law, Gordon of Holm, Gordon of Gordonstoun, John Carsan, and James Chalmers, Heritors there, are charged as Actors, Committers, at least Contrivers and Assisters, at least, have since supplied or reset them. The Diet being short, and the Distance great, they came not up to the First Day, and were all found guilty upon their Non-compearance, and the Heritors and Liferenters of Balmaclellan are decerned to pay Mr. Row One thousand two hundred Pounds Scots, by the Council, November 26th. As soon as these Persons, and the other Heritors from that Parish could, they came to Edinburgh, and appeared before the Council, and offered to stand their Trial: But nothing could be proven against any of them, neither, as far as I can learn, were any of the Parish concerned in that Riot. However, the Gentlemen were ordered to pay their Shares of the Fine imposed. This Man Row was indeed a very ill Instrument in the Severities in that Country, and in a little Time discovered what he really was, by apostatizing unto Popery.

Another upon
Mr. John Lyon
Curate at Orr.

Another Instance of this Nature I find in a Petition from Mr. John Lyon Curate at Orr, in that same Country, November 26th. He complains, That upon the - - - Day of November, Three Persons came in Disguise to his House, dragged his Wife out at the Door, and searched for himself, but missed him, and spoiled his House. The Presbytery attests the Account: And the Council decern the Parish to pay Six hundred Pounds to him, and order out Letters against one John Smith, alledged to be concerned in this Attempt.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians in the Year 1670.

DURING this Year, the Presbyterians in the West had some breathing Time, partly by the Indulgence, and in Part from the laying aside of Archbishop Burnet: Yet the Indulgence was Piece by Piece curtailed, and rendred as uneasy as might well be, and Conventicles were born down very much, and several outed Ministers brought to no small Difficulties. The Parliament which sat in July, made new and gravaminous Laws; and this Year is closed up with a cunning and ensnaring Proposal from Bishop Leightoun, now enjoying the Bishoprick of Glasgow in commendam, for an Accommodation and Comprehension. Those Things may be Materials for the following Sections.

Summary of this Chapter.

S E C T. I.

Of the Condition of the indulged, the Persecution for Conventicles, the Hardships put upon several Ministers and Gentlemen, this Year 1670.

WHEN the Indulgence could not be prevented altogether last Year, the Bishops and their Party, now endeavour to make it as uneasy to Presbyterian Ministers and People, as they can. As soon as the Council had resolved upon the granting that Favour, the Prelates laid out themselves to their utmost, to prevent its taking Effect in the Places where it was designed.

The Bishops endeavour to mar the Indulgence.

Vacancies in the South and West were planted with all possible Expedition, that so Presbyterian Ministers might not have Access to them; and they made no great Matter who was put in upon the People, provided a Presbyterian Minister was held out. The Curates, when once planted, were by all Methods kept in, though never so ignorant, vicious, or profane. This I take to be one Occasion of the Insults of some angry People, upon some few of the Incumbents, the End of the last, and this Year, which have and shall be noticed as I go through. Bishop Leightoun indeed made some little Efforts to try some of the Curates under his Inspection, but we shall find it was in a very superficial Manner. It was only a very few Parishes, providentially vacant, the indulged had Access to, and several Effays were made to get them outed even from these, and regular Ministers, as they were term'd, settled in them.

Vacancies are planted in all Haste, and with insufficient Persons.

Yea, even in some of the Places to which the Council named Presbyterian Ministers, Methods were fallen upon to get in Curates, before they came to them. One Instance of this I cannot omit in the Case of the Reverend Mr. John Park, indulged to the Burgh of Stranrawer, which made a very great Noise, and was decided most partially, the Close of the last Year or the Beginning of this. This worthy Person was a Man of great Solidity, very sufficient Learning, and is the Author of the Treatise upon Patronages, so well known in this Church. The Book was published, and, as I am informed, considerably enlarged by his Son Mr. Robert Park, Clerk to the General Assembly after the Revolution, and Town-clerk of Glasgow, a young Gentleman of eminent Piety, and great Sufficiency in the Civil and Canon Law, who was basely murdered in the Clerk's Chamber at Glasgow, a little after the Revolution.

And some Parishes planted, to which Presbyterian Ministers were indulged. The Case of Mr. John Park, indulged to Stranrawer.

To prevent Mr. Park's Return to Stranrawer, the Bishop of Galloway admits one Nasmyth at that Kirk, Three Days after Mr. Park was indulged by the Council. The Town and Parish would give no Countenance to Mr. Nasmyth's Admission, but, as one Man, adhered to their former Minister. The Bishop causes summon all Parties in to Edinburgh, that the Council might determine the Competition. There Favour was expected, and got.

Mr. Nasmyth planted in Stranrawer by the Bishop, contrary to the Inclination of all concerned.

Council's Procedure upon this Settlement.

When Mr. Park appears before the Council, instead of the Question of Precedency between Mr. Nasmitb's Admission and his Act of Indulgence, which was the Point upon which he was cited; Mr. Nasmitb libels Mr. Park for causing lock the Church Doors against him, after his Admission by the Bishop; the Falsity of which was made appear by many of the People of Stranrauer, cited in for their Adherence to Mr. Park. Further, he accused Mr. Park of engaging several Gentlemen about to leave their Churches, and come and hear him; and of seditious Doctrine. The Witnesses adduced proved nothing, and Mr. Park entirely vindicated himself; notwithstanding very mean and base Methods used to circumvene the Witnesses upon Oath, with captious and involved Questions, such as, Did not you hear Mr. Park pray? Lord pluck up every Plant which our Father in Heaven hath not planted, meaning the Bishops. Yet all would not do, and the Committee to whom the Consideration of the Libel was remitted, brought in the Libel not proven.

At length the Council come to the Competition, and when it was alledged for Mr. Nasmitb, That his Presentation was prior to Mr. Park's, and answered by Mr. Park, That it was a non habente potestatem, the King being Patron, and the Bishop having most illegally taken upon him to present; and although Mr. Park's Act was evidently prior to Mr. Nasmitb's Admission, yet such was the Justice of these Times, that the Council, without ever so much as hearing Mr. Park upon that Head, determine the Preference to Mr. Nasmitb.

To return to the Ministers who got Access when they were settled in their Charges, they soon came to understand their Case, and straitning Circumstances, to be worse than they expected. Indeed I find, the Council, upon the First of January this Year, order the Payment of their Stipends: And their Act runs, 'The Council being resolved, that the Ministers allowed to preach shall have the Stipend for the Year and Crop 1669. order it to be paid: And as to the Ann due to some of the Relicts and Ministers, they ordain Eight hundred Merks to be paid by the Collector, and Four hundred, if only Half a Year was served for.'

But then Hardships in Abundance were put upon them in the Exercise of their Ministry. The Prelates complained to the Council, That the indulged Ministers lectured and expounded a Portion of Scripture to the People before Forenoon's Sermon; which, as it had been most iniquously laid aside by the Prelatick Preachers since the Restoration, so they alledged it was a hurtful Innovation, and what the indulged had no Warrant from Authority for. They further complained, that such Persons were not allowed by them to sit in their Sessions, who had joyned in Discipline with the conformist Ministers. What Ground there was for the last Complaint, I have not learned; it is not improbable they would choose Persons, as firm to Presbyterian Principles as they could, to be Members of their Sessions.

It is very true, the Indulged, generally speaking, did lecture, unless, it may be, in the Winter Season, when the Day was so short, that a Lecture and Two Sermons could not be kept up, without casting the People at Distance very late. And I am informed, that the Ministers met together after getting the Indulgence, and agreed to keep up Lecturing, and begin where they left, in explaining the Scripture, when forced from their Churches. They knew, that the laying aside Lecturing, was one of the Badges of Conformity, since the 1662. and were much perswaded, that this Manner of expounding of Scripture was very useful and instructive to their People, and had been the constant Practice of this Church, and is recommended in the Directory compiled at Westminster, and approved by our General Assemblies. Those they took to be sufficient Grounds to continue in this Practice.

However, the Council discharge it by their Act, January 13th, as follows. 'The Council understanding, that several of the Ministers allowed by their special Warrant to preach, do use, before they begin their Sermon, to lecture upon some Part of the Scripture; and considering that this Form was never used in this Church before the late Troubles, and is not warranted by Authority, do discharge the same, with Certification, that if they continue to use it, they shall be discharged the Exercise of their Ministry within this Kingdom: And order Extracts of this to be sent to each Minister.'

That the indulged Ministers were not warranted by Authority for lecturing, is a mere Fetch of the Bishops. They are plainly warranted to exercise all the Functions of the Ministry, as well as to preach; and though the Prelates and their Underlings had laid aside this Practice, yet that made it not the less a very proper Work of the Ministry. How far the Matter of Fact is true, which the Bishops make the Council to say in their Act, That Lecturing was not used before the 1638. in this Church, I do not know: But this I have remarked, that many of the Sermons of our Reformers and Ministers, after the Reformation, were upon the Matter Lectures, and generally a good many Verses were gone through, and apposite and practical Notes raised from them, and these but very briefly applied. In short, no solid Objection can be formed against this Practice, nor any Thing of Weight brought; unless we turn Papists, and alledge that 'tis dangerous to have People understand the Scriptures, and that Ignorance is the Mother of Devotion.

We shall hear upon the following Section, that a Committee of Council came West in April this Year; and, among other Parts of their Work, are impowered to try the Carriage of the indulged Ministers in their Congregations. What relates to the Examination of the Indulged, I shall is mostly urged by the Bishops, to be a Check upon the allowed Ministers, and to persecute Nonconformity.

Upon the Accounts of this Committee, the Brethren who had accepted the Indulgence, with a good many others who had not this Favour, met together to consider, what was fit to be done upon this new Emergent. They foresaw they would be challenged for Lecturing, which was prescribed by the approved Directory, and which is more agreeable unto Scripture Institution. They were now in casu confessionis, and it was the general Opinion of the Meeting, they should keep it up.

However, I am informed there had been different Practices among them, as to this publick exercise. Some were settled in the Winter Time, and had forborn it, and others were said to have had some Notice of Trouble designed against them upon this Score. Others altered their former Way, and, instead of one Chapter, or a Part of a large one, read Two or more Chapters, as what was nearest the Prescription in the Directory; and were blamed by some for taking this Juncture to alter their Method. Others read a whole Chapter, and pitched upon some Verse of it for their Text, and, in opening the Text, explained the Context; and some lectured in place of the Afternoon's Sermon.

Those different Practices neither satisfied the Committee of Council, when enquired into, nor were all their Hearers pleased with them. Their Management now was extremely disli-cult, and the Lives of these excellent Persons were made some way bitter to them, through Hardships upon all Hands. Mr. John Livingstone, in his Letter this Year to his Flock at Ancrum, censures them for their falling into those different Ways, and yet puts a high Encomium upon the Ministers themselves.

When the Committee came to Glasgow, in April, the indulged Ministers in that Neighbourhood were called before them, and interrogated one by one, Whether they had baptized or married any out of their own Congregations without Testimonials; and especially, Whether they had lectured since the Council's Act discharging it. According to their different Practices they answered, and generally they told, That they read and explained a Chapter or Two, but kept within half an Hour. When they were asked, What they resolved to do in Time coming, by the President Duke Hamilton, one of them said, That they would do as they had done formerly, which he hoped their Lordships would not be offended at. All of them subscribed their Answers, and were dismissed.

Next Week the Committee went to Air, and the indulged Ministers in that Shire appeared before them. There Matters passed much the same way as at Glasgow. As to Lecturing, they gave a naked Representation of their Practice; and as to the Time to come, they answered, They would continue in reading and explaining Scripture, as far as Time would permit; and signed their Answers. It was generally expected, that when the Report was made to the Council, all their Licences would be taken from them; but the Lord had more Work to do by them, and moderate Measures prevailed. This is what I have observed this Year anent the Indulged.

I come now to take a View of the Procedure of the Managers against Conventicles, and the Sufferings of considerable Numbers of good People upon this Score. Lawderdale, in urging the Indulgence, alledged, it would be the most effectual Way to bear down Conventicles; and accordingly it was given to such Ministers as were reckoned the wisest, and of greatest Reputation, and in such Parishes where the People, and especially the Heritors and Gentry, were most inclined to the Presbyterian Establishment. Mean while new Proclamations, and severe Executions of the former, against Conventicles, were urged and effectuated this Year.
 Afterwards we shall meet with the Acts of Parliament in this Matter: I come here to consider the Procedure of Council.

January 13th, the Commissioner orders the Instructions to the Forces, November 1667. noticed above, to be sent again to the Soldiers, with this additional Clause, added by the Council, to the Officers. 'Upon Notice of any numerous Conventicle kept since November
 '1st last past, or to be kept hereafter, you shall do your utmost Endeavour to seize the Mini'ster, and send him into Edinburgh with a Party, and the Names of such as can bear Wit'ness in the Thing. You are also to seize the most considerable Heritors and Tenants pre'sent, and require Bond and Caution to appear before the Council at a certain Day; and if 'they refuse to give Surety, send them in with a Party, with a List of Persons who can wit'ness against them.' This Instruction made the Soldiers very severe, and, with what followed, both forced Ministers and People to the Fields, where they had better Access to disperse than in a House, and put some to bring Arms with them, to defend themselves and their Ministers.

Those Instructions are followed with a printed Proclamation against Conventicles, agreed upon in Council, which I have insert, App. N^o. 37. The Reader will observe, that it runs a little more severe than the former Papers of this Nature.
 I shall not make large Remarks upon it. The Army are hounded out upon Presbyterians by the Instructions just now spoken of, and the whole Magistrates through the Country joyned with them in this Persecution. The Country is oppressed, and the Soldiers encouraged, by the large Sums paid them when engaged in this Work; and, as was observed, this Violence obliged Ministers and People to take the Fields, and defend themselves the best way they could.

The Council being informed, February 10th, That Two numerous Conventicles were kept lately in and about Kirkentilloch, a few Miles East from Glasgow, send Orders to the Earl of Linlithgow, who gave the Information, to seize the Persons of Mr. James Hamilton, and Mr. --- Mitchel, who preached, and send them into Edinburgh; but I do not find they were at this Time caught.

In the Beginning of March, the Council call for the Magistrates of Edinburgh, and give them up their Bond last Year anent Conventicles, and require them to give another in the same Terms for this Year. They very willingly give it. And in prosecution of this Obligation against Conventicles, April 7th, the same Magistrates are ordered to search for and seize the Persons of all the outed Ministers within the Town, excepting such as have Warrant from the Privy Council, and to imprison them. And such as have Warrant are to enact themselves under Bond and Caution, not to keep Conventicles during their Stay there; and if they refuse, immediately to imprison them.

The Council's Committee sent to the West-country in April this Year, as we shall find by their Instructions, are appointed to enquire into Conventicles, and punish them. I have but very few Accounts of their Procedure; only at Glasgow the Curates gave in Lists of considerable Numbers in their respective Parishes, who were guilty of Nonconformity, and alledged keeping of Conventicles; and some were fined upon these Scores, but Particulars I have not been able to recover.

Elizabeth Cunningham, Lady Hilderston, I find, May 12th, is fined by the Council in Four hundred Merks, for one Conventicle kept in her House; and several Persons were brought to Trouble for that same Meeting. Nicol Gardiner Merchant in Edinburgh, is fined in Two hundred Pounds, for baptizing a Child of his there; and, which was far more uneasy to him, and hard in it self, he is ordained to ly in close Prison until he discover who was the Minister. And further, James Clarkson, Archibald Henry, William Leick, Merchants in Edinburgh, and David Jamie Taylor there, are fined in One hundred Poundseach, for being at the said House-conventicle. Had the Managers got as much for every House-conventicle, they would have soon gathered in all the Money in Scotland. And over and above all these, I find the Council, this same Sederunt, fine the Magistrates of Edinburgh, according to their Bond, in Fifty Pounds Sterling, and allow them Reparation from such of the Inhabitants as they shall find guilty.

I shall have Occasion, ere I end this Section, to notice some Harassings for Two or Three remarkable Field-conventicles in June and July this Year; so here I only notice Robert Burns in Glasgow, fined by the Council, July 29th, for the abovementioned Conventicle at Kirkentilloch, in a Hundred Merks. I observe for some Time most Part of the Fines are appointed by the Council to be given to the Widows and Children of Ministers who suffered for their Loyalty before the Restoration; who these were, hath been noticed, Ministers deposed for Error, Scandal, Insufficiency, and Malignancy.

Upon the 11th of August, the Council come to lay down Methods for suppressing Conventicles, and examining the Ministers who shall, in Time to come, appear before them upon that Score, which I give here from the Registers.

Apud Edinburgum, August 11th, 1670.

Sederunt, The Lord Commissioner his Grace, Chancellor, St. Andrews, Privy Seal, Lennox, Hamilton, Mortoun, Caithness, Murray, Athole, Linlithgow, Dumfermling, Roxburgh, Kellie, Dumfries, Weems, Airly, Annandale, Tweddale, Kincardin, Dundonald, Drumlanrig, Yester, Belhaven, Duffus, Belenden, President of Session, Register, Advocate, Justice-clerk, Lee, Haltoun, Niddry, Sir Andrew Ramsay.

THE Lords of the Committee appointed for considering of the fittest Ways and Means for suppressing of Conventicles, having brought in several Proposals to the Council thereanent, to be offered to the Articles; as also anent the assaulting of Ministers Persons and Houses, and disorderly baptizing of Children; the same being considered, agreed to, and voted, were appointed to be transmitted to the Lords of the Articles.
The Committee having offered it as their Opinion, that the Interrogatories underwritten should be put to such Ministers as should be called before the Council, the same being agreed to, were ordered to be recorded.

Council's Orders about Conventicles, August 11.

I. Do you ordinarily resort to the Ordinances in the Parish-church where you live, and are you resolved to do so in Time coming? 1670.

II. Have you kept any Conventicles since Michaelmas last, either in Houses or the Fields; and are you resolved to forbear for the future, and to live according to Law, as to that Point?

III. Such Ministers as have lived orderly, or will promise to live orderly in Time coming, are to be dismissed without putting any judicial Declaration to them; the Clerk being to mark what they promise thereanent.

IV. The Declaration following is to be put to such as have lived orderly, and yet will not agree so to do for the future. "I A. B. promise that I shall ordinarily frequent the Ordinances in the Parish-church where my Residence shall be for the Time, and that I shall not preach, nor assist either in Houses or in the Fields at any Conventicles."

V. Such as have not lived orderly, nor will engage to live orderly, and to forbear to be present at, or keep Conventicles in the future, the following Declaration is to be put to them. "I A. B. oblige my self, I shall not, upon any colour or pretext whatsoever, rise in Arms against the King's Majesty, or any having his Authority or Commission, nor shall assist nor countenance any who shall so rise in Arms."

VI. Such as are cited, and do not compear, are to be declared Fugitives.

VII. Those who refuse the first Declaration, are to be confined; and those who do not give the Second, are to be put in Prison, and thereafter banished.

What Use was made of these Proposals will best appear from the severe Acts of Parliament made this Year, which I leave to a Session by themselves. By this Time the Reader hath some View of the Trouble a good many were brought unto for Conventicles during this Year, and we shall meet with some Things yet harsher, if once I had considered the Harassings of some of the outed Ministers, and Presbyterian Gentlemen.

Among the Ministers, the Order of Time leads me to begin with the Reverend Mr. Andrew Mortoun, Minister of the Gospel at Carmonnock, in the Shire of Lanerk. He had been outed from his Parish with the rest of his Brethren, and, living oft-times at Glasgow, now and then he did preach and keep Conventicles among his Parishioners. Upon Information by Mr. Robert Boyd Curate there, he was, by an Order from the Commissioner, apprehended, and brought into Edinburgh; and, January 14th, I find the Council order 'The Magistrates of Edinburgh to receive the Person of Mr. Andrew Mortoun Prisoner, and keep him close from all Company.'

Ministers Sufferings this Year. Mr. Andrew Mortoun.

There he is brought before the Earl of Kincardin, and the King's Advocate, and asked, If he had preached at Carmonnock since he was silenced? He acknowledged he had. His Examinators blamed him very hard for Contempt of the Law, and breaking a settled Congregation. He replied, That he contemned not the Laws, but reckoned there was a great Necessity of preaching the Gospel, when Ignorance and Profanity abounded, and many Souls were perishing for Lack of Knowledge; and added, He had not broken the Congregation, for they had withdrawn from the present Incumbent, before he preached among them. They further questioned him, How many had heard him? He answered, He could not tell: They then asked, Who had heard him, and in whose House he had preached? To this his Return was, It was hard to make him inform against others; and he hoped and intreated their Lordships would forbear him in this, since he so ingenuously confessed in what concerned himself: They made him sign his Answers.

His Examination before a Committee of Council.

When those were laid before the Council, he was called in, and they were read to him, and the Chancellor pronounced his Sentence, 'That he was to be continued close Prisoner in Edinburgh, until he should be transported to Stirling Castle, there to remain during the Council's Pleasure. Accordingly, January 27th, I find him sent by the Council's Order to Stirling, and there he continued Prisoner until the 3^d of November, when, by reason of bodily Indisposition, contracted by this Confinement, he was liberate, and confined to his own House at Glasgow, during Pleasure. And he enacted himself to compear when he should be called; and, during his Abode at Glasgow, he preached almost every Day to such of the Citizens as came to hear him, except the Wednesday, which he reserved for the People of his own Congregation, who, being within Four Miles, came in in good Numbers that Day, and he preached to them.

The Council's Sentence, and his Confinement to Stirling.

Much about the same Time, Mr. Hugh Archbald Minister at Strathewan, and Mr. John Rae Minister at Symington in Biggar Presbytery, were apprehended, for preaching and baptizing in Houses, and sent in to Edinburgh; and, after some Examination, were sent to Stirling likewise. I find, March 3^d, Mr. John Rae is ordered by the Council to be carried from the Tolbooth of the Canongate, to Stirling Castle. I have no more about them.

Mr. Hugh Archbald and Mr. John Rae their Confinement.

Mr. George Johnston, Minister at Newbottle, is seized in April at Edinburgh: And the Council's Actanent him is, 'The Lords of Privy Council being informed of frequent Conventicles kept in Edinburgh, and the Magistrates having, in Obedience to an Ordinance of Council, presented Mr. George Johnston, late Minister at Newbottle, before them, and he having refused to engage himself not to keep Conventicles, banish him from Edinburgh, and confine him to the Parish of Borthwick, during the Council's Pleasure; and order him to enact himself to keep his Confinement: Which he does.

Mr. George Johnston's Confinement.

The Town of Edinburgh had been a great Shelter to the outed Ministers; and, we have heard, that the Council, about this Time, had ordered the Magistrates to turn them all out. A List of them had been given in by the Bishop, and by the Council put into the Provost's Hands. When he sent the Town-officers to seize them, none was found but Mr. George Johnstoun, whom, though a very near Relation of his own, he presented before the Council. When Mr. Johnstoun was examined, he owned his Preaching upon Week-days, and the Lord's Day after Four o' Clock, when publick Worship was over; and when he would not engage, as above, he is banished the Town, and confined to Borthwick.

The Provost sent Orders to the Houses of the rest of the Presbyterian Ministers in Town, to remove their Families presently out of Town, and never to return to it, without giving him Account, and signifying the Places where they lodged, upon the highest Pains: And further, ordered Soldiers presently to go and quarter in their Houses, till they removed. Thus their Families were frightened and insulted, and some of them in Danger of their Life. They were forced to seek a new Shelter, and many of them did not know well where to go; but the LORD wonderfully provided for them.

Upon November 24th, I find, the Council allow Mr. George Johnstoun to come in to Edinburgh, for Six Weeks, about some necessary Business he had to do; And, before he leaves the Town, his Confinement to Borthwick is taken off; but he is discharged from coming to the Edinburgh without Permission, or living in the Canongate, or any of the Liberties of the Town.

Other Ministers were dealt by yet more hardly. August 11th, I find a Decree of the King's Advocate, against Mr. James Hamilton late Minister at Blantyre, Mr. James Mitchel, Mr. James Porter, Mr. John Dickson late Minister at Rutherglen, and Mr. John Blackader late Minister at Traquair. They are libelled before the Council, for making it their Work to hold Conventicles in Houses and the Fields; and being, after Citation, called, and not compearing, for the Reasons already pointed at, they are all of them, in Absence, denounced and put to the Horn. This severe Treatment of them and many others, put them under a Necessity to wander up and down the Country, and preach in the Fields as they had Access.

About the 15th of August, Mr. Robert Landais, after the Revolution Minister of the Gospel at Blantyre, and for some time in Glasgow, at this Time, I think, but a Preacher, was apprehended, and made Prisoner at Edinburgh for Six Weeks. All they had to lay to his Charge, was, That once, about a Year ago, he had exercised in a private Family. Upon the 29th of September the Council order his Liberation.

Mr. Hugh Peebles, of whom before, was brought before the Council, August 28th. Nothing could be proven against him: But when interrogated, If he would engage in Time coming to keep no Conventicles, nor to preach or exercise in any Family but his own; he refused to come under any such Ties. The Council confine him to Dumbarton, and a Mile round it.

Some Presbyterian Gentlemen wanted not their Share of Suffering at this Time. February 3^d, I find, the Laird of Kersland, who had been taken some time ago, after his Forfeiture, is sent from Edinburgh to Dumbarton Prison: And this Summer, the Laird of Meldrum, an Officer of the Guards, whom we shall frequently afterward meet with, apprehended several good People in the Parish of Lochwinnoch, Kilbarchan, and Kilmacomb, in the Shire of Renfrew, and put them to very great Trouble, for hearing the outed Ministers.

The Laird of Johnstoun in Renfrew Shire, for having Mr. John Stirling, who had been his Parish Minister at Kilbarchan, in his House, and hearing him preach once to his Family, was apprehended, and brought before the Chancellor, where it was like to stand hard with him. With Difficulty his Friends got him liberated, upon his giving a Bond of Five thousand Merks, to compear when called. The Reverend Mr. John Stirling very narrowly escaped from his own House, and was diligently searched for by the Soldiers, but got off happily.

Several others of the outed Ministers were troubled this Year; but all the Particulars would run this Account to a very great Length, and the abovementioned Instances may suffice. Nevertheless, the Word of the LORD was not bound, and Presbyterian Ministers could not, even under all those Difficulties, forbear to pity the crying Necessities of the People, who had not Access to the Churches of the Indulged, and were daily growing in their Aversion to the established Clergy, the longer they were among them.

And it was owned, even by some who were not Friends to Presbyterian Ministers, That in their Sermons in Houses and Fields, they were remarkably countenanced of the LORD, and blessed with many Seals of their Ministry, in the Conversion of many, and edifying those who were brought in.

There was a Letter handed about at this Time, from a Minister to his Brother, encouraging him to this Work. It was supposed to have been writ by the Reverend Mr. John Cairns; and being very sweet, and suitable to those Times, I have insert it, App. N^o. 38. The

The Multitudes of People hungry after the sincere Milk of the Word, were so great, that in many Places, Houses would not contain them, and in others they wanted Places to meet in; and when in Houses, were by far more in Hazard to be surprized with the Soldiers, than when in the Fields. Upon these Accounts Field-meetings turn'd more frequent this Summer; especially, in Places where there were none of the indulged Ministers. Thus I find, October this Year, Mr. John Blackader preaching at Balcanquhall, Mr. John Dickson at Glenvail, and Mr. David Hume at - - - -, all in the Shire of Kinross.

Field-conventicles were most violently opposed, and the Soldiers failed not to answer their instructions abovenarrated. Three Meetings of this Sort were no small Occasion of Persecution this Year, and I shall end this Section with some Account of them.

That which made the greatest Noise, was the Conventicle at Beeth-hill, in the Parish of Dumfermling in Fife: It was kept by Mr. John Blackader and Mr. John Dickson, about the Middle of June, and a very considerable Number of People were there. When they were at publick Worship upon the Lord's Day, a Lieutenant of the Militia in that Place, came up on Horseback to the People, and made a great deal of Noise and Disturbance, and spared not dreadful Threatnings to fright, and, if possible, to scatter the People. One of the Meeting steps to him, after he had intreated him to remove peaceably, and taking the Lieutenant's Horse by the Bridle, pulled out a Pistol, and told him, He would shoot him dead, if he was not silent: And whether the Lieutenant would or not, he was compelled to sit peaceably upon his Horse, until publick Worship was over; and then he was left at his full Liberty to go where he pleased.

Accounts of this horrid Insult, as it was called, came very soon to Edinburgh; and Bishop Sharp knew well how to improve such an Incident, to heighten the Fury of the Managers against Presbyterians and Conventicles: And indeed the Council did exert themselves with the greatest offervency in this Matter. June 23^d, I find they give Warrant to Mr. Henry Murray, to inform himself anent the Conventicle kept in the Parish of Dumfermling lately. What Report he made I see not.

But upon the 30th of June, I find, Robert Walwood of Touch confessed before the Council, he had been present at the Conventicle on Beeth-hill, and is fined in Five hundred Merks, and ordered to ly in Prison till he pay it, and enact himself in a Bond of Two thousand Merks, that he shall frequent no more Conventicles. Such who followed him, met yet with harder Measure.

July 14th, Mr. Alexander Hasty, since the Revolution Minister of the Gospel at Glasgow, Adam Stobie of Luscar, William Adam Merchant in Culross, James Sloss in Borrowstounness, David Mather elder in Brignies, John Rankin in Bonbard, James Duncan in Grange, were brought before the Council, and interrogated if they were at the said Conventicle. All of them acknowledged they were. Then they were required to give up upon Oath the Names of the Ministers, and others, whom they knew to have been at that Meeting. This they peremptorily refused, and the Council immediately found them guilty of Contumacy, and fined each of them in Five hundred Merks, and sent them back to Prison, there to ly in Irons during the Council's Pleasure. I find this Day the Council pass a Decree against Keepers of Conventicles, particularly, at Livingseat, and Hill of Beeth, fining Multitudes in great Sums.

Those Persons lay in Prison till the Parliament sat; and by their Second Act, August 3^d, (as shall be observed) appointed such who refuse to give their Oath super inquirendis, to be banished; and upon this Act, they, with some others, were banished the Kingdom, as we shall just now hear. So unreasonable and unrighteous were our Managers now! They form Laws to catch conscientious Persons, in Matters wherein their Principles were concerned; yea, even made them look backwards, and reach supposed Crimes, committed before their Laws were made.

Upon the 16th of August, the Council pass an Act against the abovenamed Persons. Whereas Mr. Alexander Hasty in Dumfermling, &c. as above, being called to depone against the Conventicle at Beeth-hill, and refused; as also Mr. John Vernor, and Robert Orr in Miln-bank, who had a Child baptized there, the Council banish them out of the King's Dominions, and order them to be transported to the Plantations, and not to return, on Pain of Death. This good Youth Mr. John Vernor, was challenged for another Conventicle, and for this Crime of Conventicles, and that of refusing to betray his honest Neighbours and Acquaintances, to the Fury of Persecutors, was most barbarously dealt with. He was fed on Bread and Water, and put so close in the Irons, that his Leg gangrened, which within a little cost him his Life. Under such Cruelties, some of the best Quality interposed for his Liberation; but that Meeting was so galling to the Council and Commissioner, that no Ear was given for some Time. At length, when his Leg turned very ill, upon the 3^d of November I find him and Robert Orr set at Liberty, upon their giving Bond and Caution to appear when called, under the Penalty of Five hundred Merks each.

And to end the Accounts of the Persecution for this Conventicle, upon the 11th of August, James Dundas, Brother to the Laird of Dundas, confesseth his being at the Conventicle ticle at the Hill of Beeth; and refusing to depone before the Council, whom he saw there, and who preached; they find he hath contravened an Act of Parliament, banish him the King's Dominions, and order him to be transported to the Plantations, not to return on Pain of Death. However, I find, August 28th, Mr. Dundas gives his Oath upon some Interrogatories anent this Conventicle, and is liberate by the Council. Many others were brought under Hardships for this Conventicle, such as, Margaret Martin the Lady Colvil's Gentlewoman, and Bessie Young a Servant of hers, who continued in Prison a long Time; and for several Months the Soldiers brought Multitudes in that Neighbourhood to great Trouble.

Conventicle at Livingseat.

Another Conventicle which made a great Noise at this Time, is that at Livingseat, in Carnwath Parish, much about the Time of the former, or a little before it. Their Procedure against Persons alledged to be there, was much of a Piece; so I may be very brief upon it. June 23^d, Mr. John Vernor, who it seems was at both, 'Son to Gavin Vernor in Mortoun, being required by the Council to depone, What he knew of the Persons present, 'and Minister who preached at a Conventicle at Livingseat, and refusing to give his Oath, 'is committed close Prisoner, and ordained to ly in Irons during the Council's Pleasure, and 'to be fed with Bread and Water.' And further, the Council fine John Carmichael in Blackburn, and David Carmichael in Potishaw, in a Hundred Merks each, for being at that Meeting. And the forementioned Decreet, July 14th, fines a great many others in Absence, for their being there.

At Torwood;

The last Conventicle I notice, was in the Beginning of July, at the Torwood. And, July 7th, the Council being informed of a large Conventicle at Torwood-head, appoint a Letter to be written to the Earl of Callendar, to use his Interest to bear down Conventicles in Stirling Shire: And, upon August 16th, I find the Council have Charles Campbel in Airth before them. He confessed he was at the Conventicle in Torwood; and refusing to depone, was banished, and ordered to the Plantations. After some Months Imprisonment, he falls sick through his harsh Treatment; and, December 8th, the Council liberate him, upon his giving Bond and Caution under Five hundred Merks, to compear when called.

Mr. Alexander Strang.

I find little more concerning Conventicles this Year, unless it be, that, August 11th, Mr. Alexander Strang is called before the Council, for alledged keeping of Conventicles, which he positively denies since Martinmas last, affirming, that he waited upon Ordinances every Lord's Day, in the Parish-church where he lives. The Council dismiss him.

S E C T. II.

Of the Committee of Council, their Actings in the West, April 1670, the Insults upon Incumbents, and several other Things this Year.

Matter of this Section.

IN this Section I shall put together several Occurrences throughout this Year, which will not so properly come in upon the general Subjects in the following Sections, and may be of some Use in order to our understanding the State of this Church, and of Presbyterians; and I shall begin with the Attacks made upon the Episcopal Incumbents, and the violent Prosecution of innocent People upon that Score. Some of the Occasions of those Attempts, in the general, have been pointed at, and now I come to narrate plain Matter of Fact, as far as it hath come to my Hands.

Attack made upon Mr. Robert Boyd, Incumbent at Carmonnock.

The Order of Time leads me to begin with the Attempt made upon Mr. Robert Boyd Curate at Carmonnock. 'The Council, January 6th, being informed of a Robbery committed upon the Person and Goods of Mr. Robert Boyd, Letters are directed against the Heritors. 'We shall afterwards have some Specimens of Mr. Boyd's persecuting Temper, and his sitting in oppressive Courts with Major White. Whether this was at the Bottom of the Attack made upon him, or if it was an Act of Burglary, committed by some common Thieves, I do not know.

Sir Archibald Stuart of Castlemilk fined in Fifty Pounds Sterling.

But, upon the 26th of January, I find a Decreet given out against the Heritors and Parish of Carmonnock, in the Council-registers, bearing, that his House was rifled, his Wife wounded, and Mr. Boyd sought for, but not got. Sir Archibald Stuart of Castlemilk appears, and acknowledges the Matter of Fact, but knows nothing of the Actors. He and the Parish, according to the Laws formerly mentioned, are fined in Fifty Pounds Sterling: And, February 7th, Sir Archibald pays the Fine, and it is given to Mr. Robert Boyd.

This

This, with some other Attempts of the like Nature, in other Places, about this Time, procure a Committee of the Council to enquire into them, and for the Punishment of the Actors, and some other Things: Of this it is proper to give some Accounts. Upon the 6th April, ' The Council remit it to the Archbishop of St. Andrews, Duke Hamilton, and some others, to consider upon Ways to secure orthodox Ministers, to consider the Petition of Mr. Alexander Mortimer Minister at Kirkcudbright, and the Injury done to the Minister of Kilmacomb; with Power to call for the Papers taken upon Mr. John Rae, and to consider the Decrees given in by Mr. Nathanael Fyfe, against Keepers of Conventicles, and report.' I have met with nothing further anent Mr. Mortimer, and know not well what these Papers related to, which were found upon Mr. Rae: But I hear they contained the Names of some Parents, whose Children he had baptized, who were afterwards prosecuted on that Account; only I find him upon the 3^d of March, ordered by the Council to be carried from the Castle Gate Tolbooth, to the Castle of Stirling.

Upon the 7th of April the Report is made; and the Council having considered it, agree to the Commission-instructions, and other Acts brought in by these appointed to consider this matter. The Tenor of the Commission follows.

Commission to Commission anent some Disorders in the West.

CHARLES, by the Grace, &c. To all and sundry our Lieges and Subjects, whom it concerns, Greeting. Forasmuch as, notwithstanding divers Acts of Parliament and Council made against withdrawing from the publick Worship in Churches, keeping of Conventicles, or private Meetings, upon pretext of Worship, or other religious Exercises, by baptizing or marrying by Persons not allowed by Authority; and likewise, for Security of Ministers in their Persons and Goods, against the interrupting of Divine Service, and the Acts of Council made anent Ministers indulged to preach: Yet sundry disloyal and seditious Persons, especially in the Shires of Air, Lanerk, Renfrew, and others after specified, have of late contravened the said Acts, by deserting their own Parish-kirks, keeping Conventicles, disorderly marrying and baptizing their Children, making Attempts upon, and offering several Injuries unto loyal and peaceable Ministers, dealing with, and menacing them to leave their Churches, and committing of several other Disorders, to the high Contempt of Our Authority, and great Scandal of Religion. And We, considering that it doth very much import Our Honour, and the Peace and Quiet of this Church and Kingdom, that some speedy and effectual Course be taken for repressing such Disorders and Insolencies, and preventing the like in Time coming, and that it may contribute to the Discovery of the Actors and Contrivers of such Disorders, that the same be tried upon the Place where they were committed, Do, with the Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, grant full Power, Warrant, and Commission to William Duke of Hamilton, Alexander Earl of Linlithgow, William Earl of Dumfries, Alexander Earl of Kincardin, William Earl of Dunbar, the Lord Clerk Register, and Lieutenant General Drummond, or any Four of them, to put to due and vigorous Execution the foresaid Acts of Parliament and Council against the Contraveners thereof, within the Shires of Stirling, Linlithgow, Dumbarton, Lanerk, Air, and Renfrew, to levy and exact the Pains and Penalties therein contained: And to that Effect We appoint Our said Commissioners, or their Quorum, to repair to, and meet at Glasgow, the 27th Day of this Instant, and thereafter, to meet at such Times, and Places within the said Shires of Lanerk, Air, and Renfrew, as they shall think convenient; and then and there, to call before them such Persons, as they shall be informed have contravened the foresaid Acts, or any of them; and, if need be, to issue Warrants and Precepts for citing them, and Witnesses for proving what shall be laid to their Charge, to use all Trial and Probation requisite, and to proceed to give Sentence against such as they shall find to be guilty, in fining, confining, or Imprisonment of their Persons; and to put these Decrees in Execution, by poinding their Goods, imprisoning of their Persons, or otherwise, as accords: With Power to Our said Commissioners, or their Quorum, to seize upon and commit to Prison such Persons as they shall think fit, and to take Caution for the Appearance of any Persons before Our Privy Council, or before themselves, and, in case of Refusal, to imprison them: And generally, with Power to Our Commissioners, or their Quorum, to do and exercise all Things necessary and requisite for the effectual Prosecution of this Our Commission, and the Particulars above mentioned, as fully and freely in all respects, as a Quorum of Our Council might have done themselves, promittend to hold firm and stable. And We do hereby require all Sheriffs, Stewards, heritable Bailies, Magistrates of Burghs, and others Our good Subjects within the said Shires, readily to answer, obey, concur with, and assist Our said Commissioners, being required thereto by them; as they will be answerable upon their highest Peril: And that they make Report of their Diligence in the Premises

Orders to the Forces.

Joynly with these Instructions, there are Orders given to the Officers and Commanders of the standing Forces, to obey such Orders as shall be directed to them by the said Commissioners, or any one of them; and the Council, the same Day, make an Act anent the Payment of Ministers Stipends thrust from their Charges, which I likewise insert.

Act of Council about paying Stipends to the Incumbents who are thrust from their Charges.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering the many direct and violent Means essayed in the Western Shires of this Kingdom, to thrust orthodox Ministers from their Charges; and that, as in pursuance of their Trust, they have made several Acts and Ordinances for the Security of the Persons of those Ministers; so it is most consonant with Justice and Equity to take Care for their Maintenance, where, from just Apprehensions and Fears of being rudely entreated, they are forced to desert and relinquish their Cure: Therefore, the said Lords do declare, That where any of the said Ministers are, by Menacing, just Grounds of Fear, or Violence, put from their Churches, that during their natural Life they will maintain them in the Possession of their Benefices and Stipends, according to their Rights thereunto. As also, in the Cases where the said Ministers shall be provided to other Kirks and Benefices, whereby the former Churches shall become vacant, the said Lords do declare, they will give Power and Warrant to the Collectors of the vacant Stipends, to intromit with the Benefice, and uplift the Stipends belonging to the said Churches; and that ay and while orthodox Ministers be settled in the same by Presentations from the Patrons, and Collations from the Archbishop or Bishops of the Dioceses where they ly, according to Law.

In order to ripen Matters for this Commission, the Earls of Dumfries and Dundonald are appointed by the Council to make Enquiry beforehand, that the Work of the Commissioners may be shortned as much as may be.

The Procedure of this Commission, as to the indulged Ministers, hath been already given Account of; and I only now consider what they did as to orthodox Ministers, as they called them, who were attacked. The Business of the Attempt alledged to be made at Maybole in Air Shire, and Kilmacomb in Renfrew Shire, were before the Committee; but indeed nothing could be found in either of them of great Importance, so I shall give but a Hint of each.

The Committee's Procedure as to the Incumbents upon Incumbents.

Maybole Business is first in their Instructions, and it stood thus. When the Committee were at Air, Mr. Jaffray, Curate there, renewed his Complaint, which he had formerly tabled before the Council; That some of his Parishioners had attempted to murder him, and discharged a Pistol at his Breast. The Ball, he said, came upon a Book, which he was carrying in his Bosom under his Coat, and this saved his Life. Every Body almost reckoned this an ill made Story, to get a little Money, by way of Fine, from the Parish. The Heritors and Parishioners offered to prove before the Committee, that when Mr. Jaffray first divulged the Attempt alledged to be made upon him, and shewed the Book which he said was under his Coat, the Book was indeed pierced, as seem'd, by a Ball, but his Coat had no Hole in it; so senselessly was the Forgery made. But this Method, though very natural, could not be allowed. Mr. Jaffray was permitted to produce all his Proofs and Evidences to fix the Guilt, but in vain, for nothing could be proven: And generally it was believed, he had pierced his Book himself, and forgot to make a Hole in his Coat. So this Business ended in Laughter, and very quickly his Parishioners brought in more solid Complaints against him, as we shall hear, this same Year.

Their Procedure about Mr. Jaffray Curate at Maybole.

Mr. John Irvine's Business stood thus. In February or March, it was pretended, Evil was designed against him: He was indeed, and not without Ground, very ill liked in Kilmacomb. While he was preaching on a Lord's Day, some Boys cast a Bit of a rotten Stick at the Pulpit in Time of Sermon. Upon the Noise it made upon the Pulpit, he presently left it, and got to his own House. As he went Home in a Fear and Haste, some of the Boys followed him, with Huzza's and Cries, till he got into his House. This is all I can hear of. A terrible Noise is made, that the Minister had been stoned out of his Pulpit, and forced to flee for his Life to the Manse.

About Mr. John Irvine of Kilmacomb.

The Committee examined this Riot, and found nothing in it but a Freak of some idle Boys, and that it was a Matter very unworthy of such a Sputter as had been made about it. What Sentence they came to at Glasgow, I know not; but, I suppose they remitted this Affair to the Council: For in their Records, June 16th, they find James Watson, James Rankin, John Hatrick, and William Sinclair, guilty of the Tumult in Kilmacomb, and of hounding out of Dogs on the Minister; and the Council order them to be transported to the Plantations. And, upon the 23^d of June, John Hatrick and William Sinclair, because of their Youth, are liberate, upon Condition of their appearing before the Congregation, and declaring their Sorrow for abusing the Minister of Kilmacomb. Whether the other Two were banished, or got off the same way, I have not Information. Upon July 14th, I find the Storm lands upon the Parish; and the Heritors and Parishioners of Kilmacomb are first fined in Fifty Pounds Sterling, and then it is increased to a Hundred Pounds, to be paid to Mr. John Irvine; and the Lairds of Douchal and Carncurran, Two Heritors, then at Edinburgh, are discharged to leave the Town till they pay that Sum.

Four Youths banished to the Plantations, and the Parish fined.

It was thought that the Discoveries this Council-committee would make, might be a Foundation of taking away the Indulgence; but the Members of the Committee found all, or most of the alledged Disorders among the common People, were occasioned by the ill Carriage of the Incumbents. Indeed their Naughtiness, Drinking, Oaths, and Uncleanness, rendred them very hateful; and their Oppressions, and harsh Treatment of their People, had produced some Disorders: So nothing was further done at this Time against the Indulged.

There are Two other Attempts this Year upon the Incumbents I have met with, and shall bring them in here. June 9th, the Council order out Summons against the Parishioners of Neilston, for a Riot committed upon their Minister, Mr. Alexander Kinnier, and his Wife. It was libelled, That some Time in May, upon a Saturday at Twelve at Night, Nine or Ten Men came into the House, beat Mr. Kinnier and his Wife, and plundred the House. The Heritors are fined in a Thousand Pounds Scots, and Alan Stuart of Kirkcubright is forbid to remove from Edinburgh till it be paid.

Heritors of Neilston fined in a Thousand Pounds, for a Riot on Mr. Kinnier.

And, August 28th, I find the Parish of Glasford, in Lanerk Shire, are most injuriously fined. 'Tis alledged, that some Persons in Arms attacked the House of Mr. James Finlay, Incumbent there, searched for him, and plundred the House. July 14th, the Council fine the Parish in a Thousand Pounds Scots. The House was indeed broke by common Thieves and Robbers; some of them taken for other Crimes, and executed, at their Death confessed they had broke Mr. Finlay's House; and, before their Death, declared, That to their Knowledge

there was not Two Dollars worth of Skaith done to him, and not one Person in the Parish was in the least concerned.

Proclamation against Papists, January 13.

Some other Particulars, I meet with this Year, shall fill up this Section, that the Subjects of the Two following may not be interrupted; and they shall be narrated just in the Order they fell out. January 13th, the Council publish a very good Proclamation against Papists, which is printed; and had it been prosecuted with as much Care and Application, as their Proclamations against Conventicles, and in Defence of their orthodox Ministers, it had been more for the Interests of real Religion. But the Prelates saw to the one and neglected the other; so, I find, the same Day the Council recommend it again to the Archbishops and Bishops, to gather up Lists of Persons who are Papists, and suspect of Popery; and that a general List be formed out of them, and laid before the Council, January 1st next to come. At that Time I find no Return made.

Discharge granted to General Dalziel.

With what Views a Discharge was granted, April 9th this Year, to General Dalziel, I know not; but I have before me a Copy of a Patent, which passed at this Time under the Great Seal: 'Giving and granting him, his Heirs and Executors, a full and ample Discharge and Exoneration of that Trust and Employment he had as Lieutenant-general, Colonel of a Regiment of Foot, Captain of a Troop of Horse, and a Company of Foot, and of the whole Heads and Tenor of the said Four Commissions, from July 19th 1666. until April 8th 1668. when they were recalled; declaring that he shall never be questioned, cited, or challenged for any Actings, Orders, or Deeds done, or Omissions, if any such have been, in these Capacities, by the King or his Successors, or any having Power from them.' Without doubt the General needed such a Discharge, and probably 'tis now passed with a View to his entering upon the full Possession of some of the forfeited Estates.

Mr. John Menzies, Minister at Carlawerock, leaves the Prelates.

In July this Year, Mr. John Menzies, Minister of the Gospel at Carlawerock near Dumfries, after he had for some Time observed the plain Favour shewn to Papists, and had again and again remonstrated against the Growth of Popery, to the Bishop in the diocesan Meeting, and to his Brethren of the Exercise; when he saw so many favouring Popery, and violent in persecuting Protestants, he at first withdrew from their Meetings, and at length he sent his written Testimony to the Presbytery of Dumfries, July 12th this Year, and therein he declares against Prelacy, as connected with Popery, and what he had now discovered a great Evil in. His own Paper will speak best for him. How his Testimony, which he desires may be recorded, was taken, and what followed upon it, I know not, but have inserted it, App. N^o. 39. We shall afterwards meet with some others, who very happily had their Eyes opened to see the Evil of their Conformity to Prelacy, and left the Bishops and their Way, from a full Conviction of this.

App. N^o. 39.

Discoveries made of Oppression in former Years.

Throughout this Year, new Discoveries began to appear of the Villany and Oppression of the former Years, particularly of Sir William Bannantyne's grievous Oppressions. I find several Heritors and Gentlemen applying to the Council, and complaining that Sir William and others had taken away their Rights and Evidences in the Year 1667. and craving that they may be returned: And the Council are so just, as to order their Clerks to return any of them which are in their Hands.

Hardships upon Presbyterian Ministers, before the sitting down of the Parliament.

To conclude this Section; When the Time of the Parliament's Sitting drew near, the Commissioner Lawderdale comes down about the End of July, and he, to ingratiate himself with the Prelates, renews the Severities against the Presbyterian outed Ministers. Upon his Arrival at Edinburgh, he discharges, by Proclamation, any of them from coming to Town without Licence, and that under the Pain of Death. And at the same Time, as hath been hinted at in the former Section, several of them who were most frequent in preaching, are cited to appear before the Council, at several Diets, in August. Most of the Ministers who were cited, came in as secretly as they could, to inform themselves what they were to expect: And finding that all, or many of them, were to be shut up in Prison, and banished their native Country, after several Meetings together, they resolved not to compare.

Letter from a Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers, stirring up those of their Persuasion to Prayer App. N^o. 40.

However, when together, they agreed upon the Draught of a Letter to be sent through their Brethren, and the People of their Persuasion, up and down the Country, to stir them up to more than ordinary Prayer and Supplications. And that the Reader may have a View of the excellent Spirit of these good Men, I have inserted it, App. N^o. 40. This Paper was very quickning and upstirring, and many were put by it to set apart Days for fasting and wrestling. The Procedure of the Parliament this Year, is what I come now to give some Account of.

Of the Laws and Acts of the Second Session of Parliament, July and August 1670.
in as far as they concern Presbyterians.

THIS short Session of Parliament began July 28th, and continued about a Month. The Design of it, if we may judge by its Actings, was to promote the projected Union with England, and to rivet Prelacy. The first was as much despised in England, as the last was hated in Scotland. The Work of this Parliament.

Our Parliament begin with an Act empowering the King to name Commissioners to treat with England, in order to an Union betwixt the Kingdoms; and then they fall very foul upon the Presbyterians, both as a Set of People who still set up upon the Foot of Liberty, and against absolute and illimited Power, and to make their Enemies the Prelates the more hearty in the Matter of the Union, as hath been remarked. Their First Act.

Thus their Second Act, August 3^d, relates to those who refuse to depone against Delinquents; and being afterwards the Foundation of no small Trouble to the Sufferers, I have insert it, App. N^o. 41. By Delinquents they mean Church-criminals, if I may call them so; People who were alledged to be at Conventicles, Field-meetings, or guilty of Nonconformity; and all who will not turn Informers upon Oath, against their Neighbours and Friends, who heard Presbyterian Ministers, came under the Compass of this Act. Their Second Act about such who refuse to depone against Delinquents. App. N^o. 41.

The very Narrative of the Act, involves the Obeysers of it in the Maintenance of all that at this Time was comprehended under the publick Peace, and this was, by the Executors of the Law, if not the Legislators, understood of peaceable Subjection to Bishops and their Courses, and all the Oppressions the Country was laid under for their Maintenance. The same Narrative tells us further, That the Discovery and Punishment of Crimes tending to the Breach of the publick Peace, is the Duty of every good Subject; which is a certain Truth, had not the Subjects been under most iniquous and unreasonable Laws. But in the present Circumstances, the Sense of this Proposition is, That every good Subject is bound down, not only to inform against his Neighbour, his Father or Mother, for going to a Field-meeting or House-conventicle; but likewise to be a Hangman to every one that shall be condemned for what was now made a Crime. And, according to this Narrative, the Refusers of this give signal Evidence of their Disloyalty, and Inclination to Rebellion. Remarks upon it.

The statutory Part of the Act is pretty remarkable: Persons of all Qualities and Sexes are obliged to depone, not only before the Council, but before any other having Commission from his Majesty; which includes all the Officers of the Army, and such who were set up as Inquisitors up and down the Country. Yea, single Centinels themselves, either got or assumed this Power, of taking Oaths with respect to Delinquents. How becoming a Thing would it have been to see a Person of Quality, of the highest Quality, standing before an Ensign, Lieutenant, or single Centinel, giving Oath super inquirendis? It was odd to see a Parliament going in to such an unreasonable Thing; but we must cease from wondring at any Thing out of the Road of Reason and Decency, in this Period.

The special Delinquencies, narrated with a Particularity in the Act, are not Treason, Murder, Assassination, and other Crimes of an extraordinary Nature, neither were the Cases such wherein some Forms must sometimes be overlooked, in order to get the testes necessarii; they are Conventicles and unlawful Meetings. How far this last may extend, is more than I know. These were the atrocious Crimes against this Constitution, in which Father must depone against the Son, Husband against the Wife, Brother against the Sister, and that in all the Circumstances relative to them; not only personal Presence at them, but resetting of such, and intercommuning with Rebels. However near the Ties of Blood and Friendship be, the Parliament declare, that in Conscience Subjects are obliged to depone against all such. And present close Imprisonment, Banishment, and Deportation to the Plantations, are the Punishments appointed, not only upon a Refusal, but even a Delay to depone, in this Case. The Council are required to look after the Execution of this Act. The last Provision here is, That no Man's Deposition against another, shall infer against himself the Loss of Life, or Limb, or Banishment. This Clause does not appear to agree so well with their After-practice, of obliging People to declare and depone upon ensnaring Questions relating to themselves. Their Fourth Act.

The Fourth Act of this Session needs not be insert in the Appendix: 'Tis a new Proof of their deep Concern in the Persons and Houses of the Curates. It makes the assaulting the Lives, the robbing or attempting to rob the Houses of Ministers, to be Death; and a Premium of Five hundred Merks is given to the Discoverers of such; and Slaughter in apprehending ding them is indemnified. All Security doubtlessly ought by the Laws to be given unto the Persons and Families of Ministers; yet the Reader will notice how frequent Attempts were made, now and after this, upon the Lives of Presbyterian Ministers, and how many of their Families were scattered. Indeed these publick Robberies and Assaults were coloured over by the present Law; but that will never alter the Nature of Things. We have already heard, that there was no great Cause for making of this Law; and when the Attempts upon Incumbents came to be dipped into, they were generally found to be of no great Importance.

Their Fifth Act against Field-
conventicles.
App. N^o. 42.

The Parliament's Fifth Act, about Field-conventicles, is so remarkable, that it deserves a Room in this Collection, App. N^o. 42. I have not met with any Acts before it, in Scotland, or any Christian Kingdom, of this Strain; and the bloody Acts which follow, are very much bot-tomed upon this. By it a Minister, preaching to a House-full of People, if some happen to be without Doors, is condemned to die. Some Remarks offer upon the Act it self, though indeed it is so unprecedented and rigid, that it needs no Commentary.

it.

Upon the Matter, the Preface and Narrative of this Act have been already considered. It is a Jest to tell, That House-meetings, or Meetings for preaching the Gospel, are Assemblies and Convocations of the Lieges without his Majesty's Warrant. Every one knew, the free Liberty of preaching and hearing the Evangel, is again and again ratified by our Laws; and if any Thing since the 1660. ranversed these good Laws, which I see not, the primitive Christians, as well as these under antichristian Tyranny, made no Difficulty to meet for worshipping GOD, without the Protection of the Civil Magistrate, yea, against his Decrees.

The Character which follows, of the Persons who keep up and frequent those Meetings, is very unjust and groundless. Disaffected to Prelacy they still owned themselves to be, and the longer it continued, they saw the less Reason to alter their Opinion; but they never owned or approved any thing in the least seditious. The promoting of real Religion in themselves and others, and their keeping their Conscience undefiled from what they reckoned evil, was indeed before them; and they made no specious Appearances, since, as far as possible, it was both their Endeavour and Interest to be as much hid in their Meetings as might be, far less were they chargeable with false Pretences to Religion: Yea, I'll venture to affirm, That much of the real Exercise of Religion now in Scotland, was among them, and such as favoured them, and entertained a warm Love to them. That those Meetings were Seminaries of Separation from the Prelates, was owned; every Body knows it, and the Government it self had allowed Separation of this kind: But their being Seminaries of Rebellion, must be proven before it be credited. 'Tis nothing else but an old Thread-bare Aspersions, cast with equal Justice upon the primitive Christian Confessors by their Persecutors. What follows is singularly expressed, Tending to the Prejudice of the publick Worship of GOD in the Churches. Had it been expressed, The Prejudice of hearing the established Clergy in the Churches, it needed not be much controverted: But GOD's Worship ought not to be confined to the Churches, especially when thus filled. The LORD witnessed his Acceptance of Worshipping him in the Fields and Houses, very sensibly. That the Prohibition of Worshipping GOD in Houses and the Fields, especially in this bloody and antichristian Manner, was a Scandal to the reformed Religion, I do not question; but that the Practice of Presbyterians, here prohibited, was not so, is evident from the Practice of our own Reformers, and that of almost all the Reformed Churches, in less straitning Circumstances than Scotland was in at present. The Advisers to this and the like severe Laws, certainly cast a Reproach on the King's Government, and alienated the Hearts of some of the best of his Subjects from him, of which he was not altogether unsensible, when it was too late; but nothing of Disregard to the King's Person or Government, could as yet be objected against the Preachers at these Meetings.

I come forward to consider the statutory Part of this Act, which is double; against House-conventicles, and what now was called Field-meetings. Even as to the First the Act runs very hard; but as to the Second 'tis unreasonably severe. The Hardships as to House-conventicles, will appear in the Persons discharged, and the Penalties. It is then statute, That no outed Ministers, this one would almost expect, but 'tis added, no others, shall preach, expound Scripture, or pray any where but in their own Family. This breaks in upon the Rights of the Ministers of Christ through all the Reformed Churches. A foreign Minister, if he come to Scotland, must either turn Episcopal, or be persecuted for the Exercise of his Office. Here all Ministers, save the Substitutes of the Bishops, and these allowed by the Council, are discharged to preach, pray, or expound Scripture any where but in their own House, and to their own Family; and why not to their own Family upon the Road, or in another House? And what Reason can be given why they should not preach, &c. in another Family, where providentially they happened to be, when it did not interfere with publick Worship in the Churches? It is yet more strange to find them discharged to pray any where but in their own House, and to their own Family. If it must be supposed that Preaching and opening the Scriptures, will alienate the Hearts of Subjects from this Government; shall we think that praying in another Family will do so likewise? Must poor Presbyterians, in a sinful Time, and under a persecuted cuted Lot, be hindred to pray together to the LORD? And if an outed Minister comes to a Family where he is desired, shall it be Sedition in him to pray to GOD out of his own House? This, I confess, is a Scandal to the Reformation, yea, to Christianity it self, and a Reproach on the King's Government, if it be the Import of the Act, as I cannot see but it is. And to end this, as it relates to the Persons, none must be present at such a Meeting for Prayer, Expounding, or Preaching, under the following Penalties.

Which brings me to the other Branch of Hardships, the Penalties. Both Preachers and Hearers fall under the Pains of Sedition, and Rebellion, I think, too, for a House-conventicle. The Minister is to be seized upon, and imprisoned, till he find Caution not to keep another Conventicle, under the Pain of Five thousand Merks; a round Sum indeed, and much more than many of the outed Ministers had left them. In short, they must either bind themselves to give up their Ministerial Commission, or voluntarily banish themselves out of the King's Dominions; and all this for praying to GOD anywhere else but in their own Houses. The poor Hearers and Joyners, toties quoties, are fined; an Heritor in a Fourth Part of his yearly valued Rent, a Tenant and Labourer of the Ground in Twenty four Pounds, a Cottar in Twelve Pounds, a Servant in the Fourth Part of their Fee. And that none might escape, their Wives and Children are fined in the Half of the former Sums respective. The Reader shall, within a little, know what prodigious Sums were decerned against many Gentlemen, for an accumulated Number of Times they were alledged to be guilty, in the Terms of this Act. And to secure all, they are to be imprisoned till they pay the said Fines; yea, that they may be doubly punished for one Fault, they are to be imprisoned further, as long as the Council sees fit. This was a good Clause to keep them from incurring new Fines; but the Penalties do not end here. Further, to discourage these so much hated House-conventicles, the Master or Mistress of the House is to be fined double the former Rates. Yet all this did not discourage good People; but such Meetings increased, to the fretting and galling of the Prelates. Lastly, to be a Cover for Magistrates Persecution in Burghs, the Magistracy are most unreasonably made liable for such Fines as the Council shall inflict, for every House-meeting within the Burgh; and they are to have their Relief off the House-keepers and Hearers; and the Council are empowered to fine the Inhabitants, as they see good, to the Boot.

But the statutory Part of the Act, anent Field-conventicles, is yet more severe; and the Ministers and Meeters at them have Abundance of hard Names bestowed upon them, maliciously wicked, disloyal, and tending in a high Measure to the Breach of the publick Peace. One would think, the first Two are as much in House as in Field-conventicles. Field-conventicles are described to be, not only what every one would guess them to be, Meetings in the open Fields, but likewise Meetings in a House for Prayer and Preaching, where more meet than the House contains, and some are without Doors. Now what a Hardship was this, That a Minister and a House-full of People should only be punished? but if Two or Three happen to be without Doors, the Minister and Convocator must die! What Difference can any reasonable Man suppose this to make, in the supposed Crimes, answerable to the vastly different Punishments; especially when the Minister either knew it not, or could not help it, or some idle and malicious Persons, with a Design to make the Meeting Death, did gather about the Doors? Well, the Minister and Convocator of such a Meeting, shall be punished with Death and Confiscation of Goods. I hope the Reader will observe the Impudence and Effrontry of the Prelatick Writers, who tell us, there were no Severities exercised in the Reigns of the Two Brothers, and term them a Time of the mildest Government. Further, to gratify the persecuting Temper of such who pushed these cruel Acts, a Reward of Five hundred Merks is offered out of the Treasury, to such as shall inform against, seize and secure the Ministers or Convocators of such Meetings: And if any, in apprehending them, shall commit Slaughter, they are indemnified. Here is a Price of Blood, and a Reward of Unrighteousness. And the Reader will notice a Temptation, and a Kind of Necessity here laid upon the People, by the Prelates and their Supporters, to bring Arms with them when they came to hear the Gospel; which afterwards was punished by Death, and about which so much Noise is made by the Friends of the Bishops, and the Advocates for those Times. First they tempt, and then accuse and punish. They constrain People to bring Arms to defend their Ministers, who ventured their Lives to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom to them, as they would not see them butchered, for their Regard to their Souls; and then they declare this to be Treason. As to the Hearers at those Field-conventicles, real and legal, for every Fault, toties quoties, the former Fines are doubled, but Prejudice of what other Punishments the Law lays them under, as seditious Persons, and Disturbers of the publick Peace. How oft must the same Crime be punished?

As this Law in all its Points is extraordinary, so the Execution of it must be proportionably out of the common Road. Not only all Sheriffs, Stewards, Lords of Regalities, but their Deputes are empowered, yea, commanded, upon Information, to call before them all Persons within their respective Jurisdictions, whom they suspect; and upon finding them guilty, to exact the abovenamed Fines. They are indeed made accountable to the Council

cil for the Fines of Heritors: But as a Bribe, and the Wages of Unrighteousness, all the Fines of others, are given to themselves. It must be owned this was a very effectual Way to execute this severe Act; and by the way it will be noticed, that this Clause puts me, or any who give Accounts of the exorbitant and terrible Fines and Exactions, for many Years following, upon this Act, perfectly out of Case to give a Calcul of them. No Register was kept, no Account was to be made, and all was pocketed. By this Time many of them have made a Reckoning before the highest Tribunal, whither some of them have been very suddenly called, from the very Places where they executed this Iniquity established by a Law. I could instance, but shall leave their Names to be buried with them in their Graves. And lest this Bribe should not be effectual enough, the Council are ordered carefully to enquire after, and over-look those Under-executors of this Law, and punish their Neglect, as they find Cause.

It is much this Act is not made to look back, as was the Fashion now of many of our Laws. However, lest this Omission should be improven to the Advantage of Presbyterians, the Council are ordered to look back, and carefully to punish former Faults, according to former Laws. All is shut up with the Parliament's Hopes, that this Act would do the Business of Presbyterians, either kill them, or convert them in Three Years Time, and so it is made only for that Space. And the King is impowered, as a Branch of his Prerogative, to protract and lengthen it out as he pleareth. I have taken a large View of the Contents of this Act, as containing a full Document of the Spirit of Prelates, the Severity of this Period, and the Hardships Presbyterians were under at this Time, and shall very quickly dispatch the rest.

Act 6. against disorderly Baptisms.
App. N^o. 43.
Remarks up-
on it.

Their Sixth Act is against disorderly Baptisms, and I have annexed it App. N^o. 43. Its Narrative I cannot well account for, unless it be from some Principles, which of late are turned so fashionable among the Prelatists, whereby all the Reformed Churches abroad, are unchurched. The Act says, That Baptisms by Persons not publickly authorized, are scandalous to the Protestant Religion. How, at a Time, when the whole of our Scots Management was calculated for bringing in of Popery, they, upon every Turn, hook in the Protestant Religion, which they had so little at Heart, I shall not determine: This I am perswaded of, That it is a Scandal to the Protestant Religion, to restrict Baptism, or make its Validity depend upon a Person's being publickly authorized by the Civil Magistrate. The Penalties upon Baptisms by any not thus authorized, are the Fourth Part of the Heritor's yearly valued Rent, a Hundred Pounds to the better Sort, and Fifty Pounds to the meaner Kind of Merchants, Tradesmen and Tenants, Twenty Pounds to Cottars, and the Half of their Fee to Servants, toties quoties. And all the Fines, except those of Heritors, are given, as above, to the Under-executors, to encourage them to Diligence in Persecution, when the Bishop, Curate, or any other informs. This Act was a Foundation for terrible Exactions, and the contravening of it was more easily evinced than that of the former.

Act 7. against Separation.
App N^o. 44.

Remarks up-
on it.

The Seventh Act I have likewise added, App. N^o. 44. It is against Separation, and is both a great Foundation of the Persecution of Presbyterians, and a real Toleration to Papists. In reading the Narrative of this Law, it will appear the Law-givers take it for granted, that keeping of the Meetings for Worship, under the Prelates and their Curates, is a Compliance with his Majesty's Government, as now established in the Church, that is, as I take it, with his Royal Supremacy, and a cheerful Concurrence with such Ministers, as by publick Authority, are or shall be admitted: And therefore it is the less to be wondered at, that Presbyterians, who could not in Conscience comply with either the one or the other, under this View of the Sense of the Legislator, did withdraw. Their withdrawing was before in Law Sedition; but now the King is made to reckon himself in Conscience bound to go some further lengths, and so commands all his Subjects of the Reformed Religion to attend publick Worship, under the Penalties afternamed. This was, and most reasonably, reckoned a Relaxation of all the former Laws made against Papists, and a material Toleration to them. So they took it, and the Executors of the Law never touched them: But all Protestants who withdraw from their Parish-church Three LORD's Days together, are to be fined toties quoties, Heritors in the Eighth Part of their Rent, Tenants in Six Pounds Scots, Cottars and Servants in Forty Shillings, Merchants and Tradesmen as in the Act; and the Sheriffs, &c. are bribed to execute this, as in the Fifth Act above. And besides, they are made Judges of Relevancy as to the Excuse for Absence, though they be Parties, in all Cases, save that of Heritors, and would probably determine favourably for their own Purse. They are further impowered to take what Oaths they find needful for discovering the guilty in every Parish; which was a new Handle of Persecution, according to the Second Act just now noticed.

A pretty singular Clause is tacked to this Law. If an Heritor, Liferenter, or Wadsetter, continue a Year absent from his Parish-church, the Sheriffs, &c. are to delate them to the Council, who are to put the Bond of Nonresistance, and passive Obedience, annexed to the Act in the Appendix, to them; and upon their Refusal or Delay to subscribe the Bond, they are to secure or banish them; and their single and liferent Escheat falls immediately to the King, and is to be intermeddled with for his Use. This both quickned the Under-executors of the Law to their Work of fining, lest the Council should take it out of their Hand, and proved, in a few Years, ruining to the Estates and Families of not a few.

It cannot escape the Reader's Remark, that the Loss of single and severent Escheat, Imprisonment, and Banishment, is here the Punishment annexed to simple withdrawing from Parishes; beside the Fines the Under-exactors may have uplifted before. This is plain Oppression, merely for Conscience sake. The Council are likewise to look after the Execution of this Act, and censure inferior Judges for their Negligence: And it is to endure Three Years, and as long further as the King, i. e. the Prelates, pleaseth, and to be without Prejudice of Ecclesiastical Censures.

In this Parliament then, we see a very broad Foundation laid for heavy and rigorous Persecution of Presbyterians, in their Goods, Liberty and Life. The Council and Under-judges were not negligent in the Execution of those Acts, during the Eight following Years, which, together with the sending into the West Country a barbarous highland Host, to exasperate People's Spirits, all which issued in a Second and fruitless Appearance at Bothwell, was justly chargeable upon these unaccountable Laws, and their severe Execution. But we shall first meet with the Cunning of the Fox, going before the Paw of the Lion: And that brings me to Those Acts are the Foundation of a severe Persecution.

SECT. IV.

Of the Accommodation proposed with Presbyterians, and other Methods taken this Year, by Bishop Leighton.

HAVING considered the rigid Measures taken this Year with Presbyterians, I come to give Account of some Attempts of another Nature made upon them, in order to shake them off their Principles, and to divide them among themselves.

Mr. Robert Leighton, Bishop of Dumblain, upon Archbishop Burnet's Demission, was made Commendator, or Administrator of the Archbishoprick of Glasgow; and this altered Matters a little with relation to Presbyterian Ministers who lived in that Diocese. This Man set up upon another Lay, than the rest of the Bishops. Somewhat hath been said of his Character in the First Book: I shall only now add, That he was Son to Doctor Leighton, who for his Zion's Plea against Prelacy, had his Ears cropt in England. The Son, from zealous violent Covenanter at Newbottle, by deserting his Charge there, got in to be Principal of Edinburgh, where he led a very Monkish Life; and after the Restoration, turn'd so courtly, as to embrace the meanest of the Bishopricks: And now, having the See of Glasgow in commendam, he affected to shew himself first pure, and then peaceable; and appoints a purging Committee for his Clergy, and then endeavours to retrieve their Credit, by bringing some of the most eminent Preachers of the Prelatical Set to the West. Towards the End of the Year, his Propotal for an Accommodation was made. A Taste of each of these perhaps the Reader may desire, and though they don't so directly relate to the Sufferings, I shall hint a little at them, since we have not the Ecclesiastick History of this Time.

Mr. Leighton now Commendator of Glasgow.

His Character.

When the Bishop entred upon the Administration, he finds the Country full of Complaints of the Scandals of his Clergy; and, I suppose at his first Synod, he appoints a Committee of his Underlings to receive Complaints, regulate the Affairs of Ministers, convene before them the scandalous and unworthy, make Trial of what was laid to their Charge, and to determine according as they found Cause. As far as I can learn, this Committee was not restricted to the Members of the Diocese of Glasgow; but Mr. Charters, Mr. Nairn, Mr. Aird, and some others, whom we shall find just now were brought West upon another Errand, were joyned to them: And the Council being acquainted with the Design, interpose their Authority in the Matter, by their Act August 25th. 'The Council being informed, that the Synod of Glasgow have appointed a Committee of their Number, to hear and take Trial of such Complaints as shall be given in to them, against scandalous Ministers; and it being expedient, that they have all Encouragement in what is committed to them, do appoint Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, Sir Thomas Wallace, Sir John Cunningham, Sir John Harper, the Provosts of Glasgow and Air, to meet with them, and countenance and assist them, and be careful that their Orders and Citations be obeyed.'

He appoints a Committee to receive Complaints against unworthy Ministers.

The Council appoint Assistants to them.

Publick Intimation was made throughout the Diocese of Glasgow, that Liberty was granted to all, to table their Complaints against their Ministers, before the Bishop and the Assistants

Publick Intimation made sometime before.

he had assumed. Whatever Zeal seemed to discover it self in this new Step the Bishop was pleased to take, yet no great Advantage to the Interests of pure Religion was expected by Persons who considered how Matters stood. Every Body knew, that while the Bishop was at Dumblain, he had as scandalous and ignorant a Clergy as in Scotland, and yet there, he never offered to turn one of them out.

The Committee meet in September.

When this Committee met in September, they endeavoured to make as narrow a Door as might be for Complaints and Delations; and in the Entry, to put an effectual Bar in the Way of Accusations, it was urged, That none should be permitted to table a Complaint against a Minister, unless he first took and signed the Declaration: But finding from some Lawyers with them, that they had no Warrant to require the Declaration, this Proposal was unwillingly laid aside. I find it remarked by some, that to discourage Complainers, they ordered that such as did succumb in the Probation of their Libel, should appear in Sackcloth before the Congregation, as Slanderers of their Minister; and accordingly, that one, in the Entry, upon his Failure in full Probation, was thus censured, ad terrorem. But for my own Share, I think no Body should be suffered to bespatter the Reputation of others, without Proof. Whether the Committee drove this Matter too far I cannot tell.

Many discouraged in their Complaints.

By those Things a good many Parishes were hindred from appearing against their Curates, expecting but little Justice from the Bishop and his Assistants: And where it could be got done, not a few chose rather to agree with them for a little Money, voluntarily to remove. This severals did accept of, and some went to Ireland, some to the North and East Country, whence they came.

Some Incumbents deposed, others transported.

However, in some Places the Probation was so clear, there was no getting by it. The Incumbent at Killellan, in the Presbytery of Paisly, was deposed simpliciter. His nearest Neighbour in Kilmacomb, of whom before, with some Three or Four others, were only transported, and removed elsewhere, although several Acts of Drunkenness were directly proven against them.

Their Procedure in the Case of Jaffrey in Maybole.

The evident Partiality of the Committee, in the Case of the forementioned Jaffrey of Maybole, made the greatest Noise. We have heard, that lately he libelled his Parishioners for an Attempt upon his Life; now they take their Turn, and libel and prove before this Committee the Crimes of profane Swearing, Striking, Fighting, and plain Drunkenness: Yet the Committee were in a fair Way to absolve him, and censure his Accusers; and would have done so by Plurality of Voices, had not the Bishop, ashamed of this, interposed, and in the Plenitude of his Episcopal Power, forbid him the Exercise of his Ministry in that Parish. Thus the Committee were either partial, or the Bishop unjust in his Censure, which was indeed generally looked on as soft, and very disproportioned to his Crimes, and both were blamed. However, the People got rid of this troublesome Guest. This is all the Account I have of this purging Committee, which made so much Noise, and did so little to the Purpose.

Some Episcopal Ministers and Preachers, of Learning and Gifts, called the Bishops Evangelists, brought to the West.

About the same Time, the Bishop took another Method to prevent any further Indulgence to Presbyterian Ministers, and, if possible, to retrieve the Credit of the Clergy, and to cast a Cloud upon the indulged Presbyterian Ministers. The Council are prevailed with to hire and send West, some of the Episcopal Clergy, whose Fame, Learning, and Preaching-gifts, might most recommend them to the People in the West-country. I find nothing of this in the Registers; but I am well informed, they had all of them Letters from the Council to go West, and a Share of the vacant Stipends promised them, or a Gratuity from the Treasury. Those were by the Country-people termed ironically, The Bishops Evangelists.

Their Names.

As far as I can recover them, their Names were, Mr. James Nairn, a Person of very considerable Learning and Gifts, but inclinable to the Pelagian Tenets, as was then thought; Mr. Gilbert Burnet, well known to the World since, first Professor of Divinity at Glasgow, and after that persecuted for his appearing against Popery, and for the Cause of Liberty; and since the Revolution, the learned and moderate Bishop of Sarum, one of the great Eyes-sores of the High-fliers and Tories in England, and a very great Ornament to his native Country; Mr. Laurence Charters, a Man of great Worth and Gravity, but not altogether so fit for a Mission of this Nature, by reason of his unpopular Utterance; Mr. James Aird, commonly called Bishop Leightoun's Ape; Mr. Patrick Cook, and Mr. Walter Paterson.

Great Expectation from this Project, but it was very fruitless.

These Persons, at least some of them, were of such Reputation and Credit with their Admirers, that it was reckoned, all the West would be profelyted by them, or at least very much exposed, if they fell not in with them; but they themselves found Matters otherwise when they came. Few Profelytes were made, and in many Places where they came, they could not have a Congregation. Two or Three hundred were the utmost, and those mostly of the younger Sort, who came out of Curiosity, and after a Day or Two left them; so that very soon they wearied of their fruitless Undertaking, and the gravest of them frankly owned, that the West-country could not be edified so well as by their own Ministers. The Indulged had not the least Hurt by this Experiment. Beside the Stipend of Parishes where they preached till they wearied, I am told, the Council bestowed liberal Rewards upon them.

The Bishop's Proposals of an Accommodation.

The last Effort Bishop Leightoun made, was, toward the Close of this Year, by the Accommodation proposed to some of the Presbyterian Ministers. The Design of this was nothing thing else but to hook in the Presbyterian Ministers to an unperceived Subjection to Bishops: The Snare was seen, and prudently and cautiously evited. The Case of this Accommodation is already published, and in the Hands of many; so I shall only give a short Narrative of this Business. Much of it was transacted this Year, and the last Part of it in the Beginning of the next. All shall be put together in this Place.

The King's Commissioner Lawderdale, at Bishop Leightoun's Desire, wrote Letters to Mr. George Hutchison indulged at Irvine, Mr. Alexander Wedderburn at Kilmarnock, Mrs. Matthew Ramsay and John Baird at Paisly, Mr. John Gombil at Symington, desiring them to come into Edinburgh, August 9th, this Year, upon Matters of considerable Importance he had to communicate to them. They all came at the Day, and waited upon the Commissioner at Holy-rood-house, where they found some of the Counsellors, Bishop Leightoun, and Mr. Burnet, about this Time made Professor of Divinity at Glasgow.

Mr. Hutchison and other Ministers called in to Edinburgh in August.

Lawderdale opened the Meeting, with acquainting the Ministers, that he had not heard of any Mis carriage in any of them; but he had sent for them to advise with them concerning an Accommodation, and to propose an Agreement upon joyn't Measures, which might tend to the Peace of the Church; and enlarged upon the King's great Condescension to them, and his Wishes for a complete Unity and Harmony. Bishop Leightoun seconded the Commissioner in a long Harangue, insisting much upon his Majesty's Clemency and Benignity, mixing in some bitter Remarks upon some alledged Evils in the Presbyterian Constitution, he had observed when among them. The Ministers made no Reply to him, this being not so proper a Place; but, on the Morrow in his Chamber, they answered his Reflections at full Length. Lawderdale pressed that they might give their Sentiments of the Proposal of an Accommodation betwixt the dissenting Parties about Church-government in the West. They signified that the Proposal did concern the whole Body of Presbyterians, indulged and not indulged, and declined to give their private Judgment in a Thing of general Concern, till their Brethren were consulted. They likewise desired the Proposal might be given them in Writ; which the Bishop promised, but did not perform.

Their Conference with the Commissioner, Bishop Leightoun, and others, at Holy-rood-house.

The Result of this Conference was, The Commissioner allowed Presbyterian Ministers, indulged and not indulged, to meet among themselves, to consider the Bishop's Proposal; and gave them until the First of November, to think upon an Answer. When the Bishop neglected to give them his Project in Writing, the Ministers, among themselves, put the Substance of it in this Shape, to be communicated to their Brethren.

Presbyterian Ministers, indulged and not indulged, allowed to meet.

Presbyteries being set up by Law, as they were established before the Year 1638. and the Bishop passing from his negative Voice, and we having Liberty to protest and declare against any Remainder of Prelatick Power retained, or that may happen at any Time to be exercised by him, for a Salvo for our Consciences from Homologation thereof; Queritur, Whether we can, with Safety to our Consciences and Principles, joyn in these Presbyteries? Or, what else it is that we will desire or do for Peace in the Church, and an Accommodation, Episcopacy being always preserved?

Substance of the Bishop's Proposal, as laid before them when met.

Accordingly, the Ministers in the South and West had a very frequent Meeting; and, after full and free Conversation, and mature Pondering of every Thing which offered in favour of an Accommodation, they all agreed that the above Concessions were not sufficient to be a Foundation of their sitting and acting in Presbyteries and Synods with the Prelates. I have seen several Papers which at this Time passed among the Ministers on this Subject: And the Writer of the Case of the Accommodation hath, at great Length, given the Arguments against the proposed Accommodation. The Substance of the Reasons offered against it, at the Meeting of Ministers, as far as I can reach them, was in short.

The Proposal not satisfying.

That although Presbyterian Ministers did sit and act with Bishops before the 1638. yet then Presbyterian Government was in possessorio, by standing Acts of Parliament not rescinded; and the Prelates were merely obtruded upon Presbyteries and Synods: Whereas now, Episcopacy is established, and Presbyteries are by Law discharged. By the Act of Parliament 1592. Presbyteries were owned to be Courts of Christ; the intrinick Power and spiritual Jurisdiction of the Church, and its Judicatories, Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies, was then ratified: But now that Act is rescinded, the Government and Policy of the Church is declared to depend upon, and to be ordered by the Royal Supremacy, as an inherent Prerogative of the Crown. By virtue of this, Bishops are allowed to assume whom they please, in Presbyteries and Synods, as more Assistants; and these Meetings now entirely depend upon the King's Supremacy, and the Prelates as his Substitutes. It was added, That the old Presbyterians made a Difference 'twixt sitting in Presbyteries with a Bishop, or his constant Moderator, and sitting with him in his diocesan Synod. After the pretended Assembly at Glasgow was ratified, 1612. and the Bishops were invested with the sole Power of Ordination and Jurisdiction, the Presbyterian Ministers, generally speaking, left the Bishops Meetings; and, as soon as Providence opened a Door, they did their utmost to be rid of the Prelates, and brought about that notable Reformation 1638, of which a joyning with the Bishops, as now proposed, would be a plain giving up.

Further, as to the Bishop's negative Voice, the present Proposal did not appear to them clear and distinct. The Bishop had lately used it in Jaffrey's Case; there was no Law to restrain it; though the present Commendator yielded it, his Successor might claim it. Besides, the Bishop faltered a little, as to this Part of his own Proposal, in Conversation with the Ministers. When they asked him what he would do, upon the Supposition he and the Presbytery could not agree upon a Point in Debate; he answered, He would enter his Dissent against them. And when urged, Whether his Dissent would be any more than that of another Member; he declined speaking of this, and said, The Estates behaved to determine that. So his Dissent upon the Matter, seemed still to be a Negative, at least upon the Execution of the Presbytery's Sentence. They reckoned a Protestation against the Episcopal Constitution, while they sat and acted with a Bishop, would be Protestatio contraria facto, and so no Salve to their Conscience. A considerable Difference appeared to them 'twixt joyning in publick Worship with a Bishop, or such as were ordained by him, and sitting in Courts with them; since the First did not, in all Cases, necessarily infer any Approbation of the Corruptions of the Minister, or Mouth of the worshipping Society: But they could not see how to joyn in Discipline, without approving of the Episcopal Power, wherereby the Acts of Discipline were exercised. In short, though this Proposal should have taken in the Bounds of the Synod of Glasgow, yet the rest of the Prelates were utterly averse from it.

In Fine, the Ministers reckoned this Accommodation inconsistent with their Principles. The Presbyteries they were to meet in, were founded only upon the Bishop's Commission, which he might enlarge or straiten as he pleased: They were denuded of the Power of Jurisdiction and Ordination, which the Bishop reserved in his own Hand: They wanted ruling Elders, Officers, in their Opinion, of Christ's Institution. In a Word, the Bishop, in the Presbytery, was still clothed with an Episcopal Power, though he should, for a while, lay aside the Exercise of it; and they reckoned their sitting with him homologated Episcopacy.

Upon all these Accounts, and many others too long to be narrated, the Ministers most harmoniously refused the Accommodation; and such of them as before had been called in to Edinburgh, went back at the appointed Time. When they came, the Noblemen, and the Earl of Tweddale in particular, who had been very forward in this Matter, were gone to London; so the Ministers resolve to wait their Return, and then give their Answer, if required.

Mean while Bishop Leightoun assaults some of them, by Letters of the Date November 12th and 19th, desiring a Conference with the Indulged and Nonindulged, and offering to explain his Proposal, and add more Concessions. He likewise pressed the Ministers to name Time and Place. Yet, it was known, that at the same Time, he was spreading Letters to some of his Friends, inveighing against the Presbyterians, for not accepting of his Proposal, though their Answer was not yet made publick. Such who received Letters from the Bishop, advised with their Brethren, who all dissuaded them from answering in Writ; but Mrs. Hutchison and Wedderburn went in to him, and expostulated with him for his Letters to his Friends just now mentioned. The Bishop extenuated the Matter, and alledged, what he had written, was some considerable Time since. They gave him to know, they did not decline a Conference, providing it was legally allowed by the Magistrate; but would not name Time and Place. At length, when he let them see my Lord Tweddale's Letter to him anent this, for their Part they agreed to the Meeting, which the Bishop appointed at Paisly, December 14th.

That Day Bishop Leightoun, the Provost of Glasgow, Sir John Harper at Cannethan, Mr. Gilbert Burnet, Mr. James Ramsay Dean of Glasgow, came to Paisly, and about Twenty six Presbyterian Ministers, indulged and not indulged, met with them there.

The Meeting was begun with Prayer, by Mr. Matthew Ramsay, eldest Minister of the Town. The Bishop opened their Conversation with an eloquent and elaborate Discourse, of near an Hour's length. He harangued upon the Peace of the Church, Evils of Division, and his own Condescension to his Brethren, with Commendations of Episcopacy, and plain enough Invectives against Presbytery. He added some Periwalives to fall in with his Proposal, and insinuated pretty open Threats, if it were not gone into.

Mr. John Baird, as had been concerted by the rest, spoke next, and signified, That the Brethren had seriously considered the Proposal made to them in August; and could not, without quitting their Principles, and wronging their Conscience, condescend to sit in Judicatories with a Bishop, under whatever Name, who is not chosen by these Meetings, nor liable to Censure from them for Malversation, and, so far as he could, retains his negative Power, and continues a Prelate; with whom they reckoned themselves bound, by solemn Engagements to God, not to comply. The Bishop said, in his usual affected Way, Is there then no Hope of Peace? are you for War? is all this in vain?

Mr. Ralph Rogers resumed some of the Bishop's Innuendo's, and Reflections upon Presbyterian Government, and refuted them. He had alledged, that for many Hundreds of Years, Bishops had never been opposed in the Christian Church, except by Arius. Mr. Rogers assured him, he could disprove this, and asserted, that the Patrons of Episcopacy would never evince, that for some Hundreds of Years there was any Bishop in the Church, who was not chosen by the Clergy, and every way accountable to them; or that there were any Archbishops, with the Power they now assume. He stated, with a great deal of Plainness, the Differences 'twixt the primitive and present Bishops; That these were still chosen by Presbyters, and those imposed upon them; these only presided, those do a great deal more; That in the primitive Times there were more than one in a City, and so could not have that Jurisdiction they now claim.

Mr. Burnet replied, by denying the primitive Bishops mere Precedency, and asserting, there were then Archbishops really, though they had not the Name; and that more Bishops than one in a City was a Fault; and that Augustine regrets it.

Mr. Burnet's Reply.

Mr. Wedderburn answered, That the present Bishops were either accountable to the Presbyteries, or uncontrollable; since, in most Places, for a long Time, there were no provincial Synods: That Augustine complains of his Entry into a Place where another Bishop was settled, only as the Transgression of a Canon of the Council of Nice; which supposeth, That before that Council, the Practice was ordinary.

Mr. Wedderburn's Duply.

And whereas the Bishop had alledged, it was impossible, from Scripture or Antiquity, to prove that mere Presbyters had the Power of the Keys of Discipline; Mr. Hutchison took notice, That it was plain, Christ gave the Power of the Keys of Discipline and Government, to these to whom he committed the Keys of Doctrine; and observed, That it was undeniable that the Key of Doctrine was committed to Presbyters. No Reply was offered to this.

Mr. Hutchison's Discourse.

The Bishop rose up, and begged they might not enter upon Debates, which would be endless, and not answer the Design of their Meeting. This was gone into, only, in the Progress of their Discourse, Mr. Alexander Jamison reasoned so closely with the Bishop, against the Prelates Power over Presbyters, that the Bishop turned a little uneasy. His Nose fell a bleeding; whether from this or not I shall not determine, but he was forced to retire a while. Several others inclined to have entered the Lists with the Bishop and Professor, but were prevented by Declarations, that the Meeting was not for Disputes.

Debates are agreed to be waved.

Mr. William Adair, and Mr. James Nasmyth, apprehending that the Liberty taken in their Reasonings, might come to be made Use of as a Handle against the Whole of Presbyterian Ministers, moved for a Delay till to Morrow, and desired the Bishop's Proposals in Writing, to consider upon. The Bishop said, He had no Warrant to give any thing in Writ; yet, at Sir John Harper's Desire, Mr. Burnet set down the Sum of the Bishop's Condescensions, which was read coram, and the Bishop approved it, as containing his Mind. I have annexed a Copy, App. N^o. 45. And the Reader who desires to dip into this Affair, will find them at Length considered in The Case of Accommodation.

The Meeting adjourned till to Morrow.

On the Morrow, when the Ministers had considered this Paper, they found it considerably different from the Proposals made at Edinburgh: And they craved some Time to consider the Matter further, which was granted them; and they were told, That against the 12th of January next, their Mind would be expected at Edinburgh. Thus the Meeting at Paisly ended.

The Sum of the Bishop's Condescensions App. N^o. 45.

This differing from the Proposals made at Edinburgh, Time is allowed for the Consideration of it, and the Return to be at Edinburgh in January.

The Ministers met at Kilmarnock in a few Days, and unanimously agreed, That the last Propositions were more unsatisfactory than the former Proposal: And, I am told, they drew up their Mind in Writ, and nominated Mr. George Hutchison, Mr. Alexander Wedderburn, Mr. Robert Miller, Mr. William Maitland, and some others, to go in to Edinburgh, and deliver their Answer in Writ, if it was required; and gave them Liberty to add to it as they saw necessary. I have not seen a Copy of what was agreed to at Kilmarnock, neither do I find that they inclined that any thing should come from them in Writ, unless commanded by the Government, and pressed to it.

The Ministers meet at Kilmarnock, and find this Second Paper more unsatisfactory than the former, and nominate Mr. Hutchison and others to deliver their Answer at Edinburgh.

I have before me a Copy of some Proposals made about this Time; but whether before or after the Meeting at Paisly, I know not. They were not, as far as I know, agreed to by any Meeting of Ministers, but drawn up by some private Hand, as a counter Proposal to Bishop Leightoun's. How far they would have satisfied all Presbyterian Ministers in their present Circumstances, pro tanto, I shall not say; but I have insert them, App. N^o. 46. as what may give some further Light to this Affair.

A counter Proposal to the Bishop. App. N^o. 46.

These Brethren who were nominated, came in to Edinburgh against January 11th, 1671. where they found the Chancellor, Duke Hamilton, Earl of Tweeddale, and some other Counsellors, with Bishop Leightoun and Mr. Burnet. There were Two Meetings at Holy-rood-house, upon the 11th and 21st, and the Ministers had several Conferences more privately with the Bishop, and sometimes with some of the Noblemen. I have seen Two written Accounts of what passed at Edinburgh at this Time; one drawn by the Bishop, which is answered in the Appendix to the Case of Accommodation; and another drawn by some of the Ministers who went in to Edinburgh. 'Tis needless to swell the Appendix with them.

The Ministers make the Return at Edinburgh, in January.

In short, the Ministers declared the Bishop's Proposals unsatisfying to them and their Brethren; and narrated some Reasons why they reckoned them so. The Bishop, at one of the Meetings with the Chancellor, offered a Dispute with them. Mr. Hutchison very modestly declined this, observing that he was not in tuto to dispute against Episcopacy, by reason of the the standing Laws, discharging Speaking or Writing against it, or arguing for Presbytery, under the Pains of Sedition. Mr. Burnet insulted a little upon this, and jeered them, because they would not appear in their Cause, which they called the Kingdom of Christ. Upon this Mr. Wedderburn accepted the Challenge, providing the Chancellor and Counsellors present would allow him; and offered to prove Presbyterian Principles to be agreeable to Scripture, Reason, Antiquity, and the Judgment of our Reformers from Popery: But the Allowance was not granted; so this proposed Accommodation broke up.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians in the Year 1671.

A general
ters this Year.

HIS Year does not afford so much Matter for a History of Sufferings, as many in this Period; and therefore I shall dispatch it the more quickly, without breaking it into Sections. The indulged Ministers have their Hardships growing upon them, their Brethren, the outed Ministers, are likewise brought into Trouble; the Persecution is continued upon the Account of Conventicles, and several Gentlemen, formerly confined, are hardly enough dealt with in their Prisons, for their alledged Accession to Pentland; Popery in the mean time is very much increasing. These Things, with some other incidental Matters this Year, I shall give some brief Accounts of, that the State of the Church of Scotland, under the Cross, Year after Year, may the more plainly be seen.

The Refusal of the proposed Accommodation improven against Presbyterians.

It hath been already observed, that the real Design of the Accommodation, which broke up in the Beginning of this Year, was to ensnare Presbyterians; and when they refused to come into the Net, great Care was taken to represent them as unreasonable Men, and a Party who had nothing to say for themselves; while they were not allowed to speak in their own Cause the present severe Laws putting a Bar upon them. The Bishops took Care to improve this Occasion, to continue the Stop which was put to indulging any more Presbyterian Ministers, and to bring new Difficulties upon such as were already allowed.

Restrictions upon the indulged Ministers strictly urged.

The Restrictions and Limitations laid upon the indulged Brethren this Year, were put to a pretty strict Execution. I find it observed by some, that Lawderdale, who with some Opposition got the Indulgence passed, had some Difficulty to get it kept up; till it came to appear, that People began to split upon this Head, and Divisions to creep in, and then the Limitations were but little pressed, and their Disturbance came to be but very small; only some of the inferior Clergy fretted, and reflected upon Lawderdale, as in Heart a Presbyterian, because he supported the Indulgence.

Act of Council confining the indulged Ministers to their Parishes.

When the Accommodation was at an End, January 26th, the Council make an Act, confining all the Indulged, who kept not Presbyteries and Synods, to their Parishes. It is but short, and as follows. 'Forasmuch as the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, in pursuance of his Majesty's Royal Pleasure, signified to them by his Letter, June 7th, 1669. did, by their Act of July 27th, 1669. ordain all such outed Ministers, as should be allowed to exercise the Ministry, to keep Kirk-sessions, Presbyteries, and Synods, as was done by all Ministers before the Year 1638. and did declare to them, That such as should be allowed to exercise the Ministry, and should not obey in keeping of Presbyteries, should be confined within the Bounds of the Parishes where they preach, ay and while they give Assurance to keep Presbyteries: And the said Lords being informed, that hitherto Obedience hath not been given to the foresaid Act of Council, do therefore command and require all and every one of these Ministers, allowed by Order of Council to preach, to keep Presbyteries in Time coming: And do hereby confine all those who shall not give Obedience, in keeping Presbyteries, within the Bounds of the respective Parishes where they preach: And ordain ordain Extracts of this Act to be sent to every one of the said Ministers, that none of them pretend Ignorance.

It was hard enough to confine any Subject without a Fault, and yet not disagreeable to the arbitrary Measures of this Time; but it looks yet worse to confine Ministers, unto whom they pretend to be allowing Favours, merely for Conscience Sake. This Confinement, at first View, may seem to be no great Hardship; yet, if we consider how many necessary Affairs might suddenly call them elsewhere, and what Time and Labour it cost to apply to the Council upon every Emergent, this State will not appear very desirable. I shall but instance one Case. June 22^d, Mr. John Bell, Minister at Ardrossan, being confined to his Parish, his Father, living within a Mile of him, falls sick, and he must apply to the Council to visit his dying Father. They allow him indeed, by their Act of the above Date; but with a proviso, that he go to no other House without his Parish, in coming and going. This may discover to us the Hardship of this Act.

Remarks upon it.

And to give all I meet with, as to this Confinement, together, the Council, October 3^d, are pleased to allow Mrs. Hutchison, Wedderburn, Miller and Mowat, Liberty, notwithstanding their Confinement, to travel, as their Affairs call them, till November 1st. And, November 9th, Mr. Robert Douglas and Mr. Robert Hunter's Liberty is continued to February 1st, next Year. November 28th, they take off Mr. Gemmil, and Mr. Spaldin's Confinement till February 1st. And in January and February next Year, Mr. Hutchison, Mr. Douglas, and Mr. George Johnstoun, have some Liberty granted them. I only notice these Hints, to shew the Strictness of the Act, and the Trouble Ministers were put to.

The Council dispense with this Confinement, in Mr. Hutchison and others.

Again the Indulged were put to no small Trouble to get up their Stipends. They had Warrants many times to ask of the Council, for getting Payment from the Collector. So I find, February 2^d, Mr. Thomas Black, indulged at Newtyle, gets a Warrant from the Council to the Collector, for Eight hundred Merks, not paid for the Year 1669. And, April 6th, upon their Petition, Mrs. Ramsay and Baird at Paisly, get the same Warrant, to be paid out of the vacant Stipends that Year.

Indulged Ministers put to Trouble in getting their Stipends.

In July, the Council come to ease themselves of this Trouble, and 'tis moved there, to pass a general Act for the Payment for the Year 1670. The Bishops struggled hard to prevent this. Leighton violently pressed, that their Liberty might be taken from them, since they had broken their Rules. The Noblemen urged, That if the Indulgence were taken away, Conventicles would be yet more frequent, and the Council troubled every Day with Complaints, and the Country run into Confusion: So this was waved. The Bishop of St. Andrews, and others in Council, violently opposed the Warrant for granting their Stipends; so that with Difficulty it was carried: And, July 6th, an Order is given to the Collector of the vacant Stipends, 'To pay the Ministers allowed to preach, the Stipend 1670. retaining in their own Hand the Proportions to be paid to poor Scholars, and the Clerks of Synods and Presbyteries.'

A general Act passed about the Stipend of the Indulged, with the Efforts of the Bishops to have the Indulgence removed.

Their Carriage, as to the 29th of May, was a Pretext to the Prelates to argue against paying their Stipends. None of them kept that Day as required by the Act of Parliament. When the Day for their Week-day's Sermons happened that Time, they preached; and, it was alledged, some of them appointed their Sermons that Day of the Week upon which the Twenty ninth Day of May was to fall upon, to evite Trouble: Others had Diets of Examination that Day; and others chose to baptize Children, or marry some of their People that Day, and explained some Portion of Scripture to their Hearers. Great Clamour was raised against them, for not keeping the Day in Terms of Law; and they were represented as disaffected to the King's Government, and not willing to commemorate his happy Restoration; whereas several of them had been very active in it, while some of the present Bishops had complied with the Usurper, and every Imposition which came about. Their Scruple did not ly at the King's Government, but against all anniversary Days whatsoever. To please the Bishops, a new Command is given to them to keep that Holy-day in Time to come; and the Council resolve to be very strict in examining how 'tis obeyed.

Their not keeping the 29th of May objected against the Indulged;

Their continuing to lecture, notwithstanding the Act of Council discharging it last Year, was another Handle to the Enemies of the Indulged in the Council, and much insisted upon. They continued, as hath been narrated; and the Issue the Council comes to, July 6th, concerning this, is: 'Being informed, that the Ministers allowed to preach, do not keep the Council's Act anent Lecturing, the Sheriffs are ordered to take Trial thereof, and send in the Names of such as contravene, to the Council.' Thus the Matter is put off for some Time.

And their continuing to lecture.

Other Ministers, besides the Indulged, were brought to Trouble this Year. Mr. John Menzies, of whom last Year, being cited to appear before the Commissioner in ----- last, to answer what should be laid to his Charge, compeared, and was confined to his Chamber in Edinburgh. When he had continued there a good Time, and no further Notice was like to be taken of him, he went Home, and preached to his People. Upon the 14th of January, the Council find he hath broken his Confinement, and preached at his Kirk of Carluarock, and order him to be charged to compear before them that Day Fortnight, under under the Pain of Rebellion. I find no more about him in the Council-registers, and can give no Account how his Process ended.

The outed Ministers, who were every way peaceable, and kept no Field-conventicles, are complained upon to the Council, for not keeping their Parish-churches, in Terms of the last Act of Parliament; and an Order is sent 'To the Sheriffs of Lanerk, and Renfrew, March 9th, to acquaint any of the outed Ministers living in their Bounds, that it is the Council's Pleasure, they either keep the Churches where they live, or remove with their Families, to Places where they will keep it; and if they do not obey, that they imprison them.' This Act put them and their Families to no small Trouble and Charges.

Further Complaints are made against the outed Ministers, for their baptizing Children. I find the Council make diligent Enquiry about this; and, when it could not be so easily proven, the Council first put over the Parents into the Hands of the Bishops, and then require the Sheriffs to make Enquiry into this Matter. June 29th, 'the Council being informed of many disorderly Baptisms, and of some who do not baptize their Children at all, require the Bishops to proceed against them by Church-censures, and report their Diligence to the Council.' What Report they made, I find not; but, it would seem, their Censures were not much regarded: And therefore, October 3^d, another Method is taken. 'The Council considering the many disorderly Baptisms that are abounding, appoint the Sheriffs, Stewards, and Lords of Regalities, to call for the Session-books of each Parish, and consider which of the Children in every Family have been orderly baptized, and which not, and uplift the Fines.' Upon this, a great many were brought to very much Trouble, and sore oppressed in the exacting of their Fines.

This Year likewise, the Advocate, who was a zealous Agent for the Bishops, pressed much the Execution of the Acts made against Conventicles: Severer could scarce be made than those of the last Session of Parliament; and the Application of them was left to the Council. I do find, about this Time, others of the leading Persons were also very violent: Some were prosecuted for Conventicles, but they were not many who fell into their Hands. However, I shall set down what passed in Council against Conventicles this Year, as far as I have noticed it.

Upon the 2^d of March, the Council nominate a Committee, Archbishop of St. Andrews, Duke Hamilton, the Earls of Argyle, Linlithgow, Tweddale, Kincardin, Dundonald, President, Advocate, Treasurer-depute, (now my Lord Haltoun, Lawderdale's Brother, the Lord Bellenden having demitted in February last) and Register, to consider what is further to be done for suppressing Conventicles, and disorderly Field-meetings, and punish Withdrawers from Ordinances, and quickning those entrusted with the Militia to their proper Work.

Upon the 7th of March, the Council order (which I take to be the Mind of the Committee) 'The Commissioners of the Justiciary, viz. the Justice-general, Justice-clerk, and Five of the ordinary Lords of the Session, to take up Dittay against the Contraveners of the Acts against Conventicles, irregular Baptisms, and Separation from the Church, and cite them before them.' What they did I know not, but I find nothing relative to this in their Registers this Year.

The 7th of March, the Council cite before them the Cautioners of Mrs. Alexander Hastie, Stobie, Adam, &c. for being at the Conventicle at Beeth-bill last Year, to produce those Persons for whom they were bound Sureties. And upon the 9th of March, Mrs. Hastie, Stobie, Adam, &c. compare before the Council, and are ordered to attend the first Meeting, in May. But I find no more of them this Year.

In order to prevent Conventicles, and retrieve the Credit of the Conformists in the West, the Council at the same Time deal with Patrons to plant Vacancies there. And, March 9th, they write a Letter to the Archbishop of St. Andrews, acquainting him, that they have recommended it to the Duke of Hamilton, and other considerable Patrons in the West, to use all Diligence to get their Churches planted with the most able and godly Ministers; and desire the Primate, that if they give Calls unto, and present any Ministers in his Diocese, that they be speedily loosed, and sent West at their Desire. Perhaps this is another Overture coming from the forementioned Committee.

Whether this Proposal paves the Way for their Act July 6th, or if they found the former Method did not answer their End, I know not: But that Day, 'The Lords of Privy Council finding Patrons very slack in planting Parishes, to their great Hurt, they recommend it to the Bishops to plant all the Vacancies in their Dioceses, quamprimum, jure devoluto.' This was indeed the more effectual Way; yet I don't find the Choice the Prelates made, was satisfying to the Country; for Conventicles continued, and the Churches of the Curates were very thin. In short, the outed Ministers preached as they had Opportunity, and, notwithstanding all the severe Acts made last Year, neither Ministers nor People were much discouraged.

I come now forward to consider the Circumstances of some Gentlemen of the Presbyterian Perswasion this Year. 'Tis rather the End of a long Tract of Sufferings, than a Branch of them, when I notice, that excellent Gentleman Colonel Gilbert Ker, gets Liberty to come back back to his native Land at this Time. February 16th, the Council, in consideration of the King's Letter read this Day, allow Colonel Gilbert Ker to reside in Scotland, he giving Bond to behave himself peaceably and loyally, under Penalty of Five hundred Pounds Sterling. This good Man was, at the Restoration, so threatened by the Managers, that he took upon him a voluntary Banishment, and was much under Hiding till this Time.

Colonel Gilbert Ker allowed by the King to come home to Scotland.

George McCartney of Blacket in Kirkcudbright, fell under very sharp Sufferings this Year; and I shall give them all together in this Place, and they will lead me in to touch upon some Attempts upon other Gentlemen with whom he is claiied.

Sufferings of George McCartney of Blacket.

Upon the 2^d of March, Sir Charles Erskine, Lord Lyon, gets a Commission from the Lords of the Treasury, Rothes, Lawderdale, Tweeddale, Kincardin, Dundonald, Halkoun, and Sir Robert Murray, to intromit with the Estates, Goods, and Gear of such who were forfeited for the Rebellion 1666. within the Shires of Dumfries, Wigton, and the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, for the Year and Crop 1670. and the following; and to call Maxwell of Milntoun, and other Intromitters before that Time to an Account, and report, and make his Accounts to the Lords of his Majesty's Treasury. I need not insert the Commission at full Length, a Copy of which is just now before me; but the Gentlemen specified are, McClellan of Barscob, McClellan of Barmageichan, Cannon younger of Mandrogate, John Neilson of Corfack, John Gordon of Knockbreck, Robert Gordon his Brother, Major John McCulloch of Bornholm, Mr. Alexander Robertson, George McCartney of Blacket, Gordon in Porbreck, Cannon of Barnshalloch, Welsh of Cornlee, Gordon of Holm, ----- of Skair.

We have met with all of them formerly, save the Gentleman of whom I am now to give some Account, Mr. McCartney of Blacket. The Tenants and Relations of the rest were grievously persecuted; and all the rest had been forfeited, as we heard before, but Blacket was not, and his Treatment was most illegal: How his Name came to be in the Lyon's Commission I cannot tell. He was a pious worthy Man, and, by some base Measures or other, his Name was got in; and this cost him a vast deal of Trouble and Charges. I shall here take Occasion to set down his Sufferings all together, from an attested Account in my Hand, and some of his own Papers.

Blacket not forfeited, yet brought to much Trouble.

His Father was fined in Middleton's Parliament, in Fifty Pounds Sterling, besides Riding-money, a Hundred and eighty Pounds Scots, which he was forced to pay; and was imprisoned in Kirkcudbright, and died in Prison. After Pentland, though the Son, whose Sufferings I am now accounting for, was neither forfeited nor declared Rebel, Maxwell of Milntoun elder came and took away his Horses, to the Value of a Hundred and sixty Pounds, merely as a suspected Favourer of Pentland People, and a Nonconformist to Prelacy. At the same Time his House was spoiled, his Hay and Corn, and his Lady's wearing Clothes taken away, at a modest Computation, Four hundred and ninety four Pounds, Thirteen Shillings and Four Penies. Sir William Bannantyne came next, and exacted a Bond of Five hundred Merks. In the Year 1668. a Party of Soldiers came and plundred his House, and took away a Horse; the Loss by both was at least a Hundred Pounds. Some Time after Major Cockburn came from the Garison of Dumfries with Eighty Horse, and stayed Two Days at Blacket's House: They turned down the Corn-stacks, and put the Horse into the Stack-yards, and destroyed the Corn and Fodder, and killed a good Number of Beasts; the Loss at least was Two hundred and twenty six Pounds, Thirteen Shillings and Four Penies Scots.

His Father's Sufferings.

His own after Pentland tho' not there.

This Year the Lord Lyon came upon the foresaid Commission, and would have had Blacket compounding with him for his pretended Gift of his Estate; which he refused, and so was carried into Edinburgh Tolbooth Prisoner. From some Letters of Blacket's in the Prison, and his Information and Petition to the Council before me, I could give a large Account of the Injustice of his Imprisonment, and the Process against him; but it would run too great a Length. In short, after several Petitions to the Council, at length his Case was considered; and, upon his Information, his Circumstances appeared so favourable, that it was remitted to the Advocate; and upon Blacket's producing of the Books of Exchequer and Justiciary, with the Two Acts of Indemnity, it was evident he was neither forfeited, nor an excepted Person. This was reported, and his Liberation granted, upon his giving Bond to answer when called for. Yet he was still detained in Prison, and upon Enquiry, he found that he had been liberate, but that Council-day Matters were so throng, the Clerk forgot to minute it, and since that Time he durst not speak of him. However, the Clerk assured him, that the Advocate who appeared friendly to him, desired him not to petition any more, and assured him he would take the first Opportunity to liberate him. What Truth was in this Message I know not, but he continued in Prison Six Years, and that without any Fault, and much of it after the Council had liberate him. His Charges for Bails to the Council, to the Lyon, to Advocates, Agents, Maintenance, and Jaylor-fecs, at a modest Estimate, were not under Twenty two hundred Pounds.

This Year he is carried Prisoner to Edinburgh, his Trouble there, continues in Prison Six Years.

When he was in Prison, the Lyon sent and displenished all his Ground, and took Horses, black Cattle, Sheep, &c. and displenished his House and whole Lands, and laid them waste Five Years; so that not one might stay one Night upon his Ground. The Rent of his Lands was Six hundred Merks yearly. This, with his other Losses was at least Twenty four hundred Pounds. After he was let out of Prison, David Graham, Brother to Claverhouse, with a Party of Soldiers, came and stayed at his House, took his Horses and Corns, kept Garifon some Weeks in the House, which amounted to Three hundred and seventy three Pounds, Six Shillings and Eight Penies.

His Losses
afterward.

And, for Nonconformity and Noncompearance, and such Crimes, my Lord Livingstone got a Gift of his Estate. His Factor carried away a Hundred and sixty Bolls of Corn, with Fodder, Hay, and Horses, which together with my Lord's Intromission with the yearly Rent of Blacket for Five or Six Years before the Revolution, amounts to Three thousand five hundred and sixty six Pounds, Thirteen Shillings and Four Penies. The total Sum of this Gentleman's Losses, during this Time of heavy Persecution, besides his being impaired in his Health, and great Hardships, is Nine thousand eight hundred and twenty seven Pounds, Sixteen Shillings.

Bedlane continues Prisoner in Dumbarton.

Kersland is sent to Aberdeen.

This Year likewise, Mr. John Cuninghame of Bedlane continues Prisoner in Dumbarton Castle. The Council, February 16th, allow him to ride out some Miles every Day for his Health, he giving Bond of Ten thousand Merks, to return to the Castle at Night. The Laird of Kersland, whom we had likewise before, was joynt Prisoner with Bedlane in the same Place. He petitions the Council, September 5th, that he may be allowed to go to some Place, where his Children and Family may live, and be educated at Schools and the College; and is sent to the Tolbooth of Aberdeen: And, in December, I find him brought from thence to Stirling Castle.

Papists are increasing.

Under all this Severity to Presbyterians, our Scots Prelates never once pointed their Zeal against Papists, who for several Years, especially since the last Act of Parliament, which was a Kind of Toleration to them, were increasing very fast. In the North the Mass-houses were openly set up, and as openly frequented: And Shoals of Priests came over with large Cargoes of Reliques, Pictures, Beads, and such like Trinkets. Considerable Numbers of Father Turbevill's Manual of Controversies, were brought over, and distributed gratis, which did a great deal of Hurt.

The Council do somewhat against them.

The Council indeed, in August, give an Order to apprehend Four Popish Priests, they were informed were come over, and trafficking in Murray. This flowed from the Application of some well affected People there; but great Numbers of them were nearer themselves, and I can scarce say they were lurking in Edinburgh. And, in January following, the Council appoint the Earl of Argyle, and the Register, to seize some Popish Books and Trinkets, that were in a Ship lately come into Leith.

The Episcopal Ministers in the North preach, and Mr. John Menzies writes against Popery.

The Primate's Expression about Papists.

Indeed the Conformist Ministers in the North, where Popery was most open and barefac'd, were not altogether wanting upon their Part: Not only did a good many of them preach against Popish Abominations, and the learned Mr. John Menzies at Aberdeen print against them; but this Year and the following they made several Representations to the Bishops, and Applications to the Council, complaining heavily of the Growth of Popery: Yet their ghostly Fathers gave them but sorry Assistance at the Council-board. Had it been a Complaint against a Presbyterian Minister, 'tis probable they would not have failed them: But Representations against Papists were very much overlooked; and we must cease to wonder at it, when the Primate had the Impudence to say one Day in Council, That his Majesty's Government was by far in greater Hazard from Presbyterians than Papists; and that it was his Opinion, the Council ought more narrowly to look to Presbyterian Meetings, in which they were very slack, although the great Danger lay there.

Intrigues carrying on at this Time in favour of Popery by the Dutchess of Orleans.

The Dover Interview.

If the Archbishop was let into the Intrigues at this Time carrying on, and the secret Springs now at Work, perhaps he spoke what he thought was Matter of Fact: If he knew the Secret of the Dutchess of Orleans her coming over May 16th, last Year, and her leaving one of her Maids of Honour, afterwards Dutchess of Portsmouth, with her Brother, who did very effectually manage the Interests of Popery at Court: If he was acquainted with what hath been since published in French, in the Histoire du Palace Royal, and likewise in English, That, at the Dover Interview, Articles were agreed upon, 'For settling the Crown not very favourably for the reformed Religion; for the Destruction of the hated Republick of the united Provinces; the advancing of absolute Power in both Monarchies; the cajolling the Church of England for a Time; the Persecution of Dissenters, and an Introduction of Popery, in all prudent, cautious, and yet quick Methods: I say, if the Bishop was privy to this, he spoke not altogether without Book. It may be indeed, he was not let into these Arcana of Popery, and he spoke merely in a Fret, Pique, and Spite at Presbyterians, as Apostates generally do. Yet if the Character left us of the Man, and his Principles hold, he had very little to hinder him from giving in to such Measures; and whether of Design or not, I do not determine. It is certain, his Practice for many Years, paved the Way for the Execution of this dreadful Scheme.

The Negotiations 'twixt

And because several of my Readers may be Strangers to what was now upon the Anvil, for the Introduction of Popery into Britain, as well as Tyranny; it may not be altogether amiss to give an Abstract of what hath been since discovered of the Negotiations between France and England. Though it seem a Digression from the History of our Sufferings, yet when I consider the Severities against Presbyterians, as coming from Popish Principles, and Papists behind the Curtain, and pushed on by the Prelates, who appeared none of the greatest Enemies to Popery, and by this certainly paved the Way for its Reintroduction; it cannot be altogether out of the Road. And I shall mostly take my Account from the Secret History of Europe, the Author of which brings Vouchers for what he advances, and so, though nameless, may be depended upon.

The Account of the Intrigues about this Time in England, first by Monsieur Corbet, and after by the Dutches of Orleans, were drawn up by the Abbot de Primi, who was employed by Colbert, and well paid to write his Memoirs. There were only Two Books of Ten published, both in French and Italian, 1682. At Paris, the English Envoy, the Lord Prestoun, gave in a Memorial against the Abbot's Book; the Book was stopped, the Copies already published were suppressed, and the Author was sent to the Bastile.

In what is published by the Abbot Primi, we may smell out pretty much of the Secret: Hetells us, 'King Charles signed a private Treaty with France, and to give him further Assurance in that Matter, Henrietta of England, Dutches of Orleans, Sister to the King of England, and Sister in Law to the King of France, crossed over to England, 1670. and in the Name of the most Christian King, made a Proposal to her Royal Brother, of ensuring to him an absolute Authority over his Parliament, and re-establishing the Catholick Religion in the Three Kingdoms of Scotland, England and Ireland: But with the same Breath she gave him to know, that in order to compass this End, there was a Necessity above all Things, of lowering the Pride and Power of the Dutch, and reducing that State to the narrow Compass of the Province of Holland, of which the Prince of Orange should be Sovereign, or at least perpetual Stadtholder; the Execution of which Project would be easily accomplished by the Two powerful Princes strictly allied. By this Scheme the King of England should have Zealand for a Place of Retreat in case of Need, and the King of France the rest of the Netherlands, if he shall be able to conquer them.' Here the Abbot who was let into Monsieur Colbert's Papers, opens up the Project now on Foot, very plainly.

The same Author tells us, That the French King furnished King Charles with Money to equip a Fleet: And the Author of the Histoire de Corn. & Joan. de Wit, says expressly, 'That King Charles would not sign the private Treaties with France, till he had actually received the Money promised him, viz. Six Millions in Hand, and Three hundred thousand Crowns a Month during the War.' This explains to us an Article of One of the printed Letters of Monsieur Colbert, to Monsieur Turenne, where he tells him, 'I have at last made them (in England) sensible of the whole Extent of my Master's Liberality.'

Many other Proofs might be adduced for the Reality of this secret Dover League, for the Destruction of the Protestant Religion, and Holland. There was an Opera prepared at Paris for the Dutches of Orleans, at her Return from England, which points very clearly to this. Monsieur St. Ange the Author, addresses her thus. 'Tis from your heaven-like Wisdom to manage your Royal Brother's tender Soul, that we expect the happiest of Consequents. 'Tis from the Torch of your Love to the Catholick Apostolick Church, we hope to see his Britannick Majesty's Zeal to the ancient Religion of his Ancestors, take Flame by the Sympathy of a nearest Relation. We long with somewhat of Impatience for the happy Result of your Consultations: And we doubt not to see the Monster Heresy, grovelling at our invincible Monarch, and your Brother's Feet, expiring in Chains.'

Monsieur du Pellion in his Panegyrick upon the French King, printed 1673. hath this Passage. 'Your Zeal to the Catholick Religion hath appeared in a Thousand Instances to the World in its Meridian Brightness. What Foreign Alliances have you not made for the Support of the true Catholick Religion, even where Heresy has been triumphant?'

The Effects of this Dover League promised so much to the Interests of Popery, that the Expectations of Papists were every where raised from it. The Preface to the Life of Cardinal Barbarini, printed at Venice, 1677. hath these Expressions. 'We have no Reason to doubt but Almighty God is on his Way to rebuild his Church, in those very Places where that Monster Heresy is rampant; what may we not hope for from the Zeal of the present Catholick Princes of Christendom? particularly from his most Christian Majesty, whose great Soul is best capable to venture upon that Hydra. The strict Friendship between him and his Britannick Majesty, with that King's mild Inclinations, and Conduct towards his Catholick Subjects, joyn'd to his Brother the Duke of York, his fervent Zeal to Religion, gives us the pleasant Prospect of better Days, even in that once blessed Island.'

These Confessions of Parties, with the shrewd Presumptions of poisoning the Dutches of Orleans, in a very little after she return'd to Dover, lest she should tell Tales, and from other Reasons I will not name, give abundant Ground to think a deep Plot was laid for overturning the Reformation. And if our Managers in Scotland were let into it, we need not wonder

Council's Act
about Jus po-

der at their Lenity to Papists, and their Severity to Presbyterians; and our Prelates violent pressing the Execution of these iniquous Laws, paved the Way for ripening this dreadful Project.

I have now gone through what offers to me this Year, of any great Importance. Two or Three more Particulars I shall add in so many Words. Upon January 12th, the Council fall foul upon the Book, which is now in every Body's Hand, published in Holland, entituled, Jus populi vindicatum. Their Order runs, 'Information being given of an incorrect New Testament, printed by Andrew Anderson, the Council remit it to a Committee; and they are to enquire for the Sellers and Spreaders of a seditious Pamphlet, entituled, Jus populi vindicatum. And, I find, February 16th, a Proclamation published, discharging that Book, in the Form we have seen in like Cases, and ordering all who have any Copies in their Custody, after the Time prefixed, to be fined in Two thousand Merks. I find likewise the same Zeal leads them, February 2^d, to appoint a Committee for enquiring into the Authors, Sellers, and Spreaders of a Pamphlet, entituled, Jus regni; but I find no more about it afterwards.

Patrick Wilson justly banished for marrying Persons irregularly.

A pretty singular Case falls in before the Council, June 14th. 'Patrick Wilson Writer in Edinburgh, is found to have joyned Two Persons in Marriage. The Council very justly find he hath incurred the Pains in the Act made against disorderly Marriages, and that he hath usurped the Ministerial Function, and banish him to the Plantations, and order him to the Pillory in the mean Time.'

Mr. David
Houston's divi-five Courses in Ireland.

This Year, I find, the Presbyterian Ministers in Ireland are much troubled with the diverse and irregular Practices of Mr. David Houston a Preacher in Ireland, who came over here, and joyned the Society-people, a little before the Revolution, else I should not have noticed him. The Presbytery of Rout declare his Licence void, and discharge him to preach the Gospel; and, in some few Months, he comes in and owns his Irregularities, and promises Subjection, and acknowledges the Justice of the Sentence. Yet afterwards the Divisions continue.

rymple of Stair

stice-clerk.
The King buys
the Bass, and turns it to a Prison.

In short, in the Beginning of this Year, Sir James Dalrymple of Stair is admitted a Privy Counsellor; and, towards the End of it, the Laird of Lee is made Justice-clerk; and, in October, Lawderdale is made Captain of the Rock of the Bass, which is bought by the King, and turned into a Prison. Eighteen Soldiers, besides Officers, are placed in it; and we shall afterwards meet with many good People crammed up there.

It was the Earl who prevailed with the King his Master, to buy that Rock from Sir Andrew Ramsay, at the Rate of Four thousand Pounds Sterling, and then got the Rents and Profits, more than a Hundred Pounds a Year, bestowed upon himself.

Lawderdale and his Friends enjoy most Part

Posts of the Nation.

Now indeed Lawderdale and his Friends possessed the most Part of the best Posts in Scotland. Lawderdale himself was at the same Time President of the Council, sole Secretary of State, one of the Commissioners of the Treasury, Captain of the Castle of Edinburgh, Captain of the Bass, Agent at Court for the Royal Burghs, one of the Four extraordinary Lords of the Session, and the King's high Commissioner. His Brother, the Lord Haltoun, was Treasurer-depute, General of the Mint, and one of the Lords of Session. Athole was Lord Privy Seal, Justice-general, Captain of the King's Guard, and one of the Four extraordinary Lords of the Session. And the Earl of Kincardin, another of his Friends, was one of the Commissioners of the Treasury, Vice-admiral of Scotland, and one of the extraordinary Lords of Session.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians in the Year 1672.

The Matter of
this Chapter.

WHEN I am essaying some History of the Presbyterians, during every Year of the Period I have undertaken, it necessarily falls into such a Method, as the Materials I have lead me to. When Parliaments meet, and there is any considerable Change, in the Disposition of the Court, unto suffering Presbyterians, I am obliged to notice these at some greater Length; and when there is little Alteration in the Laws and publick Management, I must confine myself to more particular Matters.

The Union with England comes to nothing.

Last Year we had no Parliament. The Affair of the projected Union was to be treated upon in England, by Commissioners from both Parliaments: But the Scots Commissioners, for for the Reasons above pointed at, were but indifferently received, and the Meeting soon came to an End. There was no need of a Parliament in Scotland, to ratify what they did; for it was just nothing, and so the Sitting of it was delayed till June this Year.

The Beginning of this Year, a Second Dutch War broke out. Upon the last of February, the King sends his Orders to the Council, to levy a Thousand Men; and the Reason given is, The Ar-mament of neighbouring Nations. Upon the 2^d of April, War is declared against the Dutch, and a Proclamation issued out to that effect at Edinburgh. The triple League is now broke, and used with the same Contempt as our Covenant was. The Effects of the Dover Confe-rence began to break out; and Holland, with the whole Protestant Interest, would have been quickly overrun, had not the LORD remarkably interposed by that glorious Instrument of his Providence, the Prince of Orange, a Youth not much above Twenty Years, born, as it were, out of Time, and bestowed upon Europe, to quell the exorbitant Power of France, and the Progress of Popery, and to be the Defender of the Reformed Faith, more than once. Through the Whole of this War, he was wonderfully honoured of GOD; and his Con-duct and Bravery seemed to be a continued, and almost miraculous Appearance in behalf of the Reformation: But the Accounts of this I leave to the Historians of this Period.

The Dutch War broke out.

At Home; Violence against the Presbyterians was continued, Conventicles severely pun-ished, Ministers, Gentlemen, and others harassed. The Earl of Lawderdale is created a Duke, and made a Knight of the Garret. About this Time, he was married to the Lady Dysart, Sir Lionel Talmaish his Widow; and some Difference fell in 'twixt him and the Marquis of Tweeddale, and some others, with whom he had been in close Friendship before; and his Bro-ther Lord Haltoun came in to be his great Doer in Council; and this Family-change had no small Effects in the way of managing publick Affairs for some Years; and Things took a new Turn in Scotland. Lawderdale came down in April, to hold the Parliament in June; and, in September, the Second Indulgence was given to Presbyterians. These Things will give me Matter for the following Sections.

Lawderdale made a Duke, and marries the Lady Dy-sart

Of the Persecution upon the Score of Conventicles, the Hardships put upon Mini-sters, Gentlemen, and others, with some other Particulars during this Year 1672.

UNDER this Section, I shall give what Accounts offer as to the Treatment of Pres-byterians this Year, and consider the Laws made about them, and the Indulgence granted to them, in the Two following Sections.

I begin with the Severities used upon the Score of Conventicles. The Council, February 22^d, upon Information of many Conventicles kept in the City of Glasgow, and Barony there-of, make an Act ordaining the Magistrates to suppress them; and appoint these to oblige and require all the outed Ministers, either to attend the Church, or remove out of the Town. The Execution of this put a good many Ministers and their Families to no small Diffi-culties.

Severities this Year as to Con-venticles. 4

In July, the Persecution turns a little hotter, upon the Account of Conventicles, and De-creets are passed in Council against them. Upon the 11th, there is a Decreet against Conven-ticles in Fife, &c. an Abstract of which I shall insert here.

Decreet, July 11 against the Keepers of Conventicles in Fife, with their Names.

W Hereas, notwithstanding of the Acts of Parliament against Conventicles, the Laird of Lees, Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel, James Hamilton his Brother, Rigg of Aithernie, Lundy of Belderstard, John Henderson in the Inch of Balcaskie, Mr. Robert Anderson, Mr. Robert Rule, Mr. Robert Gillespie, Mr. Robert Ross, William Southrum in Lundy, Mr. John Drummond of Meggins younger, Mr. James Mercer Tutor of Meggins, Alexander Rankin of Pottie, ——— Arnot Chamberlain to the Laird of Balhoufie, Alexander Chrystie Merchant in Perth, James Brown Merchant there, John Drysdale there, Thomas Keltie Merchant there, Alexander Whyte Merchant there, William Dove there, John Henderson in the Parish of Abercrombie, David Coventry Heritor in Arlary, Robert Stirk in the Mills of Forth, Thomas Scot Tenant in Pittindreich, David Schaw Tenant in Gos-pitry, James Pryde and John Reid in Stramiglo, George Hay of Balhoufie, Mr. Alexander 1672.

Moncrief, Brother German to Mr. John Moncrief of Calsurgie, Indweller in Perth, Francis Galloway in Todshaugh, Mr. John Dishington, Mr. John Chrystiosen, Patrick Glover in Perth, Mr. ----- Simpson, Mr. Gilbert Hall, Mr. George Johnston, Mr. Robert Fleming, and James Gray in Perth, have, upon one or other of the Months of November or December 1670. or some or other of the Months of the Year 1671. or the Year 1672. several Times preached, prayed, or been present at publick Conventicles in the Fields, or at private Conventicles, whereby they have contravened the Acts of Parliament, and incurred the Pains of the said Acts: And being called, and Patrick Hay of Lees, the Laird of Meggins elder, compearing for his Spoule, Meggins younger, Macer, Rankin, Chrystie, Keltie, George Hay of Balhousie, with several others abovenamed, compear; and the Lords of Council considering their Confessions, ordain the Laird of Meggins younger, Alexander Chrystie, Thomas Keltie, to be carried Prisoners to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh; the said Peter Hay to be confined to his Chamber at Edinburgh; Mr. James Mercer to be confined to the Town of Edinburgh; and, in regard Mr. John Drummond and Alexander Rankin, have denied the Libel, remit it to Probation; and ordain Letters of Denunciati-on to be directed against the remaining Defenders absent, and they to be put to the Horn.

Meggins younger and his Mother fined, and the Laird of Balhousie in 1000 Pounds Sterling.

Upon July 14th, the Council find it proven, that Meggins younger, Jean Campbell Spouse to Meggins elder, were at a Field-conventicle kept at Glendoik, and Alexander Chrystie and Thomas Keltie were present at Field-conventicles; and fine Meggins elder in Five hundred Pounds Sterling, for the Transgression of the Acts of Parliament by his Lady; and ordain Meggins younger to continue in Prison, till his Father pay his Fine. They fine Keltie and Chrystie in Five hundred Merks each: And in regard Peter Hay of Lees, by his own Confession, was present at the said Conventicle in Glendoik, he is fined in a Thousand Merks; and George Hay of Balhousie, by his own Confession being guilty, is fined in a Thousand Pounds Sterling, to be paid in Eight Days. And all of them are to remain in Prison till they pay the said Fines to Sir William Sharp his Majesty's Cash-keeper.

As to such who did not compear, the Council pass an Act for apprehending of them, and charge the Sheriffs and their Deputes in Perth, Fife, and Linlithgow, to search for, seize, and send them in to the Council. This is the Account given of the Matter in the Registers. By other Accounts from Persons who were at this Time about the Family of Balhousie, I find that the old Laird was not himself at that Conventicle, but at the Time in Edinburgh, when his Son Francis heard (and only once) Mr. John Welsh, when he preached at Mr. James Duncan's House, at the End of the Avenue leading to the House, and the old Gentleman was fined for what his Son had done. It may not be unfit to add some other Circumstances from other more particular Accounts.

Remarks upon this.

The Case of the Laird of Balhousie in Perth Shire, afterward Viscount of Duplin, and Earl of Kinnoul, a Youth newly passed the Schools, but of a good Estate, made a great deal of Noise. The Gentleman confessed he had once heard a Minister, whom he entertained as a Chaplain in his Family, preach. His Fine was some odd way or other accumulated to Twenty seven thousand Merks, and then was brought down to a Thousand Pounds Sterling, Five hundred of which he behoved to pay presently, which he did, and gave Bond for the other Half. I wish the Defenders of that mild Government may consider this, and 'tis but one Instance of many at this Time.

The Laird of Meggins was not chargeable with any personal Breach of the present Laws: but for his Lady's alledged Guilt, is fined in Five hundred Pounds Sterling. The Author of the Grievances under the Duke of Lawderdale's Ministry, acquaints us with another Circumstance as to these Two Gentlemen, which I set down upon his Authority.

Upon the Information given to the Duke of Lawderdale, of these Gentlemen's Irregularities, the Duke thought fit to make over their Fines to his Favourite the Earl of Athole. The Gentlemen being advertised, that to make the Gift the larger, nothing less than the utmost Rigour was to be expected, found it best to quit their own legal Defences, and fall in with a friendly Transaction, casting themselves upon the Earl's Discretion. They agreed with him, the First for Six hundred Pounds Sterling, and the other for Four hundred: But the Duke not content with this, when they appear before the Council, most arbitrarily and exorbitantly procures the Sums to be augmented in the Sentence; the First to a Thousand Pounds Sterling, and the other to Five hundred. Whether this was more generously to his Friend, who had got all he had demanded, or just towards the Gentlemen, who relying upon the Agreement had prepared no Defences, the World must judge.

After the Gentlemen had paid their Fines, or given Bond, the Duke in his flouting insulting way, used frequently to banter them; Gentlemen, now ye know the Rate of a Conventicle, and Shame fall them first falls. Thus he used to rage at an odd Rate, in so much that Gentlemen getting Notice of his Way, resolved to risk all, rather than appear to be bullied by him, and choosed to withdraw, and were put to the Horn; their Escheat fell to the King, and the Managers made a good Hand of it. When the Estates of any who withdrew, were under Incumbrances and Burden, they were perfectly ruined. I might instance in that pious and worthy Gentleman the Laird of Kinkel in Fife, and others, were there Room for it.

Another Proccss for Conventicles is before the Council July 24th, and continued till the 27th, when Anna Countess of Wigtoun, an excellent Widow Lady of that Family, is obliged personally to comptear before the Council; and upon her Confession, that she was present at a Conventicle in the House of Bogball, she is fined in Four thousand Merks. And Mr. James Duncan at Duplin, for being at the Conventicle kept at the Bridge of Earn, is fined in Two thousand Merks. Both these Fines, as well as those of Balbousie and Meggins, were perfectly arbitrary, and beyond Law. For these Two last Conventicles a great many others are cited and examined, and a Decreet given out against them. That the Reader may have the Form of those DECREETS now so common, and see their Severity, and to save Pains afterwards in narrating Forms, I have annexed a Copy of the Decreet against Mr. James Duncan, and the Countess of Wigtoun, App. N^o. 47.

To end the Account of the Persecution of this Year upon the Score of Conventicles; September 16th, the Council take a shorter way anent them, and subcommit their Power to Four of their Number, and so ease themselves, for a Time, of the Trouble and Indecency of having Ladies and Country-people in Crowds before them. 'The Commissioner and Council do grant Warrant to the Lord Chancellor, Archbishop of St. Andrews, Duke of Hamilton, Earls of Argyle, Arbottle, Tweddale, Kincardin, and Dundonald, the President, Register, Advocate, Treasurer-depute, Justice-clerk, or any Four of them, to meet and give such Orders as shall be necessary, for putting the late Acts of Council made anent outed Ministers in Execution, and for preventing and suppressing Conventicles, and other Disturbances of the publick Peace of the Church; with Power to call Persons before them, committing of them to Prison, and doing all Things necessary for these Ends. In difficult Cases they are to consult with the Council.' I find no Registers kept by them, nor Reports made to Council, and so can give no Account of their Procedure; no question it was severe enough. This I take to have been the Beginning of what we shall frequently meet with.

Besides the ill Treatment of Ministers included in these Hints given concerning Conventicles, this Year affords several particular Instances of Hardships put upon other Presbyterian Ministers.

Trouble Mini-
with this Year.

The Reverend and Learned Mr. Alexander Carmichael, late Minister at Pittenain, is before the Council, February 22^d. This excellent Person is well known to the World, by his accurate Treatise upon Mortification, published at London a little after his Death, in the Year 1677. He, with his Brother Mr. John Carmichael, after they had joyned for some Time, out of an earnest Desire for the gaining of Souls to Christ, in the Courle of Conformity with the Prelates, came to discover so much Evil in their Ways, as to relinquish them, quit their Livings, and cheerfully joyn themselves with the suffering Presbyterian Ministers and People. I am sorry I cannot give any Account of the Sufferings of Mr. John Carmichael; but Mr. Alexander was taken at Kirkaldy, and brought into Edinburgh Tolbooth, and, the above Day, appears before the Council, and is charged with keeping Conventicles; and acknowledging the Charge, they oblige him to enact himself to depart the Kingdom, and never to return without Licence. And, February 26th, he is ordered by the Council to be transported in a Ship to London. There he was singularly useful, and got to the End of his Labours in much Peace and Joy, about the 1676 or 1677.

Mrs. Alexander and John Carmichael, their Sufferings.

In March, the outed Ministers who were lurking at Edinburgh, were put to new Hardships, many of them obliged to leave the Town, and flee, they knew not well where. Several of them, through Age and long Trouble, were now dropping off. I find, by an original Letter of Mr. George Hutchison's, that Mr. Walter Greg, and Mr. David Ferret about this Time got to their Rest. And he adds, that toward the End of February, Mr. Robert Douglas was turned so weak, that he was laid by from Preaching; and I suppose he got into the Joy of his Lord this Year or the next.

Upon the 18th of July, the Council appoint Mr. John Rae and Mr. Hugh Archbald, to be carried from Stirling Castle to Dumbarton. Mr. Archbald petitions the Council, August 29th, at a favourable Juncture, a few Days before the Indulgence, shewing that he hath been several Years in Stirling Castle, and now transported to Dumbarton, that his Health is broke, and his outward Affairs brought to a low Pass, and begs he may be liberate. The Council grant the Desire of the Petition, and confine him to the Parish of Galsfoun in the Shire of Air, and discharge him to keep Conventicles. The same Day Mr. John Murray, some Time Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, for alledged House-conventicles, is liberate, and confined to the Parish of Queensferry, ordained to wait upon Ordinances, and abstain from keeping Conventicles.

I come next to consider the Troubles several Gentlemen and others of the Presbyterian Perswasion were continued under, and brought into this Year. Last Year and this, I find several Forfeitures passed, and transferred to other Persons, which I only name. The Lands of Barscob, and those of Mr. Gabriel Maxwell, the Estate of Regland and Bedlane, are all forfeited, and transferred, upon the Score of Pentland. Mr. John Cunningham of Bedlane, July 18th, is ordered to be carried from Stirling to Dumbarton; and, August 29th, he is permitted by the Council to ride out every Day for his Health, upon the Conditions expressed last Year.

Several Persons troubled, for writing to their Friends in Holland.

After the Dutch War is begun, several Persons are brought to Trouble for writing to their Friends and Relations, who were forced to flee to Holland, and under no Sentence of Law that I know of. July 18th, Mr. John Scot, Son to Andrew Scot in Tushilaw, being incarcerated for writing to the Reverend Mr. John Carstairs in Holland, is brought before the Council, and after Examination, liberate, upon a Bond of a Thousand Merks to appear when called. September 3^d, Mr. William Livingstone, being imprisoned for Correspondence with Holland, and Mr. John Carstairs lately come from Holland, appears before the Council, and, finding Caution to appear when called, under the Penalty of Two thousand Merks, is liberate.

Mr. John Spreul liberate.

Mr. John Spreul, a most religious and worthy Person, Writer in Glasgow, of whom before, supplicates the Council August 29th, shewing, 'That he hath subjected himself to the Act of Banishment he was laid under, on the account of mere Nonconformity, now for Eight Years; and falling under Sickness in his Exile, he had returned for his Health, and, since November last when he returned, hath been at no Conventicles, yet was taken up and imprisoned; now under his old Age, and many Infirmities, begs he may be liberate.' The Council allow him to be liberate, upon his giving Bond and Caution to compear when called, under Penalty of Two thousand Merks.

Porterfield of Quarreltoun sent to Dumbarton.

December 5th, William Porterfield of Quarreltoun having been in Prison of a long Time, for his Accession to the Rebellion 1666. petitions the Council, that he may be liberate, because of his Indisposition of Body, and the great Poverty he was reduced unto. They order him to be transported from Edinburgh Prison to Dumbarton Castle, allowing him the Liberty of going abroad, in the Day-time, he giving Bond and Caution under Ten thousand Merks, to re-enter the Castle every Night.

Meaner Persons harassed for Nonconformity.

Some other Hardships I meet with this Year, upon meaner Persons. A poor Countryman in the Parish of Abbotsrule, by reason of his Nonconformity, and refusing to hear the Curate, is by him delated, and by his Advice pitched upon to be a Soldier; which he peremptorily refusing, is fined in a Hundred Pounds. I find, John Rankin in Tofts, in Eglisbam Parish, James Dunlop in Ponoon Mill there, James Brown in Muirzet, John Fauls in Newtown, in Merns Parish, are brought in to Edinburgh Prisoners, for alledged corresponding with, and Refet of some concerned in Riots upon Ministers. The Council remit them to the Earls of Dumfries and Dundonald, September 16th, to determine about them as they find Cause.

Riot upon the Minister of Auchinleck. Officers of the Army empowered to fine.

I find no Riots upon orthodox Ministers, mentioned before the Council this Year, unless it be one, probably committed the Close of the last. January 18th, the Council appoint a Committee to try a Riot lately committed upon Mr. Alexander Ramsay Minister at Auchinleck, in the Shire of Air, whose House was broke in the Night-time. The Council, January 23^d, give a Commission to several Officers of the Forces, lying near by, 'To try into it, and to hold Courts, and to call in the Inhabitants of that and the neighbouring Parishes, to depone what they know about it, and to fine the absent Heritors in Two hundred Pounds, Tenants Forty Pounds, and Cottars in Ten Pounds, and each Woman according to the Quality of her Husband dead or alive.' This is the first Commission of this Kind I meet with, and the Fines most arbitrary and exorbitant; but we shall afterwards find Abundance of such Finings by the Soldiers. In June, the Council order out Letters against Sir John Cochran, and the Parish, fining them in Three thousand Merks, to be paid to the Curate. I find, January 25th, That Gordon of Dundeugh in Galloway, gets up a Bond of Six hundred Merks, extorted from him by Sir William Bannantyne, now in the Clerk's Hands. More and more of the Violences 1665 and 1667. are appearing. So much may suffice for the more general View of the State of Presbyterians this Year.

Of the Laws and Acts of the Third Session of Parliament, June 1672. in as far as they relate to Presbyterians.

THIS is the last Session of Parliament, under Lawderdale's Administration, which meddles with Church-matters; and unless it be a short marred Meeting in the Close of the next Year, we shall find no more Parliaments for Nine Years. To carry on the History of Presbyterians Sufferings, from these uncontestable Documents of the Severity of the Period I am upon, I shall make some cursory Remarks upon the Acts of this Session; which, together with such as are already narrated, were the Foundations upon which the Council and their Under-workers went in all their Oppressions. Indeed many Times they went further than even these rigorous Laws.

The King's Letter to this Meeting is in Print already, and contains a very high Encomium of the Duke of Lawderdale, with full Assurances of the King's Regard to the Kingdom and Church. The Duke, to be even with his Master, very pressingly represents the Necessity of the Dutch War, which I leave to be considered by the Civil Historians of this Time.

The King's Letter to this Parliament.

Their First Act is anent the Militia, which I should not have noticed, were it not for a pretty remarkable Clause in it, with relation to the Security of the Prelates and their Church-establishment. It is statuted, in order to qualify those employed in the Militia, That all Officers be Persons well affected to the Religion and Government of the Church, as now established: And that both Officers and Soldiers take the Oath of Allegiance, with the Declaration formerly mentioned, embody'd in it: And if they refuse, brevi manu they are to be imprisoned, and the Council are to banish them the Kingdom. I hope, after this, the Writers against Presbytery will make no more Noise about the Act of Classes, made January 29th, 1649. and the Care then taken to secure the Constitution, with the Zeal expressed against Malignants getting into the Army; since so good a Copy is so exactly followed by their own dear Friends in this Parliament.

Remarks upon their First Act.

I have insert the Ninth Act, against unlawful Ordinations, App. N^o. 48. The Reader will see the Design and Views upon which 'tis made, without my Help. The Prelates were not a little uneasy to hear that Presbyterian Ministers should license any Preachers, or ordain any to succeed themselves, when worn out by their Cruelties; and therefore get this Restraint laid upon them. At this Time, there was a sensible Decrease of Presbyterian Ministers, by Death, Banishment, and the Hardships of this Time; and it was attended with no small Difficulty to get young Men sent abroad to other Protestant Churches, to be ordained to the holy Ministry: Mean while, the Cravings and Necessities of the People were very great. Therefore, as Ministers had Opportunity, several young Men well qualified, as appeared in their Conduct and Usefulness afterward, were licensed and ordained.

Act Ninth against unlawful Ordinations, App. N^o. 48.

This galled the Bishops, who could not endure the Thoughts of Presbytery's being revived, far less perpetuated, in this Church: So this Act is framed. Its Narrative says, Schism and Division arise from various and different Ordinations. This is a smooth Way of telling us, That all Ordinations, without Prelates at the Top of them, are divisive and schismatical, which is now pretty openly the Doctrine of the High-fliers. The statutory Part is, That none ordain to the Office of the Ministry, but such who have Authority for this Effect from the Laws. I hope they are not yet arrived at the Impudence to derive the Power of Ordination from the King's Supremacy; yet this sounds that Way: But, I suppose, the Meaning may be, That none who are not authorized Ministers, that is, subject to the Bishops, shall presume to ordain. Further, they declare all pretended Ordinations, since the Year 1661. null and invalid. No question, all pretended Ordinations are void and null, before the 1661. as well as since; but if they mean, That all Ordinations, without diocesan Bishops, are invalid, and that Persons set apart to the Ministry, without the Concurrence of the Prelates, are not Ministers, it is an unchristian Heaven-daring Assertion, reflecting upon the Whole of the Reformed Churches, and tending to breed Confusions and Convulsions in the Minds of People through the Kingdom; and, in its just Consequence, a declaring many of themselves, and the most Part of the Nation, Heathens. At this Rate, it had not been altogether out of the Road, by their next Act, to have appointed all such who were baptized by Presbyterian Ministers, to be rebaptized.

Remarks upon it.

'Tis not improbable this Act was drawn by the Primate: It is intricate, dark, ambiguous, and double-fac'd, and very like himself. The Severity of the Penalties is a further Proof of its Author: The Ordainers and Ordained are to be imprisoned, and banished by the Council;

1672.

Council; their Moveables confiscated, and other Hardships, as in the Act. And further, Persons married by such, are denuded of all they can claim jure mariti vel relicte, and made liable to all the Penalties of the Act 1661. against clandestine Marriages. This bears hard upon the Subjects, and obliges them to enquire into the Mission and Ordination of Ministers, before they can be safe in Law as to their Marriages.

Act about Baptism.
App. No. 49.

The Eleventh Act I have likewise insert, App. No. 49. Act against such who do not baptize their Children. This is a terrible Act indeed, and, as is now usual, an Improvement upon the Act of Council formerly made, as to irregular Baptisms. It statutes, 'That every Person who wants a Testimonial from the Minister of the Parish where he lives, that his Child is baptized within Thirty Days of its Birth, shall be fined, Heritors in a Fourth Part of their yearly valued Rent, Merchants in a Hundred Pounds Scots, and others, as in the Act.' And the Execution of this harsh Law, and the Pocketing of the Fines, except these of Heritors, is committed to the Under-executors of the Laws. This was a heavy Ground of terrible Exactions, and severe Oppression upon the Country, and a sad Snare to many, obliging them either to prostitute their Conscience, or lose their Money.

Act for keeping the Anniversary,
May 29.
App. No. 50.

Their Twelfth Act is for an anniversary Thanksgiving upon the 29th of May. See App. No. 50. I have, upon the Matter, considered this Act in the former Book, and cannot fully account as to the Reason of this new Act, for the Observation of this Day; unless it was to give the greater Uneasiness to the indulged Ministers, and to be a Foundation of new Fines and Exactions. In the Act 1661. the Word Holy-day is used; here it is omitted, but the Thing is continued. There are no Penalties annexed to the First Institution of this Holy-day, but the Reader will find them in this Second Appointment. I shall only further remark, That the King and Parliament most plainly ordain this Day to be kept for ever, and appoint all Ministers to preach upon it, and declare this Act to be the Rule and Warrant for this Anniversary, in all Time coming. Presbyterians continued in their Opinion, That no human Authority hath Power to appoint constant returning anniversary Holy-days. This Act is smoother than the former, and, in some Things, more agreeable to the Power of a Civil Court: Yet, the leaving the Fine to be imposed to the Determination of the Judges ordinary, seems both unjust and oppressive.

Act Seventeenth, against Conventicles.
App. No. 51.

The Seventeenth Act, against Conventicles, comes next to be inserted, App. No. 51. It seems to be framed with a View, That no more Parliaments were to sit for a good many Years; and, in that Event, though the King had Power to protract the Act, yet the Bishops, to make all sure, get this Renovation. The Acts Fifth and Seventh of the last Session 1670. not yet expired, are now extended Three Years after the first Three. Some few further Remarks offer on this Act.

it.

The Parliament declare, They did not, and do not discharge Family-worship, or Prayer in a Family by the Persons in it. What a sad Time must this be? And what an ill-worded Act is the former? that gives Occasion for this Session thus to explain themselves, and makes it necessary to a Parliament in a Christian Protestant Kingdom, to vindicate themselves from a Design to suppress Family-prayer and Worship. Yet they still take upon them to discharge it, If there be more present in the Family than four Persons not belonging to it. What a wild unreasonable Restriction must this appear to any reflecting Person in many Cases? At this Rate, publick Houses upon the Road must many Times be discharged to worship God, having more than Four in their House, not belonging to their Family; yea, many private Houses in the Country, where it frequently falls out there are more than Four with them all Night. I could give Instances wherein this Restriction is evidently irreligious. What to make of the next Clause in the Act I know not, It is always declared this Act does not give Allowance to outed Ministers to pray in any Families, except in the Parishes where they are allowed to preach. For what I can see, an outed Minister not allowed to preach, by this Act is discharged to pray in his own Family; and the Indulged must pray in no Families, but those of their own Congregation. If they come into Edinburgh or Glasgow, even by a Call from a Bishop, or the Government, and go about Family-worship where they lodge, they incur the Penalties formerly mentioned. This is a new Branch of their Confinement, and laid on them just the Day after their second Indulgence, and certainly is most unreasonable. And after a Complaint of the Nonexecution of the former Acts, to secure this in Time coming, and as a Ground for inferior Magistrates to act upon with the greater Rigour against Presbyterians, they are required to send in the yearly Accounts of their Diligence to the Council; and if they fail, every Sheriff, Steward, Bailie or Magistrate, in case of not evidencing their Zeal against Conventicles this way, is to be fin'd in 500 Merks. Thus all Methods are taken, not only to give Warrant by Acts upon the Back of Acts, but likewise to tempt and force Persons, who appeared not altogether so virulent, to persecute Presbyterians.

Their last Act against Profaneness.

The 22^d and last Act of this Parliament, excepting common Forms, is an Act against Profaneness, never more needful than now. It is an excellent Act, had it been brought to any Bearing or Execution; yea, it is so framed, that it was evidently the Fault of the Minister and Session, or Assistants, as they are now called, in great Measure, that it was not put in Execution: But the Curates, at least in the West and South, were so much taken up with suppressing the Crimes of Conventicles, and Nonattendance upon themselves, that I do not hear of any Collectors or Session Bailies appointed for uplifting the Fines put upon the different Branches of Profaneness. It is Matter of Regret, and effectually prevented doing any Thing in this Matter, that too many of themselves were too far liable and open to the Penalties of the Acts, to offer to prosecute others. The indulged Ministers in many Places took the Benefit of this Act, and chose their parochial Bailies according to it. The Kirk-session, I find, by this Statute is a legal Judicatory. The Elders (in Law) or Assistants, have considerable Power given them; and yet this Head of Elders is one of the great Topicks of Slander, wherewith the Episcopal Party load the Presbyterian Constitution: But Ruling Elders must not be named, that is Presbyterian Cant, tho' Scriptural, the Elders that rule well, &c.

1672.

Thus I have gone through the Laws made against Presbyterians under Lawderdale's Administration, which, upon the Matter, may be reckoned from the 1669. In the following Years, during the Interval of Parliaments, till 1681. we shall find Acts of Council built upon these, yea, exceeding them, and severe abundantly against Presbyterians. I come to end this Chapter with an Account of their Second Indulgence.

S E C T. III.

Of the Second Indulgence granted to Presbyterians, September 3d, 1672.

WHAT I have already laid before the Reader upon the First Indulgence 1669. will save him the Trouble of any Account of this, save in so far as it differs from that; and were it not that we want a Church History of these Times, I should most willingly have waved both, as being somewhat differing from my Design of giving a Narrative of the Sufferings of Presbyterians.

The former Indulgence referred to.

It is hard enough to give any tolerable View of this Second Indulgence, further than the publick Acts and Papers go. As is too ordinary in divided and broken Times, both Sides represent Matters of Fact, according to the different Views they had: And it must be owned, there was too much Warmth both at their Meetings and Reasonings about it, and afterwards; which makes me, at this Distance, hold very much by the Papers on both Sides, and leave the Reader to form his own Judgment upon the Whole. Those I shall bring into as short and plain an Account of Matter of Fact, as I can collect from what hath come to my Hand.

Difficulties in giving Accounts of this Matter.

When Lawderdale came down, in April this Year, it was generally said he had an Indulgence in his Pocket. In England, the King, by his Proclamation of March 15th, granted a Toleration to Dissenters. Since it hath so near a Relation to the Subject I am upon, it is annexed, App. N^o. 52. In it a greater Favour is allowed to Papists than Dissenters; yet that was what they could not help. Probably it was given to gratify French Designs, and to quiet Matters at Home, as much as might be, when engaging in a War with Holland, so much against the Interest, as well as Inclinations of England.

English Indulgence this Year.

The like Liberty, if not a greater, was expected in Scotland to Presbyterians, exclusive of Papists; and indeed here there was no Colour for making the last Sharers, and 'tis pretty certain the King did design it. The Bishops, and Lords of Council on their Side, violently opposed it, and many Letters were writ to Court against it: However, Lawderdale had full Instructions in that Matter, though he kept them close; yea, carried with a great deal of Rigour to Presbyterian Ministers and Gentlemen, as we have heard already upon the First Section. And I only add, that when Mr. George Johnstoun, Mr. Gilbert Hall, and some others, were summoned in before the Council for Conventicles, some of them came to understand how Matters were like to go: And, finding Violence designed, they did not find it safe to compare, and were denounced, and put to the Horn.

The Indulgence designed for Scotland put off for some Time.

And some Ministers denounced.

Mean while Lawderdale kept fixed by his Point of giving the Indulgence; and when the Reports of it came to be publick and certain, about Twenty Ministers met at Edinburgh, upon the 8th Day of August this Year, and agreed to write a Letter to Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, now a Privy Counsellor, in whom they confided as much as in any at the Board; humbly desiring, that any Indulgence to be granted, might be free of straitning Ingredients and Conditions, which might difficult conscientious Presbyterian Ministers from embracing it, and People from joyning with such as did embrace it.

When Presbyterian Ministers hear of it, they endeavour to have it without Cloggs.

At this Meeting they reasoned upon, and drew some Answers to some Queries, Whom might accept of it, and who not; but all they did or could do was in the Dark, and by Guess, not being being as yet acquainted with the Terms of the Indulgence to be granted. I find it remarked, That there were some in their Meetings, who constantly called for a Testimony against the sinful Encroachments of the State, and urged such Expressions to be insert in the Letter, as made it Treason against the present Laws; and when the Paper was thus inflamed, they went off. Thus, after some Meetings, the Letter grew so high, that none could be found to present it, and so was laid aside. This gave Occasion to the Reports spread in the West, that the Brethren in and about Edinburgh were for accepting the Indulgence, providing a Letter were writ containing their Difficulties about it. He was one of this Meeting from whose Papers I give this Account, and says, They came to no Resolution concerning this Letter.

Two of them
wait upon Sir James Dalrymple
of Stair.

When this Expedient failed, and the Letter could not be concerted, it was next resolved to send two of their Number to represent their forementioned Desire to Stair; and, upon August 20th, Mr. Gabriel Cunningham and Mr. James Kirkcoun waited upon him: He gave them very kind Assurances, he would do all in his Power for them; and I doubt not but he did so.

September 3. the Council pass their Act about
the Indulgence.

At length, upon the 3^d of September, the Lord's Day, the Council came to an Issue in this Matter; and at Holy-rood-house frame and agree to Three Acts relative to this new Indulgence. The Design of the Lords was no doubt to be eased of their Trouble every Day from Conventicles, by casting all, or as many as they saw fit, of the outed Presbyterian Ministers, together by Two's, Three's, and Fours, in so many Congregations as they named. There was Abundance of Cunning in framing the Acts, both for answering this End, and so as Ministers might be brought to comply with some of the Acts, without approving others, which contained Clauses more gravaminous: Yea, there seems in the Frame of these Acts to be Room left by the Framers for blowing at the Fire of Division among Presbyterians, by which the Designs of their Enemies were mightily carried on.

Their First

Act.
App. N^o. 53.

In their First Act, App. N^o. 53. the Reader will perceive, that about Eighty Presbyterian Ministers are confined to Fifty eight Parishes or thereby, mostly in the West and South. The Council proportion the Stipend, and give Assurances to the regular and legal Incumbents, that no more shall be indulged.

Their Second

Act.
App. N^o. 54.

By their Second Act, which is insert App. N^o. 54. the Reader will see they prescribe Rules to be observed by all the indulged Ministers, about their Baptisms, their keeping the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper upon one Day, their Places of Preaching, keeping within the Bounds of their own Parish, their Discipline and Payment of the ordinary Dues to Synod-clerk, and Bursar.

Their Third

Act.
App. N^o. 55.

Their Third Act, which is likewise insert, App. N^o. 55. dischargeth all other Presbyterian Ministers, excepting these who are indulged, to exercise any Part of their Ministerial Work, under what Punishments the Council thinks fit; and appoints all outed Ministers to attend Ordinances in the Parishes where they live, or to go and live in such Places where they will attend.

This Shape of
the Indulgence
unsatisfying to many.

Thus stood the Scheme of the Indulgence, September 3^d, this Year. When the Accounts of it came abroad, they were variously entertained by Presbyterians: The most of the Ministers in and about Edinburgh, who had not Share in the first Indulgence, appeared, upon the first Accounts of it, dissatisfied. In a Day or Two, there was a Dozen or thereby met together, and it was moved by some, that all the Brethren present should declare themselves against this Indulgence: But, upon Reasoning, it was found to be a Matter of general Concern, and a Meeting was proposed to be at Edinburgh, September 24th, and Ministers at Distance were writ to, to come in from the Country with the Sentiments of such as could not be present.

Meeting of Ministers in September upon this Indulgence.

At the Day named, about Thirty two Ministers met in Mr. Thomas Hogg's Chamber. Little was done at their first Meeting; but the Question being stated, What their Practice should be upon this Occasion, it was resolved that every Member should give his Opinion, with the Reason of it, at the next Meeting. Accordingly, when they met next, Mr. John Inglis is chosen Moderator: And the Brethren came to take the Sentiments of all present, Whether it was the Duty of Ministers to go and exercise their Ministry at their Churches. One of the Ministers present hath left this Account of their Sentiments; 'That Four were of Opinion Ministers ought to go to their Churches, when they had once given a Testimony, against what they conceived was wrong in their Indulgence, to the State. Two were undetermined, and the rest present were for the Negative.' The Minister who spoke first, after he had given his Opinion against it, and his Reason, added Mr. Robert Douglas his Sentiments against it, signified to him lately in Conversation, and that he said, If his Brethren named in the first Act, would forbear their Churches, he, for his Share, would quit his at Parcailand, and stand outed with them; and his Mind had no small Influence: So that Night the Indulgence seemed generally to be disliked. And, by what Accounts I have seen, the Ministers in the East Country were more averse than those in the West.

Mr. Robert Douglas said to be against this Shape.

Many Ministers in the West are for accepting it with a Testimony.

When the Copies of the Council's Acts came West, there were many Meetings up and down, and serious Reasonings and Consultations upon this Affair; and, I find, generally speaking, it was the Opinion of Ministers there, That, providing a sufficient Testimony were given against the Erastian Part of the Civil Magistrate, the Indulgence might so far be gone into, into, as Ministers should return to their former Congregations, and supply Vacancies, as far as the Liberty went, and put them upon calling Ministers nominated in the first Act, with Consent of the Ministry of the Neighbourhood.

They all agreed, That but one Minister ought to go to one Parish, excepting the Places where formerly there had been Two; especially at this Time, when there were so few Ministers to answer the Cravings of People up and down the Country: And though it was not doubted that the Magistrate had Power to restrict Ministers to one particular Parish; yet they seemed generally to agree, That when the whole Ministry were confined, it was not their Duty to obey. However, these Meetings in the East or West had no determining Power.

Terms in which they agreed.

Great were the Debates concerning the Testimony to be given to the State, upon their Acceptance. All agreed there were many Grievances in this Matter; but how to express them in suitable Terms, so as not to do more Hurt than a Testimony could counterbalance, was the Difficulty. After much Conversation and Reasoning, Mr. William Violant and Mr. Alexander Wedderburn were pitched upon to draw a Paper to this Effect. Their Draught was generally liked, and it received some Amendments in a Meeting at Irwin, October this Year, and was cast into such a Mould, as it might be joyned in by those who had already accepted of the Indulgence, as well as their Brethren who had not. The Tenor of it is inserted, App. N^o. 56.

Form of a Testimony agreed to in the West.

Towards the End of October, Mr. Gabriel Cuninghame, and some more with him, were sent into Edinburgh, with this Paper, to see if the Brethren in the East, who appeared most averse from this Indulgence, would joyn in it, as an Exoneration of themselves, and Signification of their deep Concern in the LORD's now fallen Tabernacle in Scotland.

App. Na. 56.

Taken to the East Country.

When they came to Edinburgh, they found several Ministers in the East had changed their Sentiments as to the Indulgence, by Reasoning and Conversation, and were not altogether so averse as once they had been. The Opposers of the Indulgence alledged some had been taken off, upon their Names being put in for vacant Congregations, by those whom the Council had impowered so to do. What is in this Assertion, I know not, but 'tis certain several were at this Meeting, who had not been at the former in September; and thus the Appearance was greater in favour of the Indulgence than before: Yet the former Person, a Member, asserts in his Papers, That the Generality of the Meeting continued against it.

To it many agreed, but the Plurality opposed it.

Mr. Cuninghame presents his Paper to them, and the Brethren who were against the Indulgence, as the abovenamed Minister says, took it for a Paper of Reasons, why the Indulgence ought not to be gone into; and so it came to be the Subject of Reasoning. When they viewed it more narrowly, and found it a Complaint of what the Drawers reckoned grievaminous, upon the presenting of which to the Council, the Complainers resolved to comply with the Indulgence, the Meeting divided upon it, and not without some Warmth. The unclear Brethren complained they were disappointed, and this Paper was but a smooth Way to help forward Ministers, who were clear, to their Churches: And the Brethren who were clear as to the Indulgence, complained that the other Side would not joyn with them in a Testimony against what both reckoned sinful in the Manner of granting the Indulgence. The Ministers who continued opposite to the Indulgence, alledged their Brethren who were to accept, might testify against the Evils in it, the best way they could; but they could not joyn, because they were unsatisfied with the Whole of the Indulgence. The Ministers who were not straitned as to the Favour in general, but only as to some Circumstances, complained that their Brethren did not concur with them in testifying against what they agreed with them to be evil. They again were willing to testify jointly with them, against what Evils appeared in the Indulgence, providing all would stand out, and not accept.

Debates upon this.

Several Meetings were spent upon these Debates, without much Conviction upon either Side. Their last Meeting was December 23^d, and they could come to no Agreement; those who remained averse from the Indulgence still insisting, That no Paper which could be given in to the State, would be a sufficient Salvo from homologating the Magistrate's Encroachment; and that a joyned Refusal of the Favour proposed with such Limitations, was the only Method to preserve Unity among Presbyterians. Neither were the Ministers who had Freedom to fall in with the Indulgence, of one Mind, as to all the Expressions in Mr. Cuninghame's Paper; and so it was laid aside.

After several Meetings the Paper is laid aside.

A considerable Number of the Ministers named, did enter into their Churches where they had been formerly, and others upon a Call, where the Congregation was vacant, upon Consent of the Ministers in the Bounds. And since all Hope of joyned Testimony, against what was grievaminous, was lost, many did give it from Pulpit at their first Entry into their respective Parishes; and declared they did not homologate the Erafrican Power in the Council's Acts, or the Ecclesiastical Supremacy exercised by the King. Some of them, particularly Mr. William Weir, formerly Minister at Linlithgow, and now in West-caldor, had Libels formed against them, and fell under no small Difficulties upon this Account, as we may afterwards hear.

This is as fair a Representation of Matter of Fact, as I could gather from the Papers I have seen on both Sides. And, upon the Whole, I must, with Regret, observe, That Presbyterians, who before this had been very much of a Piece, did now divide; and the Scar of this Wound is yet continuing among us. The Gentry, and not a few of the most knowing in the West Country, were glad that Ministers had the Freedom to fall in with this Indulgence, that they might have the Benefit of Ordinances dispensed by them: Yet considerable Numbers of the common People, from different Reasons and Views, were not so much satisfied. Several of them were taught to believe, and urge a Position, in it self of most dangerous Consequences, That it is unlawful to hear a Minister who was guilty of Failures in his Entry upon Ministerial Work, or Mistakes in his Management of it. I with the Remains of this dangerous Position may be entirely out from among us; but it was inculcate at first more privately, and in some Years more publickly, till, as we shall hear, considerable Numbers cast both at the Doctrine and Sacraments of the Indulged.

and con upon this Second Indulgence.

Upon the First Indulgence, I have given a short View of the State of the Arguments pro and con upon this Subject, and I do not love to rake among the Ashes of this Burning. In a Word, such who fell in with this Liberty now granted, said, It was undoubtedly lawful to enter into a Place, and their Work there, when iniquously put from it, and their Restraint was taken off: That they took the Good in the Liberty, and meddled not with the Evil in it; against which they were most willing to have testified, but their Brethren would not concur. The other Side urged, There was more in the Indulgence than a mere taking off of the Restraint, that the Acts doing so were highly Erafrican, and the taking the Benefit of them, and urging them (as in the Case of Peoples paying of Stipend) a practical Approbation of them: That the Removal of the Restraint is only conditional, and a real Bargain suspended upon their Behaviour, and Use making of the Limitations, Act Second: That they could not joyn in a Testimony where they were of Opinion, at least as to their own Practice, That the going in to the Acceptance of the Indulgence was sinful. In short, they urged, that the Divisions following upon their Brethrens Acceptance, would be more to the Hurt of the common Interest, than the Exercise of their Ministry could balance: And that in their Opinion, the Accepters would be to blame for the ill Consequences, because a positive Duty in many Cases might be forborn without Sin, but a Thing sinful can never be gone into. These Debates are at Length enough handled in the History of Indulgence on the one Side, and the Review of it, and Balm from Gilead upon the other.

All agreed that the Acceptance of the Indul- gence was no Ground of Separation.

Whatever Disputes there were at this Time among Presbyterian Ministers upon this Head, and different Sentiments, yet I cannot find that those that were in their Judgment against accepting of the Indulgence, did think the accepting of it any Ground of Separation: So far were they from this, that they heard them preach, wished them all Success in their Labours, preached with them as they had Opportunity, and bare Burden with them under all their Pressures and Difficulties.

this.

Some People indeed, influenced by Ministers in Holland, blamed the Ministers, who had Freedom to fall in with this Liberty, for Unfaithfulness, and acting unanswerably to their own Light, in not preaching against the Indulgence, and the Ministers who accepted of it: But this did not trouble them much. They were perswaded every Point of Truth ought not to be brought to the Pulpit at all Times. They considered there are Sayings even Disciples cannot bear: And though they themselves could not come up their Brethrens length in point of Practice, they saw no Reason from this, publickly to stage and condemn them. If there was Evil in what they had done, of which they would not further judge, than as far as concerned their own Practice, they reckoned their Refusal a sufficient Evidence they were not concerned in it; and when they were at a Point in those Things, what could they propose to themselves in preaching against the Indulgence, but the raising a Flame? especially since they were perswaded it was Duty in them and the People to joyn with their Brethren, and whereunto they had attained to walk by the same Rule, and mind the same Things.

The Divisions not great at this Time, but afterward broke out terribly.

Happy had it been for this poor Church, if Ministers and People under different Practices had remained united, and had kept by their First Ways: But in some Years Matters altered very much, and People who ought to have been Learners, set up for Teachers, yea, they turned Managers and Directors to Ministers; and ere all was done, some of them offered Rules and Prescriptions, even as to the Matter, Subjects, and the very Text they would have preached upon. At the Beginning, their Attempts this way were neglected, and Ministers pitied them, considering the Darkeness and Difficulty of the Times, but they would not encourage them in the least. Afterwards indeed, when Love cooled among Ministers, and Parties came to some greater Heights, some few Ministers, as may be afterwards noticed, fell in with these People, and acted entirely under their Direction; and then the Flame broke out terribly.

So much for this Second Indulgence; the occasional Effects of it, and the Difficulties attending it, will fall in in the Progress of this Book.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1673.

THE Persecution of Presbyterians for some Years now runs much in the former Chancel; the Difficulties of Ministers and People continue on the Account of Conventicles, and the Hardships of the Ministers who accepted of the Second Indulgence, were not small. I shall not then subdivide this Year, but take a View of the most considerable Hardships Presbyterians fell under, in the Order of Time, as much as I can reach it, and at the Close I shall hint at a few Particulars, which come not in upon those Generals.

The Thread of the Managers Procedure against Ministers indulged and not indulged, and Conventicles, is so mixed, that I shall not essay to separate them; only the Treatment of some particular Ministers may be considered, after I have gone over the more general Accounts.

This Second Indulgence, as, for a Season, it was attended with no small Difficulties to such as accepted of it, so it was followed with harsh enough Treatment of the rest of the outed Ministers, who could not involve themselves in what appeared dubious to them.

The outed Ministers harshly treated.

Lawderdale took it very ill, that all the Ministers who were confin'd, and, as appeared to them, imprisoned in the Parishes formerly specified, did not obey and cheerfully accept. But these worthy Men durst not bind up themselves in their Master's Work, and were in no great Difficulty to determine themselves whether they should obey God or Man.

That the Ministers did not keep their Confinements is ill taken.

When Duke Hamilton came into Edinburgh in the Beginning of this Year, the Council were fond to know the Success of their Indulgence in the West. It is said, the Duke gave it as his Opinion, That had the Liberty been generally gone into by Presbyterian Ministers, it would have gone far to have quieted the Country entirely: But he represented that there was a considerable Party who did oppose it, and so he doubted much if it would answer its End: And he named some Ministers, whom he termed Sticklers against it, as Mrs. Moucrief, Campbell, Fleming, Kirkcoun, and others we shall presently meet with. Whereupon the Council resolved to force them to their Confinements.

Duke Hamilton's Sentiments of the Indulgence.

All the outed Ministers in Edinburgh, March 7th, are by the Council ordered to leave the Town, and to remove at the Distance of Five Miles round it; unless they presently give Bond not to keep Conventicles. This the Managers well knew, was equal to a banishing them the Town and Five Miles round it.

Outed Ministers ordered to remove from Edinburgh, and five Miles round it.

March 12th, the Council came to be a little more severe: Former Citations had been given, and that Day the most Part of the outed Ministers, who had not entred their Confinement, were called before the Council. There compeared Mr. George Wauch, Mr. Robert Young, Mr. James Kirkcoun, Mr. James Donaldson, Mr. Robert Lockhart, Mr. Matthew McKail, Mr. Patrick Anderson, Mr. Alexander Barton, Mr. James Hamilton, and Mr. William Thomson. They were challenged for not entring their Confinements in September last. Some gave one Reason, some another, according to their different Circumstances. The Council took a general Order with them all; and considering that the Weather was ill, and the Roads bad at this Time, appoint them to enter their Confinements by the first of June, under the Pain of being apprehended as Despisers of His Majesty's Authority; and give Orders to the King's Forces, the Sheriffs, and all Magistrates, to seize them wherever they can be found, if so be they obey not this Appointment.

The outed Ministers, who had not entred their Confinements, appear before the Council, and are ordered to enter them by the 1. of June.

The Absents, who when called did not compear, were Mrs. Robert Maxwell, John Law, William Weir, Andrew Morton, James Walkinshaw, Alexander Jamison, James Wallace. Excuses were made for some of them, and the Diet of all the Absents continued. Such who were present generally thanked the Council, when called in, for the Time allowed them to consider upon this Affair until June 1st, and promised to advise the Matter with all Seriousness. One of them differed a little from the Rest in his Circumstances, and his Carriage before the Council made some Noise.

This was Mr. Robert Young a very worthy Minister in Perth Shire, who had been very impudently turned out by Bishop Sharp. When he came in before the Council, he complained he had been most iniquously turned out of his Charge by Bishop Sharp. The Bishop had taken upon him to depose Mr. Young by a Sentence passed in his own Chamber, one Minister only being with him there, and whether his Consent was asked or given the Complainer did not know. From this Sentence Mr. Young appealed to the Privy Council, and begged their Lordships would consider the Wrong done him; and required the Bishop who was present, being in this Affair a Party, might be removed when this Cause was discussed. The Bishop rose up, and alledged, Mr. Young had been orderly and justly deposed by him and the Synod of Fife. Mr. Young offered upon his Peril to prove by the Date of the Sentence, that he was deposed before the Synod met; and if the Bishop had caused insert his illegal Sentence, after it was passed, in the Records of the Synod, that was what he could not help. Mr. Young was removed a little, and when called in, the Chancellor signified to him, That it was the Council's Pleasure, he should go to his Confinement against the 1st of June. He answered, he was sorry such a Sentence was passed upon him, for no other Reason but their Pleasure, and humbly protested, that it might not prejudice him of Reparation from the Wrong done to him by the Bishop; and further protested, that his Obedience to the Council's Pleasure should not involve him in any Approbation of the complex Act of Indulgence.

Proclamation
against Conventicles
April 5.
App. N^o. 57.
Remarks upon
it.

While the Ministers are thus dealt with, further to balance the Indulgence, and gratify the Prelates, April 2^d, the Council emit another Proclamation against Conventicles, which is annexed, App. N^o. 57. The Rigour of it is plain enough without Remarks. The Blame of the Nonexecution of the former Acts against Presbyterians, is laid upon Heritors not giving Information against Conventicles, which I suppose many did not reckon themselves obliged to do. To convince them of what the Council makes to be their Duty, they declare, The Execution of the 5th Act of the last Session of Parliament, is of great Concernment to Religion. Thus, 'The Days are come when the Disciples must be put out of the Synagogues, yea, when who-soever killeth them thinketh he doth God good Service; and these Things are done, because they knew neither the Father nor the Son.' Further, the Council declare it to be the Duty of all good Subjects to endeavour to bear down Conventicles. This involves Informers, and all active Concurrers for the Prosecution of this Act, in an Approbation of what the Council do. All Heritors, Wadsetters, and Liferenters, are required to inform the Council, or their Underworkers, of the Persons present at, and Circumstances of the Conventicle which shall be kept on their Lands: And if they do it not within three Days after it comes to their Knowledge, they are to be fined in the Fourth Part of their yearly Rent for each Conventicle not delated: And the Sheriffs have One third Part of the Fine for their Hire; and the Informer against the Heritor who did not inform, is to have another Third Part. In this Act there are Hardships in abundance, and a Foundation laid for terrible Oppression, debauching the Country with Oaths, and many other Evils.

King's Letter,
April 29. influencing Danger of a Rising
in the West.

A Letter from the King, dated April 29th, is read in Council May 7th, wherein he acquaints them, that the States of the united Provinces now at War with him, have Designs on Foot to raise Troubles in Scotland; and therefore he requires them to suppress Conventicles, and secure the West Country. What Ground there was to suspect such who frequented Conventicles, or the West Country, of any Design of this Nature, I cannot learn. None of the King's Subjects were more loyal, and better affected to his Government, than they were; only they could not comply with any Thing contrary to their Conscience, and Reformation-rights: But I am apt to think, this Innuendo came mostly from Scotland, and was sent up to Court by the Enemies of Presbyterians, as many gross Calumnies and Lies were in this Period. The Council, in Obedience to the King's Desires, write Letters to the Duke of Hamilton, the Earls of Eglington and Cassils, ordering them to enquire into Conventicles in the West Country, and send Accounts of them to Edinburgh; and particularly, that they inform themselves what disaffected Persons reside among them.

The 29. of May not kept by the Indulged.

When the 29th of May came about this Year, new Matter offered to the Bishops for their appearing in Council against Presbyterian Ministers. None of the Indulged observed this Anniversary. Some few indeed preached that Day, such as Mr. John Spalding, Mr. John Wallace, Mr. William Maitland; but it came about only by their Week-day's Sermon happening upon it. And tho' they preached, yet nothing was mentioned relative to the Solemnity of that Day.

Letters directed
for this.

June 12th, I find the Council order Letters to be directed against Ministers indulged, in the Shire of Air, Lanerk, and Kirkcudbright, who have not kept the 29th of May. Accordingly, the most Part of them compeared in the Beginning of July. I shall just now take Notice of their Treatment, if once I had noticed a Letter which comes this Day to the Council, which had no small Influence on the rest of the Year.

King's Letter
to Council, May 31. concerning the indulged and outed Ministers.

How this Letter was procured, and upon what Views it was sent, will best appear from the Contents of it. Lawderdale was lately gone up to London, and within a little after his Arrival, this Letter comes, dated, Whitehall, May 31st. And I insert it here.

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty, &c. We are informed by Our Commissioner, at his Return thither, of the Way agreed upon by you, for disposing a Number of the outed Ministers to certain Churches in the West, and being well satisfied with it, 'tis Our Pleasure it be prosecuted; and that all such of these Ministers who have hitherto delayed to give Obedience to it, be forthwith forthwith cited to appear before you, and required to repair to the said respective Parishes, and to abide confined there, with Liberty to preach in those Parish-kirks, and of receiving their Share of the Stipends thereto belonging, conform to the said Act. 1673.

And if any of them shall be still unwilling to accept of that Favour on the Terms upon which it is granted, you shall not at all press them to it; but instead of that, you shall require them either to give sufficient Assurance of their forbearing Conventicles, and going to Church, and their peaceable and orderly Behaviour in the Places where they reside, or that they will choose for themselves, each of them, any one of those Parishes, within the Diocese of Glasgow, which are contained either in the former or latter Acts of Indulgence, for the Place of their Abode and Confinement, with Liberty of preaching in any of the respective Parishes; and if they will not choose for themselves, that then you choose for them, and appoint to each of them some one of these Parishes for their Residence and Confinement, as you shall think fit; requiring them positively to repair to one of these Parishes within a certain Day, under the Pain of a more severe Restraint, which We require you to inflict.

You shall likewise summon before you all the outed Ministers, to whom no particular Parishes were assigned by the late Act; and command them in the same Manner, either to give Assurance of their orderly Living where they are, or to choose each of them, one of the same Parishes where they may abide under Confinement, or else go to such as you shall choose for them, under the same Penalties.

And because We are informed, that some of them are displeased forsooth with the late Indulgence, you shall secure them from the Fear of any more of that Kind; and let them know, that if, after all the Lenity used towards them, they shall still continue refractory and untractable, We will employ Our utmost Power for the securing the Peace of the Church and Kingdom, from their seditious Practices.

And for preserving Peace and Order within the Diocese of Glasgow, We do hereby require and authorize you to give a Commission to the Duke of Hamilton, Earl of Linlithgow, Earl of Dumfries, Earl of Dundonald, and President, or any Two of them, with full Power to them to put in Execution the Laws and Acts of Council made anent Church-affairs; and to make constant Enquiry from Time to Time, concerning whatsoever Disorders have been, or may be committed in any Parish within the said Diocese, whether planted with regular Ministers, or supplied by the Indulgence, punishing Delinquents of all Sorts according to Law; and to call to an Account Sheriffs, Bailies of Regalities, and Bailiaries, Justices of Peace, and Magistrates of Towns, within the said Diocese, who have been or shall be negligent in executing the Power given them by Law against Conventicles, deserting of Kirks, irregular Baptisms and Marriages, and other Disorders of that Kind; with Power likewise to them to give such Orders to Our Guards of Horse and Foot, quartered in those Parts, as they judge necessary, for executing the said Commission, and the Peace of the Country: And this Power to be given to the said Lords, with a sufficient Allowance out of Our Revenue for a Clerk, and other Servants, and incidental Charges, as they shall find necessary; and you are to call for a particular Account of their Diligence from Time to Time, and transmit to Us.

Upon reading of this Letter, the Council send Letters to the Noblemen named in it, to come into Edinburgh. But I find it did not please all the Members, especially the last Article of it; and so a Demur is made, and 'tis toward the End of July before the Council make a Return to the King upon these Subjects. I shall therefore take in here the Prosecution of the Indulged, for their not keeping the 29th of May, with the Consequents of this, being, in Order of Time, before the Council's Return to this Letter.

According to the Citation given to the Ministers who had accepted the Indulgence, many of them compeared, July 3^d. The Bishops did most violently appear against them in Council. Being interrogate by the Chancellor, If they had kept the Anniversary appointed by the Act of Parliament; all of them acknowledged they had not kept it, and some of them gave one Reason of their Practice, some another. Being next questioned, What they would do in Time to come; they answered, as they had concerted, That they had no Freedom in their Conscience to keep any anniversary Holy-days of human Institution. They granted that some Things in the Act of Parliament were softened, and the Word Holy-day taken out; yet still they were of Opinion the Thing remained. A Day was fixed annually for Divine Service, the Kind of Worship was determined, and Cessation from Labour required: So that to them, the Day which before was appointed to be a Holy-day by the First Act of Parliament, was still the same, though the Word was omitted; and they could not, without going counter to their own Light, observe it.

While they were before the Council, a most unhappy Incident fell in, which brought the indulged Ministers to a great Difficulty, and one of them to his Grave. This being much insisted upon both by the Enemies of the Presbyterians, and some among themselves who were dissatisfied with the Indulgence, 'tis necessary to give some Account of it, from the Papers come to my Hands.

Its Contents do not please all the Council.

Indulged Minister compeared before the Council, July 3^d. Then Examinations and Answers, as to their not keeping May 29th.

An unhappy Incident about the Instructions given them by the Council, upon which they are delayed till July 8.

With the most Part of the Ministers who came before them, the Council only insisted upon their keeping the 29th of May. Yet, upon what Reasons I know not, one or Two of them, when called in, were interrogated concerning their baptizing Children in the Parishes of Conformists, without Testimonials; and, in a Word, Whether they had kept the Council's Instructions sent them with their Acts of Indulgence. Being cited before the Council, only upon the keeping of the Anniversary, they had no Concert as to this; and one of them who had not got his Instructions sent him, when interrogated, answered, He had not seen the Instructions the Chancellor spoke of. This brought them all upon the Lock. The Chancellor told him, That had been a Neglect, and they should all see them, and called them in, and ordered them all to attend the Council on the 8th Day of July, that they might hear their Sentence for not keeping the Anniversary, and that such who wanted might get Copies of the Council's Instructions.

Their Concert in the Interval.

During the Interval, the Ministers met frequently among themselves, to consult what to do when their Instructions came to be read and offered to them. The most Part were for a Paper by way of a Testimony, declaring their Sense of those Encroachments they were brought under, in the best Terms they could fall upon. This was drawn, read, and reasoned upon at full Length. In the Issue, they came to put it to the Vote, Whether it should be signed and presented in all their Names, or only made Use of as a Pattern and Directory, according to which each of them should express themselves when before the Council; or, according to which, one, in Name of the rest, should deliver the Mind of the Whole? Mr. George Hutchison and some others were peremptorily against subscribing the Paper, and the Plurality were for signing and presenting it in their Names: Yet when they considered the Necessity of Unity in this Matter, and that if they were not of one Mind, it would do more Hurt than Good, they came all into this, to use it as a Directory; and it was laid upon Mr. Hutchison to speak in Name of the rest, in case the Instructions were presented at the Council-board to them.

July 8. the Ministers within written fined for not keeping May 29.

Upon the 8th of July, the Ministers appeared again before the Council; and a Decree passed against Mrs. John Graceford, Anthony Murray, John Hamilton, Peter Kid, John Oliphant, James Curry, John Lawder, James Hutchison, John Stirling, John Baird, William Eccles, Andrew Dalrymple, John Hutchison, Robert Miller, George Ramsay, George Hutchison, Ralph Rogers, John Bell, William Tullidaff, fining them in the Loss of Half of their Stipend, for the Year and Crop 1673. for their not keeping the 29th of May.

Method of the Council's delivering the Instructions to the indulged Ministers.

The Lords, 'finding, That some of the allowed Ministers want the Council's Instructions, appoint them to be delivered coram to them, that none pretend Ignorance.' The Method of this was, The Roll of the Ministers was gone through, every one called as they lay in Order, and asked if he had a Copy of his Instructions: If he had, he was dismissed; if not, the Clerk delivered him a Copy. It happened Mr. George Hutchison's Name was towards the End of the Roll, and he not offering to speak what was agreed upon, till his Name should be called, some of the Brethren, before him in the Roll, began to question whether he would speak, and resolved to speak for themselves.

Mr. Alexander Blair's Expression at receiving them.

Mr. Alexander Blair Minister of Galsfoun, was the First who spoke; and when the Clerk delivered him the Paper, said, 'My Lord Chancellor, I cannot be so uncivil as to refuse a Paper offered me by your Lordships, but I can receive no Instructions from you, for regulating the Exercise of my Ministry; for if I should receive Instructions from you, I should be your Ambassador.' The Chancellor took this hainously ill, and falling into a great Passion, ordered one of the Macers to keep Mr. Blair, for he spoke insolently. Mr. Blair offered to explain himself, but was not permitted.

Mr. Hutchison's Discourte.

When Mr. Hutchison was called in the Roll, he spoke some Things to qualify what Mr. Blair had said, and discoursed 'of the Difference between the Civil and Church-government, and their different Powers, formal and objective, intrinsick and extrinsick.' What he delivered, passed without any Censure. All the Ministers were dismissed save Mr. Blair. The Council-register as to him bears, 'Mr. Alexander Blair at Galsfoun, having publicly disowned the King and Council's Power and Authority, in giving him Instructions, the Lords ordain him immediately to be carried to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, there to remain till further Orders.'

Mr. Blair imprisoned.

Accordingly he was made close Prisoner till December. Upon the 4th of September he petitioned the Council, 'desiring he might be liberate, and signified, that he was informed that they had blamed him for not giving them that Deference he ought to have given them, and begged, that if he had mistaken in Stile and Form, they might impute it to his being uncustomed to speak before such a Judicatory; but he could not recede from the Matter he had spoken.' This Petition was rejected. In November, through his ill Treatment in Prison, he sickned; and, December 4th, I find 'Mr. Alexander Blair allowed by the Lords to go to a House in Edinburgh by reason of his Sickness, upon Caution given for him, under the Penalty of 5000 Merks, that he shall re-enter in a Month, and not keep Conventicles. And, January 8th, they prorogate his Liberty another Fortnight; and by that Time, this excellent Person died, in much Joy, and full Assurance of Faith.

Continues in Prison, notwithstanding of his supplicating, till December, when he sickned and dies.

When

When Mr. Blair was imprisoned, the rest of the Ministers were deeply concerned about him; and, as I am informed, met, and appointed Mr. Hutchison, and some with him, to go to the Chancellor, and the other Counsellors, and homologate what Mr. Blair had said, and seek Favour to him. They went accordingly. The Chancellor pretended, it was not the Matter so much as the Manner of his speaking had irritate them. However Mr. Blair was still kept in Prison.

Mr. Hutchison was blamed for not speaking at first what had been concerted. He alledged that it was not proper for him to speak till he was called upon. It is plain their Measures were broke, and they in some Confusion. The Ministers were reflected on in Papers handed about at this Time, under the Titles of Informations. The Reader will find an Abstract of them, History of the Indulgence, Pag. 52, 53. Upon the other Hand, the Brethren who fell in with the Indulgence, and Mr. Hutchison in particular, were vindicated in a Paper called, A true Narrative, which not being in Print, I have annexed, App. N^o. 58. As I take it, this is the Account which the Author of the History of the Indulgence makes Remarks upon, Pag. 58, &c. and the forementioned Answers to that History, essay to remove: Both being in Print I say no more of it.

Upon the Whole, many at this Time wished the Ministers could have centred in a plain Declaration against the Encroachments made upon them, and they judged this was the Season of it. Had it been given, probably this would have prevented much of the Stumbling which fell in afterwards. These who were formerly averse from the Indulgence, were confirmed, and by little and little in the succeeding Years People began to withdraw, and some who were not unwilling to have accepted of the Indulgence, if Grievances had been presented for the Preservation of Ministers Liberty, turned stiff against falling in with it, and many uncharitable Centures were passed upon the Accepters; tho' it behoved to be owned, that Ordinances dispensed by them were blessed to Multitudes.

And to give all the Persecution, for not observing the Anniversary, together; July 10th, Mrs. John M^r. Michan at Dalry, John Semple at Carsphairn, John Cant at Kells, were fined as above. And, July last, upon the same Account, and in the same Manner, the Council fine Mrs. John Scot at Oxnam, James Fletcher at Newthory, and Robert Mowat at Herriot.

It is Time now to return to the King's Letter, anent the outed Ministers and Conventicles, abovementioned; and I have already observed, that it met not with that ready Entertainment at the Council-board, usually given to His Majesty's Letters. The secret Springs of this I shall not dip into: It is probable, neither the former nor latter Part of it, was very agreeable to the Bishops Designs against Presbyterians in the South and West; neither did the Nomination of Persons to whom so considerable a Power was committed, satisfy all. But I restrict my self to Matter of Fact, as far as it hath offered to me in the Registers.

June 26th, a Draught of a Commission is brought in before the Council, to Duke Hamilton and the rest named: Some Difficulties are raised upon the Draught, and a Letter writ to the King, representing some Inconveniencies which offered themselves, as to the Council's falling in with some Parts of the King's Letter. Upon the 1st of July, this Matter is a little further delayed, the Managers, I suppose, waiting for Returns from Court.

At length, July 25th, the Commission to the Five Persons named is agreed upon, and the Council write to the King, signifying 'That they have issued out the Commission, as his Letter had appointed, but humbly propose, that His Majesty may consider, whether the right settling of the Affairs of the Church, and publick Peace in the Diocese of Glasgow, being the greatest Concern, and of the most Importance to His Majesty's Service of any Thing within the Kingdom, and a great Branch of the Council's Work these Ten or Twelve Years past, be proper to be left in the Hands of so few.'

The Return to this I find in the Records, September 3^d; wherein the King complains, 'That the outed Ministers have not been cited before the Council in the Terms of his Letter May 31st, and tells them, That the Power of the Five proposed for the preserving the Peace in the West, is not at all privative of the Council's Power; but they are to report to the Council, and that few do Business a great deal better than many. In the Close, the Western Commission to the Persons named is dropt, and the Council warned to take a special Care of the Diocese of Glasgow, and they are assured, their Procedure will be lookt after, since they are averse from the King's Proposal.'

When this Letter is read, it was not a little satisfying to several Members; and the Council immediately order all the outed Ministers in Edinburgh, to be cited to hear themselves concerned to repair to the Parishes in which they were confined, in the Terms of the King's Letter May 31st. And the same Day the Council give Power to the Chancellor, and Earl of Athole, to grant Order and Warrant to all whom they please, upon credible Information given them, to seize all who have been at Field-conventicles, and send them to Edinburgh, or oblige them to find Caution to appear before the Council, and send their Bonds to the Clerks.

To Morrow, September 4th, the Council make this following Act. 'Forasmuch as His Majesty hath thought fit, that all the outed Ministers who have no particular Parishes allowed them,

The rest of the Ministers homologate what Mr. Blair had said, and interpose for him, but in vain. Mr. Hutchison and the other Ministers blamed in this Matter, with their Defences.

Remarks upon the Whole.

More Ministers fined, July 10th and 31st.

Counsellors not so ready in answering the King's Letter of May 31. as in other Cases.

Commission to Duke Hamilton and others presented and delayed.

At length it is given with a Kind of Remonstrance to the King.

King's Letter, September 3. dropping the Commission.

Outed Ministers again brought to Trouble. and Warrants given to imprison all who are at Field-conventicles.

Act against indulged Ministers, and such as were outed,

Some confined and others denounced.

‘ them, repair to and be confined in such Parishes as the Council shall name. Mr. John Park, who compears this Day, is appointed to confine himself to Kilmavars Parish, and Mr. John Knox, likewise present, to West-Calder. Mrs. Robert Fleming, Thomas Hogg, John Lidderdale, Alexander Hutchison, not compearing, the Council appoint them to be apprehended wherever they are found, and presented before the Council:’ And, September 30th, a Decree is passed against all the outed Ministers who had not accepted the Indulgence, and entered their Confinements, (except Two or Three who made some Excuse or other) and they are ordered to be denounced. November 6th, I find Mrs. William Mein, James Donaldson, William Creighton, James Kirkcoun, Robert Lockhart, John Wauch, are ordered to be denounced, except Mr. Wauch, who is gone with his Family to Ireland, and is excused, and Mrs. Kirkcoun and Lockhart, who are gone to England: Them the Council order to be cited to compear in Sixty Days; and Mr. Thomas Melvil is excused by reason of Sickness.

It is recommended to the Lords of Session to grant no Suspensions upon Decrees
as to Church
Irregularities.

From these Passages, the Reader will understand the Zeal of the Managers this Year against the outed Ministers and Conventicles. I shall only add, That, June 19th, the Council recommend to the Lords of Session, that no Suspension be by them granted on Decrees pronounced against Persons guilty of keeping Conventicles, irregular Baptisms or Marriages. Some further View of the Hardships put upon Presbyterians this Year, will be had from some particular Instances of Ministers and Gentlemen, which I come now to give.

Mr. Robert Gillespie before the Council and sent to the Bass.

April 2^d, I find Mr. Robert Gillespie before the Council, where he confesses he had kept one House-conventicle in the Town of Falkland: But refusing to delate whom he knew among his Hearers, and to be an Evidence against them, the Council order him to be carried Prisoner to the Isle of the Bass, their lately contrived Prison. Upon the 7th of May, they allow him the Liberty of the Isle of the Bass above the Wall, but strictly require he be not permitted to preach, or exercise any Part of his Ministry there. Here he continues till the Beginning of the next Year, when he fell sick, and, January 8th, the Council permit him, on his Petition, to be let out some Time for his Health.

Mr. Alexander Pedin sent to the Bass, and Hugh Fergusson
finced.

Towards the End of June, Mr. Alexander Pedin Minister at Glenluce, was apprehended by Major Cockburn, in the House of Hugh Fergusson of Knockdow in Galloway, and both were brought Prisoners to Edinburgh. June 26th, the Council appoint the Register and Advocate to examine Mr. Alexander Pedin Prisoner, lately apprehended for being at Pentland, and keeping a Conventicle. Upon their Report they appoint him to be transported to the Prison of the Bass.

I have before me a Letter of this good Man, dated from the Bass, August 11th, 1677. directed to the Reverend Mr. Patrick Simpson, then indulged at Kilmacomb, and since the Revolution Minister at Renfrew, till October 1715. when he got to the Joy of his Lord in a good old Age, after he had been Sixty three Years (singularly useful) in the Work of the Ministry; wherein Mr. Pedin thanks him for a charitable Supply of Money, sent to him and the other Prisoners in the Bass. And I have Ground to think, Mr. Pedin was very much of these Four Years imprisoned there. The Council further appoint Fifty Pounds Sterling to be paid out of the Fines to Major Cockburn, for his great Pains in apprehending Mr. Pedin and Hugh Fergusson, and ordain him to distribute Twenty five Pounds among the Party of Soldiers under his Command, less or more to each at his Discretion. And, July 10th, the Council fine Hugh Fergusson in a Thousand Merks, for his Riolt of Mr. Alexander Pedin, and being present at a Conventicle.

Mr. Andrew Wedderburn, Minister at Ansstruther, imprisoned at a Con-venticle, and confined to Kilmarnock.

Mr. Andrew Wedderburn is before the Council July 31st, and confesseth, ‘ He kept a Conventicle in his own House in Ansstruther Wester, that is, preached and prayed when several others beside his own Family were present. The Lords commit him to Prison till he find Caution under Five thousand Merks, not to keep a Conventicle again, or take on him a voluntary Banishment.’ He continues in Prison about a Month, and then upon a Petition to the Council, he is confined to the Town of Kilmarnock.

Mr. William Weir at Westcalder prosecuted.

The same Day, July 31st, ‘ the Council order out a Squad of the Guards to bring in Mr. William Weir, indulged Minister at West-calder, Prisoner to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh. I find no more about him in the Registers, neither have I any full Accounts of the Process against this godly Minister; only I am informed that he was challenged for taking a Call to the Parish of West-calder, from some of the Heritors and the People; and in his Entry to that Parish, he had some Expressions which were dissatisfying to the Prelates, anent his adhering to the Reformation of this Church, and the awful Obligations we are under to maintain it: Besides, in his Sermons he had preached against Prelacy, and a spiritual Supremacy in the Magistrate.

Further Accounts of this good Man.

Since I have no distinct Accounts of the Expressions this good Man used, or the Sentence passed against him by the Council, I shall only acquaint the Reader, that Mr. Weir was, before the Restoration, Minister at Linlithgow. In May 1661. he, with the Reverend Mr. William Creighton, Minister at Bathgate, were, upon a Petition from the Heritors of their respective Parishes, removed from their Parishes by the Synod of Lothian, as in part hath been noticed. Mr. Weir refusing to deliver up to the Magistrates the Church Emoluments and Registers, was put into the Thieves Hole in Linlithgow, by Provost Glen: And after he had been some Time

Time in that Dungeon, he was carried to a Room in the Palace, and kept there Six Weeks; till at length, seeing no Remedy, he was forced to make the best Terms he could with his Persecutors. His holy Plainness and Freedom, when at West-caldor, obliged him to quit that Place, and within a little he went to Ireland, where he continued till the Liberty 1687. when the People of Lintithgow, with the Concurrence of the general Meeting of Ministers at Edinburgh, gave him a Call to return to his former Charge, where he continued till July 1695. at which Time he died, triumphing over Death and the Grave.

Others were attacked this Year besides Ministers, if they favoured Presbyterians any way. February 20th, the Chancellor for Fife, and Duke Hamilton for the West Country, are ordered by the Council to enquire, what Magistrates or Counsellors in Burghs had not signed the Declaration, and report. What gave the Occasion to this new Enquiry I know not.

Gentlemen and others who are called Presbyterians attacked

The Gentlemen formerly mentioned, Kersland, Blacket, Quarreltoun, Bedlane, and others, imprisoned for Nonconformity, alledged Accession to Pentland, and Church Irregularities, as they were called, were this Year continued in their Prisons. And I shall add another Instance of the Severity of this Time, from the Justiciary Records, upon a worthy Gentleman lately dead, Sir Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn, since the Revolution Lord Conservator in the Low Countries; and it will best appear as it stands in the Registers.

Sentence of the Justiciary against Sir Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn.

Apud Edinburgh, August 20th, 1673. Sederunt, Sir James Lockhart of Lee Justice-clerk, Lords Collington, Newbyth, and Craigie, Justiciaries.

MR. Andrew Kennedy (alias Weir) of Clowburn, being called, did not compear, to have underlien the Pains of Law for the Crimes underwritten, viz. That he having shaken off all Fear of GOD, Conscience of Duty, and Allegiance to his Majesty, and Respect and Tenderness to his Country, presumed to commit the Crimes underwritten. In to far as, Mr. Robert McVaird Minister at Glasgow, Mr. Robert Trail Minister at Edinburgh, Mr. John Livingstone Minister at Ancrum, Mr. John Brown Minister at Wamphra, and divers other seditious Persons, being under the Lash and Compass of the Law and Justice, for their seditious and disloyal Practices, and owing to his Majesty's unparalleled Goodness that their Lives were spared, and that in lieu of that just Severity and Punishment, which by the Law was due unto them, and which justly they might have expected, were banished and removed out of this Kingdom only, where they had not lived, nor, their Principles and Temper being considered, could not live peaceably, and as became loyal and dutiful Subjects: Yet the said Persons having retired unto Holland, and the Dominions of the Estates of the united Provinces, and forgetting their Duty and his Majesty's Favour, did resume, continue, and prosecute their former seditious and disloyal Practices, with as much Malice and greater Boldness than formerly, conceiving they were out of his Majesty's Reach, Authority, and Justice; and ever since they retired out of his Dominions, have made it their Work to hatch, plot, and contrive most horrid, bloody, and treasonable Designs, against his Majesty and Government, and for disturbing the Peace and Quiet of these Kingdoms, and involving again, and embruing their native Country in Blood, Combustion, and the dreadful Calamities of a War, civil and intestine, and Rebellion, under which it has laboured and groined for many Years, and has been the Subject of Compassion even of Strangers: And in order thereunto, having framed divers seditious and treasonable Books and Pamphlets, the ordinary Trumpets and Engines of Sedition and Rebellion, and in special Nephthali, Jus populi vindicatum, they sent the same home to this Kingdom to be divulged: Likeas, they were divulged and dispersed, of purpose to confirm those they conceived to be in their Principles and Perswasion, and to poison, deprave, and seduce others to the same. They did most seditiously stir up the Estate where they lived, and some of those who had Interest in their Government, to a War against his Majesty; and for their Engagement did promise and suggest to them, that they might expect Assistance, at least Diversion, from a Party of their Friends here: They, at least some of them, were, and did traffick and practise in England to the same Purpose, and did send home, or at least endeavour to get sent home to this Kingdom, Arms in order to their Designs foresaid; and for promoting and effectuating the same, they had and kept Correspondence with disloyal and seditious Persons, and in special with divers who had been sentenced and forfeited, or at least declared Fugitives, for their Accession to the late Rebellion; and, in order to this, have their Wives, Friends, and Emisaries living here within this Kingdom, under the Warmness of his Majesty's Authority, and yet like Vipers endeavouring the Destruction of their Country. Amongst which, the said Mr. Andrew Kennedy was employed, and in the Year 1670 or 1671. had sent home to him, and did receive some of these seditious and treasonable Books, Libels, Pamphlets, and Letters, and did disperse the same, and did give Returns to the said Letters, kept Correspondence with them, and otherwise promoted the said Designs, or did know and conceal them. Wherefore the said Mr. Andrew Kennedy has Art and Part, and Accession to the said Crimes of Treason; and was lawfully charged, August 3^d last, to compear before the Justiciary;

1673. 'Justiciary; and, not compearing, he is decerned to be our Sovereign Lord's 'Rebel, and ordained to be put to the Horn, and his moveable Goods and Gear brought 'in for his Majesty's Use, as Fugitive. Which was pronounced as Doom.'

Remarks upon
this.

It is almost needless to make Reflections on this Procedure. The Libel seems rather to be against the banished Ministers than Mr. Kennedy, and stuffed with virulent and invidious Innuendo's upon them, every way groundless and ill founded, as the Reader no doubt hath observed in the former Part of this Work: Yea, there are some plain Falshoods advanced against them, as that Story made up at Edinburgh, That they had stirred up the States to War, and promised Assistance in Scotland; which is so evidently false, that it needs no Refutation; and when Mr. Kennedy's Part comes, it is evidently strained. The Ministers, from whom perhaps he might have Letters, were not intercommuned, and nothing can be more forced than the Charge on him about the prohibited Books: And yet he is, in Absence, found Art and Part in Treason, and denounced and declared Fugitive.

formity, imposed upon

Renfrew.

I shall conclude this Account of Hardships this Year, on the Score of Nonconformity and Conventicles, with an Abbreviate of the Fines imposed about this Time, upon the Heritors of the Shire of Renfrew, which is none of the largest of our Counties, for withdrawing from publick Worship, keeping of Conventicles, disorderly Baptisms and Marriages.

these Fines.

This is a terrible Sum from Eight or Ten Gentlemen, and most of them of the smaller Set of Heritors in this Shire. It must be owned, that these Sums in which they were decerned, were not all uplifted, otherwise the Gentlemen had been entirely ruined; yet they were compounded for, and the Heritors were harassed until the Composition (which in some of their Cases was very high) was paid exactly. I cannot indeed fix the precise Time when these Gentlemen were thus fined: This Year is the Third from the Acts of Parliament appointing those Fines, and the Abbreviate before me, wanting a Date, I insert it here. Perhaps it might be after this, at the End of the next Three Years, which were added to the Period of the the Acts of Parliament last Session: But the Matter of Fact is certain, they were thus decerned; and what an unexemplified and unreasonable Practice was this, to oppress so great Numbers of the best Subjects the King had, merely because their Conscience did not allow them to quit their Principles, and submit to the Yoke of Prelacy; while, in the mean Time, none of them could be charged with the least Branch of Rebellion or Disloyalty? I know the same Fines were imposed upon vast Numbers of Gentlemen in all the neighbouring Shires, Dumbarton, Lanerk, Air, Galloway, and Dumfries; but having met with no particular Lists of them, I leave this Head. The Reader will easily frame a Notion of the prodigious Sums imposed at this Time on the West and South, from this small Part here set down.

Those Hardships upon Gentlemen and Ministers this Year, and the Course of this Persecution, had various Consequents. Some of the Ministers who had conformed to Prelacy, began to open their Eyes, and take up the Evil of their Way. We heard last Year of the Two excellent Brothers, Mrs. Alexander and John Carmichaels; and, I think, 'tis this Year the Reverend Mr. Thomas Forester breaks off from Prelacy, an Account of which shall be given next Year, when his Persecution begins for preaching the Gospel. Great Numbers of Presbyterian Ministers, and some Gentlemen, withdrew from their Habitations, and several went off the Kingdom, and were declared Fugitives, and intercommuned.

Those Hardships open the Eyes of some Conformists.

Such Ministers who continued in the Country, and had no Freedom to subject themselves to the Council's Orders in confining themselves, were under no small Difficulties. Some of them, about Eight or Ten, met together, and drew up their Reasons why they could not comply with the Council's Orders, but the Paper was never presented; and since it is already printed, History of the Indulgence, P. 48 & 50. I shall not insert it. I have a Double of this Paper before me, signed Hugh Smith, John Burnet, Robert Fleming, John Blackader, David Hume, Alexander Jamison, George Campbell, Donald Cargil.

Reasons of Ministers undrawn, why they comply not with the Council's Orders.

The Method the Reverend Mr. John Burnet, Minister of the Gospel at Kilbride near Glasgow, took at this Time, was more noticed. When he was cited in to the Council, Sickness prevented his appearing; and therefore he sent a Letter to the Chancellor, with the Reasons why he could not accept the offered Indulgence, nor enter into his Confinement. The Draught of the Reasons were formed to have been delivered to the Council, and his Sickness hindered his altering the Tenor of it. The Reader will find both in the History of the Indulgence, Pag. 42, &c.

Mr. John Burnet writes to the Chancellor, and sends his Reasons why he accepts not the Indulgence.

Mr. Burnet was a Minister of great Solidity and Learning; and though he had no Freedom to fall in with the Indulgence himself, yet he was very opposite to Division upon that Score, and both heard the indulged Ministers, and pressed his People at Kilbride, among whom he lived, to do so. He had been singularly useful in that Parish, where there were a great many Quakers and Separatists; and yet, by his painful and excellent Preachings and other Labours, he reclaimed most Part of them.

Mr. Burnet's Character.

I find, Mr. Burnet died in full Assurance, and great Peace, December 22^d, 1673. The last Words he was heard speak, were, Glory, glory, glory.

Thus Matters stood this Year in Scotland; but in England Affairs took a great Turn. There the Parliament, in April, address against the Liberty allowed to Papists. The King saw fit to take away this, and yet to continue the Toleration to Dissenters for a little, to please the Commons, when the Dutch War was very unpopular, as well as unsuccessful. The Duke of York was married to the Duke of Modena his Daughter, and the CABAL who managed all at Court for some Time, were divided and scattered, Clifford, Arlington, Buckingham, Ashley-couper, and Lawderdale. Ashley-couper, or the Earl of Shaftsbury, left the Court, and struck in with the Country-party. The House of Commons impeach Buckingham; and Lawderdale, now mightily in Favour with the King, was voted by them to be a Grievance to England, and unfit to be employed in any Office: Whereupon he makes the best of his Way to Scotland.

Great Changes in England this Year.

Here, in December, he holds his Fourth Session of Parliament. The open Differences which fell in among them, prevented their meddling with Church-affairs, and the suffering Presbyterians; and therefore I shall say very little about them. The King's Letter to this Session is in Print; and Lawderdale makes his Majesty speak therein with considerable Warmth against Presbyterians, probably to secure to himself the Bishops and their Dependents, that he might the better oppose the Duke of Hamilton and his Country-party, who were now openly broken with Lawderdale. Thus the King is made to say in his Letter, 'That one of the principal Reasons of keeping this Session of Parliament, is, That effectual Courses may be laid down, for punishing and curbing the insolent Field-conventicles, and other seditious Practices.' The Indulgence is insisted upon, as what mightily aggravates the Evil of these; the former Laws are commended, and the Want of Execution of them complained of; and 'tis added, 'We must now therefore, once for all, lay down such solid and effectual Courses, that the whole Kingdom may see that both you and We are in earnest, and that if Fairness will not do, Force must compel the refractory, to be peaceable, and obey the Law.' This Letter the Duke seconds with a Speech to the same Purpose, which is likewise printed. Yet Providence put a Stop to their falling upon the Presbyterians.

Remarks upon this Juncture, by the Author of the Grievances under the Duke of Lawderdale's Ministry.

The Author of the Grievances under the Duke of Lawderdale's Ministry, hath several Reflections upon the Strain of this Letter: He remarks, That if the LORD had not beat down this Man to the Earth, when breathing such Threatnings and Slaughter, we would have been an Aceldama. He says, the Introduction of a Service-book into Scotland was at this Time designed, and the Form of it prepared, and the Commissioner charged to carry it through, this Parliament. In short, he notices the Inconsistency of this minatory Letter, with the Duke's coming to take Sanctuary in Scotland, and his professed Kindness to Nonconformists.

Duke Hamilton and his Party oppose a Supply to the King, till the Grievances of the Country be redressed.

Whatever were the Commissioner's Projects, they were all frustrated; for when he proposed a new Supply to his Master, and that this Matter should be referred to the Articles, the first Stand that was offered to the Measures of the Court, since the Restoration, is made; and the Duke of Hamilton moves, That the Grievances of the Country might first be represented to the King; and, after that, declared he was willing to go into a Supply. Warm Debates arose in the House, and when the Commissioner appeared with some Briskness for the Supply, one of the Members asked, Whether this was a free Parliament or not? Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart, and several other Gentlemen, spoke with abundance of Freedom and Plainness.

The Acts of this Parliament, and their Adjournment till March.

There are Three or Four Acts, about trivial Matters, passed, which Duke Hamilton and his Party did not oppose; but nothing of Moment got through: So Lawderdale had no other Shift but to adjourn the Parliament to March next. The Earl of Argyle, Kincardin, Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, were at this Time upon the Commissioner's Party, with all the Bishops.

A short Account of Affairs in Scotland, handed about at this Time.

Before the Sitting down of the Parliament in November, a short Account of Affairs in Scotland was drawn up by a considerable Lawier, probably to be communicated to Friends through the Country, and in England. It relates mostly to Civil Affairs; but because I have not seen it in Print, and it gives a View of the State of Things at this Time, I have insert it, App. N^o. 59.

App. N^o. 59.

Some of both Sides go to London after the Parliament.

Upon the adjourning the Parliament, both Sides send up their Confidants to Court. Of the Country-party, Duke Hamilton, the Earl of Dumfries, and others go up. They complained that the Duke and his Brother Haltoun had engrossed to themselves and Friends, all the profitable Places and Posts in the Kingdom. The other Party answered all; and Duke Hamilton and his Friends had but a cold Reception. There was not a Word concerning Religion from any Side. Next Year, some further Account of this may come in, as likewise of the Projects and Grievances the Prelates designed to have laid before this Session, but were prevented by the Differences among our great Men.

I promised, at the Close of this Year, to take Notice of some other less material Things, which came not in upon the former Generals, and shall very quickly dispatch them. Upon January 9th, I find a Remission is read in Council, to Mr. Archibald Beeth Curate in Ar-ran, for his Accession to the Slaughter of Alan Gardiner Merchant in Irwin. Mr. Beeth, and one Donald McGibbon, who lived in a remote Place of the Island, made it their Work to oppress People who put in there. Upon the 27th of April, 1671. after professed Kindness, Mr. Beeth shot the above designed Person, and was seized; and, in July, I meet with him pannelled before the Justice-court for Murder: After many Dilators, June 24th, 1672. he is, by an Assize, found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged at the Crofs of Edinburgh; but the Day left to themselves. They delay naming the Day from Time to Time; and, about the Beginning of this Year, his Remission comes down.

Mr. Row Curate of Balmaclellan, transported to Stainkirk, and turns Papist.

Mr. John Row Curate of Balmaclellan, after he had got the Fine laid upon the Parish, for the pretended Riot, was, last Year, by the Council, September 13th, transported to the Parish of Stainkirk, in the Shire of Wigtoun; and the Council write a Letter to the Laird of Gartland, Patron there, to grant him a Presentation. This Year, March 7th, a Complaint is made in Council, that when he came to Stainkirk, the Kirk-locks were spoiled, and he had not Access, and was likewise hindred from possessing Manse and Glebe. The Council order Enquiry to be made into it; but I meet with no Prosecution following. I suppose it might be about this Time he turned Papist. April 2^d, I find one James Baxter ordered by the Council, to be prosecuted by the Advocate, for his confest Accession to the Riot committed upon the House of Mr. David Cunningham Incumbent in Cambuslang. These Riots are now much at an End.

Mr. Kincaid, Curate in Barnwell, removed, to make way o. an indulged Minister.

July 10th, the Council having a Design to plant the Parish of Barnwell, in the Shire of Air, with one of the outed Ministers, as soon as Mr. Robert Kincaid, present Incumbent, is provided for elsewhere, they order a Letter to be writ to the Earl of Galloway, that he may present him to the Parish of Kirkmabro. Probably it was the President got this Favour to his Neighbours in Barnwell. I imagine Mr. Kincaid would not be so welcome to the People in the South; however the Council must be obeyed.

Patrons had little or no Power under Prelacy.

By the way, upon this Head, I cannot but observe, that I have frequently heard it noticed, That the Power of Patrons, except in point of doing Hurt, was almost as little in the Hands

Hands of Gentlemen and Noblemen under Prelacy, as since the Revolution, when it was rescinded. They were never permitted almost to follow their own Inclinations, in giving Presentations, but perfectly imposed upon by the Prelates, and sometimes the Council, or at least some of the Managers, whom they durst not disoblige. 1673.

In December this Year, the Council issue out a very good Proclamation against Papists, which is printed, and very long. Had the Prelates concurred in their Capacity, it might have been better executed; but, I find, December 6th, that same Day the Proclamation is agreed to, the Council, with a Regret of their former Negligence, renew their Appointment upon the Archbishops and Bishops, as in the former Years, and require Accounts of such as have made Desertion, and of the Bishops Diligence in excommunicating those; and order this to be done yearly. And, December 23^d, upon Information that one Whiteford, a Lieutenant in the Guards, is a Papist, the Council appoint him to be dismissed, and that he serve no longer there.

A good Proclamation against Papists.

By a Copy of a Letter before me, from Doctor Burnet, Professor of Divinity at Glasgow, to the Duke of Lawderdale, dated December 15th, 1673. which I have insert, App. N^o. 60. I find that the Breach between the Commissioner and him was begun about this Time, which afterwards, in the Year 1675. issued in the Doctor's being an Informer against the Duke, before the House of Commons. I come now forward to the following Year.

CHAP. IX.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1674. 1674.

THIS Year affords some more Matter for the History I am upon, than the former. Conventicles were not prevented through the Kingdom, by the Indulgence to a few Ministers in the West: The Persecution of the outed Ministers, for not confining themselves to Places appointed to them, put many of them to wander up and down; and they could not there resist the importunate Cravings of Multitudes longing for spiritual Food. This Increase of Conventicles was accompanied with severe Fines, and other Persecution from the Council. The Parliament likewise was dissolved; the Attempts made against Lawderdale and his Party came to nothing; several of those who opposed him in the Council, are turned out, and a new Council named: Abroad we had a Peace made up with Holland, and at Home some Tumults and Riots, and no small Debates among the Bishops and Clergy. These Things will fill up Two Sections. In the First, I shall take a View of the Procedure of the Council with relation to Conventicles, and such as were concerned in them; and in the other, I shall gather up what other Things I find observable through this Year. General View of this Year.

WHEN the Parliament was adjourned in the Entry of the Year, and the Animosities 'twixt our different Parties of Statemen were going on, Presbyterians took a little Liberty to preach and hear the Gospel, in Places where the Indulgence did not reach, as what they reckoned both a civil and religious Right; and it was thought that none of the contending Parties were much dissatisfied at their Increase.

Now a considerable Part of the Kingdom was filled with Conventicles in Houses and the Fields, but Ministers were not so fond of the Fields as to refuse Invitations to vacant Churches from the Heritors and People concerned. House-conventicles were the less noticed, that Field ones were so common. Many of the Episcopal Incumbents had indeed so disgusted their Hearers, that their Meetings were but thin. In the West, where the Indulgence was granted, there was no need of Conventicles. In many Parts of the North there were but few Favourers of Presbyterians; and yet in Ross, Murray, and other Places, there were some; but in Fife, Perth, Stirling, Dumbarton, Lothian, Merse, Teviotdale, the Border, Annan-dale, Niddale, and other Places, Field-meetings were frequent. Convenient Places were pitched upon in Mountains, Mosses, and Muirs, and considerable Numbers gathered to them. At these Meetings many Souls were converted and edified, and not a few who had been profane or indifferent, and well enough satisfied with the Incumbents, entirely left them.

This did not a little affect the Prelates, who used their utmost Efforts to restrain those Field-meetings; and the Council were not wanting. I shall give here then a Detail of what I have noticed in their Registers to this purpose.

Their Procedure; in the Beginning of the Year, against Mr. Forester, and some other particular Ministers, I shall leave to the following Session, and begin with the Actings of the new made Council June 4th. The Members of this Court were generally very hearty in this Work, and Lawderdale, from particular Views, pushed them on by Letters from the King.

Accordingly, at their First Meeting on the foresaid Day, a Letter is read from his Majesty, dated May 19th, complaining, 'That, notwithstanding the Indemnity lately granted, and the Lenity shewn, unlawful Conventicles, yea, Field-meetings were kept, and the Pulpits of orthodox Ministers invaded in some Places. Upon the Whole, the King requires the Council to use their utmost Endeavours for trying and apprehending of Preachers at Field-conventicles, Invaders of Pulpits, and the ringleading Heritors at such Conventicles and Invasions, and to make use of the standing Forces and Militia for that end, leaving the Punishment of the other Transgressors to the ordinary Magistrate, according to Law.'

After Consideration of this Letter, and to answer the Demand of it, the Council appoint the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of St. Andrews, Duke Hamilton, Earls of Argyle, Linlithgow, Kinghorn, Wigtoun, and Dundonald, the President, Treasurer-depute, Register, Advocate, Lord Collington, or any Five of them, to meet, with a Council-power, when and where they please, and consider and make Trial anent Field-conventicles, Invasions upon Ministers and Pulpits since the Indemnity dated March 24th last, with Power to apprehend whom they think meet, and give Orders to the Army and Militia. They are to advise with the Council in difficult Cases, and make their Report, and to offer their Opinion for preventing these Disorders. This I take to have been the Beginning of what was afterwards termed the Committee for publick Affairs.

At the same Time the Council order the Chancellor to send out Parties to apprehend all Conventicle-preachers, or such as pray at these Meetings, according as he is informed about them; and particularly, to apprehend the Persons of 'Mrs. John Welsh, Gabriel Semple, Robert Ross, Samuel Arnot, Gabriel Cuninghame, Archibald Riddel, John Mosman, John Blackader, William Wisheart, David Hume, John Dickson, John Rae, Henry Forsyth, Thomas Hogg, Robert Law, George Johnston, Thomas Forester, Frazer of Brae, John Law, Robert Gillespie. And any of the Guards who shall apprehend Mr. John Welsh, or Mr. Gabriel Semple, are promised Four hundred Pounds Sterling, and for each of the rest a Thousand Merks. The Council further declare, that the Soldiers and their Assistants are hereby indemnified of any Slaughter committed in apprehending any one of them, conform to 1st Act, Session 2^d. Parl. 2^d. Char. II. entitled, Anent Conventicles. The said Persons are appointed, when apprehended, to be brought into Edinburgh: And the same Orders are granted to the Earls of Athole and Linlithgow.

Decreet against Conventicles in Fife, whereby a great many Gentlemen are fined.

This Spring Conventicles were numerous. That diligent, fervent, successful, and unwearied Preacher Mr. John Welsh, made a Perambulation, at the earnest Desire of many, through Fife, and there preached frequently, sometimes in vacant Churches, and sometimes in the Fields, to very numerous Auditories; and other vacant Churches were preached in by Presbyterian Ministers, upon the pressing Desire of the Inhabitants. At Wolmet Chapel great Numbers met, to which one Day the Archbishop of St. Andrews was an Eye Witness. Mr. William Weir preached at another Time to a very full Auditory in Magdalene Chapel in Edinburgh; but the Meetings which were most noticed, were those by Mrs. Johnstoun and Kirkcoun in the Church of Cramond near Edinburgh.

Accordingly, June 11th, The Council give out a Decreet against the Heritors of Cramond, of which I need only set down the Abstract. 'Whereas, notwithstanding the Acts against Conventicles, in April or May last, Mr. George Johnstoun and Mr. James Kirkcoun kept a Conventicle in the Kirk and Kirk-yard of Cramond, and Mr. John Inglis of Cramond compearing, confesses, that he was Six Times at the said Kirk when Conventicles were there: The Council fine him in the Fourth Part of his valued Rent, toties quoties, extending to the Sum of 1036 Pounds Scots, and appoint him to be carried to Prison, there to ly till it be paid, and longer, during the Council's Pleasure.' I find afterwards he produces a Receipt of the Payment of his Fine, and is let out of Prison. The same Day, the Lord Balmorino and Sir John Young of Leny compeared, and denied that they had been present at any of those Conventicles: The Council, for their assoiling, order them upon their Knees to take the Oath of Allegiance, which they did, and were dismissed without any further Trouble.

At the same Diet, Mr. Charles Oliphant of Langtoun-law, One of the Under-clerks of the Session, was convened before the Council, where he acknowledged he was present at one Conventicle at Pilmor-brae, but declared he went thither merely out of Curiosity, and promised never more to go to Conventicles, and professed he held them unlawful Assemblies. The Council ordain him upon his Knees to take the Oath of Allegiance, which he did, and was dismissed without any further Censure for the first Fault.

Thus our new named Council go very briskly to Work, upon the Keepers of Conventicles within their Reach; and further to quash them, they emit Two Proclamations, June 18th. The first is, Proclamation obliging Heritors for their Tenants, and Masters for their Servants, which I have insert, App. N^o. 61. It speaks for it self the Temper of our Managers at this Time, and needs very few Remarks.

After an invidious and ill-grounded Representation of House and Field-conventicles, all Masters are required to dismiss such as haunt them, from their Service, and all Heritors are to oblige their Tenants to sign the Bond annexed to the Proclamation. In case Tenants refuse, they are to be put to the Horn, and their Escheat is given to their Masters: Further, Heritors are required in Time to come, to oblige their Tenants in their Tacks, or in separate Bonds, that they abstain from Conventicles: And an unlimited Power is given to Magistrates of Towns, to charge all they think fit, and whom ever they suspect, to give Bond for their good Behaviour. These unprecedented and unreasonable Impositions, need only to be named to shew their Injustice and oppressive Nature.

This Proclamation secured some way against Hearers, but another was found needful against Preachers at Conventicles. The Substance of it I have already noticed upon the 4th of this Month of June; now a new Act, offering a Reward to any who shall apprehend some Rebels and others, is passed. It is printed June 16th, but in the Records it comes in after the former. I have annexed it, App. N^o. 62. By this every one who seizes Convocators to Conventicles, or such who have been at them, so as they may be convicted, are to have their Fines, and in case of Contumacy, their Escheats: And whoever seizes any Minister at Conventicles, is to have 1000 Merks, and 2000 Merks for Mrs. Welsh, Semple or Arnot.

After these Proclamations the Council are not wanting in their Prosecutions; 'tis but some few of them I can have Room for here. Upon the 24th of June, they fine the Town of Edinburgh in a Hundred Pounds Sterling, for a Conventicle, as they are pleased to reckon it, in Magdalene Chapel in April or May last, at which Mr. William Weir, Mr. George Johnstoun, and some other outed Ministers had preached.

On the morrow, June 25th, they pass a Decreet against Keepers of Conventicles in Fife. The Tenor of such Papers hath been already insert; and so I give only an Abstract of it. The underwritten Persons are before the Council, and charged with being present at Conventicles held by Mr. John Welsh, Mr. Samuel Arnot and others: They confess their being at Conventicles, and are fined as follows; Sir John Kirkcaldy of Grange in 550 Pounds Scots, the Laird of Reddie in 850 Pounds, George Scot of Pitlochrie in 1000 Pounds, Pitcairn of Pitlour in 1050 Pounds, Pitcairn of Latestoun in 200 Pounds, Charles Cowan of Corstoun in 333 Pounds, Robert Calvil in Balvaird in 100 Pounds, Robert Schaw Portioner in Auchmouty in 49 Pounds, James Hamilton of Innerdivot in 150 Pounds, . . . Maxwel Provost of Auchtermouty 250 Pounds, Mr. George Heriot of Ramorney 983 Pounds. And because it appears that the Laird of Reddie harboured Mr. John Welsh, a declared Traitor, in his House, the Council fine him in 2000 Merks. Pitlochrie, for his alledged impertinent and extravagant Carriage riage before the Council, is fined further in 500 Merks. All of them are ordered to ly in Prison till they pay the said Sums. To this Diet Forty or Fifty more were cited, and, not compearing, are ordered to be denounced.

In the Registers of this Day's Date, I find another Decree by the Council against the Keepers of Conventicles in a Garner-house of the Laird of Stevenson, in the House of Mrs. Douglas, Relict of Mr. Robert Douglas, and in a House alledged to be made up on purpose for Conventicles, by Mr. Robert Hodge Bailie of Lamington. The Preachers at these Places are Mrs. David Williamson, Robert Gillespie, Alexander Knox, George Johnstoun, and James Donaldson. Pringle of Wood-head, for being at some of them, is fined in a Fourth Part of his yearly valued Rent, and some others; and a good many of the meaner People, for Noncompearance, are ordered to be denounced. I find John Pringle of Wood-head is liberate from Prison, July 16th, upon paying 277 Pounds Scots.

King's Letter,
App. N^o. 63.

Upon the 30th of June, the Council receive a Letter from the King, of the Date, Windfor June 23^d. A Copy of it the Reader will find, App. N^o. 63. In short, 'Invading of Pulpits, Conventicles, and irregular Peritions are complained of; they have Thanks for the Committee that they named, the Oath of Secrecy they took, and Orders given June 4th. (N.B. That none of these are to be found in the Registers of that Sederunt) and the King doubts not, but the Contempt of his Authority is countenanced by some who do not appear, and acquaints them he hath ordered some Troops in Ireland to be in readines, if need be, to come over.' There are several other Things in the Letter, which will come to be noticed in the following Section. It is obvious this Letter is penned with a Design to reflect upon Duke Hamilton and his Party. I only notice further, that there are plain enough Insinuations made, that ground had been given to Presbyterians to expect further Ease and Favour. This was in part the Occasion of the Liberty they took this Year; and their numerous and frequent Meetings to hear their own Ministers proceeded not from Insolence, but they reckoned it a Branch of their civil Liberty, as well as religious, not to be imposed upon in hearing the Gospel: And they were the more open, though very peaceable in their Meetings, that the Government might see the Need of a far more extended Liberty to Presbyterians, when they could not but notice them so numerous on the South-side of Tay, that they could never be accomodate by the few Ministers indulged to preach.

Remarks upon
it.

Council's Return to it
July 2^o.

The Council in a Day or Two make a Return, and, July 2^d, signify, 'That they had received his Majesty's Commands in his Letter May 19th, (above noticed) and June 23^d last, and had very seriously applied themselves to curb those Disorders which did lately break out, and secure the Peace thereof, and refer his Majesty to an Account sent with this to the Duke of Lawderdale. They add, And now we find that by your Majesty's hearty and serious minding thus the Interests of this Church, and your strict Commands to punish those Disorders, and what hath been done in obedience to these Commands, that the Insolence of that Party is at a Stand, and their seditious Practices in a great Measure abated. And we hope, by putting the Laws in Execution against the Committers of these Disorders, we shall in a short Time reduce those who have been seduced, to their former Quiet and peaceable Submission to the Laws: Mean Time we shall do our utmost Diligence to find out and punish the Ringleaders of these Disorders; nor shall any Thing upon our Part be wanting, whereby we can witness our Zeal to obey your Majesty's Commands in these, and all other Particulars which your Majesty shall be pleased to lay upon us.'

Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale, containing a Summary of the Procedure of the Council.

Together with this, the Council send up a Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale the same Day, which, because referred to in the former, and contains an authentick Account of the Actings of this new Council, I have insert here.

May it please your Grace,

THE King's Majesty, by his Letter of the 19th of May, having required us to use our utmost Endeavours for trying and apprehending the Preachers at Field-conventicles, and Invaders of Ministers, as also the ringleading Heritors at such Field-conventicles, and Invasions of Pulpits and Ministers, and for that Purpose to make use of the standing Forces and Militia, if it should be needful: And by another Letter of June 23^d, his Majesty renewed his positive Commands to us, vigorously to prosecute the Trial of Conventicles, and punishing of the Contemners of his Majesty's Authority, and to give an Account of what is done by us; we have returned an Answer to his Majesty's Letters, which relating to a particular Account sent to your Grace, we offer the same as follows.

Upon the Receipt of his Majesty's first Letter, we did immediately appoint a Committee to take that Affair into Consideration, to which we gave ample Powers; and they being informed of several Field-conventicles that had been, and were to be kept in Fife, Stirling Shire, and other Places, did give Orders to the Officers of his Majesty's Forces, to suppress these Conventicles, and seize the Preachers at the same, and to apprehend certain outed Ministers contained in a List, who had lately preached at Field-conventicles; and Orders were given to quarter more Troops of Horse, and some Companies of Foot, in such Places ces as we thought most convenient: For these Ends, and the Encouragement of his Majesty's Forces, and others his good Subjects, to seize the Ministers who preach at Field-conventicles, we have passed an Act, whereby Assurance is given of a Reward of Two thousand Merks, to such as shall apprehend any of these Ministers who are forfeited or excepted, and One thousand Merks for others of them, and allowing the Fines of such who shall be at Field-conventicles, to such as shall apprehend any of them. We have likewise issued Citation against divers Heritors, who were present and heard outed Ministers who invaded Pulpits, and against such as were at Field-conventicles, and proceeded against them according to Law: And particularly, there being about Forty Persons in the Shire of Fife, (almost all of them Heritors) cited upon the account of Field-conventicles, at some of which Mr. John Welsh, a forfeited Person, did preach; divers of them appearing, and being found guilty, were fined and imprisoned, conform to the Act of Parliament; and the rest being absent, Certification is granted against them, and they ordained to be denounced.

Likeas, Notice being given to us, that a Party sent to dissipate a Conventicle kept in the Lowmounts, did meet with Resistance, Orders are given to seize some Persons who were informed to have been present at that Field-conventicle, that Knowledge might be had who were the Persons that were present, and who made the Resistance; and accordingly, Four Persons being brought over, and examined thereanent, it could not be found by their Depositions, who were the Persons who made the Resistance.* Warrant was likewise granted for citing those outed Ministers, and others, who are informed to have kept Field-conventicles, since the Date of his Majesty's gracious Proclamation. And 'tis thought fit, for securing the publick Peace, that the Militia Forces should be in a readiness to receive such Orders as should be directed to them. We have ordered the Colonels of Foot, and Captains of Horse, on this Side of Aberdeen Shire, to have frequent Rendevouzes, and to be careful that the same be punctually kept, and that the Soldiers Arms be in good Condition, fit for his Majesty's Service; and have given Orders for securing the Militia Arms, in some Shires of the Kingdom. We have likewise, by missive Letters to several Sheriffs, required them to put the Acts of Parliament and Council in Execution against Conventicles, and have given the like Orders to the Magistrates of several Royal Burghs, where Conventicles of late are informed to have been most frequent, with Warrant to them to apprehend the Preachers at these Conventicles; certifying both the Sheriffs and Magistrates, that in case of their Remissness herein, we will proceed to fine them conform to the late Act of Parliament.

* I am informed, this anent the Resistance was a mere Story and Lie, suggested by the Primates, to quicken the Council to greater Violence.

A Proclamation is also emitted, ordaining Masters of Families, that they shall be answerable for their Servants, that they shall abstain from Conventicles, and Heritors, to that effect, for their Tenants; or otherwise, declaring the Heritors and Masters liable to the Fines incurred by their Tenants and Servants, through their contravening the Law. We had also called before us the Magistrates of Edinburgh, and fined them in a Hundred Pounds Sterling, for the Conventicle kept in Magdalene Chapel: We are proceeding to the Trial of that Conventicle, for which several Persons are imprisoned. Enquiry has also been made concerning the Petition offered in a tumultuary way by some Women, of whom divers being cited, these appearing, and refusing to give their Oaths as to the Points interrogated upon, are imprisoned, and Certification is granted against such as were absent. We have likewise fined one of the Heritors concerned in Field-conventicles, in the Sum of Two thousand Merks, as having confessed he had refet Mr. John Welsh in his House. But seeing there are some Doubts arise as to the Council's Procedure against Persons guilty of that Crime, we have transmitted a Paper herewith, and desire your Grace to acquaint his Majesty of it, that we may know his Pleasure therein.

Those Proceedings, we have found, have so good Effects, and so good Success, that we now hear little either of Invasions of Pulpits, or of Field-conventicles, even in these Places where they were most numerous. And as in obedience to his Majesty's Commands, we are presently going about the further Discovery of the Authors of such insolent and seditious Practices, that they may receive condign Punishment, (wherein we are resolved to use all Diligence) so we are very hopeful, by the due Execution of the Law against Transgressors, this Kingdom will be shortly rid of those Disorders, and his Majesty's Subjects, in a good Measure, brought to a dutiful Obedience and Compliance with the Laws. We are

Your Grace's affectionate, &c.

Together with the above Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale, the Council sent up the following Overture, anent the Difficulties occurring to them, in taking Probation about Persons being present at Field-conventicles, which, the Reader sees, they desire he may lay before the King.

Overture sent to the King, about Probation to be taken in case of Conventicles.

OVERTURE.

‘THe Probation as to the keeping, or being present at Conventicles, is very difficult, by reason that those who are convened, do refuse to declare upon Oath, as to others, and as to themselves, they pretending they are not holden in Law to declare upon Oath, and accuse themselves, seeing their Confession may import them in their Life, and be the Ground of a Criminal Dittay before the Justices, the keeping of Conventicles, as to some Cases and Persons, viz. those who preached at Field-conventicles, and those who convened to the same, being punishable by Death; and sometimes, besides conventicling, there being a Concurrence of other Crimes and Circumstances, of an high Nature, as coming to their Meetings in Arms, and by way of Convocation, the hearing and not revealing of seditious Expressions against his Majesty and the Government, the intercommuning and resetting of declared Rebels and Traitors, forfeited and excepted out of his Majesty’s gracious Declaration of Pardon, or declared Fugitives before the Justices, as Mr. John Welsh and Mr. Gabriel Semple.’

‘It is therefore humbly represented, That it is fit his Majesty’s Advocate be warranted to cause cite before the Council, such Persons as shall be informed to have been at Field-conventicles, to give their Oaths thereupon, with Certification they shall be holden as confess: And to take off the Pretext foresaid, that his Majesty, by his Letter, signify his Pleasure to the Council; and thereupon an Act of Council be made, warranting the Advocate to refer the Libel to the Oath of the Defender, and to restrict the same to arbitrary Punishment; and declaring, that any Person or Persons who, being pursued before the Council, shall declare, or be holden confess, for, and upon their being at Field-conventicles, or for hearing or resetting outed Ministers, or others not authorized by Law, though forfeited, excepted, or declared Fugitives, shall never be troubled or questioned criminally before the Justices, or any other Judicatory, for any such Deeds referred to their Oath before the Council, or for any Circumstance of the same. It is to be understood, that if the Council think fit, the Advocate may be ordered to pursue such Persons before the Justices, before they give their Oaths, or be holden as confess before the Council.’

The King approves of it, and the Council turn it to an Act.

And that I may give the Whole of this by it self; Upon the 16th of July the Council have a Return from the King, dated upon the 10th, which it is needless to give at whole Length. In short, he thanks them for their Diligence, orders them to go on, and requires them to give Warrant, and make an Act in Terms as above; to which they gave ready Obedience, and turn their own Overture into an Act, which though it be just in the above Terms, yet being the Cause of as much Trouble unto the suffering Party, as almost any other Act, it is proper to insert it in its new Shape, App. N^o. 64.

App. N^o. 64.

Remarks upon it.

Reflections upon this Overture now made an Act, might be multiplied, but I leave them to the learned in the Law. It is a natural Observation from what is above, that most of the Stretches and iniquous Impositions of this Period, came originally from a Set of Men among our selves, who put the King and those about him on these harsh Measures. To me it appears much the same to force a Person to swear against himself, when the Libel is restricted to an arbitrary Punishment, as in most Part of criminal Processess, and to hold him, upon refusing, as confess. Arbitrary Punishment is very extensive, and we shall find that arbitrary Fining in this Period, was equivalent to a Forfeiture in most Cases, yea, the Fines were just calculate to exhaust Gentlemens Estates: Besides many other additional Hardships, any Thing, if I mistake not, under the Loss of Life, or Limb, or Liberty, comes under the Notion of arbitrary Punishment; and it was all one to the Pannels, whether they were rendered miserable by the Council or Justiciary. If the putting the Matter of a Crime upon the Oath of a Party be illegal and unreasonable, it is equally unreasonable, if not illegal, to put a Matter of Fact, the Proof of which will ruine him as to every Thing save Life, Limb, or Liberty, upon his Oath; and if he refuse to be an Evidence against himself, to hold him as confess. Upon the Whole, it is plain by this Act, the Persecutors had a sure Game, go Mat- ters as they would: If they had Witneses, and reasonable and legal Proofs, the Advocate had Room to bring the Party before the Justices, and get him hanged; if there was no Proof, and the Man refused to break the Sixth Command, then he is reputed as confessing, and the Council can ruine him. And this was a short and easy Way with Absents, against whom they had no Proof.

Decreet against Conventicles in Fife, July 9.

But I return to my Accounts of the Severities against the Presbyterians for their keeping Conventicles this Year. Upon the 9th of July, the Council pass another Decreet against above Fifty Persons in Fife, for being at Conventicles. We may easily guess whence all this Severity against Fife comes: It was more than the Primate could bear, to have his once Fellow-ministers preaching Christ so near him; and those rigorous Courses, and others afterward, ripened Matters for his fatal End. None of the Persons cited compear, but the Lady Colvill, Cotvil, and Interest had been made for her, and the Managers began to blush a little at their Rudeness to Ladies of Quality, otherwise 'tis probable she had not appeared. She brings with her a Testificate, from the Minister of the Parish, of her Piety; and the promises not to frequent Conventicles, and is absolved. All the rest, for their not compearing, are denounced.

A Day or Two after, the Council pass a Decree against the Town of Glasgow, for a Conventicle kept in it by Mr. Andrew Mortoun and Mr. Donald Cargill. The Decree, mutatis mutandis, is the same Form with that against the Town of Edinburgh; Glasgow is fined in a Hundred Pounds Sterling, and they are allowed to have their Relief off the Persons guilty, according to the Act of Parliament.

Upon the 16th of July, ----- Livingstone of Greenyards, and Farquharson of Chilbrae, are denounced; for being at a Conventicle lately held at the Torwood, where Mr. John Welsh, Mr. Gabriel Semple, Mr. Samuel Arnot, and Mr. John Rae preached. The same Day Robert Ged of Bathbridge being present, is fined, for being at one Conventicle, in the Fourth Part of his yearly Rent; and Sir John Kirkcaldy younger of Glaime, for being present at Two Conventicles, is fined in Five hundred and Fifty Pounds Scots.

And as to the outed Ministers who now and then preached at Conventicles, they make a short Work with them; and having before cited them to appear this Day before the Council, and they not appearing, they pass a Decree against them, which I shall insert, if once I had observed with one of themselves in some Papers he hath left behind him, that their Citation seems to have been given with a Design they should not compear. Summons were not sent, as is ordinarily done, to their Dwelling-houses, which were known, and to which there was tutus accessus, but they were cited from the Market-crofs. The Day, as to many of them, was so sudden, that it was not possible for them to have Notice, and make their Journey against the Time of their Compearance: And such of them as had Time to come in, upon Enquiry found, that they might either lay their Account with a Confinement in some ugly Prison, they knew not how long, or Banishment for Life. Upon these Reasons none of them compeared; and, upon their Absence, the following Sentence is passed, which deserves a Room in this Place.

Decree against several outed Ministers, July 16th, 1674.

ASSENT our Sovereign Lord's Letters, raised at the Instance of Sir John Nisbet of Dirltoun his Majesty's Advocate, for his Highness's Interest, in the Matter underwritten, making Mention, That where, by the 5th Act of the 2^d Session of his Majesty's 2^d Parliament, it is statute and ordained, That no outed Ministers who are not licensed by the Council, and no other Persons who are not authorized or tolerated by the Bishop of the Diocese, presume to preach, expound Scripture, or pray in any Meeting except in their own Houses, and to these of their own Family, and that none be present at any Meetings without the Family to which they belong, where any not licensed, or authorized, or tolerated, as said is, shall preach, expound Scripture, or pray, declaring all such who do in the contrary to be guilty of keeping Conventicles; and that he or they who shall do so, shall be seized upon and imprisoned until they find Caution, under the Pain of Five thousand Merks not to do so in Time coming, or else to enact themselves to remove forth of the Kingdom, and not to return without his Majesty's Licence: And further, by the said Act, that Persons preaching, praying at, or convoking Field-conventicles, shall be punished with Death. And whereas the intruding into Churches and Pulpits, which are sacred and privileged Places, is a Practice most unwarrantable, and punishable as an high Invasion and Affront on his Majesty's Authority: Nevertheless it is of Verity, That upon the First, Second, or remanent Days of April, May, or June last, the Persons underwritten, Mrs. Alexander Lennox, David Williamson, Alexander Moncrief, John Rae, David Hume, Edward Jamison, James Frazer of Brae, William Wisheart, Thomas Hogg, Robert Lockhart, John Welwood, George Johnston, Robert Gillespie, James Kirkcoun, John Weir, ----- McKilligen in Ross, Nathanael Martin in Buchan, Andrew Donaldson in Dalgaty, John Chrystison in Cowpar, William Row, Thomas McGill, Thomas Urquhart, Thomas Hogg sometime Minister at Larber, William Erskine, James Donaldson, Patrick Gillespie, John Gray, James Wedderburn in Cowpar, John Wardlaw in Dumfermling, Thomas Douglas, George Campbell, Francis Irvine, James Wallace, Andrew Anderson, John Munniman, George Hamilton, Andrew Mortoun, Donald Cargill, Alexander Partoun, James Wilson, and Robert Maxwell elder and younger, have, in open and manifest Contempt of our Authority and Law, taken upon them to preach, expound Scripture, or pray at Conventicles in the Fields, at the Places following, at least in the Houses after specified, where there were more Persons present than the Houses contained, so as some were without Doors; at least did convocate Numbers of People to their Meetings, and have usurped and invaded divers Churches and Pulpits, viz. The said Persons have kept private Conventicles in Edinburgh, and convoked great Numbers of Persons thereunto, at Inverask, Chapel of Wolmet, Carstorphin, Restalrig, Borthwick, Kirklistoun, Gledsmuir, the Laird of Stevenson's Garner, Torwood, and divers other other Places in the Lothians, or near the said Places; as likewise at Pitcotty Muir, Raven-sheugh, Kinkell, Balmerinock, Kinnefwood, ----- beside Dysart, Glenveal, Sandford, Moonzie, Dumfermling, Dundee, Pittenweem, Lathones, East-barns, Dumfries, ----- in Perth Shire, ----- in Buchan, Magdalene Chapel in Edinburgh, in or near the Town of Glasgow, and at divers other Places, or one or other of them, or near to the same; and most presumptuously have invaded, or intruded themselves into the Pulpits and Churches of Cramond, Forgon, Kirkmabro, &c. whereby the said Persons have directly contravened the said Acts, and incurred the Penalties which should be executed with all Rigour to the Terror of others. And anent the Charge given to the forenamed Persons, at the Market-crosses of Edinburgh, Haddingtoun, Linlithgow, Stirling, Perth, Cowpar, and Lanerk, by Dispensation, because they have no Places of Residence, to have answered to the forelaid Complaint, and seen and heard such Order taken thereanent as appertains, under Pain of Rebellion; and being many Times called, and not compearing, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council ordain Letters to be directed to a Messenger at Arms, to denounce them his Majesty's Rebels, and to put them to the Horn.

Observations
upon it.

The abovementioned reverend Minister observes, these were the Witnesses now driven to the Wilderness, and their Ministry was a Kind of Outlawry; and that some of these worthy Persons cited and denounced, were dead, and got above the Rage of their Persecutors; others of them were preaching in Churches by virtue of the Council's Indulgence; and some of them had never offended since the King's Indemnity. However, they were put to the Horn, and their moveable Escheats declared to be fallen to the King; but I dare say neither he nor his Courtiers would be much enriched by them.

More Gentlemen in Fife fined a second Time for Con-
venticles.

Much better Hand was made with several Gentlemen at this Time. Accordingly, upon the 23^d of July, the Council fine Hary Pitcairn of Larestoun in Twelve hundred Pounds, ----- Pitcairn of Pitlour in Two thousand Merks, George Scot of Pitlochie in a Thousand Pounds, Charles Cowan of Corstoun in a Thousand Pounds, by and attour the Sums they were liable to and fined in for their being at Conventicles, upon the account of their harbouring and referting Mr. John Welsh. They were all cited to this Day, with some others, and whether they compeared or not it does not appear; the Council put themselves to no Trouble, Absents were held as confest, and such who were present, and refused to depone against themselves, were held as guilty, and committed to Prison until they paid their Fines.

At the same Diet of Council, the Magistrates of Perth are appointed to seize Mr. Alexander Moncrief an outed Minister, and they term him, A noted Keeper of Conventicles in and about Perth. Archibald Douglas of Cliftonhall is fined in Three hundred and eighty One Pounds upon his confessing he had been present at Conventicles. James Maxwell Provost of Auchtermuchty is fined in Two hundred fifty Two Pounds, for being at Conventicles; and the Council, upon the 28th of July, write a great many Letters to the Royal Burghs through the Kingdom, appointing them to put the Laws against Conventicles in strict Execution, and, in case of Failure, assuring them they will exact the Fines from them with all Rigour.

Powers given by the Council to several Persons in several Places, to prosecute for Con-
venticles.

These particular Acts of Severity by the Council themselves, did not fully satisfy the Enemies of the suffering Presbyterians; and now the Time of Vacation was drawing on, there-fore a new Project is fallen upon, for making the Persecution on the Score of Conventicles the more extensive, and a Commission is drawn in the King's Name, to several Persons in different Districts, with full Power to such as are named to execute the Laws against Nonconformity.

Their Commission and Names.

It may suffice to set down here the general Tenor of their Commission, and to give their Instructions at length, as they stand in the Council-registers. In the Commission running in the King's Name, His Majesty is made to take Notice, 'That after his gracious Indemnity March 24th, he expected a better Observation of the Laws; yet since that Time he finds that divers factious and seditious Persons have kept both House and Field-conventicles, and others presumed to invade Pulpits and Churches: Therefore, considering that the Laws in Time of Vacation may be best executed by Commission, he grants full Power to the Lord Chancellor, Earls of Mar, Kinghorn, Kelly, Weems, and Kincardin, the Treasurer-depute, and Laird of Ardrors, or any Three of them, to execute the Laws against Conventicles, irregular Baptisms and Marriages, in the Shires of Fife and Kinross, to cite, examine, fine, confine, and imprison, and to do all Things necessary for punishing Disorders: to the Chancellor, Duke Hamilton, Lord Privy Seal, Earls of Argyle, Mar, Linlithgow, Dumfries, to the Lords Dundonald, and Ross, or any Three of them, for the Bounds of Stirling, Perth, Lanerk, Dumbarton, Renfrew, and Air Shires: And their first Meeting is appointed at Stirling, August 18th. And lastly, to the Chancellor, Earls of Caithness, and Linlithgow, Lord Belhaven, Lord Register, Advocate, Collingtoun, and the Laird of Niddry, or any Three of them, for Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Haddingtoun, Selkirk, Peebles, Berwick, and Roxburgh Shires.'

Instructions
given them.

This Commission bears the Date of July 30th, and the following Instructions are given to the Commissioners.

'1st, You are to take special Care and Notice of, and proceed most vigorously against such Persons as you find to have been most eminent in keeping Conventicles, invading of Kirks and and Pulpits, and Ringleaders thereto, and those who have convocated Persons thereto, and that you begin with the most substantial Persons.

2^{thly}. You are to proceed against some of the most substantial Persons, or others, who have been in use to frequent publick Ordinances, and of late have withdrawn.

3^{thly}. In Cases where you find Persons to have been seduced to disorderly Practices, and have not been engaged therein upon any Principles of Disaffection to the present Government, and where they are content to engage for their good Behaviour in Time coming, you are impowered to remit somewhat of the Rigour of the Law; or if you find Cause, to pass them altogether.

4^{thly}. You are to call for an Account from the Sheriffs and others, anent the signing the late Bond against Conventicles.

5^{thly}. You are impowered to call for any Part of the standing Forces or Militia, as shall be within the Bounds of your Commission, and give them such Orders and Directions as you shall think fit.

6^{thly}. You are impowered to alter or change the Quarters of the Forces in the Bounds of your Commission.

7^{thly}. You are to correspond, as you find needful, with the other Commissioners.

8^{thly}. At your first Meeting appoint one to be Convener.

9^{thly}. You shall do all Things necessary for the effectual Prosecution of the King's Service, which you shall judge most fit, and for settling the Peace of the Country.

10^{thly}. You are to call before you such of the indulged Ministers as have broken their Confinement, and take such Course with them as you shall think fit.

Jointly with this Commission and Instructions, the Council appoint the Advocate to issue out Warrants to cite all Persons concerned, before these Commissioners; and he is to restrict the Libel to an arbitrary Punishment, that so they may hold the Persons not swearing against themselves as confess.

No Accounts of the particular Procedure of these Commissioners are come to my Hand. The Reader will notice, there are none of the Bishops mixed in with them, and it is probable their Procedure was not the more severe that it was so: Their Instructions are more moderate than usual at this Time, and since I have no Accounts of their Severity, there is Ground to think more Temper hath been kept at this Time than we shall meet with afterwards.

Upon the last of July, the Council write up another Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale, giving an Account of their Procedure since their last of this Nature, and I shall insert it here, as their own Account of what I have been pointing at. It contains some Things relative to Matters of Fact, which will come to be accounted for in the following Section, but I give the Whole of it as it stands in the Records.

Council's Letter to Lawderdale, giving a further Account of their Procedure.

Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale, July ult. 1674.

May it please your Grace,

Our Letter to your Grace, of the 2^d of July, did contain a particular Relation of our Proceedings until that Day, and seeing his Majesty hath required us to give constant Accounts to your Grace of what passes here, we return this further Account of our Proceedings since that Time, to offer to his Majesty, as your Grace shall have Opportunity.

There being about Forty four outed Ministers cited before us, as guilty of keeping Conventicles, and none of them having compeared, Letters are directed to denounce them. And there being Eighty Persons or thereby, in Fife, cited for Conventicles, such as did compear, and were found guilty, were fined, and imprisoned; and the rest being absent, are declared Fugitives, and their Escheats are appointed to be taken for his Majesty's Use. Some likewise of the Heritors of Fife, who had been formerly fined for Conventicles, being procesed for resetting Mr. John Welsh, upon Confession thereof are fined upon that account, and are to continue in Prison till they make Payment of their Fines. The Magistrates of Glasgow being called for Conventicles, kept in their Burgh since the 24th of March last, were, upon their Confession, fined in a Hundred Pounds Sterling. We are proceeding in trying the tumultuary Meeting of Women, which was in the Parliament-clois: Some of them have of late been imprisoned, for refusing to depone concerning the Persons present, and other Circumstances of that Business, and the Absents are ordered to be denounced. These Burghs who were ordered to proceed against Conventicles, have, for the most part, returned a good Account of their Procedure and Diligence; and Letters are writ to the Magistrates of Burghs, on this Side of Tay, to the same purpose, requiring them to cause their Burgeses take the Bond subjoyned to the late Proclamation, and to return an Account thereof. Upon Information, that in some Shires the Oath of Allegiance was not taken by the Officers and Soldiers of the Militia, conform to the Act of Parliament

Parliament, Orders were given for a new Day's Rendezvous, that the Oath might be taken, and the Militia Arms in the Shire of Stirling, which, by Order, were secured in the Castle of Stirling, and these of Dumbarton secured in the Castle of Dumbarton, are ordered at the Rendezvous to be restored, and the Heritors required to be answerable for them. And to the end his Majesty's standing Forces may be always in readiness to do their Duty, and to prosecute such publick Orders as shall be given them, we have ordered any Parties of them who are quartering for Excise, and others his Majesty's Dues, to be called in; and appointed that the Militia Forces, in Time coming, shall be only made Use of to quarter for these Dues. We have recommended to the Archbishops and Bishops, in their Dioceses respectively, to take Notice of any Persons who take upon them, without Licence, to teach publick Schools, to be Chaplains to Families, or to be Pedagogues to the Children of Persons of Quality, contrary to the Act of Parliament, and to report their Names to us betwixt and the 1st of November. We have caused intimate his Majesty's Pleasure, express in his Letter of the 10th Instant, to the Bishop of Dumblain, Mr. Turner, Mr. Robertson, Mr. Cant, and Mr. Hamilton, and required them to give Obedience accordingly. We have, for the better Discovery of the Persons guilty, and for preventing the like Disorders for the Time coming, granted Commission to some of our Number, within certain Bounds, to proceed according to Law, against Persons guilty of Conventicles, Invasions of Ministers and Pulpits, and other Disorders mentioned in the Commission, who are to meet in Time of Vacance, and to them we have given special Instructions; which Commissioners are to meet at Edinburgh, Stirling, and Cowpar, the 18th of August next.' We are

Your Grace's, &c.

The King orders more Forces to be raised.

In the Month of August, the Council have a Recess, and do not meet till their Members return from the several Bounds whither their Commissions above narrated carried them: But, in the Beginning of September, I find them together again, and a Letter from the King is read, 'commending their Diligence against Conventicles, and acquainting them, that for the strengthening their Hands under him, in maintaining the Laws and Government, he resolved to raise some more Forces, and orders them to raise a Thousand Foot, and Three Troops of Horse.' This Letter bears Date August 25th. Whether this was to gratify some People who could not be otherwise provided for than in an Army, in a Time of full Peace, at the Expence of the Country, or for some other end, I know not. The suffering Party were more and more harassed by this increasing of the standing Forces.

Warrant to apprehend several Persons for a Conventicle.

This same Day, September 1st, the Council grant Warrant to apprehend Mungo Lockhart of Harwood, William Liston of Collunum Easter, George Tennant and John Brown in Calder, who were informed against, as having been at a Conventicle lately in Calder-muir, and to have resisted a Party of the Guards who came to dissipate them. What followed upon this Warrant, I know not; no more about these Persons occurs in the Registers.

Hornings to be granted, upon the Decrees of inferior Magistrates, for Conventicles.

At the same Sederunt, the Council ordain Letters of Horning to be directed by their Authority, upon the Decrees of all Sheriffs, Bailies of Regalities, and all other inferior Magistrates, against Persons guilty of being at Conventicles, and other such Disorders, and grant Warrant to the Clerks for that effect.

Commissioners appointed by the Council, as above, and a new Instruction given, in case a Defence be proposed hactenus judicata.

Upon the 2^d of September, they receive the Report of the Procedure of the several Commissions granted in July against Conventicles, and approve the Commissioners, and add some others to their Number; and, in answer to a Difficulty proposed from some of them, they appoint, 'That whereas it hath occurred, and may hereafter occur, That Persons cited to appear before the said Commissioners, may propound their Defence, quod res est hactenus judicata, they having been already pursued before other competent Judges; the Lords declare, if the Defences propounded be by any other than the Party cited and compearing, they are to be repelled, and Certification granted notwithstanding thereof: But if the Parties be compearing, the Commissioners, before Answer, are to examine whether they have been fined and proceeded against according to the Act of Parliament, and if they have made real Payment of their Fines, and such other Circumstances as they shall think fit; and thereafter to sustain or repel the said Defence, as they shall find Cause.' It appears hard enough to reject the Defences given in for the Pannels, merely because they themselves were absent, having little Ground to expect they would be judged twice for the same supposed Crime: And these Commissioners were thus made a new Inquisition, after the Severities formerly exercised.

King's Letter to Council, Sept. 22. mostly about Mr. Lord Cardross.

Towards the Close of this Month, September 29th, the Council meet again, and have a Letter from the King, of the Date of the 22^d of September, read, writ, no doubt, upon Informations sent up by private Letters to Court. His Majesty expects special Diligence to be used anent a Conventicle near the Border of West Lothian, where some armed Men fired upon the Guards. I take it to have been the abovespecified at Calder-muir. It is his Pleasure they take particular Notice of the Conventicles, and other unlawful Practices at or near Cardross: He adds That

That he is informed that some of his Guards, by their Order, apprehended one King, who was set at Liberty on Caution to appear ; and seeing the Lord Cardrofs did, in a peremptory Petition, complain of that Man's being taken, who he owned to be his Domestick, the Council are ordered to require that Lord to bring him back to Prison, and not to give over till that Business of countenancing and keeping Conventicles, at or near Cardrofs, be exactly tried according to Law.

Accordingly, that excellent Person the Lord Cardrofs appears before them October 1st, and is appointed to produce Mr. John King against November. He answered, What the Council demanded was not in his Power ; and that the Council, by their Orders, had taken Mr. King from him ; and, after imprisoning him for some Time, liberated him, and since that Time he was not in his Service. Mr. King for some Time elcaped their Fury, but afterwards, as we shall hear, fell a Sacrifice, and my Lord wanted not After-harassings.

The Lord Cardrofs appears, October 1.

At the same Diet of Council, they approve the Proceedings of their Commissioners for Conventicles, and Hugh Stevenson, one of their Clerks, had the Fine of Five hundred Merks gifted him, which was uplifted from Mr. John King's Cautioner, for his Noncompearance when called, according to the Bond given for him.

In December, Claud Hamilton of Barns, in the Shire of Dumbarton, applies to the Council, for a Stop to be put to the Diligence gone out against him. This Gentleman had been fined by the Bailie of the Regality of Kilpatrick, in a Fourth Part of his Rent, for his being at one Conventicle in a House, and had paid his Fine. The Commissioners who met at Stirling, having called him before them, and he, knowing he had already satisfied the Law for that supposed Crime, did not compear, and was denounced. The Council are so just as to put a Stop to the Letters against him.

Case of Hamilton of Barns.

Upon the 3^d of December, Henry Angus and James Jaffrey were brought before the Council. When they appeared before the Commissioners at Stirling, they had no Evidence against them of their being at Conventicles, and refer the Matter to their Oath : These Two Men refused to swear against themselves, and had been remitted to this Diet of the Council. The Lords ordain them to be banished from the Shires where they live.

Thus the Reader hath a pretty full Account of the Procedure of the Managers against Conventicles this Year. I come now forward to touch at some other Occurrences in this Period.

S E C T. II.

Containing an Account of several other Occurrences this Year 1674.

IN this Section I come to glean up some further Things which fell out this Year ; most of them have a Reference to suffering Presbyterians, and any other Thing I notice shall be only what is necessary to clear up their State and Circumstances.

Subject Matter of this Section.

Some particular Hardships upon Ministers and Preachers in the Beginning of this Year, deserve the Reader's Notice. Upon the 8th of January, Mr. Matthew M'Kail, of whom some Account hath been given already, was liberate from Prison, where he had been for some Time ; upon his refusing to engage not to Preach, he was confined to the Parish of Carlouk, and Bond was given for him that he should appear before the Council when called.

Mr. Matthew M'Kail confined to Carlouk.

Towards the Beginning of February, Mr. James Mitchel, of whom before, was taken, and committed to close Prison. The best Account I can give of the Procedure against him at this Time, is from Two Letters writ by the Lord Haltoun to the Earl of Kincardin, and from the Council and Justiciary Registers. The first Letter runs,

Mr. James Mitchel taken in February.

Holy-rood-house, February 10th, 1674.

UPON Saturday Morning, one Mr. James Mitchel, who was alledged to have assassinated the Archbishop of St. Andrews, was discovered and taken by Sir William Sharp and Two of his Brother's Servants, and was by the Chancellor's Order made close Prisoner. This Day, by Order of the Council, he was examined by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Register, Lord Advocate and me, and stiffly denied the Assassination ; but being taken apart by the Chancellor, upon Assurance of his Life, he fell upon his Knees and confessed it was he who shot the Bishop of Orkney, but that he aimed at the Archbishop. The Double of the Confession signed by him and us, is here inclosed. I think his Punishment will be the Loss of his Hand, and perpetual Imprisonment in the Bass. I am, &c.

Mr. Mitchel
remitted to the Justiciary.

By the Council-registers, February 12th, 'Mr. James Mitchel, who was in the Rebellion 1666. and was imprisoned for the Assassination intended against the Bishops of St. Andrews and Orkney, is remitted to the Justiciary, and the Advocate is ordered to pursue him.' The other Letter of my Lord Haltoun refers to this, and I insert it here.

Holy-rood-house, February 12th, 1674.

Another Letter,
Haltoun to Kincardin, about his Sentence.

THIS Day Mr. Mitchel, who assassinated the Archbishop, was examined again in Face of Council, and said nothing but what he said to us in the Committee. He is remitted to the Justice-court to receive his Indictment and Sentence, to have his right Hand cut off at the Cross of Edinburgh, and the Forfeiture of his whole Goods and Posterity. This last Part is not to be put in Execution till His Majesty be acquainted, because Assurance of Life was given him upon his Confession. The cutting off his Hand is to be executed by the Hand of the Hangman. I am, &c.

Mr. Mitchel's
Indictment.

App. N^o. 65.

From the Justiciary-records, I find Mr. Mitchel is brought before that Court upon March 2^d this Year, and an Indictment and Libel is produced against him and read, which I have insert, App. N^o. 65. The Substance of it, and Reasonings upon it, will come in Four Years after this, at his second Process; and I shall here say no more of it, but only that Mr. Mitchel denied his Libel, and offered himself to Probation, knowing it could not be proven, being advised not to lay too much Weight upon the Assurance of his Life given him. The Lords of Justiciary continue this Affair until the 25th of March.

Mean while, upon the 12th of March, the Council have this Matter again before them, and come to pass the following Act; which as giving a short View of this Matter, and what afterwards was refused, tho' it stands yet in the Registers from which I extract this Copy faithfully, is proper to be insert here.

Edinburgh, March 12th, 1674.

Council's Act
about Mr. Mitchel,
March 12,
afterwards refused when pleaded in his Process.

The Lord Commissioner his Grace, and Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having appointed a Committee of Council to examine Mr. James Mitchel Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, the said Mr. James being brought before the said Committee, did make a free and voluntary Confession of his Accession to the Rebellion, and rising in Arms in the West; and that after he had Notice of the same, he went from Edinburgh with Colonel Wallace and others, and joyned the Rebels there, and from thence came alongst, and was with them until the Night before the Fight at Pentland-hills; and that at the Desire of Captain Arnot he came then to Edinburgh to speak to some Persons there concerning them: And being examined upon the Attempt made upon the Person of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, and who shot the Pistol at the said Archbishop, when the Bishop of Orkney was hurt, in the Month of July 1668. he did declare, that at that Time, and in the Day the said Attempt was made, he was in the Town of Edinburgh, and that he had bought the Pistol which was about him, charged with Three Balls when he was apprehended, at that Time the Bishop was shot, from Alexander Logan Dogmaker in Leith-wynd; but refused that he was the Person who made the said Attempt, until having retired with one of the said Committee, he did confess upon his Knees he was the Person, upon Assurance given him, by one of the Committee, as to his Life, who had Warrant from the Lord Commissioner and Secret Council to give the same, and thereafter did freely confess before all the Lords of the said Committee, that he shot the said Pistol at the said Archbishop, and did subscribe his Confession in Presence of the said Committee, which is also subscribed by them. And thereafter the said Mr. James, in Presence of the Commissioner his Grace, and Council, did renew and adhere to the said Confession, both as to the Accession to the Rebellion, and the Attempt foresaid, and acknowledged he made the said Attempt, because he thought the said Archbishop had a Hand in troubling and persecuting those that were in the Rebellion. Nevertheless, being brought before the Lords of the Justiciary, and asked if he did own the Confession foresaid, he did altogether refuse to answer and adhere to the said Confessions, notwithstanding he was told by the Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, that if he would adhere to the said Confessions, he should have the Benefit of the said Assurance, and if otherwise, he should lose the same: Therefore the Lord Commissioner his Grace, and Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, do declare that they are free, and that the said Mr. James ought not to have the Benefit of any such Promise or Assurance, and that the same is altogether void, and the Lords of the Justiciary and the Assize ought to proceed without any Respect to the same. And further declare, that the said Mr. James Mitchel is the Person intended, and meant in the Proclamations in the Year 1666 and 1667. discharging any Intercommuning with the Rebels therein mentioned, and excepting the said Mr. James and other Persons therein from his his Majesty's Favour and Indemnity, and no other under the Name of Mr. James Mitchell, though there had been any other of that Name involved in the Rebellion. 1674.

Matters being thus prepared for the severe Procedure of the Criminal Court, upon the 25th of March Mr. Mitchell comes again before them, and now he must adhere to his judicial Denial of all libelled against him; and there being no Probation besides his foresaid Confession now retracted, the Lords of Justiciary, with Consent of his Majesty's Advocate, desert the Diet, and Mr. Mitchell, after continuing some Time in Prison, is sent to the Bass, and his Business is still put off from Time to Time until January 1678. when we shall meet with him again.

The last particular Prosecution in the Entry of this Year which I name, is of the pious and learned Mr. Thomas Forester, since the Revolution Professor of Divinity in the University of St. Andrews, whose Memory is favourable in this Church, and who being dead yet speaketh, by his solid and learned Writings against Episcopacy. This excellent Man had for some Years been under Difficulties to joyn with the present Constitution of the established Church, and the longer he made his Observations upon the Procedure and Practices of the Prelates and their Underlings, the greater his, and several other worthy Mens Scruples anent Conformity, came to be: And last Year he came to part with them, and this Year his Persecution begins.

Mr. Forester had his pastoral Charge at Alva, in the Presbytery of Stirling, and since the Beginning of the last Year he had deserted their Meetings; whereupon their Clerk, by their Order, sends the following Letter to him, dated August 7th, 1673.

Reverend Sir,

YE being absent Yesterday on whom the Addition lay, notwithstanding the Presbytery was informed, that ye was in the Town the Night before, and have been several Days absent from the Presbytery formerly; the Presbytery hath appointed you the Exercise the next Day, and that upon Coloss. 3. 12. and hath ordained me their Clerk to advertise you thereof, and of the Diet of the Presbytery, which is Yesterday come Twenty Days, or the Twentieth and Sixth of August Instant: With Certification, if ye do not keep the said Diet, or give not a reasonable Excuse for your Absence, the Presbytery will take such Course, because of your Contumacy, as is incumbent. Thus much from,

Sir,

Your humble Servant,
Mr. Alexander Murray Pr. Clerk.

To this Letter Mr. Forester made a Return upon the 26th of August, which I give from a large manuscript Account, which passed 'twixt him and the Conformists, left by this excellent Person, and kindly communicated to me by his Son the Laird of Dunaven. And it follows.

To the Moderator and Brethren of the Exercise at Stirling.

IN answer to your Letter of the Date August 7th, about my keeping the Exercise, and your noticing and threatening me anent my withdrawing from the Meetings now some considerable Time; I have resolved, (instead of that full enlarged Account, which I have ready in a Paper by it self) at this Time, to give you by these a Hint of my Reasons in general. First, It is evident by the present standing Acts touching Religion and Church-government, that all Power or Jurisdiction in the Church, or its Assemblies, either diathecick, critick, or dogmatick, is fountained in, derived from, and ultimately referable unto the Magistrate's Civil Power, which Frame I judge to be contrary to the Word of God, the Confessions of Reformed Churches, and our own Church's Judgment, consequently the keeping of the Meetings, (a Badge of the Acknowledgment of the Lawfulness of this Frame) to be unlawful; this Frame of Church-government being clearly proven unlawful, by such as have written against Eraastianism. Secondly, I find, since our first Reformation, several Oaths, Vows, and solemn Engagements upon this Church and Nation, against the Prelatick Frame of Government, the Obligation whereof I could never find convincingly disproved, but upon some Search am perswaded, that the same are still binding on the Nations and Posterity. Thirdly, Upon some Search into the Controversy of Church-government, I have for a considerable Time entertained the Perswasion of the Unlawfulness of the Prelatick Frame, as contrary unto the Prescriptions in point of Government set down in the Word. If these Foundations hold, the Unlawfulness of the Meetings cannot be questioned; and so long as I am thus perswaded, I cannot attend them in Faith: He that 1674. ' but doubteth, is damned if he eat, and such as walk in Darkneſs know not whither they ' go, and will lie down in Sorrow in the Evening of their Day. Upon your Demand, I ſhall ' exhibit theſe Grounds ſomewhat enlarged in a Paper I thought to have ſent incloſed, where-

' in, if upon Peruſal, ye ſhall diſcover Miſtake, either as to Matter of Fact, or Conſequen-' ces therefrom deduced, I ſhall heartily embrace the Conviction thereof. So remitting the ' Premiſſes to your ſerious and impartial Conſideration, reſts'

Alva, Auguſt 26th, 1673.

Yours in all Duty,

Thomas Foreſter.

App. N^o. 66.

The Paper referred to here, is too large to be inſert in the Body of this Hiſtory; but coming from ſo good a Hand, and at ſuch a Juncture, it deſerves a Room in the Appendix, and ſtands N^o. 66. There are Two Copies of it before me much to the ſame Purpoſe, the one deſigned for the Presbytery of Stirling, and the other enlarged a little, by way of a Teſtimony to the Work of Reformation, when he was forced to leave his Flock. That which is annexed will give the Reader a full View of this Matter. This Paper was never called for by the Brethren of the Exerciſe.

He leaves his Parſh, and joyns the perſecuted Miniſters, and preaches with much Succeſs.

His quitting their Meeting brought him very ſoon under the perſecuting Spirit of this Time, and Mr. Foreſter was obliged to quit his Charge at Alva, and he joyned in with the perſecuted Presbyterians, and preached, that is, kept Conventicles as Opportunities offered, and had perhaps as many Seals of his Miniſtry, and as much ſenſible Succeſs in Conversion, in Stirling Shire, Dumbarton Shire, and other Places, as many Miniſters in this Church.

He is taken in Stirling, February this Year, and ſent into Edinburgh, where he continues in Prison till the Indemnity.

In February 1674. he preached in ſome private Houſes in the Town of Stirling, and the Magiſtrates there found a way to diſcover where he was, and to apprehend him, of which they immediately diſpatched Accounts to Edinburgh. February 19th, the Council write a Letter of Thanks to the Magiſtrates of Stirling, for diſcovering a Conventicle kept there, and taking Mr. Thomas Foreſter at it: A Guard is likewiſe ſent to bring him Priſoner to Edinburgh, whither he came; and as the greater Compliment to theſe zealous Gentlemen at Stirling, the Council ſend Blanks to them to be filled up with Names and Charges, to bring in whom they pleaſe to Edinburgh. In Edinburgh Priſon Mr. Foreſter continued until the Indemnity in March, and upon the 26th he petitioned the Council, and was liberate.

The Synod of Dunkeld proceed againſt him.

When the State had indemnified this good Man, the Prelates and their Underlings begin their Attacks upon him; and the dioceſan Synod of Dunkeld, in April this Year, paſs a Sentence of Depoſition againſt him, which was intimated by a Meſſenger at Arms to him, and another Copy fixed to his Church-door. It deſerves a Room here.

Dunkeld, April 29th, 1674.

Their Sentence of Depoſition,
April 29. 1674.

W^Hilk Day the Moderator and remanent Brethren of the dioceſan Synod of Dunkeld, taking to their ſerious Conſideration the contumacious, diſorderly, and ſchiſmatical Carriage of Mr. Thomas Foreſter Miniſter at Alveth, in abſenting himſelf of a long Time from the Meetings of this Synod, and from the Meetings of the Presbytery of Stirling, whereof he is a Member, and under his Hand, in a Letter to the ſaid Presbytery, diſowning all our Church-judicatories, and declaring them to be unlawful, and their Exerciſe of Government and Diſcipline to be Eruiſtian, and that the politick Form of Government is contrary to many Oaths, Vows, and Engagements, which he is perſwaded are binding upon the Nations and Poſterity, which is contrary to his Engagements at his Ordination extant with us; and withal conſidering his unchriſtian and unnatural forſaking his Flock, and deſerting his Duty among them theſe Seven Months bypaſt, and that he ſeditiouſly and ſchiſmatically preacheth at Conventicles, within the Bounds of other Mens Charges, contrary to the Laws of God, and to the warrantable Laws, both Civil and Eccleſiaſtick, of this Church and Kingdom; for which ſeditious and wicked Practices he has been already apprehended and imprifoned by the Civil Magiſtrate, and being formerly cited to appear at the Meeting of our Synod in October laſt, as alſo legally ſummoned to compear before this Synod at this Diet, and being often called and not compearing: Therefore the Moderator and Brethren of the Synod, moved with Zeal to the Glory of God, and Care to ſuppreſs Schiſm, and to promote the Succeſs of the Goſpel of Chriſt, and the Peace of the Church, and to diſcountenance Diviſion and diſorderly Walking, and out of Pity of that poor People now of a long Time deſerted by him, and left to ſtarve and ſtray, and become a Prey to the Devil and his Inſtruments, do by theſe Preſents ſimply depoſe the ſaid Mr. Thomas Foreſter, from the Exerciſe of all Parts of the holy Function of the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, and declare the Church of Alveth, in which he formerly ſerved, to be now vacant; and ordain this our Sentence to be intimated.'

Mr. G. Haliburton Moderator.
Mr. Henry Malcom Clerk.

To

To this, in the Copy left with him, was annexed the Bishop's Ratification, which I likewise add.

1674.

WE Henry, by the Mercy of God Bishop of Dunkeld, having seen and seriously considered the above written Act of our Synod, deposing Mr. Thomas Forester Minister at Alveth, and the Grounds and Reasons thereof. We find the said Grounds very weighty and relevant, and the Sentence founded thereupon to be just and legal: Therefore we do ratify and approve the said Sentence, and interpose our Authority thereto, by these Presents subscribed with our Hands, at Meigle, the 4th of May, 1674.

Bishop's Ratification

Henry, Dunkeld.

When this Sentence came to Mr. Forester's Hand, he made large Remarks upon it and the Bishop's Ratification, by way of Queries, in several Sheets of Paper, which are so ample that they would take up too much Room even in the Appendix, but I find them compendized by himself in a Paper which he sends, 'twixt and the next Synod, to one of the Members thereof, and this I have added, App. 66. N^o. 2. This Paper gives Occasion to some Letters betwixt that Member of the Synod and Mr. Forester, in which this Matter is further handled. Those I must leave, as also some Letters, which in the Year 1678. passed 'twixt Mr. James Ramsay Bishop of Dumblain, and Mr. Forester, 'concerning the Lawfulness of Presbyterian Ministers their Preaching in their persecuted Condition, and the People's adhering to them, wherein the Bishop's Charge of Schism upon this Practice is examined, and countercharged upon the Prelatick Party, and the Consistency of those Things with all due Obedience to the Civil Magistrate is cleared and vindicated;' which contain a very distinct State of the Controversy betwixt Presbyterians and Scots Prelatists, and I wish they were more known.

Mr. Forester's Remarks on these.

App. 66. N^o. 2.

But I come to take a little more general View of Affairs this Year, as they relate to Presbyterians. Upon the 25th of January, the Council, by Order from above, in a Proclamation, adjourn the Parliament, after it had been called to a precise Day, and the King had signified it was shortly to meet.

The Parliament adjourned.

As soon as this Adjournment is known, Duke Hamilton, Tweddale, Dumfries, the Lairds of Polwart, Bonington, and some others, went up to Court, to deal with the King about the Grievances the Country was under. None of the Sides spoke any Thing of the far more valuable Interests of Religion, and so the Sufferers interested themselves very little in their Quarrels. The King blamed Duke Hamilton and his Party, for raising Heats in the Parliament at such a Juncture; yet he dismissed them fairly, with Promises that the Parliament should sit down in March, and all their Grievances be considered.

Duke Hamilton and others of his Side go to Court.

This Winter, and Beginning of the Spring, was an extraordinary Season for Frost and Snow, and generally People were hindred from Plowing till the 24th of March; and the third Part of the Cattle in Scotland were destroyed for Want. Those who went to London, hasted Home, to be present at the Parliament in March; but when they were met, the Commissioner Lawderdale, to their great Surprise, produced a Letter from the King adjourning the Parliament till October, and after this the Duke durst never venture upon another Scots Parliament.

An extraordinary Frost and Snow.

The Parliament adjourned in March, and did not meet for many Years.

Great and many were the Hopes and Projects of the Bishops at this Parliament; being encouraged by the King's Letter taken Notice of last Year, they had prepared several Papers, containing Grievances and Complaints against Presbyterians, to be laid before the Parliament, relative to their Preaching and administering Sacraments, and they expected to have got more severe Laws made against them.

The Prelates further Designs, against Presbyterians at the Parliament, broke.

Matter was not indeed wanting, for what the Prelates and their Party reckoned Grievances; At this Time, and since the last Indulgence Conventicles did grow sensibly; and altho' the Design of the Favour was to divide Presbyterians, yet the very Name of an Indulgence and Favour, was some Encouragement, and therefore the Bishops fretted at all Indulgences.

None of these Papers of Grievances, of which I am told there was great Care taken to gather up vast Numbers from all Corners, have come to my Hand, save the Paper drawn up by the Synod of Glasgow, at their Meeting, October 22^d last, as I suppose. The Copy I have wants the Date of the Year; but from the Matters of Fact complained of in it, and some other Circumstances, I have Ground to think it was drawn last Year, and designed for the Parliament in December, and when that failed, for this in March. I shall observe several Untruths in it afterwards, but it containing several Matters of Fact, I have not elsewhere met with as to the State of Presbyterians at this Time, and being a new Evidence of the Virulence of the Clergy against Presbyterian Ministers, the Reader will not grudge it a Room in this Place.

Grievances formed by the Diocesan Synod of Glasgow last Year in order to be tabled before the Parliament.

The Grievances given in by the several Presbyteries of the Diocese of Glasgow, to the Synod, October 22^d, and by them humbly represented to my Lord Commissioner his Grace, and Parliament, or their Lordships of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council.

I. THat the Conventicles still abound more publickly and avowedly, notwithstanding of all the Acts and Laws made against them; and these are kept both by Men that are indulged, and others who are not; yea, some who never entred upon Trials before any Church-judicatory, viz. In Glasgow, by Mr. Andrew Mortoun, Mr. Robert Law, Mr. Bartoun, Mr. Maxwel, Mr. Cargill, Mr. James Bell, Mr. John Burnet, Mr. A. McLean, Mr. James Wilson, and others, all indulged, and confined to other Places, yet residing within the Town of Glasgow; and Mr. Alexander Jamison late Minister at Govan, who keeps Conventicles every Lord's Day at Haggs, within the Parish of Govan: Also by Mr. Robert Maxwel younger, Mr. Matthew Crawford, Mr. James Wodrow, Mr. William Gilchrist, Mr. Robert Corbet, and others resident in Glasgow, who never passed their Trials in order to Preaching: Also in Paisly Presbytery, Conventicles kept in Eastwood, by Mr. Hugh Smith formerly Minister there, who hath settled himself beside the Church of Eastwood, and constituted Elders, administres Sacraments, and performs all the Ministerial Offices: Also in the Parish of Killellan, Mr. James Wallace, who kept still Conventicles there, till the indulged Minister came in, and has now laid in his Provision at Inchinnan, where he was some Time Minister, notwithstanding he was confined to Neilston, and labours by all Means, to break the Ministry of the present Incumbent there. In the Presbytery of Air, Mr. John Osburn every Lord's Day keeps Conventicles at Enterkin's House in Torboltoun, though he be confined to Dundonald; and by Mr. Anthony Schwarz at Knockdallen's House in Calmonel; he adventured also lately to preach at the Church of Balantree, though he be confined to Paisly: Also in the Presbytery of Dumbarton, Conventicles are kept by Mr. Thomas Melvil in the Parish of Kilpatrick Easter, by Mr. Hugh Smith, Mr. John Dickson, Mr. John Law, Mr. Matthew Crawford. Mr. James Hogg at Armonack, in the Parish of Kippen, goes about baptizing, administrating the Lord's Supper, through all the Bounds of the neighbouring Parishes of the Presbytery of Dumbarton. In the Presbytery of Lanerk, Conventicles are kept by Mr. James Greg at Boghall, though confined to Carstairs; by Mr. Patrick Anderson at the same Place, though confined to Longdregghorn; and Mr. John Menzies, some Time conform Minister at Carlaveroch, at Crawford-lindsay.

II. Indulged Brethren keep not the Rules given by the Council, but travel through the Country, baptize, catechize, marry, administrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to the People of our Charge, without Testimonials from us, and some of them baptize all the Children of neighbouring Congregations; as in Torboltoun and Barnwell, Mrs. John Hutchison, Hugh Campbell, James Veitch, as also these who officiate at Eglisbam, Paisly, and Mr. James Hutchison of Killellan, Mr. Simpson at Kilmacomb, Mr. Stirling at Kilbarchan. And Mr. John Law, Mr. John Baird, Mr. William Eccles, baptize Children and marry Persons from the Presbytery of Dumbarton; Mr. Anthony Murray at Coulter, Mr. John Crawford and Mr. William Bailly at Lamingtoun, Mr. John Hamilton at Carmichael, Mr. Robert Miller at Ochiltree, Mr. John Reid at Muir-kirk, Mr. Alexander Stevenson at Dalmellington. These Two last are continued in their Charges by Connivance.

III. There are some Conventiclers have erected Preaching-houses, viz. at Glasgow, the House of Mr. Blackwel the Calender, sometime hired Soldier to Cromwel; Mr. Drew in the said City; in the Barony Parish, and in Newtoun in Gabriel Thomson's, and another in Kippoch in John Baxter's House.

IV. A Conventicle lately kept at Kilsyth, in Thomas Russel's House, where the Preacher cursed the King, and his Council, and the whole Royal Family, saying, David did not sin in cursing his Enemies; and therefore, neither do we in praying that God would destroy our King, and pull him off his Throne. He was apprehended therefore, and some of his Hearers gave Bond and Caution to produce him upon Demand.

V. It is universally regreted, that Noblemen and Gentlemens Sons Governors are ill principled, and abuse the Youth, not only withdrawing themselves, but their Pupils also from Ordinances; and when they are challenged here at Glasgow, they take away their Pupils to Edinburgh and other Colleges. The like is done by Chaplains, who pervert the Families they officiate in.

VI. Generally, not only Conventiclers, but indulged Ministers preach Sedition, and pray to the same Purpose; and, in their Apologies at their Entry, avow publickly that they owe neither to the King nor his Council their Entry to their Charges; as Mr. Nasmyth at Glasford, Mr. Stirling at Kilbarchan, Mr. Wallace at Larges, and others.

VII. Heritors

VII. Heritors and Elders generally refuse to joyn with the conform Ministers, in administering Discipline, and collecting for the Poor.

VIII. Quakers do generally abound in Wester-Leinzie, and have Meetings every Lord's Day, both there and at Glasford, and other Places.

IX. Diets of Catechizing are not kept, but generally slighted: Ministers in their Visits to the sick, are not admitted, and offering to examine, are denied; and that even by some, who, out of the Example of the Recusancy of others, are worn atheistical, and disown Ordinances altogether.

X. Sheriffs, Bailies, Magistrates of Burghs, when desired, do not concur to cause scandalous Delinquents give Obedience to Church-discipline.

XI. Suspensions are frequently granted after Hornings given for the Payment of Ministers Stipends, without Consignation, as in the Case of the Minister of Dalrymple.

XII. That Fabricks of Churches are like to go to Ruin, unless Heritors be obliged to see timeously to it.

XIII. That the Church of Barnwell is ordered to be suppressed by a Decreet of the Commission for Plantation of Churches, without a Report of Perambulation of the Bounds, for the Conveniency of the People, by the Bishop and Presbytery, or any Regard had to the Settlement of Mr. Kincaid present Minister there; though he compeared by Mr. John Kincaid his Procurator, and protested to the contrary, which is not noticed in the Extract of the Decreet, though it was appointed to be done by the Commission.

XIV. That not only the indulged Ministers do not preach on the 29th of May, but sundry others unconformed, who have continued in their Places by Connivance, and obeyed the Law formerly, this last Year have forborn, through the Example of the indulged Brethren.

XV. Several horrid Crimes are committed at Conventicles, as Incest, Bestiality, Murder of Children, in the Presbyteries of Air and Lanerk, besides frequent Adulteries, and other Acts of Wickedness, as our Registers at more length bear; particularly, one who was apprehended, and confest Bestiality at Lanerk, and was let go without any Punishment.

XVI. And there is nothing more grievous than that Papists are daily increasing, without Controul, or Execution of the Law against them, especially in the Presbytery of Hamilton, as that Register at full length bears.

And to sum up all, we cannot but mourn, and do heartily testify to all the World, but more especially to your Lordship, that all Laws made heretofore against these, would not have been so contemned, were it not for the irregular Ministers, and Multitude with whom we have to do; so that in the Issue they have proven, to the great Dishonour of God, and our Disadvantage, altogether ineffectual; and this only from a perverse Principle of habitual Disobedience in the Ministers and People, which, as we wish God to remove, so we heartily pray and beseech your Grace to consider.

The Spirit of Bitterness which appears in the Conclusion of this Paper, as well as in other Parts of it, may be enough to preserve the Reader from crediting a Party of Men who were willing to believe every Thing that was ill of Presbyterian Ministers and People, and save me the Trouble of making Remarks upon this Collection of Grievances. The Title of the Paper shews, that one way or other the Clergy were resolved to have this Libel before the Government. The first Article contains an evident Untruth, That Conventicles were kept by severals who never passed their Trials in order to Preaching, such as Mrs. Maxwell, Crawford, Wodrow, Corbet, and others. 'Tis very true these Persons did not pass their Trials before the Bishop or his Presbytery, but 'tis as certain they were examined and licensed by the remaining Presbyterian Ministers, according to the Acts of General Assemblies, and the Rules of this Church; and several of their Licences I have seen, and they can yet be produced, to give the Lie to this Paper. I have no Doubt but the Fourth Article is equally false; and doubtless if it had been true, the Name of the Person would have been given, and somewhat more than this general Account of no Body knows who. The Fifth Article is very improbable, That universally these who had the Care of Noblemens Children and Gentlemen, were all Presbyterians. The Fifteenth is altogether calumnious, and brings to my Mind the Reproaches cast upon the Meetings of the primitive Christians by their virulent Persecutors. It is from such Innuendo's as are cast together here, that that viperous Pamphlet, The Spirit of Popery speaking out of the Mouths of Phanatical Protestants, was patched up some Years after this; to which I have seen a very full Answer in Writ, by the Reverend and Learned Mr. Matthew Crawford beforementioned, wherein the wicked Forgeries and Lies at this Time and afterward, palmed upon Presbyterians, are fully exposed and refuted. In short, many of these Articles, Part of the First, the Second, Third, and others of them, are owned by the suffering Presbyterians, as Practices upon which they did suffer, and what they reckoned agreeable to their Principles. Other Articles do not at all concern them, and some are absolutely false and calumnious.

Whether this Paper of Grievances was presented, I do not know; it could not come before the Parliament, and if it was laid before the Commissioner and Council, nothing was done at this Time. The Broils and bold Steps now taking in England, and the Divisions 'twixt the Two Dukes in Scotland, were Rubs in the Way of gratifying the persecuting Clergy: Neither of the Parties were reckoned friendly to Presbyterians, and yet it was believed both of them connived at the Growth of Conventicles, hoping to blame each other, as the Cause of this, to the King.

Mean while, the Dissatisfaction of the common People, at the Incumbents forced in upon them in several Places, began to appear. Upon the 12th of March, I find the Council order some Persons in the Parish of Libbertoun, to be pilloried in Edinburgh and at Libbertoun, for a Riot, alledged by them to be committed upon some Ministers ordaining a Minister to that Kirk. And much about the same Time, an Attempt was made upon Mr. Alexander Gatherer, as going to preach in the Kirk of Girvan, in the Shire of Air; of which I find a Complaint made to the Council, but no Account of the Issue. And upon the 19th of the same Month, several Prisoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, put in for Disorders, are gifted by the Council to Captain James Hay, to be Recruits to a Regiment he was concerned in in France. Whether these Disorders were Church-irregularities, I know not; but 'tis not improbable they were, since it was these that filled Prisons mostly now, and after this.

Before Lawderdale left Scotland, and quit this misgiving Session of Parliament, he was pleased to compliment the Nation with an Act of Grace and Indemnity from the King his Master, upon the 24th of March. A Copy of it is annexed, App. N^o. 67. This was published at Edinburgh with a great deal of Solemnity, by the Heralds, and the Magistrates attending in their Robes.

In the forementioned Paper, entituled, Scotland's Grievances by reason of the Duke of Lawderdale's Ministry, several Remarks are made upon this Indemnity, as illegal and injurious, which need not a Room here. It is plain this Favour is cramp, and not at all full: However, the common People in Scotland lookt upon it as an Encouragement as to the Time to come, as well as a Remission for what was past, in their following Conventicles; and it may be the Duke designed somewhat of this by it. It was confidently talked, That his Grace, before he left Edinburgh, did secretly encourage Conventicles, and promised Presbyterian Ministers a full and ample Liberty without Restrictions and Exceptions; and this was the real Spring of their taking so much Liberty this Year. And yet when he got up to the King, the Blame of them was laid upon the other Party who stood by Duke Hamilton; and Letter upon the Back of Letter, as we heard, was sent to the Council, to bear them down.

After the Adjournment of the Parliament, the Commissioner goes up to Court, and Duke Hamilton followed him, and got Access to the King, to whom he spoke very freely of Lawderdale's Mismanagements, and begged a Day might be appointed wherein he might lay before the King a larger Detail of what he had to say against him, and anent the Grievances Scotland was groaning under, and begged the Duke might be present, and as many others as his Majesty thought proper. The King heard all, and desired the Duke of Hamilton to give in Writing what he had to say, and promised to consider it; but declined to hear Reasonings and Discourses upon these Heads. This was a plain Dilator, and the Duke having no Scots Lawiers with him, and being uncertain how far Expressions in Writ might militate, or be improven against him, took his Leave, and moved no further at this Time.

Lawderdale continued so well with the King, that upon the 19th of May a Proclamation comes out, dissolving the Parliament: The Reason given, is the Peace now concluded with the States of the United Provinces; but such was the Sense of Liberty that wrought among Members, and so deeply laid was the Design of freeing themselves from the Burdens the Country was under, that the Duke durst not venture upon any more Scots Parliaments, and we had none for many Years. Towards the End of May, he procured a new modelled Council, and there were even Changes made in England, and Ashley-cowpar who had accused him to the King, the Earl of Carlisle, and some others upon that Lay, were turned out. In the new Commission for Counsellors, which was opened June 4th, several of Duke Hamilton's Party were left out, as Tweddale, Queensberry, Yester, Dumfries, Roxburgh, and some others. In their Room were put in Kinghorn, Mar, Wigtoun, Collingtoun, Craig, Ross, and some others. Duke Hamilton himself was kept in, but came little to the Council for a long Time, and was never much in Favour this Reign or the following.

The Proceedings of this new Council have been pretty largely accounted for upon the former Session, and I shall not resume them. Upon the 18th of June, I find a very long Letter of Approbation of the Duke of Lawderdale's Proceedings, recorded in the Council-registers. Thus for a while he carried all before him, and the Party who opposed him were forced to be silent.

When the Council met, June 4th, an Incident happened which made a great deal of Noise, and was one Article in most of the Letters which came from the King to the Council this Summer, the tumultuary Meeting of Women in the Parliament-clois. The Matter was thus, This was a Time when Men durst not appear in petitioning the Council, unless they resolved to go to Prison, and to have Quarrels picked with them; and therefore a good Number of Women in the City of Edinburgh resolved to appear for the Gospel, and try how far a Petition from them might have Weight, at least to discover the Inclinations of many for some Liberty to Presbyterian Ministers; and accordingly drew up and signed the following Petition.

Unto the Right Honourable the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council,

The humble Supplication of several Women of the City of Edinburgh, in their own Name, and in the Name of many who adhere thereto,

Humbly sheweth,

That whereas your Petitioners being long deprived of the Blessing of a faithful publick Ministry, and of the Purity of Worship and Ordinances that God hath commanded, and after much sad suffering for Attendance thereupon in private; yet for some short while bygone, and in the Time when his Majesty's Commissioner was amongst us, your Lordships Petitioners have, without Molestation, enjoyed some small Liberty by his Majesty's gracious Connivance: Yet now we are sadly alarmed, that through the malicious and false Information given in by some of those who side with and serve the Bishops, your Lordships may be induced, to the Grief of the Hearts of many Thousands in this Land, to trouble the quiet Meetings of the Lord's People at his Worship.

The Women's Petition.

May it therefore please your Lordships to grant such Liberty to our honest Ministers, that are through the Land and in this City, that they may lawfully, and without Molestation exerce their holy Function, as the People shall in an orderly way call them; that we may, to the Comfort of our Souls, enjoy the rich Blessing of faithful Pastors, and that our Pastors may be delivered from any sinful Compliance with what is contrary to the known Judgment of honest Presbyterians. In doing whereof your Lordships will do good Service to God, and the King's Majesty, and deeply oblige all honest People in the Land. And your Petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

The severe Clauses in the King's Letter May 19th, formerly noticed, relative to Conventicles, put these Women in this Alarm they speak of; and about Fifteen of them, mostly Ministers Widows, engaged to present a Copy each of them to the principal Counsellors. Accordingly, when the Counsellors came up, they found the Parliament-clois almost filled with Women. The Primate came up with the Chancellor, and was in no small Confusion when he saw the Gathering, but stuck close by the Chancellor. Some of the Women called him Judas, and others Traitor, and one of them laid her Hand upon his Neck, and said, Ere all was done that Neck behoved to pay for it; but no further Violence was done. That good Woman Mrs. Livingstone, Relict of Mr. John Livingstone, of whom before, presented the Petition to the Chancellor. The Earl received it with Civility enough, and read it in the Place where it was delivered, and patiently heard what she had to add, for the Gentlewoman spoke very well and handsomly. He talked a little with some of the rest, and jested with them, and seemed not altogether displeased at the Fright the Bishop seemed to be under.

They present it to the Counsellors.

When the Counsellors got in, and found the Petition signed, it was voted a Crime and unwarrantable, and they called in about a Dozen of the Subscribers one by one. Upon Examination they all declared, that no Man had any Hand in the Petition, that they were moved thereto from the Sense of their perishing starved Condition, under the Want of the Gospel, having none to preach to them but ignorant and profane Men, whom they could not hear. Then they were put all together in a Room, and the Provost of Edinburgh was sent out to dismiss the rest, and oblige them to remove from the Doors: But they were peremptorily resolved not to withdraw till their Friends were sent out to them, and declared themselves willing to take one Lot with them. The Council when they heard this, were pleased to send the rest out; and so this Tumult, about which so much Noise was made, ended.

It is voted criminal and unwarrantable.

Next Council-day the Subscribers were all called, and upon their Noncompearance denounced, except Mrs. Margaret Johnstoun, a Daughter of the excellent Lord Waristoun, Mrs. Cleland, and Lilias Campbel. These Three, whether upon their answering the Citation, or otherwise, were seized, and cast into Prison. And I find the Council, June 25th, appointed the Earl of Lintirbgow, the Earl of Marishal, and some others, to examine them, and consider their Case, and report. And, July 7th, the Council order out Summons to some others they alledge had a Share in this Tumult. And, November 12th, Mrs. Elizabeth Ruthersford, ford, Mrs. Margaret Johnstoun, Lady Mersington, and several other Women concerned in the Tumult in the Parliament-clofs, are by the Council banished the Town of Edinburgh and Liberties thereof.

The Subscribers called next Council day, and Mrs. Margaret Johnstoun, Mrs. Cleland, and Lilias Campbel, imprisoned and some of them banished out of Edinburgh.

Many brought to Troubles and fined for Conventicles, and many denounced.

The Severities of the Managers this Summer, upon such as were alledged to have been at Field-conventicles, have been already narrated; and indeed every Week almost Letters came down from Court urging a violent Prosecution of them, and all the Blame of them was laid upon the Country-party, whereas 'tis generally thought that Lawderdale himself had as much encouraged Conventicles as any Body. Multitudes were fined through all the Corners of the Country. Many considerable Gentlemen in Fife were roughly handled; one paid Two Thousand Merks Fine, because his Lady had lodged Mr. Welsh one Night in his House, tho' the Gentleman knew nothing about it, and was abroad upon Business. And many were fined for being once present at Sermons in the Fields, when it may be they were very near their Houses. When this rigorous Way came to be known, not a few absented, and upon Non-compearance were denounced, and their moveable Escheat fell to the King. One Day a Paper was fixt upon the Parliament-house Door, containing upwards of an Hundred Persons whose Escheats were to be sold to any who would purchase them, and among them about Thirty Ministers, whose Escheats would not very much enrich the Courtiers. Such a Multitude of them had they upon their Hand, that they knew not what to do with them.

Quarreltoun confined to Paisly.

Some Hints of more particular Hardships of some Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, have come to my Hand, mostly from the Council-registers this Year, and shall give them in so many Words. Upon the 26th of March, the Laird of Quarreltoun, upon his Petition, gets his Confinement and Prison altered from Dumbarton to Paisly, and is allowed to walk Abroad, as above. Thomas Lennox and some others, who had been in Prison for Conventicles, the same Day are liberate, I suppose by virtue of the Indemnity.

Upon the 14th of July, Mr. Robert Law, who had been sometime Prisoner in Glasgow, for keeping of Conventicles, that is, preaching now and then in Houses, is ordered to be brought into Edinburgh; and the Council give Warrant to apprehend Mr. John King, Mr. John Wallace, and Mr. Andrew Barton, outed Ministers; and the Earl of Atbole is ordered to bring in the last to Edinburgh. July 21st, Mr. James Drummond, who had been some Time imprisoned in Edinburgh Tolbooth for Preaching in Families, is set at Liberty. July 28th, Mr. Robert Law, Mr. John Law, Mr. John King, Prisoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, for Preaching, appear before the Council, and are discharged to keep Conventicles, under Certification of being reputed, punished, and pursued as seditious Persons, and are obliged to give each of them Bond and Caution for Five Thousand Merks, to appear when called.

September 29th, William Drummond of Cromlicks, sometime ago a Major-general, is ordered to enter Prisoner into Dumbarton Castle. I do not know what the Managers had to lay to his Charge, but I hear it was Converse with intercommuned Persons, and he was reputed to have a warm Side to the persecuted Party. In January next, he petitions the Council, complaining of his close Imprisonment, and they permit him to walk about in the Day-time, but order him still to return at Night. December 1st, George McCartney of Blacket, Prisoner at Dumfries for alledged Accession to the Rebellion 1666, is ordered to be brought into Edinburgh.

Perhaps it was in answer to one of the Grievances abovenarrated, that the Council, July 28th, 'considering that by --- Act, 2 Sess. Parl. 2. Char. II. None must preach or teach 'without the Bishops Licence, recommend to and require the Archbishops and Bishops to enquire what Persons in their Dioceses take upon them to be Chaplains in Families, or teach 'in publick Schools, or be Pedagogues, without their Licence, and report.' I find not much Persecution as yet following upon this Order; but, next Year and the following, many excellent Youths, very capable of their Trust, were brought to abundance of Difficulty.

Towards the End of September, a Letter comes down to the Council, restoring the late Archbishop of Glasgow. Bishop Leighton had demitted, and about this Time or a little after died in a very retired Place in England. The King's Letter will speak best for it self. It is inserted Word by Word in the following Act of Council made upon the Receipt of it.

Edinburgh, September 29th, 1674.

FORASMUCH as the King's Majesty, by a Letter under his Hand to his Privy Council, of the Date of the 7th Instant, has signified, That upon the Dimission of Alexander Archbishop of Glasgow, 1669, his Majesty did commend to Robert Bishop of Dumblain the Care of the Diocese of Glasgow, and afterward did nominate and present the said Robert to the Archiepiscopal See of Glasgow, unto which, as his Majesty is informed, he was not formally translated; and that now by the Dimission of the said Robert, the said Archbishoprick of Glasgow is become at his Majesty's Gift and Presentation, his Majesty has thought fit on just and important Considerations, and for the Good of his Service in the Church, to restore, and doth restore the said Alexander to the Possession and Enjoyment of

of the said Archbishoprick of Glasgow, and all the Rents, Privileges, Benefits, and Immunities, Superiority, Casualties and Profits whatsoever thereto belonging, in as full and ample a Manner as the same are expressed and contained in his Majesty's first Gift unto him under the great Seal of the Kingdom; willing and declaring the said Gift and Disposition to be in as much Force in all Time coming, during his Life, to all Intents and Purposes, as he had never made a Dimission; and ordains this Letter to be recorded in the Books of Privy Council, and them to pass an Act thereupon, that all concerned may yield ready Obedience. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council ordain accordingly in all Points.

We have heard before, how and from what Springs this Restoration was brought about. Upon the 3^d of December, he was admitted a Privy Counsellor; and the reviving of the Severities in the West Country, against the Presbyterians for some Years, are very much chargeable upon him.

Burnet admitted

Little other Thing offers it self, directly relative to the Sufferings of this Church, this Year. In June and July, there were no small Heats fell in among the Bishops and their Clergy about the National Synod; but because this Chapter hath already run out to so great a Length, and it was September next Year before they came to any Issue, I'll refer them till next Year.

The Business of the Advocates, who were this Year and the following laid aside for a mere Opinion in an abstract Question of Law, made no small Noise. It does not at all concern my Design, and I should have left it entirely to Civil Historians, were it not another Instance of the arbitrary and oppressive Procedure of this Reign. The Question was, Whether Appeals from the Lords of the Session to the Parliament, were lawful? Sir John Cunningham and Sir George Mackenzie, as topping Lawyers as in the House, with a considerable Number of Advocates, happened to differ in their Opinion in this Point from some of the Managers; and this was made a Crime, and that Party were obliged to lie by from their Office. When the Sentence against them was forming, Sir John Nisbet demurred a little upon it, and desired the President might put in some Law or Act of Parliament as the Foundation of the Sentence. It is confidently affirmed, that my Lord Haltoun replied, We need not seek Law for it, here is the King's Letter, and that is sufficient. The Matter was patched up next Year, in a Submission of the nonconforming Advocates.

I shall end my Accounts of this Year with a short Hint at the Procedure of Presbyterian Ministers this Year and the following, for keeping as good a Correspondence among themselves as possible, and licensing young Men to be serviceable when the elder Sort were dropping off; and I shall give all the Accounts I have for these Two Years together in this Place, from some Papers drawn up by their Meetings, which have come to my Hand, and will be a Specimen both of their Care and Prudence at this Juncture.

Presbyterian
Ministers have Meetings, and license Persons to be Procurators.

Presbyterian Ministers, indulged and not indulged, frequently met among themselves as they best could, and put several promising young Men, who had prosecuted their Studies in private some Years, upon their Trials, and, upon finding them qualified, licensed them to preach the Gospel; and, as they had Opportunity, sent them to preach in those Places of the Country where they were most wanted, and excited vacant Congregations to call them; and, upon the People's Call, ordained them with all the Solemnity the Illness of the Times allowed.

I cannot give a better Account of the Pains these worthy Ministers took to preserve a Succession of Ministers in this Church, and to keep up the Purity and Harmony of it, than from their own Papers and the Rules they agreed upon; and this does not appear to me altogether improper for a History of this Nature.

The First Meeting I find for these Purposes, is at Edinburgh, in June this Year. The Presbyterian Ministers in every Corner of the Church sent more or fewer Delegates to Edinburgh, to reason and agree upon Rules and Overtures, which were to be transmitted to the several Meetings of Ministers up and down the Country: And the Product of this Meeting will be best known by the Paper of Overtures they agreed upon, and transmitted to their Brethren, which I here insert.

OVERTURES agreed upon in a Meeting of delegate Ministers from several Places of the Kingdom, June, 1674.

- I. The Brethren did unanimously agree, that there be a serious Endeavour for a Succession of Presbyterian Ministers, and recommend it to the several Societies to think of the most effectual Way to make this practicable.
- II. Some Brethren present were desired to write unto Brethren in several Places, to associate themselves in their respective Bounds; and that Brethren meet by Correspondents who live in the Bounds of one Synod, for the greater Harmony in Actings.
- III. That there be a Care had in the several Meetings, as they have Access, to send Preachers where the Necessity and Desires of the People require them, and, as they travel among the People, to warn them faithfully of the Evils and Dangers of the Time, and to exhort

‘ exhort them to seek for Things that make for Peace, and whereby they may edify one another.’

‘ IV. That it be carefully provided, that no Offer from the State, in order to Church-affairs, be rejected or accepted by any particular Brethren, till Advertisement be given to the several Societies of such an Offer, that their Thoughts thereupon may be returned by their Delegates or Letters, as they shall think expedient; and that Ministers therein, as in other Things, subject themselves communi presbyterorum consilio.’

‘ V. That we endeavour to keep Correspondence with Gentlemen and judicious Elders, as they are to be had.’

‘ VI. That neither actual Ministers, nor licentiate young Men, settle with a People without Consent of the Meeting in the Bounds.’

‘ VII. That Ministers, as they have Access, have a special Respect to their particular Flocks, without Prejudice to the common Concernment and Work.’

‘ These preceding Articles the Brethren thought fit to recommend to the Consideration of the several Societies, without imposing upon their Judgments, that they may send their Thoughts of these Overtures with their Delegates to the next Meeting, upon the Third Wednesday of October next, 1674.’

mitted.

Joynly with these Overtures, the Materials of an Address to the Government were transmitted to the several Associations of Ministers, that their Judgment might be returned thereupon, and the Reader probably will be satisfied to have it, as what contains the Sense of several worthy Ministers at this Time, upon the Circumstances of this Church, though, as far as I can find, it was never brought to any Bearing.

Materials of an Address.

‘ After too long Silence, being much pressed with the present Condition of the Church of God through the Land, we cannot but adventure, with all Humility and Submission, to offer to your Lordships Consideration, some few of the many heavy Pressures under which she and we groane, beseeching your Lordships to have Compassion upon us, and by your Authority to relieve and help us from under them.’

‘ I. It cannot but be grievous to us, that although we are not conscious to our selves of any Disloyalty, either in Principles or in Practice, yet we and others of our Perswasion have been, these Years past, kept under a Cloud of Disfavour, whereby we have been exposed to many sad Inconveniencies and Sufferings.’

‘ II. We regret, that by the lamentable Alterations that have been made upon this Church, in the Change of the Government thereof, and introducing of Prelacy, contrary to the Word of God, and our solemn Covenants and Vows to the most high God, Atheism, Profanity, and Looseness have much abounded, and Religion in the Practice thereof hath been exceedingly shaken, and the tender and conscientious People of the Land, who could not subject thereto, have undergone, and to this Day are lying under many sad Things.’

‘ III. We humbly crave Leave to represent to your Lordships, how afflicting it hath been to us, that our Readiness to acknowledge the Civil Supremacy of the Magistrate, not only in Things Civil, but also as to Things Ecclesiastick, according to the Scriptures, and Confessions of the protestant Churches, is not taken off our Hand as a sufficient Test of our Loyalty, unless we give to him that which we cannot grant, as we would not be found guilty of encroaching upon the sovereign Authority of Jesus Christ, the alone King and Head of his Church, which we humbly conceive is grievously encroached upon.’

‘ IV. We with much Sorrow bewail the great Obstructions that have been laid in the Way of preaching the Gospel, by Ministers called to that Work by the Church of Scotland, (who find themselves under a Necessity to preach the Gospel upon all Hazards) from which it is that Ignorance and Looseness have abounded, with many other Evils; and others, who (from single Respect to the Gospel, and not from any the least Disrespect to Authority) have adventured upon Preaching and Hearing, not without an encouraging Blessing, have been exposed to many and great Mistakes, and sore Troubles.’

‘ V. That a great Number of young Men, whom God hath fitted for the Work of the Ministry, by whose Labours many Souls might be gained to Christ Jesus, are kept useless now when the Harvest is great, and that only because they cannot subject to the Trials and Ordination of Prelates.’

‘ VI. That although there be an observable and prodigious Growth of Popery and Quakerism, (which is upon the Matter a renouncing of Christianity) yet there are few or no Endeavours or effectual Means used to restrain the Seducers, or reclaim their deluded Followers.’

‘ We

‘ We humbly therefore beseech your Lordships, by the Love you bear to Jesus Christ, before whose Tribunal we must all quickly stand, to remove these and other sad Evils, under which the Lord’s Servants and People heavily grone, that so the Gospel may have a free Course, and the starving Souls of the poor People may be relieved with the Bread of Life, and may bless your Lordships, when they have Access with Peace and Freedom, after their wonted Manner, to enjoy their Souls Food. This, we doubt not, will contribute much to the Establishment of his Majesty’s Throne, and will bring many Blessings upon your Lordships and your Families, and will encourage us more and more to deport our selves with all Affection and Loyalty to his Majesty, and will not a little make way for your Lordships Peace, in the Day when the Lord will come to call every one of us to an Account.’

These Materials and the above Overtures were transmitted up and down the Country, and were generally fallen in with by Ministers, and Additions and Amendments made to them. The only Copy I have met with of the Return of particular Meetings, unto the next general Meeting, is from Paisly, and I think it deserves a Room in the Appendix, as containing a further View of the Sentiments of some very worthy Men at this Juncture; and so it stands, N^o. 68.

These were the Thoughts of the Brethren of Paisly upon what was sent them. I have not seen the Sentiments of any others, neither do I know whether the Meeting of Correspondents had Liberty to meet at Edinburgh in October, as they designed: Perhaps they did not, at least I have seen no Accounts of their Procedure, and we will just now find another Meeting pressed by the Ministers of the West Country. This Business then of agreeing upon general Rules, for Management at this difficult Juncture, seems to have insensibly dropt into the Hands of the Ministers in the Bounds of the Synod of Glasgow. Indeed the greatest Number of Presbyterian Ministers was there, and in other Places they scarce had the Liberty to meet together; and the Brethren in the West Country I find following out this good Work the Beginning of the next Year. Because the Subject is the same, I bring it in here, that the Whole relating to this may be together.

There was a Meeting, for a Synodical Correspondence, at Glasgow, January 20th, 1675. and they give their Sense of the forementioned Articles, remitting them further to the Presbytery’s Consideration. What was done at Glasgow will best appear from a Copy of their Minutes, which I have added, App. N^o. 69.

These Resolutions and Recommendations are the Sense of a good Number of Ministers met at Glasgow; yet they are remitted to the further Consideration of particular Associations. I know not whether they met at Strathaven in June, as was appointed. All I have further on this Subject, is a few Exceptions against what is above, by a particular Minister, and the Presbytery of Paisly’s Sense of them at Two Meetings; both which I give, that the Reader may have all come to my Hand upon this Head. The First stands, App. N^o. 70.

Those Exceptions seem to be from a Minister who hath been dissatisfied with the Indulgence, and not so cordial for an Union with the Brethren who had Freedom to embrace it. I end this Account with the Sentiments of the Brethren in Paisly, at Two different Meetings this Year, and they are added, App. N^o. 71.

From those we may understand the great Care and Caution exercised by the remaining Presbyterian Ministers, to have Matters as near the Constitution of this Church, and managed with that Unity, Harmony, and Caution, as their Circumstances would bear. According to these Regulations they generally acted, till piece by piece their Liberty was retrenched, and Divisions and Jealousies broke in among themselves.

I only add further, that as they took Care of Things among themselves, so they took Hold upon every Handle that offered, for the bettering of the Manners and Practice of this dissolute Age, and putting a Stop to the Profaneness that was now so rampant, and so little curbed by the established Clergy. They went as far this way in their Sessions and other Meetings, as their Circumstances allowed them, to exercise Discipline: And to help what was wanting in this, where they had Gentlemen in their Congregations who would joyn with them, they constituted them Reformers of Manners, in the Terms of the above-mentioned Act of Parliament. I shall annex here the Tenor of the Commission for this effect, given by Mr. Thomas Wylie and the Session of Finwick, to Rowallan younger, from the original Copy before me, and with it end this Chapter.

CHAP. X.

this Chapter.

THIS Year produceth no great Alteration in the Circumstances of the suffering Party in Scotland. Conventicles continued, yea, grew, and the Bishops and Council were not wanting in their Efforts against them; and the new and illegal Experiment of Garisons up and down, begins to be executed in this Period. A good many Ministers are intercommuned, and several Gentlemen and others are persecuted, not so much for their Breach of the Laws, as for their adhering to the Presbyterian Interest, and Liberties of their Country. In England, no small Endeavours were used with the King to make him quit Lawderdale, but in vain; and in Scotland, the Debates among the Episcopal Clergy, which began last Year, are brought to a Period. These, with some more transient Things falling in, may be the Subject of Two Sections. In the First, I shall bring in the proper Sufferings of Presbyterians this Year; and in the other, glance at other Incidents which may give some Light to the History of this Time, till it be set in its due Light, and likewise in some Measure clear up the Circumstances of Presbyterians.

SECT. I.

Containing an Account of the Persecution for Conventicles this Year, and the harsh Treatment of Presbyterian Noblemen, Ministers, Gentlemen, and others.

Notwithstanding of the rigorous and unprecedented Laws, made in the former Years, against Preaching and hearing the Gospel in Houses and Fields; yet this Year, Meetings to hear Presbyterian Ministers were very numerous, especially in the Fields; and unless in Edinburgh and some other Towns, there were but few Sermons in Houses. In most Places up and down the Country, there were not Houses capacious enough for the Numbers that now came to hear; though I shall not say, but, in some Places, there might be a Kind of Affectation to be in the Fields, where there was not an absolute Necessity, People being easier there in the Summer Time: But, generally speaking,

Field-meetings frequent this

ing, the Violence of the Soldiers, and the Numbers of the Hearers, forced them to the open Fields.

It must be owned, even by Adversaries, that much Success, and many remarkable, yea, extraordinary Conversions and Changes did accompany the Labours of Presbyterian Ministers, at this Time, up and down the Country. Many were pricked at the Heart, and cried out, Men and Brethren, what shall we do to be saved! And their After-practice evidenced their Repentance was not to be repented of; and the LORD gave Testimony to the Word of his Grace. Sometimes People of Years would come to Ministers, and bemoan their Want of Baptism, and, after Instruction, received it, to the Edification of many. Others had their secret Sins set in Order before them, and would come to Ministers and confess them, and offer publick Satisfaction for them. Now and then conformist Ministers came, and, after the Forenoon's Sermon, offer themselves, and, as Circumstances allowed, actually did profess their Sorrow for joyning in the present Course of Defection. In several Places they forlook their Churches, changed their Way, and, upon their candid Acknowledgments, were received by the Ministers preaching in the Fields, and were as welcome to the People as any.

Indeed the Laws and their Execution were so severe, that not many Gentlemen of Estates ventured to come to these Field-meetings, this being present Ruin to their Families: But their Ladies, and not a few of very good Fashion, were daily Attendants, and the common People were very numerous. Several Ministers and Preachers joyned these named in the former Years; and the Work of the Gospel did very much advance for Two or Three Years, and Multitudes of Souls were gained to Christ.

These Meetings were so numerous and frequent in many Places, that our Statesmen could not reach them all, and found it necessary to overlook what they could not help. The Bishops indeed violently pushed Prosecutions, and, we shall hear, got somewhat done. They had several of the Soldiers, and some others up and down the Country, whom they kept in Pay; and their Business was, to catch, if possible, Ministers who preached in the Fields, or some of the most active of the Hearers. There were Spies at some Meetings, and, as they found Opportunity, essayed to catch at the next Meeting, especially in coming or going.

This obliged many to come to hear the Gospel with Arms, for their own Defence; and some Scuffles ensued in several Places; so that the Country resembled War as much as Peace. And when sudden Attempts were made by Soldiers and Spies, 'tis little Wonder some Indiscretions fell out among the suffering People. Indeed it was Matter of Wonder there was no more of this than was, if, upon the one Hand, we reflect upon the Violence and Injustice of the Attackers; and, upon the other, that Ministers preached without Judicatories to overlook them, and might thus be in Hazard to deliver their own Opinion in difficult and emergent Cases, with somewhat of their own Spirit mixed with it, at least so as People might mistake them; and no doubt there were Mistakes of this Kind, and some ran Lengths far beyond any Thing preached to them. Yet it is certain there was very little of this at this Time, and for some Years, until the Differences among Presbyterians were heightened, and the Flame blown up, partly by Enemies, and partly by the Warmth of some Friends; and at length some Hearers inclined to set up for Judges and Directors in Controversies, more than Disciples, as may be noticed in its own Place.

However, the Gospel in the Hands of the outed Ministers had a free Course at this Time; and many were turned unto Righteousness: Through many Places on the South-side of Tay, People were almost as much watered, and the Gospel as generally preached, by the Indulged in the Churches, and their Brethren in the Fields, as if Presbytery had been settled.

Mean while their Adversaries were not idle, and the Council take several various Methods to stop and discourage Conventicles; and some Ministers and others were severely enough treated, and some very exorbitant Fines exacted in some Places. I come now to Particulars, and shall first run through the Procedure of the Council, and then the more particular Sufferings and Prosecutions.

It was in March this Year, that Complaints are tabled by the Prelates to the Council, of some Conventicles in Edinburgh, near Bathgate, and in other Places. Orders are given to the Lord Ross his Troop, to march in different Parties, and suppress them, and seize all they can meet with, in the Terms of former Acts. It seems the Ministers got out of the Way, at least no Accounts of any taken at this Time are come to my Hand.

The Town of Edinburgh, upon the 11th of March, are fined in a Hundred Pounds Sterling; for Conventicles alledged to be kept within their Liberties; and the Magistrates, by virtue of the Bond they gave at their Election, are obliged to pay it, and have Repetition off the Houses where they were kept. And upon the 12th of March, the Council order Four Companies of Foot, and a Troop of Horse to quarter at Glasgow, for the easier suppressing of Conventicles.

Towards the End of May, a Party of Soldiers, who had seized Mr. John King near by the House of Cardross, were set upon by some country People, and he rescued, which made a great Noise, and was the Occasion of a great deal of Trouble to my Lord Cardross, which I

King's Letter,
June 12.

I shall afterwards more fully narrate in its own Room; here I shall only notice the Consequents of it from the Government, which were not small.

Accounts were soon transmitted to Court by the Prelates, and a Letter came from the King to the Council, dated June 12th, complaining of this Attempt upon his Forces, and the Rescue of Mr. John King, and of the Increase of Conventicles in Teviotdale and East Lothian; that the indulged Ministers keep numerous and disorderly Communion; that lately there was a Meeting of the indulged and outed Presbyterian Ministers, who issued out Orders for keeping of Fasts, and other illegal Injunctions, as if they had been a Judicatory: And requires the Council to enquire into these Disorders, and to summon all the Counsellors to be present that some Order may be taken anent them.

it.

That the Indulged kept Communion I have no Question, but have learned nothing of this Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers here mentioned, unless it be a Meeting of the indulged Ministers in the Shire of Air, of which afterwards. I find this Summer was most threatening to the Fruits of the Ground; and it is very probable, Ministers would give it as their Mind, that the Lord was to be applied to by Fasting and Humiliation in this extraordinary Case, by these who would joyn with them in their Congregations. Probably somewhat of this may have given Rise to the Council's appointing a Fast in July, the Act appointing which I have insert in the App. N^o. 72. as being what some of my Readers may be willing to see.

Proclamation
for a Fast.App. N^o. 72.Committee of Council to consider his Majesty's Letter, and the Advocate ordered to form a Libel against the Lord Cardross.

According to this Letter, the Council order the Archbishop of Glasgow, Lord Privy Seal, Earls of Argyle and Linlithgow, the President and Advocate, to meet and enquire into all these Heads in his Majesty's Letter, with very large Powers; and I find, next Council-day, no doubt by a Proposal from this Committee, the Advocate, June 22^d, is ordered to form a Libel against my Lord Cardross and others, for Mr. John King's Rescue. And this same Committee fall upon the Overture, which proved afterwards so troublesome to the Country, to set up Garisons, of which more just now. The best Account I can give of the Council's Procedure, will be from their own Narrative in a Letter to Lawderdale, July 15th this Year, which I here insert.

May it please your Grace,

Council's Letter to Lawderdale, July 15. giving a Detail of their Proceedings
since June.

IN obedience, and conform to his Majesty's Letter directed to us of the 12th of June last, we did appoint a Committee of our Number to consider the same, and to propose the most effectual Expedients for preventing the Disorders mentioned therein, and others of that Nature; who having had frequent Meetings thereupon, and made a Report to us of their Procedure and Opinion, we did conclude and pass the Acts following.

Ministers intercommuned.

Whereas there being divers outed Ministers and others, since his Majesty's late Proclamation, March 24th, 1674. denounced Fugitives for not comparing before the Council, to answer for Preaching or being at Field-conventicles, we ordered that Letters of Intercommuning should be directed against all these Persons, seeing all other Courses hitherto taken had been ineffectual.

Chaplains and
enquired into.

Whereas the Council, by an Act 28th of July, 1674. in pursuance of the 4th Act of the 2^d Session of his Majesty's first Parliament, did ordain the Archbishops and Bishops in their respective Dioceses, to enquire what Persons had taken upon them to be Chaplains in Families, or to teach any publick Schools, or to be Pedagogues to the Children of Persons of Quality, and to report; in regard the said Report has not been made, we have renewed our former Act, and ordained a Report to be made 'twixt and the first Council-day in November next.

Garisons appointed.

Having conceived, that it may be a most effectual Expedient for preventing of Conventicles, and the like Disorders in Time coming, that Garisons should be appointed in several Places; we have ordained Garisons to be at the Places underwritten, viz. at the House of Bridghouse in Linlithgow Shire, at the House of Cardross, at the House of Glentirring, at the House of Merns in Renfrew Shire, at the House of Newhouse in Kinross, or at the House of Douchill in Kinross, at the House of Dean in Kilmarnock, at the House of Airdry in Lanerk Shire, at the House of Branksham or Newark, at the House of Huntbill, at the House of Blane in the Merse, at the House of the Laird of Riddel, and at the Castle of Dumfries: And have issued out several Orders and Directions for the Provision and Accommodation of the Soldiers in the several Garisons, in the Manner at Length specified in the Report made by the Committee, and approved by us; wherefore a Copy is sent herewith.

Mr. John Forest, indulged at Tillincaulry, transported to Carmichael.

Being informed that the Kirk of Carmichael, at which an indulged Minister was allowed to preach, is now vacant by the Decease of that Minister, and upon other important Considerations, we have ordered that Mr. John Forest, who is indulged to preach at Tillincaulry, should be transported to the said Kirk of Carmichael.

Town of Queensferry, and some indulged Ministers, prosecuted.

Information being given, that the haill Magistrates and People of Queensferry, except a very few, withdraw from publick Worship; we have given Order to his Majesty's Advocate to process them: We have also ordered him to process several outed Ministers, for disorderly Communion, in Tweddale, and some other Places; and some indulged Ministers in the Shire of Air, for assuming the Authority to appoint Fasts, giving Ordination, and contravening the Instructions given them at their Indulgence, of which a particular Account shall be given to your Grace at the Event of the Process.

Having considered the Act of Parliament against Conventicles, passed upon the 13th of August, 1670. and another Act of the said Parliament, passed upon the 20th of that Month, against Separation, we find the same were to endure for Three Years, unless his Majesty should think fit to continue them longer; and by Act 4th, 1672. they were prolonged: We desire your Grace may offer it as our Opinion to his Majesty, that it will be necessary his Majesty prorogate these Acts Three Years further, or to ordain them to continue in Force, say and while his Majesty declare his further Pleasure thereanent, and that a Proclamation be ordered for that Effect. We are Acts against Conventicles prorogate.

Your Grace's assured Friends, &c.

The Appointment of Garisons was the Fountain of so much Trouble to the Country, and these Soldiers in them the Authors of so much of the following Harassings of Presbyterians, that I must insert here the Act of Council about them, of the Date July 13th this Year.

Act of Council appointing Garisons, July 13.

Act appointing Garisons in some Places.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering that it may be a most effectual Expedient for preventing of Conventicles, and the like Disorders in Time to come, that Garisons were appointed at the Places underwritten; do ordain and appoint Garisons to be at the Places aftermentioned, viz. at the House of Bridghouse in Linlithgow Shire, at the House of Cardross in Perth Shire, at the House of Glentworth in Stirling Shire, at the House of Merns in Renfrew Shire, at the House of Douchill in Kinross Shire, at the House of Dean at Kilmarnock, in the Bailiary of Cunningham and Shire of Air, at the House of Airdry in the Shire of Lanerk, at the House of Newark in the Shire of Selkirk, at the House of Hunthill in the Shire of Roxburgh, at the House of Blane in the Shire of Berwick, at the Laird of Riddel's House in the Shire of Roxburgh, at the Castle of Dumfries in the Shire of Dumfries.

And ordain that in ilk Garison there be a Company of Foot and Twelve Horse, and that ilk Two Garisons next adjacent have one Captain to command them; and remit it to Major General Monro, as he shall find the Places of the Two several Garisons more or less convenient, to put the fewer or greater Number in either of them, for the more Convenience: And that the General Major ordain the Officers to keep and remain at their respective Garisons, and not leave their Duty and Charge, under the Pain of being cashiered: And that it be not in the Power of any Officer to grant Furlough to any Soldier, during the Time they are in Garison. And do ordain that the Officers and Soldiers, betwixt and the First of August next, be at the several Garisons foresaid; and that the Officers take special Care that no Prejudice be done by the Soldiers to the Houses or Planting, but when they shall be appointed to remove, they shall leave them in as good Condition as they found the same.

And further, ordain the Sheriff of the Shire, Bailly of the Regality, or Steward of the Stewartry, in which the Garisons are, to convene any Three or Four of the Commissioners of the Excise of the Bounds, that they may, with the Officer who is to command at the respective Garisons, sight the said Houses, that the same may be made ready to receive the said Garisons at the said Day, and the said Sheriff, Bailly, or Steward shall convene the said Commissioners, and Three be a Quorum, who are hereby required to cause furnish the respective Garisons with Bedding, Pots, Pans, Coal, Candle, as is ordinary, and set down Prices for the Corn, Hay, and Straw for the Horses, as soon as the same comes off the Ground, and cause carry in and deliver to the Garisons such Quantities as are necessary for the Horses, at the said Prices, upon the Payment of the Price.

And for the Provision and Maintenance of the said Garisons, the Lords of Council recommend to the Lords of Treasury, to ordain Sir William Sharp his Majesty's Cash-keeper, to provide Meal to the Soldiers, at Leith, and other Places, and to deliver the same by Weight to the Officers, who are likewise ordered to deliver the same to the Soldiers by Weight, and that the Officers shall have Allowance from the Cash-keeper of Two Shillings Scots a Mile for the Carriage of each Horse-load.

The Council, upon August 6th this same Year, make another Act anent the Garisons, which I insert likewise here. After a Narrative of the same Nature with the Act above, they ordain, Another Act about Garisons August 6.

That the General Major see that the Officers be careful that no Disorders be committed by them, or any under them; and that they endeavour to keep good Intelligence in the Country about them, in order to prevent all disorderly Meetings; and in case any Conventicle be held, whereof they shall be informed, ordain them to use their Endeavours to apprehend the Minister, or other Person preaching thereat, and any considerable Persons present at the same: And likewise to secure any Ministers, who by Sentence of Council are declared Fugitives, conform to a particular List to be given under the Hand of one of the Clerks of Council. And upon Information of any Number of Men in Arms, if they find they can give no good Account of themselves, that they endeavour to dissipate them, and seize on them; and likewise any Persons known to have been in the Rebellion 1666. and who have not accepted of the Benefit of his Majesty's gracious Act of Indemnity. And for the better Execution hereof, the Officers of the said Garisons are to keep Correspondence among themselves, that no Inconvenience fall out. Of which, and of every Thing of Moment that shall fall out, they shall give timely Advancement to the Major General, or, in his Absence, to the next commanding Officer, who are to acquaint his Majesty's Privy Council, or give such Orders as they shall find convenient.

This Appointment of Garisons was not only unprecedented, in Time of Peace, but, by many, thought plainly contrary to Law, and the Liberty of the Subject: For any Thing I can see, it was purely owing unto the Virulence of the Bishops, and their Party in Council, and enacted without any Order from the Court, or so much as acquainting the King with so extraordinary a Step, until it was done. They were indeed approved by an After-missive, but the Country owed this Oppression merely to the arbitrary Managers; and, we shall hear just now, that some Gentlemen refused to pay their Quota to the Support of these illegal oppressive Garisons. The Rules laid down, to prevent Prejudice to the Places and Country about where the Garisons were, did not at all answer the End; their Powers are very large, and they soon found Pretexes to insult and attack any in the Neighbourhood they pleased: Beside, the Charges of maintaining them, and bringing in what went under the Notion of Provision to them, was a terrible Burden to the Country; and considering the plain Design of their setting up, and the Narrative of the Council's Act anent them, bearing, They were appointed for bearing down of Conventicles, that is, the pure Dispensation of the Gospel, and for the apprehending of honest Ministers and others, a good many conscientious Persons refused to contribute to their Support; and this became new Matter of Persecution. In short, this Method was most oppressive and unjust, to send so many rude Soldiers to live, as it were, at Discretion, and nestle in a great many loyal and peaceable Gentlemen and Noblemen's Houses, to their great Disturbance and Loss. It was pretended, they would guard them and their Tenants from the Hazard of Conventicles; but this was very hard upon Persons who neither wanted nor desired such Guests. In the followning Years they were altered and changed, as the Persecutors found most answerable to their Projects; and some Parishes who were reckoned disaffected, that is, most inclinable to Presbytery, had Two of them; such as Lesnabago, in the Houses of Blackwood and Corehouse. At length it appeared so illegal and unreasonable, that peaceable Gentlemen and Subjects, who ought to be protected by a Government, should be quartered upon, like Enemies, in Time of Peace, that it was challenged at Court; and, after our Bishops had defended it a while, they were forced to drop it. However, the Country groined under them in various Shapes, less or more, for many Years.

But to go forward in my Account of the Council's Procedure this Year: Upon the 6th of August, Letters of Intercommuning against many Ministers were given out, which I shall consider when I come to the particular Sufferings of Ministers this Year; and, the same Day, a new Commission, of the same Tenor and Powers almost with that granted last Year, above-narrated, is given, for suppressing of Conventicles and Church-irregularities, to the Earls of Wintoun, Linlithgow, and Wigtoun, Lord Belhaven, Treasurer-depute, Register, Advocate, Lord Collingtoun, Laird of Niddry, Major-general Monro, or any Three of them. And at the same Diet, the Acts against Conventicles are prorogated for Three Years, and ay and till the King see Cause to put a Stop to them, and that by a Proclamation, as was proposed in their last Letter to Lawderdale.

At the same Time, the Council write to the Earl of Murray, to execute the Laws against Keepers of Conventicles in the Shire of Elgin, and neighbouring Places, and report. I have seen but very few Accounts from that Country, and therefore perhaps it may be not unacceptable to insert here a well attested Narrative of a considerable Reviving the small Handful who adhered to the Purity of the Gospel in that Corner, had about this Time, which probably gave Rise to this Letter of the Council.

There were but a few Presbyterian Ministers remaining benorth Tay, and Two or Three who laboured in the Work of the Gospel, in the Shires of Ross and Elgin, now and then.

Presbyterian
Ministers in Ross and Murray.

Mr. John McGilligen, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Frazer, Mr. Thomas Ross, were this Summer very frequent, and much owned of the LORD in their Work. I shall have Occasion next Year to give a larger Account of Mr. McGilligen, when he was seized; I only here give a Hint at a Communion he celebrated in September, which was wonderfully countenanced with the Divine Presence, from some Papers before me, of a very good Hand.

Mr. McGilligen was, with others of the Presbyterian Ministers of that Country, intercommuned by the Council in August; yet the Accounts of this did not discourage him or them in their Work. Many serious Persons were longing much to partake of the Sacrament of the Supper; and having been at much Pains in publick Preaching, and from Houe to Houe, to prepare them for it, in September this Year he administrated that holy Ordinance at Obisdale, in the House of Lady Dowager of Fowlis. There assisted him Mr. Hugh Anderson Minister of Cromarty, and Mr. Alexander Frazer Minister at Teviot, afterward at Abbotsball. Mr. Anderson preached the Preparation Sermon, from II. Chron. 30. 18, 19. Mr. McGilligen preached the Action Sermon, from Song. 5. 1. last Clause. Mr. Frazer preached in the Afternoon, from Ephes. 5. 16. And Mr. McGilligen preached the Thanksgiving Sermon, from I. Chron. 29. 18. At this last Sermon there was a plentiful Effusion of the Spirit upon a great many present; and the eldest Christians there, declared they had not been Witnesses to the like. In short, there were so sensible and glorious Discoveries made of the Son of Man, and such evident Presence of the Master of Assemblies, this Day and the preceeding, that the People seem'd to be in a Transport, and their Souls filled with Heaven, and breathing thither while their Bodies were upon the Earth, and some were almost at that, Whether in the Body, or out of the Body, I cannot tell. Even some Drops fell on Strangers: There was one poor Man, who had formerly no Profession of Religion, but came to Obisdale perfectly out of Curiosity, who was sensibly wrought upon. At his Return, one of his Neighbourshaving got Notice where he had been, said to him, He was a great Fool to lose his Cow and his Horse, which were all he had to sustain him, and assured him they would be taken from him. The other answered, You are more to be pitied, who was not so happy as to be there; for my Part, if the LORD would maintain in me what I hope I have won to, I would not only part with these, but my Head likewise, if called to it.

Mr. McGilligen celebrates the Sacrament of the Supper, at Obisdale, with much of the Divine Presence.

At this Communion, they were very providentially kept from Disturbance. The Design of this Solemnity having taken Air, the Sheriff-depute, Sir Roderick Mackenzie of Findon, a moderate Gentleman if left to himself, by the Instigation of the Bishop, sent a Party to apprehend Mr. John McGilligen; and expecting he would have dispensed the Sacrament at Alnes, the Place of his Residence, the Party came thither upon the Lord's Day, and missing him, they fell a pillaging his Orchard, which kept them so long, that before they could reach Obisdale, the Forenoon's Work was over, and, upon Notice given, the Ministers retired. When the Party came and missed Mr. McGilligen, whom they had only Orders to take, they went off; and so the Ministers and People met again in the Afternoon, and had no more Disturbance. Thus the LORD had a Work in that Corner, and Satan raised up Opposition to it. Mr. McGilligen was forced to abscond, and we shall meet with him next Year.

A very remarkable Preservation of the Ministers at this Occasion.

No more offers to me as to the Managers Proceedings in general, but what will come in upon the particular Accounts, unless it be, that, in December, the Council make a new Remit, and grant a Commission much of the Nature of the former, unto the Archbishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow, the Earls Seaforth and Dundonald, the President, Advocate, Treasurer-depute, and Earl of Lintithgow, anent Conventicles. What was done by the former, and this Commission, if any Thing was done, is not come to my Hand. So I quit the general Account, Commission against Conventicles granted in December.

And come to end this Section with some Particulars of the Sufferings of some Ministers, Gentlemen, and others, this Year. I begin with Ministers. The Sufferings of the Indulged, whose Circumstances were not very easy, I may hint at upon the next Section. As to others of the outed Ministers; upon the 9th of March, I find Mr. John Greg before the Council, for keeping a Conventicle at Leith-mills. He confessed the Charge, and was sent Prisoner to the Bass. This Island was now turned the common Shore whither all in these Circumstances were sent. Such who would not satisfy the Bishops, were ordered to this barren Rock, where not a few died, particularly that worthy Minister Mr. John Blackader, and glorified God in the Island, by his Death: So at length few or none compeared, finding that the Bass was the least they could expect, unless they would comply with the Bishops. After Mr. Greg's lying in Prison Eight Months, about November the Council liberate him, and confine him to the Parish of Carstairs in Lanerkshire.

Sufferings of Ministers.

Mr. John Greg

Mr. John King was seized in the End of May, but was rescued, as we have heard. November 4th, I find that Mr. Thomas Ross, a Presbyterian Minister in the Shire of that Name, is apprehended for Conventicles, and imprisoned in Tain. I have no more about him, only he was brought to the Bass, and continued some Time there, with others of his Brethren.

Mr. Tho. Ross

But our Managers, unsatisfied with this small Game of picking up a Minister here and there, give a general Stroke to most Part of the outed Ministers, and when they cannot reach 1675. reach the Persons of poor Ministers and others, resolved to make their Lives as bitter and uneasy to them as may be, and to expose them, and such who shall converse with them, to all Hazards and Difficulties that follow an Intercommuning. Many of them, with some Gentlemen, yea, Ladies, had been last Year declared Fugitives, but now they go further.

Letters of Intercommuning,
Aug. 6
App. N^o. 73.

And upon the 6th of August, Letters of Intercommuning are given out by the Council against more than a Hundred Persons, whereof Sixteen or Eighteen are Ministers. The Letters themselves I have insert in the Appendix, N^o. 73. The Ministers are, Mrs. David Williamson, Alexander Moncrief, William Wisheart, Thomas Hogg in Ross, George Johnston, Robert Gillespie, John McGilligen, John Ross, Thomas Hogg in Stirling Shire, William Erskine, James Donaldson, Andrew Anderson, Andrew Mortoun, Donald Cargil, Robert Maxwell elder and younger, James Frazer of Brae, John King: And with these a good many Gentlemen and Ladies were joyned; Sir John Kirkcaldy elder of Grange, Durham of Largo, Hamilton of Kinkel, Arnot of Pitdrum, Lady Balcanquhal, Lady Colclerny, Lady Pittendreich, Lady Whitebanks, Lady Pittalpie, and many others to be seen in the Letters themselves.

Observes upon them.

These Letters of Intercommuning were the utmost our Managers could go upon Non-compearance; and by our Scots Law every Person who harboured, entertained, or conversed with them, was to be habite and repute guilty of their Crimes, and prosecuted accordingly. Perhaps it was every way without a Parallel, that so many Ladies and Gentlewomen married, should be put in such Circumstances; but this was to strike the greater Terror on their Husbands and other Gentlewomen. The Ministers here named, are such who had been delated as most active in preaching the Gospel, and the Gentlemen and others were such as had supported them most. We heard, the Soldiers have Commission to pick them all up, where they can hear of them; and after Bothwell-bridge great Numbers were added to this large Roll; and Converse with, and Reset of them, was one of the great Pretexts of harassing the Country, and debauching their Consciences with Oaths.

The Trouble the Lord Cardross meets with this Year. Riot upon his House and Family at Cardross.

I come now to the Hardships put upon my Lord Cardross, that pious and excellent Nobleman, and some Gentlemen this Year. To begin with the Trouble that noble Lord met with, we have heard, that towards the End of May, when my Lord was at Edinburgh, a Party of the Guards, under Sir Mungo Murray, came to the House of Cardross, under Cloud of Night, and committed a most evident Riot, and seized Mr. Robert Langlands, after the Revolution Minister of Elgin of Murray, whom we shall afterwards meet with, at this Time Governor to my Lord Cardross his Brother, the honourable Colonel Erskine of Carnock, yet alive, whose bright Character his Modesty will not allow me to enter upon. And they broke up Chests, and broke in upon my Lord's Closet and Papers. What their Orders were, or from whom, is a Secret; for they would produce none, but their Pretext was to seize Mr. John King, upon some Information or other they had got of his Preaching.

His Petition to the Council.

As soon as my Lord had Notice of this, being at Edinburgh, he applied to the Privy Council by a Petition, complaining of this illegal Attempt upon his House. The Petition, which in all Points my Lord was ready to make good, gives the best Account of this Matter, and withal shews the Injustice of these Times, when, instead of Redress, my Lord had a Libel formed against him, and a most unjust Decreet pass. The Petition follows.

To the Right Honourable the Lords of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council,

The humble Petition of Henry Lord Cardross,

Sheweth,

‘ That I your Petitioner being in Edinburgh, and having left my Wife at Home all alone, Sir Mungo Murray, accompanied with Walter Stuart, Henry Graham, George Murray, James Spotswood, Andrew Hume, and others, did, in a most riotous and tumultuary Manner, come into my House of Cardross under Silence of Night, and there commanded the Gates to be opened to them, threatening to break up the Gates, and to burn the House; and tho’ their Names were soberly desired to be known, which was very necessary in that Part of the Country, which in effect is in the Highlands, and at Midnight, your Petitioner and his Servants being from Home, and there being only a Lady with Child in the House, yet they would give no other Answer but that they were Scotsmen, which Answer was so far from obliging any to Obedience, that it justly occasioned Jealousy.’

Notwithstanding of which, the Gates being at last opened to them, they did, in a most tumultuary Manner, enter the same, and abuse the whole House, affrighting your Petitioner's Wife, who was with Child, and extending their Incivility to such a barbarous Height, that they forced her to rise from her Bed, that they might search her Chamber; and albeit it they knew, as shall be proven, that the little Room off the Dining-room was your Petitioner's own Clofet, and that your Petitioner himself was at Edinburgh, and my Wife assured them, upon her Word of Honour, that there was nothing there but Papers, lying so open, and in such a Confusion, that she could suffer none to enter, especially at such a Time of the Night, and in such a Number; yet they threatned to break open the Door, and so did enter where your Petitioner's Papers of greatest Importance were exposed to the greatest Danger.

Likeas, they having seized upon the Persons of Mr. John King my own Chaplain, and Mr. Robert Langlands Governor to my Brothers, who were his Majesty's free Lieges, neither acted nor denounced for any Fact or Crime, and who were not hiding themselves, but peaceably lying in their Beds, they carried them most insolently from your Petitioner's House, who was answerable for them, and absolutely refused to shew any Order: And though your Petitioner's Wife did most earnestly desire that they would not carry away her Servants till she should come down Stairs and speak with them, yet they did refuse her that small Favour, which was possibly very necessary for her Service, upon some domestick Considerations.

This being the true State of the Case, it is humbly referred to your Lordships Consideration, what a sad Condition his Majesty's Subjects are in, when they are prostitute to such illegal and unwarrantable Acts, never formerly practised in Scotland, nor so much as known to our happy Neighbours; so that we find the Effects of War under a profound Peace, and must pay such as oppress us.

But that your Lordships may the better reflect upon this unwarrantable Act, you'll be pleased to consider, 1st. That none of his Majesty's Guards, nor none else can apprehend the Persons of free Men, except in the Case of Treason; and the most they can do is to secure them under Caution: For Execution can in no Law precede Sentence, and Imprisonment is the severest of Executions, because it ruins a Man's Affairs, and deprives him of Liberty, which is the best and noblest Part of Property. 2^{do}. Though they might apprehend, as they cannot, any single Man's Person, yet to be sure they cannot threaten to break up Doors, nor invade Houses under Silence of Night; for even Letters of Caption cannot warrant to do that, unless it be first proven to a Judge that Entry in his Majesty's Name was refused. 3^{io}. Whatever might be said for the apprehending of Fugitives, for whom none is answerable, and where there may be Hazard in the Delay, yet as to Servants, for whom your Petitioner was answerable, conform to the late Act of Council, it is certainly without all Warrant to apprehend any such; and it were strange that Heritors must both give Bonds, and must yet be liable to have their Houses made open at such unseasonable Times. 4th. Your Petitioner craves Leave to plead so far a Privilege common to him with your Lordships, as to alledge, that the Houses of Noblemen, who have the Honour to be born his Majesty's Counsellors, and who are privileged by our old Laws, cannot be summarily searched, nor have their Servants taken from them; and if your Lordships will consider the Consequences that will arise from this Practice, to your selves and Successors, and other Peers, you will certainly find, That as this has never been practised in Scotland, so it were dangerous and dishonourable that any Soldiers or others should have it in their Power to force an Entry into your Houses, to force your Ladies from their Bed, to search into your Closets where your Papers of Importance lie open, in your Absence; so that, in the midst of your greatest Solemnities, or when you desire most to be private, you shall never be able to be Master of your own Houses, or quiet, but that insolent Soldiers shall be allowed to disturb your Solemnities, and pry into your Secrets at their Pleasure. 5th. Though this were allowable, as it is not, yet they should have shewed their Names and Orders before they entred, else Robbers may enter upon such Pretexes, and the Subjects will be brought to that fatal Necessity, as either to allow an Entry to every Vagabond, or fall under the Compass of disobeying his Majesty: But to seize upon any Person without shewing special Order, was that which wanted all Warrant and Example, and shall, as I hope, want all Countenance and Allowance. 6th. Though a Warrant had been enough, as it was not, yet there could not be a Warrant to seize Mr. Robert Langlands; and so conscious were they of their own Guilt in this Particular, that they dismissed him, but not till they had carried him Ten Miles, and kept him a Day and a Night Prisoner; and sure he was either unlawfully taken, or, if lawfully taken, unlawfully dismissed; and if this be lawful, then it must be lawful by the same Rule to take any of the Lieges, when most concerned about Things most important, as going to be married, when going to redeem a Wadset, or transact an Affair of the greatest Moment: So that any Body may be affronted and ruined in an arbitrary Way by private Soldiers.

‘ May it therefore please your Lordships to consider a Riot aggregated by so many ‘ illegal Circumstances, a Riot which can have no Pretext, and which sheweth ‘ openly so much Malice, that it needs neither be enforced upon your Lord‘ ships, nor can it be answered by the Actors: And that your Lordships will ‘ let People see, in the Severity of your Punishment, that you will protect the ‘ People not only by his Majesty’s Guards, but by his Laws; and that those ‘ Guards are publick Servants, and not absolute Masters; and that as you ‘ would punish those that oppose them, so you will punish them when they ‘ oppress others.’

From this Treatment of a Nobleman’s House and Family, we may easily guess what arbitrary Methods the Officers and Soldiers took with the common Country-people and Houses; and indeed their illegal and ensnaring Steps with them, were so many and odd, that I cannot insist upon them. Some Instances here and there may come in afterwards.

Notwithstanding of the Force of Matter of Fact and Reasoning in this Petition, so great was the Iniquity of these Times, that this Matter was turned to a Handle for prosecuting this noble Lord. Some Country-people who had profited by Mr. John King’s Conversation and Sermons, hearing he was seized, did gather together, and forcibly took Mr. King from the Soldiers. The Circumstances of this Rescue are not come to my Hands, but the Consequents of it were very heavy upon the noble Family of Cardrofs.

When the Soldiers came in, and represented the Attempt made upon them, and no doubt magnified it, the Council perfectly neglected the Consideration of the above Petition, and apply themselves to avenge the Affront the Soldiers got, upon my Lord and his Tenants. And a Committee is named, as hath been noticed, and the best Way they can find, is to draw a counter Libel against that noble Lord, and upon the severe Laws now in being, and the Testimony of the Soldiers, they could not want Pretexts, and lodge all this Matter upon my Lord, tho’ at the Time of the Riot and Attempt upon the Soldiers he was in Edinburgh.

And upon the 5th of August, this Matter comes to a Hearing before the Council, and they pass a Decree against Henry Lord Cardrofs in common Form. In short it bears, ‘ That ‘ whereas Mr. John King, an irregular Preacher, upon the --- of May last, having been ap‘ prehended by a Party of Soldiers, was in the Day-time rescued from them; they find Hen- ‘ ry Lord Cardrofs Art and Part in that Attempt upon his Majesty’s Forces, because some of ‘ his Servants were there. They likewise find the Lady Cardrofs to have been present at ma‘ ny Conventicles, and that my Lord had kept Mr. John King a Rebel in his House, and ‘ therefore they order the Lord Cardrofs to enter the Castle of Edinburgh, and there to be ‘ confined during his Majesty’s Pleasure, and fine him in a Thousand Pounds Sterling, and ‘ over and above fine him in one Thousand Three hundred and fifty Pounds Scots, being the ‘ Total of the Sums, at two Hundred and fifty Pounds Scots per Piece, his Tenants were ‘ found liable to, they being absent, and libelled for being at Conventicles; and that in respect ‘ my Lord did not cause his said Tenants give Bond not to keep Conventicles in Terms of ‘ the last Act of Council thereanent, referring him for Relief to his said Tenants.’

Thus they are pleased to overlook the vile Riot committed upon the House of a Nobleman, and to stretch their own harsh Laws to the uttermost. I cannot find that Mr. John King was a Rebel in Terms of Law. We have heard he had been before the Council, and liberated, and my Lord owns he entertained him as his Chaplain, and pleads he was the King’s free Liege, and he would answer for him: But no Innocence could stand before the Hardships of this Period, and this excellent Person continued for some Years in Prison, till he paid vast Sums of Money, as we may afterwards hear, and at length was forced sometime after to leave his native Land, and go to Carolina, whence he came to Holland, where he continued till he made a happy Return with the Prince of Orange, at the late glorious Revolution.

After the Writing of what is above, I have, by the Favour of the right Honourable the Earl of Buchan, the State of his excellent Father’s Process, drawn up by himself and his Lawiers at this Time, which I have added App. 73. N^o. 2. as containing a full and just Account of this Affair.

Two other worthy Gentlemen were attacked this Year, tho’ upon Reasons differing from the Lord Cardrofs’s Case, and at this Time they were properly Sufferers for Liberty. I begin with Mr. Stuart, Son to Sir James Stuart formerly mentioned, whom we shall afterwards meet with. He was at this Time noticed for his extraordinary Abilities in Law, tho’ there was no Access for one of his Piety and Principles to act publicly; but after the Revolution he was a Honour to his Country, and to the Gown in the Office of King’s Advocate, for many Years. This Gentleman was jealous of the Managers for writing, at least having a Share in publishing the known Paper, entituled, An Account of Scotland’s Grievances, by reason of the Duke of Lawderdale’s Ministry, humbly tendered to his sacred Majesty. This Account galled the Party, and fretted them exceedingly, and yet I do not find that they were able, or ever essayed to answer the Matters of Fact alledged there against them.

THOMAS HAY.

In those Terms a good many of them got their Warrants ; but at length, upon some Pretext or other, the Prelates prevailed in March, that the Council made the following Order. March 9th, Ordered that no indulged Ministers get Warrants for their Stipends, without Testificates from the Sheriff or Magistrates in the Bounds, that they have not kept Conventions since March 24th, 1674. But this Restriction did not affect many of them.

Restriction on their Warrants, March 9.

But in the Month of July, a forer Storm broke upon them: Complaints were given to the Council, we may easily guess by whom, against most of the indulged Ministers, that they broke their Instructions, and did several other Things contrary to Law ; and the Advocate is ordered to send out Summons, that they might compear before the Council in July. A principal Copy of the Letters and Citation given to Mr. James Veitch Minister at Mauchlin, being in my Hands, I shall insert a Copy of it here.

LETTERS, King's Advocate, for summoning Mr. James Veitch, &c.

CHARLES, &c. To Our Lovits, Messengers, &c. Whereas it is humbly meant and shown to Us, by Our well-beloved Counsellor, Sir John Nisbet of Dirletoun, Our Advocate for Our Interest, in this Matter underwritten, That where, by the 9th Act of the 3^d Session of Our 2^d Parliament, it is statute and ordained, that no Person or Persons whatsoever presume to appoint or ordain any Person to the Office and Work of the Ministry, except these who have Authority, approved by the Laws of this Kingdom for that Effect ; and by the said Act, both the Persons pretended Ordainers, and these who shall pretend to have received Ordination, are appointed to be seized upon by the Sheriff, or other ordinary Magistrate of the Place, and to be committed to Prison until they be delated unto the Lords of Our Privy Council, who are by the said Act authorized and ordained, after Trial, and finding the said Persons guilty, to sentence them, by Confiscation of all their moveable Goods, and banishing them, and causing them to find Caution not to return to Our Dominions. And whereas by the common Law and Practick of this Kingdom, if any Person or Persons presume to usurp and assume any Authority, Civil or Ecclesiastick, belonging to Us, or those to whom it is entrusted by Us, ought to be severely punished ; and that albeit the indicting or appointing of a Fast to be kept by any of Our Subjects, doth belong only to Us, or to those who have Power and Authority from Us to that Purpose : And whereas, by an Act of Our Privy Council, dated September 3^d 1672. confining several outed Ministers to the Parishes therein specified, they are indulged the Liberty to preach within their respective Parishes, they observing the particular Instructions following, to wit, &c. (I do not insert them, being above set down)

Notwithstanding, it is of Verity, that Mr. James Veitch, who is confined unto the Parish of Mauchlin, Mr. John Gemble confined unto the Parish of Symington, and Mr. Hugh Campbell confined to the Parish of Muirkirk, with Indulgence to preach at their own Kirks upon the Observance of the said Instructions, they and every one of them have contravened the Tenor thereof, in so far as upon the First, Second, Third, or remanent Days of the Month of January, or some or other of the Months of Years 1674, or 1675. have taken upon them to baptize Persons or marry People in other Parishes, and have not celebrated the Communion in one and the same Day, but at divers and distinct Times, and admitted Persons of other Parishes thereto, without Testificates from the Ministers thereof, and have preached in Church-yards and other Places without the Kirk, and have not remained within the Parishes foresaid, to which they were confined, but have departed forth thereof to other Parts and Places, at their own Pleasure, without Warrant or Licence of the Bishop of the Diocese : They have also taken upon them to meet together, and to appoint and ordain several Persons to the Office and Rank of the Ministry, without any Authority from Us : As also the said Persons have highly usurped Our Authority, in so far as they and several others, being, upon one or other of the Days of the said Months, convened at the Town of Air and several other Places, they did presume to appoint a Day or Days of Fasts ; whereby the foresaid Persons have directly contravened the Tenor of the said Act of Parliament and Instructions abovewritten, and thereby have incurred the Pains therein contained, and are guilty of usurping Our Authority, in indicting and keeping of Fasts in Manner foresaid ; for which they ought to be exemplarily punished in their Persons and Goods, to the Terror of others to do the like in Time coming. OUR WILL IS, That ye command and charge the said Mr. James Veitch, Mr. John Gemble, and Mr. Hugh Campbell, personally, if they can be apprehended ; and failing thereof, at their Dwelling-houses, and by open Proclamation at the Market-cross of the Head Burgh of the Shire where they dwell ; and that ye ‘ deliver to them personally, or leave at the Places foresaid, full Copies of these Our Letters, to compear personally before the Lords of Our Privy Council, at Edinburgh, or where it shall happen them to be for the Time, the 29th Day of July instant, to answer to the Pre-misses, and to hear and see such Orders taken thereanent, as appertains, under the Pain of Rebellion, and putting them to Our Horn: With Certification to them if they failie, Our other Letters shall be direct to put them to Our Horn, according to Justice, &c. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the 15th Day of July, and of Our Reign the 27th Year, 1675.’

Per Actum Dominorum secreti Concilii.

‘ I Robert Leich Messenger, by virtue of the abovescribed Letters, in our Sovereign Lord's Name and Authority, command and charge you Mr. James Veitch, to compear before the Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council, Day and Place abovescribed, to the effect, for the Causes, with Certification above express.’

Robert Leich Messenger.

The Prosecution dropt.

Those Three abovenamed were cited, and several others; but, from the Registers, I cannot find they compeared: If I mistake it not, the Matter was made up by my Lord Stair, and some other of their Wellwishers, nothing being to be laid to their Charge, that could easily be proven, but their appointing a Fast in their respective Congregations, when the Lord was visibly contending as to the Fruits of the Ground: And it would have been hard to have prosecuted them on this Head, when the Council themselves appointed a Fast; and the Matter of Ordination was so cautiously managed, that it was difficult to get it proven. Thus this Storm blew over, and they had some Quiet from the Government for some Years: Yea, by the Interest of some Persons concerned, upon the Death of the Minister indulged to Carmichael, the Council were prevailed with to send another thereto, being, as they say, A Parish allowed to have an indulged Minister, as hath been noticed upon this Chapter already.

The indulged Ministers brought to Trouble for not paying the Bursar and Clerk of the diocesan Synod.

However, towards the End of this Year, and the next, there was a very small Matter like to prove uneasy to them, and that was the Payment of the Bursar and Clerk of the diocesan Synod, their Quota's for the Parishes where they preached. Upon the 3^d of September, the Whole of the Indulged got a Charge of Horning, to pay the Dues ordinary, to Lodovick Fairfoul Clerk to the Synod, and Mr. David Clunie Bursar. Some hastily went in to the Payment of them, and others stood out, and applied for a Suspension; in which they found no small Difficulty, because the Payment of these was one of the Things imposed upon them by the Act of Council, for their Indulgence. These who refused to pay were of different Sentiments, some of them reckoning it was lawful to pay these undue Impositions, when forced and distressed in Law, being a Part of that passive Obedience they reckoned lawful, and what had been generally gone into, as to the Stipends of Curates, by Gentlemen of their Perswasion: Others of them reckoned it simply unlawful in any Case. This Matter came not to an Issue till some Time after this, and I shall have Occasion to give an Account of it in the following Years.

Lawderdale the Mover of the Bishops Bill in England.

The Duke of Lawderdale was now the great Wheel by which all our little Wheels moved, and no small Pains were taken in England to make the King part with him. The Attempts this way I shall much leave to the Civil-Historians. I find it noticed, that the Duke was the first Adviser to bring in the Test Bill, by some called the Bishops Bill, containing an Oath to be imposed upon all, that they should endeavour no Alteration of the Government in the Church. This was a counter Part of our Scots Declaration, and proceeded from a Cry formed with a peculiar Design, and frequently made Use of since, That the Church was in Danger. Lawderdale proposed this to ingratiate himself with the High-fliers, then called the Church-party. But this Bill was found contrary to the Liberties of Parliament, and many fine Speeches were made in the House of Peers against this Imposition; and the Earl of Halifax had a Speech much noticed upon this Subject. His Lordship observed, ‘ That as there was really no Security to any State by Oaths, so also no private Person, much less Statesman, would order his Affairs as relying upon them: No Man would ever sleep with open Doors or unlocked Treasure, should all the Town be sworn not to rob; so that the Use of multiplying Oaths, had been most commonly to exclude or disturb some honest conscientious Men, who would never have prejudiced the Government.’

Dr. Burnet's Examination as to him.

App. No. 74. The Commons

The Party who opposed the Duke, got Dr. Gilbert Burnet, so well known to the World, called before the Bar of the Commons, to declare what he knew anent the Duke of Lawderdale's Administration and Practices; and I have added a Copy of his Examination, App. No. 74. From this Examination the Commons could not form what some among them projected. However, in May or June, they drew up and presented an Address to the King, that the Duke might be removed from all his Employments, and from his Majesty's Presence and Council for ever, as being a Person obnoxious and dangerous to the Government. A Copy of this Address the Reader will find, App. N^o. 75.

Defence of the Duke in the King's Return.

The Two Heads the House of Commons insist upon, are, His passing an Act in the Parliament of Scotland, for levying Twenty thousand Men to march, at the King's Command, to any Part of his Dominions, where his Honour and Interest shall require: And his having laid at the Council-table at London, That the King's Edicts were equivalent to Laws. The Reader will find what Answers were given to both the Allegations, in his Majesty's Answer to the House of Commons Address, App. N^o. 76.

He continues in Favour.

Notwithstanding this Attack upon the Duke, he continued firm in the King's Favour, and that of the Duke of York; and, for some Time, he and his Brother managed all in Scotland, and their Party carried every Thing they pleased, in the Council and Treasury.

Differences among the Episcopal Clergy.

The former Year and this, the Differences among the Episcopal Clergy were not small; and since no Account of them hath, that I know of, been given to the Publick, I shall insert here what I can gather from any Papers, relative to this, come to my Hand, though indeed it is but lame. Bishop Sharp and his Party resolved to oppress and bear down some who set up themselves for some further Advances in Reformation, as they took what they pressed for to be. And the Primate's Carriage in this Affair will be a new Instance of that antichristian Spirit of Persecution and Pride he was possessed with, in so great Measures, not only toward Presbyterians, whom he had deserted, and resolved by all Methods to ruine, but also to those of his own Kidney, when they came not up to every Thing that was his Pleasure, as if he had been an infallible and visible Head of the Church, and Vicar of Christ, or another Antichrist in Scotland.

This Business began last Year, and ended in September this Year; and I put it all together, as far as it has come to my Hand. In May and June 1674. not only some of the inferior Clergy, but even some of the Bishops themselves, began to complain pretty openly, That the Church was not governed in an Ecclesiastical Way, but in a most arbitrary Method; and that Archbishop Sharp acted as a Pope, and, in Council and out of it, managed the Affairs of the Church, without so much as noticing the rest of the Prelates: And that though there was a Law for a National Synod, yet none had been permitted, by his Influence, to meet, for a common Course in Ecclesiastical Affairs, compiling of Canons, and Exercise of Discipline.

Complaints of Bishop Sharp his arbitrary Government of the Church.

Bishop Sharp's Defences.

Bishop Sharp and his Friends alledge, That these Complaints were groundless, and flowed from the Country-party, as it was called, in the State, in order to heighten the Clamour and Differences under the Duke of Lawderdale's Administration. How far the Persons dissatisfied with the Duke's Management, might play there Game here, I am not to determine: But Desires for bettering Things in the Church, were not unreasonable, as Things stood; and if there was any thing in this Matter of Partying, it was carefully improven by the Primate, to make the Duke essay to imbarck his Majesty in his own Faction, and to bear down the other Side.

All the Account of this Matter I am able to give, to set the Papers following in the fuller Light, is, That these Complaints, and the Motion for a National Synod, was pretty openly given into by Bishop Lawry of Brechin, and Mr. James Ramsay Bishop of Dumblain. When the Bishop of Brechin came to Edinburgh, he was prevailed upon by his Friends, to conform himself to Archbishop Sharp's Sentiments; and accordingly he quit the other, and left him to manage the Affair alone: Yea, it is said, he dropt some Representations he had in Trust from his diocesan Synod, pressing a National Synod. Bishop Ramsay stood out for some considerable Time, and insisted upon the joynt Desires of the Clergy of his Diocese, and in other Places, for a National Convocation of the Clergy.

Bishops of Brechin and Dumblain move for a National Synod.

Among the inferior Clergy some appeared likewise very active in this Matter, particularly Mrs. Turner, Cant, Robertson, and Hamilton, in the Diocese of Edinburgh. Their Diocesan being utterly averse from a National Synod, they and some others agreed upon a Petition to him, that, if possibly they could prevail with him, he might deal with the Primate to interpose for the indicting of one. Last Year the Petition was formed, but when it was presented, I cannot say. A Copy of it lies before me, said to be taken in Haste, and Characters, when the Petition was read; and I give it here as I have it.

And some of the inferior Clergy.

To the Reverend Father in God, the Lord Bishop of Edinburgh, the humble Petition of some of the Ministers of the Diocese of Edinburgh.

That whereas your Lordship is perfectly acquainted with the Disorders and Confusions of this Kirk, and the Contempt the Ministers and Ordinances of the Gospel by under the present, and that the Protestant Religion it self is thereby exposed: We do humbly and earnestly desire, that your Lordship will intercede with the Lord Primate in his Grace, and the rest of the R. R. the Bishops, that they would be pleased carefully to represent the sad and deplorable Condition of this Kirk, to his most sacred Majesty,

‘sty: And that since, in all Ages, Synods and Assemblies have been judged the best Ecclesiastical Remedies of such Evils, they would interpose that a National Synod may be instituted by his Majesty’s Authority; and to the Schisms and abounding Disorders, whereby Truth and Peace are in so much Danger, with all the bad Effects thereof, may be removed, and some speedy solid Course falln upon, for advancing the Purity and Power of Religion, and good Discipline; that so his Majesty’s Subjects, agreeing in the Truth of God’s most holy Word, may live quietly and peaceably, in all Godliness and Honesty, under his gracious Government. We are confident your Lordship will endeavour to do your utmost in so Address; neither can we doubt but your Lordship will favourably accept of this humble good Cause. We know likewise, many others of the Brethren of the Diocese would have joyned in the same Desires, had they enjoyed this Occasion of applying your Lordship, and with us have exonerated themselves in what is so much our Duty, in Times of so much Difficulty and Danger. Thus, remitting other Things to your Lordship’s Prudence, we pray Almighty God to grant you Direction, and remain, &c.

Four Ministers removed from their Charges.

Who or how many signed this Petition I know not; but I find the Four last named Ministers were removed from their Charges for some Time: We shall afterward find Two of them reponed, on their Submission; and ’tis probable the rest were received, after they had suffered a while upon the Score of their harmless Opinion in this Matter.

A further Account of those Differences, from the Papers of the Parties.

It is but little further Account I can give, save what the Reader must collect from the Papers I shall now insert, which speak for themselves, and contain a pretty full View of this Matter, from the Parties principally concerned. I begin with a Paper relating to this Matter, and entituled, Letter from Archbishop Sharp to the Archbishop of Canterbury, dated, in Two Copies before me, in the Year 1674. but without the Month and Day. It appears to me to have been writ before the Matter was tabled in Council, and follows.

May it please your Grace,

Letter from the Archbishop of St. Andrews to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

‘Albeit I have kept long silent, and my Correspondence with your Grace hath not been so frequent as formerly; yet, like the Son of Cresus, I must cry out when my Mother the Church is in Hazard, and, I believe, if I should hold my Peace, the very Stones should speak, for the Gospel is now at Stake. We are assaulted not only by Foreigners, our old Enemies the Phanaticks, who were never of us; but also, alas! My Lord, there is a Fire set to our own Bed-straw, by Sons of our own Bowels, who Viper-like seek to eat that which produced them. They are all crying for a General Convocation of the Clergy, upon no other account but to shake off our Yoke, and break our Bands asunder.’

‘I hope your Grace will consider your own Hazard, and what Disorders have followed in England, upon our Distempers in Scotland: When our Neighbour’s House is on Fire, ’tis Time to look to our own. Their great Aim and Design is against me, who, God knows, like Paul, have spent my self in the Service of this Church, and am yet willing to spend what remains. I believe no Man can say I have run in vain, but if I be not supported by his Majesty’s special Favour, through your Grace’s Interposition, I shall inevitably suffer Shipwrack; and that were of no Value upon my own Account, but I see, through my Side, the Church shall be wounded.’

‘The only Remedy is to procure his Majesty to discharge the Convocation, which will calm the Storm, and quench all those malicious Designs which are now on Foot to disturb the Peace of the Church. They are already come to that Height of Insolence, that one Mr. Cant a Presbyter, has shaken off all Fear of God, and Regard to his Canonical Oath, in calling me a great Grievance to the Church. My dear Lord and Brother, bestir your self in this Affair, and remember the Wo is pronounced against those who are at Ease when Zion is in Distress. So recommending this to your Care, I am,

My Lord,

Directed, For his Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Your Grace’s affectionate Brother, and faithful Servant,

St. Andrews.

The Ministers examined by a Committee of Council, July 2.

Whether this whining Letter put the Bishop of Canterbury upon using his Interest at Court in this Matter, I know not, but no Stone is left unturned here to curb this alleged Insolence of these who differed from the Primate. Accordingly, I find the Archbishop tabled this Matter before the Council, and begins the Persecution: And, July 2^d 1674. the Council being informed by the Archbishop of St. Andrews, of some insolent Carriage and Ex-

Expressions of Mr. Archibald Turner, Mr. John Robertson, and Mr. Andrew Cant, Ministers at Edinburgh, at a Meeting of the Presbytery, and before and thereafter; do remit to the Archbishop of St. Andrews, Lord Privy Seal, Earls of Kincardin and Dundonald, President and Advocate, to meet and examine them thereanent, and to examine Witnesses, with Power to confine and imprison as they find Cause, and report.

What they found and did thereupon, I know not; but it would seem that an Account was sent up to London, and that is the Foundation of the Letter from the King, which I shall just now speak of. And a Meeting of Bishops is thought proper at St. Andrews, and the Bishop of Dumblain is acquainted to wait upon it.

A Meeting of the Bishops at St. Andrews.

All the Account I can give of this, is from a Letter from Bishop Ramsay to this Meeting. He did come to them, and used abundance of Freedom with the Primate. This was to ill taken, that he is advised to withdraw, which he did, leaving the following Letter behind him.

Bishop Ramsay's Letter to the Archbishop when he withdraws from the Meeting.

May it please your Grace,

I was in obedience to your Letter requiring me, that I presumed to come to this Meeting, wherein, being thus called, I thought I might have spoken my Opinion freely, according as my Reason did dictate to me: Yet no sooner did I offer to speak my Thoughts before the Bishop and Dean of Edinburgh, upon a Particular then debated, but your Grace did charge me as unchristian and uncivil, though I was upon my guard to speak in all submissive Terms, your Grace having signified your Displeasure with me, by refusing me your Hand at first Meeting; and, my Lords the Bishops know with what sharp Expressions your Grace treated me Yesterday, for no other Cause, but that I humbly desired to know in what Capacity we were to act in this Meeting, whether as a Provincial or National Synod; and once and again your Grace required me to be gone from the Meeting: However, I was loth to go away presently, but stayed till that Meeting was ended. Yet finding it is not fit for me to appear at a Second Diet, after your Grace required me to be gone, and also apprehending there may be Hazard for me any more to speak my Mind in this Meeting, which I conclude from the Warning one of the right Reverend Bishops gave me Yesternight, who told me, he believed my Neck was yuiking, which Hazard I have the more Reason to apprehend, because I heard it spoken in the Meeting, that there were Letters from the King's Majesty, which your Grace hath shewed to the rest of my Reverend Brethren, and kept up from me; therefore I resolve to give your Grace and this Meeting no further Trouble by appearing in it: Only I protest for the Liberty of my Episcopal Seat, that in all Time coming it may be free for the Bishops of Dumblain to be at the Meetings of the Bishops, and be authorized to bring Presbyters with them to the same, as well as any other Bishops, which hath not been granted to me at this Time.

And though I cannot at this Time be any more present, yet I still presume to offer my humble Opinion anent the Motion about Canons, which was spoken of Yesternight, and lay those Considerations following at your Feet, and the rest of my Lords the Bishops.

1st. Although none in this Church is more grieved for long Want of Canons, nor wishes a more speedy Settlement of them in a regular Way, than my self, yet it may be considered whether (especially at this Time) it may not possibly increase our Schism and Disorders, by raising a Jealousie in the Minds both of the orderly Clergy and others, as if we intended to rule them in an arbitrary Way, if we alter these Methods of making Ecclesiastical Laws which have been constantly used since the Reformation, and was pleaded for by the Bishops themselves in the Year 1619. as Archbishop Spotswood records in his History. 2^{dly}. If we can legally form Canons for the Church, in a Meeting which is neither National, Provincial, nor Diocesan, but only consultative, as your Grace declared this to be Yesternight, since by an express Act of Parliament it is declared, that no Act or Canon shall be of any force or Validity, or be obeyed by any in this Church, but what shall be agreed on by the National Synod, as the said Act seems clearly to appoint. 3^{dly}. Whether it be not very expedient, that after so long a Want of Canons, there should be full and mature Deliberation had thereanent, lest they be either defective or redundant, and so still keep this poor Church in an unsettled Condition, while we think to settle the same: For your Lordships may easily see how improbable it is, upon the first hearing of these Canons read, (for some of us never saw them as yet) that we should be able to cognosce seriously of every Thing necessary to be considered in so great an Affair, and so important to the Church. 4^{thly}. Though the Archbishop of Glasgow was not written to, that he might attend this Meeting, yet it is not unknown to your Grace and Lordships, how fitted he is to give Advice in the Matter of Canons; nor doubt I but it will be expedient that he should be consulted in an Affair that concerns the whole Church, since he is a distinct Metropolitan. 5^{thly}. Whether or not the Matters of Faith and Worship ought to be considered, by the same Necessity that Canons are, since we both feel and have Reason to fear Danger to this Church, by Heresy and Irreligion, no less than by Scandals in Practice. And therefore I leave it before your Lord-

ships grave Consideration, if it be fitting to do the Affairs that are intrinsical to the Church by Halves, yea by smaller Pieces, and not rather be carefully preparing these, than Canons only; that when they are prepared, according to the Warrant granted by his Majesty, many Years ago, to that Effect, his Majesty may be humbly solicited to indict a National Synod, against such Time as his Majesty in his Royal Wiidom shall think fittest, and most consistent with his other Affairs. And since the Schism of this Church hath opened the Door to most of our other Evils, I also move with all Submission (if there be any Harm) that Endeavours be used to cure the Schism in a Church Way, and that Essays be made to bring them to our Church, inviting the gravest and most sober of these Ministers that yet have not concurred with us, that so at least the Wideness of the Breach may be contracted, and the Church more fortified against all its Distempers.'

'And thus I have presumed to empty my most sincere and inward Thoughts touching that Affair, as far as the Shortness of Time would allow: And as I beg your Grace and Lordships Pardon, if in any Thing I have offended, so I hope your Goodness will forgive the Trouble of this Letter, which I shall lengthen no further than to assure your Grace, however I be disposed, your Assistance and Direction by the unerring Spirit of God, for recovering this poor Church, shall always be prayed for by, &c.'

Directed, For his Grace the Archbishop of St. Andrews, and my Lords the Bishops of his Province, now convened at St. Andrews.

P. S. I presume to add, that it is my humble Request, that your Grace may interpose for taking off the Sentence inflicted upon these loyal and worthy Watchmen the Ministers of Edinburgh, lest Disorders grow more in that City, and from thence infect other Places.

The Sentence against the Ministers of Edinburgh, spoken of in this Postscript, will best appear from the following Letter sent to the Council upon this Affair, which was before the above Meeting of the Bishops at St. Andrews; of which I have not the Date, but only find it was this Year. When Information had been sent up, in June or July, of this Matter, the King sent down this Letter, dated July 16th, 1674. which I find read in Council July 28th.

King's Letter to the Council translating the Bishops of Dumblain and Brechin, and removing the Ministers of Edinburgh, July 16. 1674.

Right Trusty and well beloved, &c. We greet you well. As We cannot but, when Occasion is given, signify Our Royal Displeasure against all factious and divisive Ways in the Church, unbecoming that orderly Subordination and Dependence, which is owned by the Canons of the Christian Church, and the Laws of that Our ancient Kingdom; so from Our Princely Zeal and Care that the Authority and Honour of Bishops in their due Subordination may be preserved, and all Contrivances against them suppressed and punished, We have thought fit to write to the Archbishop of St. Andrews, that it is Our Royal Pleasure, that forthwith there be a Translation of the Bishop of Dumblain, to that of the Isles; and that the Bishop of Brechin be appointed ordinarily to preach at the College Kirk of Edinburgh; that the Bishop of Edinburgh remove Mr. Turner, Mr. Robertson, and Mr. Cant, from the Exercise of the Ministry in Edinburgh, or any Place in his Diocese without Licence, and that Mr. Hamilton be removed from Leith. Therefore, as upon other Occasions, We have recommended Our Bishops in that Church to be countenanced and assisted by the Lords of Our Privy Council in the Discharge of their Offices, and that their Persons may be kept in Safety and due Respect; so at this Time especially We judge it necessary, when their Authority is not only assaulted by Schismatics, but contemned and violated by those who are solemnly engaged to pay them Obedience Canonical, to require you to employ your Authority for that Effect: And in particular We do positively require you, to cause the Bishop of Dumblain, within Two Weeks, to remove from Residence in any Place of the Diocese of Glasgow, and forbear meddling with Matters relative to the Church, save in his Diocese of the Isles, but as he shall be called thereunto by his Ordinary the Archbishop of Glasgow, or by the Archbishop of St. Andrews, upon Occasion, as Primate: That ye cause, within Ten Days, Mr. Turner to remove from Edinburgh to Glasgow, there to abide till Our further Pleasure be signified: That, within the Space of Ten Days, ye cause Mr. Robertson to be removed to the Minister's Manse of Auchterless, in the Diocese of Aberdeen, there to abide till Our further Pleasure: That within the like Space Mr. Cant be removed to Libbertoun, there to abide till Our further Pleasure: And within the said Space Mr. Hamilton removed from Leith to the Manse of Cramond, till further Orders. For all which this shall be your Warrant, and so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Castle at Windsor, the 16th Day of July 1674. and of Our Reign the 26th Year. By his Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

Remarks upon it.

Here indeed is summar Justice, and the full Exercise of the Royal Supremacy; Bishops and Ministers removed and confined, without any Process or Trial I know of, but merely by Letter Letters and Informations sent up by their Enemies here. The King's Letter was obeyed in all Points of it, and July 28th, the Council send a Macer to intimate the King's Pleasure to all of them; (and upon the 30th of July, as we saw in the Council's Letter of this Date last Year, they signify to the Duke so much) and order each of them to give Obedience as accords.

The same Day the Bishop of Dumblain presents a Petition to the Council, anent which I know no further than what is contained in his Letter to the Bishop of St. Andrews, just now to be insert. Only I find this short Letter to Lawderdale in the Council-books. 'May it please your Grace, The inclosed Petition from the Bishop of Dumblain, being this Day presented to us, we thought not fit to meddle in the Affair, but have transmitted it to your Grace, that his Majesty may be acquainted therewith. I am, &c.' Whatever was in the Petition, the Bishop of Dumblain, (for although by the King's Letter he is ordered to be translated to the Isles, yet he still in his Papers keeps his Stile of Dumblain) takes the first Opportunity to go up to Court himself.

Bishop of Dumblain petitions the Council.

Accordingly, in April 1675. I find both him and the Primate at London, where the Two Bishops fall a scolding in their Letters; they give the best Account of their Difference themselves, and so I insert them. The Bishop of Dumblain begins this Paper War with the following Letter, of the Date June 7th, 1675. full of severe Charges.

He and the Primate go up to Court.

May it please your Grace,

IT is not unknown to your Grace, what obliged me to come to this Place, or occasioned my Stay so long in it. I have Ground to believe it was you who abused his Majesty's Ears with that Account, which his Majesty takes Notice of in his Letter to you, July 16th, 1674 and was the Ground of what his Majesty was pleased to order concerning me, both in that, and the Letter to the Privy Council, of the same Date. It was you who not only intimated his Majesty's Pleasure, contained in your own Letter, very surprisingly to me, and in an extrajudicial and unfatherly Manner, without any ghottly Exhortations; but also influenced the Council to intimate their Order, without previous calling me to be heard: And when I gave in my Petition to the Council, containing my Purpose to give exact Obedience to his Majesty's Pleasure, but only prayed them to represent my Case to his sacred Majesty, that, for the Justification of my Innocence, (since I was not called before Sentence) I might be put to the strictest Trial, anent these Crimes informed against me; (a Desire, which coming from the meanest Laick, should, for its Justice, have been kindly entertained by Churchmen) yet, you know how vigorously you opposed it: Yea, after the Council was pleased, notwithstanding your Opposition, to transmit my Petition to his Majesty's Consideration, you shortly after came here, where you have stayed since, having no small Influence on them who manage publick Affairs. It might have been reasonably hop'd, that, as Primate, you should have concerned your self to help forward a favourable Answer to the Petition of a Bishop of your own Province, so just in it self, and so transmitted; or, though your Lordship had no Regard to me, yet the Consideration of the Good of the Church, in that Corner where you know Disorders are increased since my Restraint, together with the Danger of the Preparative, should have prompted your Grace to do somewhat, to bear Witness that your Zeal for the Church was stronger than your private Pique at me. But since I came here, I have been amazed to find a Person of your Character and Parts, could think it worthy of himself and his Pains, to make and spread such Reports as I am told you have done. May I be so bold as to ask your Grace, if indeed you believe me to be a Phanatick; or upon what Shadow of Ground you either think or report it to others? Have you any Letters under my Hand, avouching that Presbyterial Government, even but for its Substantials, is jure divino? Or, that I was thinking de mutando solo, when the Parliament made the first Discoveries of their Inclination to restore Episcopacy? And your Grace may remember, that I was sequestrate by the Usurpers, from the Exercise of my Charge, till the King's happy Restoration; and you know how early I discovered my Perswasion touching Church-government, and how I acted for it in the Synod of Lothian, under the Eye of the greatest Patrons of Presbytery; and do you think I am turned Phanatick because a Bishop? I beseech your Grace to consider how unjustifiable those Slanders will be, when put to the Touch. Wherefore, I desire (I shall not say the Favour, but the Justice of you) that you may either choose an indifferent Person, who may consider your Allegations, with their Evidences, and my Answers; or, that without more Noise (considering that my Sufferings already are far above the Merits of all you can lay to my Charge) you'll be pleas'd to interpose, and wipe off the Dirt by the same Hand that threw it on me, whereby I may be restored to his Majesty's Favour, and my just Right: By doing whereof, you may cross a Lust of Malice, but can neither wound Conscience nor Honour. But, if you please neither of these, nor any Thing else than my being an Holocaust to your Revenge; then let me beseech you to allow me the same Freedom in representing you, which you have taken concerning me: And I assure you, though I will have foul Things to represent, I will do it in fairer Manner than that in which you used me; and this Candor in warning you is one Step of it. My Lord, if you think strange of the Terms and Manner of this Address, I must be excused; for I would not put what I was obliged to say in fairer or better Expressions; nor can I believe you should expect I would come to trouble you myself, after you had often discovered your Displeasure when I waited on you, and required me to be gone out of your own House, after you had called me to it, and at length pursued me to this Height and Continuance of Suffering, without just Grounds. However, My Lord, I have a just Veneration for your Character, and shall be loth to dishonour any that bears it, if you do not constrain me, by continuing to oppress me unjustly, and by endeavouring to shut up against me all Avenues for Redress: Yet, even when this Force shall be put upon me, I will endeavour to follow such Methods as are agreeable to the Canons and Practice of the Church in such Cases, so much as unavoidable Circumstances will permit me. And herein I desire not to be mistaken, as if I sent this, out of my trifling Vanity, to fret you; I do it not, but out of Duty to warn you. They are no Trifles I have to say; and if you condemn this Warning, I will be exonerated before God and Men to publish them. But I hope and desire you will prevent me, by taking sober Resolutions; for I declare upon my Honesty, that no Man knows that (much less what I have written) so that it is in your Power yet to make it publick, or keep it quiet; do which pleases you: But let me assure you (though you would seem not to believe it) that I am a true Son of the Church, a zealous Lover of Order and due Subordination in it; and wherein you are truly for these, you shall never find me other than,

May it please your Grace,

If your Grace return no Answer this or the next Day, I will conclude you resolve to give me none.

Your Grace's most faithful Servant,

Ja. Dumbланen.

No question this Letter would put the Primate to use his Politicks, and in his Return he spares not his Brother. Which of them speak Truth I cannot determine; but one of them must be Liars, for they flatly contradict other, as will appear from the Primate's Return.

Axyard, June 8th, 1675.

My Lord,

The Primate's
Answer.

Yesterday in the Morning, while I was going from the privy Garden to the Park, a serving Man put a Letter in my Hand, from your Lordship; which having read, I shall, in Gratification of your pressing Desire, send this Return. Your Lordship knows best what obliged you to come to this Place, or occasioned your so long Stay in it, having notified neither to me; and you are mistaken if you think that I came, or have stayed, in reference to you or your Case, or have taken Pains to make or spread Reports, as you are told I have done: For I declare I have not mentioned your Name to the King, nor spoke of you to any, before I received your Letter, save to these who told me you had been with them, and spoken of me and my Way, in reference to the Church and to you; and what I said, was in just Defence and Vindication, against what you had most injuriously laid at my Door. Your Lordship has charged me with many Things of which I am innocent, and for which, neither as a Privy Counsellor, nor an Archbishop, am I obliged to give you an Account. I have not made it my Business to enquire into your Perswasions in former or later Years, nor into the meritorious Actings or Sufferings you value your self so much upon, before the King's Restoration; nor am I solicitous whom you mean, who, by Letters under his Hand, avoucheth that Presbytery is juris divini, or was thinking de mutando se to, when the Parliament was about to restore Episcopacy: For better Men than either you or I, have, without any criminous Imputation, changed their Sentiments about the Form of Governments and publick Administrations, which they have owned by the Prefs and the Sword. I do not think, nor said to any, you are turned Phanatick because become a Bishop; but I think there may be a schismatical and unpeaceable Bishop in the Church, and have more than once admonished you to take heed of that divisive Temper, and giving way to that dictating and assuming Humor, by which you have been observed to scandalize your Superiors and Brethren, before you was a Bishop, and since; and shall moreover fairly tell your Lordship, that since your coming to England, I have heard, that some, who think you had no small Hand in that Persecution, have declared that you contributed for promoting the Phanatick Interest, and have not spared to slander some of your own Order, in their Absence, Absence, which, I believe, is not unknown to you. I had little Opportunity to converse with you in my whole Life. I remember when I did you some good Offices, but cannot say I had the Opportunity to speak with you above twice or thrice, and then overly; and several Years before you were made a Bishop, and since, I have said nothing but what I have spoke to your self, upon divers Occasions, before some Bishops and others of the Clergy, who have testified I did not require you to be gone out of my House at St. Andrews: And after, at Edinburgh, when you was at my Lodging, you did meet with no uncivil Usage from me. So that when some told me you made that your Excuse, for not paying ordinary Civilities to me since you came hither, I said, I was not to challenge that Strangeness which was noticed by others. It was a strange Alledgance of your Lordship, and you are the first Clergyman of any Degree, whom I heard complain of my uncivil Usage of any of them. And 'tis no less strange, that you alledge my Continuance to oppress you, for endeavouring to shut up against you all Avenues for Redress, as you phrase it, without any Evidence or Proof; but that you will set up me as the Object of your blustering against, on a pretence to the Errand, you know best, you came and stayed here for. I shall further add, that the scolding Language, and menacing Warnings you are pleased to treat me with, by your Letter, do not fret or discompose me, though you say, They are not Trifles you have to bring against me. And as my own Heart tells me, I harbour no Malice, Pique, and Revenge against your Lordship, which you do so positively charge against me; so I believe I can justify, to all my Brethren of our Order, (whose Judgment I shall not decline, as to all you can accuse me of) or to any else who shall be appointed by competent Authority, that whatever I have done or said against your Lordship, did proceed from no other Motive but from the Sense of that Duty I ow to the King, to the Church, and to the Office I bear, which, in the Judgment of my Brethren, you have violated. And though I might have expected more Deference and Regard from your Lordship, than hitherto I have found; yet, if that the unavoidable Circumstances you write you are under, will not permit you to follow these Methods which are consistent with the great Veneration you say you have for my Character, but that you must endeavour to dishonour the Person who bears it, without transgressing the Canons and Practices of the Church, by representing those foul Things you say you have against me, I hope God will arm me with Patience under this Injustice, and also, from your own Hand, wipe off all that Dirt that shall be thrown upon my Integrity, which I will own against all the Methods of expressing that bitter and causeless Enmity and Spite, you have not stuck to profess against me in Scotland, and since you came hither. You know I have not been a Stranger in the Lot of being attempted by the Barkings of the malicious Defamations, and the printed Libels of the Adversaries to that Order, for which, I may say, without Vanity, I have suffered and done more and longer, than your Lordship can pretend to, or these who malign me. And now if you should follow that Trade, as you have begun, others may think, quamvis ego dignus essem hac contumelia, indignus tamen tu qui faceres. And since you are pleased, under your Hand, to give me Warning that you will represent foul Things against me, which you will publish, and yet do not mention the particular Crimes, but leaves it to my Choice whether to make it publick or to hold it quiet, which is upon the Matter to take with the Guilt of whatever Malice shall suggest or alledge against me: This, I confess, you may declare upon your Honesty, is a generous Offer from a true Son of the Church, a zealous Lover of Order and due Subordination, to be made to one to whom you swear Canonick Obedience, and do now sign your self ever to be a most faithful Servant: But on the honourable Terms of his lying for ever at his Mercy for his Reputation, I will not return you the Compliment, nor use that Candor you have used to me, by giving me Warning of all these hideous Things you have to boast me with; but tell you, I live under the Protection of a just Prince, and the Laws which take Notice of publick Libellers; and I do rejoyce in the Testimony of my Conscience, which charges me with nothing in my Administrations, for which I have Cause to be ashamed before Men. And when you consider the Hazard of owning your self as the Author of these foul Aspersions you warn me to expect, and shall return to a more sober and sedate Recollection of Mind, and of your Duty, you shall find, through God's Grace, that my Carriage shall be such as becomes the Duty of my Station, which forbids my entertaining Malice, Pique or Revenge against any, and enjoyns Charity, Compassion and Long-suffering towards all, especially those who labour under the Infirmities of impotent Rage and Exasperation of Spirit. In this Sense I am,

A Meeting of Bishops appointed to consider this Matter, Sept.
this Year.

Bishop of Dumblain his Answers to the Queries proposed by them to him.

How this Paper War ended I know not, neither is it of any great Import, their Debates being mostly personal; and I should not have inserted them, had it not been to give some Specimen of both these Bishops, from their own Pens: But at length a Court is appointed, of several Bishops, probably of both the Provinces, to make an Enquiry into Bishop Ramsay's Case and Conduct, and it met September this Year.

In the Beginning of September two Queries were proposed to the Bishop by this Meeting, which I shall insert, with his Answers to them, which he gave under a Protestation, in the Entry, against what he reckons Informalities in their Procedure.

James Bishop of Dumblain his Answers to the Two Interrogatories, given in Writing to him by the most Reverend and Right Reverend the Archbishops and Bishops, who are upon the Commission granted by his Majesty, for Trial of the said Bishop. Given September 4th, 1675.

May it please your Grace and Lordships.

‘ UPon the Citation sent me, I have, according to my Duty, appeared before you; and although your Grace and Lordships were pleased to declare, that you had done more than you were obliged to do, that you caused read in my Hearing his Sacred Majesty's Commission, authorizing your Lordships in this Affair, wherein I am so deeply concerned, and did refuse my humble and earnest Desire for the Use of the said Commission, on a Double thereof, though but for a little Time, that I might be the better able to consider the Contents thereof, so that I have not so much as seen the same but at Distance; yet I find my self obliged (though still adhering to this humble Desire) to give Answer to the Two Interrogatories given to me in Writing by your Grace and Lordships: Which being these,

‘ 1st. Whether I obtained Leave, either from the King's Majesty or my Metropolitan, to repair to Court in April last?’

‘ 2^{dly}. Whether I did abet or assist the Motion and Petition for a National Synod, without the Consent of my Superior, and the Bishops of the Church?’

‘ Before I proceed to the Answer, I must crave pardon to put your Grace and Lordships in Mind, that I have received no formal Libel, nor am pursued upon the Consideration of the Relevancy, but am proceeded against by way of Inquisition, and do resolve to give Answer thereto, in the Innocence and Ingenuity of Heart suitable to my Station, whereunto I have freely condescended, that I might do all in my Power for clearing his sacred Majesty anent these Informations which have been given against me, and satisfy your Grace and Lordships in the Methods you were pleased to oblige me to: And therefore I do in all Humility protest, that if your Grace and Lordships intend that the same should be the Foundation of any Sentence, whereby I may be concerned in my Office, Fortune or Liberty; in that Case I may have a formal Libel, and be allowed to advise the Relevancy thereof, and give in all legal Defences, in regard I have used that Plainness and Ingenuity in the subsequent Answers for the Ends foresaid: But hoping your Grace and Lordships will take no Advantage, I proceed. And,

‘ To the First I answer, by confessing I did not. I sought not Leave from his Majesty, not from the Want (God knows) of all loyal and dutiful Respects; but that finding I had been secretly misrepresented to his Majesty, and thereby a Sentence procured, which I found heavy upon me, and that my Petition to the Secret Council was by their Lordships favourably transmitted to his Majesty Nine Months before, I was grieved any longer herere in reatu, and thereupon presumed to address my self to his sacred Majesty, both to clear my self of the Crimes informed against me, and to be exonerated of the Sentence, not doubting in the least that his sacred Majesty graciously allowed any of his Subjects who found themselves grieved, to put their humble Petition in his Royal Hands, without previous Addresses for Leave, which I (who had never been a Day's Journey from the Place of my Residence before that Time) judged proper only for Persons of greater Quality and Character than I: Yet if there was any Error in this, I hope it was pardoned, when his Majesty was graciously pleased, without Challenge, to allow me Access to his sacred Presence.’

‘ That I did not ask Leave of my Metropolitan, was upon these Considerations, 1st. That his Lordship had not been in this Kingdom for near Nine Months before I took Journey, but was at Court, whither I was to go. 2^{dly}. Because I was by the foresaid Sentence inhibited the Exercise of my Function Eight Months before my Journey, and so not tied to that Residence, which, I suppose, brings a Bishop under the Canonical Obligation, to ask his Metropolitan's Leave to go from his Charge. And, 3^{dly}. To deal plainly, I wanted not Ground to believe, that he who had injured me by that secret, and, I hope, groundless Account sent to Court concerning me, was so nearly related to my Metropolitan, that I could promise my self little Success, though I had sought his Grace's Permission to go, and counteract it before his Majesty. However, if in this I have neglected any Part of my Duty, I beg his Majesty's Pardon, and do promise, that if his Majesty shall be graciously pleased to restore me to the free Exercise of my Calling, I shall be as careful to reside at my Charge, and not go abroad without Permission, as any Bishop in this Church. And as this was none of the Causes of my Sentence, (which was some Months after it was inflicted) so I hope it will be no Ground to continue it longer.

As for the Second Interrogatory, I deny that I did abet or assist the Petition for a National Synod. And tho' I am not obliged to say any more upon the Question, as it is stated, yet, to remove all Jealousie of my Candor in this Affair, I confess freely that it was my Opinion, that a National Synod was necessary for settling a Church, which wanted an established Rule of Faith, Worship and Discipline, and saw no Ground then to conceal mine Opinion, wherever the Subject came to be discoursed of: But this was not an Opinion taken up at or near the Time when the Desire of it was called unreasonable. I first began to have it by the little that I had read of Ecclesiastical History and Discipline. But after that Act passed, which is the 4th Act of the 3^d Session of Parliament, holden since his Majesty's happy Restoration, entituled, An Act for the Establishment and Constitution of a National Synod, I never doubted but at any Time, and to any Person I might say as his Majesty saith in that Act, viz. That a National Synod is necessary and fit, for the Honour and Service of Almighty GOD, the Good and Quiet of the Church, and the better Government thereof in Unity and in Order. In which also it is declared and appointed, that there shall be a National Synod, and who shall be the lawful Members of which it shall consist.

And I was the more perswaded of the Harmlessness of this Opinion, because his Majesty's Royal Inclinations appeared for many Years together, after the passing of this Act, to be for granting such a Synod, as soon as the Matters to be treated and determined therein were prepared. For which end, (as I remember) about, or not long after the Time that Act passed, his Majesty did grant his Royal Warrant and Command to the Bishops, and some others of the Clergy, to meet and prepare a Liturgy, Canons, &c. first to be considered by his Majesty, and it approved, to be by his Majesty offered to the Consideration of the National Synod: But in this Account I beg Pardon, if I have not kept exactly by the Words of that Royal Warrant, which I never had the Honour to see, but received this Account (which I have transcribed as faithfully as my Memory can furnish me) when the late Right Reverend the Bishop of Edinburgh was pleased to honour me with some Share in that Work. And these his Majesty's gracious Inclinations to have that Synod held speedily, appeared further, when, not long after his Majesty had granted the foresaid Warrant, I am credibly informed that his Majesty gave Commission to the Right Honourable the Earl of Roths, &c. to hold, and represent his sacred Majesty at such a Synod: Which, after a long Time's Continuance, being expired, a Commission to the same purpose was granted to a noble and potent Prince the Duke of Lawderdale his Grace, which also continued for some Years; before the expiring whereof, (I am told) some Presbyters in the Diocese of Edinburgh, did speak publicly in the Synod their Desires to see a National Synod. But it is true, that during the Continuance of both these Commissions, there was no National Synod held; and wherever the Stop of it lay, I think I am sure the King's most excellent Majesty sufficiently manifested his princely Inclinations and Zeal to have it: For, besides these Instances mentioned, I do well remember, his Grace the Duke of Lawderdale, after ending of that Session of Parliament, which his Grace held in the Year 1672. his Grace, speaking to all the Bishops, did desire their Lordships to think speedily upon these Things, which were necessary for settling the Church in its Intrinsics, mentioning particularly Canons, Catechism, and Form of Worship; wherein his Grace assured their Lordships of his Majesty's Royal Concurrence, as well as his own Service, (in whatsoever Station his Majesty would be pleased to place him) for the establishing these, and for the enacting such Laws as their Lordships had judged necessary. Whence I hope it will be granted, that it was no Mistake that upon these Grounds I did believe so concerning his Majesty's Inclinations for a National Synod: And albeit I shall be found to have mistaken, I am sure there was nothing in that Error contrary to profound Loyalty and Charity, and therefore shall humbly expect Pardon from his Majesty's transcendent Clemency.

And I hope it will yet appear more pardonable, if (supported by the abovementioned Grounds) I did, somewhat more than before, express my Wishes for such a Synod, being under the Fervours kindled by my Consecration but so lately passed, and finding not so much as a Catechism appointed in the Church, nor a Rule by which to try the Faith, and correct the Manners of my Diocese; as also that the foresaid Act contains an express Prohibition to all Archbishops and Bishops, to observe and keep any Act, Canon, Order, or Ordinance, but what shall be considered, consulted, and agreed upon by the said Synod; and get my self (the most unworthy) advanced to be one but of Fourteen Persons, who are to answer to God Almighty and his Son the Lord Jesus Christ, for this poor Church,

‘ which, though it had frightened me to snatch at Remedies, which wiser Men, and more conversant in State-affairs may think unseasonable, the Transportation is pitiable, and the Cause of it commendable: Yet I affirm, that as it was no new Opinion taken up at or nigh that Time judged unseasonable, but the Prosecution and Continuation of an old Motion entertained once by the most I conversed with; so I wonder upon what Grounds the plain and obvious, and by his Majesty and Parliament, (where my Lords the Bishops were sitting) an enacted Remedy for this Church’s Distempers, should have been suggested to his sacred Majesty as a Contrivance. Nor hath it yet appeared to me, how any evil Design against the State could have been effected, among so many loyal Churchmen, as that Meeting must consist of, where nothing can be treated of but what his Majesty or his Commissioner (who also hath a Negative) should deliver, or cause be delivered to the Archbishop, President thereof.’

‘ Nor is it almost supposable, that his Majesty or his Commissioner would propose any Phanatical Design against the Order of the Church, or that the Archbishops, Bishops, Deans, and one from every Meeting of Exercise chosen by the Bishops, with the learned Doctors from the Universities, would entertain it: Nor did I ever think that a National Synod could ever be indicted, but allenarly by his Majesty, who only hath the Authority both of calling and dissolving them, and is sole supreme Judge on Earth of the fittest Times when to indict them, at his Pleasure; nor did I ever hear any of these Persons who appeared in that Desire, but always speak their Wishes for it with a full Submission to his Majesty’s Pleasure.’

‘ And I utterly deny that ever my Superior intimated to me, that his Majesty was displeased with my Opinion, anent the Necessity of a National Synod for settling the Church, until the Time that his Grace intimated his Majesty’s Sentence pronounced against me: Yea, on the contrary, when I was at the Meeting of St. Andrews, in July 1674. I was not honoured to read or hear these Letters, which I am told came from the King and his Grace the Duke of Lawderdale; though all the rest of the Bishops, and some Presbyters were allowed that Favour.’

‘ Thus I have answered the Two Interrogatories given me, with much Plainness and Ingenuity, and perhaps more than was necessary, as desiring rather to err on that than the other Hand, not doubting but your Grace and Lordships, entrusted by his Majesty in this Affair, will, according to my Protestation entred in the Beginning, take no Advantage against me from this my Plainness, and being contented to be treated by way of Inquisition, and answering so ingenuously, but will justly, and (where I need) favourably transmit my Case to his sacred Majesty, at whose Feet I throw my self, that, from his Royal Goodness and Clemency, I may obtain Forgiveness of all that his sacred Majesty shall think a Fault, and be restored to the free Exercise of my Calling, if I shall be judged any wise useful in the Church: And I shall, through the Grace of God, be faithful in observing such Laws and Canons as shall be set to me, and ever pray for his Majesty’s Happiness here and hereafter, and the Church’s Peace, as is the Duty of

The unworthiest of the Servants of GOD.

His Answers to other Two Queries, Sept. 6.

No Accounts of this Affair have come to my Hand, save these I have from the Registers, and the principal Papers inserted, and so I cannot tell the Impression this Paper made upon the Meeting, nor how it was taken. The Bishop very fairly owns his Opinion in the Matter of the Synod, which was so cross the Primate’s Inclinations, and gives his Reasons. The Meeting propose another Pair of Queries to him; and upon the 6th of September he returns his Answers to them, which will best speak for themselves.

James Bishop of Dumblain his Answers to the Second Couple of Queries by the most Reverend and Right Reverend the Archbishops and Bishops, who are upon the Commission granted by his sacred Majesty for trying the said Bishop. Given September 6th, 1675.

May it please your Grace and Lordships,

‘ Upon the 4th of this Instant I gave in my Answers to the Two Queries I received from you in Writ; and it may be remembered, that, before the reading thereof, I made an Apology, that although I had made all possible Haste to make ready mine Answers, yet the Shortness of the Time had made it impossible for me to get the same transcribed in mundo, and therefore I begged your Grace and Lordships Pardon and Allowance, either to carry that Paper which I read, with me, till I had transcribed it, or, if you thought not fit to favour me so far, I offered to deliver the same upon Trust to my Lord the Bishop of Argyle, Clerk to the Meeting, provided I might but be permitted to sit by his Lordship till

'till he saw me transcribe the same, offering to leave the last written Double with his Lordship, after he had seen the same compared: And though your Lordships seemed to grant the First Part of my Desire, and allowed me to carry the said Paper with me, yet, not long after I was gone out from your Presence, it pleased my Lord Bishop of Argyle to come to me, and desire a Sight of the said Paper, which I most readily granted, saying in express Words, My Lord, I give you this in Trust. I confess indeed, that after he had got it into his Hands, his Lordship was pleased to say, that he would not take it on Trust; yet did not deliver the same back to me, but went into the Meeting therewith. I was indeed the less concerned in the Time, remembring what I had said before, and what Permission I had received from your Grace and Lordships: But I confess I was surprized, when, upon my being called in before you, I found both the Branches of my Desire refused, and that with much ado a Copy thereof was promised to me, which I doubt not your Grace and Lordships will make good, and also transmit a just and fair Double of it to his sacred Majesty.

'Your Grace and Lordships were pleased to interrogate me upon Two Things, but refused to give me them in Writing; however, the Substance and Strength of them is,

'Whether the Bishop of Dumblain heard the Bishop of Edinburgh reason against the Motion for a National Synod, in the Archbishop of St. Andrews his Chamber?

'Whether the said Bishop of Dumblain knew, that the Motion for a National Synod was contrary to the Judgment of his Superior the Archbishop of St. Andrews his Grace?

'Since this Method of Inquisition is followed with me, and I hope no Advantage is to be taken against me by it, and adhering to the humble Protestation made in my last, I proceed to make Answer.'

'As for the First, your Grace and Lordships cannot but remember, that when it was first proposed to me, I begged a little Time, that I might speak with my Lord Bishop of Edinburgh in private; which his Lordship, in your Presence, was pleased to reject, saying, That he would not speak in private with me upon that Subject, and that he thought never to do it in his Life: So that I think my self exonerated, and at Freedom to declare whatsoever is necessary, for clearing my self of any thing designed against me by this Question, though it palled more privately betwixt his Lordship and me, since he both gave the Occasion for the Question, and publickly refused to allow me the Favour of speaking with him, that either I might have obtained his Lordship's Consent, or, by some proper Medium, have been delivered from the Necessity of speaking freely; yet I shall speak nothing but what I can prove by Witnesses, if Need be.'

'To this first Question then I answer, That although I will not question but his Lordship did so reason, since he has asserted it, it being possible, yea, probable, that about or after April 1674. he might do so; yet, I crave Pardon to say, I do not well remember it; but I do distinctly remember, that all the Winter before, he was for a National Synod, in the same Terms and Measure that I was, and gave this for a Reason, That the Church would never be well, so long as my Lord St. Andrews was upon the Head of it, or at least till there were Rules and Limits set to his Grace, whereby he might be restrained from doing in the common Concerns of the Church, without the common Consent of the rest of the Bishops. And his Lordship may remember, we concluded a Meeting of all the Bishops to be fittest and ablest, both to judge of the Expediency of the Motion, and carry his Grace's Consent to it. In prosecution whereof, his Grace may remember, that I seldom or never, all that Winter, spoke for a Meeting of all the Bishops, but when his Lordship was with me, and ordinarily the first Mover. And I suppose his Grace will remember, that sometimes his Lordship moved that, when I was not present. Now, upon the Supposition that his Lordship had so reasoned, as the Question imports, at the Time mentioned; yet if his Reasons given me in private for it, were stronger than these offered against it in publick, I see no great Reason why I should have followed his Lordship in all his Changes, and moulded my Judgment just into the Figure of his, although I do not deny a great Deference to his Lordship's Opinion and Person.'

'As to the second Query, I shall not deny that my Lord of Edinburgh and I both were not a little jealous of his Grace's Aversion from that Motion; but I do not remember that his Grace did ever interpose his Authority, or offer Reasons against it, much less that ever he intimated any thing of his Majesty's Dislike of it, before July 1674. after which Time I suffered. But I am sure I acted nothing in prosecution thereof; yea, all the Time, when I express'd my Opinion for that Motion, I cannot be charged with doing any more than to use humble Intreaties, that my Lord Primate might go foremost in it, according to his Primacy. When his Grace stood, perhaps I used such Motives as I could, and renewed my humble Desires; so that all was done argued still a Dependence upon his Grace. Nor did I doubt but all this accorded well with the Laws of the Kingdom, and the Doctrine of the Church, whereby I was taught, that omnes episcopi sunt ejusdem potestatis intensive; and that it was no Breach of Order, or Canonical Obedience, for a Bishop, to desire him who is superior to him in Order and Extension of Power, according to his Place, to appear for the Good of that Church, which the one (though in Subordination) was to be accountable for unto the righteous Judge, as well as the other; nor could I see Ground to expect Exoneration in the Day of Accounts, if he had not humbly, earnestly, and modestly renewed these his Desires to his Superior. For if it is not determined to be contrary to the Rules of Duty and Civility, for a Subject to seek a private Favour for himself from his Lord, and after Refusal to renew his Desires, and use the Mediation of others, that he may obtain a Grant; I do not see how it can be a Crime in a Bishop, after the same Manner to sue to his Metropolitan, in a Matter so nearly concerning the Church.

Now that I have answered the Two Queries, in answer to the Commands laid upon me, I might come to an End; but in respect it was told me, That if I pleased I might also speak to the other Two Things, viz. My Secession from the Meeting held at St. Andrews, June 1674. as also touching the Letter written by me to his Grace of St. Andrews, in June last; and remembering that some Mention was made of both in his Majesty's Commission, when I heard it read, though neither of these Two had Influence upon procuring the Sentence under which I ly; that nothing may be wanting which is in my Power, to give Satisfaction to his sacred Majesty, or your Grace and Lordships, anent any thing charged upon me, I humbly offer these following Considerations anent them.

Anent my Secession from that Meeting, I offered, in the Letter which at that Time I sent to his Grace, and my Lords the Bishops then convened, Two Reasons, which I shall now a little enlarge, that they may be the clearer. The 1st. That his Grace did twice, before all present, require me to be gone. And although my Lords the Bishops, in that Paper which they subscribed, in reference to this Affair, do (which I do not complain of) endeavour to smooth, as being only conditional; yet I crave Leave to mind their Lordships, that all which I spoke, and which is said to have given the Trouble, which is mentioned as the Condition of that Requisition, was, That I being unacquainted with such Meetings, this being the first I was ever called to, I humbly begged Leave to ask in what Capacity we were to act, that I might the better order myself, without giving Trouble after the Meeting was constitute; which being exprest with all due Reverence, and at the Time when there was no Business but general Discourse, and smoking of Tobacco, I believed should have given no Offence in the least. 2^{dly}. I humbly appeal to their Lordships, if my Lord Bishop of Aberdeen, when he interposed to take off his Grace, used not such Expressions as these, Your Grace must have some other Quarrel at the Bishop of Dumblain, than his asking that Question; for if I (said he) had asked the Question, your Grace would have answered me more calmly. 3^{dly}. I also appeal to their Lordships, if some of them, after I was gone out, did not deal with his Grace to treat me more calmly afterwards.

The Second Reason I take Notice of in the said Letter, is, That, notwithstanding the foresaid Requisition, having stayed the first Session of that Meeting, Letters from his sacred Majesty, and his Grace the Duke of Lawderdale, were kept up from me, though read and communicated to all the rest, albeit I took Notice thereof publickly, when a Return of Thanks was proposed to the Meeting, by saying, That although I was as much for returning thankful Acknowledgments as any, yet I was not able to judge if the Returns were relative to, and direct Answers of these Letters, since I had neither heard nor seen them: Nor did this Neglect sink much upon me, till the breaking up of that Session; and, after I had offered my Reasons why the general Canons, designed for the Discipline and Government of this Church by the Law, required the Consideration of a National Synod, one of my Right Reverend Brethren told me, That if I had seen what he had seen, I would not have spoken so of a National Synod; insinuating as if somewhat capital had been in the Affair. And then, I confess, I became jealous that these Letters might be kept up from me upon Design, and therefore began to think if it were fit for me to stay or withdraw.

These Reasons I thought sufficient then to mention, believing that so inconsiderable a Person as I should not have been challenged for returning from that Meeting before the Close, more than more considerable Persons of that Order, who came not at all; else I might have mentioned other Two, which also I touched in a Letter at the same Time, directed to my Lord Bishop of Edinburgh, in which that to his Grace and the Meeting was inclosed. I shall now briefly add them. 1st. That Session wherein I was present, broke up without any publick Appointment of Time and Place for any other, which my Lord Bishop of Edinburgh acknowledged before your Lordships, upon Friday last. What private Advertisements were given to other Members, I know not; but the next Day I waited in my Chamber till Eleven of the Clock, and hearing of no Meeting, I went to Dr. Weems his Chamber, which is near the Meeting-place, and was told that their Lordships were met. Whereupon, I gave Dr. Scougal the Trouble to go to the Place of Meeting, and try if I might speak with my Lord Bishop of Aberdeen his Father, that from his Lordship I might understand, whether I would be allowed to come: But after the said Dr. Scougal had made an Attempt twice, he returned both Times with this Account, That their Lordships were so close, he could not speak with my Lord his Father. After which I continued waiting for some Advertisement; but none coming, I believed it better to return to my Charge, than to remain idle in that Place, exposed to the Mockery and Mistakes of People, who knew there was a Meeting of Bishops in that Place, and beheld me from it. And therefore, towards Night, I withdrew, and came a Part of the Way homeward: By which doing, (when the Premises are considered) whether I did any great Wrong, I submit to the Judgment and Correction of others, and shall only say and protest, that my so doing proceeded not from any Principle of Separation, and Schism, but the contrary. And if a Sight of that Paper, subscribed at that Time by my Reverend Brethren the Bishops, had been granted to me, I should have endeavoured to clear every Thing, which, upon the account thereof, can be objected against me: But since it was not allowed me, I must cast my self on that Charity that forbids to condemn any Man before he be heard.

The last Thing I am to speak to, is that Letter written to my Lord St. Andrews in June last, which, if it be condemned as imprudent, I shall not contradict it. But, as I hope I will not be condemned of Presumption, simply for writing to his Grace, so I desire the World to charge me with publishing to any alive, that I had written, much less what the Matter was therein contained: So that if his Grace had not been pleased to publish it, all might have been as innocently written, as whispered in his Ear; and I have met with but few who would have condemned such a Method, either of Presumption or Imprudence. And yet the only Odds lies in this, That I am more bound by my Writ, than one, who is not ingenuous and candid, could have been by his secret Whisper; and therefore I leave it to Consideration, if I can be called a Slanderer of his Grace, though I had written more plain Accusations than I have, since I did not publish them, by which any Information and Accusation comes to be a Slander. And if his Grace, upon Offence or Scandal thereat, had been pleased to have called me, (as by the said Letter I insinuated a Desire to be) all this, and the Effects whatsoever of the Publication, (for which I am noways to blame) had been prevented. And when I consider the Contents of that Letter, I find the first and great Part of it contains a Representation of some Injuries, I conceived his Grace had done me; wherein I hope there is nothing contrary to the Christian Precept, If thy Brother offend thee, tell him, &c. Anent which, I humbly conceive, it were more agreeable to the Christian Rules, to give me just Satisfaction, than severe Challenge. If the Words which give the great Provocation be these, wherein I say, If nothing less than my being a Holo-caust to your Revenge (will please you) be pleased then to allow me the same Freedom in representing you, which you have taken concerning me; and I assure you, though I may have fouler Things to represent, I will do it in a fairer Manner than that in which I was used. Concerning them it may be considered, 1st. That all is upon a Supposition, that nothing less would satisfy his Grace, than that I be wholly consumed by Revenge; and it is hard to determine how much a better Man than I may be tempted to do, to prevent such a Lot. 2^d. That the Word is but comparative, Fouler, and so relative to what I have been charged with in these Queries your Grace and Lordships have been pleased to put to me, which neither by Word or Writ you have alledged to be Transgressions of any particular Law or Canon. 3^d. That I undertake, that any Representation I was to make should be in a fairer Manner than that wherein I was used by his Grace; and afterwards promised to follow such Methods as were agreeable to the Canons and Practice of the Church in such Cases; so that I see not in all this, what should alarm an Innocence and Integrity suitable to the Dignity of his Grace's Character.

And now having considered every Particular whereupon I have been enquired, I rejoyce, that not any one Law or Canon has been objected, or the Transgression thereof alledged against me, although there has been Time to search very narrowly in all my Conversation, these Thirteen Months, during which I have been restrained from the Exercise of my Office, and otherwise, and now the first Time called to be heard. And now I hope it will give no Offence to your Grace and Lordships, to be put in Mind of that perpetually binding Canon, 1. Tim. 5. 19. which since you have not observed in dealing with me, I hope no Sentence is intended to my Prejudice: But if my free Declarations given in answer to, and humble Compliance with this Method of Inquisition, be not judged satisfactory, I throw my self at his sacred Majesty's Feet, and offer to undergo the severest legal Trial, and condemn Punishment, if I shall be found to have done any thing against Cesar, the Temple, or the Law; only I humbly beg that I may have my Accuser face to face, and have Licence to answer for my self, concerning the Crimes laid to my Charge, which I doubt not any of your Lordships would think reasonable, were you stated in my Condition, and therefore will not make any Precedent to the contrary. Upon which Grounds I do in all Humility adhere to the Protestation I made in the Paper I gave in answer to the Two former Interrogatories,

'rogatories, and rest in a perfect Confidence of that Goodness and Clemency which naturally resides in the sacred Breast of my dread Sovereign, the benign Effects whereof I have so many Grounds assuredly to expect; giving this Assurance, That however I be disposed of, I shall continue a most faithful and loyal Subject to his Majesty, and a dutiful Son and Servant to this Church, and all who bear Office in it.'

A View of this whole Matter.

This Paper of the Bishop of Dumblain, lets us in pretty much into the Reasons and Manner of this Scuffle among the Clergy. The Primate's imperious and haughty doing of all Things relative to the Church, by himself, grated the rest of the Bishops, and for some Time they lay their Heads together to oppose him, and make Use of the fair Handle of an Act of Parliament, for the Meeting of a National Synod, to lay down Rules under which even his Grace must be comprehended. The Bishop of Edinburgh seems at first to have been at the Head of this Design, and to have engaged some of the Ministers of Edinburgh in this Affair: But the crafty and cunning Primate finds Means to carry off the Bishop, and then the Storm falls upon the Two Bishops and Four Presbyters, who had the Courage for a while to stand their Ground, and appear for the Liberties the Law had allowed to their Church. This is all that appears to me from these Papers, and I must leave the larger Account of the Circumstances, to others, who may be better in case to give it: having no Documents of what this Meeting did upon the Whole, I can only add, That I am told Bishop Ramsay was obliged to make the best Terms he could, and at last feign Subjection to the Primate, and to the Business of a National Synod dropt.

Mr. Turner and Robertson's Paper of Submission, upon the which they are reposed.

As to the Presbyters and inferior Clergymen, I find that this Year, and probably at this same Time (for the Paper I am to insert has only the general Date 1675.) Mr. Turner and Mr. Robertson are reposed to the Exercise of their Ministry, upon their giving in the following Paper.

'WE undersubscribing, taking to our serious Consideration, that his Majesty hath manifested his Displeasure against us, for our Motion and Petition relating to a National Synod, June 1674. do sincerely declare our Grief, that thereby we did occasion any Offence to his Majesty, or any in Authority over us: And we do most humbly beseech, that his Majesty may graciously pass by whatever hath offended him against us; and that my Lord Primate his Grace, and others intrusted with him, may be pleased to restore us to the Exercise of our former Ministry, wherein, by the Lord's Grace, we shall constantly behave our selves with all Loyalty to the King's most excellent Majesty, and with all Dutyfulness to our Ecclesiastical Superiors, acting in our Station in a due Subordination and Obedience unto them, and live in a mutual Love and Concord with our Colleagues and Brethren.'

Restraint taken off the Bishop and the rest
next Year.
Remarks on the Whole.

Whether Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Cant came in upon the same Kind of Submission, I know not: Next Year we shall find the Bishop and them freed from their Restraints.

From these authentick Papers the Reader will observe the Spirit and Genius of the Primate, and the Carriage of the Bishops one towards another, and may be the less surprized with their Management towards Presbyterians. I'll adventure to say, had we more of Bishop Sharp's Papers, and what passed 'twixt him and his own Set of People, we would see a great deal of that virulent antichristian Temper the suffering Party felt so much of at this Time. And if this intestine War be not altogether so much for their own Reputation, and no great Proof that Prelacy is calculate for preventing Differences among Clergymen, or the quashing of them, unless it be in tyrannical Methods of plain Oppression; yet this will be a Sort of Apology for their Methods with Presbyterians in this Period, so that I am almost ready to flatter my self as deserving the Thanks of the Party, for acquainting the Publick with them, which I have done in a very fair and candid way, and from their own Mouths.

The Carriage of some of the inferior Clergy provoke
People to Disorders.

Very little further offers to me upon this Year. The same imposing and revengeful Spirit that wrought in the Primate, discovered it self in too many of the inferior Clergy; and their spiteful and malicious Carriage provoked, now and then, some of their Parishioners to run into Disorders and Riots. Accordingly, I find, in March this Year, some Prisoners are brought in before the Council, from the Arnbuckles, a Country Village in the Parish of Old-monkland, not far from Glasgow. It was alledged they had committed a Riot upon the Person of their Minister. I do not find the Issue in the Council-books; whether the Probation failed, or what was in it, I know not.

The growing Power of France and Popery.

While Persecution and Oppression were carrying on in this Island, and one Party of Protestants eating up another, the Papists abroad were making a good Hand of us, and France was piece by piece growing up to that frightful Power she was lately at. Prodigious Quantities of naval and warlike Stores were exported this and the following Years, from Britain to to France, furnished probably in Prosecution of the secret Treaties lately entred into: And that Monarch was put in Case almost to accomplish his beloved Projects of univerſal Monarchy, and the Destruction of the Reformation throughout Europe. Mean while our Managers were every Day weakning the Proteſtant Intereſt, by their Violence and ſevere Courſes.

The Devil was likewise playing his Game among the ignorant and neglected Country-people; and I find ſeveral Proceſſes before the Juſticiary, for the execrable Crime of Witchcraft: Particularly, in July this Year, Katharine Sands, Iſobel Inglis, Agnes Henry, Janet Henry, confeſſing Witches, were ſtrangled and burnt, in Cutroſs July 29th.

I ſhall only add, that upon the 27th of July Sir Thomas Wallace of Craigie is admitted Juſtice-clerk, in room of William Lockhart of Lee lately deceaſt, and a good many of the After-proceſſes againſt the ſuffering Preſbyterians, fell under his Hands.

Sir Thomas Wallace of Craigie is made Juſtice-clerk.

CHAP. XI.

Of the Sufferings and State of Preſbyterians in the Year 1676.

DURING this Year and the following, Matters are gradually going on to ripen Things for ſending down the Highland Hoſt upon the Weſt of Scotland; which, with other Severities, produced the Riſing quashed in the Deſeat at Bothwel-bridge. The Council go on in their hard and iniquous Acts againſt Preſbyterians, and this Year affords a good Number of Inſtances of the Hardſhips put upon particular Perſons, Miniſters, and others; and a new Committee for publick Affairs helps on all. More Impoſitions are laid upon the indulged Miniſters: The Differences continue 'twixt the Dukes of Lawderdale and Hamilton; yea, the Perſecution is even extended to the Miniſters who were baniſhed to Holland. Theſe and other Things will furniſh Materials for Three Sections, where I ſhall conſider the Procedure of the Council againſt Conventicles, Preſbyterian Miniſters, and others, with the new and ſevere Acts they make this Year: And then I ſhall give a more particular Account of the Difficulties Miniſters, Gentlemen, and others, were brought under for their Nonconformity at this Time; and end this Chapter with an Account of the Circumſtances of the Indulged, the Differences between the Two Dukes, and ſome other incidental Matters, which come not in ſo natively upon the Two former Sections.

SECT. I.

Of the Acts and Procedure of the Privy Council, againſt Conventicles and Preſbyterians, this Year 1676.

ALthough there was, in the foregoing Year, a little ſlackning of the Perſecution, by reaſon of the Multitudes who followed the Goſpel preached by the ſoured Miniſters; yet towards the End of it, and the Beginning of this, the Soldiers, eſpecially thoſe in the Garifons, were not idle. Wherever they found any whom they were pleaſed to reckon Haunters of Conventicles, they imprifoned, haraſſed, robbed, and wounded them, without Controul: And theſe Agents to the Prelates, managed their Controverſy with the Nonconformiſts in the utmoſt Violence, as if we had been in a State of War, and not like an Eccleſiaſtical Schiſm, by Arguments.

Perſecution turns hotter.

Notwithſtanding of all this Oppoſition, Conventicles could not be born down. In Edinburgh ſeveral Sermons were in Magdalene-chapel, and more privately up and down the Town.

Yet Conventicles continue, and Preſbyterians.

App. No. 77.
Remarks up-
on it.

Sometimes Ministers preached in vacant Churches, at the Desire of the Heritors and People, as at Kilfyth and elsewhere. In the City of Glasgow, Mr. Ralph Rogers, who had been their Minister before the Restoration, was invited to preach among them, and he and Mr. Matthew Crawford for some Time preached pretty openly in the Sheriff of Argyle's Lodgings. The Sacrament of the Supper being much thirsted for by many, last Year and this, who could not receive it with the Incumbents, and had not Opportunity to joyn with the Indulged, several Ministers resolved to celebrate it.

Accordingly, in the Parish of Kippen in the Shire of Stirling, the Supper of the Lord was dispensed in the Night-time to a very numerous Meeting. There assisted at that Work the Reverend Mr. John Law, since the Revolution Minister at Edinburgh, Mr. Hugh Smith Minister at Eastwood, and his Successor there Mr. Matthew Crawford. About this Time Mr. Alexander Jamison Minister at Govan, and Mr. Hugh Smith, gave this Sacrament in the House of the Haggs, within Two Miles of Glasgow, with very much Power and Liveliness. And if I mistake it not, Mr. Jamison did not again drink of the Fruit of the Vine, till he drank it new in the Father's Kingdom, at least it was some Time this Year that excellent Person died. He was a Man of great Learning and Piety, and had been Ten Years Professor of Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews, and had a Patent to have been Professor of Divinity there, but did not accept, although all who knew him were sensible he was every way qualified for it. The Supper was likewise dispensed by Mr. Hugh Smith, to his own Parishioners of Eastwood, in a Barn at Kennyshead. He had Mr. William Thomson, Mr. John Rae, and Mr. Matthew Crawford assisting him. The Lord very much owned these Communion; and these sweet sealing Times are not forgot by severals yet alive.

Those Proceedings, last Year and this, very much galled the Bishops; and now that Lawderdale had again prevailed over Duke Hamilton at Court, as we shall hear, and seeing they had all according to their Mind in the Council, they propose, and without any Difficulty carry a very severe Proclamation against Conventicles and other Disorders, dated March 1st. I have annexed it App. No. 77. Little needs be said upon it, after so many former Papers of this Nature. The Narrative owns great Decays in Religion, and a dangerous Increase in Profaneness. These are attributed to the Separation from publick Worship, and the Frequency of Conventicles. The Matter of Fact is certain, but the Cause most unreasonably given. Separation from publick Worship, when it may be joyned in without Sin, and with Edification, is certainly a very great Sin, and chargeable with these Consequents, and I am not to lessen the Evil of it: But the Presbyterians at this Time were so sensible of the Necessity of publick Worship, that when they could not with any Advantage joyn with the profane Incumbents, they carefully kept it up in Houses and Fields, under the greatest Hazards. According to the Style of this Period, every evil Thing now must be attribute to Conventicles, though every Body almost at this Time knew, that the Decays of Religion were so far from being chargeable upon these Meetings, that the Gospel preached at them did very much promote Religion and Righteousness; and the present Profaneness could never be charged upon them, with any colour of Reason, but upon the evil Practices of the incumbent Clergy, and the want of Discipline in the established Church, which we have heard even some of themselves regretting.

The statutory Part of the Proclamation runs very high: Papists, pro more, are thrown in with Presbyterian Schismatics, and all Magistrates are ordered to prosecute them, and seize upon intercommuned Persons or Fugitives. What follows is yet harder, And all such Preachers as with their Families do not attend publick Worship; and that betwixt and the 1st of June. One would think, they could scarce expect that Presbyterian Ministers would hear the Curates, and that a Grain of Allowance might have been given them; and yet they and their Families, who perhaps would not have gone, though they should have had the Freedom themselves to go, are marked out for Punishment for Nonconformity. All who harbour the Intercommuned, are made liable to the same Pains with them; and a Reward of Five hundred Merks, presently to be paid, is offered to any who shall discover such as commune with, harbour, or entertain the Intercommuned. All inferior Judges and Officers are threatned, if they execute not the Laws; and some of them, as we shall hear, were turned this Year out of their Posts, upon showing a little Compassion towards the Sufferers. Five hundred Merks Fine is imposed upon each Burgh where a Conventicle is kept, beside the exacting of the Bonds the Council had taken formerly from them, and larger Sums upon the greater Burghs; and the Magistrates are to have their Relief from the common Stock of the Town; which appears most unaccountable, and a short way to ruine the Royal Burghs. Further, it is statute, That the Heritors shall be fined in a Year's Rent of the House where the Conventicle shall be kept, toties quoties; and, to encourage Informers and Delations, a Part of the Fine is promised to them. In short, if any Chaplain, Schoolmaster, or Pedagogue is entertained, without a Licence under the Hand of the Bishop of the Diocese, they impose the following Fines; Three thousand Merks upon each Nobleman, Twelve hundred Merks on each Gentleman, and Six hundred Merks upon Burgessees. This last Clause pointed at a great many Presbyterian Students, Youths of excellent Qualifications, and great Piety, ety and Learning, as hath since the Revolution appeared, several of whom I could name, who have filled and do fill the most important Poits of this Church, and our Universities. The Prelates, by this extravagant Clause, designed to rid the Youth of such Tutors, that they might be, by others of their own Kidney, trained up in Principles agreeable to Monarchy in the Church, and Tyranny and passive Obedience in the State.

With this severe Proclamation against Conventicle-keepers, another the same Day is issued out, ordering the indulged Ministers to keep their Instructions, which, to make them the more burdenson, they call the Terms upon which they are permitted and indulged to exercise their Ministry. This I shall notice further in its own Room, in the last Section. Thus they endeavour to bear hard upon all Presbyterians, and either rent or ruine them.

Another Proclamation as to the indulged Ministers.

Laws signify very little without close Execution, and our Managers were very careful to see to that upon Presbyterians. The Soldiers were the daily Executors of the Laws, and now and then the Council send particular Commissions to particular Persons, to look after the suppressing of Conventicles. The Two former Years, such Commissions were given, but they did not much, at least that I can learn, answer the severe Projects of the Persecutors; but now they resolve upon greater Severity. I have formerly noticed, that the persecuting Temper of the High-fliers in England, reached us in Scotland, though, I must say, our Scots Managers far outwent the English. Accordingly, at this Time, I find the Meeting-houses are ordered to be shut up at London, and the Justices of the Peace were generally changed, and new Commissions given, with strict Orders to be zealous and vigorous in executing the Laws against Dissenters.

The Soldiers execute these. Dissenters persecuted in England about this Time.

Upon the same Day, the Council grant Commissions to the Chancellor, and, generally speaking, those mentioned last Year, with some Gentlemen in each Shire joyned to them, with the above Powers and Instructions, to put the Laws against Conventicles and Nonconformity in Execution. One Committee is ordered to sit at Edinburgh, another at Glasgow, another at Stirling and in Fife, and one for Aberdeen Shire, Murray, and Ross.

Commissions are given to particular Persons to persecute Conventicles in several Places.

No Accounts from any of them have come to my Hands, save that at Glasgow, which sat April 6th. Some Time before this Council-committee or Commission sat down, Citations were issued out, at the Instance of Sir John Nisbet his Majesty's Advocate, to a considerable Number of Gentlemen, Ministers and others, to appear before the Lords Commissioners, and declare upon Oath what Conventicles they had been at since the Year 1674. what Children they had baptized, and whether they had reset or harboured intercommuned Persons. Their Names, as far as I can recover them, were, Sir George Maxwell of Nether-pollock, of whom before, John Maxwell his Son, whom we shall meet with afterward, Sir Archibald Stuart of Castlemilk, the Laird of Dunlop, James Hamilton of Aikenhead, Gabriel Hamilton of Westburn, Mr. Hugh Corbet of Hargray, Mr. Ninian Hill of Lambhill, Patrick Hamilton of Neilsland, Mrs. Andrew Mortoun, Hugh Smith, Matthew Crawford, James Wodrow, after the Revolution Professor of Divinity in the University of Glasgow, John Johnstoun, Matthew Cumming, Merchants in Glasgow, and some others. The Two First, the Laids of Pollock elder and younger, got off happily without swearing, by the Favour of some Members of the Committee. None of the Ministers or Preachers appeared, whereupon they were denounced Rebels, and the Soldiers had Orders to search for and apprehend them, and some of them were intercommuned, and all of them forced to abscond, and undergo great Hardships till the Indemnity 1679.

The rest refusing to give their Oaths upon their own alledged Guilt, but remitting themselves to Probation, were imprisoned at Glasgow, and from thence sent in under a Guard to Edinburgh, after the Committee had fined them, as guilty of as many Conventicles as they pleased, for refusing to swear themselves guilty; and most of them continue Prisoners in Edinburgh Tolbooth for some Months. And that I may give all the Account I have of them together, I find, after much Interest used, at length their Cause is brought before the Council; and, July 20th, the Lords pass this Act anent them. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that James Hamilton of Aikenhead, Gabriel Hamilton of Westburn, Alexander Wardrop of Demarnock, Mr. Hugh Corbet of Hargray, Patrick Hamilton of Neilsland, Mr. Ninian Hill of Lambhill, Matthew Cumming in Glasgow, (what became of those not named here I cannot tell) being convened before the Commissioners of Privy Council, at Glasgow, for keeping Conventicles, and other Things libelled against them, and the Libel being referred to their Oaths, they refused to depone, and were thereupon, by the Sentence of the said Lords, held as confest, and committed to Prison; and now compearing, the Lords modify their Fines as follows. Aikenhead a Thousand Pounds Scots, Hargray a Thousand Merks, Lambhill a Thousand Merks, Westburn a Thousand Merks, Neilsland Three hundred Pounds, Matthew Cumming Two hundred Pounds: And in regard Alexander Wardrop gave his Oath, and confess'd one House-conventicle, he is fined in Fifty Merks; and the Council ordain them all to lie in Prison till they pay their Fines.' Those Persons very quickly paid their Fines, and were liberate, and got Home after more than Three Months Imprisonment.

Many of them made Prisoners, and continue some Time in Prison.

Act of Council about them, July 20th with the Fines imposed.

The Committee of Council likewise issued out Orders to all Sheriffs and their Deputes, Bailies of Regalities, Stewards of Stewartries, and Magistrates of Burghs, to cite before them them all who were delated by the conformable Clergy, or should be complained of, and fine and imprison them, and return Accounts of their Diligence to the Council.

Those Under-officers through the West, cited Multitudes before them; but People finding they must give their Oaths super inquirendis against themselves, did not compear, and so vast Numbers every where were declared Fugitives, and afterward intercommuned, and Converse with them inhibited under the Pains of Rebellion. This put Ministers, and others, who feared an Oath, to terrible Hardships; appear they durst not, and were forced to hide and wander where they best might; and in their Hidings, upon the first Notice of them, Parties were ordered out to apprehend them, and the Gift of their Elicheats was offered to any who would buy them.

A Volume might be filled with well attested Accounts of signal and remarkable Appearances of Providence, in behalf of these Confessors for the Truth, this and the following Years: Their singular Provision, their wonderful Protections, and remarkable Deliveries and Outgates. They found the Cross lined with Love, and many Friends were raised up to them in their Distress, by their kind Lord and Master. Thus this severe Persecution did not hinder them from Preaching and hearing the Gospel. In Houses they were frequently surprized by the Soldiers, and therefore they choosed the most retired Places, Woods, Hills, and Moyses, and had their Watches set, to prevent their being surprized.

Yea, this scattering of Ministers and People turned to the spreading of the Word of Life. Ministers who before preached to a few in Houses, now preached to Multitudes in the Fields, with much Success, and the more Preaching there was, the more Love to the Gospel increased. People could not but observe the Curates as the Springs of all this Severity, and every Day they were more disliked, and their Meetings turned thinner. Presbyterian Ministers preached upon the Hazard of all that was dear to them in Outwards, and People listened the more attentively to them; and even indifferent Persons began to apprehend there was a Reality in what they taught, when they ventured so much to do them Service: In short, the Gospel was costly and hazardous both to themselves and their Preachers, and this made them prize it more, and improve it the better; and the LORD, by his Presence, did very much sweeten outward Difficulties.

And this Love unto, and following after the Gospel in the persecuted Ministers Hands, was increased from the Observation of singular Judgments now and then upon the Persecutors. A Collection of well attested Accounts of those might be of good Use, and Instances are not wanting: Yea, the Relations now flying up and down, of the scandalous Lives and erroneous Doctrine of the Bishops, and most of their Underlings, did not a little recommend the Attendance upon Field-meetings, to such who had not Opportunity to hear the Indulged. Charity forbids me, without Proof, to credit all that was talked upon this Head; but so much of it was notour, as led too many to Atheism, and downright Contempt of all Religion, and many of the better Sort much to favour the persecuted Party: So that, notwithstanding all these Hardships, Conventicles continued, and the Managers went on in their Severities.

Which brings me back again to the Accounts of their Procedure. And to give all I have together, that relates to these Council-commissions; upon the 5th of June, the Council receive the Reports from their Commissioners, for trying of Conventicles in Aberdeen Shire, at Glasgow and other Places, and find the Lady Polmaise in Stirling Shire, when before their Commissioners, refusing to give her Oath upon their Interrogatories, but declaring upon her Word of Honour, that she was free of what was laid to her Charge, and remitted to them. I find nothing done upon it at this Council-meeting. The Laird of Balgony and his Lady, with the Lady Kennet, for their Noncompearance before the Commissioners, are ordered to be denounced. Mr. Hugh Campbell, for preaching at Muir-kirk without Presentation, is ordered to be cited before the Council; but I hear no more about him. The Magistrates of Glasgow are appointed to produce Mr. Alexander Gordon, or his Cautioners, for keeping a Conventicle there. This is all I meet with concerning these Committees of Council, for trying of Conventicles, ordered upon the 1st of March.

At that same Diet of Council, March 1st, the Archbishop of St. Andrews, the Bishops of Edinburgh and Aberdeen, are ordained to call before them all the Masters of Universities and Colleges through the Kingdom, and enquire if all of them have taken the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, in the Terms of Act 4th. Sess. 2^d. Parl. 1st. CHARLES II. and report.

And Orders are given for a strict Enquiry through the Country, (I suppose it was left to the particular Council-committees) Whether all Magistrates of Burghs, and other inferior Officers, had signed the Declaration; and such as had not, are ordered to be prosecuted. I find, at this same Time, the Town of Perth is fined for Conventicles; and in Glasgow and other Burghs, very strict Search is made for Conventicles and outed Ministers, which was some way happy for them, since hereby they were obliged timely to retire, before the Council-committees came about.

I do not find any Meeting of Council, until April 26th, when they have a Letter from the King, taking off the Restraints from the Bishop of Dumblain, and the rest, formerly mentioned, which I shall notice in its own Room. At this Diet, the more to bear down Conventicles, the Council extend their Act of April 1669. to the whole Kingdom, and appoint this Act to be printed, and being but short I insert it here.

Act of Council, April 1669, extended to the whole Kingdom.

Act concerning keeping of Conventicles, Edinburgh, April 26th, 1676.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering, That by a Proclamation of the 8th of April 1669. they, upon the Considerations therein contained, did prohibit and discharge all Heritors whatsoever, within the Shires of Lanerk, Air, Renfrew, and Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, to suffer or permit any Conventicles or private Meetings, upon pretext of, or for religious Worship, to be kept within their Houses, or the Lands belonging to them; certifying them, if they shall contravene, that each Heritor in whose Bounds or Lands any Conventicle shall be kept, shall be fined in the Sum of Fifty Pounds Sterling, toties quoties. The said Lords do hereby extend the former Act and Proclamation, to the whole Shires of this Kingdom; and do ordain all Heritors to be liable to the Fines abovespecified, in case any Conventicle be kept on the Ground of their Lands, or in Houses belonging to them: Declaring always, that the Heritors who shall be fined upon the account foresaid, shall have their Relief off the Persons present at these Conventicles. And ordain these Presents to be Printed, and Published at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, that none pretend Ignorance.

THO. HAY Cl. Secr. Concilii.

Reflections were made above upon the Matter of this severe Act, and now the Frequency of Conventicles, both in the North and East, put them upon extending it. It was a very plain Ground for harassing of great Numbers of Gentlemen, abundantly loyal and peaceable, whom they could not otherwise reach; and it was easy for them to overlook themselves and their own Friends, when Conventicles, as frequently happened, were upon their Ground. And the Clause, allowing Heritors Relief off the Persons present, was no Advantage at all, but a perfect Blind, to make the Severity of the Act to be overlookt; since it was but seldom any of the Persons present were caught, the Probation against them was difficult, and few of them who happened to be taken, had Relief to give.

Remarks on it

Next Day, April 27th, the Council meet, and order the Lists of intercommuned Persons, and such as were denounced and declared Fugitives, to be transmitted to all the Sheriffs and Magistrates of Burghs, that they may endeavour to apprehend them, if they come into the Bounds under their Jurisdiction.

Lists of intercommuned and fugitive Persons sent to Sheriffs.

The same Day, upon some Informations laid before them, they make the following Appointment. 'Whereas the Privy Council is informed, that there hath been a numerous Conventicle lately held in the Shire of Air at Coilumwood, in the Laird of Coilfield's Lands; at which Mr. John Welsh, a declared Traitor, preached; as also that Mr. Alexander Ross Heritor in Colmonel Parish, keeps constantly Conventicles in his own House of Dalrigch, and baptizes Children; and Mr. Robert Kennedy, who haunts the House of Knockdare, and Mr. John Cuninghame Curate to the late Bishop of Galloway, who haunts in Glendnoch at Glentuce, do keep Conventicles and commit other Disorders: The Lords appoint the Earl of Dumfries, Sheriff Principal of Air, Earl of Dundonald, Lords Cochran and Ross, and Sir Thomas Wallace Justice-clerk, to try these Disorders, and punish as they shall find Cause.' I find no more Account of these Matters.

A Commission to Earl of Dumfries, and others, to make Trial about Conventicles in Air Shire.

Upon the 5th of June, when the Council are approving the Procedure of their Committees, they find the Process against the Laids of Nether-pollock, the Laird of Torrence, and the Laird of Dalduy, for keeping of Conventicles, not brought to an Issue, and they refer it to the Committee for publick Affairs. Thither now many Processes are referred, and it being but seldom their Reports are insert in the Registers, I can give no further Account of them.

Processes against the Laids of Nether-pollock, Torrence, and Dalduy, referred to the Commission for publick Affairs.

This is the first Time I find this Committee mentioned in the Registers under this Name, and it was a very useful Contrivance of the Primate and his Party, who now carry all before them, for ingrossing the Council Power, which was at this Time abundantly large, into the Hands of a few, that so their Oppressions and arbitrary Proceedings might be the more speedily and successfully carried on. In the Registers before this, I have observed no Appointment for such a Committee, nor any acquainting the King with this new Method they were casting the publick Business into. I imagine they tried the Method for some Time, and finding it answering their Designs, they wrote up for Orders thereanent, and upon their getting them, they make a Nomination, which I shall just now insert.

The Nature and Design of this Committee.

A Letter from the King comes down, July 13th, which follows. 'Whereas We, by Our Commission of Council May 11th, 1674. did appoint the Quorum to be Nine, and also did

Whether this Committee for publick Affairs was at first made up of these sine quibus non, I know not: But upon the 20th of July, a new Commission of Council is sent down, and recorded in the Registers, and therein the Archbishop of St. Andrews is appointed to pre-

' Dundonald, the Lord Elphinstoun, the President, Treasurer-depute, Advocate, Justice-
' clerk, Lord Collingtoun, or any Three of them, to meet when and where they see fit, and ' take Trial of Conventicles, Invasions of Pulpits, what Ministers preach at Conventicles,
' and the ringleading Heritors at them, who are guilty of resetting and intercommuning with ' Rebels, and other Disorders; with Power to cite, apprehend, bring under Bond, and give
' what Orders they see good to the Forces and Sheriffs, and other Magistrates, and to confi-
' der the Condition of Prisoners, and to do all Things necessary to his Majesty's Service, and ' report to the Council.'

This is an extensive Commission to Three Persons, and now Prelacy was at the Top of Affairs, when the Two Archbishops, with any Third Creature of theirs they pleased to choose, had the whole of what for many Years hath been the Council's chief Work, the Persecution of Presbyterians, the Management of, and giving what Orders they pleased to the Army, Sheriffs, and other Magistrates, put into their Hands. I don't say they exercised this Power by themselves Three, but this Commission warranted them so to do; and indeed they were easy, the most Part named heartily went in with whatever they saw good to propose. Our Liberties and Religion were now at a low Pass, when such Powers and Commissions are granted. And indeed for many Years this Committee of publick Affairs managed all the Persecution, and whatever related to Church and State, and, when they saw good, reported to the Council, after they had done what pleased them. When their Reports are in the Registers we shall meet with them, and when they saw good not to record them, their Seve-rities are buried. After this there is little or no more Room for Commissions of Council, and Committees with Council-powers, which had been used for some Years in the Vacation. These, when they came to the Country, and had Information how Matters stood, and having no Ecclesiasticks among them, generally speaking, were not so inclinable to Severities:
But now the Primate, with Two others in his Chamber, may issue out Orders as they find proper.

Perhaps it was by a Motion from this powerful Committee, that the Council, August 3^d, pass an Act of Intercommuning against several more Ministers, and Mr. James Kirkcoun upon the Head of them, for the Reason we shall hear of upon the next Section. The Form of such Letters hath been already insert in the Appendix, and so it may suffice to give an Abstract of these Letters.

Council Commission renewed for the North.

All Fugitives who satisfy their Minister

The same Day the Council renew their Commission, formerly granted, for repressing Conventicles in the Shires of the North, with a particular Eye to Bamff. This was at so great Distance, and the Persons concerned so few, it was not worth while for the Committee of publick Affairs to trouble themselves with it.

At the same Diet the Council desire the Two Archbishops to signify to the Bishops of their respective Dioceses, that the Privy Council being desirous to reclaim any Persons, who of

of late have been declared Fugitives, for not appearing before the Council, anent Conventicles, and other Disorders of that Nature, have resolved, that, upon their giving Satisfaction to the Minister of the Parish where they are, for their orderly Behaviour in Time coming, and his Certificate thereof, they shall be relaxed from the Horn, and not be called in question for what is past; excepting such Persons against whom Letters of Intercommuning have been directed, or whose Escheats are fallen and gifted, and the Gift declared on their continued and wilful Contempt: And that if this Offer be not accepted, the utmost Rigour will be used; and that the Bishops intimate the same in their respective Bounds.

as to their future Carriage, to be relaxed.

The Managers and Bishops had a great Advantage against some, at least, of the suffering Party, at this Time. They could do Things that seemed at first View Favours to them, in the Eyes of the most Part who knew not how Matters stood; and yet in the mean while they themselves well knew the Sufferers would never come up to these seeming Condescendences; neither could the View of Things they had, permit them so to do: And so every way they had their Design, not to offer any Thing which would really take with these People, and yet to appear to be offering Conditions, which to Strangers would seem not unreasonable. Thus it was in the Case before us. The same Things that took the Country-people to Conventicles, kept them from owning the Incumbent, so far as to take a Certificate from him of their good Behaviour. And none of them were by this Persecution convinced of any Sin or Evil in hearing the Gospel dispensed by the outed Ministers, and could not engage for their good Behaviour in the Curates Sense, as to the Time to come: And so this specious Act was nothing in effect, but a Design to expose these poor People to Obloquy, upon their Refusal, and few or none of them, I know of, fell in with it.

Remarks upon this seeming Favour.

Upon the same Day, for the Council now do a vast deal of Things at one Sederunt, having Matters just made ready for their voting, by their Committee of publick Affairs, they pass a Decreet against a vast many in Absence, for keeping Conventicles. There are about Forty or Fifty of them in Fife; and, by another Decreet, some Thirty or Forty more in Churnside, and the Country thereabout, were sentenced for the same Faults. All of them were absent, and so the Process short.

Decreet against near a Hundred Conventicle-keepers, in Fife and about Churnside.

Little further offers as to the more general Procedure of the Council this Year, unless it be, that upon December 9th, the Town of Edinburgh is fined in Fifty Pounds Sterling for a Conventicle kept in it, and the Magistrates allowed their Relief as in former Cases. Their Procedure against particular Persons will come in upon Town of Edinburgh fined in Fifty Pounds Sterling, for a Conventicle.

S E C T. II.

Of the Sufferings and Persecution of some particular Persons, Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, this Year 1676.

I Shall not give my self or the Reader the Trouble nicely to class the Sufferers this Year, in their different Stations and Capacities; some of all the Sorts mentioned in the Title were brought to Trouble, and I shall give them in the Order of Time, as far as I have it.

February 10th, the Council fine Durham of Largo in Twelve hundred Pounds Scots, for Refet of Mr. John Welsh; and he is fined in Two thousand five hundred Merks, for being at Two Conventicles where Mr. Welsh preached. This is the Second, if not the Third Time this Gentleman hath been attacked, and fined. The same Day swinging Fines are laid upon several very worthy Persons, for a House-conventicle in Edinburgh. Edward Gillespie is fined in Two hundred Pounds Scots, Robert Richardson in a Hundred Pounds Scots, Colonel Ker in Five hundred Merks, Lady Whitlaid in Five hundred Merks, Mr. Stuart, Mr. Stirling, and Mr. Hamilton, in a Hundred Pounds Scots apiece; but Prejudice expressly to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, whom they allow to fine them for their Relief, notwithstanding the Fine imposed by the Council. An indifferent Person would think it hard they are punished twice for one Fault.

Durham of Largo fined, and many others, for Conventicles in Edinburgh.

About the Middle of June this Year, there fell in an Attempt upon the Reverend Mr. James Kirkcoun, before the Restoration Minister at Martin, and since the Revolution a most useful Minister for a good many Years in the City of Edinburgh, well known to this Church. This Affair kindled a great Flame, and was the Occasion of some very considerable Changes. I shall give an Account of the Matter of Fact, from a Narrative left of it by himself, who could only give the Account of some Circumstances relative to it, and whose Veracity I know will be depended upon; and then I shall subjoyn what I meet with anent it in the Council-records: And my Account of this is the larger, because this Incident hath been very falsly represented to the Publick in Print.

Incident 'twixt Mr. James Kirkcoun and Carstairs.

*Carstairs trepanns
Mr. Kirkton to his own Chamber.*

Mr. Kirkton, about the Time mentioned, one Day walking in the Street of Edinburgh about Noon, was accosted very civilly by a young Gentleman, (we shall afterward find him to be Captain Carstairs) and another Gentleman, and a Lackey: He knew none of them, but came afterwards to know both to his Cost. Carstairs desired to speak a Word with Mr. Kirkton; to which he answered, He would wait on him, suspecting no evil. When walking off towards the Side of the Street, he asked at the other (James Scot of Tuskilaw) who this young Gentleman was, for he was perfectly a Stranger to him: Scot answered him with Silence and Staring; and then Mr. Kirkton found he was trepaned, and a Prisoner. However, he was glad when they carried him to a private House, and not to the Prison, which was near by.

*What passed
there.*

The Place they brought him unto, was Carstairs's own Chamber, an ugly dark Hole, in one Robert Alexander a Messenger his House. As soon as Carstairs got him into his Chamber, he sent off Scot and his Footman, probably to bring some more of their Companions. When they were gone, Mr. Kirkton asked what he meant to do with him. Carstairs answered, Sir, you owe me Money. Mr. Kirkton asked him, whom he took to him be, and told him, He owed him nothing. The other replied, Are you not John Wardlaw? Mr. Kirkton said he was not, and ingenuously told him who he was. Then Carstairs said, If you be Mr. Kirkton, I have nothing to say to you. Then Mr. Kirkton asked him who he was. He returned, He was Scot of Erskiltoun, whom indeed he did pretty much resemble; yet Mr. Kirkton knew not what to make of him, he spoke Things so inconsistent.

*He is rescued
by Jerviswood,
Mr. Stevenson,
and Mr. Johnston.*

After they had been about Half an Hour together, Mr. Kirkton began to imagine Carstairs wanted Money, and was just beginning to make some Intimations that way, when that excellent Gentleman, whom we shall meet with afterwards, Mr. Robert Bailie of Jerviswood, a near Relation of Kirkton's, Andrew Stevenson, and Patrick Johnston Merchants in Edinburgh, having got some Information of Mr. Kirkton's Circumstances, and, with some Difficulty having fallen upon the House, came to the Door, and called to Carstairs to open, asking what he had to do with a Man in a dark Dungeon, all alone. Mr. Kirkton knowing the Voice of his Friends, took Heart, and got up, saying, There be honest Gentlemen at your Door, who will testify what I am, and that I am not John Wardlaw: Open the Door to them. That, says Carstairs, I will not, drawing his Pocket-pistol; which Mr. Kirkton perceiving, thought it high Time to act for his own Safety, and grasped Carstairs close in his Arms; so mastering both his Hands and the Pistol, they struggled a while on the Floor. The Gentlemen without, hearing the Noise, one crying out Murder, burst open the Door, and parted them without the least Violence to Carstairs, and as they and Mr. Kirkton were going out, they met Scot and his Companion returning.

Upon Information from Carstairs, the Lord Halcoun calls the Council, and represents this as a Riot.

Thus Mr. Kirkton escaped; but the others inclined not to quit their Game so, but resolved to turn their private Violence to State-service, and so go straight to Halcoun, and tell their own Story, who presently calls the Council, almost in Time of Dinner, as if all Edinburgh had been in Arms to resist lawful Authority. When the Council got together, Halcoun tells the Story, as the Villains had represented it to him, That some of their publick Officers had caught a Phanatick Minister, and that he was rescued by a numerous Tumult of the People of Edinburgh. The Council made a diligent Enquiry into the Matter, and could find nothing in it to fix upon. Mr. Kirkton had taken Care to inform his Friends that it was a real Robbery they designed, and a little Money would have delivered him, if he and Carstairs had got Leave to finish their Communing.

Jerviswood is brought before the Council, and a Libel given him.

Jerviswood was brought before them, and gave them a very candid Account, as above; and when the Council had gone their utmost, they could find no more in it; and many of them were of Opinion it were best to drop it. This Bishop Sharp violently opposed, and alledged, if Carstairs were not supported and encouraged, and Jerviswood made an Example, it was not to be expected any would ever prosecute Phanaticks; and insisted with such Vehemence, that he got over the most Part of the Counsellors to a Prosecution, and the Advocate is ordered to form a Libel against Jerviswood.

*June 22. he is fined in 500
ling.*

Next Council-day, June 22^d, 'The Lords having considered the Libel given in by his Majesty's Advocate against Mr. Robert Bailie of Jerviswood, for his rescuing of Mr. James Kirkton, and deforcing Captain Carstairs, who had Orders to apprehend Mr. Kirkton, find the Libel relevant, and proven, by the Warrant produced by the Captain, and that Jerviswood is guilty of an insolent Riot and Deforcement, and fine him in Five hundred Pounds Sterling, and appoint him to ly in Prison till he pay it.' That Day, I am told, the Council were in a terrible Rage, so that when severals of the Inhabitants of Edinburgh had got in to see what the Council would do in so odious a Case, the Question was stated, Whether all the People in the Lobby should be imprisoned or not? They escaped Confinement but by one Vote.

*The Committee for publick Affairs fine
and Johnston.*

The Council remit to the Committee of publick Affairs, the Examination of Andrew Stevenson and Patrick Johnston, who are delated, as being Art and Part with Jerviswood in the Deforcement: And in July they are fined, Mr. Stevenson in a Thousand Pounds Scots, and Mr. Johnston in a Thousand Merks; and they were to continue in Prison till Payment. This

This Prosecution was mightily cried out upon. The Reason given by the Managers for this Severity was, that Jerviswood and the others were guilty of Resistance to lawful Authority, because Captain Carstairs was a commissioned Officer, and had produced his Commission for apprehending outed Ministers, and suspect Persons, at the Council-board: But this Reason could not satisfy impartial Observers, who knew how Matters stood. It was indeed true, that Carstairs, some Time before this, had a Warrant to this Purpose, granted him by the Archbishop of St. Andrews; but it was well known, that, I do not know from what Cause, he burnt this Warrant a Month before this, in the Earl of Kincardin's House, before several, and produced no Warrant to Jerviswood and the rest, when they rescued Mr. Kirk-toun, neither once so much as pretended any such Thing.

And his Production of a Warrant before the Council was afterward found to be a Trick and Contrivance of the Primate, which will be the more easily credited, when the Reader comes to the Case of Mr. James Mitchell, and to observe his Carriage in that Matter. The Thing stood thus: After the alledged Riot was committed, and the first Meeting of the Council over, the Archbishop found it convenient Carstairs should have a Warrant to produce, and accordingly one was provided, and the Date was taken Care of, so as to answer the Time of the Fact's being committed. It was this Carstairs produced in Face of Council, so that really they went upon a base Forgery.

Further, it was reckoned a very odd Step by Onlookers, that a Libel should be found sufficiently proven by the single Testimony of an infamous Accuser, here likewise a Party, against the Declaration of Three unquestionably creditable Witnesses, and the Examination of all the Witnesses who were called in this Process: But Sharp and Haltoun must have their Will, and so the Sentence pass, though Reasons strong and many were offered against this illegal Procedure, by several Members.

Notwithstanding of all these, the Sentence as above was carried, and this worthy and pious Gentleman Jerviswood continued about Four Months in close Prison. I find him, August 3^d, by Order of Council sent from Edinburgh to Stirling Castle, under a Guard. He paid Three thousand Merks of his Fine to Carstairs, as a Reward of his Zeal against Presbyterianism, and because he was an active Agent to the Archbishop in his Persecution. It was with no small Difficulty this Gentleman was at length liberate, and passed as to the rest of his Fine, and not till the Court, upon better Information, had discovered some Dislike at this unrighteous Procedure. Some Years afterward Jerviswood will come in again in this History, when he met yet with harsher Treatment. Within Two Months Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Johnstoun got out of Prison, but not till Haltoun was presented with a Piece of good Wine, and a Parcel of curious Lace, and then Justice was permitted to be done them.

In the mean Time Mr. Kirkton thought proper to try what he could do at Court, and since the Dutcheffs of Lawderdale had not long ago professed very great Kindness to him, he presumed to write to her Grace, and sent up a true Information of the Affair, complaining heavily of the Wrong done him and his Friends. The Information was indeed shown to the Duke, who seemed mightily surpris'd at it, and owned he never met with Two Informations more different than his Brother's and Mr. Kirkton's. Within a little, by whom I shall not say, Mr. Kirkton's Letter and Information were sent down to the Council, to see what they could make of them for a new Accusation. When Haltoun saw them, he fumed and raged, but it was not in his Power to reach Mr. Kirkton at this Time; only Mr. Kirkton, as we have heard, is put in the Front of the Letters of Intercommuning in August this Year.

This Spark rais'd a great Flame, and was followed with very considerable Consequences. After the Council had come to an Issue, Haltoun dispatched an Account of this Affair to his Brother the Duke of Lawderdale, and misrepresented all who had spoken any way favourably of Jerviswood, as if they had agreed to subvert lawful Authority, and were in a Combination against the King, and for the Phanaticks. A new Nomination of Council came down from Court, as we have heard, and all who would not bow to Haltoun and the Primate were left out, such as Duke Hamilton, who had spoken much and freely against the Act of fining Jerviswood and the others, the Lord Privy Seal, the Earl of Kincardin formerly Lawderdale's great Friend, the Earl of Dundonald, and some others. The Earl of Kincardin and some more went up to Court, to shew the King the Truth of this Matter, and, it is said, used much Plainness with his Majesty, and lamented that Scotland was abused by my Lord Haltoun's Tyranny, under his Brother's Authority, who was always and in all Cases supported by the King: But all was to no Purpose, only Lawderdale and the Earl, of the closest Friends turned the most bitter Enemies.

But to go forward to some other Hardships Presbyterians were under this Year, I find from the Registers, that the Laird of Kersland is ordered by the Council to be sent along with Jerviswood Prisoner to Stirling Castle. After I had writ over what concerns the Year 1669, when he was taken, a very distinct, though short Account of the Sufferings of this religious and knowing Gentleman, the Representative of a very ancient Family, come to my Hand, from a Person of undoubted Credit, who had Opportunities of a full Knowledge of them;

A short Account of Kersland's Sufferings, from Pentland till his Death.

He is seized at Edinburgh upon Information, by Cannon of Mardrogat:

and though it be a little late, it comes in well enough here. From the Registers I have already hinted at some of his Removes from one Prison to another, and his last Remove and Liberation will follow. In this Place I shall give the Detail of his Sufferings all together.

We have heard of his unjust Forfeiture after the Defeat at Pentland, and the Pretext that was made Use of for this arbitrary Step. When Matters were going this way, Robert Kersland found it safest to retire from the Storm, as many others did. The Place he chose to live in was Utrecht, where he had the Advantage of excellent Conversation, and hearing the Gospel; there he continued near Three Years.

His Friends found it necessary he should come home as privately as might be, and settle his civil Affairs, if possible. His Lady came over about September or October 1669. and in a little Time he followed her; but, to his great Affliction, when he came to Edinburgh, found her in a Fever. She lodged in a House the Mistress whereof was a Favourer of Sufferers, and the Persons intercommuned after Pentland when they came to Town, used sometimes to haunt there. Robert Cannon of Mardrogat, whose Villany has been already remarked, had not yet thrown off the Mask, but was making his Peace, and seeking Occasions to gratify the Managers; at least his Treachery was not yet known to his old Companions at Pentland, and thus he sometimes was with some of them at that House. Kersland lodged not there, but in a more private Place, and used to come in the Evenings and wait on his sick Lady. Cannon had Occasion to observe this, and took Care to get Information given the Chancellor; and an Order was procured from Lawderdale, then in Town, to apprehend Mr. John Welsh, who was pretended to be keeping a Conventicle in the Lady Kersland's Chamber, though there was no such Thing, but the Design was upon her Husband. A Lady of Quality then with the Commissioner, assured him the Information was groundless, for she knew the Lady Kersland was very ill. However, the Warrant was granted, with express Orders from his Grace, that no Disturbance should be given to the sick Lady, if there was no Conventicle in the House.

Accordingly the Party came to her Lodgings, and finding no Conventicle, the commanding Officer was just retiring, after he had asked the Lady Kersland Pardon for troubling her in her present Circumstances: But one of the Party having particular Information from Mardrogat, that when any Company came into the Room, Kersland, when there in the Evenings, used to retire behind the Bed, and that probably he would find him there; this Person having a Torch in his Hand, provided, no doubt, by Concert, said, He behoved to search the Room, and stepped straight to the Place where the Gentleman stood concealed, and brought him out, charging him to render his Arms. Kersland told he had no Arms, but the Bible which he had in his Hand, and there was enough there to condemn their Methods. I am told this Man's Name was Murray, and in a few Days he fell into Distraction, and in his lucid Intervals used to rore under the Agony he was in for being the Instrument in this Matter.

And brought before the Council.

Kersland was carried away Prisoner, in the Sight of his Lady, who was at this Time very low; yet at parting with him, being a Woman of a great and excellent Spirit, she discovered much Calmness and Composure, comforted him, and besought him to do nothing that might wound his Conscience, out of regard to her and her Children, repeating that Place of Scripture, No Man having put his Hand to the Plough, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God. He was straight carried to the Guard, and thence to the Abbey, where a Council, or Committee of it, was called that very Night for his Examination.

His Examination and Imprisonment at Edinburgh.

When he came before them, and was questioned upon the Lawfulness of the Appearance at Pentland, he very plainly owned it as lawful, and what he thought Duty. Upon this he was immediately imprisoned. When he was going away, the Chancellor asked him what it was his Lady said to him at parting, having got Information from some of the Party. He had really forgot the express Words, being in a Hurry, and answered, He did not exactly remember. The other told him he would refresh his Memory, and said, She had exhorted him to cleave to the good old Cause, and upbraided him and her, saying, They were a sweet Pack.

He continues Prisoner at Dumbarton, Aberdeen, and Stirling, till October 1677 when he is confined to Irwin.

He continued in Edinburgh Prison about Three Months, and was thence sent to Dumbarton Castle, where he remained near a Year and a Half; then he was ordered to Aberdeen, where he was kept close Prisoner in a cold Room for Three Months in the Winter Season, and not allowed a Fire: From Aberdeen he was brought South to Stirling Castle, where he continued several Years: Thence he was taken to the Castle of Dumbarton a Second Time, and lay there till October 1677. at which Time the Council confined him to Irwin, within Five Miles of his own House at Kersland. He had some Time allowed him to transport himself and his Family, then at Glasgow, to Irwin.

In the Way he is seized at Glasgow, and imprisoned by the Archbishop's Orders.

And about the End of October he came to his Family at Glasgow, where he had Visits from a good many of his Friends and Acquaintances. That same Night, as he was conveying the Lady Caldwell and her Daughter, who had been to see him, to their Lodgings, when returning home with Robert Hamilton of Airdry, they were both apprehended by some of the King's Life-guard then at Glasgow, and taken off the Street to the Guard-house, and kept kept till next Day. Major Cockburn, then the commanding Officer, was willing to dismiss Kersland, but detained him till the Archbishop's Pleasure was known, who, as a Counsellor, ordered Kersland immediately to be made close Prisoner in the Tolbooth.

The Bishop took Horse immediately for Edinburgh, and the Lady Kersland followed as soon as possible, to prevent the Misinformations he might give. Mean while a dreadful Fire broke out in Glasgow, and, the Tolbooth being in great Hazard of being consumed with the Flames, all the Prisoners were taken out by the People of the Town; and among them Kersland got his Liberty, after he had been Eight Years Prisoner.

A Fire breaks out there, and he got out.

He was inclined to have offered himself again Prisoner to the Magistrates, after the Hurry of the Fire was over; but upon mature Deliberation with his Friends, and having received some Information from his Lady, of the Archbishop's Designs against him at Edinburgh, he resolved to retire, and absconded all that Winter; during the Spring and Summer following, where he kept Company with the Ministers that were persecuted, heard the Gospel preached by them in the Fields, and was present at the Communion, particularly that at Maybole, of which we shall afterwards hear, until about August 1678. he returned to Utrecht his old retiring Place, where he continued till the Day of his Death, November 14th, 1680. Robert Hamilton, who commanded at Bothwell, was then in Holland, and with him a little before he died. He saw good to commend him very much to his Face, and pretended to assure him he would be spared, and be another Caleb. Kersland was very much offended, and told Mr. Hamilton he looked on what he said as Flattery, 'adding, What is a Man before the Lord, yea, what is a Nation? as the Drop of a Bucket, as the smallest Dust in the Balance, and before him as nothing, yea, less than nothing and Vanity; but this much I can humbly say, that through free Grace I have endeavoured to keep the Post that God hath set me at those Fourteen Years, and have not desired to lift one Foot, till the Lord shewed me where to set down the next.' Those were among his last Words, and in a few Minutes he finished his Course with Joy, and fell asleep in Jesus, leaving a Widow, and Five Children with her, in a strange Land.

After some Stay in Holland, he went back to Utrecht, where he died November 1680.

The same Day, August 3^d, Mr. Alexander Forester, who had been apprehended for keeping a Conventicle, was by the Council ordered to the Bass; and Mr. William Erskine and the Laird of Bedlane, Prisoners in Stirling Castle, are ordered to be transported to Dumbarton, probably to make Room for Jerviswood and Kersland. Bedlane, as far as I can guess, hath continued under Confinement those Ten Years; the other was a worthy Presbyterian Minister, of whom I may give some Account elsewhere.

Mr. Forester sent to the Bass; Mr. Erskine and Bedlane sent to Dumbarton.

Mr. Robert Steedman, Minister at Carriden near Linlithgow, Mr. George Haliburton, and Mr. James Duncan, at the same Time are ordered to be denounced for keeping of Conventicles. Mr. Haliburton was Minister at Dalgety, and Mr. James Duncan was in Balhouse's Family, where we heard of him before.

Mrs. Steedman, Haliburton, and Duncan, denounced.

Further, at the same Diet, Alexander Gordon of Knockbreck, Henry McCulloch of Barnholm, ----- Hay of Arrowland, the old Lady Menteith, Robert McClellan of Barmagachan, Patrick Vance of Drumblair, all of them in Galloway, are by the Council ordered to be denounced for alledged Harbour, Refet, and Supply of intercommuned Persons, and having Correspondence with some who had been denounced. The Probation was easy, since upon Noncompearance they were held as confest.

Gentlemen in Galloway denounced for Harbour and Refet.

Thomas Blackwell and some other Persons in Glasgow, were likewise at this same Time denounced; and Douglas of Cavers was cited to have compeared to underly the Law, for keeping Mr. James Osburn, as his Chaplain, without the Bishop's Licence, and upon Noncompearance, both the Laird of Cavers, and Mr. Osburn, are denounced and put to the Horn. This hath been a busy Sederunt.

Thomas Blackwell, Laird of Cavers, and Mr. James Osburn denounced.

Upon the 6th of September, I find Robert Andrew in Culroß fined in Fifty Pounds Sterling for keeping Conventicles, which was as much as the whole Town would have been fined in. These particular Instances are endless, and it is only some few of them I give from the Registers.

Robert Andrew fined in Fifty Pounds Sterling, for Conventicles.

I come forward here to give a larger Account of the Sufferings of the Reverend Mr. John McGilligen this Year. I find, October 11th, the Council is informed, that he is apprehended in Murray, and they order him to be brought South to Edinburgh Tolbooth. It will not be unacceptable to the Reader, to have some Account of this worthy Man and his Sufferings, which I shall do from some remaining Papers of his own, Copies whereof are now in mine Eye.

Mr. John McGilligen taken, and brought to Edinburgh.

Mr. John McGilligen of Alnes, before the Restoration was Minister at Fottertie in the Synod of Ross, and by the 1st and 3^d Acts of Session 2^d Parl. 1st Char. II. was forced to leave his Charge there. The Patron indeed made him an Offer of a Presentation; but as he himself hath left it under his Hand, 'He reckoned the Acceptance of that, a destroying the Foundation which God had laid in his Church, to the Maintenance of which he was bound by solemn Oath.' And although he had quit his Charge, this did not satisfy the Spite of the Prelates against him. Bishop Paterfon of Ross cited him to compear before his diocesan Meeting, 1663. and upon his Noncompearing passed a Sentence of Deposition against him,

His Sufferings since the Restoration.

Refuses a Presentation and is deposed by the Bishop, 1663.

1676. upon these Reasons; 'His absenting himself from the diocesan Meeting, his not answering the Citation to appear before him when called, and his preaching, praying, and reasoning against Prelatical Government:' And caused intimate this Sentence in the Kirk of Fottertie, the last Day of May 1663.

From Fottertie he came and dwelt at his own House in Alnes, where now and then he preached, and up and down that Country, when there was any Access, and had many Seals of his Ministry; and the sensible Measures of his Master's Presence he enjoyed, made all his outward Hardships and Harassings for many Years very easy to him. He was many Times wonderfully hid from the secular Arm; and the Bishop threatned to excommunicate him: When a Friend of his acquainted him with this, he answered with his ordinary Composure, That he had already heard that Balaam designed to curse him, but did not question it would end like Shimei his cursing David. The Prelate and his Underlings finding their highest Sentence would be disregarded, and that their Persons were already despised in the Country, quit this Project.

This Year, after a remarkable Warning, he is seized by Seaforth's Orders,

Last Year we heard of the pleasant Communion he kept at Obisdale, after he was inter-communed at Edinburgh. Upon the back of it he was obliged to abscond for some Time, to escape the Prelates Rage. This Year 1676. his dear Brother, Mr. Hugh Anderson, called him to baptize a Child of his, and he stayed at his House all Night thereafter. That Night he was trysted with an odd enough Passage, which he could not but remark: When he fell asleep he dreamed that there were Three Men come to the House to apprehend him; he was no Observer of Dreams, and therefore when he awakened he endeavoured to be freed of the Thoughts of what he had been dreaming, and composed himself to Sleep; and upon his falling asleep he dreamed it a Second Time, and awoke; and again, after he essayed to banish the Thoughts of it, and falling asleep again, he dreamed it the Third Time. This wakened him with some Concern, and he began to apprehend there might be more than ordinary in it, and fell under the Impressions that Bonds and Imprisonment were abiding him, and arose to compose himself by committing his Case to the Lord. He had scarce got up, and was but putting on his Clothes, when early in the Morning George Mackenzie, Hugh Bogie, and another, Servants to the Earl of Seaforth, were come to Mr. Anderson's House to seize him. This surprized him very much, as what he did not at all expect from the Earl, and besides was illegal, for the Earl had no Power in the Shire of Cromarty, where Mr. McGilligen now was, being only Sheriff of the Shire of Ross: But afterwards he found that he was instigated by Bishop Paterfson, afterwards Archbishop of Glasgow; and this Fact did very much trouble the Earl's Mind some Time after, as he signified to severals.

And carried to Fortross.

The Party who apprehended Mr. McGilligen carried him to Fortross, where he was for some Time in Prison. He hath left in his Diary the Copy of a Speech he had to the Provost of Fortross, to whom the Orders were sent to receive him into Custody, which deserves a Room here.

His Speech to the Provost.

'MY Lord, I look upon it as a special Piece of the Providence of him whose Eyes look to and fro through the Earth, proving himself mighty in behalf of them who fear him, that he hath ordered my Lot to fall in your Hands, endued with so much discerning, and who is no Stranger in our Israel, but, on the contrary, well acquainted with the Controversies of the Times, and the Cause for which I am apprehended.'

'I bless the most High, whose I am, and whom I desire to serve in the Gospel of his Son, so far as I can search into my self, I find no Evil in my Heart, nor Iniquity in my Hands, against his Majesty's Person or Authority, whom I own, and to whom I submit in the Lord. In Testimony whereof, I have given (in so far as could consist with my Duty to the Lord, and the Light and Peace of my own Conscience) a Submission unto, and Observation of his Laws: But for abjured Prelacy, and perjured Prelates, that Stem and those Twigs which the Father's right Hand hath never planted nor watered, being a Seed which the evil One hath sown, while the Servants were asleep, and hath produced so much of Sin and Suffering in this Land, I look on my self as obliged before the Lord to refuse, oppose, and bear Testimony against it; not only by a subjective Obligation, from the Day I lifted up my Hand, and sware to the most high God to endeavour in my Station and Place the Extirpation and Eradication of that cursed Root of Bitterness; but also by a moral objective Obligation from the Word of God, which knows none of those Creatures, but hath sufficiently reprov'd them, and rebuked the Spirit of Antichrist, when it made its first Appearance in the World, founding out of the Mouths of the Disciples, Which shall be greatest in the Kingdom of God. The Apostles being convinced of, and humbled for their sinful Ambition, opposed the same Spirit, making its next illustrious Appearances in the World, Diotrephes is condemned for affecting the Prehemiunee. For this Testimony I am willing to go to Prison, and be judged at Cesar's Tribunal.'

From whence he is sent to Nairn, and is

From Fortross he was sent to the Shire of Nairn, where, being Prisoner some Time, Hugh Campbell of Calder, Sheriff of that Shire, shewed him much Civility. When his Accusers culers heard of this, he quickly after had Orders sent him to come into Edinburgh Tolbooth, at the Time abovementioned, and after his lying some Time there, he was sent Prisoner to the Bass.

In the Bass at first he with some other worthy Ministers, was imprisoned pretty much at large, but shortly after so closely, that he was not allowed a Servant to make his Bed or Meat, but he must do all these servile Offices himself. Mean while, he leaves it on Record, that the upper Springs flowed liberally and sweetly, when the nether Springs were imbibited: And he had the Experience of that, Tanta est dulcedo celestis gaudii, ut si una guttula deflueret in infernum, totam amaritudinem inferni absorberet. And from the Sense of this proceeded that memorable Expression of his, left under his Hand, Since I was a Prisoner I dwelt at Ease, and lived securely. Indeed his Papers evidence, that, while in the Bass, he triumphed in Tribulation.

When under this Restraint, my Lord M'Leod coming from his Travels went to see the Bass, and procured some more Liberty to Mr. M'Gilligen from the Governor, so that at some Times he was permitted to come out upon the Rock. However, it was here he contracted that bitter Gravel, which at length carried him off. In the Year 1679. as we shall hear, he, with several others, were brought into the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and liberate on Bail; and Sir Hugh Campbell of Calder was Surety for him and some others, whom we shall again meet with in the Year 1682. till which Time I leave him.

To return to the Council's Procedure against others at this Time; Upon the 12th of October, Mr. William Bell appears before them, for preaching to a Field-conventicle near Pentland-hills; and Robert Dick, whom they alledged had been very active in convocating People to it: Both are sent to the Bass.

Upon November 1st, Mr. Patrick Hamilton, not long since licensed by Presbyterian Ministers, Brother to the Laird of Halraig, afterwards Lord of Session since the Revolution, preached privately in a House of one of his Relations at Edinburgh. The Council getting Notice of this, cite before them upon the 6th, the following Persons, and fine them as follows: Mary Hepburn, Lady Saltcotes, in Two hundred Pounds, Mrs. Mary Liddingtoun her Daughter, in Two hundred Merks, for being present at that Sermon. And further, they send Mary Haldane, Relict of Mr. John Guthrie Minister at Tarbolton, and Bessie Muir, Relict of Mr. Alexander Dunlop Minister of the Gospel at Paisly, to the Tolbooth, until they shall find Caution under a Thousand Merks, each to remove from the Town of Edinburgh, and Six Miles round it. All of these religious Gentlewomen refused to give their Oaths, and were holden as confest.

At the same Diet Mr. Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn, of whom before, who had been caught, and lien some Time in Prison, is liberate upon Bond of Ten thousand Merks to appear when called. Nothing criminal could be proven against him, after all the Noise the Managers had made formerly about him.

By an Information from the Archbishop of Glasgow, James Dunlop of Houshill in the Shire of Renfrew, is cited in before the Council upon the 30th of November, and is fined in a Thousand Merks, for neglect of his Duty, as Bailie-depute of the Regality of Glasgow, in suppressing some Field-conventicles at Woodside, Partick, and other Places within that Jurisdiction this Summer, and declared incapable any more to act as Bailie of that Regality. No Maleadministration could be laid to his Charge, but only he could not allow himself to be so violent in prosecuting People for hearing the Gospel, as the Bishop and his Clergy would have him.

And, to end this Section, December 7th, I find the Council pass a Decreet against Mr. John Law, late Minister at Campsie, of whom before. He is libelled for keeping Conventicles at Campsie, Badernock, Kilpatrick, Kippen, and other Places, since June 1674. and for invading several Pulpits, and presuming to ordain and appoint several Persons to the Office and Work of the Ministry, and having given them Mission for that Effect. Being called and not coming, he is ordered to be denounced, and put to the Horn. The Sufferings of some other particular Persons this Year, of which I have not the Dates, may come in upon

S E C T. III.

Of the Circumstances of the Indulged, and some other incidental Matters, this Year 1676.

THE Clamour made in the Entry of this Year, by the Episcopal Clergy, against the indulged Presbyterian Ministers, for breaking their Confinement, and the Rules formerly given them, produced a new Proclamation, dated March 1st. This Proclamation I need not insert, but in as far as it differs from that before set down, September 3^d, 1672.

Proclamation
about the indulged Ministers, March 1st

1676. And I shall only remark, that the first Four Rules there set down without any Change, are of new laid upon the Ministers; and the Two last, anent their waiting on diocesan Meetings, and paying the Dues to the Clerk and Bursar of the diocesan Synod, are omitted; and then follows. 'And whereas it is informed, That the said outed Ministers, indulged as aforesaid, (at least many of them) have violated and contravened the foresaid Orders and Instructions, (upon which Terms they were permitted and indulged to preach, and exercise the other Functions of the Ministry) whereby many Disorders are occasioned; the said Lords do therefore of new again require and command all these indulged Ministers, to keep and observe the foresaid Orders and Instructions in Time coming, and especially for keeping within the Bounds of their own Parishes, and celebrating the Communion upon one and the same Lord's Day, as they will be answerable at their Peril; and ordain these Presents to be printed, and Copies thereof to be sent to the several Ministers.'

They are discharged to admit not indulged Ministers to preach with them.

This same Day I find in the Registers, that the Council 'discharge the nonconform Ministers to admit any of the Ministers not licensed by Law, to their Communions or Pulpits; and, if they disobey, they appoint the Bishop of the Diocese to depose them.' This seems to strike against the Agreement among Presbyterian Ministers, to preach one with other, indulged and not indulged.

Remarks upon both.

Wanting Documents to let me into the Springs of this Proclamation, at first Sight I imagined, that considering the Two last Rules, formerly insisted upon, were left out, it might have been designed as a Favour to the indulged Ministers, and a new Edition of the Rules, with the Omission of the Two last, anent which some of them were troubled, and Horning got out: But when I consider the additional Order in the Registers, anent their admitting none of their Brethren to joyn with them, and the Clause (upon which Terms they were permitted and indulged to preach and exercise the other Functions of the Ministry) I begin to imagine this Proclamation to be designed to break Presbyterians among themselves, and to blow the Sparks that were beginning to kindle among us, and in a Year or Two broke out very sadly.

Mr. Thomas Wylic's Representation anent this Act of Council.

I find some of these worthy Ministers much troubled at this Clause, and have in mine Eye the Draught of a Representation of one of them, which sets this Matter in a very fair Light, and deserves a Room here. Whether it was ever given in to the Council I know not, but I do not question it was the common Sentiments of many of them.

Unto the most honourable Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, the humble Representation and Supplication of Mr. Thomas Wylic, Minister for the present at Fenwick, occasioned by their Lordships Act, March 1st, 1676.

Most Honourable,

I Would most willingly have forborn this Address, if not constrained thereto by your Lordships late Act anent the indulged Ministers. If the Rules contained in the Act had by Order come to my Hand, it was always upon my Spirit to have freely and ingenuously represented my Thoughts upon them. This being the first Opportunity offered, I humbly beg, for the clearing of my Practice, and Exoneration of my Conscience, Liberty to unfold my Mind a little in all Sobriety in this Matter to your Lordships.'

The Act, September 3^d, 1672: in its complex Contrivance, with the other Two of the same Date, were not a little grievous to many, and to me: Yet considering that it is the Magistrate's Duty, not only to permit and allow, but, in case of Neglect, to command the preaching of the Gospel; and looking upon these Rules in the Second Act as enjoined sub pœna, I resolved (having an Invitation from the People) thankfully to accept of the Permission and Allowance, and to answer when challenged for every Breach of the Rules, which I ever looked upon as Orders, and not as Terms, or Considerations upon which we were permitted to preach; neither can I look upon them, or any Thing in the first Contrivance as such; for Terms upon which, &c. import a Compact betwixt the Giver and Receiver; but in this Matter I know of no such Thing. Next, the Permission or Allowance is tendred in the first Act by way of free Favour, not requiring a formal free Acceptance for completing of its Grant, but leaving the Favour to be made use of or not, by the Persons concerned, in their own Option; so that it does not stipulate the Acceptor's Consent to any Condition whatsoever.'

And as to the Rules enjoined in the Second Act, your Lordships did neither require a formal and consentient Acceptance, nor did your Lordships on your Grant restipulate the Observance of any of these Rules, but only enjoined them with that fairest of Constructions, as these concerned will be answerable: So that it is very manifest there is nothing in all these Acts, so much as intimating that your Lordships intended any Consent or Obligation by way of Condition, from the Receivers of your Offer; but that your Lordships contented your selves with the Intimation of your Pleasure, with Certification; hence judging the Offer materially good, and a partial Restitution of these desirable Things, we have been and are deprived of, and the Accepters, of which I am one, in a Capacity, through the Lord's Assistance, either to give a satisfying Reason, or if not received, (which yet I am confident your Lordships will not reject) to suffer with a good Conscience for the Neglect of the Rules. I choosed to make Use of the Offer which I judged improvable to the Advancement of the Gospel, finding nothing in the Narrative or Body of the Second Act containing the Rules, so much as hinting at Terms upon which: And finding in the last Act a peremptory Order and Command given to Sheriffs and other Magistrates, to enquire how the Ministers confined in their several Jurisdictions, do observe the Rules prescribed to them, (not the Terms upon which, &c. required of them) and to report to the Council thereanent once every Six Months; certainly if they had been proposed to, and accepted by the Ministers, as Terms and Conditions, I am confident your Lordships Charity would have trusted the Performance for one half Year at least, to the Ministers their Fidelity. I beg Liberty only to add, that, in my humble Opinion, it is contrary to the Nature of an Indulgence, properly so called, to require by way of Condition from the Parties indulged, the Performance of such Things as cross their Principles, Judgment, and Conscience; for the Nature and End of an Indulgence, is to ease the Party indulged as to these: Neither can it be expected, that an indulged Party can yield to any Conditions that thwart with their Consciences, Principles, and Judgment, as in the present Case these Rules do; which I am ready and willing to make out, if your Lordships allow me.

My Lords, your Lordships Offer being free, the Acceptance arbitrary, the Rules not enjoined as Conditions, but Commands sub pana, and the Resolution of Ministers as to them being either to give a satisfying Reason, or suffer with a good Conscience for neglecting them, as said is; upon these Grounds, I and others have been in Readiness hitherto to answer every one convincingly, who either out of Malice were apt to reproach, or out of Scruple to stumble at the least Use making of the Allowance, as if we thereby had involved our selves in complying with and Approbation of Prelacy, Erastianism, the Supremacy in its full Extent or Latitude, and consequently in a constructive Approbation of all the Alterations in the Church, that have been carried on these Years bygone; and also of evacuating the intrinsic Power of Government belonging to the Church, as a Society erected by Christ, and granted to her by his express Gift: Which Things to approve were contrary to the known Principles of Presbyterians.

But now it being your Lordships Pleasure to impose these Rules upon us, as Terms upon which we are permitted and indulged, &c. I confess I cannot answer what may be objected of that Kind, or nullify the Inferences. Tho' I have been very silent in those Matters, and do not deny to the King's Majesty his just Power about Matters Ecclesiastical, allowed him by the Word of God, and practised by the godly reforming Kings of Judah; yet I dare not, because of the Aw of God upon me, do any Thing as my own proper Fact and Deed, that will involve me in such Approbations and Compliances, contrary to my Conscience, such as the Acceptance of the Rules, under the Notion of Terms upon which, &c. or the Observance of them imposed as Orders, would do.

Having in the Simplicity of my Heart, and, I dare say, as before the Lord, with loyal Affection to his Majesty, and all due Respect to your Honours, thus unfolded my Mind to your Lordships, my humble Supplication is,

That as I hold my Ministry of Jesus Christ allenarly, and am to be accountable to him for all my Ministerial Administrations; so I may, through his Majesty's Goodness and Patronage, and your Lordships Favour, enjoy the free Exercise thereof, according to the Word of God, with the Reservation of my Principles, and the Liberty of my Judgment. And particularly, I humbly supplicate, that every Thing in those Rules, and every Thing else in the complex Contrivance, that clogs his Majesty's and your Lordships Favour, and is known to be contrary to the Presbyterian Principles and Judgment, and grievous to their Minds and Consciences, may be laid aside, and not imposed upon your Lordships humble Suppliant: And your Petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

Joyn't with the former Representation, I find another Paper, drawn up by the same reverend and learned Person, to have been presented, if required, with the former, which contains short and solid Reasons, why Presbyterian Ministers could not, in their Practice, fall in with the Rules commanded by the Council. This being a material Apology for their Sufferings, now and afterwards, upon this Score, and what may discover the Grounds upon which they ventured all along to refuse Compliance in these Things, it appears not improper to insert the Paper in this Place, from the Original.

Thoughts upon the Rules laid down by the Council to the indulged Ministers, by the same Hand.

1676. A few sober Thoughts upon the Six Rules enjoyned to be observed by indulged Ministers, humbly offered to the most honourable the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, as Reasons why Mr. Thomas Wylie, Minister for the present at Fenwick, cannot observe the same.

See the Rules,
App. No. 14.

THE First Rule will deprive honest Parents of the Presbyterian Perswasion, (being in the Parishes of Conformists, and not clear to receive Ordinances from them) of the Benefit of Baptism to their Children: For the Parent being under an insuperable Scruple, dare not, with a doubting Conscience, go to the Conformist for that Benefit; in which Case, if the Conformist be not of a condescending Nature, it cannot be expected that the Parent will obtain a Certificate of him, to get the Benefit elsewhere; which will inevitably occasion Straitning to nonconformist Ministers. When in this Case, Parents, to their certain Knowledge, faithful, knowing, honest Christians, walking blamelessly, shall request and obtest them for the Benefit, what shall the nonconformist Ministers do? How shall he be answerable to Jesus Christ, who hath given him a Commission to disciple and baptize, if he shall refuse Baptism to such an one, of whom he can say, in the Judgment of Charity, he is a real Disciple? Supposing there were some Weakness in such, in refusing to take the Ordinances off Conformists Hands, yet it were a hard Measure to debar them of Ordinances elsewhere; and the readiest Way imaginable, through the Policy of Satan, (whose Deceives Ministers should guard against) to drive tender scrupling Christians upon the Precipices of a total Separation, of Anabaptism, Quakerism, and the like.

The Second Rule, That all in one and the same Diocese, should have the Communion in one and the same Day, is impracticable, as will easily appear to any who will consider the different Bounds, Numbers of People, Employments, &c. of the respective Congregations, in one and the same Diocese. Often in one and the same Congregation, emergent Occasions have put the Minister and Eldership to change their ordinary Time. Sure it were very prejudicial to the People, to astrict all in one and the same Diocese, to go about that solemn Work in the same Day; neither can there be competent Judges, to determine when the Communion should be celebrated in this or that particular Congregation, as the faithful Ministers and Eldership thereof, who are to take an Account of the People's Knowledge, an Inspection of their Conversation, to consider of their Preparation for such a Work, and who know best the Occupations and Employments of their respective Parishes, and so can most seasonably pitch upon such Times for that solemn Ordinance, as will be freest of Distraction to the People, and least impede their civil Employments. Next, it is impossible for old, sickly, infirm Men, to discharge all the Exercises requisite, when that Ordinance is gone about, without Help; and how shall it be had, if all are astricted to one Day? Beside, if any Minister alone at the Work, should in Providence be overtaken with Sicknefs, which is caseable to the youngest and strongest, would it not be a heavy Disappointment, if there should be none to take the Work off his Hand? And this Restriction to one Day will deprive many of the Lord's People, to the sadning of their Hearts, of the more frequent Opportunities of this solemn Ordinance, in which the Lord hath often dealt bountifully with their Souls, convincing, converting, confirming, comforting, and building them up upon Christ. Tho' Ministers should be silent in this Matter, yet many Thousands in the Land will put their Seal to it, that they have seen, observed, and felt the Outgoings of the Lord, most powerful, glorious, and stately in his Sanctuary, when his faithful Servants and People have been attending duly in this great Ordinance. As to the Discharge to admit any belonging to other Parishes, without Testificates, to the Communion, the faithful Ministers of Jesus Christ have their Directions from their Master, to separate the Precious from the Vile; and 'tis to be supposed they will be faithful in obeying his Orders, both by calling for Testificates, and using all other Means of Trial: But to debar a knowing godly Person, who cannot get a Testificate from a Conformist, were too hard a Measure, as said is.

The Third Rule, That there be no Preaching without the Church, is prejudicial to the Benefit of Souls, will inevitably occasion much Throng, Confusion and Disorder within the Church, in the Time of the solemn Work, and much vaging upon, and profaning of the Lord's Day without the Kirk; for there are few or no Places wherein the Kirk will not be thronged in a Communion-day, with the People of their own Congregation: So to deny the Liberty of Preaching without, in some convenient Place, will occasion many Inconveniencies.

The Fourth Rule relates to the Sentence of Confinement. Albeit I forbear to speak against the Confinement, knowing that all civil Punishment is in the Power of the Magistrate; yet may I not, in all Humility, say, It is hard enough that honest men, living peaceably, should, indicta causa, be sentenced as Evil-doers: This is apt in it self to weaken our Ministerial Authority among the Profane. Next, it deprives us of one of the greatest Comforts of this Life, viz. mutual Converse for mutual Edification, and strengthening one another's Hands in the Work of the Lord. And it cannot but be grievous that the Keys of our Prison-doors, are hung at the Bishop's Belt, and at his only. Were it not that I dare not tempt your Lordships Patience, I could here instance many supposable Cases, which render the observing of this Rule impossible, and would shew our Complaint as to it, to be so grievous, that 'tis better to refrain than speak: Only I may say without Offence, it cannot be unknown to your Lordships, how unpleasant it will be to Presbyterian Ministers, to court the Bishop, to be obliged to him for Favours, to be giving him an Account of their Affairs, and how unwilling they will be to have any intermeddling with him, lest they be in Hazard either to provoke or be ensnared.

Ministerial

The Fifth Rule thrusts the Presbyterians under a direct and formal Subjection and Subordination to Prelacy, contrary to their known Principle and Judgment.

The last Rule fetters them under a Sort of Vassalage and Subserviency to the Bishop.

But your Lordships having past these Two in your last Act, I shall say no more of them.

The LORD pour out the Spirit of righteous Judgment upon your Lordships, in the Fear of the LORD.

It was for such Causes as these, that the Indulged, during the whole Time of their Liberty to preach, could not keep these Commands, and could never allow them to be the Conditions of the Exercise of their Ministry; and, as they had Occasion, disclaimed them, and both practically and otherwise testified against them; and, till some Time after this, the Bishops could not prevail to get many Prosecutions raised against them on this account.

The leaving out of the Two last Rules in this Proclamation, if I mistake not, helped to put an End to the Trouble of such of them as scrupled to pay the Dues of the Clerk and Burfar of the diocesan Synod. I took notice above, that upon the Trouble given them this way, last Year; and the former, they, for Want of Concert among themselves, had fallen into different Practices. All the Indulged in the Synod of Glasgow and Air, as far as I can find, went into the Payment, except these underwritten. Fairfoul the Clerk had got out a Horning against them, and by an original Letter of his, June 1st this Year, warns them he is just going to distress them: Whereupon I find they supplicate the Council as follows, which I give from an original Copy, only I omit the Names of the Parishes, being above, for Shortness.

Supplication of the indulged Ministers to the Council, against paying the Dues of the Clerk and Burfar to the diocesan Synod.

To the Right Honourable the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council,

Humbly sheweth,

That where there are Letters of Horning raised and direct against us, at the Instance of one Ludovick Fairfoul, pretending himself to be Clerk to the Synod of Glasgow, to make Payment to him of our alledged respective Proportions, of the ordinary Fees alledged due to him as Clerk to the foresaid Synod, of all Years and Terms resting unpaid, and in Time to come, during his Service thereat, as formerly: And siklike, at the Instance of one Mr. David Clunie, pretending himself a Burfar within the Diocese of Glasgow, to make Payment to him of certain Sums of his Burfary-dues, of all Years and Terms bygone alledged resting, and in Time coming as formerly; and many of your Petitioners are already charged by virtue of the said Hornings, and all of us threatned to be denounced, and Caption to be taken out against us.

And seeing it pleased the King's Majesty, by your Lordships Advice, to indulge your Petitioners, and exeme us from being concerned in either Presbyteries or Synods; and that the foresaid pretended Clerk of the Synod of Glasgow, is no ways concerned in the Affairs of the respective Congregations to the which we are indulged; and that your Petitioners are most humbly confident, that it is not either the King's Majesty's Inclination, or the Intentions of your Lordships, to suffer us to be imposed upon in these Things, which by themselves or their Consequences would infer our Concessions to these Things, whereto with Freedom of Conscience we cannot concede; and seeing these legal Distresses have a direct Tendency to impose upon us, contrary to the Indulgence, which his Majesty, with your Lordships Advice, out of his princely Clemency hath been pleased to vouchsafe upon us:

‘ May it therefore please your Lordships to discharge the foresaid Persons to trouble your Petitioners any further, by these Hornings, or other legal Distresses, for the Payment of any such pretended Dues; and that in Time coming we be no more troubled by any Persons with any Matters of the like Nature; and your Lordships Answer, &c.’

They are no more troubled in this Matter.

Some young Preachers come and preach on the Borders of their Parishes.

Other Incidents this Year.

To this Supplication I find nothing by way of Answer recorded; but after this Year this Matter seems to have been dropt, when it had been not a little troublesome to the indulged Ministers; at least I find no more in any Papers I have seen about it.

No more offers to me this Year with relation to them; only some young Preachers come to the Borders of some of their Parishes, and preach on Lord's Days: And this I find some of them regretting, as what might in the Issue tend to rent and distract People, and what there was no Occasion for, since they daily preached themselves. We may hear more of this in the succeeding Years.

I come now to take Notice of some few other Things remarkable this Year. I find Two or Three Riots complained of before the Council. The Reasons of these Attempts upon the Incumbents in Churches, when they were not merely from Thieves and House-breakers, have been accounted for already, and I shall only set down Matter of Fact here, as it comes to my Hand.

Riots complained of at Dunstons, Gargonnock, and Abbotsrule.

Mr. Henry Knox, Episcopal Minister at Dunstons, represents, upon the 6th of January, to the Council, that, upon the 28th of December, some Six or Seven Persons attacked his House, beat himself and his Wife, and took away his Household-furniture at Pleasure. And, upon the 27th of January, another Riot upon himself and Family is complained of, by the Minister of Gargonnock. Letters are issued out citing the Heritors of both these Parishes to compare, and upon February 10th, the Council fine the Heritors of Dunstons in Five thousand Merks, to be paid to their Minister Mr. Knox, for the Injury done him; and the Heritors of Gargonnock in Six thousand Merks. It would have been enriching to these Ministers, if they had been attacked once a Year at this Rate. In August this Year, I find the Council upon a Complaint of Mr. George Baptie, Minister of Abbotsrule, for a Riot committed upon his Person, issue out Letters against the Persons concerned. No more about it is in the Registers.

Severity to the Prisoners at Stirling for Conventicles, who are gited to be Soldiers.

In February the Managers committed a Piece of great Severity upon some Prisoners in Stirling Tolbooth. Toward the End of the Year 1674. Fifteen Men were caught at a Conventicle, and imprisoned in Stirling. One way or other Eight of them, in Fifteen Months, got out by some Interest made for them. In February this Year, those who remained sent the following Petition to the Council.

To the Right Honourable, &c.

The humble Petition of John Wingate, Andrew Richardson, John and William Paterfons, John Adam, John Stuart, and Charles Campbel,

Sheweth,

‘ That the Petitioners being Prisoners in the Tolbooth of Stirling these Fifteen Months bypast, some of us being poor old decrepit Bodies, and all of us poor Creatures with Wives and Families, we have been many Times at the Point of starving, and had long ere now died for Want, if we had not been supplied with the Charity of other People: The Truth whereof is notour to all who live near Stirling, and which the Magistrates have testified by a Report under their Hands:’

‘ Wherefore it is humbly desired, that your Lordships would compassionate our pitiful and deplorable Condition, and that of our poor starving Wives and Children, and order us Liberty; we being willing to enact our selves to compare and answer before your Lordships, whenever we shall be called.’

These good People had never been legally convict of that or any other Crime, and Fifteen Months of such hard Imprisonment would appear a Punishment abundantly equal to their being once at a Conventicle, and such a Petition would have prevailed almost with any but the People now in Power. Charles Campbel was upwards of Sixty Years, and John Adam near Seventy, and some of the rest were under heavy and sore Sickness: And yet, instead of Compassion to their clamant Case, by Order of Council they are gited to one Captain Maitland, who had been a Servant to the Duke of Lawderdale, an Officer at present in the Service of France. A signed Order by the Earl of Linlithgow, and Lords Haltoun and Collington, came to the Magistrates of Stirling for this Effect. Robert Russel the Provost was taught to carry on the Project with Secrecy, and the Keys of the Tolbooth were given to John Hamilton then Town Drummer, an Agent very well qualified for this Work; and he kept kept them from having Access to any Body for Two Days. At length, upon Friday's Night, February 18th, when all was got ready, at Midnight, without the least Warning to themselves or Relations, the poor Men were brought out of Prison, and delivered to about Fifty Foot Soldiers, who carried them off fettered and tied one to another. John Paterfon was let out some Days before, being in all Appearance in a dying Condition. Notwithstanding of this Surprize, it was observed, they were all, when they went off, though they knew not whither, most hearty and cheerful: So strong is the Support of a good Conscience and Cause.

The Beginning of this Year the Duke of Hamilton was at London, and the King was pleased to hear some of his Complaints against the Duke of Lawderdale. We shall have more of them afterwards. Lawderdale wanted not Matter to table against the other; That he had sent for him when Commissioner, and he declined to come, that he had opposed a Subsidy to his Majesty in Parliament, and likewise accused the Chancellor of several Things and Practices, not agreeable to the King's Interest; and it was moved the Chancellor should be called up to answer for himself. The Duke of Hamilton urged much the miserable Circumstances of many Country-people, who were cruelly handled for their Noncompliance, and fined, confined, banished, and all through ill Advice, and unjust Representations made to the Government. The Duke of Tork, and Earl of Atbole, (now made Marquis) and some others, were present. The King heard all, and said little. Lawderdale kept his Ground with the King; and the Chancellor, though the Archbishop of St. Andrews and others interposed, could scarce have Liberty to come up to Court to vindicate himself. At length Duke Hamilton left Court, and at parting, it is said the King taxed him with favouring of Phanaticks; and ordered him no more to meddle that Way, or in any of his Affairs, for he had no Service for him. This is all I meet with as to this Affair this Year.

Upon the 27th of April, I find the Council have a Letter before them from the King, of the Date January 2^d, relative to the Business of the Bishop of Dumblain, and the Four Ministers. How it came to be so long delayed I cannot account for, knowing no further in this Matter, than the Paper about it, come to my Hands, bears. The King's Letter runs, 'That by a Letter from the Archhishop of St. Andrews, he finds that the Bishop of Dumblain, now translated to the Isles, presented an Address to the Bishop of St. Andrews, and the other Bishops with him, containing a Declaration of his former Carriage, and an Engagement for his future Deportment, that he shall live in all becoming Duty and Faithfulness to his Majesty, for extending his Clemency to him, and recalling the former Order for his Translation to the Bishoprick of the Isles. This he declares he is graciously pleased to grant, and orders the Council to take all Restraints off him: And likewise, upon the account of the dutiful Address of Mrs. Turner, Robertson, Cant, and Hamilton, Ministers, all Restraints are to be taken off them.' The Council appoint accordingly. This is all I know as to the Issue of this Affair.

After the Act of Intercommuning, in August this Year, the Harvest and Winter was a Time of very hot Persecution through the Country, and an outed Minister scarce might venture to appear. Several Ministers who had preached in the South, retired to Northumberland. Mr. John Welsh, after whom a most diligent Enquiry was made, hired a House upon Tweed Side, where he for some Time dwelt very pleasantly. Orders came from the King and the Bishops Courts, to banish the Scots Fugitives; yet the English Gentlemen made no great Haste, and the Ministers sheltered there this Winter. I take it to have been upon this Occasion, that, October 12th, the Council write to the Earl of Hume to suppress the abounding Conventicles in Berwick Shire, and in the Places near the English Borders.

Even in this Storm, some Ministers kept at their Work, and the Soldiers were very busy; yet several Times they were repulsed. There was at this Time a Conventicle at Lilyclief-moor, where a Party of Soldiers were chased by the Country-people unarmed. I am told the Commander of the Party was cashiered for running away: And, this same Harvest or Winter, a Company of Foot were obliged to retire, when attacking a Conventicle near Dumbarton.

Some more particular Persons I find under Hardships this Year. I want the particular Dates, and therefore bring them in here. Mr. Andrew Donaldson, before the Restoration Minister at Dalgely in Fife, and now an old infirm Man, came with his Family to live at Inverkeithing, where Mr. David Lawder was Episcopal Minister. This worthy old Man was so cautious, that he would never preach, either in his own House or any other, in the Time of publick Worship. But sometimes on the Sabbath Evening, he preached to his own Family, and some others in the Town did come in. For no other Cause than this, a Party of Soldiers came one Night, and carried him out of his Bed, old and infirm as he was, straight away Prisoner to Linlithgow Prison, where he continued more than a Year, without any Thing being laid to his Charge, as we have heard.

Gilbert M^cLawraith inter-communed for Noncompearance, with some of his After-sufferings till the Revolution.

Gilbert M^cLawraith of Dinmurchie, in the Parish of Bar, in the Shire of Air, an Heritor of Five hundred Merks Land-rent, and a considerable Stock of Money, beside his Moveables and Plenishing, was this Year intercommuned, merely for Noncompearance at Courts, to which he was cited to bind himself to Conformity. Many Times he was searched for, but still escaped, and had his House frequently plundered. In the Year 1680. he was forfeited, with many others, in Absence, and the Gift of his Heritage and Moveables was made over to the Earl of Glencairn, and a Transference was made of this to Edmondston of Broich, and a Transaction entred upon by Friends for his Moveables, and a Thousand Merks paid. Afterwards they were again obliged to transact with the Laird of Milcraig as Donator, and another Thousand Merks was paid for the Moveables, and he was, by the Force of Soldiers, poilest of the House, Lands, Moveables, twice transacted for, Bonds, Debts and every Thing, till the Revolution, when the said Gilbert then alive, and Lieutenant in the Earl of Angus's Regiment, intended a Process against the said Persons, and, by Oaths of Witnesses and Writs, instructed a Charge of Fourteen thousand five hundred and fifty eight Pounds, Seventeen Shillings and Four Penies Scots. I do not find he had any Restitution for Bygones, though his Wife and Children were very rudely dealt with, and thrust out of their House with nothing but the Clothes on their Back, and an Infant in a Cradle, and none of their Neighbours were permitted to harbour any of them, till a Habitation was sought for by the Mother, besides the most malicious, reproachful, and blasphemous Language, unfit here to be repeated; all which was proven before the Committee of Parliament, after the Revolution. This Account is before me, attested.

To end this Year, so extensive and large was the Zeal of our Managers against the suffering Presbyterians, that it reached even to Places out of the King's Dominions. Accordingly, by the Influence of our Primate, the King is prevailed upon to write to the States General, to cause remove James Wallace, Robert M^cVaird, and John Brown, out of their Provinces. This was very hard Measure, that without any new Fault I can hear of, and for alledged Crimes for which they had been sentenced Fourteen or Sixteen Years ago, and had obeyed the Sentence, that new Difficulties should be put upon them, and they not be permitted to live quietly in the Places whither they had been forced to go. When or how James Wallace went to Holland I have not Accounts; of the other Two we have heard. The Consideration of this made the States reject this unreasonable Proposal, as will best appear by their Resolution, which is here insert.

Extract, out of the Register, of the Resolutions of the high and mighty Lords, the States General of the united Netherlands.

Die Veneris, the 31st of July, 1676.

Their Resolution thereupon July 31.

THE Lords Deputies of the Province of Holland and West Friesland, having had proposed to them, at their last Meeting, that the Lords the States of Holland, having convened in their States Meeting, had read a Missive of his Majesty of Great Britain, written to the States General, dated at Whitehall, the 27th of the preceeding Month, June, Stilo vet. containing, that his Majesty desired that the States General should effectually cause the Persons of James Wallace, alias Forbes, Robert M^cVaird, and John Brown, his Majesty's Subjects of the Kingdom of Scotland, being all there convicted of having committed the Crime of Lese-majesty, and having retired themselves unto the Province of Holland, in pursuance of the Treaties betwixt his said Majesty and the States, to depart out of this Land, under the Pains contained in the said Treaties; and were informed concerning this Matter, that the foresaid Robert M^cVaird and John Brown, had neither been Fugitives nor Rebels against his Majesty, and that such could not be comprehended under these Persons, who, conform to the foresaid Treaties, must be removed out of these Lands: That it was true, that the foresaid Robert M^cVaird was imprisoned, and by the King's Advocate was accused before the Parliament of Scotland, in the Year 1661. of having committed the Crime of Lese-majesty, and that therefore he ought to be punished; and that he on the contrary made his Defence; and that the final Sentence of the foresaid Parliament, was, that he should be banished during his Life-time, out of the Kingdoms of Scotland, England, and Ireland, and not to return thither again without his Majesty's Leave, upon Pain of Death: That they had caused him to subscribe the foresaid Sentence, and that he having subscribed the same, without receiving a Copy, was set out of Prison, and upon the 18th Day of November 1661. came to Rotterdam, to take up his Habitation: And that the foresaid John Brown being called before his Majesty's Council, November 6th, 1662. compeared, and was put in Prison; and that he, after some Time, having petitioned for Liberty, or at least a more large Imprisonment, received for Answer, that he was condemned to everlasting Banishment, and that there was nothing remaining for him to do, but to give Bond to go out of all his Majesty's Dominions, and not to return without Leave of his Majesty, upon Pain of Death; and that finally he was resolved to do the same, and having given the foresaid Bond

The King writes to the States to remove Mrs. Wallace, M^cVaird, and Brown, out of their Dominions.

Bond, without getting a Copy of his Sentence, was set out of Prison the 15th of December the aforesaid Year: And that he, having had the Liberty of a Month to stay in Scotland, and afterward having another Month granted him, did, upon the 12th of March 1663. come to Rotterdam, and stay. And that therefore the aforesaid Persons were of Opinion that it should not be imposed upon them to remove out of these Provinces, seeing they, according to the Judgment of their own Judges, were to undergo no sorer Punishment; and that they had obliged them by their own Hand-writ, to no more than to go out of his Majesty's Dominions; and they had finally satisfied that Sentence, by their Removal and Abode out of his Majesty's Kingdoms, and therefore neither should nor ought to be further disquieted.

Whereupon it being deliberate, it was found good and resolved, that Knowledge of the aforesaid should be given to the Lord Benningen, Ambassador for the States at the Court of England: That a Letter should be directed to him, desiring him to assure his Majesty, that the States General are fully resolved to execute and fulfil the Treaties betwixt his Majesty and this State; but withal, that they do not believe that his Majesty will impose upon them, to put away Persons who had the Misfortune to fall under his Disgrace; and having compeared before his Judges, and whose utmost Sentence was to banish out of his Majesty's Dominions, did, conform to their Sentence, remove out of them: And that the Lord Benningen shall, in the best and discreetest Manner, wave the forementioned Matter, as being in the highest prejudicial to this Land.

This Paper is an authentick Translation off the Original, and Allowances must be made for the Difference of Stile in our Language and the low Dutch, No Notice is taken of James Wallace: Whether this be Colonel Wallace, or a Minister of that Name, I know not; but I imagine it is the Colonel, because placed before the other Two. I am informed by a good Hand since, that this was Colonel Wallace; and Mr. Brown in his Information given in at this Time, put this Argument in for him, 'As for Mr. Wallace, it may be remembred, he is an able and expert Soldier, and may raise new Tumults in the King's Dominions, if he should not be suffered to lurk here, where he can do no Harm.' However, it seems they saw good to overlook him. Thus this foreign Persecution ended, as far as I know.

MATTER comes in so throng upon me this Year and the following, that I am at a Loss how to dispose it, so as the Reader may have any tolerable View of the black Period of Oppression and Persecution this Summer, and especially in the Close of the Year, and Beginning of the next, by the Highland Host. For some Time, as we have heard, the Course of Persecution has been carried on, with a Severity that would have tempted almost any Party to run to Extremities; and yet the Carriage of Presbyterians continues still loyal and peaceable, even when their Conventicles are most numerous. And when nothing really irregular can be fastned upon them, after the vast Numbers of Prosecutions this Spring and Summer, unreasonable Impositions are put upon Heritors; and, upon their declining them, the Story of a designed Insurrection is trump'd up, most groundlessly and maliciously: And upon this the barbarous Highlanders are hounded out upon the West.

View of this Year.

The Order I have kept for some preceeding Years, will need to be altered this Year, that the Reader may have the Chain of the Facts that preceeded the sending down of the Highlanders, the better in his Eye. And I shall give some general Accounts of Affairs this Year, and then the particular Prosecutions and Sufferings of Ministers, Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others. Next, I'll take a View of the Procedure of the Council and Government, against Conventicles in general, and Presbyterians, which will lead me into more immediate Inlets to, and Preparations for the coming down of the Highland Host. These will be the Subject of Four Sections.

The Matter of this Chapter.

S E C T. I.

Containing a more general View of the State of Presbyterians this Year, with some Particulars which come not so well in upon the following Sections.

The general State of Presbyterians and the Indulged this Year.

Ministers Return from the North of England, where they had been useful.

Meeting of Ministers at Edinburgh, where Mr. Ralph Rogers is Moderator.

They give it as their Opinion, that the Sentences inflicted upon the Ministers, 1661. should be taken off:

And that Indulged and not Indulged should preach together without Distinction.

They have long Reasonings about indefinite Ordination, but no Conclusion was come to.

Conventicles are numerous this Year.

The Supper is dispensed at Jedburgh and Melrose.

THAT I may not pass by some Matters of Fact which come not so well under the succeeding Sections, I shall here take a short View of the Condition of Presbyterian Ministers this Year, and the Indulged in particular, and then hint at some few other Things upon this Period.

The Ministers who had been busiest at Conventicles, were forced to retire last Year; and this Spring they came back, though a good many continued in the North of Ireland and England, and in both were a sweet Saviour unto Christ in many. In Cumberland and Northumberland, Mrs. John Welsh, Samuel Arnot, Gabriel Semple, John Scot of Hawick, and others, were very useful Instruments among many rude and ignorant People, who were some way fallow Ground, and scarce had the Gospel preached to them before.

In the Entry of this Year, there was a pretty large Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers at Edinburgh, indulged and not indulged. Mr. Ralph Rogers was chosen Moderator. I have seen some very warm Papers from Holland, full of Heat against this Meeting (as I take it, for they do not name the Year) as a pretended General Assembly: But they never assumed any Power of this Kind to themselves, and did nothing I can find, but what was competent for a Meeting of Brethren that was occasional, and for Consultation, and the mutual strengthening of one anothers Hands, and never claimed the Powers of the supreme Judicatory of this Church.

Very reasonably indeed they gave it as their Opinion, that the Sentences inflicted in the Year 1661. by the Brethren for the publick Resolutions, in some Synods, upon several worthy Ministers on the other Side, ought to be taken off. Mr. Hugh Kennedy, Mr. William Creighton, both of them since the Revolution Ministers in Edinburgh, Mr. Edward Jamison, and some others, against whom the Malice of some Noblemen, Gentlemen, and apostate Ministers had mostly run, were among this Number.

— They gave it likewise as their Advice to their Brethren in the Country, which probably occasioned the warm Reflections from beyond Sea, that the indulged Ministers ought to invite their Brethren who were not indulged, to preach with them, as Opportunity offered; and that the Indulged should likewise, as they are called, and the Case of the Country required, preach up and down, and not confine themselves only to their own Pulpits. This I know Mr. Gabriel Cunningham, Mr. Patrick Simpson, and several others I could name, did.

Likewise they had long Reasonings and no small Debates about the Question of indefinite Ordination; Whether in the present persecuted and oppressed State of the Church, Ministers might be ordained without a Call and Invitation from, or the present Prospect of Settlement in a particular Congregation. Several Papers upon this Subject pro and con were handed about at this Time, wherein this Question is handled with abundance of Solidity and Learning. I am told the most Part of the Meeting were for the Negative; but a considerable Number being for the Affirmative, no Conclusion was come to.

I have by me Mr. James Kirkcoun's Essay, and some Papers of Mr. Brown's, for the Affirmative in this Debate, and a pretty large Essay of Mr. John Baird, who opposes indefinite Ordination. They are too large to be insert even in the Appendix.

Mr. John Welsh, and a good many others, returned to the South and West in the Spring, after last Year's Storm, and Conventicles were very frequent and common. A considerable Part of the Nation wholly disowned the Episcopal Clergy and Church; and the severe Laws against preaching of the Gospel were not executed, because of the Multitude of Offenders, except as to some particular Persons, of whom in the next Section, who fell into the Churches of the Persecutors. Publick Citations of Ministers and Hearers were given much over, seeing no Body compeared, knowing that the best Measure they could expect was the Bas, whither all were sent who could be caught.

The Two Conventicles which were mostly noticed, and grating to the Prelates this Summer, were that at Erkford in Teviotdale, and in Maybole Parish in the Shire of Air, beside the Water of Girvan. At this last Mr. Archibald Riddel, Mr. John Welsh, Mr. Andrew Mortoun, Mr. Patrick Warner, Mr. George Barclay, and a good many other Ministers, did celebrate the Sacrament of the Supper in the Fields; and there were many Thousands of People present, and very much Success attended the Word preached there. The People were encouraged to follow the Gospel when they saw their own Numbers; and indeed they regarded the present Laws no further than the Nature and Reasons of them discovered their Equity and Righteousness. A Price being set upon Mr. John Welsh his Head, he travelled still with some of his Friends with him, armed for their own and his Defence. The conformable Clergy magnified these Meetings, and made a terrible Clamour, as if the Whole of the Presbyterians had been in Arms; and the Bishops took the Hint, and give out that an Insurrection was designed, when, in Truth, there was nothing like this projected. However, the Clergy by their Lies and Stories compassed their End, and got new Bonds pressed, and Severities exercised, as we shall hear.

Not very much offers this Year, as to the Circumstances of the Indulged. Several Things concurred to lay the Foundations of the Divisions, which broke out next Year, and especially before the Rising at Bothwell. Robert Hamilton, Brother to the Laird of Presston, a Gentleman we shall meet with after this, who, in his Youth, was said to be none of the strictest Practice, and had of late set up with more than ordinary Zeal against Prelacy and other Corruptions, together with Mr. Richard Cameron, and other Probationers for the Ministry, and some others of greater Weight than any of them, joyned in promoting a Separation from all who had accepted the Indulgence: But I shall leave this melancholy Subject, till I give it all together in its own Place, when it came to a greater Bearing.

It is the Treatment of the Indulged from the Council, I shall here a little hint at. Upon the 7th of March, Mr. Alexander Hamilton, formerly confined to Dalmenie, is ordered by the Council to remove to Dalserf, and allowed to exercise his Ministry there, upon the former Terms given to the rest. The particular Occasion of this Allowance I know not fully; but I am informed, that a good many serious People used to go out of Edinburgh to Dalmenie, to hear Mr. Hamilton, which grated the Bishop and his Party there very much.

Upon the 2^d of May, the Council pass an Act, discharging all the outed Ministers, who did not enter into their Confinement in the Year 1672. to enter now into any Churches, and declare they will indulge no more in Time to come, but will take Care the Kirks of such who die, or are removed, be planted with regular Ministers. This Act was very much kept, as far as I have remarked, and in a few Years the Prelates got rid of these worthy Men, so much their Eye-sore, as we shall hear. However, every Rule hath its Exceptions, especially when any of their Friends were concerned; and so I find, August 7th, Mr. Anthony Murray is indulged to the Parish of Carstairs, Mr. Greg, formerly indulged there, being turned out.

A good Number of the indulged Ministers, and such as had been named in the Act, were cited to appear before the Council, in August this Year. By a List before me, I find the following Ministers cited to Thursday August 4th, Mr. Matthew McKail Minister formerly at Bothwell, Mr. James Currie at Shots, Mr. John Semple, Mr. William Wisheart at Kinnel, Mr. Robert Fleming, Mr. Gilbert Hall, Mr. John Park at Stranraer, Mr. Patrick Anderson, Mr. Thomas Hogg. The Ministers cited to August 11th, Thursday after the former, are Mr. James Hamilton at Blantyre, Mr. James Mitchel, Mr. James Porter, Mr. John Dickson at Rutherglen, Mr. John Blacadder at Traquair, Mr. Gilbert Hamilton at Crawford, Mr. Peter Reid at Douglas, Mr. George Johnston at Newbottle, Mr. John Stirling at Kilbarchan, Mr. Hugh Peebles at Lochwinnoch, Mr. James Hutchison at Killellan, Mr. Gabriel Cunningham at Dunlop, Mr. Hugh Crawford at New Cumnock, Mr. James Wallace at Inchinnan, John Semple at Carsfairn, Mr. Robert Lockhart, Mr. Alexander Moncrief at Scone, Mr. Alexander Strang at -----

The Reason of this almost general Citation I know not, only it is probable it was upon Information given of their not keeping the Rules. The Council-register bears nothing of it: But, upon August 7th, I find Mr. James Currie before the Council, and challenged for being at a Conventicle. He acknowledges he was there, and the Reason was, it was in the Corner of his own Parish, and he went thither to expostulate with the Preacher, for withdrawing his People from him, and is dismissed. A good Number named in this List never accepted the Indulgence, though named in the Act; and all cited here are not even in the Act. I find, the foresaid Day, the Council call Mr. James Greg, who is not among those in the List; and he not comparing, they declare his Indulgence is forfeited, and he is discharged to preach any more in Carstairs.

At the same Time the Council being informed, that the indulged Ministers do not keep their Instructions, 'Order a new Copy of them to be sent to each of them, with Certification, that, if they break them, they shall be immediately turned out, and further censured.' This seems to have been the Effect of their general Noncompearance. The Author of the History of the Indulgence speaks of a Proclamation, August 10th this Year, discharging Heritors to pay the Indulged their Stipends, without a Warrant from Council for that Effect, notwithstanding the Liberty formerly granted. If the Proclamation be in the Registers I have overlookt it, only I find the short Minute above.

The Council being informed, that Mr. ---- Gilchrist had been inducted by Mr. John Welsh into the Kirk of Carsfairn, upon the indulged Minister's Death, and that he now possesses the Kirk, Manse, and Glebe, ordain Mr. Gilchrist to be dispossessed, and brought in Prisoner to Edinburgh. It would seem that worthy and really singular Man and Minister John Semple of Carsfairn, died at this Time. No more about this Matter is in the Registers.

We shall afterward hear, that in the Beginning of October this Year, the Instructions granted to the Persons then named by the Council, are a little more favourable to the Indulged; and Separation from the indulged Ministers by Robert Hamilton, Mr. Richard Cameron, and others, begins this Year.

Mr. Alexander Hamilton removed by the Council from Dalmenie to Dalserf.

and the Council declare, ' That the indulged Ministers shall not be put to a Necessity of seeking yearly Warrants for their Stipends, but the Heritors of the Parishes where they serve are authorized and appointed to pay them their Stipends, according as they serve the Cure, in hail or in Part. And it is hereby declared, that if any of these indulged Ministers shall be found to contravene the Instructions, the Council will proceed against them as they shall see Occasion. And it is hereby recommended to the respective Commissioners, to see them keep their Confinement, and to report if they find them transgress.' This is all I meet with concerning the Indulged this Year.

Duke Hamilton's Commissions about the Militia taken away.

We heard formerly of the Contests 'twixt the Two Dukes; and, January 6th this Year, I find a Letter from the King to the Council, making void all the Commissions about the Militia, formerly granted to the Duke of Hamilton, which no doubt they took Care to intimate to him.

Lawderdale brings to Scotland his Lady: Her Daughter married to Lord Lorn.

In June or July the Duke of Lawderdale and his Dutcheſs came down to Scotland, and one of the Dutcheſs's Daughters, by Sir Lionel Talmash her first Husband, is married to the Lord Lorn, afterward the first Duke of Argyle. The other was designed for the Marquis of Athole's eldest Son; but that Project miſgave.

Presbyterian Ministers apply to the Duke of Lawderdale, but he will shew them no Favour.

The Presbyterian Ministers in Glasgow, Paisly, Irwin, and Hamilton, when they had the Accounts of the Duke's coming down, found it proper to make Trial of an Address to his Grace in favours of Nonconformists; and the Reverend Mr. Matthew Crawford, from whom I had this Passage, was pitched upon to go into Edinburgh, and there, with the Help of the Reverend Mr. John Carstairs, he procured a Meeting of the Ministers thereabout; who relishing the Motion from the West, employed Mr. Anthony Murray, a Relation of the Dutcheſs of Lawderdale, and he got Access to the Duke, and humbly pressed that his Grace would be pleased to interpose with the King, for the taking off the Sentences of Intercommuning laid upon so many Ministers, and the releasing their Brethren in the Baſi, and other Places of Confinement; and begging that they might have Access to meet together under his Grace's Connivance, for drawing a Supplication to the King's Majesty.

New Hardships put on them in August.

All the Return Mr. Murray had from the Duke, was, that as for himself he was ready to do him any Kindness that lay in his Power, but would grant no Favour to that Party, being (as he was pleased to say) unworthy of any. From this plain Answer, the Ministers concluded that Evil was determined against them; and so indeed it proved; and we shall hear, in the Beginning of August, new and severe Proclamations and Impositions on Presbyterians were agreed upon, and emitted.

Yet the Duke talks of a Third Indulgence, and gives some Notice of it to them by the Lord Melvil.

But next Council-day, when a good many of the Lords represented, that the pressing of the Bond would ruine their Tenants, and lay their Lands waste, the Duke began to talk of a Third Indulgence, and that pretty openly; yea, came the length of signifying, by my Lord Melvil, to several Presbyterian Ministers, his Inclinations this Way: And Commissioners were sent from several Corners in the Country, to advise upon a Supplication to the King.

Only with a View to keep them in Hopes till an Army was raised.

When this came to the Knowledge of the Two Archbishops, they complained very heavily to the Duke: And I am informed his Return was, that he intended no Liberty to Presbyterians at all, but it was convenient to keep them in Hopes, till he got Forces raised to suppress them, and keep them in Order; and he alledged they were at present so numerous, as they could not be meddled with without Hazard to the Peace of the Country.

Counsellors for and against Presbyterians.

In the Council at this Time the Prelates Party were strong; the Chancellor, Linlithgow, Mar, Glencairn, Rofs, and Haltoun, were violently against any Favour to Presbyterians. Argyle, the President, Stairs, Sir Thomas Wallace of Craigie, and a few more, were for moderate Measures; but nothing was done.

Sir George Mackenzie made a Counsellor and Advocate.

Upon the 4th of September, Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh, was admitted a Privy Counsellor. And much about this Time, Sir John Nisbet of Dirletoun, who had been Advocate to the King these many Years, is turned out of his Post, some say upon a very sordid Reason, and Sir George, in October this Year, put in his Room, who was a very great Instrument in the After-severities against Presbyterians, and was scarce ever guilty of moderating any harsh Proceedings against them in the Eyes of the Prelates themselves.

Letter from the King, requiring all the Officers of State to accept their Commissions, durante beneplacito.

At the same Diet of Council, a Letter comes down from the King, of the Date August 24th, signifying, That in Time to come he was resolved to give no Commissions to any Officers of State, but durante beneplacito, and appoints the Chancellor, Secretary, Treasurer-depute, and Lord Privy Seal, to be enquired if they were willing thus to take their Commissions, which it seems they formerly had durante vita, aut interveniente culpa. We need not doubt what their Answer was, when the King's Will long since was declared to be their Law. Their Consent is registrate, to this Alteration, in the Council-books. This, among other Things, was a great Handle for promoting the arbitrary Courses of this Period, and a good Mean to make all the inferior Officers entirely depend upon him who had the King's Ear: And yet, as is usual, all these Stretches were turned against the Duke of Lawderdale, who contrived them for his own Establishment.

Towards the End of October, the Council receive a Letter from the Duke of Lawderdale, acquainting them with the designed Marriage twixt the Prince of Orange and Lady Mary; and they write a Letter to the King full of Compliment upon this Delign, and tell him, They cannot express the Greatness of that Happiness they promise themselves from that Alliance, which brings so much Support to the Royal Family, and the Protestant Churches; and they command publick Rejoycings in the City of Edinburgh for this. Perhaps, had some of them known what was to come out of that auspicious Match, they would scarce have been so forward. It was indeed the only Bow we had in our Cloud, in all this dark Period. And,

Orange's Marriage intimate to the Council, with their Addreſs there-upon.

The Reader will be ready enough to observe, though I should not put him in Mind of it, that since the Union of the Crowns, the Family of the Stuarts have been great Blessings to these Kingdoms, in the Marriages they made with Protestant Princes, yea, to the Whole of the Reformed Churches; and it is to these we ow first the glorious Revolution, and then the happy Settlement of the Protestant Succession in the Family of Hanover. And upon the other Hand, their Matches with Papists have been as great Plagues, and once and again brought us and our holy Religion to the Brink of Ruin.

Observation upon the Marriages of the Royal Family.

No other Thing offers, but what will come in on the following Sections, unless it be, that upon the First of November, the Committee of publick Affairs, who have now the most Part of what before was the uptaking Work of the Council upon their Hand, report to the Council that they had appointed Two Men to be scourged, for a Riot on the Minister of Torphichen, and Two more for a Riot on the Minister of Borrowstounness; and the Council approve of this, and greater Things than this, as we shall hear, done by them.

Riots on the Incumbence of Torphichen and Borrowstounness punished.

S E C T. II.

Of the particular Hardships put upon Presbyterian Ministers, Noblemen, and Gentlemen, this Year 1677.

THE Shortness of the former Section is like to be more than made up by the Length of this and the following, where a very great Heap of particular Sufferings of many worthy Persons presents it self. I shall begin with the Ministers who this Year came to their Hands who managed the Persecution, and then give some Accounts of Persons of Quality, and others, in the Order of Time they were attacked.

Ministers brought to Trouble this Year.

I may well begin this Account with the Imprisonment and Sufferings of that excellent and pious Minister, and the Representative of a good Family, Mr. James Frazer of Brae, which I shall give the Reader mostly from his own distinct and pointed Account of them in his Life, of which he hath left a large Narrative in Manuscript, under the borrowed Name of Philocris, a Copy of which from the Original is before me; and I shall here and afterward give a pretty large Extract from it.

Mr. James Frazer of Brae's Sufferings.

This worthy Person met with several Hardships in the preceeding Years, Citations to appear before the Council in a Day or Two after he was married, timed just out of Malice to vex him and his Spouse, which, with his being declared Fugitive, I must pass, as what would take up much Room.

In the former Years.

We heard before he is among the List of Ministers, who, about Two Years ago, were intercommuned. It may be worth the while to take Notice of some of his Remarks on this Part of his Lot. He observes, 'That the Bishops and other wicked Men found, that by all the former Branches of their Severities, the Number of Dissenters increased upon their Hand; and, being fretted with this, bethought themselves of the Expedient of intercommuning the most active Ministers and Professors, and stooped very low, even to Carriers of Salt, as Robert Kirk in the Mill of Forth; and went the length of Three or Four hundred in the First and Second Intercommuning. He remarks, that Murderers and Traitors till now used only to be intercommuned, and that by this Method the Persecutors hoped to keep the People from them, and to force them to leave the Land, or make them Coy-ducks to ensnare others.' He had preached at Field-conventicles, and was, in his Sentiments, against hearing the Episcopal Ministers, and very much popular, which some of his Friends urged against his being put in with others in the Letters of Intercommuning; but the Prelates were positive to have him in: He adds, 'That for all the great Hopes conceived from this harsh Step, their Counsels were turned to Folly, and never one whom he cared for shunned his Conversation after this Sentence; and even such who had no Regard to Religion, entertained him as freely and friendly as ever; yea, he notices, that it was when under this utmost Sentence, that he got the most of the Incumbrances off his Estate, and his civil Business cleared and settled; and that he did not hear of any intercommuned

What passed
there.

Persons who were prejudged, only the Bishops were more universally hated, as the Authors of so rigorous Courses, and the whole Land groined the more to be delivered from them.

After Two Years and a Half's Continuance under this Sentence, during which he preached as he had Opportunity, the Prelates used all their Interest to catch him, knowing he was a rigid Nonconformist, and had no Freedom to have any Communion with their Church; and, as he expresses himself, imagining he was a Man of some Parts, and very active in keeping up the Schism, as they called it, and stirred up the Council against him in particular, as a Person of disloyal Principles and Practices; of which he fully vindicated himself, as we shall hear; and he was one of Three, for the apprehending of whom a considerable Sum of Money was proffered.

At last, being in Edinburgh, the Town-major, being solicited by the Primate, and encouraged by great Promises of Reward, upon the Sabbath Evening, January 28th this Year, by Means of a Servant-maid of one of his Relations, with whom he lodged, got Notice of him; and about Ten at Night, when at Family-worship, came in and seized him, and carried him straight to Prison. The Archbishop was presently acquainted with the News, and much pleased, gave the Major a small Present, and promised more; and, as soon as the Day dawned, sent strict Orders to the Jailor, that Mr. Frazer should be kept close, and none permitted to have Access to him, until he was brought before a Committee of Council.

Before them he appeared at Five of the Clock at Night, and what passed there I shall give in Brue's own Words. Says he, 'When I appeared I was not indicted of any Crimes, but examined, and verbally charged as a seditious Person, who did rend the Church of Christ, and was very active to make and keep up the Schism, as a Preacher at Field-conventicles, which was Death by Law, which they gladly would have had me acknowledge, as likewise who impowered me to preach; that I was intercommuned and despised the Law, in so far as I never made any Application to be freed from that Sentence; and that I was a Person of very bad Principles, destructive to all Government; and thereupon the Archbishop, who sought to ensnare me by my own Words, enquired, Whether I judged it lawful, on Pretext of Religion, to take up Arms against the King's Majesty? This was the Sum; and that I kept Correspondence with some Prisoners in the Ba's, which the Archbishop confidently averred he knew.'

'These Things (adds he) were not charged upon me all at once, but in a confused Way, and many of them by way of Question. I cannot say of any of the Committee, but they were all civil and sober Persons, of whom, if the Instigation and Fear of the Archbishop had not prevailed with them, I might have been moderately dealt with: But he, in a bitter and invective Oration, did represent me as a very odious and criminal Person to the other Counsellors, aggravating my alledged Crimes vehemently.'

'To all which I replied, That I did acknowledge I was (though most unworthy) a Minister of the Gospel; and that indeed I preached frequently as the Lord called me, and independently upon the Bishop; that the Subject of my Discourses and Sermons were not disloyal, and traitorous Principles and Assertions, as the Archbishop did assert; but according as I was helped of God, I preached Repentance towards God, and Faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ, and no other Thing than what was contained in the Prophets and the New Testament: That I was so far from being ashamed or terrified to own that I was a Minister of Christ, that though I was of no despicable Extraction, yet I gloried most in, and counted it the greatest Honour I ever attained, to serve God in the Gospel of his Son: That I never stirred up the People to Sedition by preaching, and was indifferent though the Principles of my Heart were as visible and perceivable to their Lordships, as the external Lineaments and Treats of my Face, so as they might read what was engraven on my Heart: That as for rising up in Arms against the King, upon the Pretext of Religion, which the Archbishop alledged I maintained, I told him he was therein abused by his Informers; for I never knew of any of the most zealous Asserters of the Liberties of the People, that did maintain rising in Arms upon Pretence of Religion, Pretences giving no Ground or Warrant for any Man's Action: That Matters of Prerogative and Privilege were Things of a ticklish and thorny Nature, and which for the present I desired not to give my Thoughts upon, not judging them within my Sphere, or that I was called to meddle with them: That for such as did ordain me, I was not free to tell them, lest thereby I should bring others into Trouble, although I designed to be most free as to Matters concerning my self: That, as I judged it not unlawful to preach the Gospel, either in Houses or Fields, as Conveniency did offer, but Duty and an Ordinance of Christ, so far was I from judging these Meetings Rendezvouses of Rebellion, as the Archbishop termed them: That I did not acknowledge I at any Time preached in the Fields; and if they thirsted after my Blood, and to take my Life upon that Account, they could not expect I should give or reach the Weapon wherewith to destroy my self, or that I should either witness against or accuse my self in a Matter which the Law had made so criminal; and therefore it was proper for them to seek their Proof and Evidences against me elsewhere than from my self; for I was resolved no Man living should be able to make me guilty of such a Weakness: That

That as to corresponding with any in the Bass, which the Archbishop alledged, I declared there was no such Thing, and if there was, I shall be content to suffer the greatest Punishment. I denied the Charge of Schism, and left it to be proven by the Bishop: That for my Intercommuning, I was then Seven Score of Miles off when it was palled, and knew not of it, till I saw my Name in the printed Paper, and so could not prevent it; and after I was intercommuned, I could not get one Person as would so much as draw up a Petition for me, being straitly charged to the contrary: And that from this and the Fear of further Prejudice, and not from any Contempt of the Laws, it was, that I did not move to have my self taken out of the Letters of Intercommuning; that in this and all the Premises I was free and ingenuous with them: That I came not to justify my Breeding before their Lordships, but acknowledged I was a rude Man, one of the Lords having challenged me of Unmannerliness and ill Breeding, that I gave not the Archbishop his Titles: And finally, that I was now in their Lordships Power, and ready to submit to whatever their Lordships determined concerning me.

This is Mr. Frazer's own Account of his Examination, and it agrees perfectly well with another Account written at this Time in short Hand, by one present at the Examination, as the Queries and Answers were given; and that the Reader may have a Specimen of the Manner of their captious Examinations, I have insert it, App. N^o. 78.

Copy of his Examination before the Council, January 29. App. N^o. 78. Sent back to Prison, and harshly treated, and next sent to the Lo.

After his Examination he was sent back to Prison, and ordained to be kept more strictly than formerly. His Pockets were searched for Letters: Knives, Ink, Pen, and Paper were taken from him, and all Company discharged. He remarks, that the Lord was a Light round about him at this Time, and him they could not shut out, and that Night was the sweetest he had for many Years, and he was lifted up above Death, Sin, Hell, and Wrath, and the Fears of Prelates and Papists, by a full Sense of the Divine Favour. About Six of the Clock next Day, he was awakened by one of the Jaylors, who called to him to make ready to go presently to the Bass, for so the Council had determined. Accordingly, he and Mr. James Mitchel were carried away by a Guard of Twelve Horse and Thirty Foot, and on Wednesday Morning were delivered to the Governor of the Garison, consisting of Eighteen or Twenty Soldiers.

In the Bass he continued Two Years and a Half; and he makes not a few Remarks upon his own and the rest of the Prisoners Circumstances while there, too long to be insert here. Upon the one Hand he records, that he met with much of the Lord's Presence, and many Visits from his Master, and had much sweet Conversation with his Fellow-prisoners, and improved in Knowledge and Grace: But upon the other Side he complains, besides their Opportunities of Preaching were removed, Distance from his Relations, and many other Things, which easily offer to any Body; that the Company of the ungodly was uneasy, they lived among Lions, Wolves, and Serpents, and dwelt in Kedar. Their Servants were turned from them frequently, and they obliged to seek new ones; they were deprived often of one anothers Society; their Letters were frequently opened and read, their Diet was extravagantly dear, and they behoved to take it at the Governor's Rates. Many Times they were all shut up close, and not suffered to see or speak to one another, just as Freaks took the Soldiers. They were vexed with the Soldiers mixing in with them, their Blasphemies and Cursings, and ensnaring Discourse on publick Matters. Their Servants were frequently attempted by the Rustians, so that they could scarce get any to serve them. The worst among the Soldiers kept some others among them, from conversing with the Ministers upon religious Matters on the Lord's Day, by force, when several were most willing, and had got some Good this Way: And sometimes in the Winter and Spring they were very hardly put to it for Necessaries, and had nothing but Snow-water, sprinkled upon some Oat Meal, to drink, and a little hard Fish to eat.

Where he continued Two Years and a Half. His Remarks upon his and the other Prisoners their Circumstances there.

Till the Archbishop's Death no Intercession could prevail for liberating the most Part of them; and yet Mr. Frazer remarks, that the firm Persuasion of a Deliverance was continually kept up upon his Spirit, and he was made to believe that the God who spoke to the Fish in Jonah's Case, would speak to that Rock to give him and his Brethren up: And accordingly, when the rash and unconcerted Attempt at Bothwell was broken, and they judged their Case desperate, and all Hope was failing, in the Evening Time it was Light; and the King granted an Indemnity, and sent Orders to liberate all Prisoners for Nonconformity, who had not been concerned in the Rising.

From Hope of a Deliverance kept upon his Spirit.

Upon which, in July 1679. Mr. Frazer and Eight or Nine more Ministers were brought out of the Bass, and taken to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh. The Reason of their being imprisoned there, when taken out, was, that though the King's Orders were unconditional to liberate them, yet the Council would not set them free, until they should either give Bond not to rise in Arms against the King, or any commissionate by him in any Case, and to forbear Field-meetings, and Preaching in Houses, or give Security and Caution to appear when called, under the Pain of Five hundred Pounds Sterling. The first the Ministers in all the Points of it would not oblige themselves to, as what they reckoned was a giving up of their Ministry, and therefore behoved to fall in with the other; and in Twenty four Hours Time

He and the rest are liberated July 1679 upon Bonds, and continued free, till taken again November 1681

1677. they and some others in Prison at Edinburgh, found Bail for Eight thousand Pounds Sterling, and were liberate. Mr. Frazer observes, he continued in a wandering Lot, preaching almost every Lord's Day, till November 1681. when he and his Cautioner were cited before the Council; at which Time we shall meet with this excellent Person again.

February 1. Mr. Thomas Hogg and Mr. John M'Gilligen from the North, the last sent to the Bass.

I go forward to the Sufferings of some other Ministers about this Time, from the Hints I find in the Council-books anent them. February 1st, the Council order Mr. Thomas Hogg, whom they term a noted Keeper of Conventicles, atd intercommuned, to be transported from Murray to Edinburgh Tolbooth; and Mr. John M'Gilligen, of whom before, to be conveyed from one Sheriff to another, to Edinburgh. They are informed that the Sheriff of Nairn keeps him as a Chaplain, and suffers him to preach and keep Conventicles, and commit other Disorders; and therefore the said Sheriff is ordered likewise to appear before them at Edinburgh. Mr. M'Gilligen was sent to the Bass, and continued there till the 1679. What became of the friendly Sheriff I have not heard, only I find the Council, March 1st, by a Letter, give to the Earl of Seaforth a severe Reprimand, for granting Warrant to the Sheriff of Nairn to give some Liberty to Mr. M'Gilligen.

Mr. Andrew Forester imprisoned, and challenged for written Minutes of a Meeting of outed Ministers, 1676. found on him.

Mr. Andrew Forester, who had been formerly imprisoned in the Bass for preaching at Conventicles, and let out, was lately taken in Fife, and brought before the Council, February 8th. The great Thing they had against him, was some Papers he had about him when taken, and I give the Account as it stands in the Registers. 'Mr. Andrew Forester, when taken had some Papers upon him, by which it appears, that, upon the 20th of May 1676. there convened, within the Town of Edinburgh, betwixt Fifty and Sixty outed Ministers, who did constitute themselves in Form of a Commission of the Kirk, and voted their Moderator, and appointed a Committee of their Number to bring in Overtures; who accordingly did meet at Night, and drew up a Petition, and Overtures of a most seditious Nature, to be offered to their Meeting; in which they condescend upon, and settle Ways of keeping Correspondence in their several Societies and Synods established by them, and for entring upon Trials, and sending out young Men to the Ministry in their several Societies and Bounds, and for one Synod's corresponding with another, and for providing against any Offer from the State in order to Church-affairs, without Advertisement given unto, or Concert of the several Societies, and for Correspondence with Gentlemen and judicious Elders. Whilk Overtures being, on the said 25th of May, presented to the great Meeting, were by them voted and approven; which Paper, containing the said Petition and Overtures, with another Paper bearing the leeting and voting of the Moderator, and what Votes every Minister had, and the Minutes of what passed at those Meetings, being found on the said Mr. Forester, and he confessing he was present, and the said Minutes were his Writing; but declining to answer in what House they met, and who was Preses, though he owned he was Clerk, or who were present, and other Circumstances; he is ordered to be kept close Prisoner in Edinburgh.'

Remarks on this Meeting.

No more anent this Meeting offers to me than is here; I make no doubt it has been a general Meeting of Correspondence, and probably they voted and concluded the Overtures set down above, for the Management of themselves. As to their sitting as a Commission of the Kirk, is merely an Addition or Inference, and I find all who were Members of those Meetings still declined to take to themselves any judicative Power. We have heard of another Meeting of this Nature this Year, for Regulations to themselves in this difficult Juncture; and after this I much doubt if there were many. What became of Mr. Forester I have not learned.

Mr. William M'Millan confined to Balmacallan.

May 3^d, the Earl of Dumfries represents to the Council, that Mr. William M'Millan, of whose Sufferings I shall afterward give a fuller Account, hath been for some Time imprisoned in Dumfries for Nonconformity, and that he may be let out, and confined to the Parish of Balmacallan. The Council grant the Desire of a Petition from him to this Purpose.

Mr. James Drummond.

The same Day Mr. James Drummond, formerly mentioned, is ordered 'to be brought into Edinburgh Tolbooth. The Reason given is, because at his former Liberation he engaged not to keep Conventicles, and yet was taken preaching.' If he made such a Promise, he is almost the only Presbyterian Minister did so at this Time. They all gave Bond to compear when called, but none of them would oblige themselves not to preach.

Mr. Robert Trail younger, his Examination before the Council, he is sent to the Bass.

Mr. Robert Trail, Son to Mr. Robert Trail Minister at Edinburgh, of whom in the former Book, is brought before the Council, July 19th. It is narrated in the Article about him, that he was taken at Edinburgh, that he had been excepted out of the Indemnity for the Rebellion 1666. When brought before the Council, he acknowledged he had kept House-conventicles; and being interrogate if he had preached at Field-conventicles, he referred that to Probation, and declined to answer, as being criminal by Law: Whereupon he was ordered by the Council to purge himself by Oath, of preaching or hearing at them. This he peremptorily refused, as what in Justice he could not be obliged to in his own Cause. Being interrogate, If he ever conversed with Mr. John Welsh; he confessed he had, when upon the English Border. He acknowledged he was ordained to the Ministry by Presbyterian Ministers Ministers at London, in the Year 1670. The Council send him to the Bass; and Major Johnstoun is ordered a Premium of a Thousand Pounds Scots for apprehending him.

October 9th, I find the Committee for publick Affairs give it as their Opinion to the Council, that Mr. Robert Trail, Scot of Pitlochie, Mr. James Drummond, Mr. James Frazer of Brae, be liberate from the Bass, upon their giving Bonds for their compearing when called. How far this was gone into by the Council as to the rest I know not; but we have heard that Mr. Frazer was continued in the Bass, notwithstanding of this, by the particular Spite the Primate had against him.

At that Diet, I find that the Council order Mr. Alexander Pedin, of whom before, to be liberate from the Bass, upon his enacting himself to depart forth of Britain, and not to return, under the Pain of being held pro confesso to have been at Pentland. I am told he was once Precentor at Fenwick for some Time.

Mr. Alexander Pedin let out of the Bass October 9.

Likewise they order Mr. Thomas Hogg, who had been brought from the Bass to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, to be liberate, and confined to Kintire, under the Pain of a Thousand Merks; and Mr. John McGilligen is likewise ordered to be liberate, and confined to the Island of Ila; and Mr. Thomas Ross, who is Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Tain, is appointed to be liberate, upon his finding Caution to compear when called, upon the Pain of Two thousand Merks.

Mr. Hogg brought from the Bass to Edinburgh Tolbooth, and confined to Kintire, Mr. McGilligen to Ila, Mr. Thomas Ross liberate. Mr. John Welwood turned out of Tarbolton.

November 1st, Mr. John Welwood is informed against, as having intruded upon the Kirk of Tarbolton in the Shire of Air; and the Council appoint the Earl of Glencairn, and the Lord Ross, to see that he be turned out, and apprehended. I do not hear he was taken, but very soon the Highland Reformers came down to that Country: And, November 15th, Mr. James Forthie, Chaplain to the Trinity Hospital at Edinburgh, is ordered to be turned out, for his being present at a Conventicle. This is all I meet with this Year, about particular Ministers.

I come now forward to the Severities exercised against particular Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others. My Accounts of them are not so large as were to be wished, being mostly from the Hints about them I observed in the Council-books.

Upon the 8th of February, Scot of Pitlochie, who had been formerly intercommuned, and was lately taken for being at Conventicles, is brought before the Council, and sent straight to the Bass, where I find him October 5th, and ordered to be let out by the Committee for publick Affairs, as hath been noticed.

Scot of Pitlochie sent to the Bass, where he continues from Feb. to October.

This Year the excellent Lord Cardross, of whom before, had new Troubles; whether upon the former iniquous Sentence he had continued in Prison till now, or what was the Occasion of this, I know not: But, February 8th, I find the Council allow Henry Lord Cardross Liberty to go out of Prison, until the 18th of that Month, because of his Lady's Illness: And upon the First of March, they allow the Lord Cardross to go about his Affairs, upon a Bond of a Hundred Pounds Sterling, to be exacted for every Offence, toties quoties, for himself and his Lady, in the Terms the Council appointed formerly. This is rigorously exacted. August 7th, my Lord and his Lady are fined in Half of their yearly valued Rent. The Pretext of this Severity was, that he had baptized Two Children with the outed Ministers. One would think this was a pretty narrow Point, and might have been overlookt; but none of these could be born with by the Bishops.

Lord Cardross fined again August 7.

Since I finished what is above, from the Hints in the Council-registers, I am in Case, from original Papers, to give some further Account of my Lord Cardross's Trouble this Year. This excellent Nobleman had continued in Prison now near Two Years. It seems my Lord sent up a Petition to his Majesty, which was answered in a Letter to the Council, dated February 24th, 1676. a Copy of which is before me, which relates to Two other Gentlemen as well as him, and I insert it here.

Further Accounts of the Lord Cardross's Trouble this Year.

Right trusty and well beloved Cousins and Counsellors, &c. We greet you well. Having seen and considered the Three inclosed Petitions, from Henry Lord Cardross, Sir Patrick Home of Polwart, and Lieutenant-general William Drummond; We have thought fit to signify to you Our Royal Pleasure, and We do hereby expressly require you to exact, and cause full Payment to be made of the Fine imposed by you on the Lord Cardross, and to take good Surety from him, that neither he nor his Family will be guilty of such Offences as these for which he was by you fined and committed: After which (and no sooner) you are hereby authorized to set him at Liberty. As for Sir Patrick Home's Desire, it is Our express Pleasure, that the Sentence formerly pronounced by you, whereby he is declared incapable of all publick Trust, may still continue in full Force against him, until Our Pleasure shall be (in Writing under Our Royal Hand) declared to the contrary; but that in the mean Time, you order him to be released from Prison, and to be restored to his Liberty. And as for Lieutenant-general Drummond's Desire, it is Our Royal Pleasure, and We are hereby graciously pleased to authorize and require you to cause him to be set at his full Liberty, hoping that his future Carriage will be such, as that thereby We shall have no Cause to think this Our Royal Favour ill bestowed. For doing all which this shall be King's Letter about him, Polwart, and Lieutenant-general Drummond.

‘ your Warrant, and so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 24th Day of February, 1676. and of Our Reign the 28th Year.’
By his Majesty's Command.

LAWDERDALE.

The Council were willing enough to keep close to this unfavourable Answer; and my Lord continued in Prison, till February this Year he is liberate for Ten Days, and his Liberty continued, under a rigorous Bond, as we have just now seen, till a new Process is intended against him, for Two irregular Baptisms. My Lord's Indictment is dated August 2^d, and I insert it here from the Original.

Indictment against him for Two Baptisms, Aug. 2.

‘ CHARLES, &c. Forasmuch as it is humbly meaned and shown to Us, by Our trusty and well beloved Counsellor Sir John Nisbet of Dirlتون, Knight, Our Advocate for Our Interest, in the Matter underwritten, That where, albeit by the Sixth Act of the Second Session of Our Second Parliament, it is statute and ordained, That none of Our Subjects of whatsoever Degree or Quality, presume to offer their Children to be baptized by any, but by such as are their Parish Ministers, or else by such Ministers as are authorized by the established Government of the Church, or licensed by Our Council, upon a Certificate from the Minister of the Parish, if he be present, or in his Absence by one of the neighbouring Ministers; and it is declared, that the Father of any Child which shall be otherwise baptized, (he being an Heritor, Liferenter, or proper Wadsetter) shall be fined in a Fourth Part of the valued yearly Rent: Notwithstanding whereof, it is of Verity, That upon the First, Second, Third, and remanent Days of the Months of January, February, March, and remanent Months of the Years of God 1675, 1676 bypast, and 1677 instant, or one or other of the Days of the said Months, Henry Lord Cardross hath several Children belonging to him, at the least hath had Two Children baptized by Persons who are not his own Parish Ministers, or by such Ministers as are not authorized by the established Government of the Church, or not licensed by Our Council, without any Certificate from the Ministers of his own Parish, or, in case of his Absence, by one of the neighbouring Ministers; whereby the said Henry Lord Cardross hath directly contravened the Tenor of the foresaid Act of Parliament, and thereby incurred the Penalty therein contained, wherefore he ought and should be decerned to make Payment. OUR WILL IS HEREFÖRE, and We charge you strictly, and command, that, incontinent these Our Letters seen, ye pass, and, in Our Name and Authority, command and charge the said Henry Lord Cardross personally, and deliver to him a just Copy of these Our Letters, to compear personally before the Lords of secret Council at Edinburgh, or where it shall happen them to be for the Time, the Seventh Day of August Instant, to answer to the Premises, and give his Oath upon the Verity thereof, certifying him, if he fail so to do, that he shall be held as confest thereupon; and that the Lords of Our Privy Council will proceed and give Sentence in the said Matter, as effiers, according to Justice, as you will answer to Us thereupon. The whilk to do We commit to you, conjunctly and severally, Our full Power, by thir Our Letters, delivering them by you duly execute and indorsate again to the Bearer. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Second Day of August, and of Our Reign the Twenty ninth Year, 1677.’

Per actum Dominorum secreti Concilii.

‘ I Robert Leitch Messenger, by virtue of the principal Letters rais'd at the Instance of the above designed Sir John Nisbet, in his Majesty's Name and Authority, lawfully summon, command, and charge Henry Lord Cardross, to compear, Day and Place above express, for the Reasons and Causes above rehearsed.’

Robert Leitch Messenger.

In answer to this, instead of legal Defences, my Lord gives in the following Representation to the Council, when he appeared, August 7th.

Unto the Right Honourable, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, the humble Representation of Henry Lord Cardross, Sheweth,

His Answers Aug. 7.

‘ THAT being convened before your Lordships, for having, since January 1675. a Child, one or more, baptized, contrary to the Act of Parliament 1670. as is particularly expressed in the Libel; I shall not trouble your Lordships with legal Defences, but plainly lay forth, and humbly submit the Case as it is, and doth consist in my Knowledge, to your Lordships.’

ships favourable Judgment. It is not unknown to your Lordships, how, and for what Cause I have been kept a Prisoner in the Castle of Edinburgh, by the Space of almost Two Years, and thereby sequestrated and shut up, not only from my ordinary Parish, but also from my own Family, in which Time I grant that I had a Child born in the Town of Edinburgh; but being restrained, as I have said, and not permitted to attend my Wife in her Labour, much less to perform and discharge the other Duties relating to the Child, I confess that I did neither conceive my self concerned in the foresaid Act of Parliament, being in no Liberty or Capacity to satisfy its Appointment, nor did I enquire nor inform my self further, than to learn that the Child was truly and Christianly baptized, without once asking by what Minister the same was done ----- And this is the true and just Account of this Affair: Seeing therefore that the foresaid Act is made expressly against wilful Withdrawers, and such as presume to offer their Children to be baptized otherwise than is therein ordained; and so that these Things and Characters are noways chargeable upon me a Prisoner, having neither ordinary Parish, nor settled Family, nor so much as Access to have presented my Child to baptize; and lastly, seeing that my long, and more than ordinary Sufferings, are well known to your Lordships, likeas, the Child is now deceased, and so it is most consistent with your Lordships Moderation, not to add Affliction to the afflicted: May it therefore please your Lordships graciously to accept of this my Declaration and Submission, and to acquit me of the foresaid Libel and Indictment.

Notwithstanding of this plain stating the Matter, my Lord is fined as high as the Letter of the Law would permit, in Half a Year's valued Rent. The Severity of this Procedure appears so full from the above Representation, that I need make no Reflections upon it, but go forward to the Sufferings of others this Year.

Thomas Blackwel, William Stirling, and Robert Fork, Prisoners at Glasgow, and formerly declared fugitive, are ordered, February 8th, to be brought in Prisoners to Edinburgh. Whether they were sent, I know not. We have seen Mr. Blackwel escaped out of Prison last Year by the dreadful Fire: It may be by this Time he was taken again, but this I know, his Sufferings were very sore and most illegal. An Information given in to the Government after the Revolution, will give us some Hint of them, though far short of what they really were; which bears, 'That at the pressing Instance of Mr. Ross, then Parson of Glasgow, and afterwards Bishop of St. Andrews, in the Year 1677. Mr. Blackwel was committed to Prison, (for House and Field-conventicles, and entertaining Nonconformist Ministers in his House) even when under a most violent Fit of a tormenting Gravel: But one Night the Door being open, and the Jailor drunk, he and William Stirling, a Gentleman in Prison with him, got out. The Council cited the Magistrates of Glasgow, and they having no Defence to make, were fined in Ten thousand Merks, which Fine was transacted with them for Two thousand Merks, by one of the Managers. After the Indemnity 1679. Mr. Blackwel was attacked by the Cautioners for the Jailor, who had paid the Fine, and put again in Prison, and kept there under great Torture of the Gravel for a long Time, and was obliged to transact for Seven thousand Merks to his Pursuers, a good Part of which was paid, though William Stirling was not at all pursued.' By this and many other Hardships, he and his Family were reduced to great Difficulties and Incumbrances, and yet kind Providence hath well provided for them since the Revolution. Nothing further offers as to the other Two.

Thomas Blackwel's Sufferings.

Upon the 22^d of February, Robert Blae late Bailie of Culross, is fined for being at Conventicles, in Two thousand Merks Scots, and William Gray Girdle-maker there, upon the same account, is fined in Two hundred Merks.

Fines in Cause for Conventicles.

Robert Bennet of Chesters, upon the 2^d of May, is brought before the Council, for being at a Field-conventicle, where they alledge the King's Forces were resisted: And, the same Day, the Soldiers who apprehended Thomas Blackwel and Robert Bennet, are allowed Ten Pounds Sterling per Piece out of the Fines. June 28th, I find the Council fine Bennet of Chesters in Four thousand Merks Scots, for Conventicles, and his hearing and conversing with Mr. John Welsh, and appoint him to continue in the Bass till he pay it.

Bennet of Chesters fined in 4000 Merks for one Conventicle.

The same Day, Adam Stobie of Luscar, is fined by the Council in Three thousand Merks, for keeping Conventicles, withdrawing from publick Ordinances, Refet and Converse with intercommuned Persons, and, after Payment of the Fine, ordered to be transported forth of the Kingdom.

Stobie of Luscar in 3000 Merks, and after Payment to be transported.

June 28th, John Anderson of Dowhill younger, since the Revolution frequently Provost of Glasgow, was brought before the Committee of publick Affairs, and was accused of many Conventicles, and a Tract of Nonconformity. All was remitted to his own Oath for Probation, which he refusing to give, was held as confest. He voluntarily acknowledged he had for several Years deserted his own Church at Glasgow, and heard the Indulged, that he had a Child baptized by an indulged Minister, that he had been at Five or Six Conventicles: He refused to engage to hear his Parish Minister, and they fine him in Five hundred Pounds Sterling, and appoint him to lie in Edinburgh Tolbooth till

Sir Alexander Bruce of Broomhall fined in 1200 Merks for his Tenants Non-conformity. Charges to many Heritors in Lanerk and Renfrew, to appear before the Council in August, for Non-conformity.

Abstract of that to James Smith of Tullochshaugh.

till he pay it. There he continued close Prisoner till October 5th, when I find the Council order him to be liberate upon his Payment of Two thousand Pounds Scots.

Sir Alexander Bruce of Broomhall is fined, July 24th, in Twelve hundred Pounds. He was fully regular and conform himself, but, it seems, had not violently pressed his Tenants to subscribe the Bond; and some of his Tenants had been at Conventicles, and their Fines are accumulated, and he charged to pay them.

Besides these particular Finings, I find a great many Charges issued out, in the End of July, against many Heritors in the Shires of Lanerk and Renfrew, to appear before the Council in August next; which brought them to a vast deal of Trouble. The Form of the Charge I need not give at Length, but I shall insert the Abstract of an original one just now before me, and they run all, mutatis mutandis, in the same Strain.

‘CHARLES, &c. Whereas it is humbly meaned and shewn to Us by Sir John Nisbet Our Advocate, That notwithstanding of Act 1st. Sess. 2^d. 1st Parl. and several other Laws and Acts of Parliament, withdrawing from publick Ordinances, irregular Marriages and Baptisms, Converse with intercommuned Persons, are punishable, as contained in Our Laws: Nevertheless, it is of Verity, that the Persons underwritten, James Smith of Tullochshaugh, (no more are named, because the Charge before me was personally delivered to this Gentleman, in the Parish of Kilbride and Shire of Lanerk) have in the Years 1674, 5, 6, and 7. kept or been present at Field-conventicles, or in Houses, in the Parishes of Hamilton, Blantyre, Dunfyre, Kilbride, or at the Muir of ----- and about or near the said Places, have heard divers outed Ministers preach, expound Scripture, pray, and exercise several other Functions of their Ministry, particularly Mr. John King, Mr. John Dickson, Mr. Andrew Mortoun, &c. and have had their Children baptized, and been married in this disorderly Manner, and have convocate Numbers of People to these Meetings, and withdrawn from their own Churches, or at least have refet and supplied, harboured or corresponded with Mr. John Welsh, Mr. John King, Mr. John Dickson, or others declared Rebels and Traitors, who have been intercommuned: Likeas, the Persons underwritten ----- (a Blank here without their Names) Landlords and Masters to the foresaid Persons, their Rentallers or Tenants, who have not given Obedience to the foresaid Laws, in taking Bonds from them conform thereunto, ought to be answerable for them, and liable, and decerned against for the Pains and Penalties incurred by the said Rentallers and Tenants: As also, the Persons underwritten, ----- Heritors of the Lands above written, upon which the said Conventicles were kept, ought to be liable to the Sum of Fifty Pounds Sterling, for each one of the said Conventicles kept on the Ground of their Lands. OUR WILL IS HEREFOR, and We charge you in Our Name and Authority, to charge the haill Persons abovewritten, to compear personally before the Lords of Our Privy Council, the 7th Day of August next to come, to answer to the foresaid Complaint, and give their Oaths of Verity upon the respective Articles thereof; with Certification if they fail so to do, they shall be held as confest thereupon, and Decreet and Sentence accordingly pass upon them, and to hear and see such Order taken as appertains, under the Pain of Rebellion. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, July 28th, 1677.’

Remarks upon them.

Bedlans liberate upon Bond.

Lady Kinkell fined in 5000. and Lady Pitlochie in 1000 Merks.

Kersland confined to Irwin, and ordered to be liberate.

Such Charges as this involved the whole Country almost in Trouble, and the Persons particularly charged in great Difficulties and vast Expences to get rid of these Prosecutions; and Multitudes of them were given out. But to return to particular Persons;

August 2^d, John Cunningham of Bedlane petitions the Council to be liberate from Prison, because of the heavy Sicknefs he is fallen under. They grant his Liberation, upon his giving Bond and Caution to re-enter when called, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks.

Upon the 7th of August, I find some Ladies fined by the Council. Margaret Rigg Lady Pitlochie, Margaret Pitcairn Lady Kinkell, are cited for alledged being at Conventicles, and when not compearing they are held as confessing, and the Lady Kinkell fined in Five thousand Merks, and the other in a Thousand, and Letters are directed against them and their Husbands; though, if I mistake it not, Pitlochie was at this Time in the Bass, at least we have seen that, October 5th, an Order is given for liberating Pitlochie, and some others, from the Bass.

In October, the Committee for publick Affairs order Robert Ker of Kersland to confine himself to the Town of Irwin, and a Mile round it: And, November 29th, Robert Ker, sometime of Kersland, and Durham of Largo, Prisoners in Edinburgh Tolbooth, are ordered to be liberate without any Conditions; which is not very ordinary at this Time. This Liberation of Kersland I set down as I find it; how it came about I know not, and his Friends know nothing about it, or that ever it came to his Knowledge. I meet with no more but what will natively enough fall in upon the following Sections, and so I come to

S E C T. III.

Of the more general Procedure of the Council against Conventicles and Presbyterians, this Year 1677.

1677.

IN this Section I shall give the Reader some View of the Actings of the Council, more common to all the suffering Presbyterians, until the Design of the Highland Host was formed, and then give the more direct Preparations for that in the next Section.

February 13th, the Council give Commission to the Lord Maxwel, a Papist, to apprehend Presbyterian Ministers and Preachers, and substantial Heritors found at Conventicles, and such as he should be well informed were there, in the Shires of Dumfries and Wigtoun, and Stewartry of Kircudbright: He is likewise impowered to uplift the Five thousand Merks of Fines, lately imposed upon the Parish of Dunstons for a Riot.

Commission to Lord Maxwel a Papist, to apprehend Presbyterian Ministers and others.

Great Care was taken about this Time to have the Youth formed according to the Course carried on at present; so upon the 6th of March, the Council pass an Act, discharging any Students at any University to be admitted to receive University-degrees, till once they had taken the Oath of Allegiance and Declaration, and that under Pain of Deprivation to the Masters who should confer them. This Bar in the Fountains of Learning, upon all except such who were of a particular Opinion, or cared not what they declared, hindred many Youths from receiving their Degrees, who were as much deserving as these who got them.

Act discharging University-degrees to be conferred but on such as take the Declaration.

The same Day the Council cause write Letters to the Sheriffs, Bailies of Regalities, and other inferior Officers, bearing, That for their Encouragement to prosecute such who haunted Conventicles, they are warranted to uplift for their own Use the Fines by Law due from Tenants, Cottars, and every other Person below the Degree of an Heritor; and likewise they are appointed to uplift the Fines of Heritors, and to be countable for them to the Council. They are required to be diligent and strict in the levying the Fines from all Persons guilty, and send in frequent Accounts of their Diligence to the Council.

Fines for Conventicles given to the Uplifters.

Before the Vacation, upon the same Day, I find the Nomination of the Committee for publick Affairs, with the former Powers, recorded. They are the Earls of Linlithgow and Wintoun, the Lords Elphinstoun and Belhaven, the Treasurer-depute, Advocate, and Lord Collington, or any Three of them.

Committee for publick Affairs.

Upon the 4th of April, the Council in a Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale, complain that great Numbers of Conventicle-keepers, Preachers, and Hearers, when proceßed, fugitate and pursued by his Majesty's Forces, go over the Border to England, and so escape. They earnestly beg his Majesty may provide a Remedy for this Evil.

Complaint, that Keepers of Conventicles, when pursued, go into England.

May 2^d, a good many of the Royal Burghs are writ to by Order of the Council, to be more careful in suppressing of Conventicles, and send punctual Accounts of their Diligence to the Council from Time to Time. The Burghs of Dumbar, Linlithgow, Glasgow, the Regality of Bunkle in Berwick, and the Town of Aberdeen, have Letters ordered to be sent them.

Burghs writ to to prosecute Conventicles.

The same Day, Colonel Borthwick, who commands the Forces lying at Glasgow, is ordered to be careful to prevent People's going out of that Place to Conventicles. The Council is informed, that early in the Morning on the Sabbath, great Numbers there use to go out to Conventicles, and leave their own Churches. The Soldiers are appointed to be set at the Gates, and seize such who offer to leave the Town.

Soldiers set at the Gates of Glasgow to prevent People their going to Conventicles.

It hath been before observed, that the Committee for publick Affairs, have now a great Part of the Procedure against Presbyterians in their Hands, and therefore I shall here set down a pretty large Report they give in to the Council of their Proceedings, which is insert in their Books, June 28th, and though it repeat some Things before hinted at, yet containing some other Particulars, and being their own Account, I give it here.

Report of the Procedure of the Committee for publick Affairs.

Report to the Council by the Committee for publick Affairs, June 28th, 1677.

IN the Year 1674. the several Sheriffs being ordered by the Council to proceed against the Keepers of Conventicles, and to report an Account of their Diligence, according to the Act of Parliament, some of the Sheriffs, particularly the Sheriff of Stirling, having returned an Account, that they had convened and sentenced several Persons guilty of Conventicles, and other Disorders, issued forth their Precepts, and raised Letters of Horning thereupon, by Warrant of the Lords of Session, but their Sentences were suspended by the said Lords, which they were not in a Capacity, without great Attendance and Ex-

That the former Order discharging Suspension, except by the Council upon Hornings for Conventicles, be renewed.

pences, to discuss. The Council thought fit to order, that hereafter Letters of Horning, upon the Letters of the Sheriffs and other inferior Magistrates, should be direct by the Authority of the Council only, and that no Suspension thereof should pass but by the Council. And accordingly, Letters of Horning being from Time to Time direct by the Council, it is the Opinion of the Committee that the said Order should be renewed, and that it be recommended to the President of the Session to intimate the same to the Lords, and that the Clerk of the Bills should be discharged to present any Bills for Horning upon the said Precepts, or to present any Bills of Suspension, upon any Charges direct by the Authority of Council, as he will be answerable.

Several in Glasgow denounced for Conventicles.

The Committee has ordered Letters of Denunciation to be direct against the Persons within Glasgow, who did not compare to answer for Conventicles, and to be denounced, at the Market-cross of the Shire, except William Govan, John Leckie, and Mr. William Bell, whose Appearance is continued till the 11th of July next, upon Certificates produced for them.

Mr. Peter Paterfon imprisoned for a Conventicle.

The Committee being informed, that Mr. Peter Paterfon, who was formerly denounced, and Prisoner, for Conventicles and other Disorders, and thereafter, upon his Application confined to the Barony of Resalrig, hath so far abused that Favour, that he has kept frequent Meetings in his House, so frequent that People at these Meetings have been without Doors; and there being some of the Sheriff's Officers sent by the Sheriff's Order to take Notice thereof on Sunday the 17th Instant, he refused to open his Doors, which they declared before the Committee; and that they saw him and some others with him looking out at his Windows, and heard that there were many Persons within his House, who, upon the Officers Approach made their Escape out at a back Passage. It is the Opinion of the Committee, that his Cautioner ought to be ordered to enter his Person in Prison in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh in Forty eight Hours, under the Penalty of Two thousand Merks, conform to his Bond.

Soldiers ordered 300 Merks
for apprehending Stobie of Luscar.

Whereas Captain John Inglis a Serjeant, and Four Rate of Musketeers, were at considerable Charges and Trouble in taking of William Stobie of Luscar, now Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh; it is the Opinion of the Committee, that it be recommended to the Lords of the Treasury, to allow them Three hundred Merks out of the first and readiest of the said William Stobie's Fine, being the Tenth Part of it, to be divided at Sight of the Earl of Linlithgow.

Method laid down anent Prisoners.

The Committee considering, that divers Persons are imprisoned in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and divers other Places, who, before their Imprisonment, were denounced his Majesty's Rebels, and put to the Horn for their Contumacy in not appearing before the Council, and several of them intercommuned: It is their Opinion, that in setting them or any of them to Liberty, this Method be followed; That Suspension or Relaxation be passed for them before the Council or Committee, to such a competent Diet as shall be found fit, upon Caution to be found for their personal Compareance at that Diet, and the hail Diets thereafter, until the Suspension be discussed, under a particular Penalty; and that in the mean Time they shall frequent Ordinances in their own Parish-churches, and shall not go to any Conventicles, or correspond with, harbour, or reset any intercommuned Persons, under a particular Penalty, toties quoties, conform to the Quality of the Person.

Procedure of the Magistrates of Culross, about Mr.
Michael Potter and William Adam Fugitives.

The Committee having called the Magistrates of Culross, who were cited for permitting one Mr. Michael Potter, a fugitive Person, to be Schoolmaster there, and for resetting one William Adam a fugitive and banished Person, and others; one of the Bailies comparing declared, That the Magistrates knew not the said Schoolmaster was fugitive, and that he is gone to Holland Twenty Days since, and that sen sine the School is planted with a regular Person; that William Adam had a House in the Town, and his Wife kept a Shop, and that he was very seldom seen himself, and that the Bailie undertook, that if he could be found within their Liberties, to apprehend and present him.

And a Con-venticle kept
there.

There being a Conventicle kept in Culross, Sabbath was Eight Days, which was dissipated by Captain Buchan, and about Eighteen Persons seized upon, and imprisoned in Culross, upon Examination the Committee finds, that the Magistrates had set some of them at Liberty at their own Hand. The Committee has ordered the Magistrates to call them all back to Prison, and hath condescended upon the Persons most substantial of them, and appointed the Magistrates to produce them before the Council this Day Se'en-night; and if the rest who are mean Persons will give Bond to keep their own Parish-churches, and not keep Conventicles, they have appointed them to liberate them, otherwise to continue them in Prison. The Committee find the Magistrates are culpable, and deserve to be fined; but it is their Opinion, that the Council shall delay to punish them for some Time, that they may see what will be their future Carriage, and have Time to search for and apprehend the said William Adam, which the Bailie present undertook to do.

Mr. James
Drummond sent to the Baillie.

Mr. James Drummond being formerly imprisoned for Conventicles in the Town of Edinburgh, and set at Liberty upon his Engagement not to keep any in Time to come, being apprehended at Glasgow, and liberate upon Caution to compare this Day, he compared before the Committee, and being examined, he could not deny but that he kept both House and Field-conventicles since he was liberate, contrary to his former Engagement; and being again asked, if he would yet forbear to keep Conventicles, he refused to do. It is the Opinion of the Committee, he should be presently sent to the Bass, and thereupon his Cautioners may have up their Bond-foresaid.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having considered the foresaid Report, they remit the first Article thereof to the foresaid Committee to be considered further, and approve of the rest of the Articles.

This Report is a Specimen of the Diligence of this Committee, and had all their Reports been recorded in the Registers, I should have been in case to have given a more particular Account of the Procedure of this Time, whereas now I have it but in broken Hints; sometimes from the Council's Actings, and at other Times from the Committee's partial Accounts.

Remarks on this Report.

To go on, July 19th, the Council grant a Commission to Sir William Murray of Stenhope, whom we shall meet with afterwards, to Posso and Isk Officers of the Militia, to dissipate Conventicles in the Shire of Peebles; and the first was very careful in this Matter, and afterward we shall find him clothed with higher Powers.

Commissions against Conventicles in the Shire of Peebles.

Upon the 24th of July, 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering that the Proclamation, dated July 18th 1674. obliges Heritors for their Tenants, Chamberlains, &c. which was gone into with the greatest Deliberation, will be found most effectual to prevent Conventicles at this Time, ordain the same to be prosecuted, and put in further Execution; and in order thereunto, that upon Information of any Conventicles in any Place, the Heritors to whom Persons present are Tenants, Chamberlains, &c. shall be cited as well as they, to hear and see themselves found liable for their Fines, if they cannot make it appear they have taken Bond of them, and reported the same in due Time, conform to the Proclamation.'

Act ordering Heritors to be cited, as well as Tenants, for Conventicles:

It was upon this that the Charge and Council-letters we heard of in the preceeding Section, against James Smith of Tullochshaugh, or Thorntoun, and many others, was given, and Multitudes of Gentlemen put to a great dale of Trouble: But the Managers stopt not here; it was not thought so good to prosecute Gentlemen upon a Proclamation which had not been much execute for near Four Years, and therefore new Hardships are put upon Heritors, which I shall give Account of, when I have observed, that upon the 26th of July, the Council are pleased to allow the Prisoners in the Bass Liberty to walk every where above the Walls, except Mr. James Mitchel, who is to be kept close Prisoner. This was a little refreshing to these worthy Persons.

Which brought many to Trouble.

Mean while, August 2^d, the Council come to emit a new Proclamation in Prosecution of that 1674. a Copy of which, with the Bond, see App. N^o. 79. by which all Heritors, Wadsetters, and Liferenters, are required to engage themselves by a Bond, not only for themselves and Families, but for all that lived under them, that they shall not keep or be present at any Conventicle, or baptize or marry with outed Ministers, and that under the highest Penalties, which are repeated from the former Acts, and the Obligation is put in the Form of a Bond, and annexed.

Proclamation, August 2^d, App. N^o. 79.

To secure Obedience to this, August 7th, Powers and Commission is granted by the Council, to several Noblemen and Gentlemen in very ample Form, for putting the Laws against Conventicles and other Disorders, in Execution. This was a Kind of high Commission renewed again in little, and very quickly backed more powerfully with a Highland Host. I shall first set down the Persons commissioned, with their respective Bounds, and then their Commission and Instructions common to all of them.

Commission given to put this Act in Execution.

The Lord Treasurer is appointed for the Shire of Edinburgh; the Earl of Wintoun, Belhaven, Haddingtoun, for the Shire of Linlithgow; the Marquis of Athole for Perth; the Earl of Hume for the Merse and Teviotdale; the Lairds of Philiphaugh and Haining for Selkirk; the Lord Ross for the netherward of Clydsdale and Renfrew; Earl of Wigtoun for the upperward of Clydsdale; Robert Dalziel of Glanæ for Dumfries; Richard Murray of Burghtoun for Kirkcudbright; the Earl of Glencairn for Air Shire and Dumbarton; Earl of Argyle for Argyle Shire; Kinghorn and Sir Charles Erskine of Cambo for Fife and Kinross; Richard Murray of Burghtoun for Wigtoun; Sir William Murray of Stenhope for Peebles; Earl of Mar and Lord Elphinstoun for Stirling and Clackmannan; Errol and Marishal for Kintore; the Lairds of Auchmedden and Boyn for Bamff and Aberdeen; Earl of Marishal for Kincardin; Earl of Murray for Elgin, Nairn, and Inverness; Sir John Urquhart of Cromarty for Cromarty; Earl of Airly for Forfar.

Persons for different Shires in the Commission.

Next I insert the Tenor of their Commission, as it stands in the Council-books.

COMMISSION.

Their Commission.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that albeit many Persons have been convened before the Council or Commissioners of Council, for Conventicles, disorderly Marriages and Baptisms, withdrawing from publick Ordinances, and other disorderly Practices, for divers Years past, some whereof are fined, and their Fines not exacted, and others, the far greater Part, are declared Fugitives, for their Contempt in not appearing before the Council, or the Commissioners of Council, and Letters of Intercommuning directed against them; and albeit the Escheats of several be gifted to his Majesty's Cash-keeper, for his Majesty's Use, and Decrees of general Declarature passed thereupon; yet, for Want of particular Informations of the Estates of those Persons, and Sums due to them, special Declaratures are not passed on the same, which cannot be done, except particular Persons be pitched upon in several Parts of the Kingdom, where these Persons live, have their Residence and Estates, who might make it their Work, and have some Allowance out of the particular Persons Fines for their Encouragement; have therefore recommended it to ----- to take under his particular Care and Charge the executing the Sentences of the Council already passed, fining any Persons within the Bounds of the Shire of ----- and Royal Burghs within the sament, and executing Letters of Caption against such as are already declared fugitive, for convening Persons not already cited, or not proceeded against, and for putting the Sentences of inferior Magistrates in Execution: With full Warrant and Commission to nominate such a Person or Persons, for whom he will be answerable, as will vigorously go about that Service, and uplift and exact the Fines and Escheats; which Persons are to proceed according to the Instructions given herewith, and he is to call before him the Person or Persons nominate, and require an Account of them, that he may report to the Council: And Sheriffs and all Magistrates are required to give speedy Help and Assistance to the Persons thus nominate; and all Officers of the standing Forces and Militia are to concur to the Execution of the Decrees of Council, or inferior Judicatories in the foresaid, as required, at their Peril. And the Lords declare, that upon Lists given in of Escheats not yet uplifted, they will cause them to be passed in their Name, and they shall have one Half of them, and one Half of the Fines of all Persons within the said Bounds, which shall be uplifted by their Diligence, and the one Half of the Fines, not yet uplifted by Sheriffs and other inferior Magistrates, uplifted by their Diligence; they always being countable to the Treasury for the other Half: And the Lords will grant particular Commissions to the said Persons for uplifting the Fines and Escheats, conform to the Lists given in to and approved by the Council, or their Committee, to stand in full Force till repealed.

them.

YOU are to inform your self of all Persons guilty of withdrawing from publick Ordinances in Parish-churches, of keeping of Conventicles in Houles and Fields, and disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, and send in a List of their Names, Designations, and the Persons to whom they are Tenants, to the Clerks of the Privy Council, that Charges may be given them to answer before the Privy Council, and the Names of all intercommuned Persons, to the end that they may be cited before the Council. You may always convene and pursue any of these Persons before the Sheriff, Steward, Bailie of the Regality, or Magistrates of Burghs within the Bounds, as you shall think fit.

When any Summons are sent from the Council for citing such Delinquents before them, you must take special Care that the Messenger employed cause cite them personally, if possible.

You are to prosecute diligently the uplifting of the Escheats of such Persons as shall be sent you in a List by his Majesty's Solicitor; and in order thereunto ye are to inform your selves of the Rents of their Estates, or Sums due to them, and cause arrest the same, and cause advertise the Debtors and Tenants of their Danger, if they pay after Arrestment; and in case any of them do pay, you are to send in a List of their Names to the Solicitor, that they may be prosecuted for Breach of Arrestment.

You are to cause poind the Goods of such Persons as are fined, or shall be fined, and obtain Decree for making arrested Goods forthcoming, and Decrees of special Declarature, and crave the Sheriff, or other inferior Magistrate's Concourse, if need be.

You are to call from his Majesty's Solicitor for the Names of such as are declared fugitive within your Bounds, and deliver the same in Rolls to the Judges and Clerks of inferior Courts, that they may be debarred from Pursuit or Defence in any Action, till they be relaxed.

You

- 1677.
- You are to apprehend and imprison all intercommuned Persons or Fugitives in your Lifts, and require the Magistrates or Soldiers Assistance.
 - You are to inform your self of all Persons fined before Sheriffs or other Magistrates; and if the Fines be not uplifted, to call for them: And for this end you are to require Lifts from Sheriffs and other Magistrates.
 - You are to inform your self what Diligence Sheriffs and other Magistrates use in Prosecution of the Laws against Conventicles and other Disorders, and report to the Council.
 - You are hereby authorized, upon Application of any Person or Persons fined by Sheriffs or other Magistrates, or hereafter shall be fined upon your Delation, to remit and discharge their Fines, on their giving Bond for their orderly Behaviour hereafter, providing this do not extend to Persons who are or shall be fined for disorderly Baptism or Marriage.
 - You are from Time to Time to advertise the Council, or Committee of it, of all further Expedients thought needful, for putting the Laws against Disorders in Execution; and once every Three Months to send an exact Account of your Diligence.

Follows the Bond mentioned in the Instructions.

I ----- as Principal, and ----- as Cautioner for me, bind and oblige us conjunctly and severally, that I ----- shall frequent the Ordinances in my Parish-church, and I shall not go to House or Field-conventicles at any Time hereafter, nor shall relet, supply, or commune with any intercommuned Persons, under the Penalty of ----- toties quoties. Add a Clause of Relief and Registration as usual.

Nota, The Penalty is to be filled up according to the Quality of him who gives the Bond, as the Person Overseer shall see fit: And in case the Person be so mean, that he cannot find Caution, he shall take the Person's own Bond without Caution.

Bond to be pressed by them.

It is almost needless to make any Remarks upon this Commission, and those Powers. The Narrative of the Council Commission refers almost to one Thing, to wit, the Want of Knowledge of the Lands of intercommuned Persons; but the Assumption and Inference from these Premises is very large, and almost every Thing relative to the suffering Presbyterians, is not only committed to these Noblemen and Gentlemen named, but they are enabled to subcommit their Power again to as many as they pleased, to be Inquisitors and Oppressors of the Country, and they have the greatest Arguments given them to be severe in their Impositions, the one Half of the Fines to themselves.

Remarks.

When the Proclamation with the Bond came West, the Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Heritors, were very much alarmed with it. They reckoned it the hardest Thing that could be, that they should bind and oblige themselves for those who were not in their Power, and to be required to do Impossibilities: They alledged that many of the Counsellors themselves could not safely bind themselves for their own Families, and how could Country Gentlemen be bound for such Multitudes under such severe Penalties.

Hardships in the Bond.

Upon this Emergent, a great Number of Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Heritors of the Shire of Air met; the Earl of Lowdon was chosen Preses of the Meeting, and after Reasoning upon this Subject, they agreed upon a Letter to the Council, (a Copy of which I have not seen) wherein they excuse themselves for refusing a Bond which they could not keep, and humbly propose another Expedient for the Peace of their Country, and that was a further extending and enlarging the Liberty to Presbyterians: The Letter was signed by the Earl. This was taken so ill by the Managers, that this excellent Nobleman, (of whom I have it affirmed by such who intimately knew him, that if he had had Opportunities to have exerted his bright Parts, he would have made no less a Figure in the World than his excellent Father) after this was never in Favour, and after several Hardships, at length he took upon him a voluntary Exile, and died at Leyden.

Letter, Heritors of Air Shire against the Bond signed by Earl of Lowdon.

His Character.

In Clydsdale the Proclamation was no better entertained. Duke Hamilton was no Friend to it, and, as has been noticed, in no good Terms with the Court. The Heritors of Lanerk Shire met at Hamilton, and unanimously agreed to refuse the Bond. The Requisition was truly so hard, that Persons who had no Inclination to Conventicles, or any Regard to Presbyterians, would not go into it, were it only from a Principle of saving their Estates: They could not bind for their Families, far less their Tenants.

Heritors of Lanerk Shire agree to refuse the Bond.

Thus the Proclamation met with Rubs, and the Bond would not go down till crammed, and the Opposition made to the Bond, perhaps inclined the Duke of Lawderdale to think of a new Indulgence, as was noticed upon the First Session, and to make some Proposals anent it, which came to nothing through the Virulence of the Prelates, and only issued in a little softning of the severe Instructions and Commissions in August, at the Council's Meeting in October.

Upon this Opposition to the Bond Matters are a little softned,

With the Account of which I shall end this Section. Upon the 5th of October, the Committee for publick Affairs bring in the following Opinion to the Council.

The Report of the humble Opinion of the Committee for publick Affairs, concerning the Way of prosecuting his Majesty's Laws, against such as disturb the Government of the Church.

By an Opinion of the Committee of publick Affairs as to the Way of prosecuting the Laws, &c. 5.

IT is thought fit and necessary for his Majesty's Service, that the Laws against such disorderly Persons be exactly but regularly put in Execution, in Manner aftermentioned.

1st. That his Majesty's Advocate be special as to Time and Place in libelling against Conventicles, and others pursued; but so as he may libel any Day within Four Weeks, or any Place within such a Parish, or near to the said Parish, for else Conventicles may be kept upon Confines of Parishes, merely to disappoint his Way of libelling.

2^{do}. When any Person is convened upon a Libel, that in that Case he be only examined upon his own Guilt and Accession, seeing nothing can be referred to a Defender's Oath, but what concerneth himself, during the Dependence of a Process.

3^{tio}. That if any Person who is cited, be ready to depone or pay his Fine, he be not troubled with taking of Bonds or other Engagements; seeing the constant Punishment of such as do transgress will supply the Necessity of the Bonds, and the Law it self is the strongest Bond that can be exacted of any Man.

4^{to}. That the Commissions granted to Noblemen and others, in the respective Shires, continue, and be vigorously executed; but that the pressing of the Bond mentioned in the late Proclamation be forborn, they always pressing vigorously the Offenders, or giving in to the Council the Names of the chief Heritors to be pursued, herewith, particular Information of the Facts and Witnesses Names, according to their Instructions; the Council having considered, that by a former Proclamation Heritors are to be liable for their Tenants.

5^{to}. The Noblemen and others commisionate in the respective Shires, are to be authorized and impowered, in case any poor and mean Persons, below the Degree of Heritors, do offer to give Oath as to what Conventicles they have been at, to uplift and receive their Fines without Necessity of Process; and if they be already fined, denounced, and intercommuned, the said Persons, upon Obedience, as aforesaid, and sending in a Testificate thereof, are to be reponed and relaxed from Horning and Intercommuning, and all other Executions, without Necessity of putting them to any Bond; and upon Application to be made to the Council, by Heritors and other Persons above the Degree of Tenants, and upon their giving Oath as to their particular Guilt, and paying their Fines accordingly, the Council will reponed and relax them from the Horn, and all Execution following thereupon: Or if the said Heritors apply themselves to the respective Commissioners, and give their Oath, and pay their Fines to them, upon Certificates, from the Commissioners, of their Obedience, the Council will reponed and relax them from the Horn, and all Execution following thereupon. And the said Commissioners are to be authorized to take their Oaths, and receive the Fines, for which they are to be countable to the Council, conform to the Council's Instructions. And it is declared by the Council, that the former Instructions sent to the Commissioners the 7th of August last, are to stand and continue in full Force, except in so far as is hereby discharged: And this Instruction is to be transmitted to the several Commissioners, that the same and the former Instructions may be the Rule of their Procedure.

That the indulged Ministers shall not be put to the Necessity of seeking yearly Warrants for their Stipends, but that the Heritors of the Parishes where they live be authorized and appointed to pay their Stipends, according as they serve the Cure, in hail or in Part; and if any of these indulged Ministers shall be found to contravene their Instructions, that the Council proceed against them as they shall find Occasion.

Edinburgh, October 5th, 1677. the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having heard and considered the above Report, approve thereof, and appoint an Act to be extended conform thereunto.

Roths Cancel. I. P. D. S. C.

Accordingly there was an extended Act drawn, and Doubles of it sent to all concerned.
I have one in mine Eye just now, under the Clerk's Hand; but it being just the above Particulars, it needs not be repeated.

This little breathing Time to Presbyterians, if I may term it so, soon went over, and was succeeded by a very black Cloud, and the Highlanders were quickly brought down to execute the Laws which had been thus a little slackned. No other Thing as to the Council's Procedure offers, but what will come in upon the following Section; unless it be, that in September the Council ' find a great many Prisoners have lien long in Edinburgh and Canongate ' Tolbooth, without receiving any Dittay, and therefore order the Advocate and the Justiciary-court to prosecute them.' This was an Act of Justice, either to prosecute or dismiss; but within a little it was most common for Persons to lie many Months in nasty Prisons, yea, several Years, without any Libel or Prosecution; and a good many died under these long and harsh Imprisonments. But I come to end this Chapter by

This Breathing is followed by the Highland Host.

S E C T. IV.

Of the more immediate Inlets to the Highland Host, and preparative Steps of the Managers towards the End of this Year 1677.

THE sending down the barbarous Highlanders to waste and depopulate the western Shires of Scotland, where the greatest Numbers of Presbyterians were, is so black a Part of this History, and we have so lame Accounts of it hitherto, that I shall give the larger Deduction of this horrid Scene of Oppression and Cruelty; and of design that the Reader may have a full View of it, I have left the Procedure of the Council, relative to this, out of the former Section, and give it all together, in as far as it was transacted this Year, here, as an Introduction to the Account of the coming down of this Host, in the Beginning of the next Year, that so the Whole of this melancholy Story may be together.

The Account of the Highland Host drawn down from its Springs.

That I may draw down this Account from its Rise and Springs, the Reader by this Time will have noticed, That a great, and, to be sure, the best Part of the Subjects of Scotland, were disgusted and uneasy by the Introduction of Prelacy, and the longer the Bishops and Clergy were known, the more were they hated.

Many uneasy at Prelacy.

To calm and ease People under their Discontent, the King was pleased, in the Year 1669. to grant an Indulgence to a good many Parishes in the West Country, where indeed Prelacy was most generally displeasing. This issued in a general Abstinence in these Places, from these innocent Meetings termed Conventicles; for which, besides their known Principles, the Insufficiency and Scandalousness of the conform Clergy, afforded Presbyterians an ample Apology.

Indulgence granted in the West.

Yet, in Places secluded from that Favour, Conventicles were very frequent; but the Carriage of Ministers and People at them was so peaceable, and joyn'd with all Regard and Deference to the King's Majesty, and lawful Authority, that 'bating their being contrary to the Laws made to gratify the Prelates, nothing of Disloyalty could be charged upon them, even under the greatest Severities exercised against the Haunters of them, by Imprisonments of Multitudes of all Qualities and Sexes, Finings, Confinings, Denouncings, and Intercommunications. A Paper writ by a Gentleman of very good Intelligence at this Time, says, That by a sober Computation it appeared, that before the End of this Year 1677. near Seventeen thousand were thus harassed.

Conventicles continue frequent, but in the most peaceable Manner.

This was the State of the Country this Summer, when the Duke of Lawderdale came down; the Views of which, with the Prospect he had of the Fruitlessness of Conversions by the Soldiers and Force, made him inclinable to interpose with the King, for an Enlargement of his Royal Favour to his oppressed and yet peaceable Subjects.

Duke of Lawderdale, when he comes down, is for a further Indulgence to Presbyterians.

No sooner did the Bishops hear of this, but they used all the Interest they had to stifle this Design: 'They plied their Friends at Court in the Duke's Absence, aggravated the Numbers of Presbyterians, and insisted upon the pretended Hazard from their being in Arms at their Meetings, and represented every Thing they could think upon that might inflame the King against Presbyterians.

The Bishops oppose this, and misrepresent Presbyterians.

They were likewise very careful to improve some private Animosities which were among our Managers and Ministers of State, to further their Purposes; and the Primate was, by his Craft and Cunning, extremely well fitted to play his Game with both Sides, and scarce ever exerted himself more than at this Juncture.

And the Primate improves the different Parties at Court.

The Duke, if at all hearty in this Design, had not brought it to any Maturity, nor laid his Measures so as to be able to go through with it; and finding the Prelates, and such who had pack'd Cards with them, stronger than at first he imagined, gave up his Design, and left the Presbyterians to the Fury of the Bishops.

The Duke yields.

The Cry of the Church raised from a pretended Infurrection.

A Handle for which was taken from a Scuffle in Fife, in October, twixt Carstairs and some other Gentlemen.

In place of the Indulgence, all that was done issued in the above Overtures, October 5th, for moderating a little the rigid Procedure against the suffering Presbyterians. Mean while, the Prelates and their Party raised a mighty Cry of the Danger of their Church, from an intended Infurrection, which had not the least Shadow of Ground; and this they alledged was not to be prevented by Condescension to Dissenters, but by the vigorous Application of Force and Violence.

This Story of a designed Rising, was mightily strengthened by a Scuffle that happened in Fife at this Time. In the Beginning of October this Year, the abovementioned Captain Carstairs was chased off by some Gentlemen in their own Defence. This Fellow had been for some Time very busy against Presbyterians in the East Parts of Fife, and committed many Severities: He had turned out the Lady Colvil from her House, and obliged her to flee; and hide for some Time in the Mountains and Fields, which very much broke her Health: He had most wrongously imprisoned not a few in that Country: He went about most officiously, with about a Dozen of Men in Company, without any Commission from the King, having the alone Warrant of the Archbishop's single Commission, under Pretext of searching for denounced and intercommuned Persons, and seized Gentlemens Horses, and committed many Disorders. Six or Seven Gentlemen, some of them obnoxious to the Government for their Nonconformity, met without any Design I can learn, in the House of John Balfour of Kinkloch. I hear Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel, Robert Hamilton a younger Son to Sir Robert Hamilton of Preston, whom we shall afterward meet with, and Two or Three more were there. Carstairs getting Notice of them, comes up to the House with Ten or Twelve Horsemen. The Gentlemen had no previous Notice of it, and one of them was accidentally at the Door. Philip Garret, an Irish Tinker, one of Carstairs's Men, comes up first, and seeing a Man at the Door, without any Provocation, or asking Questions, fires upon him, and happily missed him, he getting into the House. Garret, a desperate bold Fellow, dismounts and follows him into the House. By this Time the Gentlemen within were sufficiently alarmed, and one of them fired at Garret, and wounded him in the Shoulder, and he fell. Carstairs and his Men fired in at the Windows of the Chamber upon the Gentlemen, and wounded one of them. It was now Time for them to get out, and very briskly they broke out of the House, and attacked Carstairs and his Men, who very quickly fled. They pursued a little, but no more Blood was shed; only Kinkel's Horse was shot, and Garret received some Wounds with a Sword, but they spared his Life, which was more, I imagine, than he would have done to them, had they been in his Circumstances; and he afterwards recovered.

The Gentlemen denounced, and all charged upon the Presbyterians;

Carstairs comes, or sends an Information to the Council in his own Way, and being supported by his Patron the Primate, this Matter made a terrible Noise; and the Council find this an high Act of Rebellion, and resisting of lawful Authority; while the Gentlemen peaceably retired, having done nothing but in Self-defence, and what did not exceed moderamen inculpatæ tutelæ. However, all of them, and many others not concerned, were cited before the Council, and none compearing, they were denounced Rebels, and this Matter was charged on the Body of Presbyterians, who were not in the least concerned in it; and it was not so much as known for some Time in the West Country.

And was improved by the Prelates against them.

In England the King was much solicited to lessen the publick Charges, by disbanded the Forces; and, as a Pretext to keep them, the hardest Measures were resolved on against Nonconformists in Scotland.

The Bishops push violent Measures in Council.

This Scuffle fell in just when the Bishops were seeking a Handle to misrepresent the Presbyterians, and they carefully improved it, and Lawderdale suffered himself to be carried down the Stream, and being once embarked, violent Measures were effectually pushed.

I am told by a Person I can entirely credit, who was at London at this Time, that he heard from good Hands, that the King was now very much pushed by the Whiggs, and the Affecters of Liberty in this Time of Peace, to retrench the Charges the Kingdom of England was at in maintaining an Army, and wanted a plausible Handle for keeping it up; and that it was concerted in the Cabin-council, that all Measures should be taken to exasperate the Scots Phanaticks, as they were called, to some Broil or other, that there might be a Pretence to keep up the standing Forces; and that the Duke of Lawderdale was writ to, and acquainted with the Design; and when he came up to Court, towards the End of October, the Project of gratifying the Prelates in violent Measures, and of bringing down the Highlanders, was brought to a Bearing.

Whatever be in this, which at this Distance I am not able to determine, the Bishops in Council pushed their Design briskly, and very soon got this Invasion on the West Country brought about.

And the Council, October 17th, write a Letter to the Earls of Glencairn and Dundonald, and the Lord Ross, to convocate the Heritors of the Shires of Air and Renfrew, and to fall upon some Measures to bear down Conventicles, otherwise they would be obliged to other Courses. The Letter it self is as follows.

My Lords,

1677.

There having been frequent Informations sent in here, of extraordinary Insolencies committed not only against the present orthodox Clergy, by usurping their Pulpits, threatening and abusing their Persons, and setting up of Conventicle-houses, and keeping of scandalous and seditious Conventicles in the Fields, the great Seminaries of Rebellion; but likewise of the great Prejudice that is like to arise to his Majesty's Authority and Government, and to the Peace of the Kingdom in general: We did therefore think it necessary, in a frequent Meeting of Council this Day, to require your Lordships to send particular Expresses with sure Bearers, to call together the Commissioners of the Excise and Militia, and Justices of the Peace, specified in the List here inclosed; and when they meet at Irwin, the 2^d Day of November next, that you seriously represent to them, how highly, in his Majesty's Name, we resent the foresaid Outrages and Affronts done to the Government, in the Shires of Air and Renfrew, which have been frequently represented to be the most considerable Seminaries of Rebellion in this Kingdom; tho' none hath more eminently tasted of his Majesty's Clemency, nor hath his Majesty indulged any Shires so much as these: And albeit his Majesty's Service, and the Quiet of the Kingdom, would require such severe Courses to be taken for curbing those Insolencies, as might very much prejudice the Heritors of those Shires; yet his Majesty and Council being further desirous to make them inexcusable, and to the end that the Kingdom may see that the Prejudice of Heritors shall arise from their own Negligence: Therefore we thought fit, that the foresaid Persons should be called together in a Meeting, and under Characters allowed for that effect by Act of Parliament, that they may deliberate upon, and take such effectual Course in the Affairs of the said Shires, and for quieting the same in obedience to his Majesty's Laws, (which are the true and only Rule of Loyalty and Faithfulness) as may prevent the necessary and severe Courses that must be taken for securing the Peace in those Parts: In which if they fail, (which will be thought strange, where there is no Force to oppose them) we are fully resolved to repress by Force, and his Majesty's Authority, all such rebellious and factious Courses, without respect to the Disadvantage of the Heritors, whom his Majesty will then look upon as involved in such a Degree of Guilt, as may allow the greatest Degree of Severity as may be used against that Country. So expecting you will represent this to the Meeting, and that they will shew their ready Compliance, we are Council's Letter, October 17, to Glencairn, Durdonald, and Reys, to call the Heritors in Air and Renfrew, to bear down Conventicles, otherwise they would take farther Courses.

Edinburgh, October

17th, 1677.

Your Lordships, &c.

It may be necessary, before I go on to what followed upon this, to notice some Things that will set the Nature and Design of this Letter in a due Light. The Reader hath already observed with me, that the Narratives of Acts and Proclamations, Letters and other Papers of this Period, have as much many Times in them agreeable to the Party-design of the Paper, as to Truth, and Things are represented and aggravated quite otherwise than an ordinary Observer of them, as they passed in the Country, could take them up; and indeed for my Share I cannot reconcile some of them with Matters of Fact I am fully assured of.

No great Weight to be laid upon Narratives to publick Papers.

Very much of this appears in the Paper just now set down, and it was necessary to found the severe Threatning here sent to the West-country Gentlemen, which otherwise had been altogether groundless, that they should aggravate and misrepresent Matters.

Things aggravated in this Letter,

The West of Scotland was indeed the But of the Bishops Malice, because they would never cordially submit to them, and there the greatest Numbers of the firmest Presbyterians were; and now the Prelates had the fairest Opportunity to gratify their violent Inclinations. Many Gentlemen had refused the Council's Proclamation, and Bond of the 2^d of August, already; and they well knew they would continue to refuse it, and therefore a Narrative of this harsh Nature here, must be made up some way to bear the Inference they were to draw from it.

From the Prelates Malice against the West.

And the Council are made to say, They have received frequent Informations of Insolencies, Usurpations, &c. That the Lords had such Informations I am not to dispute, but all depends upon the Truth of them; and tho' the Primate himself should have given them, as to any Thing appearing to me, they are false as to the Two Shires pointed at here; yea, the Matter of some of them will bear me out when I term them so. To instance a little: As to Insolencies, Threatnings, and abusing the Persons of the orthodox Clergy, except it was one or Two Instances, and that on no small Provocation, not one of these Riots that have come before the Council were in these Shires, and indeed of late the personal Attacks upon the Curates were very few. The Instances of invading of Pulpits are yet fewer, that is, none at all, as far as I mind, in the preceeding Years; and had they been this Year, no doubt Council-proccesses would have been raised anent them. Where Pulpits were vacant or deserted, it is owned, at the Invitation of Heritors and People, Presbyterian Ministers did sometimes preach in them; but I have no Instances in those Shires of their doing this, even where they Few Invasions of Pulpits in those Shires; Riots and Field-conventicles more frequent elsewhere.

they were ill filled; in those Cafes they went to the Fields. And then as to keeping Field-conventicles, and in Houses, the Gentlemen could not but wonder to find themselves singled out, and represented as the great Seminaries of Rebellion this Way, when the most Part of Shires on the South of Tay were far more used to this than they: And the Reason is plain, because, generally speaking, the Indulgence prevented this, and it was very rare, if ever, at least till afterwards, that Conventicles were kept in Parishes where Ministers were indulged; and except in some remoter Parts, to which the Indulgence did not reach, there were few or none; and there they had the same Reasons with the rest of the Nation.

An Account of the Conven-
ticle-houses
set up.

The only Thing singular, and it was not to these Shires either, was to have set up Conventicle-houses, as they call them. And the Truth of this was, that a few Country-people in a mountainous solitary Country, without any Concert with the Body of Presbyterians, had set up Two Houses of Turf and Thatch, (no magnificent Fabrick, as we shall afterward hear them termed) to cover themselves from the Severities of the Weather. This was no greater Matter than what was connived at within a few Paces of Cathedrals in England and Ireland, most frequently.

Further Remarks upon this Letter.

The Gentlemen could not but complain, that these Things charged upon them were partly false, and where there was any Ground, other Places were more deep in them than they: But the Design was against the West, and the Council's Information behaved to correspond with it. In short, his Majesty's Government was in no Manner of Danger, or the Peace of the Country; for, as hath been observed, in Prayer and Sermons both, all Loyalty was expressed by Presbyterians, though I shall not defend any Excesses run to some Time after this.

I cannot say indeed Presbyterians were of Opinion with the Council, That his Majesty's Laws were the true and only Rule of Faithfulness and Loyalty, since they reckoned some of them sinful, and others harsh upon them, and contrary to the King's true Interest, and rather to be looked on as Things impetrate by the Bishops, than the King's Inclinations. They indeed reckoned the Word of God and moral Law, and what was agreeable thereto, the only Rule, and not the Will or Law of any Man, or Society of Men.

In short, the Thing sought of the Gentlemen was not really in their Power, to suppress and bear down Conventicles; for though they had inclined to do so, as I hope the most of them did not, and durst not hinder the pure Preaching of the Gospel; yet their Tenants and the Body of the People, excepting the Parishes of the Indulged, were the Persons who heard the Gospel preached, and would not, without a superior Force, be restrained from so doing; so that the Council's Argument, That there was no Force to oppose, is nothing at all to the Purpose.

All this is but Sham, and a feeking a Colour to fall on.

But really the Whole of this Application to the Gentlemen, was at Bottom nothing but Sham, and a Feint to be a Colour for their own after severe Proceedings, which, I suppose at this very Time, were resolved upon by some of them. And this appears evident to me, from a Resolution I find recorded in the Council-books, the Day before the Gentlemen met, and without waiting for the Return of their Letter, which I insert.

And the Highlanders invited,
Nov. 1. before the Gentlemen can meet.

'Edinburgh, November 1st, upon some Informations of some growing Disorders and Insolencies in the western Shires, it was thought fit a Proclamation be drawn in case of an Insurrection, and the nearest Highlanders should be ordered to meet at Stirling upon Advertisement by Proclamation, and Letters are to be writ to Noblemen and Gentlemen, to have their Vassals and Tenants ready, and at a Call. It was further thought fit that Arms and Ammunition should be sent to Stirling. The Forces at Glasgow are ordered to Falkirk, and new Men are to be presently levied to complete them, and the Soldiers ordered for the Highlands countermanded.'

Remarks on
this.

These Informations anent an Insurrection were perfectly false, and, I doubt not, made up by some Body, to help on the Prelates cruel Measures. What Insolencies were committed since their Letter, Two Weeks before, I know not; for any Thing I can learn there was nothing singular. But this plainly shows, that they were so far from rendring the West inexcusable by their Letter, that they were really jesting them upon the Matter, and had resolved upon the Highland Host beforehand in all Events. I thought it necessary to give these Remarks in the Entry upon this first Paper, and they will save me very much the Labour of Reflections upon the virulent Narratives, and other Papers that follow. I return now to the Consequents of the Council's Letter.

The Three Noblemen were careful to obey their Instructions, and got together the Gentlemen of the Two Shires in the Lists sent them. I have not seen the Lists, but by the Issue it does not appear that the Gentlemen had the Council's Will for their Law and Rule.

Nov. 2. the Gentlemen
meet at Irwin, and make Three Resolves.

November 2^d, they met at Irwin very fully, and after a good deal of Reasoning pro and con upon the Council's Letter communicate to them, and a serious Deliberation upon the State of Affairs among them, and a cordial Profession of their Loyalty, for Answer to the Noblemen appointed by the Council to deal with them, they came in unanimously to Three Resolves. '1st. That they found it not within the Compass of their Power to suppress Conventicles. 2^d. That it is their humble Opinion from former Experience, that a Toleration of Presbyterians is the only proper Expedient to settle and preserve the Peace, and cause the foresaid Meetings to cease. ^{3th}. That it is their humble Motion, that the Extent thereof be no less than what his Majesty had graciously vouchsafed to his Kingdoms of England and Ireland.

This Return was given by the Meeting, to the Noblemen who had convocate them, and attended at Irwin; but their Lordships knowing how unacceptable it would be to the Council, declined receiving of it; and the Gentlemen would not alter their Resolutions, and so the Meeting ended.

The Noblemen would not receive all these Resolutions.

The Three Lords sent a Return in Writ to the Council, which I find read and recorded November 8th. Their Letter follows.

And only communicate the bill to the Council, by their Letter, Nov. 3.

My Lords,

WE received the Council's Order on Sunday last at Night, and used all Dispatch in sending Expresses, and went to Irwin yesterday Morning, being Friday, November 2^d, where we were very frequently met by all who were advertised, to whom we communicated the Council's Letter to us, desiring them seriously to deliberate thereupon, and to take such effectual Course for quieting these Shires, in obedience to his Majesty's Laws, and suppressing the Disorders therein committed: Which they took to their serious Consideration, and continued together yesterday, and much of the Night, and made their Report to us, That after the Consideration of the whole Affair, it was not in their Power to quiet the Disorders; which they desired us to communicate to your Lordships. We are Irwin, November 3^d, 1677.

Your Lordships, &c.

When this Letter came, the Refusal in it was very ill taken by the leading Persons in Council, at least they appeared to do so, though I question not it was according to the Desire of some of their Hearts, and what they waited for, as a Handle to go on in their violent Project against the West Country; and they came now to follow out their Design formerly agreed upon, of raising such a Number of Highlanders, a barbarous savage People, accustomed to Rapin and Spoil, as might over-run and depopulate the Western Shires, in a Time of profound Peace: And to them they resolved to joyn some of the standing Militia, an Establishment founded upon the Tender made to the King some Years ago, Act 25th, Sess. 3^d, Parl. 1st, Charles II. wherein is offered, 'a sufficient Army, completely furnished and provided for; and, if need be, all 'twixt Sixty and Sixteen, for accomplishing whatsoever Service the King should be concerned in, through any Part of his Dominions in Scotland, England, or Ireland.' By imploying them at this Juncture, they promised themselves, by the most rigid Extremity of Violence, to drive Presbyterians to an absolute Conformity, and compel them to strain their Consciences to a servile Compliance with whatsoever Bonds and Impositions it should please the Bishops in Council to propose.

Upon the Receipt of which, the Managers set on with their Project, raising the Highlanders, and sending them with the Militia to the West Country.

This Resolution seems to be gone into, as many of the Violences of this Period, without any expresse Orders from Court, whatever Hints there might be before or after this, of which I am uncertain, but have been informed, that Lawderdale, when afterwards taxed with this Severity, was heard to wish the Breast it bred in to beal, for his Share.

Probably at first without Orders from Court.

And therefore, the Managers must wait some Time, till the King's Letter came down, empowering them to enter upon this barbarous Scene, the Materials of which probably were sent up to Court from Edinburgh. In the mean time, they are not idle in preparing and disposing Matters for executing of their Design, being, no question, sure enough of a good Return.

But they take Care to get them.

Accordingly, the Council, November 15th, appoint the Guards to muster at Larber-muir upon the 20th, and that the Commissioners of the Militia meet at Edinburgh upon the 19th, under the severest Penalties. November 26th, they order Four Companies of Soldiers to be quartered about Edinburgh.

Mean while they prepare Matters.

November 27th, Letters are appointed to be writ to the absent Counsellors, to be present next Council-day, when, it seems, they were more directly to enter upon their Design. The same Day, they establish a Post 'twixt Edinburgh and Port-patrick, for corresponding with Ireland.

To clear this Establishment, I find by other Narratives at this Time, that when the King had repeated Accounts laid before him, of the Hazard of an Insurrection, from the Numbers of armed Men at Conventicles, which was in it self really groundless, he offered them the Assistance of his English Forces, and several Troops were ordered to draw down towards the Border: And the Viscount of Granard, Lieutenant-general of the Forces in Ireland, had Orders sent him, to draw the Irish Forces down towards the Coast, and caution them there, to be in a Readiness to come over to Scotland upon a Call. But the Zeal of our Council prevented any Need of Foreigners, and their Highland Host answered their barbarous Projects a great deal better than regular Troops.

Next Council-day, December 6th, Letters are writ to Earls of Huntley, Perth, and Airly, to put their Men in a Posture of marching, that they be in a Readiness for a Call. It seems they were now assured their Orders were ready at Court, and at length they came down.

Dec. 20. they receive the King's Letter,
dated Dec. 11.

And, December 20th, a Letter from the King, of the Date December 11th, is read in Council, by which they are fully impowered to act as they desired, upon the Western Shires. This, as the Foundation of their Proceedings afterwards, tho' impetrate by themselves, I set down here, and close this Year with it. It is intituled in the Registers, Letter from the King, anent the Western and other Shires, and suppressing Disorders there.

CHARLES R.

About suppressing Disorders
in the West, and other Shires.

Right trusty and well beloved, &c. We have been very much concerned at the Accounts We have had, not only out of Scotland, but from several other Hands, of the great and insufferable Insolencies lately committed by the Phanaticks, especially in the Shires of Air, Renfrew, Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and other adjacent Places, and also in Teviotdale, and even in Fife, where numerous Conventicles, which by Act of Parliament are declared Rendevouzes of Rebellion, have been kept, with solemn Communion of many Hundreds of People, and seditious and treasonable Doctrine preached against Our Person, and all under Us, inciting the Subjects to open Rebellion, and to rise in Arms against Us and Our Authority and Laws, unlawful Oaths imposed, the Churches and Pulpits of the regular Clergy usurped, by Force invaded, and their Persons still threatned with Assassination and Murder; and, what they have not formerly attempted, Preaching-houses have been lately built, and unlawful Meetings of pretended Synods and Presbyteries kept; thereby designing to prosecute their rebellious Intentions, and to perpetuate the Schism.

These Insolencies being so recent, have moved Us to provide fit and timeous Remedies; and therefore We have appointed some of Our English Forces to march to the North, near the Scots Border, and a Part of Our Army in Ireland to lie at Belfast, near the Sea-coast, towards Scotland.

We have been with much Satisfaction informed, That you have required the Noblemen and others who have Interest, and considerable Vassals and Following in the Highlands, and Places thereto adjacent, to be in Readiness, with what Forces they can bring out, to rendezvouze at Stirling, upon the first Advertisement; which We do very much approve, and give you Our very hearty Thanks for your Care therein. And whereas We are informed, that those Noblemen have made an Offer of a considerable Number of Horse and Foot, to be in Readiness to rendezvouze at Stirling, and from thence to march with Our standing Forces, upon the first Advertisement, for the Prosecution of Our Service; and seeing We are fully resolved to maintain, preserve and defend the Government of the Church in that Our Kingdom, as it is now established by Law, and not to suffer Our Authority to be thus invaded and trode upon, nor longer to endure the Insolencies formerly mentioned:

Therefore We do hereby require and authorize you, to command all these Forces beforementioned, both standing Forces and others, to march to these Shires and Places beforementioned, so infested with rebellious Practices, and there to take effectual Courses for reducing them to due Obedience to Us and Our Laws, by taking free Quarter from those that are disaffected, and by disarming of all you shall find necessary, and securing all Horses above such a Value as ye shall think fit, by causing the Heritors and Liferenters engage and give Bond for their Tenants, and others that live upon and possess their Lands, that they shall keep no Conventicles, that they shall live orderly and obedient to the Laws; and by causing the Tenants and Masters of Families give the like Bonds, by causing every Parish and the Heritors of it, give Surety that no Conventicles shall be kept within any Part of the Parish, Property or Common, nor harbour or commune with the Rebels, or Persons intercommuned, and for keeping the Persons, Families, and Goods of the regular Ministers harmless; and that under such Penalties as ye shall think fit, by causing all Heritors, Tenants, Liferenters, and others, take the Oath of Allegiance to Us, by using and prosecuting all other Means and Methods, and taking all other effectual Courses for effectuating the Premises, and putting at last an End to these Insolencies and Disorders; and, in case of Resistance, that in Our Name you give Warrant to resist them by Force of Arms.

And for the more effectual Prosecution of these Our Commands, that you punish the Disobedient, or those you judge disaffected, by Fining, Confining, Imprisonment, or Banishment. And further, that ye place sufficient Garisons in all Places where ye shall, from Time

Time to Time, find it necessary. And if at any Time hereafter ye shall judge, that these Forces ye have prepared, are not sufficient for this Undertaking, We do impower and authorize you to call to your Assistance those of Our Forces now lying in the North of England, and the North of Ireland, one or both as you shall find Cause; and for that effect We have given them Our express Commands to come to Scotland for your Assistance, whenever they shall be advertised. 1677.

And lastly, We do authorize and require you, to call together Our Militia of that Our ancient Kingdom, Horse or Foot, or any Part thereof, and to command and charge all Heritors, Freeholders, and others, and, if need be, all betwixt Sixty and Sixteen, to come and attend Our Host, under the Pain of Treason, according to the ancient Laws of that Our Kingdom; and that ye, in Our Name and Authority, emit such Proclamations as ye shall find necessary for this Our Service, from Time to Time. We doubt not your ready Obedience to all these Our Commands; of all which We expect frequent and full Accounts from Time to Time, and so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Whitehall, December 11th, 1677.

This Letter and these Powers are what the Primate was extremely pleased with, and was pushing for these many Years, but more moderate Courses had prevailed. I shall only notice, that the King plainly speaks of the bringing in of the Highlanders as their Act, not his, and thanks them for it; that the great Design in his Majesty's consenting to this unprecedented Method, was the maintaining and defending the Prelatical Establishment, which being contrary to the Inclinations of Multitudes, needed Violence to support it; and that there was no Counteracting of his Majesty, but only a Refusal of Obedience to his Commands, as to the Government of the Church, among Presbyterians: And lastly, new Impositions are here allowed, not only Bonds from Heritors, but Masters, and Parishes, &c. as above; all which were vigorously executed next Year. Remarks upon it.

C H A P. XIII.

Of the Highland Host, and the State and some particular Sufferings of Presbyterians, during the Year 1678. 1678.

NOW I come to end this Second Book, with an Account of the down coming of the Highlanders, and other Things this Year, which, with the Oppressions formerly mentioned, and some other Incidents, made Way for the Second Rising, which was dissipated at Bothwell-bridge; the History of which will begin the next Book. The Highland Host makes way for the Rising next Year.

There was no Provocation given by Presbyterians, nor any Occasion for this terrible Instance of the Prelates Fury, in this unprecedented Oppression of the King's Subjects, save the Preaching and Hearing the Gospel, to which they wanted not altogether Encouragement from some who went in heartily to this Inroad upon them, and which they reckoned their civil as well as religious Right. General Observes on the sending the Highlanders upon the West.

No question but our Managers were some way on a Lock: They had peremptorily established loathed Episcopacy, the Dissatisfactions with that Establishment were every Day growing, People's Consciences will not be forced, and real Principles are unalterable, and only confirmed and stiffened by Violence and Impositions: The Affection of Presbyterians to the Gospel was heightened and inflamed by their Sufferings, and, as has been observed for some Years, their Boldness increased, Conventicles grew, and Field-preachers and Preachings turn frequent.

Now Episcopacy must either be slackned, or the People destroyed; and we may easily guess which of the Two a Government, almost entirely in the Hands of Prelates, grated by the Growth of those who disowned them, will choose; and at length it is determined, that these who will not bow shall break; and the bringing down of the Highlanders is thought the fittest Way, by free Quarter, to bring Presbyterians to take the Bond. The West Country was their Nest, and populous; but to make that a Hunting-field and desolate, in some People's Eyes, was better than its continuing inhabited with such Rebels to Prelacy.

The Bishops and their Party had a double Chance and Venture in this Expedient; either People's Consciences would be subdued, and a tame Subjection to Prelacy brought about, which I can scarce imagine the more thinking Part of the Council expected; or, the Oppression of the Savages would turn wise Men mad, and drive common People to a Tumult and Rebellion, and then a fair Handle would be given, to make a Sacrifice of them to the Resentments of the Prelates, and the Duke of York would have a good large Hunting-field.

But Mens Thoughts are Vanity; neither of these succeeded according to their Wishes; a better Temper was kept, than almost could have been expected, by the oppressed People; and yet, generally speaking, they stood firm to their Principles: And the Issue was a greater Abhorrence in many, of Prelacy and Prelates, as the Authors and Abettors of these extraordinary and unparallelled Methods, and greater Pity to the Persecuted. And the gallant Stand made to these oppressive Courses, by a good Number of the Nobility and Gentry in the West, was very honourable for them, and much exposed this Politick.

Sum of this Chapter.

Upon this Chapter then, I shall give as large an Account of the Beginnings, Progress, and Removal of this Highland Host, as the Papers I have afford me; and it will be pretty large. Then I may come to consider the Consequents and Effects of this Incurfion, and Damage done to the Country thereby, and the Approbation and Accounts of it by the Court: And after I have given what is relative to this Matter all together, I shall give a Relation of Mr. Mitchell's Trial in the Entry of this Year, of the Procedure against Conventicles, and particular Persons, and end this Year by gathering up some other Things which come not so properly in upon the former Heads. These Heads will afford Matter for several Sections.

SECT. I.

An Account of the Commission for raising the Highlanders, and some other Things which passed before they actually marched.

Commission of Aray for raising the Highlanders.

Remarks upon
it.
App. No. 80.

IT will be proper to begin this Account with the Commission of Aray, or for raising the Highlanders and Militia. The Managers having refused the first Offer of bringing in Forces from England and Ireland, they agree upon the levying and modelling an Army themselves, known in Scotland by the Name of the Highland Host.

And upon the 26th of December last, a Commission passes the Seals at Edinburgh, which I have given at full Length, App. No. 80. that I may not swell the History it self with Papers which now come upon me in Multitudes. The Reflections formerly made will save me the Trouble of insisting here. It was one of the Branches of the Sufferings of Presbyterians, to be loaded in the publick Papers of this Period, with most spiteful and false Epithets. I hope the fair Representation of plain Matters of Fact about them in this History, will be a sufficient Vindication; and so I pass the common-place Reproaches of Nurseries of Sedition, Rendezvous of Rebellion, and others of that Nature, as usual Flourishes of the railing Eloquence of this Time. I have already noticed, that the invading of the Persons of the Clergy, and committing Riots on them, when examined, were many Times found to be done by Persons who were pleased to take on the Mask of Presbyterians, and were common Robbers oft-times; and such Practices were still disowned by the Body of Presbyterians. The Charge of invading of Pulpits, and building of Meeting-houses, hath been considered likewise. As to what followeth, the killing and wounding of some who acted in the King's Name; nothing of this Kind was found, after the most diligent Search, in the West Country, to which this Charge must relate: And the Business of Carstairs and Garret hath been already narrated. There follows a Clause in the Commission, Noblemen and others, who did offer any of their Vassals, Tenants, or Adherents, for the Assistance of Our Forces, which deserves Notice. I am well assured, that severals who in this Commission, and subsequent Proclamations, are said to offer their Assistance, were indeed forced thereunto by absolute Command, under the Pain of Rebellion and Forfeiture. I do not question indeed but many of the Highland Clans would very willingly offer themselves to take Quarters, in a better Soil than their own; but the Question still remains, how far it was equitable and just to accept such Offers of a People living by Rapin and Stealth, against loyal and peaceable Subjects. The Forces were under the military Law, even the Militia were under Regulations, but the Highland Vassals, Tenants, and Adherents, were a lawless Company; every Body knew it, and their Actions were proportioned. This Crew is ordered to take Quarters for Money in their March,

March, that was, whatever they were pleased to give, i. e. none; for generally they had it not to give; and, where refused, to force Quarters. They are beforehand indemnified for wounding, killing, &c. all such who made Opposition to the King's Authority. This is severe enough, when Keepers of Conventicles are made Rebels. Next, they are impowered to seize all they suspect; and all that bear the Name of Presbyterians, and had any Thing in their Houses, were to the Highlanders suspect Persons: And as if all this were not enough, all whom they please to pitch upon in the Places where they come, must rise and march with them, under the highest Pains. After such a Commission we need not be surpris'd to hear of dreadful Ravage and Barbarities exercised; and tho' these were very sad, yet I can scarce say they were much beyond the Powers granted here.

All the Copies I have seen of this Commission have the Names of the Persons blank, because they were given to the Commanders severally. The Marquis of Arbottle, the Earls of Mar, Murray, Cathness, Perth, Strathmore, and Airly, gathered up what Men they thought good, from the Places they were concerned in, and my Lord Linlithgow, with his regular Forces, joyns them at Stirling, and when pass'd that Place westward, they live on free Quarters, and press the Bond, as we shall hear, disarm the Country, seize upon Houses, and leave Garisons where the Committee of Council, joyned with them, see good. And the Lord of Huntley is ordered to keep the Peace in the North, and look after the Highlanders Houses and Families, when they are about this Sort of publick Service, of bearing down Presbyterians in the West.

When Matters are thus forming, several Noblemen and Gentlemen, evidently seeing the terrible Effects of this Method now entring upon, resolved to go up to Court, and essay to inform the King truly of the present Circumstances of Scotland. As soon as this took Air, the Bishops, and Lawderdale, now at Edinburgh, do all in their Power to stop this, and, January 3^d, they pass an Act of Council discharging all Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Heritors to go off the Kingdom, without Permission from the Council, and that under the highest Pains; and requiring all 'twixt Sixty and Sixteen to be in a Readiness to joyn the King's Host. It was no Wonder this illegal Step was taken to cover another, for we may suppose, if the King, when from under the Management of Lawderdale, had got a just Information of the State of Things, he would have stop't this Procedure.

That the Reader may not want a Paper so much to the King as well as Country's Loss at such a Juncture, I have insert the Proclamation here.

Act prohibiting Noblemen and others to go out of the Kingdom without Licence, January 3^d, 1678.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council taking to their Consideration, that upon the great Disorders lately committed in some western and other Shires, they did write to them, requiring them in his Majesty's Name, to take such Course therein as might secure the Peace in these Places, with Certification to them, if they failed therein, they would employ his Majesty's Authority for doing thereof; which Offer having received no satisfactory Answer, and they having declared that they were not able to suppress the Disorders, nor free the Country thereof, his Majesty did command and warrant his Privy Council, to arm such of his Militia, and such others as should offer to serve him, for redressing the said Disorders, and authorize them to charge all Heritors and others, and, if need be, all betwixt Sixty and Sixteen, to come and attend his Majesty's Host, under the Pain of Treason, according to the ancient Laws of this Kingdom: In obedience to which his Majesty's Royal Commands, the said Lords have thought fit to send a Committee of his Majesty's Privy Council, to attend the Forces so to be employed; and therefore, lest any Person should withdraw from the said Service, by going out of the Kingdom, the said Lords do hereby require and command all Noblemen, Heritors, and Magistrates of Burghs Royal, excepting actual Traffickers in Burghs, to remain and continue within this Kingdom, and not to remove forth thereof upon any Pretext whatsoever, without special Licence from the Council, as they will be answerable at their highest Peril: And ordain Letters of Publication to be made, direct to the Lyon King at Arms his Brethren, Herald, Mace-bearers, Pursuivants, and Messengers at Arms, to pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and thereat, in his Majesty's Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises, that none pretend Ignorance; and ordain the said Letters to be printed.

LAWDERDALE P.

And the rest of the Lords of the Sederunt.

1678.

And the Persons they most suspected were by Letters called to attend the Host.

Besides this Proclamation, another Method the Managers took to stop the foresaid Design, was, writing particular Letters to Persons whom they most suspected, ordering them to attend the King's Host. Among others there was a Letter writ to the Duke of Hamilton, which I here insert.

May it please your Grace,

Copy of that to Duke Hamilton.

WE having received a Letter from his Majesty, commanding us to use his Authority in arming such of his standing Forces, of his Militia, and others, who voluntarily offer their Assistance in his Majesty's Service, we have, in obedience to his Royal Commands, resolved, that such of his Majesty's Forces as shall be thought necessary for that his Service in the West Country, shall rendezvous at Stirling, and from thence march to the western Shires; and to the end all Things may be done regularly and legally in that Expedition, we have likewise resolved, that a Committee of his Majesty's Privy Council shall go along with his Forces there. Likeas, we have resolved, that for the same Reason the Sheriffs and other principal Officers in these Countries, shall attend the said Committee; and your Grace being Sheriff Principal of the Sherifffdom of Lanerk, and Bailie of the Regality of Glasgow, we have thought fit hereby to desire and require you to attend the said Committee at Glasgow, the 26th Day of this Instant, and to receive and obey such Orders from the Council, or the said Committee, from Time to Time, as shall be thought necessary for his Majesty's Service; hoping, that in this extraordinary Exigency your Grace will express such Respect to his Majesty's Interest, and Obedience to his Commands, as may encourage others who are engaged in that Service.' Signed, at Command of the Council, by Edinburgh, January 3^d, 1678.

Your Grace's most humble Servant

The Duke excuses himself.

The Duke of Hamilton was the Nobleman of the greatest Rank and Interest in the West, and a Privy Counsellor; yet he is not, for Reasons obvious enough, put upon the Committee. And I find, January 21st, a Letter from him is read in Council, excusing himself from attending the Committee, by Reason of his Indisposition; and the Council send their Orders to the Gentlemen of the Shire of Lanerk, to meet at Hamilton when the Committee requires them, and receive their Orders.

The Chancellor prevails with many Heritors in Fife to sign the Bond.

Upon the 10th of January, the Bond came in, signed by the Shire of Fife, to the Council, which was the leading Card to the Shires on the South-side of Tay, and therefore I shall give some Account of it. When the Design of the Highland Host was now formed, the Chancellor Rothès went over in the End of December, and laid out himself to save his own Shire, by prevailing with the Heritors to take the Bond. He wanted not abundance of Difficulty among them; yet at length, partly by Promises, and partly by Threats, he prevailed with the most Part of the Heritors to sign the following Bond at Compar of Fife, January 3^d, 1678.

Tenor of the Bond signed by them, Jan. 3^d.

WE the Noblemen, Barons, and Heritors of the Sherifffdom of Fife, underscribing, faithfully bind and oblige us, that we, our Wives, Bairns and Servants, respectively, shall no ways be present at any Conventicles or disorderly Meeting in Time coming, under the Pains and Penalties contained in Acts of Parliament made thereanent. As also, we bind and oblige us, that our haill Tenants and Cottars respective, their Wives, Bairns, and Servants, shall likewise abstain and refrain from the said Conventicles, and other illegal Meetings not authorized by Law; and in case any of them shall contravene the same, we shall take and apprehend any Person or Persons guilty thereof, and present them to the Judge Ordinary, that they may be fined and imprisoned therefore, as is provided by the Acts of Parliament made thereanent; otherwise we shall remove them and their Families from off our Ground: And if we fail herein, we shall be liable to such Pains and Penalties as the Delinquents have incurred by the Law. And for the more Security, consenting thir Presents be registrated in the Books of Council, &c.'

This, when presented to the Council, is found insufficient, and they ordered to sign another.

This Bond signed was presented by the Chancellor to the Council, on the foresaid Day; and tho' every Body will think this a strict enough Tie, especially for Persons not in their Power, yet the Council find it unsatisfactory. There was at this Time a Coldness 'twixt Lawderdale and Rothès; whether it was from this, or that they had another Draught in prospect for the West Country, I know not; but altho' both the Primate and the Chancellor defended this Draught, yet Lawderdale over-ruled them, and a new Draught is agreed upon, and sent to the Heritors to sign. Which I likewise insert here.

WE the Noblemen, Barons, and Heritors of the Sheriffdom of Fife, underscribing, faithfully bind and oblige us, that we, our Wives, Bairns and Servants, respectively, shall no ways be present at any Conventicle or disorderly Meeting, in Time coming, but shall live orderly, in obedience to the Law, under the Pains and Penalties contained in the Acts of Parliament thereanent. As also, we bind and oblige us, that our haill Tenants and Cottars respective, their Wives, Bairns and Servants, shall likewise abstain and refrain from the said Conventicles, and other illegal Meetings not authorized by Law: And further, that we or they shall not reset, supply, or commune with forfeited Persons, intercommuned Ministers, or vagrant Preachers; but do our utmost to apprehend their Persons. And in case our said Cottars, Tenants, and their foresaids shall contravene, we shall take and apprehend, &c.' as in the former Draught, which needs not be repeated.

They form it with a Clause as to Ministers and Preachers.

This new Bond is sent back to Fife to be signed; and, besides the signing of this Bond, I find the Council, the said Day, order a Hundred Men to be drawn out of the Four Militia Regiments, and to march up and down the Shire, and repress and root out Conventicles; and these are ordained to be maintained by the Shire. The Pretext of all this is, That in the Shire of Fife Mr. Welsh began Field-conventicles, and from thence they spread through the Kingdom. As far as I know, all was submitted to, as better than the Highland Host.

A Hundred Men to be raised, to root out Conventicles, at the Expense of the Shire.

January 15th, the Council order a Train of Artillery to be transported from Edinburgh to Linlithgow, from thence to Kilsyth, and from thence to Glasgow: And a Thousand Merks were issued out of the Treasury, for the Charges of this needless Transportation of Artillery. They had neither Fortifications nor Armies to deal with, but a peaceable unprovided Country.

Train of Artillery sent West.

Upon the 18th of January, the Council appoint a Committee of their Number, to attend and go along with the Army, and grant them a very large Commission and Powers, which I have annexed, App. N^o. 81. I need make no Reflections upon it. The Names of the Persons to whom this Power is given, were, the Marquis of Athole, the Earls of Mar, Murray, Glencairn, Wigtoun, Strathmore, Linlithgow, Airly, Cathness, Perth, and the Lord Ross, Eleven in Number, of which Nine of them were Commanders of the Army, and had brought down the Highlanders, and so were the more like to see to their own Adherents and Followers, and manage the Host to good Purpose.

Council-committee to attend the Host, with their Commission, App. N^o. 81.

With this Commission, the Council joyn large and very remarkable Instructions unto their Committee, which being the Ground-work of what follows, I insert them here.

Instructions to the Committee for the West.

I. 'YOU are carefully and vigorously to prosecute the Commission granted to you by the Council, being of the Date of these Presents.'

Instructions to them.

II. 'At the first Meeting at Glasgow, you are to require the Sheriffs Principal of the Shire of Stirling, Wigtoun, Dumfries, and the Sheriff-depute of Roxburgh, (in regard of the Sheriff Principal's Absence) immediately to convene the haill Heritors, Liferenters, conjunct Fiars, and others within the Shires, for subscribing these Bonds mentioned in the following Instructions, and appoint them to return an Account of their Diligence and Obedience to you, betwixt and the 7th Day of February next. You are also to require the Sheriff Principal of the Shire of Lanerk, Bailie of the Regality of Glasgow, the Sheriff-depute of the Shire of Renfrew, (in regard of the Sheriff Principal's Absence forth of the Kingdom) and Steward Principal of the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, as also to convene the haill Heritors, Liferenters, conjunct Fiars, and others within the said Shires, Regality and Stewartry, for subscribing the said Bonds mentioned in the Instructions following; and to cause the Leaders of the Horsemen of the Militia-troops of these Bounds, deliver up to them the haill Militia-arms, Swords, Pistols, Holsters, &c. and likewise the haill Heritors, or other Persons in whose Hands they are, to do the like. As also, you are to cause the Sheriff of the said Shire of Lanerk, Bailie of the Regality of Glasgow, Sheriff-depute of the Shire of Renfrew, and Steward of Kirkcudbright, to disarm all other Persons, of what Degree or Quality soever, in these Bounds, and to send in the Arms, and all Ammunition that is within the same, Towns and Villages, to you, to be disposed of as you shall be instructed by his Majesty's Privy Council, conform to the following Instruction. And you are to order the said Sheriff, Bailie, and Steward, to report an Account of their Diligence to you, betwixt and the said 7th Day of February; and you are to return to the Council an Account of these Orders given by you, and of the Obedience given thereto, at all possible Speed; and you are not to disarm the Shires of Stirling, Roxburgh, Galloway, or Dumfries, until further Orders from the Council.'

III. ' In prosecution of your Commission, you are to go alongst with the Forces appointed to rendezvouze at Stirling the 24th of January instant, both standing Forces, Highlandmen, Militia, or others, and from thence to go to Glasgow, and from thence to the Shire of Air, where you are first to get an exact Roll of the Names of all the Heritors of that Shire, and of all the Heritors of all the Jurisdictions, Stewartries, Bailiaries, Regalities, and others that are within the Bounds thereof.'

IV. ' That you take special Care, at your first coming to the Shire of Air, to cause the Leaders of Horsemen of the Militia-troops of that Shire, bring in to you the haill Militia-arms, Swords, Pistols, Holsters, &c. and likewise the haill Heritors or other Persons, in whose Hands they are, to be disposed of by you, as you shall be instructed by the Privy Council thereanent; and in case of their Refusal or Disobedience, to quarter upon the Con-traveners, and to inflict upon them such other Punishment you find just: That in like Man-ner you give Orders for inbringing of all the Arms whatsoever, and of all the Ammunition that is within the Bounds of the said Shire, and Jurisdiction lying therein, and of all Towns and Burghs within the same, that is in the Hands and Possession of any Person whatsoever, of whatsoever Degree or Quality, whether Heritor, Tenant, Servant, Cottar, Tradesman, or others whatsoever, to be disposed of by you, as is mentioned in the fore-going Article: And, in prosecution hereof, that you give Orders to the Major-general, or the commanding Officers for the Time, and in the Place, for seizing and searching for all such Arms and Ammunition; and, if need be, that you take the Oaths of all Persons Havers of Arms, either by your selves or such as you shall appoint; and generally, that you use all other effectual Means, and take all other Courses for totally disarming of the said Shire, as soon as possible. You are vigorously to prosecute all such, whether Heritors or others, as have been present at Field-conventicles, and all such as have convocate People thereto, since the 1st of January 1677. and all such as have preached or exercised at Conventicles, or have invaded Kirks or Pulpits, or all such as have threatned or invaded the Persons or Goods of the regular Ministers, and all that have been accessory to the building of Preaching-houses, and all Heritors, Liferenters, and Landlords, that have connived at the building of the said Houses, since the 24th Day of March 1674 Years, and to cause burn these Meeting-houses, and rase them to the Ground.'

V. ' You are to prosecute such as have withdrawn hitherto from the publick Ordinances, or that are guilty of irregular Baptisms or Marriages; and generally, that you put in Execution all Acts of Parliament and Acts of Council made anent the Disorders particularly abovementioned, according to the Tenor thereof; and that you particularly censure and punish all other Delicts and Transgressions mentioned in these Acts, and which are not here particularly enumerate; by which Delicts it is not understood Persons hearing of indulged Ministers in the Parishes to which they are confined.'

VI. ' That according to the Power of Justiciary mentioned in your Commission, you do criminally indict all Rebels, forfeited Persons, or such as you shall apprehend, who have taken Arms, and all such whose Crimes, by the Acts of Parliament, are capital and punishable by Death, and inflict upon them the Pains and Punishments mentioned in the Acts of Parliament.'

VII. ' That after you have received true and perfect Lists of all the Heritors, Liferenters, and Landlords within the Shire of Air, and haill Jurisdictions lying locally within the same, that you summon all of them, without Respect of Persons, to compear before you, and command and require them, within such Time as you shall think fit to prescribe, to engage and give sufficient Bond and Security to you and the Council, whereby they oblige themselves for all their Tenants, and others whatsoever, that live upon or possess their Lands, that they shall keep no Conventicles, nor be accessory to the keeping thereof, or convening of Persons thereto, and that they shall otherwise live orderly and obedient to the Laws, and that under such pecunial Sums and other Testifications, as you shall find Cause: And in case of their postponing or refusing to give the said Bonds and Security, that you proceed against them, by Fining, Confining, Imprisoning, Banishing, or other arbitrary Punishment, according to Law, as you find Cause.'

VIII. ' That you likewise bring before you, or any appointed by you, the haill Tenants and Masters of Families within the said Shire, and cause them give the like Bonds, for themselves, their Wives and Families, and likewise the Men-servants to give Bond for themselves: And all this not only for relieving the Heritors or Masters, but likewise for binding of the Tenants themselves for observing the Premisses; and, in case of Delay or Refusal, to proceed to Punishment against them, as is prescribed to be inflicted upon the Heritors; and that you use all other Ways to get exact Rolls of all the Tenants and others abovementioned, either by ordaining the Masters to give in the same upon Oath, and by getting the Rolls, which was the Method for imposing the Militia, or to take any other effectual Way for a full Discovery thereof.'

IX. ' That

IX. ' That you cause the Heritors of every Parish give Bond for securing the Persons and Goods of their regular Ministers, and that under such pecunial Sums and other Penalties as you shall find Cause; and for avoiding of Multiplicity of Bonds, and saving of Time, you are to consider, if this Clause relating to regular Ministers, may not be meet in the former Bonds to be given by the Heritors, and likewise in the abovementioned Bonds to be given by the Tenants and Landlords, and their Servants, and to proceed therein as you find Cause, either joyntly or separately.'

X. ' That if you find the former Bonds do not sufficiently secure against Conventicles, that you cause the Heritors, Liferenters, and Landlords, within every Parish, give Security that no Conventicles shall be kept within any Part of their Lands, Property or Common-ty, nor harbour or commune with Rebels and Persons intercommuned, and the Obligation be either included in the first Bond, or taken separately, as you find Cause.'

XI. ' That you cause all Magistrates of Burghs, whether Royal, Regality, or Baronies, and if need be, all Landlords, Heritors, and Inhabitants within these Burghs, give the like Bonds and Security, such as is mentioned in the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th foregoing Articles, and that under such pecunial Pains and Penalties as you shall find Cause.'

XII. ' That you cause secure all Horses above Fifty Pounds Scots Price and Value, so as the Owners and others shall not be capable to have the Use of them, in case of any Insurrection or Rebellion; and this either by causing the Owners and their Masters (if they be Tenants) give Security, that all Horses above the foresaid Value shall be put off the Shire, betwixt and the first Day of May next to come, and to take any other effectual Course to make the said Resolution, as to the Horses, practicable.'

XIII. ' That at your coming to the Shire of Air, or any other Time, as you shall find Cause, you give Order to the Major-general to quarter the Officers and Soldiers, Horse and Foot, whether standing Forces, Highlandmen, Militia, or others, upon all Persons, whether Heritors, Tenants, or others, within and without Burgh, excepting such Persons as the Privy Council shall think fit to order to be free of Quartering, and that such Quartering be according to the Tenor of the Commissions granted to the several Noblemen, who are appointed to bring together their Highland Forces and Following, and to such Orders as the Major-general shall receive from the Privy Council thereanent.'

XIV. ' That you give Orders for placing sufficient Garisons in all Houses and Places within the said Shire and Jurisdictions therein, that you shall find necessary, and that these Garisons be furnished sufficiently in all Things necessary, by such adjacent Places as you shall think fit to appoint.'

XV. ' That after you have prosecuted your Instructions in the Shire of Air, and reduced the same to Order, or sooner, if you find Cause, or as shall be advised by the Council, that you go from thence to the Shire of Lanerk, and from thence to the Shire of Renfrew, and from thence to the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and that you proceed according to the Method mentioned in the foregoing Instructions, which are hereby declared to be applicable to these Shires and Places, as well as to the Shire of Air, so that whatever is mentioned in relation to that Shire, is understood to be meant as to all these other Shires and Places, and not only so, but as to all other neighbouring Shires, and adjacent Places to these Shires and Places, that ye shall understand to be infested with such Disorders, and you go or send to these Places adjacent, and there to prosecute the foregoing Instructions, or either of them, as you shall find Cause.'

XVI. ' And in case it fall out, that any be so perniciously wicked as to rise in Arms, or to continue in the Prosecution of their Field-conventicles in Arms, that you give Order to the Major-general to reduce them by Force of Arms; and that so many of them as shall be taken alive, by virtue of the Power of Justiciary contained in your Commission, you cause indict them criminally, and, being found guilty, you cause inflict upon them the Pains and Penalties due to Rebels and Traitors.'

XVII. ' That what Orders you give to the Major-general and commanding Officers, be subscribed by a Quorum of the Committee at least. All which Orders so given you are to leave the Execution thereof to the Major-general, to be distribute to these under his Command, as he shall think fit, wherein he is to do as he will be answerable.'

XVIII. ' You are to cause all Heritors in those western Shires and Places adjacent, and also all Tenants, Landlords, and Masters of Families, within and without Burgh, and Magistrates of Burghs, all Sheriff-deputes, Steward-deputes, and Bailie-deputes, and others that exerce any manner of Jurisdiction, take the Oath of Allegiance to his Majesty; and in this you are to consider whether they are to do this at the giving of the Bond abovementioned, or to leave it in the last Place, and that because it will take up much Time to convene so many Persons over again; and in this you are to do as the Case requires.'

XIX. ' You are to choose one of your Number to preside among you from Time to Time; and what Persons are cited or brought before the Committee, the List of their Names are to be signed by the President, when the Warrant is given for Citation; and, when the Persons are called, the President is to observe that none be omitted, and that all Representations from the Shire of Air to the Council, by Nine of their Numbers.

But have no Access to present it.

By these Instructions they are to manage the Army, and give Orders to the Country, Sheriffs, and other Magistrates: And to complete all, and render them fully Masters of the Lives of the West Country, as, by their Army, they were of their Liberty and Fortunes, they or any Three of them are clothed the same Day by the Council with a Justiciary Power, and commisionate to be a criminal Court. I need not insert their Justiciary Commission, since it runs in common Form, and we have had already Copies of it after Pentland.

But to save their own Bacon and their Friends, after all these Powers at the same Diet, The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council warrant and order the Committee to free all the Lands of Counsellors, and such as subscribe the Bond, and obey the Orders of the Committee, from Quartering.' And the Council appoint the first Meeting of their Committee to be at Glasgow, January 26th.

Every Body knew, some Weeks ago, that the general Rendevouz of the Forces was appointed at Stirling upon the 24th, and agreeably to this, the Committee of Council is ordered at Glasgow the 26th; yet, very surprisingly, the Half of the regular Forces, a Squadron of Horse, and Four Companies of Foot got secret Orders upon the 9th; and upon Sunday the 13th of January, in Time of publick Worship, came in upon the Town of Glasgow, and made immediately a strict and narrow Search for Arms, and fugitive and intercommuned Persons. The same was done, I hear, in the Town of Edinburgh at the very same Time. At Glasgow some Persons were committed to Prison, and, after a few Days, released. These Forces took up their Quarters, as Harbingers to the Highlanders, and their Carriage was high and insolent enough, but was obscured quickly by their Followers.

They themselves afterward owned this sudden Attack of Glasgow, was upon a wrong Information. The Matter was thus: The Bishop of Argyle and some others, (and indeed not a few of the Marches of the Soldiers were, upon the Bishops and Curates Informations, oft-times ill grounded) had represented that a Communion was to be celebrated at Glasgow that Lord's Day by the outed Ministers, after which they were pleased to imagine to themselves, and frighten the Managers with, the Fancy that an Insurrection was to follow.

The real Ground, if it may be called so, of this Fright, was, that the Presbyterians in and about Glasgow, Ministers and others, upon the certain Accounts of the Highland Host, and the Committee of Council their coming West, expecting a very sharp and severe Trial, had kept the Tuesday of that Week as a Day of private Fasting, Humiliation, and Prayer to the Lord, in this Time of Distress and Darknes.

However, the Story takes, and the Soldiers are quartered at Glasgow, to prevent an Insurrection that was never once thought of by the Presbyterians. John Anderson of Dovehill younger, at the Revolution first Provost of Glasgow, of whom before, was taken; the Soaprie there was guarded, and closely searched for Arms and Ammunition, but nothing found, save that Gentleman's Sword and Pistols. When they found their Mistake, within a little he was liberate, upon Bond and Caution to answer when called to what should be laid to his Charge.

I shall end this Section with an Account of some Attempts of the Gentlemen of the West Country, to preserve themselves and their Neighbours from this barbarous Attack. I want the precise Time, but it was about the Beginning of this Month, I suppose, and about the Time of the Application from the Shire of Fife.

The Nobility and Gentry of the Shire of Air, apprehending this Project of the Highland Host to be chiefly levelled against them, thought good to commisionate Nine of their Number to come into Edinburgh, and represent to the Council, ‘ The Peaceableness of their Country, and that albeit their People were indeed addicted to Conventicles, and thought they had Principle and solid Reasons for so being, yet this was only in these Parishes which were denied the Benefit of the Indulgence; and that not only in their Shire, but likewise in the better Part of the Kingdom, the same mild Course, which his Majesty had taken with his other Kingdoms, would certainly prove the most infallible Mean to put a Period to these alledged Disorders; which, even yet, they were not without Hope to obtain from the benign Disposition of their Prince, and their Lordships Intercession; That finally, as they were not conscious to themselves of a disloyal Thought, so they could not discern the least Tendency in the People to Disorder or Rebellion; and therefore humbly they deprecate that severe Procedure of sending among them so inhumane and barbarous a Crew.’

When they came to Town, Lawderdale, the better to make them understand they had now incurred his highest Displeasure, would not so much as allow them Access to speak to him, and would by no means hearken to any Applications made by the Mediation of others: And when it was proposed to him and others, that the standing Forces only might be sent to execute the Law, in which Case some offered to engage for the Peace of the whole Shire, this this likewise was peremptorily rejected; and the Gentlemen were told that nothing would satisfy but their present signing the Bond, and their obliging themselves upon the Spot, that all the rest of the Heritors should do the like. 1678.

This was what the Commissioners could not do, and so they returned without being able to effectuate any Thing in the Errand upon which they came; nay, they could not so much as obtain a small Delay of the Orders to the Forces to march, until the Shire were met and acquainted with these Terms now proposed. Thus the violent Measures now resolved upon by the Duke, at the Instigation of the Prelates, at all Hazards must be execute: And accordingly, in the End of this Month, the Host marched, and harassed the West; of which I come now to give some Account.

S E C T. II.

Of the March, Motions, Procedure, and Return of the Highland Host, the pressing of the Bond, and other Actings of the Committee joyned with them, January, February, and March, 1678.

I Come now to the more direct Relation of the Proceedings of this Host and Army, which could not be prevented by any Applications made; and I shall give as distinct a Narrative of it as I can, from the Papers I have met with, and intermix likewise the Procedure of the Council at Edinburgh, upon the Accounts sent them from the West.

Procedure of the Host, Army, Committee and Council at Edinburgh.

Upon the 24th of January, the Northern Army rendezvouze at Stirling, where, besides other Pieces of Rudeness, they raised Fire more than once. The Earls were their Colonels, when regimented; their Lairds and Chieftains were their Captains; their Adherents and Friends Under-officers, and the very Scum of that uncivilized Country were their common Soldiers: These, with the Angus Militia, and some Gentlemen from Perth Shire, march from Stirling the 25th, and, with the regular Forces, they are all at or about Glasgow the 26th.

Highland Army rendezvouze at Stirling, Jan. 24. Their Officers.

Their Numbers were as follow. About a Thousand Foot of regular Forces; the Angus Militia and Perth Shire Gentlemen about Two thousand two hundred; and of the Highlanders about Six thousand; the Horse-guards were Eight Score, and Five other Troops of Horse, beside the several Retinues of the Lords of the Committee and others waiting on; and a vast Number of Straglers who came only for Booty and Plunder; so that, by an easy Calculation, they may be reckoned Ten thousand in all.

Their Numbers about 10000.

They had no small Store of Ammunition with them, Four Field-pieces, vast Numbers of Spades, Shovels, Mattocks, as if they had been to have attacked great Fortifications. They had good Store of Iron-shackles, as if they were to lead back vast Numbers of Slaves; and Thumb-locks, as they call them, to make their Examinations and Trials with. The Musketeers had their Daggers so made, as, if need were, to fasten upon the Mouth of their Pieces, and maul Horse, like our Bayonets, not yet brought to Perfection. In this Posture came they West.

Their Furniture.

So formidable a Company could not but put all the Country into a mighty Consternation, in a Time of profound Peace. They were surprized to find that real, the Reports whereof they could not perswade themselves to have been any Thing but Threatnings, to fright People to an absolute Compliance: And the Amazement of the Gentlemen and Officers in the Army, who were of any Temper or Reason, was little less, when they entred into a Country perfectly peaceable and quiet, which had been represented, and they expected to find, up in actual Rebellion.

Surprize upon all Sides.

At Glasgow the Committee of Council meet, and open their Instructions, and fall about their Work of disarming the peaceable Country, and pressing the Bond. And upon the 28th of January, they have the Sheriffs of Roxburgh, Stirling Shire, Lanerk, Renfrew, Wigtoun, Dumfries, and the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright before them, having been formerly ordered to attend, ready to receive their Orders. The Orders they give will best appear from their Instructions, which follow.

Committee's Instructions to the Sheriffs, Glasgow, January 28th, 1678.

Copy of the Bond, Glasgow, January 28th, 1678.

Copy of the Bond.

WE ----- faithfully bind and oblige us, that we, our Wives, Bairns and Servants respective, shall no ways be present at any Conventicles or disorderly Meetings in Time coming, but shall live orderly, in obedience to the Law, under the Pains and Penalties contained in the Acts of Parliament made thereagainst: As also, we bind and oblige us, that our haill Tenants and Cottars respective, their Wives, Bairns, and Servants shall likewise abstain and refrain from the said Conventicles, and other illegal Meetings not authorized by the Law, and that they shall live orderly and in obedience to the same: And further, that we nor they shall not refet, supply, or commune with forfeited Persons, intercommuned Ministers, vagrant Preachers; but shall do our utmost Endeavours to apprehend their Persons; and in case our said Tenants, Cottars, or their forefaids shall contravene, we shall take and apprehend any Person or Persons guilty thereof, and present them to the Judge Ordinary, that they may be fined or imprisoned therefore, as is provided by Acts of Parliament made thereanent, otherwise we shall remove them and their Families off our Ground; and, if we shall fail herein, we shall be liable to such Pains and Penalties as the said Delinquents have incurred by Law. Consenting thir Presents, &c.

Subscribed ut supra.

Additional Clause upon a Protection given.

Such who took the Bond being to receive Protection thereupon, were further appointed by the Committee, January 31st, to subscribe this additional Clause. 'And I do further hereby oblige me, That I shall not own any Persons, Lands or Goods, but such as do properly belong to my self, under colour of the Protection given unto me, and that under such Pains and Penalties as the Council or Committee of Council shall impose, in case I contravene.'

Number of the Signers of the Bond at Glasgow, 1678.

I have in mine Eye the List of such who signed the Bond in the City of Glasgow, beginning with the Magistrates; James Campbel Provost, John Jobustoun, John Campbel, James Colquhoun, Colquhoun, Bailies; and except the Counsellors and a few Merchants, the rest are but Tradesmen and mean Persons, and the whole Number in that large City but One hundred and fifty three. The Refusal of this Bond was the Pretext of all the vast Desolation and Severities, exercised at this Time upon the West of Scotland; and all the Power and Influence of these bootless Apostles did not prevail upon many to take it. Some few indeed did sign it every where, who were willing to fall in with any Thing which came about, but the most and best refused.

By the way, it may not be amiss here to observe, That it was as reasonable for Presbyterians, some Years ago, to press the Covenants upon Malignants who scrupled them, as it is in the Managers to press this Bond on Presbyterians. 'Tis not my Province now to compare the Matter of the one with the other here; the Difference there is prodigiously great, there being evidently in the Covenants nothing but what was agreeable to the Moral Law, and what People were really bound to, whether they had sworn them or not: Neither will I take on me to vindicate any rigorous Methods, said (perhaps upon no solid Grounds) to have been taken to violent People to the Covenants themselves; this is proper to be left to such as give us the History of the Times wherein this is alledged to be done, who, I am perswaded, may give a very satisfying and reasonable Account of any Thing done by Presbyterians, as a Body, this way; tho' I profess it as my Opinion, That Force and Violence is no proper Way to deal with Consciences: But certainly the Procedure of this Period, in violenting People into the Declaration, Bond, and Test, ought for ever to stop the Mouths of the Episcopal Faction, as to their Complaints of Presbyterian Severities in pressing the Covenants, which they never did by a Highland Host, when the Power was in their Hand. And I hope, after this, for their own Sake, we shall have no more Clamour from that Side upon this Score.

It will likewise be remembred, that no longer since than October 5th, the Council, when in a calm Temper, give it as their Judgment, That the pressing of this Bond is to be forborn; and give a solid Reason for it, That the Law it self is the strongest Bond that can be exacted of any Man. The sudden Change in pressing this Bond, thus laid aside, is not so much for the Honour of such a Body of Men, and too great a Proof that their Counsels fluctuate. The Cause is plain, the Body of the Nobility and Gentry were against the Bond, as what would ruine many of their Tenants; the Prelates were for it and violent Measures, and prevailed at Court, and so the Change comes.

Many were the Papers written at this Time against this Bond: Some of them are too large to be here, or in the Appendix, insert. There was a short Paper handed about, which contains a tolerable Compend of the Objections against the Bond; and that the Reader may have a Taste of what was said upon this Head, I insert it.

Objections against the pressed Bond, 1678.

I. 'THE Council hath no Power to press this Bond, or any other, upon the Lieges, all their Power being to secure Peace, according to standing Law, and to execute the Law upon Contraveners; and he who takes this Bond, unless he were enjoined by King and Parliament, owns and allows the assumed Power of the Council. Never was any Bond imposed before this but by King and Parliament.'

II. 'No Man of Presbyterian Principles can take this Bond, because it obligeth him to walk according to the Law establishing Episcopacy, and to take that to be a Rule which he believeth unlawful; and Conscience should not be forced and pressed without Information before: And he who is of another Judgment, and takes the Bond, does thereby encourage the Magistrate to press Presbyterians to take it; and so allows Men to be pressed and oppressed in their Estates and Persons, merely for differing in their Principles, as to Church-government. And 'tis to be hoped, tender-hearted Episcopal Men, and indifferent Persons, will not allow this: Yet he who takes it condemns him who does not.'

III. 'The Bond obliges him who takes it, to give no Relief to outed vagrant Ministers, whereas sometimes they may be great Objects of Charity: And if we are not to shut our Bowels of Pity and Compassion to Turks and Pagans in Misery, how can we suffer them to be shut up from a Christian, who only differs from us in a simple disputable Point of Government? especially when our Saviour's Rule obligeth us to do good to all, especially the Household of Faith; and when our Relations are vagrant Ministers, this Bond obligeth us to be unnatural.'

IV. 'The Bond obligeth us not to converse with them; and sometimes a Man may be in that Strait, that he must have them, when he can get no others, for the spiritual Benefit of his Soul; and I know not how we should be tied up from conversing with any not excommunicate: And who gave the Council Power to excommunicate! Sometimes this may tie up one from his nearest Relations.'

Many refused the Bond every where.

Objections against the Bond.

V. 'The Bond obligeth us to take and apprehend such as it speaks of; and how unsuitable is it for Gentlemen, and most of the King's free Lieges, to turn Macers and Messengers at Arms! and who can be forced to that unless he please! We are only obliged to take Traitors, or such as are guilty of Lese-majesty.'

VI. 'When the controverted Thing is pretended to be Matter of Conscience, I do not see how any Person can bind for more than himself; and consequently whoever takes this Bond, binds himself to a Thing impossible. And how shall any Nobleman and Gentleman bind himself to that which all the King's Forces could not do?'

VII. 'When the Magistrate makes Laws which a Man's Conscience will not suffer him to obey actively, he certainly ought to be content with the Subject's passive Obedience, or paying the Penalty included in the said Laws; or else the Magistrate should appoint such Scruplers to depart the Kingdom: But 'tis hard to require active Obedience, and force People to it.'

VIII. 'The Alternative of the Bond, either to do, or pay the Penalties respective, will not answer Objections, tho' it be the Thing made Use of; for nothing which we judge unlawful should be the Alternative of a Promise, but should be absolutely refused: If it were otherwise, a Christian in Turky at this Rate might bind himself under a great Sum, not to bow his Knee to Jesus Christ, and who would think the Man a good Christian who would do so? Or the King's Subject might at this Rate bind himself to an Usurper, to fight against his lawful Sovereign under such Penalty. I fancy the King would not take this Shift off his Hand, that he bound himself to the Penalty, and not to actual fighting.'

IX. 'He who by taking the Bond promises faithfully to do such and such Things, either intends to do them or not. If he do promise, and intend to do them, he must judge them lawful, and so must answer the former Reasons: If he intend not to do the Thing, he then faithfully promises to do what he never intended, and this is Dissimulation and Hypocrisy, and if he think the Thing unlawful, it is not just to promise it; and who will afterward believe that Man, who can tell that he never intended to do what he faithfully promises?'

Lastly. 'To take the Bond only for Fear of Loss, and to put by an ill Hour, is unworthy of a Christian, who should rather choose the forest Suffering than the least of Sin; and should any Man do ill that good may come of it? Such distrust and offend God.'

That the Reader may see how contrary the pressing of this Bond was unto standing Law, I have annexed, App. No. 82. a Minute of some Reasons in Law against the Bond; and a larger and more full Discussion of this Matter, such as are at Leisure will find App. No. 83.

And that I may put all that offers at present upon this Bond together, it may be further observed, that those Reasons were so plain, that as it was but few Presbyterians whom the violent Measures at this Time prevailed upon; so when, by Force and Fraud some of easier Tempers than others had taken it, many and bitter were their Reflections upon it. I give but one Instance, in the Case of a very sensible Countryman, who was surprized into it, Hugh McCutcheon in Air Shire, and left and spread abroad the Paper I insert, App. No. 84. upon this Occasion, which will likewise let us in to the Force and Fraud used to cram the Bond down poor People's Throats.

By virtue of these Instructions the Sheriffs acted, according to their different Tempers, as we shall hear just now in their Reports.

Little other Thing was done at Glasgow, save the ordering the Quarters of the Army, and the administering the Bond to the Inhabitants of that City, as has been noticed, and the giving it to Nine timorous Gentlemen, who, in order to procure Protections from quartering came in and offered themselves, anticipating the proper Time of taking it, although the Committee sat there Ten Days, and even on the Sabbath it self in Time of Sermon: Mean while they suffered the Country round about to be ruined by the Highlanders.

While at Glasgow, I find a Letter read from the Committee in Council, signifying their Work and Business is much over at Glasgow. 'This is read February 1st; and another Letter comes of the Date of February 3^d at Glasgow, after the Highlanders are ordered to march to Air Shire, bearing, 'That they had sent the Double of a Bond, the same with that signed in Fife, to Roxburgh, Wigtoun, Lanerk, Renfrew, Stirling, and Dumfries; but finding the Shire of Air, and Jurisdictions thereunto belonging, are in a Condition far different from that of the rest of the Shires, in regard the Council having given Warrant to the Commissioners of Excise and Militia to secure the Peace, and free the Country from Disorders, they did not give that Obedience which became them: And considering that they were instructed to go a greater Length with them in the first Place than with others; they tell the Council, We have drawn the Draught of a Bond for that Shire, which if your Grace and the Council approve, or give Order that the first Bond be subscribed, we shall be ready to proceed accordingly. We have also sent a Copy of the Letters to be made Use of against Delinquents.'

Committee's Letter to the Council, signifying they have sent Copies of the Bond to several Shires, but, are with their Allowance, to take another Method with Air Shire.

This perhaps may have been the first Proposal of the Bond of Lawborrows we shall presently hear more of, and the Charge and Indictment to be used; and this Proposal seems to have come from the Committee, at the Instigation perhaps of some others, by whom they were pushed to the most violent Measures.

Observations on it.

However, the Council the same Day make a Return, 'That they think it fit they offer to the Shire of Air at first the same Bond with other Shires, leaving the Committee afterwards to require further Bonds, as they see Cause, according to their Instructions: And they recommend to them to take the same Course with the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, as with the other Shires; and think fit they proceed to disarm the other Shires, according to their Instructions; and seriously recommend it to them to allow of no Proposals that may be made, to arm private Persons or Shires, on pretext of securing the Peace.' The Committee were in no great Hazard of soft Measures, and so this last Clause was well enough obeyed.

Council's Return.

Upon the 2^d of February, the Host began to march westward, and against the 7th they were scattered all over Cunningham and Kyle. In the Country round Glasgow, and in their March, and while in the Shire of Air, they carried as rudely and insolently as if they had been a declared Enemy in a conquered Country. Some general View may be taken of the Damage done, by it self: Here I am but upon their March, and only notice, That whither ever they spread, they not only took the full Latitude of the above narrated Commission, in pressing Horses for their Carriages, not only from Country-people, but even off those who travelled on the Road; but likewise would overturn Loads they met with, and took the Horses of Labourers wherever they found them, without Distinction; yea, every where almost they took them out of the very Ploughs, and the Labouring the Ground was stopt all the Country over; though by our Law, agreeable to the Divine Law, Deut. 24. 6. it be criminal, even in the Execution of a legal Sentence, to pound Horses or Oxen during the whole Time of Labour. The Loss, especially of the Shire of Air by this Incursion, indeed cannot be reckoned; and the Reader will remark, that the Highlanders are let loose upon them, even before the Committee go West, or any Offer of the Bond is made them.

They march to Air Shire, Feb. 2. Their Rascals in their March.

Upon the 7th of February the Committee sit down at Air, and among the first Things they do, the Earl of Cassils is appointed to pull down the Meeting-houses in Carrick. The Earl had already, in obedience to Orders, delivered up all his Arms, save his walking Sword. This he signified to the Committee, and since he had nothing to defend himself in case of Opposition, he begged that some of the Soldiers, at least of the neighbouring Gentlemen, might go with him to assist him: This was refused. Next, he desired he might have some of his own Arms back, in case of a Rabble of the Country-people, or a tumultuary Crowd, were it but of Women in defence of their Meeting-houses, might hinder or affront him; neither could this be allowed him. This made him demur a little upon so unreasonable a Demand, till one of the Members of the Committee, a Friend of his, whispered him in the Ear, that there was but a Hair-breadth 'twixt him and Imprisonment, if he made any further Difficulty; whereupon he declined their Orders no longer. But some Country-people having Notice of what had passed, out of regard to my Lord, saved him the Labour, and they were turned down to the Ground before the Earl came. In the Council-registers, February 18th, I find it noticed, 'That Orders were given and execute by the Earl of Cassils, for demolishing Two Meeting-houses in Carrick.' We may hear more of this afterward in his Case.

Committee sit down at Air Feb. 7. The Earl of Cassils ordered to demolish the Meeting-houses in Carrick, with their unreasonable Demands of him.

Their next Work that Day was to call for the Returns of the Sheriffs, anent the Bond appointed to be made this Day: The Return from Dumfries and Niddale, it seems, pleased them best, and was voted satisfactory.

Report of the Sheriffs of Dumfries.

The Return from Renfrew was displeasing to them. Mr. Ezekiel Montgomery, whom we shall afterward meet with, was Sheriff-depute, and his Report was, That only Two Gentlemen, and these among the lowest, and Three Burgesses, had taken the Bond; and a very small Number of Arms, by what was expected, were given up. Mr. Montgomery petitioned for a new Day, and he would deal further in the Shire, and begged the Committee's Sense of these Words in his Instructions, That Gentlemen of Quality might be permitted to wear their Swords. They told him he was to understand by Gentlemen of Quality, only those who took the Bond. Which, when he desired might be given him under their Lordships Hands, since he was but a Servant, there were only Three of them signed it, and withal discharged him to produce it, but in case of Necessity. This shows there were in the Committee who were for running Matters to Heights, and this was an Article, it seems, they were not instructed in, and afterwards, upon their Motion, had it sent them in their additional Instructions, of which in their own Room.

Of Renfrew.

The Report from the Shire of Lanerk dissatisfied them most of all, so that the Petition of the Sheriff-depute was thrown over the Bar: My Information bears, that of Two thousand nine hundred Heritors and Feuars in that Shire, only Nine of the former, and those of no great Interest, and Ten of the last had subscribed the Bond. The Duke of Hamilton, Lords Blantyre and Carmichael, did peremptorily decline it.

A new Day

other Shires, and Interrogations upon Oath, about Arms extended to all Shires.

In the more remote Shires, the Sheriffs, some of them pretending the Copy of the Bond had not come to them, waved a Report, and begged a new Day, both to present the Bond a Second Time, and to renew their Enquiry for Arms. This was granted, and they were appointed to interrogate every Person upon Oath, 'Whether he had any Arms? or disposed of any since January 1st, 1678? if gifted or sold? and to whom? or if hid? and where?' These Queries were extended to all the Shires, and, for the greater Terror, the Officers of the Highlanders in some Places, were intrusted with this Business; and the Houses of Noble-men, Gentlemen, and others narrowly searched. Thus the whole Country was turned naked, and utterly put out of case either to serve the King, or defend themselves, in case of intestine Commotion, or foreign Invasion. Some Gentlemen indeed represented to the Committee; that though they were most ready to yield their Arms, yet, unless their Lordships and the Council would grant them Receipts of what was given up, they understood not what Assurance they had to give them up, since the whole Country had been enjoined to provide themselves in Militia-arms at their own Charges, and had done it, and not received them from the King's Magazine; and they might as well be commanded to give the Money out of their Pockets. But all that could be said was to no Purpose.

Such Reports, from the Places where they resolved to have Obedience, coming to the Council, let them see, that the Bond would not go down in the West, after all they could do: And this puts them upon new Measures, probably some of them were advised to by the Committee, especially the odd Step of Lawborrows.

Council's Proclamation, Feb.
11. about the Bond.
App. N^o. 85.

Remarks upon
it.

Upon the 11th of February, the Council issue out a Proclamation, to forward the taking of the Bond discharging Masters to receive Tenants or Servants, without Certificates that they have taken the Bond. I have annexed it, App. N^o. 85. The Design of it is plain enough, to prevent Tenants and Servants coming out of these Places where the Bond was pressed, to other Places, and for making this Imposition universal. The Narrative of it is very bitter, and the publick Papers, since Sir John Nisbet's being laid aside, have a peculiar Edge and Flourish against Presbyterians. It is cunningly enough insinuate, as if only the Commons of Scotland had been withdrawn from their Parish-churches; but it is well enough known, that Persons of very good Note abstracted themselves, and a good many of the best Quality in the Kingdom, though now and then they joyned in Worship, were very much dissatisfied both with the Prelates and their Clergy. The Presbyterian Ministers are said to assume impiously the holy Orders of the Church. To say nothing of the Phrase, much used indeed by the Papists, it is evident Presbyterian Ministers had been impiously laid aside from the Exercise of the holy Office of the Ministry, and did not assume it, but had been regularly placed in it, not by the Supremacy, but the laying on of the Hands of the Presbytery. If the Penner had spoke of the then Clergy, as in the holy Orders of the King, it had been pretty agreeable to Fact. They are most groundlessly charged with seditions and false Doctrine and Principles, not allowed in any Protestant or Christian Church. Such a Charge needs better Proof than the Word of the Compiler. If Sedition be meant of any Thing spoken or done against the illimited Supremacy and Episcopacy, it may be the Ministers would not be very careful to vindicate themselves from this Charge; but as to false Doctrine and Principles, &c. they have been abundantly vindicated many Times, and taught or held nothing but what was according to the holy Scriptures, and our Confession of Faith, now since the Revolution happily embodied in our Law, and made a Part of our civil Rights. The statutory Part is, That no Tenant or Servant be received without Testificate of their Carriage, agreeable to the Bond annexed, upon the Pain of arbitrary Punishment; and a softning Clause is added, discharging Prosecutions after Year and Day.

Bond signed at Edinburgh, by Counsellors and Lords of Session.

The Bond annexed to the Proclamation is the same with what is above, unless it be that the Word Pains is taken out, upon the Alledgance that some scarred at it, as importing corporal Punishment. This Bond was, February 11th, signed by all the Counsellors present, and they appoint the Lords of Session to sign it when they meet. Such great Patterns had no great Weight on the West of Scotland; and, by their Informations from the Committee, they find that there was no great Prospect of making Profelytes to this Bond.

Act, Feb. 14. for securing the publick Peace.
App. N^o. 86.

Remarks upon
it.
Many Noblemen refuse the Bond in other
Shires.

And therefore, upon the 14th of February, the Council make an Act for securing the publick Peace, as they term it, which I have insert, App. N^o. 86. as one of the odd Stretches made at this Time, and deserves some Reflections, which would come better from one skilled in our Scots Law, than the Writer of this History.

As an Historian, I shall remark, that the Managers were grated with the Accounts of the general Refusal of this Bond every where. Beside those from the West, the Reader had just now, in Fife, the Earl of Crawford, the Lords Balmerinock, Melvil, and Newark, stuck at it: In Stirling Shire, the Earl of Callender Sheriff Principal, and the Viscount of Kilgobbin: In Teviotdale, the Earl of Roxburgh; and in all these Shires, a great many Barons and Gentlemen, and many of the most learned Lawiers peremptorily refused the Bond.

The Managers therefore, to force a general Compliance with the Bond, fell upon this new and unprecedented Method, by a most ignominious Debasing of the Prerogative and Majesty of the King, to make him crave Lawborrows of his Subjects. A Parallel to this I believe will

on the Lawborrows in

will scarce be found in any other Law in other Kingdoms. The Import of Lawborrows in Scotland, is, when Two Neighbours are at Variance, the one procures from the Council, or any competent Court, Letters charging the other to find Caution and Surety, that the Complainer, his Wife, Bairns, &c. shall be skaithless from the Person complained upon, his Wife, Bairns, &c. in their Body, Lands, Heritages, &c. and before such Letters can be granted, the Complainer must give his Oath expressly, that he dreads bodily Harm, Trouble, and Molestation from the Person complained upon.

This is not uncommon nor unreasonable among private Persons; but that the King or the State should require this of Subjects, and the meanest of them, who refuse an unreasonable Bond, beside that this proceeds notoriously upon a sinister Narration, and wrongous Information, the usual Reasons for a Suspension of Lawborrows, it is wholly without Example, and really in it self Nonsense: It cannot but raise the highest Jealousies between the King and his People, and declares him to be in Dread of them, and makes him the Complainer upon them to the Council, and the Council Complainers to themselves.

Upon Perusal of the Narrative of this Act, the Reader will find it stuffed with the greatest Bitterness and Malice, and designed to expose Presbyterians, and the Refusers of the Bond, to Reproach and Obloquy: And to be an Apology for this unaccountable Method now a taking, much of the Matter in it has been already considered, and I shall only make a few cursory Remarks further.

The Western Shires, in order to palliate present Severities against them, are branded with Humoursomness, Schism, and Sedition. It was a pretty strong Humour indeed that made Presbyterians suffer so much as they did, without rising in Sedition and Rebellion in its proper Sense; and nothing but the Force of Truth could have supported them, and it was the Sense of their Duty to God and the King, made them bear so long. Next, A la mode 1661. all the tyrannical Usurpations under Cromwel, are charged upon Presbyterian Ministers, who were the Persons who opposed him most. The aggravating of the Guilt of Field-meetings, from the Indemnity, hath been already considered; as likewise most, if not all the Branches that follow. The holding Assemblies they never pretended to, Sessions were allowed to the Indulged, and no other kept for them, and the same Defences hold for their keeping of Presbyteries, that is, Meetings for Exercise of Discipline, and other proper Ministerial Acts that were advanced for their Preaching. Their taxing the Subjects for their Maintenance, is both false and invidious; and they are as calumniously charged with railing against the King, and denying the Lawfulness of an Oath of Allegiance. The very Covenants they maintained the Obligation of, contain a strict Oath of Allegiance; many of them took the Oath of Allegiance, and none of them disowned the King's Authority. The Odium of sending an Army upon the West Country, is, in the next room, thrown upon the Noblemen and Gentlemen who had sincerely declared it was not in their Power to suppress Conventicles, and proposed the only habile Way for this; which had appeared so reasonable, that the Council themselves, till over-ruled, were convinced of the Need of more moderate Measures. Lastly. The Alternative in the Bond is insisted upon, as easy either to remove or present their Tenants, when only Three Days ago, they themselves had taken away any Force here by their Proclamation.

After this long and invidious Narrative, the Council find the Refusers of the Bond to be disaffected Persons to the King's Majesty, and declare them, by whole Sale, suspect Persons; and require them to enact themselves, &c. in the Books of Council, to keep the Peace, not to haunt Conventicles, or commune with intercommuned Persons, and to keep the Incumbents skaithless, under the Penalty of the Double of their yearly valued Rent, and an arbitrary Punishment to others, &c. as in the Act it self at more Length.

Such a Rigour as this Act bears, seems plainly designed to make a standing Army necessary, which the Primate and others, now finding the Highland Host did not answer their Expectations, pushed for, and saw would be a good Mean of Tyranny and Oppression through the whole Island. The Springs of such unaccountable Steps cannot, at this Distance, be positively determined; but it seems plain, there was somewhat of larger Extent than even to Presbyterians, at Bottom: And it was openly enough said, that some Persons who durst not abide Trial elsewhere, inclined to make their Stay in Scotland necessary, by raising slanderous Reports, and filling the Court with Apprehensions of seditious Disorders and Hazards, and by a numerous Force here to overaw their Enemies: And when the Party who appeared against them were disabled, then would be a proper Time to call a packt Parliament, and therefrom procure a Ratification of their illegal and criminal Actings. How well grounded these Jealousies were, I must leave to others; and shall end this Account of this Act, with the Sense that People had of the Lawborrows at this Time, in a Letter writ upon this Subject, which sufficiently exposes it, App. N^o. 87. In short, King Charles I. was much blamed, for declaring his Scots Subjects Rebels; but the Managers made his Son ridiculous, in asking Lawborrows from his Subjects.

Joynly with this Act the Council send additional Instructions to their Committee at Air, which I shall here insert, as relating to the same Subject, and given the same Day.

Additional Instructions from the Council to their Committee, Feb. 14.

‘ That no Means be left unessayed, to reduce the Heritors and others to Obedience, who have not taken the Bond, you are, according to the Form of the Libel (the Indictment, a Copy of which will be presently insert, and which, I suppose, was formerly sent in to the Council, and by them returned to the Committee) formerly sent, to insist against and pursue them who shall not compear to take the Bond, or compearing, shall refuse the same, for all Conventicles kept by them, their Wives, Tenants, Servants, or others, upon their Lands; as also, for withdrawing from the Church, and irregular Baptisms and Marriages, and for all Prejudice done to the regular Ministers, in their Persons and Goods, in the Parishes where they have Interest; and that for all the Days, Months, and Years, since the 24th of March 1674. and for these Disorders likewise to pursue the Tenants and others living upon their Lands.’

‘ You are likewise to pursue the said Heritors and Liferenters, for all Conventicles kept on their own Lands, since the 24th of March 1674. each Conventicle being Fifty Pounds Sterling; as also to pursue them, and their Tenants, and others, for building, and convening at building of Preaching-houses; the Fine to be arbitrary.’

‘ You are to command all Sheriffs, Stewards, Bailies of Regalities, and their Deputes, to take the Bond themselves; and, in case they refuse, to proceed against them, of whatever Quality they be of, as is mentioned in the former Instructions.’

‘ That all Heritors who shall take the Bond, be allowed to wear their Swords; and that all Heritors who shall not compear, being cited by Proclamation or otherwise, to take the Bond, or who compearing shall refuse the Bond, shall not be allowed to wear their Swords or any other Weapons, whatsoever Quality they be of.’

‘ That after ye have removed from the Shire of Air, and fully settled the same, ye go next to the Shire of Lanerk, and from thence to the Shire of Renfrew, where you are to prosecute the same Methods you have done or shall do in the Shire of Air.’

‘ It is earnestly recommended to your Lordships, to be careful of the Security of such as have taken the Bond, or shall enact themselves for keeping the Peace, and particularly those of the Sheriffdom of Niddale, for the further Encouragement of such as shall obey.’

‘ That you prosecute the former Instructions, in so far as they are not hereby altered or innovate.’

Instructions anent the Lawborrows.

Instructions as to the Lawbor-
rows.

‘ You are to represent, That if the Bond be not taken, his Majesty and Council do so far distrust the Refusers and Delayers, as to crave Surety of them, conform to this Act: And whatever Heritor compears, he must presently either take the Bond, or, if he refuse or delay, he must at the Bar be charged, upon Six Days, to enact himself. But it is the Council’s Pleasure, that only the chief Heritors shall be first taken with Caption, they being first denounced, as is usual in Lawborrows. If any compear not, you must charge them personally, or at their Dwelling-places, upon Six Days, to compear and enact themselves; and if they be absent, you must cause denounce them, and they will likewise be taken with Caption.’

‘ You will give Order to charge such as refuse, in the Shires of Renfrew and Lanerk, so that the Executions may be ready, before you be ready to leave Air.’

‘ We hope you will observe the great Inconveniencies that will ensue upon the not taking of the Bond; for such as refuse will be liable in Two Years valued Rent, which is the Certification, if they, their Men-servants or Tenants contravene; and, by and attour this, they will be liable for all the Delinquencies of the Tenants and Servants, conform to former Proclamations; whereas such Heritors as take the Bond, will be tenderly dealt with as to By-gones.’

Accordingly I find Intimations were made by Sheriffs Officers in every Parish, in the Terms of the said Act. I have before me just now the Citation of the Parish of Dundonald, and another Citation to the Heritors and whole Parishioners of Dundonald, to meet at the Parish-kirk or Kirk-town thereof, the 13th Day of February, and bring with them, their Cottars and Servants within their Bounds, as likewise their Arms of all Sorts, Muskets, Pistols, Swords, Pikes, Halberds, Lochaber Axes, Durks, and the like, to be delivered upon Oath, on Pain of Quartering. As likewise all the Militia-arms; and I doubt not the like Summons were given to every Parish in the Shire.

And, February 11th, the Committee published a Proclamation against harbouring or sheltering such Tenants and Cottars as should be removed by their Masters for not taking the Bond, under the Penalty of Six hundred Pounds Scots for each Tenant, and Three hundred Pounds for each Cottar. This is the Day when the Council emitted their Proclamation to the same effect, without specifying the Fine, as we have heard; so well do the two Meetings jump.

Bond of Relief to the Magistrates of Air,
App. No. 88.

I come forward to the 19th, 20th and following Days of February, when the Heritors of Air Shire were before the Committee. A great Number appeared, and very few took the Bond, except the Earl of Dumfries, Auchmannoch, and some few others of no great Consideration, with the Magistrates of the Town of Air; and for their Security, there was a Bond of Relief to the Magistrates and Town-council drawn up, and signed by the Burgeses and Inhabitants of Air, a Copy whereof I have inserted, App. No. 88. And I suppose the same Practice was used in other Burghs where the Magistrates went into the Bond.

Many refuse the Bond, with their respectful Carriage.

Vast Numbers refused the signing of the Bond with the greatest Stedfastness and Deliberation. They made the most ample Declarations of their Loyalty to his Majesty, and begged that their pressing Difficulties upon the Bond now proposed, might not be reputed as proceeding from any Want of Respect to the King, but from the Force of what they had to say against the Bond; and then gave a Hint at the Reasons which obliged them to refuse it: That the Bond was in it self imprestible, that they knew no Law obliging them to engage for their Tenants, or to force them to go into it; and many other Things to this effect.

The above Indictment was delivered to them, and the Charge, with Threatnings.

Upon their Refusal they had the Indictment above set down delivered to them, to answer in 24 Hours before the Committee; and the Charge of Lawborrows. One Gentleman with some Fervour refusing the Bond, had his Indictment and Charge given him by the Preses of the Committee, with an Assurance that the Highlanders who were in another Gentleman's man's Land, who had now complied, should be presently removed, and put upon his, by and attour those he had before. The Gentleman told them, he had no Answer to that Argument, and could not help it; that he would answer his Indictment the best Way he could, but before he would comply with the Lawborrows, he would go to Prison.

Next Day, the Refusers were called to answer to their Indictment. My Lord Cochran was among the first called upon, and he signified to them, that he and others in his Circumstances could not but be surprized with the Shortness of the Time they had given them; and having a Lawier to plead against them, he humbly pleaded, it was necessary their Diet should be prolonged, and they have Liberty to consult with Advocates; and seeing they were called to depone upon a Crime that might be capital, they could not be obliged to depone: Whereupon the Advocate past from that, and restricted his Libel to an arbitrary Punishment. My Lord urged, That it was much to be doubted how far the Advocate's passing from that Part of the Libel would stand; and although it did, no Defender by Law can be obliged to give his Oath, where the Punishment may be any way corporis afflictiva, quia nemo est dominus membrorum suorum, as very good Lawiers urge.

Upon this all were removed, and the Lords gave their Interlocutor on what was propounded. 1^{mo}. That as to the first Defence, the Council's Diets were peremptory, and so they must answer presently. And as to the other, 2^{do}. The Lords make an Act, declaring, That whatever the Deponents declared, should never infer capital Punishment. And yet it will be found the Opinion of the best of Lawiers, That neither the Declaration of the Pursuer, the Advocate, nor even of the Council, will be sufficient Security to depone, since his Majesty and the publick Interest can never be prejudged by any Declaration of his Officers.

When my Lord is called in, and the Lords Mind delivered to him, and he urged to give his Oath upon the Libel, he propounded another Defence, That by Act of Council, October 5th last, all Libels against Conventicles are to be restricted to a Month backwards, and none is bound to swear but for himself; and these who are ready to purge themselves by their Oath, from their own Guilt, are not to have any Bond presented them. My Lord was asked, if he had an Extract of that Act: He said, Not, but it was well enough known, and referred the Matter to the personal Knowledge of the Lords and the Advocate. The Advocate declared he knew nothing of it; upon which my Lord referred the Matter to the Clerk's Oath. He was again removed, and the Lords gave for Answer, That they remembered of no such Act of Council, and they would not oblige their Clerk to depone in that Matter.

Upon my Lord Cochran's being called in again, he was acquainted with their Interlocutor, and was again urged to depone, or be holden as confest: And after some Explanations allowed upon the Libel, he gave his Oath, That he was free of Conventicles, and all his Scrivants, to his Knowledge. Then some new Queries were offered him, which he refused to answer, they not being in his Libel, and craved the Lords Answer upon this Defence: And they gave it, That he was not obliged to depone upon any Thing not contained in his Libel, and so adjourned till the Afternoon. I have given this large Account of their rigorous Procedure with this excellent Person, from Letters writ by one who was present at the Whole, now before me; and I shall be but short upon the rest, because they ran much in the same Strain with them; and others of the Gentlemen of the Shire insisted much, on the same Things, and received the same Treatment.

After Noon, the Lord Cathcart, Sir John Cochran, and the Laird of Cessnock, being called, refused the Bond, insisting upon the same Heads my Lord Cochran urged: And the Laird of Kilbirnie did, in a particular Manner, urge the Act of Council above spoken of, October 5th. The Lords told him, they knew of no such Act: He offered to produce a Copy of it. The Lords would not receive it, and said, If there was any such Act, it was taken away by posterior Acts of Council. Kilbirnie offered to take Instruments upon his Offer of Production. The Earl of Cathness, for some Time, hindred him from taking Instruments, by insisting on the Danger there was in so doing; but when he could not prevail, he procured a sudden Adjournment of that Sederunt, to prevent him.

In the After-diets, all who were present being severally threatned with exorbitant Fines, Confinement, double Quartering, and Imprisonment, if they persisted in their Refusal to depone, were compelled at length to answer all the Articles of their Indictment, confessing or denying according to their Innocence or Guilt, and the Clerk marked what they said severally: Yea, so peremptory were the Committee in the Matter, that a young Lord having the Bond presented to him, and advancing as his Defence that he could not take it in respect he is Minor, and his Friends have the Management of his Estate, and the Power of putting in or out Tenants, for whom in Reason he could not be answerable; yet the Lords gave him his Charge with the rest.

Notwithstanding of all this Rigour, they prevailed with none in the Shire of Air to sign the Bond, but these named, and a very few petty Heritors; whereas the Earls of Cassils and Lowdon, the Lords Montgomery, Cochran, Cathcart, Bargeny, with all the rest of the Gentlemen and Heritors, and the whole Town of Irwin, did peremptorily refuse. Whereupon, according to Orders, they came all to be denounced the King's Rebels, and to be put to the Horn.

A Letter from the regular Clergy, desiring Garisons.

I hear those gallant Patriots offered a Security for themselves and Tenants, which went a great Length, and was termed a Ratihabition; but I have no distinct Accounts of it, and can only tell the Reader it was refused.

There is scarce any more come to my Hand, of the Procedure of the Committee at Air, save that by their Orders several Gentlemen in Carrick were summarily imprisoned; and upon the 22^d of February, the Committee issued out a Proclamation, 'commanding all Heritors and Landlords, who have not signed the Bond, to put out of their Possession all Horses above the Value of Fifty Pounds Scots, 'twixt and the 1st of March next, and all Tenants or Servants to do the like, 'twixt and the 1st of May next, under the Pain of forfeiting the Horse, and Payment of a Hundred Pounds Scots for each Horse or Mare above the said Value.' This Proclamation was most rigorous, and not only disabled the Country entirely for their own Defence, but likewise for necessary Labour, manuring the Ground, and Commerce.

While the Committee are thus employed, the Militia and Highlanders were to the utmost ravaging Kyle, Carrick, and Cunningham, where they committed the most notorious Outrages, wounded and dismembred some Persons without the least Shadow of Provocation; and I don't find, but, generally speaking, the few Heritors and Tenants who took the Bond, suffered much the same with those who refused it, for the Highlanders sent to execute the Laws, spared no Body, and acted without Rule, which might easily have been guessed at before their coming. And it is a Circumstance strange enough, and some way beyond Expectation, that the poor oppressed People were so quiet, and patiently endured the spoiling of their Goods, and other Outrages done to their Persons; that the Committee and Army were not disturbed with so much as a false Alarm, except once, when, without a Shadow of Ground, it was talked, That a Number of People were gathered together upon the Hills about Fenwick Muir, and in Arms. This was so far credited, that about Two or Three hundred were chosen out of the Army to go thither in all Haste, and when they came, they found their Comrades lying in all Security up and down any Houses that were thereabout, never having heard of any such Matter; and so they had nothing to fight with but their own Shadows, and Herds of Cattle.

But about the 22^d of February, an Express came to Air from the Council, which was said to be very dissatisfying to the most Part of the Lords: The Contents were kept secret; but it was rumoured, it contained Orders to send off the Highlanders. I shall now give what offers from the Council-records, since I broke off.

Upon the 18th of February, the Council are informed, 'That upon Information some Men were risen in Arms in Fenwick, the Committee had sent out a Party, but none appeared, neither could they learn that any had been there in Arms. They are further informed, that several Days had been spent in disarming the Country upon Oath, and good Numbers of Arms had been brought in; that the Meeting-houses had been demolished.'

The same Day the Council order the Highlanders to be dismissed and sent home to their Houses; and they appoint the Militia of Mid-lothian, East-lothian, Peebles, and Linlithgow, to march towards Glasgow in their Room.

And, February 26th, a Letter comes from the Committee to the Council, desiring Garisons may be appointed when the Highlanders remove, which is granted; and the Council order the Earl of Cassils to send in Lists of the Persons who built the Meeting-houses in Carrick, which are now demolished. And, upon the 27th of February, the Committee are appointed to intimate to the Town of Irwin, that they must find Persons fit to serve in the Magistracy, who are willing to take the Allegiance, Declaration, and sign the Bond, otherwise lose their Privileges, and that against a prefixed Day.

At the same Diet the Council pass an Act as to the City of Glasgow. 'The Lords of Council hereby empower the Magistrates of Glasgow, to rive the Burgefs and Guild-brother Tickets of all such as refuse to take the Bond for Relief of the Magistrates, these being Privileges depending upon his Majesty's free Pleasure, and should not be enjoyed by such as are disorderly, especially in Burghs, where such Disorders are looked upon as most dangerous: That they approve of their turning out ----- Marshal from the Council, for refusing this; and recommend to them to turn all out of Council who refuse the Bond.' The same Act is passed with respect to Stirling.

Upon the last of February, the Council recommends to the Committee to burden none who have signed the Bond, with Provision for the Garisons. And, March 1st, a Letter comes from the Committee, signifying that they have appointed Garisons in Blairguban and Barskimming, and Cesnock in Kyle, One hundred and twenty Foot and Forty Horse in the First, and Fifty Foot and Ten Horse in the other Two Houses.

I find by a Letter writ by a Person of very good Intelligence from Edinburgh, February 29th, that this Business of the Garisons had its Rise from a Letter from the regular Clergy in the West, to the Archbishop of Glasgow, wherein they signify, that they may come away from their Charges as soon as the Host comes eastward, if Garisons be not settled. This Letter of theirs I have not seen, but it appears to me to be referred unto in another Letter, which, my my Copy of it bears, was writ by the Presbytery of Air to the Archbishop of Glasgow, in 1678.

the End of February this Year, which I here insert.

May it please your Grace,

IF we had received your Grace's Answer to our last Letter, we possibly could have given your Grace a better Information of Affairs than now we can; but, my Lord, we thought it our Duty to transmit to your Grace our humble Opinion of several Occurrences. 1st. The great and leading Men in this Country are all gone into Edinburgh, and expect to be sheltered there; therefore it is fit they be severely dealt with, sought after, and forced to Obedience, otherwise the Commonalty, who absolutely depend upon them, will never be brought to Conformity. 2^{dly}. The indulged Ministers must be stinted of their Liberty, and some new Tie laid upon them, or they absolutely removed; for let People say what they will, most of these Disorders flow from them. 3^{dly}. That the leading Men of this Country now at Edinburgh, be not protected by the Council, but taken and sent hither; for the Committee think their Credit highly concerned in it: If after they have been at the Pains of prosecuting them this length, the Council do protect them, it will be a great Discouragement to them in their Procedure for the future. 4^{thly}. The Garisons appointed here are but Three, and too weakly manned, and they are too far from the Heart of the Shire, and it will be fit Two hundred Men be left in Garison at Air. This is the humble Opinion of your Grace's

Most humble and obedient Sons in the Lord.

This Letter needs no Commentary, it speaks out the genuin Spirit of the regular Clergy, and confirms what has been often remarked, That the Prelates and their Underlings were very deep in all those rigorous Courses. At this Time I find the Archbishop of Glasgow goes up to Court, to prevent, if possible, the Informations of the oppressed Noblemen and Gentlemen; and I have before me a Draught of an Address to the King, sent up with him. In all the Copies I have seen, it is joyned with the above Letter, but I shall not say it came from the same Meeting, since it does not expressly bear it; but I suspect it may, and perhaps does refer to the former Memorial or Letter. As it is I insert it.

May it please your most sacred Majesty,

THE Danger this Church is exposed unto in the present Circumstances, which are such as threaten the Dissolution thereof, hath necessitate us, in the Discharge of our Duty, to desire the Lord Archbishop of Glasgow, humbly to address your Royal Presence, and to offer unto your Princely Consideration, how inconsistent the violent and irregular Courses of those who rent the Church, (and prosecute us, for no other Reason but that of our absolute and entire Dependence on your Majesty's Authority) are, with the Rights and Interests of your Majesty's Crown and Government, as well as with the Safety of your People, and the Reverence due to Religion; for no other End, but that your Majesty's Authority may be vindicated and rescued from the Persecution of the open Disturbers of the Church, and their Abettors, who, for their own Ends, endeavour to constrain the People, and to debauch them equally from their Loyalty as their Religion, as your Majesty will more fully perceive, by a Memorial to be offered to your Majesty at your Conveniency, herewith sent.

I know no further about this Application from the Clergy to the King at this Time, than is contained in this Paper. Before I return to the Procedure of the Committee, I shall take notice of a few more Hints I find in the Letter I made Use of just now, from a good Hand, Edinburgh, February 29th, which I meet not with elsewhere. The Gentleman tells his Friend, That Two Troops of the East and West Lothian Militia had got Twenty Days Pay advanced, and their Officers were resolved to pay for every Thing, but the Soldiers were the very worst of Men, any sober Persons, who had no Mind to go, put any they could get in their Room. He adds, that a Letter of Thanks was come from the King to the Council, for their Care to put the Laws against Disturbers of the Peace to Execution, and orders the Bond to be pressed on all with Care, and Garisons to be settled where it is refused, at the Charges of the Refusers. He says, there is an Overture here (at Edinburgh) on Foot among the Heritors of Clydsdale, Air, and Renfrew, to offer to the Council to suppress Field-conventicles, which yet others think is too hard to be engaged in: There are a great many of them here, but nothing is yet concluded. The Advocates, yesterday, (February 28th) had a peremptory Command from the Lords of Session to take the Bond, as the last Diet it would be in their Offer, with Certification of Deposition if they refused: There are about Fifty have taken it. It is talked by some who would have it so, that the chief chief in the House being asked, If there was any Law for it, by some Gentlemen concerned; their Answer was, There was none, but they minded not to be Martyrs for any civil Privilege. Sir George Lockhart has not yet taken it, his Lady being lately dead. The Writers to the Signet have all taken it, but Six or Seven. Argyle, the President, and Craigie, are seeking to have the Lawborrows altered, and made easier, viz. Each Master of a Family to engage for themselves and Family, that in case their Families transgress, they shall delate them to the Judge Ordinary for their Exoneration. It is thought the Committee will proceed the same way in Chydale and Renfrew. as in Air. The Magistrates of Irwin are to be cited before the Council, having refused the Bond, for officiating these Years bygone without taking the Declaration.

In the End of Feb the Highlanders are ordered home.

To return now to the West Country; The Committee, in prosecution of the Council's Appointment, towards the End of February, order the Highlanders home. Experience let our Managers see, that the West Country would neither sign the Bond, nor yet rise in Arms, as the Prelates expected, but were patient under all the arbitrary Courses taken with them; and some of them began to be ashamed they had tried an Experiment, as ineffectual for its designed End, as odious in it self: And as it was never tried before, so I hope it shall never be attempted afterwards.

August Militia and some others continue till the End of April.

So after the Highlanders had wasted the Country, tho' they liked their Quarters very well, yet they marched off, except Five hundred, who, with the Angus Militia and standing Forces, continued till the End of April, when Orders came to dismiss them.

In their Return they are loaded with Spoil.

When the Highlanders went back, one would have thought they had been at the sacking of some besieged Town, by their Baggage and Luggage. They were loaded with Spoil: They carried away a great many Horses, and no small Quantity of Goods out of Merchants Shops, whole Webs of linen and woollen Cloth, some silver Plate bearing the Names and Arms of Gentlemen. You would have seen them with Loads of Bed-clothes, Carpets, Men and Womens wearing Clothes, Pots, Pans, Gridirons, Shoes, and other Furniture, whereof they had pillaged the Country: And Two of their Colonels, Airly and Strathmore, are said to have sent home great Sums of Money, which could not all be the Produce of their Pay; and no great Wonder, when from one Country Parish by Calculation it was found, that one way and another a Thousand Pounds Sterling had been exacted and got.

Some of them stripped of it at Glasgow.

In their Return homeward, they continued to take free Quarter, and this without Restraint, except that now and then a few Country-people, without Arms, would set upon some of them, after they were disbanded, and retook their own Goods, without taking any thing but what belonged to themselves.

I am further told by one who was present, That the Students at the College of Glasgow, and other Youths in Town with them, stopt the Bridge of Glasgow, the River being high, against near Two thousand of them; neither did they permit them to pass, till they had delivered the Spoil they carried with them, and only Forty of them were allowed to pass at once, and conveyed out at the West Port, and not suffered to go through the Town; that the Custom-house was near by filled with Pots, Pans, Bed-clothes, Wearing-clothes, Rugg-coats, gray Clokes, and the like: But, unless it was in the Parish of Campsie, where one of the Highlanders was killed, I do not hear of any other Resistance made any where.

The Council's Account of the Procedure of the Committee,

This is all come to my Hand, as to the Procedure of the Highland Host and Committee, in the Shire of Air, and I cannot better sum it up than in the Council's own Account of it to the King, in their Letter, March 6th, which I insert, tho' much of the Matter of it hath been already set down.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

In their Letter to the King, March 6.

When we, who have the Honour to be your Council here, considered by what fatal Steps our Country was formerly led into that execrable Rebellion, and did, with Regret, see, that some Courses lately taken in several disaffected Shires, did resemble too much the Beginnings of these unhappy Times, we did endeavour, by a constant Application, to reclaim and punish such as, under the false Designs of Conscience and Law, poisoned your Subjects; and we did particularly invite and impower the Shires of Air and Renfrew, to secure the Peace against these growing Insolencies, and were resolved to have taken the same Methods with those of other Shires: But finding, by the Answers of these Shires, that they resolved to force your Majesty to a new Indulgence, where probably they would not have stopt, if Force could have prevailed, we resolved to make no more Addresses to other Shires, lest they might have been influenced by their Example, and so the Faction might have grown, and appeared considerable. Whereupon, it having been thought high Time to acquaint your Majesty with the true State of this Kingdom, your Majesty, by your Royal Letter, dated the 11th of December, declared you were resolved no more to suffer that daily Increase of Rebellion, and did, for preventing thereof, order us to employ such Forces, as some of your good Subjects here would add voluntarily to your own standing Forces, and those of the Militia, thereby to pluck up the very Roots of these rebellious bellions Courses. And thereupon we granted Commission, to such Noblemen as offered their Service to us, for levying their Tenants and Vassals, and impowered both them and the Officers of your Militia, to quarter in those Countries, which had suffered these Field-conventicles, declared by your Laws to be the Rendezvous of Rebellion, and had suffered declared Traitors, and intercommuned Rebels, to frequent their Jurisdictions.' 1678.

'And that your Majesty's Service might be effectually prosecuted, we granted the Commissions and Instructions herewith sent, to a very considerable Committee of Our Number, who quartered your Majesty's Forces, first in that Shire of Air, who had refused to secure the Peace; for securing of which we caused draw a Bond, to be presented to the Heritors and Liferenters within this Kingdom: And that they might see there was nothing offered to them which was not in it self legal as well as fit, the same was taken unanimously by all the Members of your Majesty's Privy Council, Senators of the College of Justice, Commissioners of your Treasury, Lords of your Exchequer, and by all the Advocates, Writers, and other Servants who depended upon these Courts; except by some few Advocates, who being every way inconsiderable, were debarred from their Employment.'

'But this Bond being presented to the Heritors and Burghs within the Shire of Air, and many of them having refused, we did, by Act of Council, ordain the Refusers to be charged with Lawborrows, that is to say, To secure the Peace in Manner mentioned in the Act herewith sent; and did ordain the Burgeses, in some suspected Towns, who refused, to have their Burges-tickets cancelled and destroyed, debarring them from all Trade and Commerce; conceiving that such who would not secure your Peace, ought not to enjoy such large Privileges by your free Bounty. But lest the Tenants of such who obeyed, should run in to these who would not oblige them to live peaceably and orderly, we, by a Proclamation, discharged them to be reset without a Testificate from their former Master, or the Minister of the Parish where they lived.'

'These disorderly Shires were also disarmed, and Garisons placed in some, and to be placed in other Houses, who are to be furnished with Coal, Candle, &c. by such as refuse to secure the Peace.'

'Your Service being fully dispatched in Air, your Committee are to come to Lanerk, where they are resolved to settle the Shires of Renfrew, Dumbarton, and Lanerk, in the former Method: And to the end your Majesty may know who will refuse to secure your Peace in all the Shires, we are resolved to send the Bond to all other Shires: Of which your Majesty may expect a constant Account from Time to Time.'

'We are fully convinced that the meaner Sort would not dare to appear in such open Insolencies, if they were not encouraged by Persons of greater Eminency, and who, by how much they are the more considerable, are so much the more to be jealous; tumultuary Rabbles being then only dangerous, when they get a Head, and when Delusions in Opinion form themselves into, and mix themselves with Faction and humours Opposition to Authority, of which your Majesty has of late had too convincing Proofs.'

'This being the true State of your Majesty's Affairs, and our Endeavours, which some are pleased to represent to your People, as wanting your Approbation, or as done without your special Knowledge, tho' we have managed that special Trust committed to us, according to Law, and the Power, and within the Limits prescribed to us by your Royal Letter; yet we thought it our Duty to subject them and our selves to your Majesty's Royal Determination, that we may be both strengthened and directed thereby, being only then satisfied with our selves, when owned by your Majesty, as'

May it please your Majesty,

Your most faithful, &c.

This Letter needs no Observations, the Matter of it has been already considered, and the Groundlessness of the ill-natured Insinuations in it, which are now common Stile, discovered. Its plain Intent is, by a fawning Submission, to get the King's Approbation to their rigorous Proceedings, which they lay all upon himself, tho' it was they who impetrate the Letter they speak of, from him. This they got, as we shall hear. Remarks upon it.

It is Time now to give some Account of the Procedure of the Council and Committee, in the Month of March, and after the Highlanders are sent Home, laden with the Plunder of the West Country. Proceedings after the Highlanders are sent off.

Upon the 1st of March, another Letter is read in Council, from the Committee, giving an Account, That they have charged all who have not taken the Bond, with Lawborrows, and they have sent in Lists to the Council, that, as soon as the Day elapses, they may be denounced; but withal signify, That the Noblemen and Gentlemen charged, are not at their Houses, but come into Edinburgh, and that all the rest design to follow; and thus that Part of the Council's Instructions, for apprehending the chief Persons concerned, will be disap- All who take not the Bond are charged with Lawborrows.

pointed. They add, That the whole Heritors in Renfrew and Lanerk are charged with Lawborrows.

Petition offered by my Lord Colman and others, refused.

About the Beginning of March, my Lord Cochran, the Laird of Kilbirnie, and some other Gentlemen, offered a Petition to the Council, for a Suspension of the Charge of Lawborrows for some little Time, till they deliberate better on this Matter. The Letter before me, from which I have this Account, dated March 7th, says, All Things are managed with such Secrecy, that it is not known what Answer is given. By the Records I find, that, March 7th, the Council signify to the Committee, That they will receive no Petition from the Gentlemen come to Edinburgh, and that they had commanded them by Proclamation to remove.

Act of the Committee about Garisons in Air Shire, March 4.

Mean while, at Air, the Committee come to pass their Act anent Garisons in the Shire of Air, which is not long, and I insert it here, together with the Consequents of it. The Act follows.

At Air, March 4th, 1678.

The Lords of the Committee of the Council met in the West, by Commission from his Majesty's Privy Council, in pursuance of their Commands, appointing Garisons in the Shire of Air, and Jurisdictions within the same, having ordained Garisons to be in the Places following, viz. in the House of Blairquhan in Carrick, of a Hundred Foot and Twenty Horse; another in Barskimming, of Fifty Foot and Ten Horse; a Third in Cessnock, of the same Number; and appointed the Committee to call for and ordain the Commissioners of the Excise of the said Shire, to provide Pots, Pans, and other Necessaries to the said Garisons; and, in obedience to a Billive directed to the said Commissioners by the said Committee, some of them having this Day appeared, who were appointed to provide these Necessaries, the said Lords have thought fit hereby to give Warrant to the said Commissioners present, to call and convene the rest of the Commissioners absent, to meet at Air, the 7th of March instant, and, with all Diligence, to go about the providing of One hundred and twenty six Beds, Twenty four Pots, as many Pans, Two hundred and sixty Spoons, Sixty Timber Dishes, as many Timber Cups, and Forty Timber Stoups, and to distribute them to the said Garisons proportionally, conform to the Number of Men; also to provide Coal and Candle for the Garisons respective, and to report an Account to the Committee of their Obedience herein, upon the 8th instant, as they will be answerable. And it is hereby declared, that no Heritor within the said Bounds, who have taken the Bond, to be burdened with any Part of the Expence of the said Garisons.

Whether the Meeting was full on the 8th, and refused, or not so full as they inclined, I know not; but, I find, on the 9th of March, the Committee pass another Act on this Subject.

At Air, March 9th, 1678.

Their Act, March 9.

The Lords of the Committee, having received his Majesty's Privy Council their Commands, appointing them to call the Commissioners of Excise within the Shire of Air, and Jurisdictions thereof, that they, with them, might set Prices upon all the necessary Provisions, such as, Meat and Drink for Soldiers, Horse Meat, and other Necessaries for the Maintenance of the Garisons, and appointing the Committee to lay their Commands upon the said Commissioners, to be careful that the foresaid Necessaries be provided, and carried in to the said Garisons for their Money, at the Prices set down by the Committee; and besides Coal, Candle, Bedding, Pots, Pans, which are to be furnisht them without Money, as is ordinary in such Cases; certifying the said Commissioners, if they shall fail in causing provide and carry the said necessary Provisions to the Garisons, daily, from Time to Time, the Officers and Soldiers shall be allowed to take the same from the next adjacent Places, at these Rates, except the Lands of Privy Counsellors, and those employed in his Majesty's Service, or such as have taken or shall take the Bond. The foresaid Lords do, in prosecution of the Council's Commands aforesaid, ordain the Clerks to the Commissioners of the said Shire, to call and convene the said Commissioners, in the ordinary Manner, to meet at Air, the 12th Day of March, by Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, to set down prices, and take Order for furnishing the said Garisons: With Certification, the Officers and Soldiers will be allowed to take these Necessaries from the next adjacent places, with the Rates to be set down by the Committee, conform to the Council's Warrant. 1678.

Places,

 Subscribed ut supra.

The Commissioners of Excise did not meet upon the 12th, the most of them were Persons who had refused the Bond, and besides, they would not so far homologate the iniquous Imposition of Garisons in Time of Peace, as to be active in providing them; and the very same Reasons almost which hindred them from taking the Bond, weighed with them in this Case: Therefore the Committee do this Business by themselves in their Act this Day, which follows.

The Commissioners of Excise do not meet, and the Committee

At Air, March 12th, 1678.

The Lords of the Committee having, by Order of his Majesty's Privy Council, caused warn the Commissioners of Excise in the Shire of Air, to meet this Day with the Committee, to set Prices on the Provisions following, for the Use of the Garisons; and they having refused to convene, the Committee do hereby give Warrant to the Governors of the respective Garisons, to cause bring in Provisions and other Necessaries, when the same can be most conveniently had in the next adjacent Parishes, they paying the Prices underwritten, which the Committee has thought fit, in absence of the foresaid, to set thereupon, viz. Each Stone of Hay sh. 2, each Cheave of Straw sh. 4, each Boll of Oats sh. 50 in Carrick, 55 in Kyle; each Boll of Meal 5 Berks; each Boll of Malt L. 5, each Stone of Cheese L. 1. sh. 10, each Stone of Pork L. 1. sh. 16, each Peck of French gray Salt sh. 10, each Peck of Scots Salt sh. 5, each Stone of Butter L. 2. sh. 8, each Dozen of Eggs sh. 1. d. 4, each Pint of Milk sh. 1, each Pen sh. 4, each Hutton Bulk L. 2. And ordain the said Prices to continue until the Council or Committee give further Order thereanent.

Make a new Act for the Rates of Provisions, March 12.

Subscribed ut supra.

Upon this the Officers of the Army go on to bring in from the adjacent Places what they need, and call the Heritors of every Parish near their Garison to meet. The Copy of the Summons to the Parish of Dundonald I have before me. 'These are ordering the Heritors of the Parish of Dundonald, to be at Galsfoun upon Munday next, being the 25th of March, to meet with the other Commissioners of the adjacent Parishes to the Garison of Cesnock, for casting of the Proportion of the said Parish, for furnishing the said Garison, all protected Persons being free: And to that effect, to bring the Valuations of the said protected Persons with them, as they will be answerable. Given at Cesnock, the 22^d of March, 1678.'

The Commanders of the Garisons provide themselves.

W I N D R A M.

'Tho' the Provisions of the Garisons be thus set a going, yet I find the Council going on against the Gentlemen, who refused Concurrence, for their Absence. They had been cited before the Council for their not obeying the Committee, and, upon April 3^d, the Council pass the following Act to grant Letters against them.

Council's Act as to the Commissioners of Excise.

Act anent Commissioners of Excise in the Shire of Air.

The which Day, James Earl of Cassils, James Earl of Lowdon, William Lord Cochran, William Lord Cathcart, John Lord Bargeny, Sir William Muir of Rowallan, James Dunlop of Dunlop, John Montgomery of Lainshaw, Sir Hugh Campbel of Cesnock, Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, David Boswel of Auchinleck, ----- Campbel of Glasnock, ----- Kennedy of Kirkmichael, John Boyd of Trochrig, ----- Kennedy of Killhinzie, Quintin McLean of Grimmat-machan, and James Brisbane of Bishoptown, being called to answer for not meeting with the rest of the Commissioners of Excise, in February or March last, for executing the Orders of the Committee of Council, with Certification, and not compearing, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council grant Certification against them, superseding the Extract until this Day Fourteen Days.

April 3.

What the Issue was I know not, but I find a good Number of those worthy Persons, the Earl of Lowdon, Rowallan, Cesnock, Auchinleck, Lainshaw, and some others, meeting with others Commissioners the 11th of April, where they declare themselves not a Quorum, and find, that the Committee have settled the Prices already, and they judged it not fit or necessary for them, to alter or innovate any of the Rates already set down in an Order to Captain John Windram, dated March 10th last, (this perhaps hindred them from meeting on the 12th) and appoint their Clerk to send an Extract of this Act to the Clerk of the Council,

and 1678. and they all sign this. I imagine this sifted further Prosecution, and I know no more about it. I have given what concerns the Garisons all together.

Proclamation
for taking the Bond in other
Shires.
App. No. 89.

The Council are going on to make the taking of the Bond as universal as might be: And, March 13th, they publish a Proclamation for pressing the Bond at the Days they name, in the Shires of Edinburgh, Haddingtoun, Linlithgow, Berwick, Peebles, and Selkirk. The Tenor of it is insert, App. No. 89. No Reflections need be made on it. According to this, I find by a Letter, writ from the same Person of Credit formerly mentioned, of the Date March 26th, the Bond was subscribed in the different Shires. East-lothian Heritors were convened at Haddingtoun, and the Duke of Lawderdale came out and signed it there, as he had done Four Times before, as a Member of Council, Session, Treasury, and Heritor of Mid-lothian; yet after all the Interest he could make, there were but about Forty five signed at that Time; and a good many of the most considerable Heritors, Haddingtoun, Stevenson, Saltoun, Lamington, Preston, Keith, Hepburn, Clerkintoun, Ormiston, Barns, Garletoun, and others, refused it. In that Shire there are upward of a Thousand Heritors, and not above Fifty or Sixty now and afterward signed it. I have no Accounts from the rest of the Shires, but that Heritors were generally backward, and by this Time Conventicles were beginning to break out again, as we shall hear.

The Refusers to be charged with Lawbor-
rows.

Next Day the Council give Orders to charge all the Refusers with Lawborrows, in the Shires mentioned in yesterday's Proclamation, as was done in the West: But the Application made to the King, by the Noblemen and Gentlemen who went up to Court, as we shall hear, hindred Severities following upon this Charge. I don't find much more insisting upon the Bond after this Proclamation.

Proclamation
against such as refuse to freeze, and other Places to escape the Bond.

In the West, the Committee go on in their Work, and a Letter comes from them to the Council, and is read March 15th, desiring a Stop may be put to Heritors, who, when they refuse the Bond, flee, some of them to the Borders, and others of them to Ireland, and so cannot be apprehended after they are denounced. Next Day, March 16th, the Council, in Return, send the Draught of a Proclamation, which they are to publish, discharging all Persons to go to Ireland without Passes; and require the Committee to send them Lists of all who are charged with Lawborrows; and they order the Shire of Dumbarton to take the Bond at Glasgow.

The Committee come to Glasgow.

I have now no Accounts of the Committee's Procedure, but what appears to me from the Hints in their Letters to the Council, and the Council's Appointments to them; and whether, when they left Air, they sat in Lanerk and Renfrew Shires, I cannot determine; but, by any thing I can guess, they sat mostly the rest of their Time at Glasgow, and probably called in the Heritors round about, to them, there: But I have no particular Accounts of what past, and say no more of it.

Hints of their Procedure, in their Letter to the Council.

By a Letter from the Committee, read in Council March 26th, when they seem to be come to Glasgow, they acquaint them, that the Bond hath been offered to Stirling Shire; that in the Parish of Campsie, Six Miles off Glasgow, North, several Hundreds gathered together in Arms, and killed one of the Soldiers; and desire an Order to proceed against the Heritors of that Parish, for building a Dwelling-house and Meeting-house to one Law, who keeps many Conventicles. This is the Reverend Mr. John Law, since the Revolution one of the Ministers of Edinburgh. They add, That the Country about Glasgow is much infected with unlicensed Chaplains and Governors, and desire that some particular Persons may be prosecuted, as Examples to the rest; and they acquaint them that the Garison is changed from Blairquhan to Kinlichin, belonging to the Laird of Carleton.

Earl of Murray and Lord Col-lingtoun sent by the Council to London.

The same Day, the Council send up Two of their Number to the King, the Earl of Murray and Lord Collingtoun. The Occasion of this seems to be the Delay of their Letter of Approbation, not yet come down; and especially to counter the Application which was now making to the King, by a considerable Number of Noblemen and others, of which in its own Room. To oppose this these Persons are sent up, and the following Letter with them.

May it please your Majesty,

Council's Letter to the King, sent with them,
dated March
26th.

THE Insolencies committed against your Majesty's Authority, which, after express War- rant from your Majesty, forced us to arm such of your Subjects as were pleased to offer themselves, did also oblige us to emit a Proclamation, discharging all Noblemen, Gentlemen, Heritors, and Magistrates of Burghs, to depart forth of this Kingdom, without Licence from your Majesty's Privy Council, during that Service only; which Proclamation is suitable to your Laws, and the constant Practice of Council, and was necessary upon this Occasion to prevent the Departure of such as probably might disappoint any Security that was to be demanded of them, for securing the Peace of this Kingdom, or any Assistance that might be craved from them, in this your Majesty's Service, and to which they are liable by the express Laws of the Nation.

Notwithstanding

‘Notwithstanding whereof, we have good Reason to believe, that after our Endeavours were ready to have attained the wished for Effects, some of these who were obliged to con- cur in prosecution of your Majesty’s Commands, as being Sheriffs, and enjoying other Of- fices under you, have not only refused to take the Bond offered in your Name, and by War- rant from your Letter, dated December 11th, or to secure the Peace, being charged upon their refusing the Bond; but have, with much Noise and Observation, gone to England, in Contempt of your Proclamation, without seeking any Licence from your Council, as o- thers did, and as the Proclamation required, and which was never refused, when desired by any of your People, on good Reasons; by which your Majesty’s Authority, in your Council, (which is the great Source of your Government here) is highly contemned, not only in this Instance, but in the Preparative, and your People diverted in their present Obedience, in Expectation of such Alterations as are promised by those bold Undertakings; some being induced to believe, that none durst attempt that which none of your People ever formerly did, without extraordinary Assurances.’

‘But we who remember, with much Gratitude, with how much Firmness your Maje- sty hath owned us, and all your other Judicatories, (who having no Design but what may tend to secure your Throne and People) do, with all humble Confidence, expect that your Majesty will, by your Princely Care and Prudence, discourage all such Endeavours as tend to enervate your Royal Authority, and affront your Privy Council.’

‘In pursuance of this our Duty, and to prevent such ill Consequences as might ensue on this new and dangerous Preparative, we have sent Two of our Number, to give your Majesty a most exact Account of what is past, and who might satisfy such Doubts as might occur to your Majesty, in which you could not so well be satisfied by Letters: And the Earl of Murray having been constantly present in the Committee in the West, and the Lord Collington in all the Meetings and Committee here; and both being of a known Integri- ty and Ability, we hope may be fully able to confute easily such unworthy Misreports as others have choosed to raise now, as formerly, at a Time when your Majesty is like to be engaged in foreign War, and hath assembled your Parliament of England. Those Reflections on their Procedure, and the Remedies thereof, are, with all Submission, left to, and expe- cted from your Majesty, by’

March 26th, 1678.

May it please your Majesty, &c.

Little in the Letter needs Reflections: Less could scarce be said in Defence of their Cause; but the Matter would bear no more; and these same Reasonings they use, may be turned to the Defence of the plainest Tyranny that can be exercised by wicked Servants. Upon the 1st of April, they had the King’s Letter of the 26th of March, approving the Procedure of the Committee; which I shall insert in another Section, since this hath already swelled so much, and haste through any further Hints as to the Committee.

Remarks upon it.

April 1st, the Council have a Letter from the Committee, signifying, the Committee (now I think at Glasgow) had cited before them the Lord Semple’s Governor, and my Lord Cochran’s Chaplain, for officiating without a Licence from the Bishop of the Diocese; and they absenting, the Committee designed to insist against those who entertained them. The late Reverend Mr. Robert Wylie, Minister at Hamilton since the Revolution, was Go- vernor to the Lord Semple; and, if I mistake it not, the Reverend Mr. William Dunlop, late Principal of the University at Glasgow, was the other. In a following Section there will be Occasion to give some further Account of the Trouble the First met with.

Committee’s Proceeding against Chaplains and Governors, particularly Mr. Robert Wylie and Mr. William Dunlop.

Being here upon the Actings of the Committee, I only further notice, that upon Mr. Wylie’s withdrawing, being unwilling to own the Archbishop’s Power, his Pupil likewise withdrew; and the Committee so far interest themselves in that Matter, as to write the fol- lowing Letter to the Earl of Dundonald, one of my Lord Semple’s Doers.

Their Letter to the Earl Dundonald about my Lord Semple.

Glasgow, April 13th.

My Lord,

THE Committee having thought fit to call before them ----- Wylie, Chaplain to the Lord Semple, to answer for taking upon him that Charge without Licence from the Archbishop; he not only refused to appear, but upon that Occasion the Lord Semple hath withdrawn himself from the College: And seeing your Lordship is one of his Curators, and much concerned in his Education, we desire your Lordship may cause return him back to the College, that he may follow his Studies. We expect your Lordship will be careful herein, and are’

Houshill refuses
the Bond.

This Matter came to fall in before the Council, as we shall hear. In that same Letter they signify, that James Dunlop of Houshill, of whom before, hath refused the Bond, and absented himself. If I be well informed, he went up at this Time, with other Gentlemen and Noblemen, to London. The Committee desire the former Act of Council be execute against him.

They add, That the Magistrates of Glasgow had given Bond for themselves, Burgessees, and Inhabitants; and they had allowed some Days, for such concerned, to sign the Bond of Relief: And further, That the Laird of Ceshnock was retired to England, and therefore had changed the Garison from his House to the House of Rowallan. The Council the same Day, April 1st, allow Three to be a Quorum of the Committee, instead of Five.

In the Beginning of this Month the Case of the Earl of Cassils comes before the Council, as to the Committee's Treatment of him; and an Information is drawn up of their Procedure, and printed; but these and some other Things will come in better upon the Fourth Section, where I shall give some Account of what followed upon the Procedure of the Committee.

Lanerk Shire and Glasgow to be further disarmed.

April 10th, the Council are informed that many Arms are not delivered in the Shire of Lanerk; they send their Orders to the Committee further to disarm the Shire of Lanerk and Town of Glasgow, upon Oath, and in the strictest Way they can: Accordingly they appoint the Sheriff-depute of Lanerk, April 12th, to exert himself to the utmost in this Matter. I have before me the Intimation made in the Netherward under the Sheriff's Hand: No doubt one to the same Purpose was given to the Upperward of that Shire; but this may suffice to insert here.

Intimation of the Order for this.

'In pursuance of an Order of the Committee of Council met in the West, direct to the Sheriff-depute of Lanerk, of the Date, at Glasgow the 12th of April Instant, to the Effect underwritten: These are hereby requiring the hail Heritors, Liferenters, conjunct Fiars, and others, within the Parishes underwritten, respective, viz. These within the Parishes of Carmonnock and Cathcart, to meet at the Kirk of Carmonnock on the 22^d Day of April instant; these within the Parishes of Govan, and Barony of Glasgow, to meet and convene at the Barony Kirk of Glasgow, upon the 23^d Day of April instant, at Ten Hours in the Forenoon; these within the Parishes of Calder and Oldmonkland, at the Kirk of Oldmonkland, on the 24th Day Instant, at the Hour foresaid; these within the Parishes of Newmonkland and the Shots, at the Kirk of Shots, on the 25th; these within the Parishes of Bothwel and Hamilton, at Hamilton, the 26th Day: And these within the Parishes of Cambusnethan and Dalziel, to meet and convene at the Kirk of Cambusnethan, upon the 27th of the said Month, the Hour foresaid; and to bring with them their hail Tenants, Cottars, and Servants, together with their Arms of all Sorts, as Muskets, Guns, Pistols, Pikes, Halberds, Lochaber-axes, Durks, and Whingers; and there to deliver up the same upon Oath, to such Person or Persons as the Major-general shall appoint, in Presence of the said Sheriff-depute, or any that shall be substitute by him: Excepting all such who have taken the Bond, who are allowed to wear their Swords and Pistols; and excepting Noblemen and Gentlemen of Quality, who are allowed to wear their Sword only: Certifying all such as shall not appear at the foresaid Meetings, the foresaid Days respective abovementioned, or appearing shall not give up their Arms upon Oath, they will be proceeded against, and punished for their Disobedience. And Publication hereof is to be made at the respective Parish-churches foresaid, that none pretend Ignorance. Signed at Hamilton, the 16th of April, 1678, by the foresaid Sheriff-depute.'

Accordingly no Pains were spared to make the whole Shire naked, and yet, after all their Effays, a great many did not compear, and chose to run all Hazards before they would come and depone.

April 24. the Council call the Committee
into Edinburgh, because of the Growth of Conventicles,
and momentuous Affairs to be before them.

In short, April 24th, the Council write to their Committee, signifying, that the increasing Disorders by numerous Field-conventicles in Fife, Merse, Teviotdale, and Linlithgow, being come to such a Height, and there being to be Matters of Consequence before the Council upon the First of May, and the Committee's Work being now over in the West, they desire the Committee to come in to Edinburgh; which I imagine some of them did very cheerfully, being heartily wearied of their Work. We shall hear more of the Reasons and Springs of this Turn upon the Fourth Section.

Thus I have given a pretty large Account of the Highland Host, and the Procedure of the Committee, and all almost from original Papers. The miserable Depopulation of the Country thereby, will be the Subject of the next Section, especially in the Shire of Air.

Containing some Account of the Damages done to, and Losses sustained in the Western Shires, by the Highland Host.

BEFORE I come to narrate the Consequences of this violent Invasion upon the West of Scotland, in the Council and in Court, it is needful to take some View of the barbarous and unprecedented Carriage of the Highlanders, when hounded out upon peaceable Presbyterians. It is but a very small Part of the Losses and harassing of the Shire of Air, and the adjacent Places, that can be represented now at so great a Distance; yet some Account I shall give, from Papers written by Persons who were Witnesses to what passed, and felt the Severities of that lawless Company.

The particular Relation of the Oppressions, Depredations, Exactions, and Cruelties committed by them, would fill a Volume, and I shall not enter upon a large Detail of them. The Reader, by a very small Reflection, will understand, what sad Work a Company of savage People would make, when sent in with a Design to run People to Extremities by Oppression: It is certain they were faithful to their Orders, and not only lived upon free Quarter, but robbed and pillaged every where, where they spread. I shall only then give a few general Remarks upon their Carriage, which may serve to help to form a general Notion of their Management; and then insert a more particular Account of the Losses of the particular Parishes in the Shire of Air, and end the Section with some Hints of the Treatment of particular Persons.

More generally it may be observed, that the Soldiers and Highlanders, both in and about Glasgow, and the Shire of Air, behaved with that exorbitant Rudeness and Insolence, as could not have been expected from a conquering Enemy. To say nothing of the free Quarters taken, not only by the Highlanders, as soon as they came to Stirling, but even by the standing Forces, who every Day received the King's Pay, whithersoever they went to the westward of Glasgow, and also by the Angus Militia, when the Three Weeks were out for which their Shire had advanced them Pay: These I pass, because their Commission may seem to countenance them in them, and come to some other of their odd Practices.

General Hints of the Ravages by the Army
and Highlanders

The avowed Disobedience of the common Sort to their Leaders and Commanders, deserves our Notice, both as a Proof and the Fountain of their unaccountable Carriage. Very often they would peremptorily refuse to take the Quarters allotted to them, or to do anything else that went cross to their own barbarous Humours; and ordinarily they would come in Multitudes, Sixty, Seventy, or Eighty together, not only to Gentlemen's Houses, but to these of Tenants and Cottars; yea, that length some of them came, as to present Daggers to the Breasts of some of their Officers, when required to restore Goods to such whom they had unjustly plundered. When this was often and openly done, the Reader will guess what was to be expected from an Host, where every mean Rascal, who had Impudence enough, demeaned himself as an insulting Tyrant, without any possible Check.

Further, these People not content with free Quarter, (which was illegal, and used to make People strain themselves beyond their Power, to satisfy their unreasonable Demands) they openly robbed upon the high Road, and in Houses: Some they stripped naked, when they openly robbed upon the high Road, and in Houses: Some they stripped naked, when several Miles distant from their Houses, and many at and in their Houses, and every where took from the Country People, Pots, Pans, Wearing-clothes, and every thing which made for them, and Money wherever they could reach it; and under all none durst complain: When any offered but to do it, they were knocked down and wounded; and the whole Neighbourhood was dealt the worse with upon that Account; yea, People saw it was needless to complain.

And as all this had been but little, they pillaged Houses, and that even in Towns privileged with Protections; others in the Country they broke in upon, and riled and killed their Cattle, far beyond what they made Use of for their Provision. In some Places they tortured People, by scorching their Bodies at vast Fires, and otherwise, till they forced them to discover where their Money and Goods were hid to avoid their thievish Hands; and drove away vast Multitudes of Horses, first in their March Westward, to carry the Ammunition and Royal Artillery, as was pretended; and then in Return, to carry away their Baggage, the Spoil, and Piunder. The Loss by all this cannot be computed in any exact Way, and the Computation which follows is very far short of the real Losses of the particular Parishes.

Again, those Scoundrels, as if they had been posselt of the Power of King and Parliament, without any Warrant, imposed their Tribute in several Places, and threatened the burning of Houses, and worse, if they were denied: A Crime much worse than that which in our

Law is termed, with relation to the Highlands where 'tis used, Black Mail, which is punishable with the Pains of Theft and Robbery. The meanest Straggler exacted his Sixpence a Day, and the modelled Forces their Shilling or Merk Scots a Day, and their Subalterns, Captains and Leaders their Twenty Pence, Half-crowns, and Crowns, as they pleased to require; and the poor Country People were forced to find it, or borrow it for them. This was generally practised by Highlanders, besides their free Quarter.

Over and above all this, some poor Families were constrained, merely to gratify them in their Excesses, in a few Days to expend Thirty or Forty Shillings Sterling, for Brandy and Tobacco to them. It was a common Practice with them, to go from their Quarters, and purchase their own Victuals, and at their Return to compel their proper Landlords to give Money for their Absence, and pay for what they bought; yea, to pay for the blank Men who were not in their Company, but they pretended should have been with them.

In other Places they taxed and cessed the Land, at the Rate of Penny Half-penny a Day the Acre; and Instances can be given, where one small Company this way gathered Eleven Pounds Sterling at once, another Sixty Dollars; and in the Corner of one Parish, there was advanced Sixscore of Dollars in a Night or Two, to satisfy this lawless and exorbitant Charge: And lastly, after they received this dry Quarter, as they called it, the poor People gave Seven-score of Dollars, to save them from Plunder, and yet at their Removal the Place was plundered after all.

To crown all, 'tis well known, these vile Miscreants, openly in Cities and Towns, offered to commit Rapes, and 'tis fit to draw a Vail over their Excesses of unnatural and horrid Wickednesses up and down the Country. I likewise pass the Woundings, Beatings, and cutting off Fingers and Hands, of which I find some Complaints tabled before the Committee, and Satisfaction promised: And 'tis certain all these, and many other Enormities were done without the least Punishment, unless it were a Night's Detention in the Guard sometimes.

Yea, too many of their Leaders and Officers, Captains and Field-officers also, were their Encouragers, and Partakers with them in those Villanies. One of their prime Commanders was heard, upon the Head of a discontented Regiment, not only to enjoin them to take free Quarter, and whatever else they need, but, after many fair Promises, providing they would stay and not quit the Service, he gave them so vile and lewd an Advice, that I shall not repeat it.

From these Hints it may be easy to gather the sad Condition of the poor Country, lying entirely at the Mercy of those brutal Tyrants; and yet these are but a very small Part of what might be said as to their Outrages at this Time, and what is set down is most certain. 'Tis hard to say, whether it be more surprizing, that Persons of Honour and Quality should ever so far have laid aside Humanity, as to be accessory and active to involve a peaceable Country in such Calamities, without any Distinction, and wherein the reputed Innocent could not but suffer with the pretended Guilty; or that the oppressed People did thus suffer themselves to be invaded, over-run, disarmed, ransacked, and treated like Slaves, without offering to defend themselves.

I shall only remark further, upon this general View, that though the greater Part of the Lords of the Committee were furious Promoters of these oppressive Courses, yet there were some, Two or Three, who endeavoured to stem these Violences. The Marquis of Atbole was particularly noticed for his Mercy, and the Earl of Perth for his Equity; and these Two, and sometimes One or Two more, were for milder Courses; but, generally speaking, they were outvoted. And though they gave strict Orders to their Men to carry regularly, yet they did as their Comrades did; and there was scarce any Room for Complaints: And indeed no Restraints were sufficient to keep in the Highlanders, as appears in an uncontested Instance, that in their March some of them stole even some of the Furniture belonging to their Lords. However, this moderate Party, in Pity to the Country, whom they could not help, at length prevailed to get the Highlanders removed.

This general Account shall be ended in the Words of a Paper containing a distinct Account of the Host and Committee, from which I have taken several Things, with which the Author concludes. 'Upon the Whole, says he, it is evidently apparent, that the Proceedings of those few Months bypast, are a formed Contrivance (if God in Mercy prevent not) to subvert all Religion, and to ruine and depopulate the Country: They are open and evident Oppression, publick Violence and Robbery, and Invasion of the Person and Goods of a free and loyal People, a Violation of the ancient Rights and Privileges of the Lieges, and a treacherous raising of Hatred and Discord 'twixt the King and his Subjects, and consequently manifest Treason against the Commonwealth and the King's Majesty. In a Word, when considered in its full Extent, and in all its hainous Circumstances, it is a Complication of the most atrocious Crimes that almost ever have been conceived or perpetrated.

That the Reader may have some more particular Account, as far as may be, of the Losses of the Shire of Air, I shall insert in the next Place a Narrative of the Losses of the several Parishes in it. This Paper was drawn up by the Noblemen and Gentlemen of the Shire at this this Time, that, if need were, it might be laid before his Majesty; and there were particular Instructions for every Article in it. Care was taken not to aggravate Matters, and it was the Opinion of very judicious Persons in the Shire, that it fell much short, by the Exactness of the Gatherers of it, of the real Losses of the People. Multitudes of Things fell out which could not at all be calculate, and a great many Particulars came not to the Hands of the Persons imployed to draw this Account; so that I can scarce think they were much out, who reckoned the Loss fully double to the Sum here. I give it just as it was drawn up, without any Variation, tho' I might have shortned it a little; and some of the Parishes seem wrong placed, but all are in the Shire of Air.

The whole Sum from the Shire of Air amounts to - 137499 06 00

Many Remarks might be made upon this Account, but it speaks for it self. I only notice, that the Account from the Parish of Dalrymple, and, which is of more Importance, from the Town of Irwin, are not here. No doubt Irwin would be very deep, since they refused the Bond, and Air, who was obsequious, was L. 12000.

It would be further observed, That the Parish of Stewartoun, which was among the last where the Accounts were gathered, reckons Eight thousand Merks for Loss of Labour, which is not cast in in the above Account, because a Calcul was not made of it in the rest of the Parishes of the Shire; but it seems a most reasonable Article: They reckon Eighty Ploughs were idle Twenty Days, at Five Merks the Plough; and if this be added to what is above, and what was noticed before this Account, it will grow exceedingly on our Hand.

The Heaviness of this Oppression will further appear, if what is exacted be compared with the Valuation of the Parishes, or their yearly valued Rent. I give but one Instance. The Valuation of the Parish of Stevenson, I know, is a Hundred Pounds Sterling, and more than the Half was extorted from them, L. 622. s. 12. d. 4.

And lastly, if, at a modest Calculation, and to me it appears short of the real Losses of the Shire, when we make the necessary Additions above specified, we should fix the Whole of this one Shire, at Two hundred thousand Pounds Scots, and then adjoyn the Losses of Stirling Shire, Dumbarton, Lanerk, and Renfrew, though their Losses could not be so great as Air Shire, the Reader will guess, what a horrible Cels and Damage this Invasion by the Highland Host, was to the West of Scotland.

After what is set down, I need not much enter upon the Spoilings and Depredations of particular Persons, Families, and Places. A few Hints may serve to give some further View of the Damage done to the Country at this Time.

There were Eight hundred Highlanders commanded by the Laird of Glenlyon, sent upon the Parish of Straiton, tho' the Parish was made to pay as if they had been Nine hundred. They had free Quarters Fourteen Days; their continual Trade was shooting of Sheep, robbing Men and Women, Night and Day, and perfect thieving and stealing. It is a modest Calculation that is made of it in the above Account.

Observations upon the Account from Air Shire.

The Losses of particular Persons and Places.

Share of some of the Incumbeats.

As soon as the Host came to Air Shire, the Curate of Kirkoswald went and procured a Regiment to that Parish, and by his Information the Quarters were ordered, and such as had any way favoured the Sufferers, had Multitudes lent upon them. John Alexander of Drumochrein, because he sometimes had lodged Presbyterian Ministers, had great Numbers quartered on him; and, besides free Quarters, was obliged to pay Eighty Pounds Scots. And every Family almost had Money forced from it in less or more, besides vast Losses by their being obliged to disperse their Plundering; and what they got not removed, was generally plundered.

The small Parish of Dalmellington had Nine hundred Highlanders quartered upon them. Every Merk-land had Twenty for their Share; and when some were sent to a neighbouring Parish, there remained Eight upon every Merk-land; and they had their Sixpence a Day, besides free Quarter and prodigious Plunder. In this Parish lived that excellent Countryman Quintin Dick, of whose Sufferings an Account shall be afterwards given. He was an eminent Christian, and prudent, wise, and knowing, far above most of his Education and Station: He hath left a Diary and Remarks upon the Providence of God toward him, in the different Periods of his Life, which is writ with a great deal of Solidity and Judgment, and what he says, with relation to the Highland Host, deserves a Room here.

Remarks upon
the Highland Host, by Quin- tin Dick.

The next Passages (says he) I shall instance, fell out in the Year 1678. called by us in the Country, The Year of the Highland Host, when the western Shires were by Act of Council given up to be harassed and plundered by these Savages, for no other Cause, but because some few did at some Times go to the publick Worship of God, in these Meetings of his People, called Conventicles. The first general Rendevouze being at Stirling, from thence they came to Glasgow: The News coming, that all along in their March they wasted and harassed the Country, especially the Persons and Houses of all such as desired to fear and serve God, and keep a good Conscience; and that there was no Safety for any Person who did refuse their Bond, a Test which the very Enemies themselves seemed to nauseate, and that with all Expedition they were hastening to the Town of Air, that Shire being designed to be made exemplary to all Scotland. I confess, when I considered the Persons employed in that Affair, the Commissions they had from the Council, who should have been the Fathers and Protectors of the poor and oppressed, the Methods they followed to put their Commission in Execution, and the Highland Commanders, under which that Host marched, it was very terrible both to me and many others. I need not mention in what a formidable Dress (where there was none to oppose) they came from Glasgow, through the Country, to Air, with their Cannon, their Ammunition, their iron Shackles and Fetters; from thence issuing forth their Companies for ilk Parish by it self, with Orders to keep peremptorily such and such Times. Mean while the Highlanders were sent in Swarms through the Country, there to lie, plunder, pillage, and await Orders for more Havock, against all who should seem to scruple whatever should be enjoined them. In such a Shock, when all Refuge failed me, I thought it high Time to make Haste to the Rock of Ages. And then this good Man sets down his sweet Experiences of the Lord's being with him in Prayer, and what Scriptures he was made to hope upon, too long to be insert here: And particularly observes, that he felt the whole Verses of the 27th Psalms, speak either Safety or Direction to his Soul; and the last Verse, containing a doubled Call, encouraged him, with a quiet and fearless Mind to wait, trusting in God till his Trial came.

He goes on, and remarks, 'That upon a Sabbath-night, when Day Light was going, Two of Cathness's Men as Quarter-masters, came and alighted at my House in Dalmellington, and gave me their Orders for quartering Fourteen hundred. I told them I was no publick Person, nor ever had any Charge in the Place. They answered, I was one of the Three in the Parish to whom they were directed, and they resolved to stay in my House that Night. I told them it was Sabbath-night, and not proper to cast Quarters, but to Morrow I should convene the other Two Persons they were directed to. To Morrow the Allocation was made, and the Fourteen hundred came to Nine hundred, of which I had Twenty for my Share. In Three Days thereafter, Orders came to deliver up our Arms to Captain Campbell of Lochdochart. I had none, being twice disarmed before. In a Day or Two, I thought it would be my best to expose my House, and shift the Company of these whose Language I understood not, and whose Company I could not well digest; and after I had provided for the Removal and secret Conveyance of such Things out of my House as I thought fit, and prepared Three Servants to attend the House, and answer the Guests so far and so long as they could, after Three or Four Days Stay I went off, and shifted the best way I could, for some Weeks.' So far this excellent Person.

Seventies upon House and Lands of Cun-
ninghamhead.

The Barbarities exercised upon the House and Lands of Cunninghamhead, in the Parish of Dreghorn, deserve a particular Remark, and I give them in the Words of a Gentleman of Honour, Witness to some of them, and nearly concerned in all, in a Letter to me, which I am allowed to publish. 'In the Year 1678. when the Highland Host came to the Shire of Air, a Troop of Horse, called the Troop of Angus Gentlemen Heritors, commanded by the Laird of Dun, had the Lands of Cunninghamhead allotted to them for their Quarters.

Dunbar

Dunbar of Grange, Nephew to the Laird of Dun, was Coronet to that Troop. The pre-^{1678.} sent Sir William Cunningham of Cunninghamhead, was then a Minor, a School Boy at Irwin, and his excellent Father dead; and he himself to be sure had never acted any Thing offensive to the Government. The Heritors who took the Bond, and their Lands, were free from quartering and all Exactions, as far as Highland Robbers could be restrained; and although the Minor Sir William was not capable of accepting of, or refusing the said Bond, yet the said Angus Troop were quartered upon his Ground. The Troopers pretending the several Country-houses in Sir William's Land were not convenient enough for many of them to quarter in, they obliged the Tenants to advance the Five Pounds Sterling for dry Quarter, as they called it. When by paying this they reasonably expected to have been freed from Guests they paid so well for, every Tenant in that little Spot of Ground had at least Three Footmen of the wild Highlanders put upon them, who, during their Abode, near a Month, lived at Discretion: Yea, notwithstanding of the pretended Insufficiency of these Country-houses for entertaining Gentlemen, several of them found it best, after dry Quarters were collected, to continue, particularly the fore-said Coronet lodged, with his Horses and Servants, in David Muir's in the Byres of Cunninghamhead.

While this Gentleman stayed there, he came one Day to the old Tower of Cunninghamhead, where no Body lived; and in the Second Story of it was a Granary wherein lay Meal, which was the most substantial Part, if not the whole of the Minor's Estate. The Coronet called to have the Doors opened to him; the Keeper of the Keys was accidentally, and without any Design, out of the Way, and so ready Access could not be given him at that Time. This enraged him so, that wilfully, and in Day Light, without any Order, or any Provocation, he became guilty of House-breaking and wilful Fire, a Crime capital in our Law. And there being at the Foot of the Stair, which taketh up to the Tower, an iron Grate, with a strong waincoat Door behind it, he set Fire to the Door, and by Gun Powder got the hanging Lock upon the iron Grate blown up and broke open; and having forced a Hole in the waincoat Door, got in; and after he had dealt the same way with another Door and Grate upon the Room where the Meal lay, got in; and he and his Servants broke open the Granary, went into it with their Boots and Shoes, all bedaubed with Clay and Earth from the open Fields, and pierced and dug up the Meal, under Pretext of searching for Arms, and with their dirty Feet perfectly spoiled it, to the great Loss of the innocent Minor. Here was a most barbarous and illegal Step, without any Warrant or Shadow of Law, and perfectly malicious.

This same Coronet committed many Insolencies beside this, in Sir William's Lands. He forced his Landlord David Muir to give him what Money he had, threatening otherwise to hang him in his own Barn. And when he had got what he had in the House, he and his Servants went into the Barn, in the one End of which was a Mow of Corn, and in the other of Bear, and they cast both down in the Middle of the Barn, all through other, to the Man's great Loss; and all under pretence that he had a Chest under the Stuff, where his Money was. Which, when they found not, it was with some Difficulty they were hindered by a Company of Women, from hanging the poor Man in his own Barn.

I have before me a large Account of the Damage done to the Town of Kilmarnock at this Time, by the Highlanders, and am told it is but a very small Part of what yet may be attested. It is but a few Hints I shall give out of it. John Bordland in the Bridge of Kilmarnock, by quartering and dry Quarters lost One hundred Pounds Scots. William Taylor Merchant, had a whole Company quartered upon him one Night, besides his ordinary Quota of them who stayed. Matthew Hopkin Merchant, reckons his Loss Five hundred Merks. William Dickie Merchant, had Nine Highlanders quartered upon him for Six Weeks, who had Meat, and Drink, and dry Quarters. When they went off they robbed his House, from whence they carried some Sacks full of Household-stuff and Goods; a Horse full of Silver Money, and abused this honest Man, broke Two Ribs in his Side, and swore they would cut off his Head; and frightened his Wife fore, by putting a Durk a little into her Side, that she being big with Child, very soon after died with the Terror. This good Man's Loss was very great, upwards of a Thousand Merks. Hugh Morvat Inn-keeper lost a Hundred Pounds. James Stuart and his Son had Twenty six Men for Nine Days. James Aird of Miltoun had Twenty four Men for a Month, and Twelve Men other Ten Days. I have a great many others in the Account before me, but I pass them.

It may be worth while to observe, That before the Highlanders left Kilmarnock, they resolved upon the Sabbath to plunder the Town, and did actually plunder several Houses, as we have heard; and had done the like to all, if the Matter had not been over-ruled with great Intercession, and considerable Sums private Persons advanced to their Officers. It was this Day Mr. Wedderburn Minister of the Place, and well known by the Books he hath published, got the Beginning of his Sickness of which he died, by the Barbarity of a Highland man's pushing him on the Breast, with the Butt End of his Musket, when he was interceding to spare the Place. The real Loss of the Town of Kilmarnock, says a Person of good Credit, who writes to me, was certainly greater this Year, than in Dalziel's Year after Pentland; then, as we heard, it was Fifty thousand Merks.

That the Reader may have some View of what was done in other Places, as well as in the Shire of Air, I shall notice, that the Parish of Evandale or Strathaven in Lanerk Shire, by an Account lately taken up from such Sufferers as were then alive, lost, by free Quarter and other Extortions, the Sum of L. 1700. s. 12. and we may without any Stretch double it, considering that many were dead in Thirty Years and more, after the Highland Host were among them.

Parish of Cam-buslang.

The Parish of Cambuslang in the same Shire, though it be a very small one, had a considerable Loss. John Corsbie had Fifty Highlanders of Arbole's Men, with a Lieutenant and Quarter-master, quartered on him for Eight Days. David Donald had Sixteen quartered on him during the said Space. James Jackson, William Ker, and Thomas Robertson in Middlecots, had each of them Twenty two of the foresaid Highlanders quartered on them for Eight Days. In the Return of the Host from the more western Places, one Lieutenant Stuart, and Quarter-master Leckie, came to the Parish with Eighteen Men, and continued Five Weeks in it in Seed-time; and told the Parish, They had Orders to quarter Eighty Men, though they let none see the Order, and no more Men than Eighteen ever came, and accordingly exacted the Money off the Parish, which amounted to L. 861. and whosoever refused to pay, had their Houses rifled, and were forced to buy back their Goods at much more Money than they would have paid for Quarters. These and other Hardships upon the Dutcheffs of Hamilton's Lands at this Time, made that excellent Person, upon the 5th of April, take an Instrument against the Earl of Strathmore, for the restoring of what was illegally exacted from her and her Tenants; a Copy of which I have insert, App. N^o. 90.

Ravages, and

Accounts of this Nature will be endless; and therefore, though I could add a great many more, yet I shall end this Section with an Account I have from a good Hand, of that excellent Person the Lady Houstoun, in the Shire of Renfrew, at this Time. A Party of Soldiers had sadly harassed Sir Patrick Houstoun's Tenants in his Absence, he being at London; yea, such was their Rudeness to Dame Anne Hamilton his Lady, that not only the meaner Sort, but even Sir George Nicolson who commanded them, threatened her personally to that Pitch, that she was obliged to let down the Portcullis of the Gate to keep them out of the House: But unhappily she found Two of her younger Sons, Mr. William and Archibald, were without the Gates: She was so frightened with their Threatnings, and the Fears of what they might do to the young Boys, that she fell into a Fever, of which in a few Days she died; and her Sister Mrs. Grizel Hamilton, Daughter to the Lord Bargeny, by waiting upon her, fell into the same Distemper, and died.

This Lady was singularly devout and religious, and very much in her Sentiments against Episcopacy, and her Death was very welcome News to the Episcopal Clergy of that Bounds, whom she would never in the least countenance. It was noticed, that this Sir John Nicolson of that ilk, and Laird of Lasswade, after this sensibly decayed in his Fortune; and tho' at this Time he had an opulent Estate, yet in a few Years he became bankrupt, and his Estate was sold, after his Death, by the Lords of Session, to pay his Debts.

Upon the Whole, as these Hardships and Oppressions were general, and no great Difference made in the Lands of such who had taken the Bond, from those who did not, this Projeect appeared to all almost both severe and unjust, yea ridiculous and unbecoming the Wisdom of a Government, and irritate Multitudes, rendred the Managers contemptible, and the Clergy, from whom in part it did spring, and who heartily fell in in many Places with the Host, perfectly odious. I come now to the Consequents of this in the Council, and at Court.

S E C T. IV.

Of some Things which followed the Return of the Highland Host, the Approbation and Narrative of the Proceedings of the Council and Committee, the Earl of Cassils's Case, and other Things at Court, until the Convention of Estates, June 26th, 1678.

Sum of this Section.

I Design this Section for giving a Narrative of some Things with relation to the Highland Host and Committee, which I could not bring in on the Second Section, without breaking the Thread of the Account there, and making it very long. I am here then to give some Account of the Approbation of the Committee's Procedure, both by King and Council, Council, and the Narrative they themselves gave of this Matter, with Reflections upon it, of the Earl of Cassils's Case, and the Attempt of Duke Hamilton and others, to give the King a true Account of the State of Things in Scotland, and any Thing further which offers, till the Convention in June.

After the Council's submissive Letter of March 16th, seeking an Approbation for themselves and the Committee, insert above at Length, April 1st, the following Letter comes; upon the Receipt of which they dispatch Copies of it to the Committee. In most Copies I have seen 'tis termed, King's Letter of Thanks and Indemnity to the Council and Committee, but in the Records it is,

King's Letter

their and the Committee's Proceedings.

Letter of the King to the Council, approving their and the Committee's Proceedings.

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty, &c. We well understand the Insolence of the disaffected Shires, and a great Part of your Progress in reducing them to their Duty in a great Measure, before your Letter, dated March 16th, came to Our Hands: For their Irregularities make so much Noise, and are so destructive to Our Interest, that We admire how many of Our Subjects should think (as your Letter intimates some do) that what We (who take so much Pains to know the Affairs of Scotland, both from extraordinary Affection to that Our ancient Kingdom, and because of the frequent Representations that have been made to Us) do, for securing the Peace there, proceeds merely from the Suggestions of Our Council, and Want of true Information; since all have had open Access to Us, and We have, of late Years, heard many of Our Subjects of that Kingdom, fully and patiently; whilst they endeavour, by weak Reasons, to justify the Occasion of their differing from Our Ministers, and opposing Our Authority: Nor could We have expected, that these who have so affronted Our Authority, and given such ill Example to Our Subjects, and have cast loose the Principles of all Government, could have dared to think that We may yet approve of their rebellious Courses.

And to let you further know Our Resentments, We do thank you very heartily for your careful Prosecution of what We recommended to you, in Our Letter December 11th. And after Perusal of your Commissions and Instructions, (which we have signed, to shew that they were compared by Us with the said Letter) We approve of your sending in Our Forces, and of the Commissions given by you to these Noblemen that have their Interest in the Highlands, and of these given by you to the Militia of Horse and Foot, and to kill such as should oppose Our Authority by Arms, (for the suffering Field-conventicles, which We, as well as Our Law, think the Rendezvous of Rebellion, and the refusing to suppress them, did justly oblige you to look upon these Shires as in a State of Rebellion, in which these and severer Courses are necessary and unavoidable, and which are very gentle, in regard of the great Misfortunes that followed lately upon the like Beginnings.) We approve likewise of that Bond presented to Our Subjects, in which, after serious Perusal, We see no Cause of Discontent to any who resolve to live peaceably, and for subscribing whereof We are very well satisfied with Our Judicatories; and since all Our Judges, and all the learned Lawyers of that Kingdom, have subscribed the same, We must, and Our People should see, that such as call it illegal, do so merely from the Principles of Faction and Humour.

We are also well pleased that the said Bond should be offered to all landed Persons, and Magistrates, within that Our Kingdom, without Exception, that We may thereby know how each of them stands affected to Our Government: And you justly observe, that the most powerful should be most jealous. We approve also of that legal Surety which you call Lawborrows, and of your having settled Garisons, and the Way you have taken to provide for them; of which Garisons, We think, none should complain who love Our Government, and the Peace of their native Country, since they are very necessary for both these Ends, in those disorderly Shires. We approve likewise of your recalling the Privileges of such Burgesses, as will not relieve their Magistrates according to Law, and of debarring these very few Advocates who did not compare when cited by Our Judges, at that Time the Bond was offered by those of their Society.

These Courses being founded upon Our Commands, and taken for the common Interest of Us and Our People, We own as done by Us; and We do hereby declare, That whatever Person or Judicatory shall offer to quarrel any Person for being accessory thereunto, shall be punishable as Murmurers against Our Authority and Royal Prerogative. And for Encouragement of all such as serve Us, We declare that this Our Approbation shall have the Force of an ample and absolute Indemnity, and Letter of Thanks, to all any ways concerned in that Expedition, either in Council, Committee, or Execution, We having very good Reason to consider the same as Our special and necessary Service. And so We bid you heartily

K k k k k k

1678. 'heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 26th Day of March, 1678. and of Our Reign the Thirtieth Year.'

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

Remarks upon
it.

'Tis not improper to insert such an ample Approbation as this, of so black a Procedure, which makes his Majesty indeed approve of what is done, and meanly enough crave Law-borrows of his Subjects; since such Papers as this, when evidently reflecting upon the Honour, and contrary to the real Interests of a Sovereign, are not to much to be considered as adding Weight to any thing done by wicked Servants, but as necessary, tho' very base, Impositions upon a Prince, and must be added to the rest of the Misdemeanours and Crimes of the Managers, in order to screen themselves.

The Council
approves their Committee.

This Letter did not hinder the Patriots who went up, from laying before the King the Illegality and Hardship in many Things here approved, as we shall hear, tho' perhaps it was designed for such an End; but very quickly after it a Stop was put to the Bond and Law-borrows; and so when I have noticed, that after the Council, May 2^d, by a direct Act, did approve their Committee and the Procedure thereof, it will be fit to look back a little, and observe how Matters go at Court, as to the Procedure of the Committee, particularly as to the Earl of Cassils.

Earl of Cassils goes up to Court.

The Earl was the first who went up to Court, when he with others were denounced, as his Case, which shall presently be insert, more fully bears, to give the King a true Information how Matters stood: I hear he promised himself, and got Access to the King, by Means of the Duke of Monmouth; and a Letter I have just now before me, quoted, Earl of Cassils's Letter to Duke, 1678. appears to me to have been to the Duke of Monmouth, though he be not named in it. I insert it here.

May it please your Grace,

His Letter to the Duke of Monmouth.

'The great Sense I have of the Duty I ow to the King's most sacred Majesty, and the Concern which every good Patriot ought to have for that Kingdom and Country, whereof he is a Member, have moved me to adventure upon the Boldness of an humble Address unto your Grace.'

'There is a great Body of Men, to the Number of Seven or Eight thousand, the most Part whereof are Highlanders, who are gathered together, and brought into the West of Scotland, upon free Quarter, whereby there is the greatest Complaint of Violence, Rapin, and all Manner of Oppression, that ever was heard in the World: They are all now quartered in the Shire of Air, where my small Fortune for the most Part is.'

'All Men of Ingenuity, Virtue and Discretion, think it very strange, that when there's no Rebellion, or the least Shadow of an Insurrection, that one Part of the Kingdom should be let loose upon the other; but especially that a Multitude of Men should be brought into a civil Country, who have nothing to shew they are Men, but the external Figure; differing in Habit, Language, and Manners, from all Mankind. All this Country also are commanded to deliver up their Arms.'

'I am mightily troubled that I can never be so happy as to be lookt upon as one, who, by all imaginable Ties, would evidence my Readiness to his Majesty's Service: Whatever Characters may be given of me, I faithfully declare upon Honour and Conscience, I am resolved, in all Cases and Disputes of a publick Nature, to be only determined by the King's most excellent Judgment, and to deal very seriously with all my Friends and Relations, that they also may perform all Acts of Loyalty and Duty that can be expect by the best of Subjects to the best of Kings.'

'There is a Proclamation issued forth by the Council, whereby no Person dare go out of the Kingdom, without a Warrant from his Majesty or the Council. Your Grace may easily observe how difficult and unfit it were to move any thing to the Council; but if his Majesty, out of his princely Wisdom, and Love to Justice, which rules all his Actions, would call upon such a Person or Persons, who are known to be of just Principles, and very loyal Inclinations, I humbly conceive it might tend very much to the Satisfaction of the People, as well as to the Interest of his Majesty's Service.'

'I lay this with all Submission at your Grace's Feet, and humbly crave Pardon for giving you the Trouble of so long a Letter, which was only occasioned by the extraordinary State of Affairs here at present. Robert Macnaught will wait upon your Grace, and what Commands you shall think fit to lay upon me, shall have a very punctual Observance. I must only be a humble Suiter, that I may be always honoured with the Title of'

Your Grace's most faithful, most obedient,
and most humble Servant,

CASSILS.

When

When this Letter was writ, I cannot say precisely, but the Matter of it seemsto lead us to think it was before the Bond and Lawborrows were pressed; far less can I say any thing of the Return made to the Earl: This seems to have been sent exprefs with the Person named in it, and by the Return the Earl appears to have had Room to write again, as he narrated in his Case; and, when all Application to the Council was precluded by the Proclamation, in the Beginning of March, the Earl ventures up; and, being allowed, he gives in the following Paper, March 28th, which contains a short and distinct Account of what is above, Section 2^d.

1678.

Earl of Cassils's Case, March 28.

The Earl of Cassils being commanded by his Majesty, to deliver in Writing under his Hand the true State of his Case, it was as followeth.

THE Marquis of Athole, Barons of Mar, Murray, Perth, Cathness, Strathmore, and others, having been inpowered by his Majesty's Privy Council, to raise and convocate the Highlanders within their respective Bounds, as also their whole Vassals, and all others under their Command, and to march to any Place where the Council or Committee thereof should command them; and in their March they were ordered to take free Quarters, and were indemnified for what they should do, by killing, wounding, apprehending, or imprisoning such as should make any Opposition, or such as they should have any Reason to suspect; as by a Commission given to each of them from the Privy Council, dated the 26th of December last, does fully appear. This Commission from the Privy Council, in so far as the same doth order the taking of free Quarters, the Earl does humbly conceive to be expressly contrary to the 5th Act of his Majesty's first Parliament, wherein it is declared, That his Majesty's Subjects shall be free from Provision and Maintenance of any Armies and Garisons which shall be rais'd and kept in the Country.

The Earl of Strathmore and others being warranted by their Commission, to convocate the Militia in the Shire of Angus, and to march with them into the West Country upon free Quarters, this accordingly was done; notwithstanding, by the 25th Act of the 3^d Session of his Majesty's first Parliament, the Militia-forces are to be furnished with Forty Days Provision, from the Shires out of which they are raised, and the Country to be free of all other Charge for their Maintenance.

A Letter of the 3^d of January following, at the Command of the Privy Council, was sent by the Duke of Lawderdale to the Earl of Cassils, as Bailie Principal of Carrick, requiring him to attend the Committee of Council at Glasgow, the 26th of that Month, and to receive and obey the Orders of the Committee. In obedience to which he did attend at the Time and Place appointed.

The Lords of the Committee, by their Order at Glasgow, the 29th of January, commanded him, as Bailie Principal of Carrick, to receive from all Persons in whose Hands the Militia-arms were, the whole Militia-arms of the Bailyary, as Swords, Pistols, Holsters, &c. and all Heritors, Liferenters, and others, were to bring with them their Tenants, Cottars, and Servants, with their Arms of all Sorts, Musquets, Pistols, Swords, Pikes, Halberds, Lochaber-axes, Durks, and Whingers, to be delivered upon Oath to such as the Major-general should appoint, in the Presence of the Earl of Cassils or his Deputes; and whosoever should not give up their Arms upon Oath, should be quartered upon: An Account whereof he was to return at Air, the 7th of February following; which was done accordingly.

The Lords of the Committee of Air, by their Warrant of the 7th of February, did order and command the Earl of Cassils, to destroy and demolish the Meeting-houses within the Bailyary of Carrick, and to raze them to the Ground, or to destroy or burn them; and to make a strict and exact Enquiry into the Persons who built them, or had been Actors and Abettors thereof, and whose Ground they were built upon; all which he did accordingly, tho' the Lords would not allow him any of the standing Forces, nor the Gentlemen his Friends to go along armed to assist him.

But when he gave the Lords an Account that he had demolished and razed them to the Ground, they did, by a new Warrant under their Hands, command him to bring back the Timber of these Meeting-houses, to the same Place where they were built, and to cause cut it in Pieces, and there to burn the same to Ashes; which accordingly he caused do.

The Lords of the Committee, by their Letter from Air, of the 9th of February, did ordain the Earl of Cassils, to publish, with all Expedition, their Proclamation, at the Market-cross of Maybole, being the Head-burgh of that Bailyary, and upon the next Sabbath-day, at the several Parish-church-doors within the same; requiring and commanding all Heritors, Liferenters, and others, of the said Bailyary, to appear before the Lords at Air, the 22^d of February next following, to subscribe such Bonds as the Committee should appoint; which Proclamation was published accordingly.

K k k k k k 2

Yet;

‘ Yet, notwithstanding the Earl of Cassils had given ready and entire Obedience to all the Orders and Commands of the Committee, upon the 10th of February, that is, Twelve Days before they were commanded to appear, Fifteen hundred Men were sent upon free Quarter, into the Jurisdiction of Carrick, most of whom were quartered upon the Earl of Cassils’s Estate; whereby not only free Quarters, but dry Quarters, Plundring, and other Exactions, many Insolencies and Cruelties have been committed, too tedious and lamentable to report: Of all which Proceedings he gave an Account by Letters, unto his Grace the Duke of Monmouth.’

‘ Upon the 22^d of February, the Earl of Cassils, in obedience to the Proclamation, together with all the Heritors, Liferenters, and others, did appear at Air, and a Bond being tendered to him, to be subscribed, obliged him that his whole Family, Tenants, and Cottars, and their respective Families, should abstain from Conventicles, nor should reset, supply, or commune with forfeited Persons, intercommuned Ministers, vagrant Preachers, but should endeavour to apprehend them; and in case the Tenants and others should contravene, and be guilty, they were to be presented to the Judge Ordinary, or they were to be removed off the Ground; and if he should fail in any of these Particulars, he should be liable to the same Penalties the Delinquents had incurred. Which the Earl of Cassils denied to subscribe, conceiving, as the Bond was founded on no Law, so it was impossible for him to perform; and that such Practice was contrary to the Laws and Customs of all other Nations.’

‘ Whereupon a Libel was given in against him, at the Instance of his Majesty’s Advocate, charging him to appear the 23^d of February, before the Lords of the Committee, under the Pain of Rebellion, for being at Conventicles, and other Crimes of a very high Nature, and was to give his Oath upon the Verity of the Libel; who accordingly did appear, and upon Examination he did depone negatively, only, if there had been any Conventicles upon his Ground, or if his Tenants had been at them, he knew no further thereof than by Hearsay, he himself swearing he never saw any such Conventicles, nor any of his Tenants present at them.’

‘ At that Time also the Lords of the Committee did issue out another Proclamation, commanding all Noblemen, Heritors, and others, who would not subscribe the Bond, to sell off and dispose all their Horses which were above the Value of Four Pounds Sterling Price, before the 1st of March next ensuing; and in case any Horse above that Value, were found in any of their Possessions, after that Time, they should not only lose the Horse, but forfeit the Sum of One hundred Pounds Scots Money.’

‘ Immediately upon his Refusal to subscribe the Bond, notwithstanding that he had cleared himself by Oath, of all the Crimes laid to his Charge, the Lords appointed a Messenger to charge him with Letters of Lawborrows, to enact himself in the Books of Privy Council, That his Wife, Children, Men, Tenants, Cottars, and Servants, should not go to Conventicles and other disorderly Meetings, under the Pain and Penalty of double his valued yearly Rent; and in case of Failie, he was to be denounced Rebel within Six Days.’

‘ Upon which he wrote to the Lords of the Committee, to intreat their Lordships for a Week’s Continuance; but the Lords did refuse to grant him such a Favour: Whereupon he did immediately repair to Edinburgh, to attend the Privy Council, and to offer them all possible Satisfaction, according to Law. But upon his coming there, a Proclamation was issued forth, commanding all Noblemen, Heritors, and others of the West Country, to depart out of Edinburgh, within Three Days, to their own Houses; before which Time he was actually denounced Rebel at the Market-cross of Air, being the Head-burgh of the Shire, and Letters of Caption issued forth against him for apprehending his Person.’

‘ Wherefore, finding himself in so great a Strait, and his Case being brought to such an Extremity, and not knowing how to find a Remedy in Scotland, and being assured many of these Proceedings were illegal, and not warrantable, either by the Statutes or Customs of the Kingdom of Scotland, he thought it his Duty to repair to his sacred Majesty, as being the Fountain of Justice, and to whose Sentence and Determination he is content to submit his Life and Fortune; being assured in his own Conscience, that he has not, nor ever shall knowingly violate any of his Majesty’s Laws or Commands.’

‘ And therefore humbly implores his Majesty may be pleased to consider his Case, and to examine how far these Proceedings against him and his Tenants, and the Usage he hath met with from the Insolence of the Highlanders and others, are warranted by Law and Customs of the Kingdom of Scotland.’

May it please your sacred Majesty,

THe firm Assurance we had that your Majesty would not weaken your Authority in your Judicatories here, and especially in your Privy Council, where your sacred Person is more eminently represented, and to whom the Care of your Royal Government here is committed in a most special Manner, did not lessen the great Satisfaction we received from your Majesty's Letter of the 26th of March last, nor can we forbear to express our thankful Acknowledgments upon the Receipt thereof; and tho' it doth fully secure us against all Jealousies, that could arise from any Application that any factious Persons may make to you against us your faithful Servants; yet being desirous to owe this Favour to your Majesty's Justice as well as Goodness, and to let your Majesty know that we have not misemployed that Power with which your Majesty hath intrusted us, we resolved to satisfy your Majesty as to a Paper signed by the Earl of Cassils, and whereof your Majesty was pleased graciously to transmit a Copy, which hath been shown to us, and in which we justly thought our selves concerned.

Letter to the King.

Whereas the Earl represents, that we granted Commissions to the Marquis of Arhole and others, to take free Quarter, and that they did accordingly take the same, contrary to the 5th Act of your Majesty's first Parliament: We humbly conceive that your Majesty had just Reason to look on his Jurisdiction of Carrick, and some other western Shires, as in a State of Rebellion, since Field-conventicles are by your Laws declared to be Rendezvous of Rebellion; and that these were so increasing, that there were far more armed Men assembled in them almost weekly, than could be repressed by almost thrice the Number of your standing Forces; so that we behoved either to suffer your Majesty and the Peace of our native Country, to depend upon the Discretion of such vagrant and distracted Multitudes, or else take Care to pluck up with one Expence, what grew so fast, that their Masters, and all who were sober, did with us apprehend from them the most fatal Events: And yet we invited the Commissioners of Excise, Justices of the Peace, and your Officers, and that Earl, among others, to concur in suppressing them; which they returned to be impossible for them, the Distempers having run so high, and being so universal, as they pretended, that your Majesty could not secure the Country, without the granting a new and universal Indulgence, which, as it would have actually dissolved the present Government, so would have encouraged those who had succeeded in this rebellious Attempt, to proceed by new ones to wring the Government piece and piece out of your Majesty's Hands, as those of less wicked Principles had done by the same Means, under your Royal Father: And therefore we conceived our selves necessarily obliged, by your Royal Letter of December 11th, to employ such as offered their Service in this dangerous Exigent; nor can we understand what is a State of Rebellion, if frequent Rendezvous of Rebellion, grown above Correction, be not; or how those should complain in this Case, who were themselves guilty of suffering these to grow incorrigible, without ever using any Endeavours to repress them, tho' invested with your Authority, as Sheriffs and Bailies, which Offices oblige such as are intrusted with them, to an utmost and exact Diligence in suppressing all Disorders, and allow them to raise all within their Jurisdiction, for securing the Peace; and they being so stated, we conceive that it is your Majesty's Prerogative and our Happiness, that such Forces as you employ for the Safety of your Crown and us, should be maintained by such as occasion those Confusions. This hath always been done in all the Expeditions made by your Royal Ancestors for repressing such intestine Disorders, and was never challenged till now; and without this we were in no Security, since our Country cannot afford such standing Forces, nor so much ready Cash as may repress such Rebellions; and if we wait till your Enemies be armed, all Remedies will then be useless, and the 3^d Act, Parl. 2^d, James II. gives Power to raise the Country, if there be violent Presumption of Rebellion, and spoiling the Country by unreasonable and unruly Men: But how many were and continued so armed, constantly as Guards to declared Traitors? and we could willingly be informed, how without this Method, this Kingdom can be secured. Nor is this contrary to the 5th Act of your Majesty's first Parliament, which can never relate to a State of Rebellion, but only to regular Times, Payment to such as are in Rebellion being due by no Law or Sense, nor possible for such a Cash as yours here, when many Forces are to be raised; and the 25th Act of the 3^d Session of your 3^d Parliament, is so far from restricting your Royal Power in this Point, that by it your Parliament make a humble Tender to your Majesty of their Lives and Fortunes, for the promoting of your Majesty's Service, and the Advancement of your Royal Authority, and declare they grant the said Militia to you for compassing any foreign or intestine Trouble or Insurrection, and give full Power to your Council to make this Offer effectual, according to the Instructions and Commands they shall receive from your Majesty. These being the very Words of the Act of Parliament, we leave it to your Majesty to judge whether, ther, in Times and Shires wherein there were such Trouble, and constant Rendevouzes of Rebellion, as they acknowledge were above their Correction, the Law did not impower your Majesty and us, by your expresse Command, dated December 11th, to quarter these Forces in these Shires. Nor can we understand what the Tender of our Lives and Fortunes, and the effectual Prosecution remitted to the Council, can import, if it do not import, that after your Majesty and your Council have used all Means to suppress Troubles and Rebellions in an orderly way, you may not raise Forces, and quarter them freely in such turbulent Places. And as the said Act offers you the Assistance of our Fortunes, whereof some few Nights free Quarters is but a very mean Part, in Cases of Trouble, as well as formal Insurrections, so it offers the same wherever your Authority and Government is any ways concerned. And we leave it to any reasonable Man to judge, if your Authority and Government was not highly concerned, where such constant Rendevouzes of Rebellion were kept by declared Traitors, with such Numbers of armed Men; their Numbers and Contempt growing daily, and your ordinary Officers declaring that the same was above their Correction. But of this our Procedure none can complain who deserved the Protection of your Laws, since by living peaceably and securing their own Shires, they might evite the Danger.

But yet our Orders are falsly represented; for we only gave Orders to take free Quarter, as your Council and Committee should order, and that your Council has given Order, is denied, so that as yet there is no free Quarter, tho' these Shires be the first Advancers; and which, as it is necessary where there is no sufficient Fund for Payment, so they who advance cannot complain, if they be innocent, as we conceive the Earl is not, having neglected to dissipate those Conventicles, being your Majesty's heritable Bailie, having suffered Meeting-houses to be built without any Opposition, in a Country where he hath so many Friends, so much Following, and so great Jurisdiction, and having now contemned your Proclamation, and accused your Privy Council for supplying what was his Duty. And tho' every Man in that Shire was somewhat guilty, in not having opposed these Insolencies, and that the Shire in general is all that ought to be considered in such Cases, where their Representatives were called, and refused to concur, yet to the end that none should suffer but such as should continue guilty, it was offered by your Council, that only such as should refuse to secure the Peace should be quartered upon; and accordingly Protections were granted to all such who secured the Peace, so that no Man suffered without his own Fault, nor was any Quarter taken without present Payment, except in Cases of Necessity, your Majesty's own Guards being constantly paid, and your Militia having been paid as long as their Allowance lasted. And we may justly expect, that your People will think we would not introduce any Thing wherein our Posterity might suffer, more than those who complain now do, without being forced thereunto by the Incurribleness of Offenders, as well as warranted therein by your Majesty's Laws, by which we shall be careful to judge your People, and that no Innocent may suffer.

Whereas it is represented, that a Bond was pressed without Law, it is humbly asserted, that the Bond was only offered, but not pressed; and we conceive many Things are allowed in Matter of Government, for which there is no expresse Law, there being new Emergents daily, which Parliaments could not foresee, and which are so sudden or mean, that they cannot attend, nor do they require Parliaments: But it has been ever believed, that your Majesty and Council might do every Thing in Matters of State, which in Prudence might secure the Peace of the Country, providing it be not against expresse Laws, (which this Bond cannot, nor is not by this Paper said to be) but especially where what they do is warranted by the former Precedents, as the offering Bonds has been formerly done by some who now refuse this Bond, as appears by Acts of Council sent up to your Majesty, with their Subscriptions; so we conceive, that by the Law of this and all other Nations, the State may crave Security from those who have given less Reason of Jealousie.

And as to the legal Security by Lawborrows, it is expressly warranted by 129th Act, Parl. 9th, James I. And universal Lawborrows are warranted by Act 13th, Parl. 6th, James II. And tho' in private Cases the ordinary Pains are inconsiderable, because in ordinary Cases the taking such Surety is remitted even to a Justice of the Peace; yet your Majesty's Privy Council and Justice Court have never been restricted to any Sum, as is clear by very many Instances; and this is most just, because in extraordinary Cases the Security should be commensurate to the Danger, otherwise it is no Security at all: And who can assert that Two Years valued Rent, which generally exceeds not one Year's real Rent, is too great a Sum for the Security of the King and Kingdom, especially since it is in every Man's Power not to contravene; and if they contravene not, they pay none; and if they trouble the Peace of the Kingdom, they cannot pay too much.

The former Reasons likewise do justify the disarming of the Shires, and craving Security for every Horse above Fifty Pounds Scots, these being still accounted among the Arms and Instruments of War. And the Strength of the frequent Insurrections made by those Shires against Royal Authority, having been found to consist in their Horses; and by the Act cited in in this very Paper, War, and all relating thereunto, is in your Majesty's Power; and this hath been done constantly in Council, and assented to cheerfully by such as are now discontent, because the same is done by us.' 1678.

'The other Particulars relating to free Quarter, the demolishing of these Meeting-houses, and the Insolencies charged only in general Terms by that Paper, are fully answered by the Committee of your Majesty's Council.'

'And upon a full Review of both Papers, it is humbly intreated, your Majesty may be pleased to take such Course, as may discourage such as have opened a new Way of constant Trouble to your Majesty, of constant reproaching your Council and Judicatories, and of inflaming and misinforming the Parliaments and Subjects of your other Kingdoms.'

'Upon which account it is humbly craved from your Majesty's Justice, that the Earl of Cassils, who hath contemned your Proclamation, and charged your Privy Council with Crimes of so high a Nature, may be sent down Prisoner, to be tried and judged according to Law; of which Pursuit your Majesty shall be fully acquainted before it come to a final Determination, which we conceive in this and all other Cases to be the Duty of'

Most gracious Sovereign,

Whether the Earl of Cassils had Allowance to answer this Letter, I know not, but if he had, it was no difficult Task. It is indeed smoothly enough drawn, and contains all that can well be said in defence of so black a Step; but the Foundations upon which the reasoning Part of it leans, have been overturned in the former Part of this History; and any thing like Argument in it, runs upon Mistakes and perfect Stretches. It is well known, there was as little Rebellion at Field-conventicles as in the Churches; and the Managers first give these Meetings Names, and then reason upon those Names as Law and Fact, and find the West Country in a State of Rebellion, because in their Conscience they have no Freedom to engage to bear down these Meetings, which there is no question the Heritors could have done, if they had had Freedom to do it, and had not been convinced other Methods would be more for the King's Interest. Remarks upon it

I cannot pass the Letter without remarking further, That as their Reasonings are ill founded, so they advance Facts which all the Country knew to be otherwise: For Instance, That weekly there were more armed Men at Conventicles in the West, than Three Times the Number of the King's standing Forces could repress. People who were at these Meetings smile at this Bugbear the Managers and Prelates, from Conscience of Guilt, form to themselves. Till some Years after this, there were very few armed at Conventicles. Mr. Welsh indeed, and a few others who were intercommuned, had Arms with them, but their Numbers were very insignificant: And what a mean Shift, not to call it Juggling with the King, is it to tell him, That the Council had not ordered free Quarter, but only the Committee, who acted by their Power, and that the Exactions mentioned, were only advanced first by the Shire of Air. Were they ever repaid? or was there ever a Design to repay them? Another palpable Untruth is, That free Quarters were only upon Refusers of the Bond, when 'tis known that the Highlanders came many Days before the Time of taking the Bond, and free Quarters were allowed on Cunninghead's Lands, and others who cannot be reckoned Refusers. And what a Jest is it to tell the King, that the Bond was offered, but not pressed! If the sending in an Army, and charging with Lawborrows, and putting to the Horn, was not Pressing, I know not what is. But I am ashamed to insist upon such evident Misrepresentations.

With this Letter an Information by the Committee of their Procedure is sent up to the King. There were a good many of them now come to Edinburgh from Glasgow with it, and it follows.

1678. A true Information of the Committee of his Majesty's Council, met in the West, their Procedure against the Earl of Cassils. Glasgow, April 3^d, 1678.

Committee's Account of their own Procedure against the Earl of Cassils.

THE Lords of the Committee, in pursuance of their Instructions, and the Trust committed to them, having proceeded with all possible Tenderneſs and Equality againſt all Persons convened before them, do admire the Injuſtice the Earl of Cassils has done himſelf and them, by miſrepreſenting them and their Procedure, as appears by the Double of a Paper, the Principal whereof, the Committee are informed, the Earl did ſign, and addreſs to his Maſteſty; which obliges them to give the following Account of Matter of Fact.

As to the Commiſſion mentioned, given to ſome Noblemen and others, the Earl miſinforms concerning the Commiſſion given to the Earl of Strathmore; for he had no ſuch Commiſſion for bringing out any of the Highlanders, having none under his Command.

As to the Earl his coming to Glaſgow, to receive the Committee of Council their Commands, and for diſarming the Bailiary of Carrick, it was a Duty lying upon, and which others in that Country, who had Juriſdiction under his Maſteſty, performed as well as he: And the Certification complained of, is conform to his Maſteſty's Letter to the Council, December 11th, upon which the Council's Inſtructions to the Committee were formed, and which were approved and ſigned by his Maſteſty.

The Committee having, with much Lenity and Reſpect, treated the Earl, in requiring him to throw down the Meeting-houſes in Carrick, which they might very eaſily have done by the King's Forces which were there, but they judged it more for the Earl's Intereſt, and the Preſervation of his Rights and Privileges of Juriſdiction, and that he might appear active in that Charge he hath from his Maſteſty, that it ſhould be done rather by himſelf. But the Circumſtances of his Carriage and Deportment in that Affair, is our Duty to repreſent; which was as follows.

When firſt the Committee called for him, and held forth how neglective he had been in the Diſcharge of his Trust committed to him by his Maſteſty, in ſuffering Meeting-houſes to be built, and ſo to continue within his Juriſdiction, and that he was ſo remiſs in his Duty, as never to give the Council Notice of it; yet the Committee did then require him to concern himſelf in that Affair, and to go and deſtroy theſe Houſes, which he poſitively reſuſed to do: But after many Arguments that were uſed to perſwade him of his Duty, and ſome of the Members of the Committee were diſpenſed with in private to adviſe him thereunto, he at laſt was moved to accept of the Committee's written Order, but with this expreſs Proviſion, that his Acceptance thereof ſhould not oblige him to Performance, if he ſhould meet with any Oppoſition or Reſiſtance; which the Committee, regarding his Credit, deſigned to have concealed, and did not allow the ſame to be recorded. Nor was the Demoliſhing of theſe Meeting-houſes performed by him; but the Country-people, hearing it was ordered by the Committee, knew well it would be done however, and ſo prevented the Earl, and demoliſhed the ſame. And whereas the Earl pretends, That the Committee would not allow him to take along with him the Gentlemen of the Country in their Arms to aſſiſt him, it is repreſented, that the laſt Day for diſarming that Part of the Country, was within a Day of the Time that he was to report the Account of his Diligence; but he had Nine Days Time from the Date of the Order, before the laſt Day of the diſarming, in which he might have very well done it, before his Friends were diſarmed: And albeit he was appointed to return and give an Account of his Diligence, againſt a certain Day, yet ſo little did he regard the Committee's Commands, that for Three Days thereafter there was no Word of him or from him. And at length there came in an unſubſcribed Paper, bearing an imperfect Account; ſo that the Committee rejected the ſame, as no Report: And hearing that a great Part of the Timber was carried away to private Places, the Committee ordained the Earl to cauſe bring back the ſame, and to burn it to Aſhes; which how ſoon the Country-people underſtood, they thought fit to prevent the Earl of returning the Timber, and burning the ſame; which the Earl at laſt reported to the Committee as done. By all which it appears with what Reluctancy and Averſion he performed this Service.

As for the Earl's cauſing publiſh the Council's Proclamation, at the Market-croſs of that Bailiary, and Pariſh-churches, it is a Service in courſe, always performed by all inferior Magiſtrates in the Kingdom; and albeit his Lordſhip be the moſt conſiderable Perſon in that Country, he gave the leaſt Obedience to the ſaid Proclamation, whereby he gave ill Example to others in the Bounds.

As for the free Quarter and Plunder the Earl complains of, committed on his Lands by Fifteen hundred Men, the Committee denies their Knowledge thereof, much leſs their Accession to any such Thing. Nor was there any Complaint made thereof to them, nor to the Major-general, nor, for any thing they can learn, to any inferior Officer: But the Committee being well informed, that the Inhabitants of these Lands have of late fallen off from being loyal and well affected, to be most disaffected, and the Encouragers and Entertainers of Mr. John Welsh, and other outlawed Preachers, of any Part in the West, did oblige them, for the Peace of that Country, to send a considerable Number of Forces thither, they having just Reason to suspect that Country, as in a State of Rebellion; in which Case Forces and their Entertainment are necessary and unavoidable.

ceſſion

We cannot but take Notice in that Paper of the Earl's relating to the Proclamation, discharging those who refused to take the Bond, of keeping Horses above the Value of Four Pounds Sterling, and of the Penalty to be a Hundred Pounds Scots, how ready he is, if he had any Ground, to make the Committee appear unequal, by making such a seeming Disproportion in the Calculation of the Horse's Price in English Money, and the Penalty in Scots Money: Nor does he relate truly the restricted Value of the Horse, conform to the Proclamation.

Albeit the Earl did purge himself by Oath, of such Delinquencies as he was charged with in Times past, relating to himself and his own Family, yet that laid no Restraint on the Committee, but that they, in obedience to his Majesty's Commands, might require the same legal Security of him, by way of Lawborrows, which they had done of all the Heritors in that Country.

The Committee does absolutely deny, that the Earl did ever write to them any such Letter as he mentions; and albeit he had, it had been most unfit for the Committee to have granted any such Desire, in respect it would have been a bad Preparative, and not agreeable to their Instructions.

The Earl does not inform right concerning the Caption alledged issued out against him; for there was never any Order to apprehend his Person, nor was it intended by the Committee; so that the Strait he pretends to have been in, was altogether his own groundless Apprehension; and the Committee do humbly desire his Majesty may take notice how the Earl does calumniate and reproach them, as if their Proceedings were illegal and unlawful, which they humbly conceive is a Crime of a very high Nature for any private Subject to attempt, which they, in all Humility, subject to his Majesty's Consideration.

This Representation hath nothing in it that needs Reflections. As to the Differences 'twixt the Earl and them in Matter of Fact, I am not to determine which of them are right, but very little of Importance depends on that. We shall just now find, that the Earl's Representations, and the Application of others, had that Weight at London, that a Stop is put to the Lawborrows, and new Methods are gone into.

We have already heard, that the Earl of Murray and Lord Collington were sent up to Court, upon the going up of Duke Hamilton and others; but besides this, the Managers thought fit to publish and print a Paper, entituled, A true Narrative of the Proceedings of his Majesty's Privy Council in Scotland, for securing the Peace of that Kingdom, in the Year 1678. Which, that the Admirers of the Violences of this Time may have no Reason to complain of Partiality, I have annexed, App. No. 91. In the Council-register, April 10th, they give Order to print this Paper by their Authority. This Narrative appears evidently to have been writ in Haste, and the Council, in their own Papers above set down, say more in their own Defence than this doth. Abundance of Reflections might be made upon all the Branches of it; but the Reader will find Matter enough from the plain Facts set down in this History, to obviate all that is there. However, as a more direct Answer to it, I have likewise inserted, App. No. 92. a Letter to a Friend, writ at this Time upon the Receipt of the true Narrative, which abundantly exposes that Paper, and so I say no more of it, but come forward to give some further Account of the Application made to the King, upon the back of this Highland Incurfion upon the West.

Narrative of the Council's Proceedings printed by Authority.

App. No. 91.

Letter to a Friend upon it. App. No. 92.

Our Managers highly blamed the Noblemen and Gentlemen in the West Country, who had made a Stand against the Bond, racked with so many savage Arguments, and laid all the Blame of the Obstinacy of the meaner Sort upon them, and began to entertain Thoughts of prosecuting some of them with the utmost Severity. Upon the other Hand, the Barbarity of this Experiment of the Highland Host, with the Fears of further arbitrary Steps, sowed the Spirits even of many who were indifferent as to Church-government: Not only did the poor harassed Presbyterians grope under this inhumane Treatment, but even a great many who had been active enough in establishing of Episcopacy, and had taken the Declaration, and given all Proofs now required of their Loyalty, grumbled exceedingly; and they began to entertain Thoughts once more of trying what Pity the King would exercise towards his poor harassed Subjects.

The Spirits of many are sowed, and the King is applied to.

Accordingly,

1678.

Duke Hamilton and others go to Court in March.

Accordingly, towards the End of March, Duke Hamilton, and about a Dozen of others, went up to London. Roxburgh, Haddingtoun, Lieutenant-general Drummond, and many others, joynd the Duke in this Matter, and a good Number of the most considerable of the Gentlemen in the West and South. The Managers at Edinburgh pretended to ridicule them, and assured their Friends they would get no Access at all there; and alledged, that since their Grievances had never been once offered to the Council here, the King would certainly refuse to look upon them. However, their going off without asking Leave, was not a little surprising and unexpected to them. Sir George Lockhart was going up about his Affairs, and having then no Land-estate, and not being an Heritor, those Circumstances made him not comprehended in the Proclamation discharging Persons not to leave the Kingdom without Allowance. Great Pains were used to prevail with Sir George to ask a Licence, but he, for the Reason above, would not so far gratify them.

Marquis of Athole and Earl of Perth joynt
them.

But the Two Persons who were most noticed in this Application that was made for the Redress of Grievances, were the Marquis of Athole and the Earl of Perth, who had been Officers in the Army who invaded the West, but still moderate in their Management. How it came that they changed Sides, I shall not say: It is a charitable Construction put upon it, that when they came to the West Country, and observed the peaceable Carriage of Presbyterians, and had Occasion to converse with the Noblemen and others of good Sense, and found how Matters stood, they could not any more be active in the Severities, which were without any Colour of Reason used against them.

Letter from the Bishop of Galloway to the Lord Register, complaining of Conventicles,
and the Countenance given them by the Marquis of Athole and Earl of Perth.

Whatever was in this, I find, that when they returned, they were so displeased with the Violence of the Prelates, that they were alledged to countenance Conventicles, which at the Return of the Year began to be set up in such Parts of the Nation, that were not immediately under the Terror of the Army. Of this I find the Bishop of Galloway complaining heavily, in a Letter to the Lord Register this Year: My Copy of it wants the particular Date, but I suppose it has been before they went up to Court, and I insert it here.

My Lord,

‘ Since my Return from the North, I am surpris’d to hear of the great and insolent Field-conventicles in Perth Shire, it being as much influenced by the Marquis of Athole’s Example, as directed by his Authority. There is, beside many others, a constant Field-conventicle now settled in the Confines of some Parishes, viz. Methven, Gask, Tippermuir, and another, where it is marvelled, that many observe several Shoals of Highlanders in their Trews, and many bare-legged, flocking thither to propagate the Mischief of the good old Cause. It is to good Men no small Discouragement, that a Shire under the Influence and Conduct of the Marquis of Athole and the Earl of Perth, who say they are true Sons of the Church, should (being formerly orderly and obedient to the Laws) become so turbulent and schismatical; especially since the Marquis is Sheriff-principal, and that one altogether devoted to his Lordship is Sheriff-depute of that Shire, in whose Hands is placed the Power to punish and suppress those Disorders.’

‘ I write this, being informed of the State of the Shire by a most serious, godly and knowing Minister, that my Lord M. may know it, and the rather that it comes from such a Minister, as is a great Honour of his noble Family.’

‘ Many Questions are hereupon proposed, which I am not able to answer, (as I gladly would) which insinuate all the Blame of those Disorders and Disturbances to be upon the Marquis and Earl foresaid, but especially upon the former; such as 1st. How comes this Change on a sudden, that the most orderly and obedient Shire should become so irregular and turbulent? 2^{do}. Whence is it, that the Marquis of Athole and Earl of Perth, so long as they kept Friendship with the Duke of Lawderdale, and consequently clave to their Duty to the King, that Shire, under their Power and Influence, continued in Order and Obedience; and now since they parted from his Grace, that it is fallen into these Disorders, which are so destructive to Monarchy, as well as to Religion and the Church? 3^{do}. Whether there be not a deeper Design in corrupting Perth Shire, than many are aware of, that Shire being the Key to open the Door to all Manner of Mutinies and Disorders into the Northern Parts of Scotland, which is yet almost untainted, yea, and unacquainted with these ill Humours and Disorders that infest and threaten the Peace of the Kingdom? 4^{do}. Whether this discontented Party have not so far prevailed upon the Marquis of Athole, and Earl of Perth, as to engage their Lordships to give Way to these Outbreakings and Insolencies, to suffer the other Half of the Kingdom (which is yet intire almost) to be embroiled and debauched? thereby their Lordships may in the Issue be as much endangered as the King and Kingdom. 5^{do}. Whether all those Pretences can in any tolerable Sense be reconciled to the Principles of these noble Persons, who profess not only a Kindness for our poor desolate Church, to repair the Ruines thereof, but a Zeal for the famous and well composed Church of England; or, if these Professions be not industriously made, the more effectually under Trust to ruine the Interest of the Protestant Religion in both Churches?’

‘ For

For my Part I am not able to answer these shrewd Questions, when put to it. My good Lord, I freely allow your Lordship to shew my Lord Marquis this Letter, and shew him I have so much Zeal for the King's Service, the Interest of Religion and the Church, and so much Honour for his Lordship, that I could not conceal this from him, nor from your Lordship, who, I know, wishes both his Person and Family both Honour and Happiness, he keeping his Duty to his Prince and his Prince's faithful Ministers: Yea, the rather I do it now, that by the same honest Minister I learn, that the Phanatick People openly say in that Shire, that they expect Connivance from the Marquis of Athole and Earl of Perth; and that Mr. Harry Murray, when charged with Neglect in not punishing these Disorders, invidiously blamed the Privy Council, who, I am sure, never denied Assistance and Encouragement to Sheriff Principal or Deputes, for suppressing of these mad Disorders.

I beg Pardon for this long Letter, which my Zeal for the Church hath drawn from me, to which I add nothing, but that I am,

My Lord,

Your, &c.

This Letter, tho' writ with Art enough, if communicate, did not hinder these Two Noblemen from appearing with others for the Liberties of their Country, and accordingly they went up to London. I am informed, that when they, with their Servants, and some Gentlemen, were upon their Road in Annandale, they lost their Way; and it being late, the Two Noblemen were obliged to shelter in a Cottage in that Country. The People having heard somewhat of their Errand in going up, were extremely kind to them, wishing them heartily Success. When they could not get in their Horses under Lock and Key, or perhaps to any House, the Noblemen appeared concerned for them, lest they should be stolen, having heard Annandale spoken of for stealing of Horses; but the Country-people told them they were in no Hazard, there was now no thieving among them, since the Field-preachings came into that Country, and talked of many other Branches of Reformation wrought by Mr. Welsh, and other Preachers among them.

When they go up to London they find a great Reformation in Annandale by Field-preaching.

We have heard, that as soon as the Council got Notice of the Duke of Hamilton and others their being gone off, they sent up the Earl of Murray and Lord Collingtown to the King, to counter them; and we have had the Letter writ with those. Nothing further offers until the 19th of April, when an Express came down from London to the Council, who were called at Eight in the Morning; and from a Letter writ that Week from Edinburgh, by a good Hand, I find, that they sat close until Four in the Afternoon. I have noticed nothing in the Registers of this Day's Date, but the Letter to the Earl of Murray and Lord Collingtown, upon the King's Letter and Commands to the Council, bearing, 'That he had considered some Representations made by some of his Subjects, anent the late Methods with the West Country, with the Answers made thereunto, and Replies, which so fortified the Representations, that he resolved to hear and consider Things fully; and in the mean time commanded that the Bond and Lawborrows be suspended till his further Pleasure be sent, and that all the Forces, except his own Guards, be immediately disbanded.' This Letter was very surprising, when by their last they had desired, and no doubt some of them hoped, that the Earl of Cassils should be sent down Prisoner. That same Day it was said at Edinburgh, that the King had appointed Six of the Cabin-council at London, to confer with our Nobility that were gone up, the Dukes of York, Monmouth, Chancellor, and Three others.

Letter from the King, suspending the Bond and Lawborrows.

Upon the Receipt of this, the Council dispatched Sir George Mackenzie to London, and with him they write the following Letter to the Earl of Murray and Lord Collingtown, whom they had before sent up to manage their Business.

Whereupon Sir George Mackenzie is sent up to Court, with

My Lords,

WE received your Lordships Letter, signifying to us his sacred Majesty's Commands, which, with all others that shall come from him, shall ever be obeyed by us with all Alacrity and Satisfaction, being bound not only in Duty to be exemplary to others, in an entire Deference to our Royal Master, but in Gratitude to his Majesty, who does so wisely and generously own us in maintaining his own Authority.

You know how much all were inclined to give the Council ready Obedience, till these Noblemen interested themselves in this Phanatical Quarrel; how ready all were to concur in assisting his Majesty, both with their own Tenants and Militia; and, which is very remarkable, how ready the Gentry and Heritors in every Shire were to rise, betwixt Sixty and Sixteen; which, in shewing how all Ways were taken and owned for assisting the Royal Authority, did strike a just Terror in all those who were refractory: Whereas now the Numbers and Humourousness of those who are gone up, has done all they could to shake loose all the Foundations of Authority here, to such a Height as will soon grow above Correction, if it be not speedily, vigorously, and openly adverted to by his Majesty.

As to the present Condition of his Majesty's Forces in the West, we had resolved to have

A Letter from the Council to the Earl of Murray and Lord Collingtown.

‘ speedily ended that Progress, if the Letters sent us, had not assured us, that the Shire of Lanerk was not disarmed upon Oath, as the Council and their Committee commanded, and as the other Shires had been : Whereupon we were forced to order a new disarming thereof, whereof we expect an Account very shortly.’

‘ The Shire of Nidsdale were at first very ready to have complied ; but of late it seems they are influenced by strong and false Alarms from London, so far as they offered a Petition, desiring to be excused from bringing out their Militia : But we seeing that this tended to ruine the whole Frame of the Militia, commanded them to march to Lanerk, to relieve the Midlothian Regiment, who have, as the other Forces, till now staid very cheerfully. And thus there is only one Regiment to continue in Arms, with his Majesty’s Guards and Troop, till that Shire be fully disarmed, and no longer, unless some new Emergent occur ; of which these complaining Lords can make juster Prognosticks than we.’

‘ We never raised nor resolved to raise any Summons against such as contemned his Majesty’s Proclamation, having, according to our Duty, remitted that whole Affair to his Majesty’s Royal Determination, and which we expect may settle his Authority, and discourage others from the like Attempts to be made, whenever any discontented Persons see that his Majesty is like to prevail in securing the Peace here, and is engaged in a foreign War Abroad.’

‘ We are very well satisfied with the Diligence, Faithfulness, and Prudence which you have shown on all Occasions, in managing our common Concerns ; and in which we expect you will continue your Kindness to us.’

‘ We have sent his Majesty’s Advocate to attend his Majesty, and joyn with you, and give his Majesty Satisfaction in any thing that may occur. This we desire you may represent to his Majesty, whose Royal Pleasure in this Affair, and what we formerly represented, where- in his Authority is so much concerned, is expected, and shall be cheerfully obeyed by’

Edin. April 19th, 1678.

Your affectionate Friends, &c.

Sir John Cuning-gham and Sir George Lockhart
go to London.

Upon the 22^d, Sir John Cuninggham went up to London; and Sir George Lockhart, as we heard, was gone up ; and these Two had not refused the Bond, yet they were clear to give it as their Mind, that the imposing of it and the Lawborrows was contrary to Law ; and the Sentiments of such eminent Lawiers could not but have Weight at London.

Lord Haltoun goes West to the Committee
at Glasgow, and they dissolve, and Lanerk Shire is not disarmed.

According to these Orders, I find by other Accounts of this Time, that the Regiment of Blue-coats, and the Nidsdale Regiment, which was come the Length of Lanerk, were disbanded. My Lord Haltoun came West to the Committee at Glasgow, and gave the Lords the first Account of this sudden Turn, assuring them of the King’s Favour, and his owning their Proceedings. He acquainted them that the King’s Affairs in England, where the Militia made a mighty Noise, made a present disbanding of them necessary, and it convenient to discharge the pressing of the Bond. However, this effectually stopt the disarming of Lanerk Shire any further, and few or none appeared before the Sheriff-depute, with others appointed, either to depone or to deliver their Arms. And in a Day or Two, as we have heard, the Committee was called in to Edinburgh.

Garison at Air recalled : the Council give their Opinion as to the Necessity of raising new Forces.

Little more offers but what past at London, till the Convention sat down. Upon the 10th of May, the Garison left at Air, to gratify the Clergy of that Shire, is recalled by the Council. Upon the 14th, the King’s Letter comes to the Council, appointing them to raise some new Forces, and ordering them to give their Sentiments of the Numbers necessary. That same Day, they, in their Return to the King, take Notice of the Growth of Conventicles, and that the raising of new Forces appears to them the best Way to suppress them, and propose Two Troops of Horse, at a Hundred Men each, to be levied ; and the Support of these necessarily called for Money, and a Convention of Estates behoved to be called for that end, as we shall hear.

The Advocate softens some who were brisk on the Noblemens
Side at London.

I cannot give a full and distinct Account how Matters past in England. The Struggle ’twixt the Two Parties was not small, and the Advocate, when he got up, by the Turns he gave to Matters, softened the Duke of Monmouth and some other English People. Various were the Reports here as to what past at London, which I stay not upon.

May 25. Duke Hamilton and some others are heard before the King.

At length, after long Attendance, and the most Part of the Gentlemen were come off without getting Access to the King, upon the 25th of May, Duke Hamilton and some others were admitted to a Hearing before the King, an Account of which I shall give from a Letter in mine Eye, writ at this Time by one present, as the best View I can afford of this Matter to the Reader.

What past at that Reasoning.

‘ Upon the 25th of May, the King commanded the Duke of Hamilton, Lord Cochran, Sir John Cochran, and Lieutenant-general Drummond, to attend upon him at Four of the Clock, when they appeared. The King, being accompanied with the Duke of York, Duke of Monmouth, and the Treasurer, desired to know what they had to say, why they had come to him contrary to his Proclamation. The Duke of Hamilton spoke first, and said, ‘ He

He humbly begged to know the Reason why he had got some Marks of his Majesty's Displeasure, particularly, that he had been put off his Majesty's Council, and that since he came here, (London) he had not the common Privilege of Subjects, not being admitted to kiss his Majesty's Hand. The King replied, He would first know what were the Things they had to complain of, and he would take his own Time to answer his first Request. The Duke said, The chief Encouragement he had to come and make known his Oppression, was that which the King said to him when last here, which was, That when he was any way wronged, he should come to himself and make it known; and that now he could not but come, since he and others were so much wronged. And then there was an Account given of the whole Affair, of the bringing down of the Highlanders, of quartering, plundering our Lands, of having a Bond offered which was both illegal and impracticable, of being charged with Lawborrowers, and being denounced thereupon, and of the Proclamation forbidding us to acquaint the King with our Condition. All these were particularly insisted upon at great Length. To which the King returned, That these were horrid Things, and desired we might set them down in Paper. The Treasurer said, That whatever was in these free Quarterings, and in the rest, they might have been prevented by taking of the Bond, which he conceived there was Law for the imposing of, and might be very well kept; for there was Two Alternatives in the Bond, to wit, either to deliver them Prisoners, or to put them from their Land. To which it was replied, That there was no Law obliging Masters to apprehend their Tenants; and the farthest the Act of Parliament went, was, in the Year 1670. to oblige Masters for their Families and Servants. 2^{dly}. That Masters could not be obliged to turn their Tenants out of their Land, in regard that the Punishment for going to a Conventicle was statute already, to be a Fine much less in Proportion, than the turning them out of their Possessions; besides, most Part of the Tenants have Tacks, by which, during their Time, they had good Right to their Possessions, and could not, by their Masters, be turned out for a Crime that by the Law was only finable, and had no such Certification, as losing their Possessions.

The Conference having held Two Hours, there was a great deal said to and fro, and the King fully and freely informed. The Conclusion of the Debate was, The King told us he could not judge of what we had said, unless we would give it under our Hands, that he might consult thereanent with his Council, and know what they had to say for themselves, and could advise him to. It was answered, That we came to his Majesty, to give an Information of what Wrongs and Oppressions were done to the Country, hoping his Majesty would examine and redress them, but not to give in any Accusation against the Council, which we knew by Law was very dangerous, unless his Majesty would indemnify for it. Which the King refusing to do, they told they could insist no further, but leave it to him to do as he thought fit. The King offered to go out of the Room, and Duke Hamilton kneeling, begged the Favour of his Hand; but his Majesty declined it, and said, He would consider upon, and give an Answer to what had been said, and went away.

There were many Particulars spoken to, wherewith the King seemed to be moved, acknowledging that there were Overdoings, and several Things done upon Prejudice at particular Persons; but still when he came this length, the Lord Treasurer interrupted, and gave some other Turn to Matters, otherwise, 'tis thought, there would a more favourable Answer have been given. The King signified, That he was certainly informed that there was a Rebellion designed in Scotland, but he would take Care that the Actors in it should be Losers by it. He endeavoured also much to assure us, that albeit we had not come from Scotland, there would not have been any Caption executed against us upon the Lawborders.

This is a plain, and, I believe, a very just Account of what past; and we shall hear in the next Book, that afterwards the Complaints tabled against the Procedure in Scotland, were more regarded, when tabled in a more favourable Juncture. As yet the King was under the Influence of the Duke of Lawderdale, and so the Noblemen got no Redress: But a Letter was writ to the Council, Three Days after this Conference, which was the Third Letter of Approbation they got, with some severe enough Reflections upon the complaining Lords and Gentlemen; with which I shall end this Section, and my Accounts, which have now run to so great a Length, of the Highland Host.

All issues in another Letter to the Council, May 28.

Right Trusty, &c. We greet you well. The Inclination We have to distribute Justice equally to all Our Subjects, and the Desire We have to vindicate the Honour of Our Privy Council, did prevail with us to hear what could be said against some late Proceedings, in that Our ancient Kingdom, for repressing Field-conventicles, and other Disorders; and now, after full Information from such as were authorized by you to attend Us, and hearing such as pretend they were injured, We do, as formerly, fully approve your Proceedings; and the rather that, after Trial taken by Us, We find, that such as complain

We have thought fit, for obviating such Clamours for the future, to declare, That We are highly dissatisfied with such as have caused these Clamours, and that We will, on all Occasions, proceed according to Our Laws, against such as endeavour to lese Our Prerogative, oppose Our Laws and Our Privy Council. We do also recommend to you to take all such legal Courses as may maintain Our Authority, secure the Peace of that Our Kingdom, and support the Government of the Church, as it is now established by Law. In doing whereof, you may rest fully assured of Our Assistance and Protection upon all Occasions: And so We bid you heartily Farewel. Of the Process against, and Execution of Mr. James Mitchel, January, 1678.

Mr. James Mitchel's Case represented.

IN the former Sections of this Chapter, I have confined myself to the Highland Host, and what concerned that; and now it is proper to take notice in this and the following Sections, of some other Matters which fell out this Year: And I begin with the Process against Mr. James Mitchel, which requires a Section by it self, as what made a great Noise, and hath been most unaccountably represented by the Advocates for the Severities of this Reign.

Some Remarks on a scurrilous Paper on this Subject published, 1710.

This Subject deserves a particular Notice, since it hath been miserably misrepresented of late, in a scurrilous Libel published at London, and carefully handed about by the Jacobites and High-fliers, with a Design to bespatter the Church of Scotland. The Title of the Pamphlet is, Phanatical Moderation, or unparalleled Villany displayed, in the Examples of Major Weir, and Mr. James Mitchel, London, 1710. A Juncture when every Body now knows the Design was fast bringing to Perfection for overturning the Protestant Succession, preventing our excellent Sovereign King GEORGE his Accession, and bringing us back to such Times again, and worse, if worse can be, as this History delineates.

This scandalous Pamphlet is stuffed with as much Virulence and Untruth, as any almost I have seen, no doubt with a Design to expose the Sufferings of Presbyterians in this Period, to the English Nation. And when it was published a Second Time, with the Blind of a new Title-page to help off the Impression, and in that new Title it was said to be recommended by Dr. Hicks, the Doctor, whom no Body will suspect to have been partial to Presbyterians, found it needful in the publick News Papers to insert an Advertisement once and again, that he had never recommended that Paper; and it was very proper for a Person of his Learning and Reputation to disown such a Rapsody of spiteful and malicious Untruths.

Many are the vile Lies and Blunders through the whole of the Pamphlet. So shamelessly ignorant hath the Writer been of the Period he undertakes, that he blunders in an Error of Four Years in his very Title-page, and says, Mr. Mitchel was execute 1674. He talks of a Rebellion at Pentland Hills 1668. and represents Sir Archibald Primrose and Sir John Nisbet as Presbyterians; to say nothing of his impious Flings at Religion, and his making Grace the artificial Part of Phanaticism. Agreeable to this follows his jesting at extemporary Prayers, and his barefac'd Reflections on our excellent Reformers from Popery. We need not then be surpris'd to find him publishing arrant Lies anent Mr. Alexander Henderson, abusing Mr. David Dickson, and breaking his Jest upon the Remonstrator Presbyterians, as he calls them. He publishes groundless Slanders on Mr. Mitchel, and most disingenuously conceals the vindictory Part of his Speech; and to expose him the more, he couples him with Major Weir, whom Presbyterians, and Mr. Mitchel in particular, abominate and lothed as much as this scurrilous Author. And if it were fair Reasoning, as it is not, I could produce Instances, and charge them upon the Episcopal Party, yea, some of the Order of Bishops, who have been found guilty of Major Weir's Crimes. Certainly the Author has been foolish in putting Mr. Mitchel and Major Weir together, lest some Body or other be tempted to draw a Parallel betwixt the Major and the Man whose Life Mr. Mitchel attempted.

But I leave this Author to be chastised by others, who shall think it worth their while to dip into the Heap of Calumny and Slander he hath licked up and belched out in this Pamphlet.

phlet. The fair Narration I shall give from original Papers and the Registers, will set this Matter in its true Light.

It is none of my Work in this History, to undertake a Vindication of Mr. Mitchel's Attempt upon the Bishop of St. Andrews, in the Year 1668. for which he is now execute. I know the Wrath of Man never wrought the Righteousness of God, and any Thing that can be said in behalf of these extraordinary Attacks, hath been again and again printed. Neither is it my Business here to vindicate Mr. Mitchel from the vile Aspersions cast upon him, without any Proof, by the villanous Author last named, of which, by the Informations I have had, there was not the least Ground but Spite and Malice, and from which he yet can be vindicate by Persons alive. My Part is to give a fair Account of the base Treatment he met with, and the Breach of Trust, yea, publick Faith and Honour pledged to him, as another Instance that our Prelates and their Friends stuck at nothing to avenge their Quarrels.

We left him in the Year 1674. after which he was continued a long Time in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and sent to the Bass. I have of design left any Thing about him I met with since that Time to this Place. February 16th, 1674. he wrote a large Letter from Edinburgh Tolbooth, to a Friend of his, vindicating his Practice, and owning the Principles he went upon; which being already in Print, with the Speech he then designed when laying his Account with Death, I shall not insert them here, but go on to notice the Procedure of the Council and Justiciary with him.

Mr. Mitchel's vindictory Letter and designed Speech, 1674.

By the Council-registers I find, 'That Mr. James Mitchel having endeavoured to make his Escape from Edinburgh Tolbooth, the Council, December 16th, 1675. appoint him to be removed to a surer Room in it. And, January 6th, 1676. Mr. James Mitchel having refused to own what he confessed before the Council, in Presence of the Justiciary, he is ordained to be put to the Question and Torture, anent his being in the Rebellion 1666.' I find no more in the Council-registers. In the Justiciary-registers, January 24th, 1676. Sederunt, Craigie Justice-clerk, Collingtoun, Strathburt, Castlehill, Forret, and Mr. Thomas Murray of Glendoick, Justiciars; Assessors, Linlithgow, Wigtoun, Seaforth, Ross, Treasurer-depute, appointed by the Council, to question Mr. James Mitchel upon his being at the Rebellion 1666. and to torture him upon Denial. His Majesty's Advocate produced a Confession emitted by him before, and in Presence of the Chancellor, Register, and Treasurer-depute, subscribed by him, wherein he confesses his being in the Rebellion, which being read to him, he denied to be of Verity: Whereupon, being put to Torture, he frequently and still denied the same, or that he had emitted or subscribed the same.

Jan. 1676. He is put to the Torture, upon Want of Proof of his Accession to Pentland.

This is all I find in the Records: But I have a large Account before me of what passed twixt Mr. James Mitchel and the Committee. January 18th, 22^d, and 24th, 1676. which I have some Reason to believe was writ by Mr. Mitchel himself, or some Body with him at the Time. And that the Reader may have some View of this wicked and inhumane Method of expiscating Matters by Torture, peculiar to this Time, I shall give as short an Abstract of this Account as I can; after I have remarked, that the Thing he was tortured upon was not his designed Assassination, but his alledged Accession to Pentland, Ten Years ago, about which it was more than Time that Processes should have been ending, where there was no Probation, and especially those by Torture.

The Earl of Linlithgow was Preses of the Meeting; and about Six of the Clock at Night, January 18th, Mr. Mitchel was brought before them. The Earl told him, He was brought before them, to see if he would adhere to his former Confession. Mr. Mitchel answered, 'My Lord, it is not unknown to your Lordship and others here present, that by the Council's Order, I was remitted to the Lords of the Justiciary, before whom I received an Indictment, at my Lord Advocate's Instance, whereby I was to be forfeited of Life and Fortune, although I have no Fortune; to which Indictment I answered at Three several Diets: And the last Diet being deserted by my Lord Advocate, I humbly conceive, that both by the Law of the Nation, and Practick of the Court at that Time, I ought to have been set at Liberty: Yet notwithstanding I was, contrary to Law, Equity, and Justice, returned to Prison; and upon what Account I am this Night brought before your Lordships, I know not.'

Accounts of what passed at the Committee, during his Torture.

The Preses told him, he was not accused before them, either upon Life or Fortune, but called to see whether he would own his former Confession. Mr. Mitchel answered, That he knew whether he was guilty of, and therefore no such Confession as was alledged. The Lord Treasurer-depute, upon this, said, The Pannel was one of the most arrogant Cheats, Liars and Rogues he had known. Mr. Mitchel answered, My Lord, if there were fewer of those Persons you have been speaking of in the Nation, I would not be standing this Night at the Bar: But my Lord Advocate knoweth, That what is alledged against me is not my Confession. The other said, Do you not remember, that before my Lord Commissioner and the Council, you said so and so. Mr. Mitchel answered, My Lord Commissioner never enquired about any such Things, but only enquired if I had been beyond Seas, and with whom I conversed. The Preses said, Sir, we will cause a sharper Thing make you confess: The Pannel answered, My Lord, I hope you are Christians and no Pagans. Then he was returned to the Prison.

Upon January 22^d, he was again called before them in the laigh Council-house, and asked if he would acknowledge his former Confession, and a Paper was produced, alledand to be subscribed by him. He answered, My Lord, I acknowledge no such Thing. The Preses said, Sir, you see what is upon the Table (the Boots) I will see if that will make you do it. Mr. Mitchel answered, 'My Lord, I confess, that by Torture you may cause me to blaspheme God, as Saul did compel the Saints; you may compel me to speak amiss of your Lordships, to call my self a Thief, a Murderer, a Witch or Warlock, and what not, and then pannel me upon it; but if you shall, my Lord, put me to it, I here protest before God and your Lordships, that Nothing extorted from me by Torture shall be made use of against me in Judgment, nor have any Force in Law against me, or any other Person whatsoever. But to be plain with you, my Lords, I am so much of a Christian, that whatever your Lordships shall legally prove against me, if it be a Truth I shall not deny it; but on the contrary, I am so much of a Man, and a Scots Man, that I never held my self obliged by the Law of God, Nature, or the Nation, to become mine own Accuser.' The Treasurer-depute said, He (the Pannel) hath the Devil's Logick, and sophisticates like him. Ask him whether that be his Subscription. To which Mr. Mitchel replied, I acknowledge no such Thing; and he was again sent back to Prison.

January 24th, the Justices came to the inner Parliament-house in their Robes, and the Executioner and Boots were presented, and Mr. Mitchel was again interrogate as above, If he would acknowledge his former Confession, before he was put to the Torture. He knowing, that after the Rate of the Spanish Inquisition, the more he confessed, either concerning himself or others, the more severe the Torture would be made, to make him confess the more, delivered himself to this Purpose. 'My Lord, I have now been these two full Years in Prison, and more than one of them in Bolts and Fetters; and it is well known, some in a shorter than many Deaths, if I had been capable thereof; and it is well known, some in a shorter Time, have been tempted to make away themselves: But Respect and Obedience to the express Law and Command of God, hath made me to undergo all those Hardships, and I hope this Torture also, with Patience, viz. That for the Preservation of my own Life and that of others, so far as lies in my Power, and to keep innocent Blood off your Lordships Persons and Families, which by shedding of mine doubtless you would bring upon your selves and Posterity, and Wrath from the Lord, to the consuming thereof, till there should be no Remnant nor Escaping; and now again I protest, &c. as above. When you please call for the Men you have appointed to their Work.'

The Executioner was called, and Mr. Mitchel was 'tied in a two-armed Chair, and the Boot brought. The Executioner asked which of the Legs he should take. The Lords bade him take any of them. The Executioner laid the left Leg in the Boot, which Mr. Mitchel lifted out again, and said, Since the Judges have not determined, take the best of the Two, for I freely bestow it in the Cause, and laid his right Leg into the Engine.

When he was put into the Boot, the Advocate asked Leave to speak but a Word or two, and insisted at a great Length. Mr. Mitchel answered, 'The Advocate's Word or two hath multiplied into so many, that my Memory cannot serve me, in the Condition in which I am (the Torture being beginning) to resume them, but I shall essay to answer the Scope of his Discourse. Whereas he hath been speaking of the Sovereignty of the Magistrate, I shall go somewhat further than he hath gone, and own that the Magistrate whom God hath appointed is God's Depute, both the Throne and the Judgment is the Lord's, when he judgeth for God, and according to his Law; and a Part of his Office is, to deliver the poor oppressed out of the Hand of the Oppressors, and shed no innocent Blood. Jer. 22. 3. And Disobediences to this brought Wrath on himself, and his Princes, and the Land, Chap. 37. And whereas the Advocate hath been enlarging upon the Sinfulness of Lying on any account; it is answered, That not only Lying is sinful, but also a pernicious speaking of the Truth is a horrid Sin before the Lord, when it tendeth to the Shedding of innocent Blood; witness the Case of Doeg, Psal. 52. compared with 1 Sam. 22. 9. But what my Lord Advocate hath forged against me, is false; so that I am standing upon my former Ground, viz. the Preservation of mine own Life and the Life of others, so far as in my Power.'

Then the Clerk's Servant being called, interrogate him in the Torture a great many Questions, upwards of Thirty, which were all in Writ, and his Answers were taken from his Mouth. It is needless to set them all down, for many of them are of no Import, and therefore I shall only notice a few. Question. Are you that Mr. James Mitchel who was excepted out of the King's Grace and Favour, or not? Answer. I never committed any Crime deserving to be excluded. Q. Know you any more of that Name? A. Yes, there are Two in Midlothian. Q. Were you at Pentland? A. No. Q. Were you at Air, and joyned with the Rebels there? A. I never joyned with any such. Q. Where were you at the Time of Pentland? A. In Edinburgh. Q. When knew you of their rising in Arms? A. When

A. When the rest of the City knew of it. Q. When was that? A. When the Messenger came from Dumfries, and Dalziel and his Forces marched out at the West-port. Q. Where did you meet with James Wallace? A. I knew him not at that Time. Q. Did you go out of Town with Captain Arnot? A. No. The rest are about his going Abroad, &c. and need not be insert. 1678.

The Questions being over, the Executioner took down his Leg from a Chest whereupon it was lying all this Time in the Boot, and set both on the Ground, and thrusting in the Shelves to drive the Wedge, began his Strokes; at every one of them enquired, if he had no more to say, or would say more? Mr. Mitchel answered, No more, my Lords. And thus he continued till he gave Nine Strokes upon the Head of the Wedge: At the Ninth Mr. Mitchel fainted through the Extremity of Pain; upon which the Executioner cried, Alas! my Lords, he is gone. Then they stopped the Torture, and went off. And in a litle, when recovered, he was carried in the same Chair to the Tolbooth.

At the Beginning of the Torture, when the Wedge began to pinch the Boot, and pain him most sensibly, he said, 'My Lords, not knowing but this Torture may end my Life, I beseech you to remember, that he who sheweth no Mercy, shall have Judgment without Mercy. And if any of you, as I hope there is few present, be thirsting after my innocent Blood, mind what is spoken Revel. 15. 5, 6. And now, my Lords, I do freely and from my Heart forgive you who are Judges, and the Men who are appointed to go about this horrid Work, and those who are satiating their Eyes in beholding. I do intreat that God may never lay it to the charge of any of you, as I beg that God for his Son Christ's sake, may be pleased to blot out my Sin and mine Iniquity.'

Upon this the Treasurer-depute asserted, That the Paper containing his Confession about Pentland, produced as signed by the Pannel, was signed at the Council-table, and the Lord Chancellor was a Witness thereto. The Advocate asserted, that it was signed at the Council-table, but the Lord Register and himself were Witnesses. Hugh Stevenson asserted, that it was signed in the laigh Council-house, and not at the Council-table, and that the Register and Advocate were Witnesses. Mr. Mitchel was just going to say, They were false Witnesses, seeing their Declarations did not agree one with another; but his Leg being in the Torture, and fearing to irritate them, he forbore.

The Writer of this Account I have abridged, remarks, That such a Practice as this with Mr. Mitchel, is unprecedented, by Torture to oblige a Person, contrary to Nature, and the Divine Law, to be his own Accuser. The Two Cases wherein it only has been used these many Years in Scotland, come not at all up to the Case before us. Peter Roy the Highland Thief and Robber, after he had been legally convicted of Theft and Murder, was put to the Torture, to oblige him to declare his Associates and Accomplices. And as to the other Instance of the Laird of Auchindrane, he observes, That he was accused of an horrid and private Murder, where there were no Witnesses; and which the Lord had witnessed from Heaven, singularly by his own Hand, and proved the Deed against him. The Corps of the Man being buried in Girvan Church-yard, as a Man cast away at Sea, and cast out there, the Laird of Colzean, whose Servant he had been, dreaming of him in his Sleep, and that he had a particular Mark upon his Body, came and took up the Body, and found it to be the same Person, and caused all that lived near by, come and touch the Corps, as is usual in such Cases: All round the Place came, but Auchindrane and his Son, whom no body suspected, till a young Child of his, Mary Muir, seeing the People gathered, came in among them, and when she came near the dead Body, it sprang out in bleeding; upon which they were apprehended, and put to the Torture.

Remarks upon his Torture.

In the same Narration from which I take this Account, there follows several Remarks for vindicating Mr. Mitchel, as to his Refusal to own judicially what upon a Promise he had formerly owned. The Writer urges, that when a Confession or Promise, is made upon a Condition, and that Condition is judicially rescinded, made null and void, the Obligation of the Promise and Confession is taken away, and both Parties are put in statu quo. Josh. 2. 14, 17. That in many Cases 'tis lawful to conceal and obscure a necessary Duty, and divert Enemies from a Pursuit upon it for a Time. 1 Sam. 16. 1, 2. 1 Sam. 20. 5, 6. Jer. 38. 24, 26. That when an open Enemy perverts and overturns the very Nature and Matter of a Discourse or Confession, by leaving out the most material Truths, and putting in Untruths, and Circumstances in their Room, 'tis no longer the former Discourse and Confession: That when a Person is brought before a limited Judicatory, having Power to judge and determine of what is before them, and yet so limited, as they cannot fully satisfy the Malice and Envy of some, and they wrest, malign, add and diminish from what hath been said before them, in order to make up Matter of Sentence before another Judicatory of greater Power, before whom nothing was ever confessed or proven, the Person may justly stand to his Defence, and put his Enemies to bring Proof against him. I do not enter at all upon the Force of these Defences here, nor others advanced in this Paper, but only set them down as what were determined in favour of Mr. Mitchel; which is my Province in this History.

Mr. Mitchel vindicated in result got own what upon a Promise he had owned.

Jan. 1677. he is sent to the Bass, and in December proceeded criminally for his Attempt on the Bishops of Saint Andrews and Orkney.

Mr. Mitchel continued in Edinburgh Tolbooth, till January 1677. when, we heard before, he was sent to the Bass, where he continued till towards the End of the Year. In the End of October, I find the Advocate is ordered by the Council, to insist criminally against Mr. James Mitchel, for his designed Assassination of the Bishops of St. Andrews and Orkney. And, December 6th, he is brought from the Bass to Edinburgh Prison, to receive his Indictment. And January 3^d, 1678. Sir George Lockhart, and Mr. John Ellies, are allowed and commanded to plead for Mr. James Mitchel before the Justiciary. This is all about him in the Council-books; and it would seem his Process and Execution, was timed, of design, just before the Highland Invasion, to season People's Minds, and fill them with just Apprehensions of the Justice of this Time, and fright them into a silent Submission to all the arbitrary Methods now on foot.

He receives his Indictment.

After the People, who had been concerned in the Promise of his Life, were prepared to elide that Defence, at the Primate's Intigation, he gets an Indictment given him, before the Justice-court, where Sir Archibald Primrose, lately turned out of the Register's Place to make way for a Friend of Lawderdale's, sat as Justice-general. His Indictment is now restricted to the Attempt upon the Bishops, and his alledged Accession to Pentland is left out, which was in his former Indictment, 1674. In all other Points the Dittay now given agrees with that above, App. N^o. 65. and so needs not to be repeated.

Debates upon it January 7.

App. N^o. 93.

App. N^o. 94.

The Justices
Interlocutor.

Upon the 7th of January, his Trial began. The Justice-general being cited as a Witness, was passed from. Many and long were the Reasonings upon the Points libelled, and Sir George Lockhart said very much in the Pannel's Defence. The Defences, Replies and Duplies are inserted in the Appendix, N^o. 93. The great Proof adduced against him, was his Confession, February, 10th, 1674. a Copy of which follows, App. N^o. 94.

The Debates were so long, that the Court adjourned till Jan. 9th, when they come to their Interlocutor. 'They find the Article of the Dittay, founded upon 4 Act. 16 Parl. James VI. bearing the Pannel's invading, by shooting, and firing a Pistol at his Grace the Arch-bishop of St. Andrews, and privy Counsellor for doing his Majesty's Service, relevantly libelled, his Majesty's Advocate proving the Presumption in his Reply, that the Pannel said, 'He did make the said Invasion, because of the Archbishop his persecuting those that were in the Rebellion at Pentland, or Words to that Purpose, relevant to infer the Pain contained in the foresaid Act of Parliament; and remit the same to the Knowledge of an Assize.'

'Likewise they find that Part of the Dittay, anent the invading of Bishops' or Ministers, relevant to infer an arbitrary Punishment, and remit it to the Knowledge of an Assize.'

'And sikelike, that Article anent the wounding and mutilating the Bishop of Orkney, and remit it to an Assize.'

'And also having considered that Part of the Debate, anent the Pannel's Confession, made and emitted before a Committee appointed by Authority of the Council to receive it, and thereafter adhered to, and renewed in the Presence of his Majesty's high Commissioner, and Lords of privy Council convened in Council, find it is judicial, and cannot be retracted.'

'And also having considered the Debate and Defence against the said Confession, viz. That the same was emitted upon Promise, or Assurance of Impunity of Life and Limb, find the same relevant to secure the Pannel of his Life and Limb, reserving to the Commissioners of Justiciary to inflict such arbitrary Punishment as they shall think fit, in case the Defence shall be proven; and remit the same to the Knowledge of an Assize.'

The Probation.

Then the Probation was led. I need not deduce it here at full Length, from the Process now before me, but I shall give the most material Witnesses, and what they said in Hints. The Stress of the Matter ran upon the Exculpation as to the Promise, and this I shall give at full Length. Mr. William Paterson Advocate depones, He met a Man with a Pistol in his Hand, coming down the Black-friar Wynd in Edinburgh, immediately after the Pistol was shot at the Archbishop, but knows not the Pannel, nor if it was he who shot it. Upon the adducing of Patrick Vause, Sir George Lockhart alledged for the Pannel, That there can be no Probation upon extrajudicial Confession admitted, as being contrary to the Interlocutor. The Lords ordain Patrick Vause, Keeper of the Tolbooth, his Deposition to be taken, reserving the Pannel his Objections. Accordingly he depones, That a Day or Two after the Pannel was examined by the Council, he heard him confess he had shot the Pistol at the Archbishop. And being enquired if he heard Mr. James Mitchel justify the Deed, he remembers it not. Mr. John Vause, Son to the former, being interrogate, if the Pannel had acknowledged to him the Deed of shooting at the Archbishop, depones, That being in Conference with the Pannel in Prison, he enquired at him, how he or any Man could be accessory to so impious an Act as to kill a Man in cold Blood, who had not wronged him. He said, It was not in cold Blood, for the Blood of the Saints was reeking at the Cross of Edinburgh. 'John Bishop of Galloway depones, The first Time he saw the Pannel was in Sir William Sharp's outer Room, where he saw a Pistol taken, which was said to be from him, out of which (as he supposed) there were Three Balls taken, and that the Pistol was like the Pistol produced. Depones, That at that Time the Pannel did not confess any Guilt, but seemed to be in a great Consternation, and fell a trembling; and that the Deponent hearing he had made a Confession, went to Prison to speak to him about it, who acknowledged to the Deponent, that he had made a Confession before the Chancellor, and some others of the Council, and that he had Hopes of Life, and desired the Deponent to intercede for him. And the Deponent having asked him, how he could do such a Deed against an innocent Man; who answered, That he thought him an Enemy to the Godly, and that they would not be in Security so long as he were alive. And the Deponent having enquired at him, if he was sorry for it; he did not say he was sorry for it, but if it were to do again, he would not do it.' Dr. Christopher Irwin, John Jessie, and William Borthwick, Chirurgeons, depone particularly enough as to the Bishop of Orkney's Wound and Mutilation, which need not be insert.

Next, the Advocate adduced his Witnesses for proving Mr. Mitchel's Confession, who elided the Pannel's Defence from the Promise made to him, upon which his Confession was given. And I shall give these as they stand in the Registers.

'John Earl of Rothes, Chancellor of Scotland, being sworn and examined, the Confession under Mr. James Mitchel's Hand being shewn to him, depones he was present, and saw Mr. James Mitchel subscribe that Paper, and depones he heard him make the Confession contained therein, and that he thereafter heard him ratify the same at the Council-bar, in the Presence of the King's Commissioner, and Lords of Privy Council, sitting in Council, and that his Lordship has subscribed the said Confession; depones, that his Lordship, the Advocate, and Treasurer-depute, were appointed by the Privy Council to examine Mr. James Mitchel; and being interrogate, if, after they had removed the Pannel to the Council-chamber, whether or not his Lordship did offer to the Pannel, upon his Confession, to secure his Life, in these Words, Upon his Lordship's Life, Honour and Reputation; depones, that he did not at all give any Assurance to the Pannel for his Life, and that the Pannel never sought any such Assurance from him; and that his Lordship does not remember that there was any Warrant given by the Council to his Lordship for that effect; and if there be any Expressions in any Paper, which may seem to infer any thing to the contrary, his Lordship conceives it hath been insert upon some Mistake.'

A. PRIMROSE I. P. D.

'Charles Maitland of Haltoun, Lord Treasurer-depute, being sworn, and the Confession under Mr. James Mitchel's own Hand being shewn him, depones he was present when Mr. James Mitchel made that Confession, and his Lordship heard him first make it verbally, and then saw him subscribe it, and that his Lordship subscribed it also; and that at that Time there was nothing spoken of any Assurance; but when the Pannel was asked by some of the Committee, Upon what account he committed that Fact, he seemed at first unwilling to answer, but thereafter said, It was because the Archbishop was an Enemy to the good People, or godly People in the West. Depones, That within a few Days thereafter, at a Meeting of the Council, where the Duke of Lawderdale, then his Majesty's Commissioner, was present, the Pannel being brought to the Bar, and the Confession produced being shewn to him, he acknowledged the same to be his Hand-writ, adhered unto, and renewed the same in Presence of his Majesty's Commissioner and Council; and depones that he did not hear the Pannel either seek Assurance of his Life, or any Person offer the same to him.'

Lord Haltoun's Deposition.

CHARLES MAITLAND.

A. PRIMROSE I. P. D.

'John Duke of Lawderdale being sworn, depones, That his Grace was present, as the King's Commissioner, in Council, when Mr. James Mitchel was brought to the Bar. Depones, his Grace saw his former Confession, made at the Committee of the Council, shewn to him, and that he acknowledged it to be his Confession, and that he did adhere to and renew the same, in Presence of his Grace and the Council: His Grace heard of no Assurance given to him, and that his Grace did not give any Assurance to him, nor gave Commission to any others to give him any Assurance of his Life, and would not do that, having no Warrant from his Majesty to that effect.'

1678.

Archbishop of St. Andrews's
Deposition.

'James Archbishop of St. Andrews being sworn, depones, That that Day the Pannel did fire at his Grace, he had a Wave of him passing from the Coach, and passing the Street, which had such Impression upon his Grace, that the first Sight he saw of him after he was taken, he knew him to be the Person who shot the Shot. Depones, his Grace saw him at the Council-bar, in Presence of his Majesty's Commissioner and Council, acknowledge his Confession before the Committee, and heard him adhere thereunto, and renew the same, and that there was no Assurance of Life given him, nor any sought by him there. Depones, That his Grace himself did never give any Assurance to him, nor any Warrant to any others to do it; only he promised at his first taking, that if he would freely confess the Fault, and express his Repentance for the same at that Time, without any further troubling Judicatories therein, his Grace would use his best Endeavours for Favour to him, or else leave him to Justice: But that he either gave him Assurance, or gave Warrant to any to give it, is a false and malicious Calumny; and that his Grace made no Promise to Nichol Somerwel, other than that it were best to make a free Confession.'

St. ANDREWS.

A. PRIMROSE I. P. D.

Council's Act
produced, dated Feb. 12.
1674.

After all these Depositions were taken, the Advocate declared he had closed Probation; whereupon the Pannel produced the Copy of an Act of Council, March 12th, 1674. insert above Chap. 9. § 2. craving the Register might be produced, or the Clerks obliged to give Extracts, which they had refused. The Act is read judicially, and the Pannel's Advocates crave Liberty to speak upon it. This the Lords would not allow, but came to the following Interlocutor.

Interlocutor
upon it.

'The Lords Commissioners of the Justiciary, considering that the Copy of the pretended Act of Council produced, was never urged nor made Use of, nor any Diligence craved for producing the Registers of Council, until this Afternoon that the Assize was sworn, after which no Diligence can be allowed and granted in this State of the Process, by the Law of the Kingdom, and Practick of this Court, especially seeing it appears by the said Copy, that the Design was to take away any Assurance the Pannel could have pleaded; and that the Truth of the Narrative of the Copy founded upon, insinuating that there was an Assurance, is cancelled by the Depositions of the Duke of Lauderdale, then his Majesty's Commissioner, the Lord Chancellor, and other Members of the Committee and Council.'

And so without admitting the Production of the Registers, from which I have inserted the Act of Council, the Court ordain the Assize to enclose, and to return their Verdict to Morrow at Two of the Clock after Noon.

To Morrow the Verdict of the Assize is returned, and is as follows.

Verdict of the Assize.

'As to the first Part of the Libel, founded on the 4 Act 16 Parl. James VI. the Chancellor and whole Assize find it proven with one Voice, conform to the Lords Interlocutor. As to the invading of Bishops and Ministers, and wounding the Bishop of Orkney, likewise proven with one Voice. As to the Third, of the Lords Interlocutor concerning his Confession, first before a Committee, and thereafter before his Majesty's Commissioner and Council, the whole Assize, with one Voice, finds it proven conform to the Lords Interlocutor. As to the Fourth and last Part of the Interlocutor, the whole Assize with one Voice finds the Exculpation noways proven. And further, concerning the Exculpation, when the Pannel was strongly pressing it upon my Lord Chancellor, the whole Assize heard his Confession and Acknowledgment of the Fact.'

Jo. Hay Chancellor.

Sentence.

'After opening and reading of the which Verdict, the Lords Commissioners of the Justiciary, by the Mouth of Adam Auld Dempster of the Court, decerned and adjudged the said Mr. James Mitchel, to be taken to the Grass-market of Edinburgh, upon Friday the 18th of January Instant, betwixt Two and Four of the Clock after Noon, and there to be hanged on a Gibbet, till he be dead, and all his Moveables, Goods, and Gear, to be Escheat, and inbrought to his Majesty's Use, which was pronounced for Doom.'

This is a just Account of Mr. Mitchel's Trial from the Registers: And I might add many other Particulars and Incidents, which I meet with in Letters writ at this Time; That Mr. Mitchel craved and protested, that the Omission of seeking the Registers in due Time should not prejudice him; that Nichol Somerwel, Mr. Mitchel's Brother in Law, offered in Court to depone, that the Archbishop promised to him to secure his Life if he would prevail with him to confess. The Archbishop denied this, and called it a villanous Lie. It was likewise said, that upon the 17th of January, the Council resolved to call for Duke Hamilton, the Justice-general, the late Advocate, to attest the Verity of the Lords Depositions in the Process; that a Bill was preparing to the Lords of Session, that Sir George Lockhart might be censured for what was to be libelled against him, as to this Process. It was said, that the Lord Justice-general was not ill pleased, after his late Loss of his Place through through Lawderdale's Influence, at the Inconsistency that appeared 'twixt the Depositions, 1678. and the Copy of the Act of Council, and what he himself had been Witness unto; but above all, the Primate's swearing so cleverly was mightily cried out upon.

But to sum up all this Account, I shall give Mr. Mitchel's own Narration of it, in a Letter to one of his Friends, that Morning before he was execute, which appears to be very agreeable to the Process, bating the Contrariety 'twixt it and the Depositions.

Mr. Mitchel's own Narrative, the Morning before his Death.

Edinburgh, January 18th, 1678.

MY Accusation before the Justices was, That I shot a Pistol at the Archbishop of St. Andrews, July 1668. whereby the Bishop of Orkney was wounded; and that I did confess the same before the Council. My Defence, among many others, was, That any Confession made by me, was upon Oath and Promise of Life and Safety. And indeed the Oath and Promise was made to me by my Lord Chancellor, in these Words. Upon my great Oath, Honour, and Reputation, if I be Chancellor I shall save your Life, and if ye will not confess, the Council will take another Way to make it out. This I took for the Boots, as afterwards I found. The Justices found my Confession to be a judicial one, tho' I refused to own it before their Court, but did retract it, unless the abovementioned Promise were made good to me. The Justices sustained my said Defence, upon the foresaid Oath and Promise made to me: But when the Indictment came to be proven, the said Confession was witnessed by my Lord Chancellor, and other Lords of Council called to make Faith; but with the same Breath they denied the making, or the Knowledge of the making of any such Oath or Promise to me. But it pleased the Lord to provide me with a Copy of the Act of Council, which was at that Time made by the same Lords, and subscribed, as I believe, by my Lord Chancellor, wherein the same Assurance is expressly granted to have been given me by Warrant of the then Lord Commissioner, albeit, indeed in the same Act it is revoked, for the Reasons there given. When I produced this, the Lords who witnessed against me were greatly commoved, and vehemently pressed the Justices that no such Act should be received in my Vindication, since it did so directly contradict what they had sworn: And tho' it was not reasonable that the Oaths of any should prejudice me, contrary to Truth, and Process adduced by me, yet the Justices were necessitate, without once hearing my Advocates, to reject the foresaid Act, and cut me off from so clear a Probation for my Defence: Whereupon I was found guilty by the Assize upon the foresaid Confession; albeit, in all Likelihood they would not have found me guilty if the Act of Council had been received, seeing the Lords Justices had found the foresaid Promise, if proven, relevant to take off my Confession. Upon the Whole, it is most certain this Judgment was carried against both Right and Truth. But I remit it to the Lord, who will one Day clear me and all his Servants.

Two Days after the Sentence was passed, no doubt by the Primate's Procurement, an Order comes down from Court, that Mr. Mitchel's Head and Hand should be affixed up in some publick Place of the City: But because this came not till after Sentence, the Primate missed this Piece of Revenge, and it was found, that what was pronounced for Doom could not be altered.

Accordingly, upon the 18th of January, Mr. Mitchel was taken to the Grass-market, and the Sentence executed. In the Morning he delivered some Copies of what he designed to say, if permitted, at his Death, to some of his Friends, with which I shall end this Section, since Reflections upon the Process or Depositions are needless, the Matter standing so clear and plain from original Papers before the Reader: And I insert this Speech the rather, that the forementioned Libeller publishes another Paper for his Speech at his Death, where there is nothing at all of the true Matter of Fact, and his Vindication is most disingenuously concealed. I suppose he had not Liberty to deliver it to the People upon the Scaffold, but I insert the Copy of it here.

He is executed, Jan. 18.

Christian People,

IT being rumoured abroad immediately after I received my Sentence, that I would not have Liberty to speak in this Place, therefore I have not troubled my self to prepare any formal Discourse, or Account of the pretended Crime for which I was accuted and sentenced; neither did I think it very necessary, the Fame of the Process having gone so much abroad, what by a former Indictment given me near Four Years ago, the Diet whereof was suffered to desert, in respect the late Advocate could not find a just Way to reach me with the extrajudicial Confession they opposed to me; all know he was zealous in it, yet my Charity to him is such, that he would not suffer that unwarrantable Zeal, so far to blind him, as to overstretch the Laws of the Land beyond their due Limits, in prejudice of the Life of a native Subject: Next, by an extreme Enquiry of Torture, and then by exiling me to the Bass, and after all by giving me a new Indictment, at the Instance of the new Advocate, who before was one of mine when I received the First Indictment, and to which new Indictment and Debate in the Process I remit you; and particularly to these Two Defences of an extrajudicial Confession, and the Promise of Life given to me thereupon by the Chancellor, upon his own and the publick Faith of the Kingdom, upon the Verity whereof I am content to die, and ready to lay down my Life, and hope your Charity will be such to me a dying Man, as not to mistrust me therein; especially since it is so notoriously adminiculate by an Act of Secret Council, and yet denied upon Oath by the principal Officers of State, present in Council at the making of the said Act, and whom the Act bears to have been present, the Duke of Lawderdale, being then his Majesty's Commissioner, likewise present, and which Act of Council was by the Lords of Justiciary most unjustly repelled. But I shall have Charity for some of the said Lords, who I know would have given Law and Justice as to my just Absolution, if they had not been overpowered with Plurality of Votes, by those who were overawed, and dared by the Lords of the secret Council; but that will not absolve their Consciences at the last Day. As to my Advocates and Lawyers, I ingenuously acknowledge their Care, Fidelity, and Zeal in my Defence, and which I hope will be a standing Fame to some of them for this and all future Generations. Thus much for a short Account of this Affair, for which I am unjustly brought to this Place: But I acknowledge my private and particular Sins have been such as have deserved a worse Death to me; but I hope in the Merits of Jesus Christ to be freed from the eternal Punishment due to me for Sin. I am confident that God doth not plead with me in this Place for my private and particular Sins; but I am brought here that the Work of God may be made manifest, and for the Trial of Faith, John 9. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 7. That I may be a Witness for his deposed Truths and Interest in this Land, where I am called to seal the same with my Blood. And I wish heartily that this my poor Life may put an End to the Persecution of the true Members of Christ in this Place, so much actuate by those perfidious Prelates; in Opposition to whom, and Testimony to the Cause of Christ, I at this Time lay down my Life, and bless God that he hath thought me so much worthy as to do the same for his Glory and Interest. Finally, concerning a Christian Duty in a singular and extraordinary Case, and anent my particular Judgment concerning both Church and State, it is evidently declared and manifested elsewhere: So farewell all earthly Enjoyments, and welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, into whose Hands I commit my Spirit.

His Speech to the People at his Execution.

Of the Persecution for Conventicles, and Hardships particular Persons underwent for their Nonconformity, this Year 1678.

Conventicles
break out again this Summer.

THE Essays of some Lovers of Liberty, when the Design of the Highland Host broke out, to inform the King of the State of Things, which we heard before were in part prevented by the Proclamation January 3^d, together with the actual Informations given, first by the Earl of Cassils, and then by the Duke of Hamilton and others, joyned with the recalling the Highlanders, and disbanding the Militia, did not a little hearten the poor dispirited Presbyterians, who began to creep out of their Retirements, and, in the Spring and Summer, Conventicles became pretty frequent. I shall here cast together what offers to me of Persecution upon this Score, by Finings, Imprisonment, Death, and otherwise, with some few Instances of Hardships put upon Presbyterians for some other Branches of Nonconformity this Year.

Two Conventicles which made most Noise.

There were Two Conventicles made most Noise this Summer, one at Williamwood in the Shire of Renfrew, and the other upon the Hills of Whitekirk, over against the Bass, for which James Learmont was executed: But I shall give the Persecution which fell out upon the Score of Conventicles, and other Branches of Nonconformity, in the Order of Time, as near as I can, from the Registers and other Papers.

Upon

Upon the 29th of January, ' The Committee for publick Affairs, are ordered by the privy Council, to cause transport some Phanatick Ministers from Edinburgh and Canongate Tol-booths, to the Bass, at this Juncture. The Juncture was the March of the Highland Host, as we have heard. This is the First Time I have met with this Epithet of Phanatick Ministers, given to Presbyterians in the Registers, and 'tis Part of the new Stile, brought in at this Time by the Advocate, and other Drawers of publick Papers, to leave a Stain upon Presbyterians, who no ways deserve this invidious Name.

Ministers sent from Edinburgh Prison to the Bass.

February 21st, I find a Decreet, at the Instance of the King's Advocate, against Patrick Sheriff in Knows, and James Shiels in Boltoun, for being present at House and Field-conventicles, last Year, at Black-castle, Lamer-muir, and other Places, where Mrs. John Welsh, George Johnstoun, --- Hamilton, and --- Hope preached, and being absent from their Parish-churches; personally compearing, they are found guilty, and fined, Sheriff in Three Hundred Pounds Scots, and Shiels in Four Hundred, and ordered to lie in Prison till they pay.

Patrick Sheriff and James Shiels fined.

In Council, as in too many Courts, Interest and Friendship went a great way to bring People off. Henry Muir Commissar-clerk at Kirkcudbright, was, March 7th, libelled, for being present in September or October last, at House and Field-conventicles, where Mr. John Welsh, Mr. Gabriel Semple, and Mr. Samuel Arnot were, and of corresponding with them. The Defender acknowledged he had once heard Mr. Samuel Arnot, at a Field-conventicle; but denied Correspondence with him: In respect whereof, and the Bishop of Galloway's Interposition, the Council appoint the Defender to be dismissed without any further Trouble. We shall just now hear, that James Learmont, within a few Months, is put to Death, for mere Presence at a Field-conventicle; but he wanted a Bishop to intercede for him, which indeed was not now ordinary.

Partiality in the present Persecutions for Conventicles.

We heard before of the Attempt made upon Carstairs and his Men, October last Year. Upon the 15th of March this Year, I find a Decreet passed, at the Instance of the King's Advocate, ' against Patrick Thomson in Kinloch, George Fleming in Balberty, Alexander Hamilton of Kinkell, --- Henderson his Servant, Robert Hamilton Brother to the Laird of Prestoun, John Balfour of Kinloch, James Russel Feuar of Kettle, James Reid, and John Reid there, John Balfour Tenant to Lundy, Alexander Balfour there, John Archer in Stramiglo, John Adam Bailie of Stramiglo, and some Twenty more, who are libelled to have met at the House of Balfour of Kinloch, an intercommuned Person, together with others, to the Number of Three or Fourscore of armed Men, and lay in wait to have murdered Captain William Carstairs, and --- Garret his Servant, when the said Captain required them to deliver up to him, --- a Preacher, and intercommuned Person, and to have loosed Twelve or Fourteen Shot at him, whereby the said Garret was mortally wounded, in August, September, October or November last, and died on the Spot.

Decreet against many Persons for Self-defence against Captain Car-michael.

It was easy to libel roundly against People who were not present themselves, and who, upon Absence, were to be holden as confest: And by the best Information I can have from several curreing Accounts, it appears that very few of the Persons here named, were present at the Time libelled, or any way concerned in that Attempt, particularly John Archer, and several others I could name; and we have heard before, that they had no Preacher among them to deliver up, and Garret was not killed upon the Spot, nor mortally wounded: But all these Things, as was now customary, were thrown in to accumulate the Libel, against Persons they had Designs upon, and knew would not be present to vindicate themselves. And so they are all, upon their Absence, put to the Horn, except Two or Three mean Country People, who compeared.

Remarks upon it.

In the preceeding Section, we heard what the Committee of Council did, with respect to Mr. Robert Wylie Governor to the Lord Semple: I only add here, that being summoned, March 29th, to appear before them, and not compearing, and withdrawing himself, Semple a Boy at the College, being disgusted at this Procedure, and withdrawing himself, gets a Charge of Lawborrows, the original Copy whereof is just now before me. None of them regarded the Summons or Charge very much. And, April 16th, my Lord Semple's Mother, a professed Papist, petitions the Council, ' That whereas her Son, through the Neglect of those he was recommended to, or the general Humour, and Corruption of the Place (Glasgow) where he is educate, he has frequently withdrawn himself from the publick Ordinances, to the great Contempt and Disobedience to his Majesty's Laws, and is seduced and poisoned with bad Principles, anent his Majesty's Government and Laws, by Persons not legally authorized; their Petitioner out of her Loyalty and Obedience to his Majesty, and motherly Affection to her Son, being unwilling to connive with, or wink at such unworthy Practices, did think it her Duty, to represent so much to their Lordships, and craves, that they may either recommend the Care of his Education to such Persons as shall be answerable to their Lordships, or take such Course as shall secure the small Fortune to him during his Minority, and himself in such Principles as are most suitable to his Majesty's Government, and may engage him in Loyalty to his Majesty and his Successors.

Mr. Robert Wyllie's Governor, imprisoned and brought to trouble

The Council recommend it to the Bishop of Argyle, and the Lord Ross, to appoint some Person of sound Principles and Loyalty, to be Pedagogue to the Petitioner's Son. I know no more of the Trouble this excellent Youth, and afterwards great Man, Mr. Robert Wyllie, his Governor, met with, except some few Weeks Imprisonment next Year. They could charge him with nothing, but his Dislike of the Prelatical Way: Only, August 15th, the Council write to Dundonald, 'That he cause present Mr. Robert Wyllie before them, upon the 11th of September, to answer for his having been Pedagogue to the Lord Semple without Licence, and order him to provide a Governor to that Lord, of sound Principles, and well affected to the Government of the Church.' I know Mr. Wyllie was at length forced to take some other Pupils, and went abroad with them, and improved himself to those great Measures of all solid Learning, he was so much afterwards valued for.

Mr. Patrick Anderson forced to leave Edinburgh, and brought under hard Conditions.

April 3^d, Mr. Patrick Anderson late Minister at ---- is charged before the Council, that in the Years 1674, 5, 6, 7, 8. he kept Conventicles in his House in Potter-row, that he hath conversed and corresponded with Mrs. Wells, Williamson, Johnstoun, and other intercommunicated Persons. When he appeared he denied the Charge, and was sent to the Bass, unless he would presently find Caution, under the Penalty of Two thousand Merks, to remove from Edinburgh, and Five Miles round it, and that he shall converse with no Body but those of his own Family. This was a very hard and iniquitous Interdict.

Mr. Alexander Ross liberated from his iniquitous Imprisonment.

A Petition was presented to the Council, April 6th, by Mr. Alexander Ross, a worthy Minister in the North, 'That whereas he is intrusted with the Care of several Orphans, wherof he is Tutor and Curator, and he being come to Edinburgh about their Affairs, the Second Night after he was come to Town, he was taken out of his Bed by the Town-major, and kept close Prisoner in the Tolbooth these Four Months, without any thing laid to his Charge in particular, whereby the Affairs of the Minors suffer very much.' The Council are so sensible of the Iniquity of this Procedure, that upon Surety given for his living peaceably, and not keeping Field-conventicles, they order him to be liberate, and appoint the Magistrates of Edinburgh to take Caution as above, under the Penalty of Two thousand Merks.

Conventicle at Williamwood.

In May this Year, the Two Conventicles were which made most Noise, and I come now to give some Account of them, and the Severities which followed. Upon the 14th of May, the Council being informed of a Conventicle, kept in the Parish of Cathcart, in the Shire of Renfrew, at the House of the Williamwood, they order the Prisoners to be brought into Edinburgh. Mr. John Campbell, Mr. Matthew Crawford, and some others preached there; the Ministers escaped, but the Meeting was dispersed, and the Dragoons pursued the common People, took a great Number of Plaids, Bibles, and other Things from the Women whom they overtook, and upwards of Sixty Men Prisoners; they were all of them common Country People almost, and their Names will just now come in: About Thirty four Glasgow People, and as many Country Men, were carried in Prisoners to Glasgow, where they were examined by the Lord Ross and others, commisionate for that end. The Bond was offered to them, but very few went in to it, who were liberate. The rest, after some Days Imprisonment there, were carried in to Edinburgh under a strong Guard.

Decreet past against these who were taken at it, banishing them to the Plantations.

Upon the 28th of May, I find a Decreet past in Council against them. John Bowie, James John, and Robert Maxwell, David Corsbie, William Niven in Shaws, William Vrie, James Lickprevick, James Blackwood, Robert Reid, David Fergusson, William Steven, David Gray, Archibald Haddoway, Mungo Cochran, Robert Hay, and many others, being called to give their Oath who preached, and whom they saw at the foresaid Conventicle, and they refusing, the Council banish them to his Majesty's Plantations in the Indies.

They are given to Ralph Williamson.

June 13th, some Sixteen more who had been at that Conventicle, are banished as above; and Ralph Williamson of London gives Security to the Council, to transport them to the Indies, and dispose of them there to the best Advantage, that is, sell them at as high Rates as the Markets would allow, and gets a Warrant to receive them when ready.

List of Persons put aboard in his Ship in December.

And to give all that relates to this together, after they had continued Prisoners till November, the Ship comes down from London to receive them; and they, with several others in Prison for Nonconformity, are sent off. December 12th, I find, the Council grant Warrant to the Earl of Linlithgow, to send a Party to receive the following Persons, Prisoners in Edinburgh and the Canongate, who are to be transported to the Plantations. James Maxwell indweller in Cathcart, William Niven in Eastwood, John Maxwell in Cathcart, Robert Maxwell there, William Vrie there, James Lickprevick there, James Blackwood in Carmonnock, David Corsbie there, Archibald Haddoway in Glasgow, John Bowie, William Hay, Mungo Cochran, William Steven there, David Fergusson in Bridgend, Edward Gray there, Robert Reid in Cathcart, Mr. Robert Meikle Chaplain to Sir James Stuart, Stephen Posteous Taylor in Canongate, Patrick Somerwel, William Hackstoun in Edinburgh, Adam Stobie of Luscar, James Mosman of Mount, William Laing, John Cavers, Mr. John Harroway, Robert Dykes, John and William Newmans, James Miller in Kirkaldy, George Alexander in Newburgh, David Barclay in Cowgubalty, Gilbert Marnock Chapman, John Clark Writer in Edinburgh, Thomas Mowbray in Kirkcaldoun, Alexander Stuart, James Law, John Fairbairn there, William ham Angus in Abercorn, James Brown, Robert Pontoon in Dalmenie, Richard Clidfsdale, 1678.

Mr. Adam Abercorn Chaplain to the Lady Cavers, William Turnbull Brother to Beulie, ——— Cunningham Cook to the Earl of Strathmore, William Temple in Lintoun, and Mr. Alexander Pe-din, Prisoners in Edinburgh, and James Pryde, John Anderson Servant to George Wingate in Glasgow, John Cumming there, Robert Reid Wright in Langside, Arthur Dougal, William Rae in Glasgow, Thomas Govan, William Govan, Alexander Anderson, Servants, John Graham, Alexander Buchanan, John Buchanan, Andrew Brown, Walter McGechan, John Orie, Daniel McDonald, Gabriel Thomson Merchant in Glasgow, David Kid, John Arnot, John Fervie in Falkirk, and John Rae; and deliver them to Edward Johnston Master of the St. Michael of Scarborough, now lying at Leith.

Accordingly, they were delivered to the said Johnston, for the behoof of the forenamed
Williamson, who was to carry them to Virginia, where they were to continue in Servitude for Life, the most Part of them for being present at one Field-conventicle. I have the Account which follows, from one of themselves. Their Passage 'twixt Leith and Gravesend was pretty tedious, and they were Five Days longer before they reached that Place than was concerted; and when they came, Mr. Williamson was not there. Mr. Johnston, who had them to alimant, would not take that Charge any longer; and so, after waiting some little Time for Williamson, and he not coming, he set them ashore, and left them to shift for themselves.
The Country were very kind to them, when they knew the Cause of their Sufferings; and they generally got Home safe, after they had been absent from their Houses about Nine Months. We shall meet with several of them falling afterwards into the Hands of the Persecutors.

When the Ship came to Gravesend, they are set ashore,
and get Home.

The other Conventicle over against the Bafs, was likewise in the Month of May. The Deputy-governor of the Bafs having Accounts of it, came upon the Meeting with about Forty Soldiers, and about Twenty Country People whom they forced along with them.
When they came near the Meeting, the People resolved to sit close, and stay upon the Place, and offer no Violence to the Soldiers, unless they disturbed them; and in that Case, they resolved to defend themselves. The Soldiers came up, and commanded the People to dismiss in the King's Name. Some who were next to them answered, They honoured the King, but were resolved to hear the Word of God when preached to them. At which one of the Soldiers struck at a Man that was nearest him: Whereupon a strong able Country Man, with a Staff, struck the Soldier to the Ground. When they were thus engaged, the Men upon that Side of the Meeting came and compassed the Soldiers, and disarmed them, and sent them off. I find from Letters at this Time, that none of the Soldiers were killed, except one who was shot. Two of the Persons at the Conventicle were taken that Day, and sent Prisoners to Haddingtoun, and some Time afterward some more.

Another Con-venticle over against the Bafs.

For being at this Conventicle James Learmont was executed. His Trial and Sentence was mightily cried out upon. Some Papers before me say, he was once assailed by the Jury, but Bishop Sharp being peremptory that he must die, moved the Advocate to threaten them with the utmost Severity; and at length they were prevailed with to bring him in guilty. 'Tis plain enough, that James was entirely free of killing that Soldier, and the Affize sustained the Probation that he had no Access to the Soldier's Death, and he was executed merely upon personal Prefence. But that the Reader may have a full View of this Matter, which made such a Noise at this Time, from the Fountain, I shall insert as short an Abstract as I can give of this Trial, from the Justiciary-records.

James Learmont taken upon the score of this Conventicle.

The Justice-court, consisting of Lord Carrington Justice-general, Lords Collingtoun, Strathurd, Castlehill, Forret, and Newtoun, sat September 11th. The Prisoners brought before them were James and George Learmonts, Robert Temple, Robert Hepburn in East-fentoun, William Bryson younger in Dunbar. The Libel against them by the King's Advocate is read, bearing, 'That the Prisoners, on the 5th Day of May last, or some or other of the Days of that 'Month, with the Number of a Thousand or thereby, did assemble or convocate on the 'Hills of Whitekirk, in the Sight and View of the Garison of the Bafs: And the Gover'nor having sent forth a Party, under the Command of Ensign Charles Maitland, and in the 'King's Name required them to dismiss, and promised that none of them should be made 'Prisoners if they would dismiss; they most insolently did invade and assault the said Charles
'and his Party, and did wound several of them with Halberds and Swords, and did cruelly
'murder and kill the deceased John Hog one of the Party, having his Majesty's Livery upon 'his Back; and had undoubtedly murdered the said Charles, and the rest of his Majesty's 'Soldiers, if they had not betaken themselves to Flight. Of which Crimes they and ilk one of 'them are Art and Part, and being found proven, they ought to be punished with the 'Pains of Death.'

Account of his Trial before the Justiciary, with some others.

Their Indictment.

In the Entry, the Advocate passeth from Hepburn and Bryson, reserving to himself to pursue them for Field-conventicles before the Council. Mr. David Thoires, Advocate for the Pannels, pleads, still denying the Libel, That the Defenders simple Prefence in a Crowd of a Thousand Persons, will not make them guilty; and offers, before the Lords of Justiciary, to prove that the Pannels came unarmed, and that others, now declared Fugitives, were seen

seen to strike the Defunct with Swords and Halberds, and that the Defenders did retire before the Engagement. The King's Advocate replies, That Field-conventicles are Rendezvous of Rebellion, and the Pannels Presence there in Arms is enough, which he undertakes to prove. Sibi imputent.

Lords Interlocutor, that Presence and Counsel at Conventicles is relevant.

The Lords give their Interlocutor upon this Part of the Debate, and find, 'That Presence at unlawful Meetings of Field-conventicles with Arms, at which the Slaughter was committed, or giving Counsel and Command in Words to this Purpose, Let there be no Cowards here this Day, Sirs, and let these who have Arms go out foremost, or the like Expressions, relevant, and remit the same to Probation.'

Probation.

When the Probation is led, James Manderstoun in North-berwick depones, That he saw the Pannel, James Learmont, at a Field-conventicle, May 5th, that he had no Arms, but that he heard him say, Let no Cowards be here to Day, but let such as have Arms go out to the Foreside; that he saw William Temple there with a Sword. Another of the Witnesses depones, He saw James Learmont ride out and view the King's Party, and said, They were but few, let there be no Cowards, &c. Another depones, William Temple had a Sword upon his Arm; that when once they were engaged, the Confusion was such, of a Hundred to one, that no distinct Account can be given.

After the Probation is over, the Assize bring in their Verdict to Morrow, as follows.

Verdict of the Assize.

'THE Fifteen sworn Men, passing upon the Assize of the Pannels libelled, viz. James Learmont, and William Temple, the said Assize having read and considered the Lords Interlocutor, and the Deposition of Witnesses; and having therein ripely advised, find William Temple guilty of being at the Conventicle libelled, near the Place where the Man was killed, with a Sword under his Arm, but not drawn: As also, they find James Learmont not only guilty of Presence, but of Words, conform to the Depositions of Witnesses; and this with one unanimous Voice of the Assize. Signed at Edinburgh, September 12th, 1678.'

ROBERT BULL Chanc.

When this is read, the Advocate declares he deserts the Diet against George Learmont. Several others, alledged to be concerned in this Business, Sheriff, Cowan, Dawson, Brock, Miller, and Bull, being often called, and not compearing, are declared Fugitives, and put to the Horn. The Court pronounce no Sentence this Day against the Two Pannels. It seems they wanted Direction what to do in so lame a Probation, and behoved to have an Act of Council to lead them in the Matter, though I find nothing of it in the Council-books.

Sentence of Death upon James Learmont.

Next Day, September 13th, I find what follows recorded in the Books of Justiciary. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having called for the criminal Process against James Learmont, and William Temple, Pannels, they sent the Earls of Murray and Linlithgow, the Lords Ross and Collingtoun, Four of their Number, to intimate to the Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, that their Lordships had considered the same Process, Interlocutor, and Verdict of Assize, and that they were well satisfied with the whole Procedure in that Affair, and recommended to the said Lords, that Justice should be speedily done upon the said Pannels: And the said Lords of the Justiciary having considered the Verdict of the Assize, against the said James Learmont and William Temple, together with the Recommendation made to them by the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council; they, by the Mouth of William Auld Dempster of the said Court, decerned and adjudged the said James Learmont to be taken to the Grass-market of Edinburgh, upon Friday the 27th of September, betwixt Two and Four in the Afternoon, and there to have his Head severed from his Body, and his Moveables, Goods, and Gear to be escheat, and brought in for his Majesty's Use; which was pronounced for Doom.

William Temple banished, tho' at the Conventicle with Arms.

'The Lords Commissioners of Justiciary continue pronouncing Doom against William Temple, until the Second Munday of November next. And, November 16th, I find William Temple appears before the Justiciary, and produces a Petition he had given to the Privy Council, with the Deliverance following. Edinburgh, November 7th, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having considered the within written Petition, recommended to the Commissioners of Justiciary, to pronounce Sentence of Banishment upon the Petitioner, unto his Majesty's Plantations in the Indies, he always enacting himself in the Books of Adjournal, that he shall never return to this Kingdom, under the Pain of Death, which was pronounced for Doom.'

Remarks on this Process.

Reflections upon this Process are so very obvious, that I enter not upon them. It appears to me, that William Temple, according to their own Laws, is more guilty than James Learmont, being at the Meeting with Arms, whereas the other had none; and their Laws as yet, did not make the simple Presence without Arms Death. Further, we see that the Justiciary, the supreme Court in Criminals, must act just as directed by the Council, in every Step, and receive their Orders upon the matter from them: And thus as the Council assumed a

Parliamentary

Parliamentary Power in making Laws, they take to themselves a criminal Power over the Lives and Fortunes of the Subjects, and every Thing valuable was subjected to them in this sad Period. 1678.

According to this severe Sentence, this good Man James Learmont was executed, as above. He was a Chapman: His Speech at his Death, as well as a large Paper he left behind him, are already printed in the last Edition of Nephtali, and so I shall not swell this History with them. There is one Passage I shall add, to shew the Iniquity of this Sentence, besides what appears from the Process, and it fully proves his Freedom from any Share in the Death of the Soldier who was killed. An aged and reverend Minister, yet alive, assures me, that Eight or Nine Years after this, he was called to see a dying Man, who told him, a very few Hours before his Death, he was one who was concerned in the Death of that Soldier that was killed at this Time, and that it had been Matter of the deepest Exercise to him how to carry when he heard of James Learmont's Sentence, and whether it was his Duty to offer himself, as having in his own Defence killed the Man, in order to the Preservation of the Life of his Neighbour, who indeed was not any ways concerned in it, or present at it.

To return again to a few other Particulars; towards the End of May, I find Informations come in to the Council of frequent House-conventicles; and in Edinburgh several Persons are fined in small Fines, comparatively to what had been in some of the former Years. Several fined for House-conventicles.

June 20th, a Petition is presented to the Council by George Hume of Kimmergham, and Jean Hume Lady Ayton, shewing, That the Council, by their Sentence in March last, ordered the Petitioners to be committed close Prisoners in the Castle of Edinburgh, conform to the Act of Parliament against clandestine Marriages; and the said Jean to pay a Thousand Merks to the Laird of Plainderghast Pursuer; that they have continued till now in Prison, and are ready just now to pay the Fine, and what shall be imposed, for pious Uses within the Parish. The Council order them to be liberate, in regard they have paid the Fine of a Thousand Merks, and consigned Seven hundred and fifty Merks for pious Uses. Hume of Kimmergham and Lady Ayton fined for irregular Marriage.

The Council, upon August 1st, have before them James Miller in Kirkaldy, David Barclay, Robert Marnock, and Seven or Eight more, who are charged with having been present at Field-conventicles, since the last Indemnity 1674. at Pitscottymuir, Ravensheugh, Kinkel, Kinloch, Balmerinock, Falkland, Collessie, Kirkaldy, Pathhead of Kirkaldy, Cleish, Kinross, Kennoway, Arclary, Dalgety, Largo, Kettle, Gowpar, Monzie, Kirkcoun, Lathons, Kilquhonchar, West-barns, Glenval, Borrowstounness, Kirklistoun, Queensferry, Dumbar, East-barns, Whitehill, Whitekirk-hill, Dundee, Sandford, Pittenweem, and other Places, and there to have heard Mrs. Welsh, Arnot, Semple, Williamson, Johnstoun, Wishart, Gillespie, Erskine, Donaldson, Rae, Hume, Weir, Wedderburn, Law, or some other outed Ministers. They compeared personally, and refused to give their Oath whom they saw at these Conventicles, and what they knew about them. The Council banish them to the Plantations, and order them to ly in Prison, until some Opportunity to transport them offer. Several banished for Field-conventicles.

August 14th, Thomas Kennedy of Grange compears before the Council, and confesses he was present at one Conventicle last Year. They fine him in Eight hundred Merks to be presently paid, and upon Payment of it he is dismissed. Kennedy of Grange fined for one Conventicle.

Next Day the Council write a Letter to the Bailie of Maybole in the Shire of Air, signifying, that they are informed there was a numerous Conventicle, the 4th of August, in the Muir of Garholm, near that Place, at which there were many Men in Arms, who did march in formed Troops and Companies, and require some Persons to come in and give the Council an Account of what they know in that Matter. I find the Council do no more about it. The same Day the Magistrates of Air are ordered to seize Mr. John Cunningham, Chamberlain to the Laird of Entrekin, for harbouring Mr. John Welsh in his House. A Conventicle near Maybole.

Upon September 11th, the Council call before them Patrick McDougal of French, Thomas Hay of Park, John Blair of Dunskey, Andrew Agnew of Sheucham, and Mr. James Lawrie of French, as being guilty of House and Field-conventicles, and resetting of Mr. John Welsh and Mr. Arnot. Andrew Agnew and John Blair compeared, and denied the Charge upon Oath, and were assolied. The Council supersede the extracting Letters against the other Three, being absent. The same Day Alexander Veitch of Glen, William Veitch Tenant to Glencranshoun, Adam Russel late Bailie of Peebles, are cited before the Council, for House and Field-conventicles. The first is absent, and the Lords grant Certification against him; the other Two appear, and are assolied. Gentlemen in Gal veitch prosecuted for Conventicles.

This same Day, I find a Letter from the King, of the Date September 4th, bearing, 'That there was an humble Address made to him, that Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart, because of his present Indisposition, may be removed from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh to a more healthful Prison; and requiring the Council to send him, under a Guard, to the Castle of Dumbarton, with Orders to the Captain to keep him close Prisoner.' This is appointed to be done next Munday. This Gentleman has been under Confinement now for some Years, for his gallant Appearances and Freedom of Speech in Parliament, and his opposing the Gallions he thought illegal. Polwart sent to Dumbarton Castle.

Council order to seize the Papers of such as are guilty of Nonconformity.

At this Diet the Council spend much Time about Conventicles, and come to this Resolution, besides what they had done before. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council ordain, that when Warrants shall be given hereafter for apprehending Persons guilty of Conventicles, resetting Rebels, and such like Disorders, that the Major-general have Warrant to give Orders to search for Arms and Papers, and that they be seized.' This was a very great Hardship to Gentlemen and others, upon Church-irregularities, of which the Soldiers were Judges, to have their Papers seized, and many Times when they themselves were absent. They likewise at the same Time ordain, 'That in Cases when Persons give Bond to live orderly, Caution be likewise found to present the Persons of the Delinquents when called for, under a particular Penalty.'

Some Soldiers
sent to Fife.

Next Day, September 12th, the Council go on in their Care against Conventicles: 'And to prevent Disorders in the Shire of Fife, a Squade of the Guards, and Twenty Foot with them, are ordered to quarter at Cowpar, and execute such Orders as they shall receive from the Council, their Committee, or the Major-general. And the Council being informed, that divers Burgeesses and Inhabitants of Kirkaldy have deserted the Kirk, and haunted Conventicles, order the Magistrates of that Burgh to proceed against such of the Inhabitants as they think fit, according to Acts of Parliament, and to delate the Names of the rest to the Council, against October next.'

Magistrates of Dundee thanked for suppressing Conventicles.

At that same Diet, they send a Letter of Thanks to the Magistrates of Dundee, for their discovering a Conventicle, and seizing the Preacher, and acquaint them that the Preacher is to be brought into Edinburgh, and recommend it to them to proceed against the Hearers, by Fining, Confining, or Imprisoning, conform to the Acts of Parliament.

Marquis of Douglas called to present
John Haddoway,
James and William Clelands.

By a Letter to the Marquis of Douglas, they acquaint him that John Haddoway his Chamberlain, and James and William Clelands, Sons to Thomas Cleland his Garner-keeper, having been before the Council, February 1677. for being at Conventicle, and other Disorders; and some Witnesses are examined, and the Process delayed, and his Lordship's Bond taken to produce them when called; they being now to go on in that Process, they desire him to exhibit them, the 27th Instant, conform to his Bond.

And required to plant the Kirk of Douglas.

In another Letter to the Marquis that same Day, they acquaint him, 'That being informed of the Vacancy of the Kirk of Douglas, and that the People of that Parish live disorderly, they desire he may plant that Kirk with some regular orthodox Minister, and take Advice of his Grace the Archbishop of Glasgow, to whom they have recommended the Planting of it, if he does it not speedily.'

Tenants of Cavers fined for Conventicles.

September 13th, James Mosman Tenant to the Laird of Cavers, and William Laing, and some others, are cited, for being at House and Field-conventicles, where Mr. Welsh, Mr. Arnot, Mr. Trail, Mr. Blackadder, Mr. Williamson, and other outed Ministers preached. The said James Mosman is fined in 1000 Merks, William Laing and another in 500 Merks apiece, and six or seven more in 100 Merks per piece; and the Council declare they shall be transported, if they pay not their Fines respectively against November next to come.

Mr. John Harroway banished to the Plantations.

Mr. John Harroway appears before them the same Day. The Council find, that tho' he never received lawful Ordination, he hath taken upon him to preach and exercise other Functions of the Ministry, at Leith, Culross, Dumfermling; and hath baptized, and married several Persons. He owned he had been ordained by Presbyterian Ministers, and that he had kept Conventicles; but refusing to declare upon Oath who ordained him, and who were present when he preached, the Council banish him to the Plantations, and order him to be kept in Prison till he be transported.

Robert Dick banished to Plantations, for one Conventicle not proven.

The same Day, Robert Dick Merchant and Salt-grieve in Prestonpans, is cited before the Council, for being present at one Conventicle upon Pentland-hills. No Probation was brought, and he refusing to depone thereanent, is held as confest, and banished to the Plantations.

A Conventicle near Renfrew.

At the same Diet, the Council give Orders to the Earl of Linlithgow, to cause apprehend and bring in Prisoners, the Persons lately present at a Field-conventicle near the Town of Renfrew.

Mr. James Hamilton troubled for preaching in a Vacancy.

October 9th, Mr. James Hamilton, indulged Minister at Evandale, is charged with breaking his Confinement, and intruding upon the Church of Blantyre, and preaching there when it was vacant: Being present he is rebuked before the Council, and this being the First Fault, they dismiss him without further Censure, and ordain him to keep the Council's Injunctions in Time coming.

Alexander Buchanan and others banished
for Conventicles.

At the same Diet, Alexander Buchanan in Bucklyvie, and Three or Four others there, Andrew Buchanan in Shrigartoun, and Three more Tenants in that Place, are brought before the Council, for being present at Field-conventicles in Stirling Shire; and having acknowledged the same before the Committee for publick Affairs, the Council banish them to the Plantations, and ordain them to be kept in Prison till they be transported.

Ten more banished for Conventicles.

November 7th, Thomas and William Govans, Alexander Anderson, Robert Pontoun, James Wilson, John Jervie, James Brown, Richard Clidisdale, David Kid, John Arnot, having confessed they were present at Conventicles, and refusing to depone who preached, and whom they they saw present there, are all of them by the Council banished to the Plantations. And Mr. John Govan having deposed that he was free of the Conventicles libelled against him, but acknowledging he had conversed with Mr. Thomas Forrester his Brother in Law, now intercommuned, the Council ordain him to lie in Prison till they consider his Case further: And, November 11th, the Council liberate him, upon his giving Bond to live orderly, and not to go to Conventicles.

Mr. John Govan imprisoned for conversing with his Brother in Law.

Mr. Alexander Pedin banished to the Plantations.

Mr. Alexander Pedin petitions the Council, November 14th, to be liberate from Edinburgh Tolbooth where he had lien for a long Time, and permitted to go to Ireland, where he had resided formerly for several Years; since no Libel had been given in against him, and he was not charged either with House or Field-conventicles in Scotland, now for Twelve Years. The Council, instead of granting his Petition, banish him to the Plantations, and discharge him ever to return to Scotland, and declare if he do, the Sentence of Forfeiture shall take effect, and ordain him to lie in Prison till he be transported. He was accordingly, with several of these above named, sent away in the St. Michael of Scarborough, as hath been noticed, where I find he was singularly useful among the Prisoners, and an Instrument of much Good to many in the Ship.

About this Time, Mr. Alexander Wilson, Minister of the Gospel at Cameron in the Presbytery of St. Andrews, a singularly pious and peaceable Person, was brought to no small Trouble; I shall give a Hint of it in this Place, altogether from an attested Account of it before me. He was turned out, with others, for his Nonconformity to Prelacy, by the Influence of the Archbishop, in the Year 1662. after he had diligently served his Master in that Charge Twelve Years, being ordained Minister of Cameron in 1650. This good Man went and lived in Cowpar of Fife about sixteen Years, during which Time, notwithstanding his Sermons were mostly in his own House, he was frequently searched for, and many Times narrowly escaped. We have heard he was intercommuned some Years ago, and towards the Beginning of November this Year, an Order was sent, procured by the Primate from the Council, requiring the Magistrates of Cowpar, under the Penalty of 500 Merks, to banish Mr. Wilson and his Family from the Town, in Forty eight Hours after their receiving the Orders. The Orders came to their Hands upon Saturday, when at the Preparation-sermon, before the Sacrament of the Supper to be dispensed by the Episcopal Minister next Day; and they thought good to delay the Execution of them till Munday. When Sermon was over that Day, the Magistrates, immediately after they came out of the Church, before they went Home to their own Houses, came straight with their Attendants and the Town-officers, to Mr. Wilson's House, and searched for him. He had got some Hint of the Orders, and had withdrawn himself: However, they intimate the Council's Pleasure to Mrs. Wilson, commanding her and her Family to remove out of the Town in Twenty four Hours. Mrs. Wilson signified to them that it was not possible for her to remove her Family in so short a Time, having six Children, and one of them under Sickness at present, and hoped they would not be so rigorous, considering the Circumstances of her small Family.

Mr. Alexander Wilson's Sufferings.

However, to obtemperate as far as possible, that very Night Mrs. Wilson privately removed with her sick Child, and the other Five, and her Servants, to lurk in a Neighbour's House, till she should see what would become of the sick Child, and till she might take some Measures how to dispose of her Family, and that the Magistrates might be in no Hazard of the Penalty, for not executing their severe Orders, which they alledged was the only Reason of their Harshness to her. Yet the very next Day, the Magistrates came to see whether their Orders had been obeyed, and finding nothing but locked Doors, they caused a Smith, whom they had with them for this very end, fix iron Plates upon all the Doors of Mr. Wilson's House, while the whole Plenishing was remaining in the House, Mrs. Wilson looking for no such Treatment, when she had, as far as possible, complied with the Orders she received: Yea, as oft as Mrs. Wilson privately went into the House, to get out such Necessaries as she wanted, as oft new Plates were put on by the Magistrates. Under these Difficulties Mr. Wilson's Family continued for some Time, till the Lady Prestonhall, knowing their Strait, made an Offer of an empty House near the Town, but not within its Jurisdiction, in which her Gardiners used to live, which was very thankfully embraced, though there was scarce so much Room in it as to place the Beds necessary for the Family. Even there the persecuting Temper followed them: Mr. Wilson was frequently searched for in that little House, but never caught; and the Magistrates, in Conjunction with the Sheriff-depute, endeavoured to eject his Family from that little Shelter; but the foresaid Lady protected them: And, as soon as the Season of the Year would permit, the Family removed to Kirkcaldy, where no House could be found to be set for Money to Mr. Wilson, save one that belonged to a Person who was himself intercommuned for Nonconformity. There and at Burntisland Mr. Wilson and his Family suffered very much till the Revolution, when, in the Year 1689. this excellent Person, after Twenty seven Years Persecution, returned to his old Flock at Cameron.

Hardships upon his Family.

House and Field-conventicles, and refusing to depone upon the Circumstances of them, they are banished to the Plantations.

Alexander Anderson's Testimony when banished being under 16 Years of Age.

One of these Persons who were sent off, Alexander Anderson, left a Paper by way of Testimony behind him, dated, Canongate Tolbooth, December 10th, 1678. a Copy whereof is before me, which I take to be the Original. He was extremely young, and under Sixteen Years of Age, and yet because he would make no Compliances, he is banished with the rest. He takes notice, 'That he is the youngest Prisoner in Scotland, and that the Lord had opened his Eyes, and revealed his Son in his Heart, since he came under the Cross; that tho' he had much Difficulty to part with his Friends and Relations, yet he had now found Fellowship with Christ did much more than balance the Want of the Company of his dearest Relations; that tho' he be so very young, as he could not be admitted as a Witness among Men, yet he hopes that Christ hath taken him to be a Witness to his Cause. He adheres to the Work of Reformation from Popery and Prelacy, to the National and Solemn League and Covenants; and witnesses against the pulling down of the Government of Christ's House, and setting up lordly Prelacy, and joyning with them; and adduces a good many Places of Scripture, which he conceives strike against this Practice. He makes an Apology, That he who is but a Child should leave any thing of this Nature behind him; but says, He was constrained to it, to testify that God perfects Strength out of the Mouth of Babes. He regrets the Indulgence, as what, upon both Sides, had been Matter of Stumbling and Offence among good People; and declares his Fears that a black dreadful Day is coming upon Scotland; that 'tis good to seek the Lord, and draw near to him. He leaves his Commendation to the Cross of Christ, and blesses the Lord for carrying him through Temptations, and enabling him, one of the Lambs of his Flock, to stand before great Men and Judges; and closes with his good Wishes to all the Friends of Christ.'

Andrew Breddy killed at a Conventicle in Forgondenny.

By an attested Account I find, this Year there was a Conventicle in Perth Shire, at the Hill of Coltenachar, in the Parish of Forgondenny; and, upon the Lord's Day, an Officer with a Company of wild Highlanders came suddenly upon them, and, without any Orders to dismiss, or essaying to seize any of them, discharged their Pieces among the poor unarmed People. By good Providence there was but one Man killed, Andrew Breddy, a Wright by Trade, who lived at my Lord Ruthven's Gate in the Green of Freeland. He left behind him a Widow and Four Orphans.

Mr. James Webster imprisoned 18 Months, for being at a Meeting for Prayer;

I shall end this Section by observing, That toward the End of this Year, the Reverend Mr. James Webster, since the Revolution for many Years Minister at Edinburgh, was seized by the Magistrates of Dundee, with Eight others, when meeting for Prayer and Conference. Several of them were severely fined, though nothing could be laid to their Charge, save calling on the Lord's Name together in this melancholy Time. Mr. Webster was kept close Prisoner in Dundee more than Eighteen Months. By the Council-registers I find, 'March 20th, 1680. the Magistrates of Dundee acquaint the Council, That Mr. James Webster had been upwards of a Year Prisoner in their Tolbooth, for one House-conventicle, (so they call this Meeting for Prayer) and they have him to maintain in Prison. The Council order him to be liberated.'

Was refused his Degrees for his Nonconformity.

In this Place I shall bring in all the Hardships this worthy Person underwent, from some Hints he himself, after much Importunity, sent me a little before his much lamented Death, May 1720. After he had gone through his Philosophical Studies, wherein he made great Proficiency, at the University of St. Andrews, some Three or Four Days before the Class wherein he was were to receive their Degrees, an Order came from the Archbishop, that he should lay aside his Gown, and remove from the Class. The only Reason for this surprising Order was, That Mr. Webster had not waited regularly upon Ordinances. The Regent indeed offered to intercede with the Bishop, providing he would engage to walk orderly, and wait upon Ordinances dispensed by Episcopal Ministers. Mr. Webster refusing to do so, asked a Testimonial from his Regent, that he had studied under him Four Years. It was with Reluctancy he refused this, telling him it was as much as his Gown was worth.

His Troubles, 1678.

In the Year 1678. Mr. Webster was apprehended in the Town of Dundee, on a Lord's Day after Noon, when at a Meeting for Prayer, Conference, and reading the Scriptures. Next Day the Magistrates, without calling any in the Meeting before them, or making any previous Examination, informed the Council that they had seized several Persons at a Conventicle, with Mr. Webster the Preacher. By the Council's Orders, the Persons taken with him were fined, and Mr. Webster was kept Eighteen Months Prisoner. In this Interval the King's Indemnity, 1679. was published, and Mr. Webster urged it, and was indeed legally comprehended in it; but the Magistrates would not allow him Liberty, till at length the Council was informed that he was no Preacher, as indeed he was not, and so he was let out.

Imprisoned, 1685, in the Thieves-hole of Dumfries.

About the 1685 or 86. when Mr. Webster was living peaceably, in the House of Grier of Discauth, a Party of Lord William Douglas's Troop came on a Sabbath Morning, and seized him in his Chamber, and carried him to Dumfries. He was examined upon the ordinary Questions; and, with Two worthy Men, John Clark a Farmer, and John Haldane Weaver at the Town-end of Dumfries, he was thrust into the Thieves-hole, a very nasty Place, and had had for Companions, Three Men there in Firmance for Robbery, Murder, and Bestiality. There Mr. Webster and his Two Friends continued in that ugly Hole full Three Weeks, and after that removed to the Pledge-house, where Debtors used to be put. There he was confined Four Weeks, and then liberate by Lieutenant-general Drummond. The Gentleman in whose House they were taken, was likewise made Prisoner for some Time. A little after, Mr. Webster was a Third Time taken Prisoner, when walking in the Street of Edinburgh; but the Viscount of Strathallan quickly again let him go. These are some Hints of the more publick Sufferings of this good Man, whose eminent Learning, Piety, and Zeal is so well known in this Church, that I need say no more of him. Such was his Modesty, that in his last Letter writ to me, he terms all this, Poor and insignificant Sufferings, not worthy a Room in this History. I was of another Opinion, and I think the Reader will be so likewise.

These are some few of the Troubles Presbyterians were brought to for their being at Conventicles, their Nonconformity, and praying to the Lord together. Many more Instances might be added, but I have very much confined my self to the publick Registers. It is now high Time to come to close the History of this Year, and this Chapter I have been so long upon, with SECT. VII.

Of the Convention of Estates which met in June, the Cess imposed by them, and some other Things which fell out this Year 1678.

THis Chapter shall be finished with an Account of the Convention, and Cess imposed by them, and some other Incidents this Year, which may clear up the History of this Time, and yet could not conveniently come in upon the former Sections.

It was very grating to the Prelates and their Party, to find their Contrivance of the Highland Host come to so little, and the breaking out of Field-conventicles, as we have heard, made them lose the Sweetness they expected from the severe Revenge they had taken on the West Country. Care was taken to inform the King of these Field-conventicles, and they have Recourse to their so long wished for Expedient of a standing Army, which they found necessary to carry on their arbitrary Measures, and the Oppression of the poor harassed Country; and what only could support them under the Hatred they had drawn down upon themselves, by the severe and illegal Methods now given into. The Necessity of more Forces had been dropt in Letters from Scotland, and it was very agreeable to the Measures now upon the Field in England.

Accordingly, a Letter comes down from the King, dated May 7th, containing another Approbation of their Procedure, and a Proposal to raise new Forces; and it deserves a Room here.

The Occasion of this Convention of Estates.

King's Letter, May 7. about raising more Forces.

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty, &c. We greet you well. After full and satisfactory Information from the Lords commisionate by you here, of what hath been done by you in Our Service, We do again approve of your Proceedings, and your Care, assuring you of Our Favour, Assistance, and Protection, upon all Occasions: And for the more effectual Demonstration thereof, We find it necessary to signify to you, and by you to Our People there, that We are firmly resolved to own and assert Our Authority, so as it may equally encourage you, and discourage all such as, by seditious Practices, endeavour to asperse you, and lessen Our Authority and Prerogative: And finding by good Information, that the Phanaticks there, expecting Encouragement from such as oppose you, and taking Advantage of the present Juncture of Affairs here, have of late, with great Insolence, flocked together in open and Field-conventicles, these Rendevouzes of Rebellion, and have dared to oppose Our Forces. Though We neither need, nor do fear such insolent Attempts, yet, from a just Care of Our Authority, and Kindness to Our Subjects there, We have thought fit to order some more Forces to be levied; and for that effect We have commanded the Lords of Our Treasury, to take an effectual Course for providing what Money We shall find necessary, for raising and maintaining those Troops at Our Charges. We shall expect a speedy and exact Accounting of what Number and Quality of Troops may be necessary upon this Occasion, to the end We may direct Commissions, and give such Orders as We shall find requisite: And for doing this, this shall be your Warrant. And so We bid you heartily Farewel.

Convention of Estates necessary, since the Parliament could scarce be ventured
upon.

Such a Letter as this would be very acceptable to the Managers; and they write back, as we have heard, that the only Way left to bear down Conventicles, is by raising new Forces. The Forces needed Money to support them, and a Convention of Estates was necessary to raise this. Parliaments now could not be ventured upon, lest Enquiry had been made into the State of the Nation, and Methods taken to relieve the Country from the Hardships it was lying under; and a Convention answered the Demand of Money fully as well. This Practice of calling Conventions only to levy Money, and never permitting Parliaments to sit to consider just Grievances, and provide Remedies, was one of the arbitrary Steps of this Period loudly and justly complained of.

Remarks on it.

Accordingly, in Council, May 28th, a Letter constituting the Duke of Lawderdale Commissioner, with very large and ample Powers, is read, and a Proclamation for calling a Convention of Estates, is published with very great Solemnity. A Copy is annexed, App. No. 95. I shall make no Reflections upon it. When the sending in an Army of barbarous Highlanders to live at Discretion, was not of Force enough to tempt Presbyterians to Rebellion, it is in vain to speak of Hazard from Field-conventicles; and the Reader will notice them now to be termed execrable Meetings. What would Papists and others say, when they heard the pure and plain Preaching of the Gospel declared execrable, and a great Blessing, by this profane Stile, made a Curle. That the Reader may have a further View of the true State of Field-meetings at this Time, and the preceeding Years, I have insert a Letter writ in Defence of Field-meetings, by a Person of good Judgment, upon the Receipt of this Proclamation, App. No. 96. After this Proclamation was published, the Guards attended the Duke, and to Morrow, May 29th, he came up to the Church in great Pomp, and the Day was celebrated with lusty drinking and feasting.

The Conven-
tion's Act and Order to the King.

A new Regiment of Foot, Three Troops of Horse, and some Dragoons were proposed to be raised, and a Cess of Eighteen hundred thousand Pounds to maintain them. The Elections went all well on as the Court could wish, and the Convention sat down upon the Day appointed, June 26th, and upon the 10th of July they come to pass their Act and Offer of Eighteen hundred thousand Pounds to the King. This is so express in its Terms, so plain in its Design against Presbyterians, and became so heavy in its Execution, that I cannot but insert it, App. No. 97. Reflections upon it are needless, the Reader will easily see, that they narrate the Disorders of the Country, which they lodge upon Field-conventicles, for Remedy of which they agree to the raising and paying of an Army, for subsisting of which they lay their Assessment upon the Country, and conclude all with a very rigorous Method of uplifting the Money.

Effects of it.

Debates among Presbyterians about the Lawfulness of the Cess imposed.

By this the Bishops have at length their Wishes. Their Friends are provided for in the Army, Presbyterians are first divided, and then born down by the Soldiers, and by the Severities of this new Army they are forced to a Rising next Year.

This Act divided those who were already disjoyned, and the Debates upon the Lawfulness or Unlawfulness of paying the Cess here imposed, were not few. Upon the one Hand it was strongly urged, that the Payment of this Cess was an active concurring with the Persecutors in their bearing down of the Lord's Work in the Land; and it was said, it was much the same whether this was done by the Sword or the Purse. Upon the other Side it was reasoned, that since Violence was both expected and used, it appeared more advisable by a Piece of Money to preserve themselves and their Families alive, and their Substance in their Hands, for better Uses, than by an absolute Refusal to give an Occasion, and afford a legal Pretext to the Collectors Cruelty, to destroy all, and take as much as would raise and maintain Two Armies. It was added, that paying Cess in this Case was not spontaneous, but involuntary and forced, and therefore to be excused, a Person in such Circumstances being rather a Sufferer than an Actor; and though it would be certainly sinful in a Merchant, to throw his Goods into the Sea in fair Weather, yet it becomes his Duty to lighten the Ship, that he may save his Life in a Storm.

Some of very good Parts and great Piety were upon both Sides of this Debate, and the Heats and Heights among Ministers, Preachers and People were not small. The banished Ministers in Holland were warmly against paying this Assessment; and such Ministers here who were of the same Sentiments preached against the paying of it, and some of the Hearers violently pressed Ministers to preach against it, while those of the other Side asked, How they would keep it and much more out of the Soldiers Hands? Against paying it the Example of one of the primitive Christians was much urged, who having rashly demolished an Idol Temple, choosed to suffer Martyrdom before he would rebuild it. These who were for paying it, as the lesser Evil of Suffering, were silent till the Clamour and Heat was a little over, and used to declare, that if in their Judgment they had been against paying it, they would have advised People to retire and leave the Country.

Some few did pay it with a Declaration, and chose the middle Way 'twixt paying it without any Testimony against what was evil in it, and refusing to pay at all. Among these the forementioned Quintin Dick in Dalmellington was one. And it will not be unacceptable to some of my Readers to set down from his own Papers his Exercise and Practice in this Matter in his own Words.

In the Year 1678. the King, by an Act of the Convention of Estates, did impose upon the Subjects, a Cess to be paid, and by the Act did signify the Reasons for which he imposed it; and among others this is one, For levying and keeping up of Forces to suppress these Meetings, called Conventicles. The Act with this Qualification did beget in many a Reluctance to give Obedience; and amongst others, having made it my Work in my Place and Station (as a Witness to the Interest of my Lord and Master Jesus Christ) to keep at Distance from all Manner of sinful Compliance or Accession to the Overthrow of his Work and Worship in Scotland, I judged my self deeply concerned how to carry in this Case: Especially, when by the holy and sovereign Dispensation of God, for his own holy and wise Ends, he hath made it the sad Lot of the honest Ministers and Professors in Scotland at this Time, to be under a Spirit of Division and Rent, to that Measure, that tho' all were for bearing witness to one and the same Cause and Interest, yet they could not agree in one and the same Method and Way of entering their Testimony. In this Hour of Darkness, being much perplexed how to carry without Scandal and Offence, I betook my self to God for Protection and Direction: For Protection, that I might be kept from any Measure of denying of Christ, or giving Ground to Persecutors to think or say, that I had contributed any Thing for the Overthrow of Christ's Work: And for Direction, that I should not be found to stave off my Trouble upon any Grounds, but such as might be clearly warranted from the Word of God. And after much Liberty in pouring out my Heart to God, I was brought to weigh, That as my paying of it might be by some interpret a Scandal, and a sinful Acquiescence in the Magistrate's sinful Command; so upon the other Hand, my refusing to pay it would be the greater Scandal, being found to clash against a known Command of God, of giving to all their Due, Tribute to whom Tribute is due, Custom to whom Custom; and knowing that Christ Jesus, for that same very end, to evite Offence, did both pay Tribute himself, and commanded his Followers to do it, I could see no Way to refuse Payment of that Cess, unless I had clashed with that Command of Paying Tribute unto Cesar. So to evite the Scandal of Compliance on the one Hand, and Disobedience to the Magistrate in Matter of Custom on the other, I came to a Determination to give in my Cess to the Collector of the Shire of Air where I lived, with a Protestation against the Magistrate's sinful Qualification of his Commands, and a full Adherence unto these Meetings of God's People, called Conventicles, which in the Act he declared his Design to bear down, as the Protestation it self, signed by my Hand, more fully bears in a Paper by it self. I had no sooner done this, but I was trysted with many sharp Centures from many Hands, among which this was one, That my Protestation was only to evite Sufferings, and could be of no Weight, being protestatio contraria facto. But being truly perswaded, that it is the Magistrate's Right to impose and exact Cess and Custom, I could have no Clearness to state my Sufferings in Opposition unto so express a Command of God. And as to the Magistrate's sinful Qualification, having so openly declared and protested against it, I conceive the Censure of this, to evite Suffering, is altogether groundless; seeing the Enemy has subscribed with my Hand before Witnesses, a resolute Adherence to that which they say this tends to overthrow; and if he mind to persecute upon the Ground of owning Conventicles, he has a fair and full Occasion against me, under my Hand: But if he intend to state my Suffering upon refusing to pay Cess to the Magistrate, I have no Clearness to expose my self, or give him Ground to found my Sufferings upon such a Refusal. And when my subtil Adversary seeks Grounds to state my Trouble upon my Opposition to any of the Commands of God, I absolutely hold it, for Duty to own these Commands, by paying of Cesar's Due, and to obviate his Subtilties by a clear Protestation against sinful Qualifications. So whatever has, or shall be the Censure of Friend or Foe, this I say to the Praise and Glory of my God and my Guide, I have met with from him much Comfort, Peace of Mind, and Rest in my Conscience: Thou hast holden me by my right Hand, thou shalt guide me with thy Counsel, and afterward receive me to Glory.

Quintine Dickson
Vindlicating his Sentiments and Practice
about this Cess:

A few Months ended this Debate practically, and all were forced to pay this Imposition one way or other. We shall, in the Progress of this History, meet with many Instances of the Severities of the Soldiers in exacting Cess from good People who scrupled to pay it. I shall only give one Instance this Year out of many. James Graham of Claverhouse, with a numerous Party of Soldiers, came and quartered upon Gilbert Milne in new Glenlace Parish, for a good many Days, without paying any Thing; and when they went off, tho' they had consumed Ten Times the Value of the Cess, they carried with them Three Horses worth Ten Pounds Sterling. John Arrol who commanded the Party, was killed next Year at Drumclog, and had his Bowels tread out by a Horse.

Much Severity
in exacting the Cess.

Before I leave this Matter of the Convention, let me take some Notice of the State and Circumstances of the Army, and the Affair of the Militia, which came towards the End of this Year to make some Noise. The Troops to be maintained upon this Cess were principally designed against the Presbyterians. The Settling of the Highlands was also made a Pretext for some of them. I shall give some Hints how this Affair, and that of the Militia, stood this Year, as far as I can gather from the Registers.

September 11th, I find a Letter from the King read in Council, requiring them to raise two Highland Companies, that a Stop may be put to the Depredations in the Highlands; and ordering each Company to consist of 150, besides Officers. I do not find in the Registers that any such Companies are raised. Indeed at this Time they are so throng in prosecuting Conventicles, that they seem to mind Nothing else; and it may be, the Managers inclined to have the Soldiers, supported by the Celts, employed mostly that Way. September 13th, they write a Letter to the Lord McDonald, ordering him to attend them, September 27th, that he may give Security for the Peace of his Bounds; but he makes no Haste to wait on them. And, October 10th, the Registers bear, 'That the Lords of his Majesty's privy Council having, for the Peace of the Highlands, granted Warrant to keep a Garrison at Inverlochy, do give Warrant to their Commander to garison the House of Dowart belonging to the Earl of Argyle, or that of Kenlochallen belonging to Mclean of Lochbowie, or that of Dunolich belonging to the Laird of Mcoul, or Bartallen belonging to the Earl of Cathness, as he shall find cause. November 11th, they write another Letter, charging the Lord McDonald to appear before them November 28th.' But that Popish Lord continues to sit their Charges, and, it is said, wanted not a Friend at Court, who one Day might have Service for him and his Popish Vassals, as much as the Council had for the Highlanders in the Beginning of this Year, against the West Country.

King's Letter
for raising Forces.

The Business of the Militia was a Matter that more nearly concerned the Managers, and of greater Consequence to them for securing their arbitrary Measures, and the bearing down of Presbyterians, and therefore some more vigorous Steps are taken in it. A Letter is read in Council, October 9th, from the King, signifying that he had granted Commissions to raise a Regiment of Foot, consisting of Eight Companies, and Three Troops of Horse, of Sixty Men each, besides Officers, to secure the Kingdom from foreign Invasions, and intestine Com-motions; and requiring all the Officers of the former and new levied Forces to attend their respective Charges, upon Pain of his Displeasure. The Council nominate the Earls of Murray, Wigton, and Linlithgow, the Bishop of Galloway (lately made a Counsellor, and now he must be employed for the Church in Military Affairs) Lords Elphinston, Ross, and Colling-ton, and Mr. Matland, or any Three of them, to meet the 22nd Instant, and deliver Com-missions to the Officers named by his Majesty, and to order them to rendezvouze on the Links of Leith last Thursday of November, and appoint the Earl of Linlithgow to intimate his Ma-jesty's Pleasure above to all concerned.

Letter about modelling the Militia.

It would seem these new Forces did not fully answer the ends proposed, and therefore, November 14th, a Letter comes down from the King to the Council, about raising and model-ling Five Thousand Foot, and Five Hundred Horse out of the Militia Troops. The Coun-cil acquiesce in it, and no doubt it was the Concert of the prevailing Party among them, and send up Instructions relative to this Matter, for the King to give his Consent to, of which more just now.

King's Letter.
Instructions for and Division of 5500 Militia, and the Oath
they were to take.

December 19th, this Matter is brought to some Ripeness; and another Letter comes down from the King, giving them Thanks for their Care in this Matter, and fully approving their Instructions to the Commissioners of the Militia, and the Division of them, as to the different Shires through the Kingdom, with an Oath that the King will have all of them to take. I have insert all those in the Appendix, for the Use of such as are willing to peruse them: Indeed this was a Model to make the Militia effectual for all the ends of a large standing Army, and a promising Method to bear down and ruine Presbyterians. See App. N^o. 98.

Accounts of some other Particulars this Year.

I come now to gather up some other Things which fell out this Year, left of design to this Place, which may tend a little to enlighten the History of this Period, and they are set down much in the Order of Time they fell out.

Dr. James Lesly staged before the Council,
for writing
Letters to the Bishop of London, reflecting on the Council and Duke of Lauderdale, and deprived.

December 17th, 1677. the Council order Dr. James Lesly Principal of Marishal Col-lege in Aberdeen, to be seized, and carefully sent into Edinburgh: And, January 3^d, this Year, the Doctor appears before the Council, and is charged 'with writing Two missive Letters, 'the one dated the penult Day of October, the other the 29th of November last, to the Bishop of 'London, containing many gross Lies, Aspersions, and Misrepresentations of the publick Affairs 'of this Kingdom, and Proceedings of his Majesty's privy Council, and desiring the Bishop to 'advise his Majesty to do Things inconsistent with the standing Laws of the Kingdom. 'The said Doctor did with great Remorse acknowledge his Folly and Error in writing so, and 'confessed the same was so great a Crime that his Life was not sufficient to expiate it, and 'humbly submitted himself to what Punishment the Council should think fit to inflict. 'The Council declare his Place vacant, and fallen into the Earl of Marishal's Hands, and ordain 'him upon his Knees to crave the Council Pardon, which he did immediately, heartily and particu- 'larly begging his Grace the Duke of Lauderdale Pardon, whom he had so groundleily and 'causelessly abused; and is set at Liberty. I know no more of this Matter. It seems the Doctor had written a little too plainly anent the Practices of the Duke, and some way or other his Letters Letters came to his Hands. And however abundance of Freedom was used with relation to the Duke's Administration at London, yet Nothing of this Nature was let pass here. 1678.

Another Process, somewhat of the same Nature, I find commenced in August this Year, against some Gentlemen in the South. August 1st, the Council being informed of some treasonable Expressions uttered by M'dougal of Gartland, Thomas Hay of Park, M'dougal of Freugh, John Blair of Dunskey, Mr. James Lawrie at Freugh, and of their communing with and resetting Mr. John Welsh and others, declared Rebels; they order his Majesty's Advocate to raise Dittay against them before the Lords of the Justiciary.

The Laird of Gartland processed for Expressions against the King and Duke of Lawderdale; and detaining Mr.
Row, but Probation fails.

September 11th, I find by the Justiciary Registers, that the Diet is deserted against M'dougal of Gartland for certain seditious Speeches, upon Absence of Witnesses, who are unlaured. We have heard before, that the same Day the Council have before them others of these Gentlemen, for Reset and Converse, and we have seen what they did. The Process upon seditious Speeches is afterwards resumed against Gartland, November 4th, before the Justiciary. When his Libel is read, bearing, 'That notwithstanding Act 3^d. Parl. 2. James I. and the 83 Act. 6th Parl. James V. and 134th Act, 8th Parl. James VI. and 10th Act, 10th Parl. James VI. and Act 2^d. Sess. 2^d. Parl. 1st. Charles II. against slanderous Speeches against his Majesty and Government: Nevertheless William M'dougal of Gartland did, July 14th, 1678. being Sabbath, say, That the King and the Duke of Lawderdale his Commissioner were establishing arbitrary Government, contrary to the fundamental Laws of the Land, and that every true-hearted Scots Man was concerned to oppose them. And upon the 21st Day of the said Month, Mr. John Row having preached in his own Kirk of Stainy Kirk, where the said William M'dougal is Heritor and Parishioner, against the national and solemn League and Covenants, which by the foresaid Act were declared null, the said William did declare that the said Mr. Row was unworthy to be heard by the People, and that he would hear him no more: Therefore &c. in common Style of Libels. The Laird of Gartland compar'd, and remitted the Libel to Probation, and Nothing being proven, the Process is dropt.

Another Business of the same Nature I find before the Council, December 19th. James Daes of Coldingknows is libelled, 'That having conceived Dislike at his Majesty's Government, he discouraged Souldiers from serving him, by saying, He would not desire their Employment; and in a publick Debate he argued against the Justice of the Laird of Polwart's Imprisonment, and said, His Majesty had no more Power over the Persons than over the Estates of his Subjects, and could not keep in Prison above Forty eight Hours, without putting to a Trial.' The Council find the Libel proven, and appoint him to crave Pardon of the Council on his Knees. Thus People literally are made Offenders for a Word.

I shall next take notice of some of the more moderate Steps of the Council, brought about, generally speaking, as much by Interest made with some of them, as by Inclination. March 1st, Mr. Robert Anderson, cited before them for Nonconformity, and, if I mistake it not, tho' the Registers do not bear so much, for preaching at Conventicles, is liberate, because they are informed, he is employed by my Lord Ruthven when abroad, about some of his Affairs: But he is obliged to give Bond, upon Penalty of 2000 Merks, to appear before the Council when called. July 5th, they liberate George M'kartney from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, upon Bond of 1000 Merks to compare when called. And, August 14th, Sir James Stuart late Provost of Edinburgh, Prisoner in the Castle, is ordered to be liberate, by reason of his old Age and Infirmary, and permitted to go to his own House, under Bond of 10000 Merks, to appear when called.

August 1st, the Council renew their former Act, requiring all concerned in the Execution of the Laws, to take the Oath of Allegiance, and Declaration, and appoint their Act to be printed, and sent to all the Members of inferior Judicatories, Town-councils and Magistrates, that none neglect the doing of it.

Complaints, it seems, had been made against William Stirling Bailie-depute of the Regality of Glasgow, as not having done what he might have done for suppressing Conventicle. August 14th, he compares before the Council, and alledges he hath but newly entred into that Office, and was not well acquainted with the Methods of the Court. The Lords supersede Process against him till October next, and require him to be more diligent. I do not find any more Complaints against him for Remissness this way. But, October 9th, the Council cause write a Letter to him, that they have declared James Dunlop of Houshil incapable of the Trust of being Baron-bailie, and he is required to continue diligent in that Trust, and send in Report of his denouncing the Persons whose Names are sent him, against November next.

Remissness.

I find James Dunlop of Houshil, formerly fined by the Council in 1000 Pounds, for his neglect in proceeding against Persons guilty of being at Conventicles, having applied to the Committee for publick Affairs, and promised in time to come, diligently and vigorously to do his Duty, if the Council will repon him; they repon him as Bailie-depute of the Regality of Glasgow, during Pleasure, and suspend his Fine. Heats and Rents this Summer upon the Indulgence, and hearing the Indulged.

Some Account of the Occasions and Rise of those lamentable Divisions, from a Letter to the Author of this History.

sition of some of his Friends; but this Gentleman was never acceptable to the Archbishop, and Episcopal Clergy, and he continued not long in this Office.

It was this Summer and Harvest that the Heats about the Indulgence began to come to a greater Height than formerly, and that both some Ministers and Probationers, lately licensed to preach, began a Separation upon this Score, and some of them likewise took in the paying of the Cels laid on by the Convention, as we have heard. This is a Subject I would willingly pass by in this History, were it not a very considerable Part of the lamentable Circumstances this poor persecuted, and now divided Church was under. I shall only essay to narrate Matter of Fact, as far as I find it in Papers of this Time come to my Hand, and I heartily wish it may be a Beacon to us who come after, to guard against every Thing that may, from very small Beginnings, issue in a Rent and Flame, and have Consequences worse than I can express.

This Account I choose to give rather in the Words of others than mine own, and I shall begin it with Part of a Letter writ to me by a private Gentleman of Piety and very good Sense, who had much Occasion to be with both Sides at this Time; and being then but in his Youth, was a silent and melancholy Observer of what he took to be Excesses on both Hands. Having desired his Accounts of this Period, he writes to me as follows.

‘The State of Presbyterians among themselves, in this Period, is very difficult to enquire into, and no less to describe. All I purpose to my self is, if I can any ways confirm the better and more complete Descriptions you may have already.’

‘The Gospel was for some Years generally preached in the Fields through the South of Scotland, and that with Success; God was unquestionably at Work upon the Hearts of People by the Ministry of the Word, both in the Fields, and in the Churches by the Indulged, and that both in Conversion and Edification; and no doubt Satan was busy also sowing his Tares, the Seeds of Dissention and Division, which afterwards sprang up.’

‘Albeit, even from the very first, not a few of the Judicious had their own Doubts as to the Indulgence, some thinking their Way to be a little too submissive, and pliable to such Usurpations and Encroachments as were daily making; others judged they should have accepted no Favour from declared Enemies, but what was generally extended to their Brethren in the same Circumstances with them; others smelled much Cunning and Craft in the Design, and feared the Event: Some, both of Ministers and People, were under those Impressions; yet these Things made no publick different Practices, till about this Time (1677 and 1678) and People went to Field-meetings, and the Churches of the Indulged, according to their Conveniency, without any Doubt or Scruple.’

‘But about this Time the Zeal and Love of many being revived by the preaching of the Word, and a considerable Accession of great Numbers of young People brought in by the Gospel, whose Zeal and Fervour, generally speaking, runs high; the Genius of People to me seemed quite to be altered, and from a fearful and discouraged Temper, to turn to a high sanguine Constitution: No Strength of the Enemy was then thought upon, no Danger was regarded, and little else among some was Matter of Thought and Conversation, but Projects of disappointing our Enemies Designs against us. The Zeal and good Success of our first Reformers, and our more immediate Predecessors in the Year 1638. was a pleasant Subject of Discourse, and much admired. Ministers leaving their Charges 1662. and People’s suffering the Curates to be thrust in, and hearing them, was condemned: The King’s Perjury was much spoke of, and his Supremacy, as set up 1669. was reckoned a Prodigy of Wickedness. The publick Executions, and the present and former Severities, were im-proven against the Government, and some were for running to very great Heights.’

‘The indulged Ministers, upon the account of Favours received from bad and bloody Rulers, came to be less esteemed; their being at Ease when others were in Trouble made them envied, and the Supposition that they derived what they enjoyed from the Supremacy, at least not to have testified against it in strong enough Terms, made some directly to set up against and abhor them.’

‘But that I may give you some further Satisfaction, how it came about, that a People lately so forward to hear the Gospel from every honest Minister, so much in Love with them, so highly esteeming them, yea, bearing so patiently and meekly their Sufferings upon that account; by what Means, I say, such a Temper came to such a Height among them, and our Divisions with it, you may take the following Remarks.’

‘Setting aside the Divine Permission of this for holy and wise Ends, and the invisible Workings of Satan, the grand Enemy of the Success of the Gospel, and the Peace and Unity of the Church; you will observe, that when the Gospel came to be more frequently preached, and People came to seek Ministers, the Presbyterian Ministers had their Meetings at Edinburgh, and elsewhere, for Unity and Discipline, and licensed and ordained young Men, and sent them out to the Country about, as the People craved; and such who came from the Conntry, took such to preach among them as they were directed to by the Ministers; so that for a good many Years we had some Order among us, and consequently Unity kept up, and this was our Halecyon Hour: But the Practice of the indulged Ministers was never relished by many of the outed Ministers, who yet strove by all Means to keep up Union with them, and an Esteem of them. 1678.

Our Numbers and Zeal increasing, together with the Enemies Rage and Cruelty, every Person who was not either acting against them, or suffering by them, was in small Esteem. Some Beginnings of Rents appearing, the Meeting of Ministers to prevent a Breach, did authoritatively enjoin Silence upon this Head of the Indulgence among Ministers, and perhaps took young Men engaged at their licensing not to speak against the Indulged, and began to call some of them to an Account for doing so, and were declined by a young Man called before them upon this Head.

I shall make no Remarks upon this authoritative Way of knocking down Divisions, tho' I have heard some made, far less justify the Deed of declining them; but by these, with the Enemies Vigilance, our Order was broke.

It may also be remarked, that many of the most wise, aged, and experienced of the Ministry were taken off the Field, some by the Indulgence, some by Age and Infirmary, and others by keeping themselves quiet in Towns, preaching very seldom and very quietly to some Persons of Note; so that the preaching of the Gospel openly in the Fields, which was at this Time mostly in Repute, and was followed with the greatest Numbers, and most zealous of our Way, fell, generally speaking, to the younger, weakest, and unexperienced of the Ministry: And it was observable, that where old and experienced Ministers did frequently preach in the Fields, either in their own Charges or elsewhere, there our Breaches were not so wide, nor did People run to so great Heights; whereas the younger and less experienced Ministers, not being aware of the Evil of Division, and therefore not so careful to avoid the first Causes of it, did either moth-eat, or too much suffer to be moth-eaten by the Vulgar, the Reputation of such who did not follow their Way, by putting hard Constructions upon their Actions in ordinary Conversation, and did not know how to cultivate the Minds of a good and zealous, though young and weak People: Yea, perhaps some might too much cherish some frothy Professors, not duly considering the Difference betwixt a Profelyte to a Party, and a true Christian; so that a hopeful Work was much marred, and a promising Generation stumbled, and perverted to Lengths, from which those whom they most esteemed could hardly ever recover them.

And when the Humour of many began to take a Course this Way, some of the Ministers did fall in with it, and this way hoped to manage them. Thus indeed they came to be upon even Ground in the People's Eye, if not more caressed than the elder and more experienced Ministers; but I cannot say they were in case to manage the People, but were forced to go sometimes further than they themselves inclined; and some zealous and forward Gentlemen, who had been by the Severities of the Time forced to a wandering Lot, to strengthen themselves, and secure a Following, did not a little help forward the Zeal and the Edge that was upon the Spirits of some younger People, and Preachers too.

And I must add, that tho' many Things were imprudently vented in the Sermons of some against the Indulged, and upon the Controversies of the Times, yet these Things were neither so frequent, nor so ill cautioned, that one could have expected so bad Effects as followed, if that of private Conversation had not led the Way, and also followed it, 'twixt People and Ministers, too much flattering one another in their Ways, and both of them too much magnifying Party-work, to the Neglect of solid Piety and Religion. Besides, the Truths delivered by Ministers in the Fields upon quiskous Subjects, with no small Caution by some, and pretty safely, were heard and taken up by the Hearers, according to their Humours and Opinions, many Times far different from, and altogether without the Cautions given by the Preacher, which either could not, or were not understood by them.

Thus not a few were led to act their religious Zeal and Improvements in Knowledge, with relation to the Publick, in high and warm Resentments of the Managers and Rulers, Perjury, Usurpations, Persecutions, and Cruelty, and to reckon violent Opposition to these, as the principal Duty of the Time. This took much with the younger Sort; their Knowledge being but small, their Zeal run high upon these Points. The Zeal and Success of our Predecessors was called to mind, and the Obligation of our Covenants almost only understood of the forcible Resistance against wicked and irreconcilable Enemies, and the having nothing to do with them either as Men or Rulers, was reckoned the safest Way.

Scruples came to be vented against hearing the Indulged, and these came to be more and more blamed for taking Favours from the Enemy, and deserting their Brethren: Upon which a Pamphlet was published for their Vindication, in answer to which the History of the Indulgence came forth, and Replies and Duplies. These put the People into whole Hands they fell, aloft.

The banished Ministers and others in Holland, had been very much concerned in our Sufferers here; they themselves had been among our first Confessors, and consequently were very much esteemed by our persecuted People in Scotland, and in themselves were learned and excellent Men, worthy of the highest Esteem; and yet it is to be questioned, if all the Informations they had of the State of Things in Scotland, were well founded and vouched.

‘Likewise at this Time, many other Papers were reprinted, and carefully spread, such as Mr. Douglas’s Coronation-sermon, and the Oaths the King took, the Causes of God’s Wrath, Gillepie upon Associations, with his dying Testimony, and these with other concurring Circumstances blew our Smoke to a Flame; and Steps of Defection since the Restoration began to be reckoned up, such as Ministers leaving their Charges, and forbearing Preaching, the hearing the Curates, and lastly the Indulgence.’

‘It was truly grievous to some of us who were silent Observers of what passed, to see a young Generation endued with a great Zeal towards God and his Interests, so far led aside in the Improvement of it, as very little to know, or seldom to be taught Meekness and Patience under Affliction for Christ’s sake, or Charity and mutual Forbearance in Love, yea, in daily Conversation, to get these Things cast up to them, as tended rather to break their Teeth, than to nourish and refresh their weak Spirits.’

‘And to such a Length did these Heats come, not only among the younger and more vulgar Sort, but even among some of whom better Things were expected, that when we were gathered together before Bothwell, there was scarce any Thing but Debates; and some run so high upon publick; yea, personal Acknowledgments of these Steps of Defection, as if the doing of it would have effectually brought Victory, and the not doing so would be the Achan in our Camp; yea, some did not stick to term the famous Mr. John Welsh, because of his Opposition to this, the Achan among us. By reason of those unhappy Jarrs many deserted us, and many more never joyned us.’

This melancholy Subject will offer it self again, when I come to give Account of the Divisions at Bothwell. The Account this Gentleman gives, who was a Sufferer himself, and very much among them, will let the Reader into some general View of the breaking out of this lamentable Rent this Year, among Presbyterians.

A Meeting in August at Edinburgh for preventing these Divisions, but without Effect.

When the Accounts of the ungarded Expressions of some Probationers in their Sermons this Summer came to the Knowledge of Presbyterian Ministers, they judged it high Time to essay some Remedy. Accordingly, a good Number, both indulged and not indulged, who had the Union of this suffering Church very much at Heart, met at Edinburgh toward the End of August, where they had well attested Informations of the Excesses to which some of these young Men had run in their Discourses to the People. Two of them they conversed with, and endeavoured to make them sensible of the Hazard of these Courses they were falling into, and how contrary they were unto the Engagements they had come under when licensed: But very little Ground was gained upon them, and the Third declined to converse with them, or subject himself to their Advices: Whereupon they were remitted to the particular Meetings, in the Country where they had been licensed. Letters were writ to Brethren in these Meetings to deal with them, and by all proper Means to endeavour timeously to quench this Flame that was like to rise; and that some of their Number, with those Preachers, might be present with them at their next Meeting at Edinburgh. A large Account of their Informations, the Pains taken with these young Men, and what passed at the Meeting, is before me, in a Copy of their Minutes; but I see no Advantage of raking into these Burnings any further. Whether there was any posterior Meeting at Edinburgh, I have no Accounts; but this I know, that the Heats continued, yea, rose to greater Heights, as we shall hear.

Another Meeting in the West on the same Design in September.

All the Account I shall further give of this melancholy Subject, is from a Letter before me, writ by one Minister to another who was not present at a Meeting of Ministers in the West Country, upon the same healing Design with that at Edinburgh. The Letter is dated September 17th, and what it contains relative to this Matter follows.

‘Having had Occasion to be present at the Meeting, which I acquainted you with, and the chief Design of it being of such necessary and universal Concern at this Time, I think it my Duty to give you some Account of what passed at it, to the end both that you may know their Sense of the Proposal you made, and other Matters of Fact. The Meeting was frequent, and having fallen upon the Business of Union, they did all testify their earnest and hearty Desires after it, looking upon it as Matter of Sorrow, that former Attempts of this Kind have not been followed with a wished for Success. They took these Rents to be a great Advantage to the common Enemy, and a Token of the Lord’s Displeasure, that these who are of the same Principles in Doctrine and Discipline, should yet be divided in Practice and Affection, and every providential Emergent should help to the widening of this Breach.’

‘They all agreed, that the most effectual Way to prevent a further Rupture, and its lamentable Effects, would be to review the former Overtures, for Ministers classing and associating themselves, that these, at a general Meeting, may be condescended to, and vigorously prosecuted; and that every Preacher shall belong to some Class, to which he shall be subject and responsible; and that those who are unfixed, and so cannot constantly attend their Class or Presbytery, may do it ordinarily, or concur in other Meetings, as Providence shall dispose. And as to the Proposal you were pleased to tell me of, in order to communicate to them, of a practical Union, by promiscuous Preaching, this was likewise made made by other Brethren present, with an Intimation it had been unanimously agreed to. 1678.

 To this it was said by the Brethren concerned, That such a Practice as this must be lookt on as a casting them loose from the particular Charges they had Access to labour in, and a depriving themselves of that Liberty of exercising their Ministry in the Places where they now enjoy it. And as to any Agreement to this purpose, formerly made, they expressly deny it in the Latitude that is now proposed, but alledge it was directly refused, and that with Consent; which was attested by Witnesses who were present in the last Meeting kept on that Affair. That the Meeting in Edinburgh, December 1677. was only a Committee for Consideration, and to report Overtures to the general Meeting of Correspondents, whom they were to call upon Occasion; but their Power was not at all definitive.

Nevertheless, they have been, and are ready to supply Vacancies within their own Precincts, upon the People's Desire, and would go a further Length, if imposed upon them by the unanimous Appointment of their Brethren: But they are still of Opinion, that the first Foundation of Unity must be Order; and that there is no other Way of bringing us to Temper of wailing, and warming too much estranged Affections, and preventing the like or worse for the future, than that Brethren who are moderate and like minded, who, blessed be God, are yet the very far greater and better Number, may meet together, and consult upon fit Means for so desirable an End; and this they have taken Care to signify to their Brethren in the East, who had been treating with them, and had been breathing after Unity and Peace.

They likewise complain they are loaded with Aspersions by some uncharitable young Men in their Preaching, and that some Things (as is reported) are coming forth against them in Print, which they will find themselves constrained to answer for their own Vin-dication, if Matters be not taken up by an happy Accommodation. And truly, Sir, it is a sad Effect of the Distance that is betwixt the more sober and judicious, and the Want of an actual visible Harmony, that some hot young Men have presumed to refuse Subjection unto Ministers.

And now, Sir, what shall we run to at last, if such manifest and scandalous Schisms be not early prevented, while the Promoters are yet but few, and their Interest small, and the most godly and judicious of private Christians are grieving to behold them, and longing to see the Sparks extinguished?

This Letter contains further, some Hints of a very melancholy Disturbance, given by one of those Preachers, supported by Robert Hamilton, and some armed Men in the Parish of Monkland, near Glasgow, upon Sabbath September 1st, unto the Reverend Mr. Matthew Selkirk, yet alive, and Minister of the Gospel at Crichton. Mr. Selkirk had been desired by the Ministers in and about Glasgow, at the Application of that Parish, to preach there; and accordingly went out; but was violently hindred, with some Circumstances aggravating enough, that there might be Room for the other whom Mr. Hamilton had brought in with him on Saturday late.
 I have an attested Account of this under the Reverend Mr. Selkirk's Hand, with some Hints of the Sermon, which he wrote from the Preacher's Mouth, which sadly discovers the Heights the Flames were come to. All the Objection made against this worthy Person was,
 That in his Opinion he favoured the Indulged, and yet he had suffered not a little for his Adherence to the Government and Principles of this Church, both before and after this.
 But I have said enough upon this unhappy Subject of our Rents among our selves; I heartily wish there never had been any Room to speak of it.

Mr. Matthew Selkirk hindred to preach in Monkland.

Let me end the Accounts of this Year, with some few more Hints, mostly from the Registers. When the Council are throng in suppressing Conventicles, September 12th, the Chancellor communicated a Letter from the Earl of Dundonald to him, dated the 9th, mentioning a Scruple proposed by the Commissioners of Assesment for the Shire of Renfrew, anent their taking the Declaration, which they conceive relates to Burghs, and not to Shires.
 It is ordered to be signified to the Earl of Dundonald, that the Council take this Scruple to be raised in order to retard his Majesty's Service, the Act plainly enough requiring Commissioners of Assesment to take the Allegiance and Declaration; and he is desired forthwith to tender both unto them, and to send the List of the Refusers to the Council, against the 27th Instant.

Commissioners of Assesment
in Renfrew, scruple at the Declaration.

And, next Day, they reimpose both of them upon the Royal Burghs. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering Act 5th, Sess. 2^d, of his Majesty's first Parliament, and Act 2^d, Sess. 3^d, which are to be put in Execution by the Council, do hereby require the Magistrates, Counsellors, and Clerks of all the Royal Burghs on the South-side of the River Tay, and the Burgh of Dundee, at the ensuing Election of Magistrates, publickly to take the Oath of Allegiance, and sign the Declaration, and that Returns be made to the Council against November next, with the Names of the Refusers.'

The Allegiance and Declaration imported again on Royal Burghs.

The Laird of Polwart is continued close Prisoner in Dumbarton Castle; and, October 10th, his Lady, Dame Margaret Ker, upon her Petition to the Council, is permitted to wait upon him till November 1st. In November, the Prosecution of some indulged Ministers in the Shire of Renfrew, Mr. Patrick Simpson and Mr. James Wallace, for their breaking their Confinement, is begun. We shall have the Issue of it next Year.

Upon the 15th of November; I find, the Council issue out a Proclamation for a Fast, to be kept upon the Third Wednesday, the 18th of December. The Reason of it is, That the King's Person and Government, and the Protestant Religion, may be preserved under the Hazards they are exposed to from a damnable and hellish Plot. There was no doubt a Reality in the Plot: How heartily that Fast was kept by the Duke of York's Party, I am not to judge.

The Council, as a further Demonstration of their Zeal against the Popish Plot, how much soever some of them afterwards were pleased to question the Reality of it, upon the 28th of November, remit it to the Lords Register and Advocate, to bring in the Draught of a congratulatory Letter to his Majesty, upon his Delivery from the late horrid Popish Plot; and, November 30th, 'tis approved and dispatched to Court. The Reader will be fond to see the proper Sense of our Managers, as to that Plot, which since has been so much ridiculed, and I have added a Copy of it, App. N^o. 99. With this they write a Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale, wherein they glory in this, That no Scotsman is in the least concerned in it, as may be seen in the Letter it self, App. N^o. 100.

And at this Juncture somewhat must be done against Papists. November 28th, the Council remit to the Archbishop of Glasgow, Earls of Murray and Linlithgow, Bishop of Galloway, Lord Haltoun, Mr. Maitland, and Haddo, or any Two of them, to inspect the Papers of some Papists, seized lately by the Earl of Murray; and appoint the Committee of publick Affairs to meet to Morrow, and consider the Affair of Papists. I find no more in the Registers as to this Matter, save that, December 12th, the Council order the Magistrates of Edinburgh, next Sabbath and the following, to make diligent Search in Edinburgh, Leith, and Canongate, for Houses where Papists meet to hear and say Mass, and to seize the Priests, and all they find at the Meeting, and imprison them. And at the same Diet they write to the Steward of Anandale, to cause demolish, destroy, and burn a Meeting-house lately erected near Castlemilk, and send in to the Council the Names of such who caused build it.

At this Time a great Addition is made to the Council. September 16th, by a Letter from the King, John Lord Bishop of Galloway is admitted a Counsellor, and added to the Committee for publick Affairs. October 9th, Mr. Richard Maitland of Gogar is admitted a Counsellor. November 11th, Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbet, and Sir George Gordon of Haddo, are admitted Counsellors. November 21st, the Marquis of Montrose is made Captain of the Horse-guards. And, December 12th, John Drummond of Lundin is added to the Council. A good many of these appeared afterwards firm Friends to the Duke of York, and they got into the highest Offices in this Kingdom, as we shall hear.

And upon the 18th of November, I find a new Commission comes down, and is read, to Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbet to be Justice-general, and Craigie to be Justice-clerk; and the abovesaid Lords of the Justiciary are continued. I shall not enter on Mr. Gideon Penman, late Curate at Creichtoun, his Process this Year, for being in Compact with Satan, and some other plain Processes against Witches, in the Justiciary-registers, these not lying so much in my Road.

The Lords of the Justiciary have new and large Powers, and are appointed to sit frequently; and, if I mind, they are ordered still to sit the first Munday of every Month. Meanwhile, the Army are very busy in collecting the Cess. The Severities of both, with some other Things which fell in the Beginning of the next Year, ripened Matters for the Rising which was dissipated at Bothwell-bridge, which is the next Period of the Sufferings of this Church, and shall be considered in the third and last Book, to which I now come.

By the KING.

CHARLES R.

IS Majesty taking into Consideration that merciful Dispensation of Divine Providence, by which he hath been recovered out of the Snare of evil Counsel, and having attained so full Perswasion and Confidence of the Loyalty of his People in Scotland, with whom he hath too long stood at a Distance, and of the Righteousness of their Cause, as to joyn in one Covenant with them, and to cast himself and his Interest wholly upon God, and in all Matters Civil to follow the Advice of his Parliament, and such as shall be intrusted by them, and in all Matters Ecclesiastick the Advice of the General Assembly and their Commissioners, and being sensible of his Duty to God, and desirous to approve himself to the Consciences of all his good Subjects, and to stop the Mouths of his and their Enemies and Traducers; doth, in reference to his former Deportments, and as to his Resolutions for the future, declare as follows.

Tho' his Majesty as a dutiful Son, be obliged to honour the Memory of his Royal Father, and have in Estimation the Person of his Mother; yet doth he desire to be deeply humbled and afflicted in Spirit before God, because of his Father's hearkning to, and following evil Counsels, and his Opposition to the Work of Reformation, and to the Solemn League and Covenant, by which so much of the Blood of the LORD's People hath been shed in these Kingdoms; and for the Idolatry of his Mother, the Toleration whereof in the King's House, as it was Matter of great Stumbling to all the Protestant Churches, so could it not but be a high Provocation against him, who is a jealous God, visiting the Sins of the Fathers upon the Children: And albeit his Majesty might extenuate his former Carriage and Actions, in following the Advice, and walking in the Way of those who are opposite to the Covenant, and to the Work of God, and might excuse his delaying to give Satisfaction to the just and necessary Desires of the Kirk and Kingdom of Scotland, from his Education and Age, and evil Counsel and Company, and from the strange and insolent Proceedings of Sectaries against his Royal Father, and in reference to Religion, and the ancient Government of the Kingdom of England, to which he hath undoubted Right of Succession; yet knowing that he hath to do with God, he doth ingenuously acknowledge all his own Sins, and all the Sins of his Father's House, craving Pardon, and hoping for Mercy and Reconciliation through the Blood of Jesus Christ. And as he doth value the constant Addresses that were made by his People to the Throne of Grace in his behalf, when he stood in Opposition to the Work of God, as a singular Testimony of long-suffering Patience and Mercy upon the LORD's Part, and Loyalty upon theirs; so doth he hope, and shall take it as one of the greatest Tokens of their Love and Affection to him and to his Government, that they will continue in Prayer and Supplication to God for him, That the LORD, who spared and preserved him to this Day, notwithstanding of all his own Guiltiness, may be at Peace with him, and give him to fear the LORD his God, and to serve him with a perfect Heart, and with a willing Mind, all the Days of his Life.

And his Majesty having, upon the full Perswasion of the Justice and Equity of all the Heads and Articles thereof, now sworn and subscribed the National Covenant of the Kingdom of Scotland, and the Solemn League and Covenant of the Three Kingdoms of Scotland, England, and Ireland, doth declare that he hath not sworn and subscribed these Covenants, and entred into the Oath of God with his People, upon any sinister Intention and crooked Design for attaining his own Ends, but, so far as human Weakness will permit, in the Truth and Sincerity of his Heart, and that he is firmly resolved in the LORD's Strength to adhere thereto, and to prosecute to the utmost of his Power all the Ends thereof thereof in his Station and Calling, really, constantly, and sincerely all the Days of his Life. In order to which, he doth in the first Place profess and declare, that he will have no Enemies but the Enemies of the Covenant, and that he will have no Friends but the Friends of the Covenant. And therefore, as he doth now detest and abhor all Popery, Superstition and Idolatry, together with Prelacy, and all Errors, Heresy, Schism, and Profaneness, and resolves not to tolerate, much less allow any of these in any Part of his Majesty's Dominions, but to oppose himself thereto, and to endeavour the Extirpation thereof to the utmost of his Power; so doth he, as a Christian, exhort, and, as a King, require, that all such of His Subjects who have stood in Opposition to the Solemn League and Covenant, and Work of Reformation, upon a pretence of Kingly Interest, or any other Pretext whatsoever, to lay down their Enmity against the Cause and People of God, and to cease to prefer the Interest of Man to the Interest of God, which hath been one of these things that hath occasioned many Troubles and Calamities in these Kingdoms, and being insisted into will be so far from establishing of the King's Throne, that it will prove an Idol of Jealousy to provoke unto Wrath him who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords: The King shall always esteem them best Servants, and most loyal Subjects, who serve him, and seek his Greatness in a right Line of Subordination unto God, giving unto God the Things that are God's, and unto Cesar the Things that are Cesar's; and resolveth not to love or countenance any who have so little Conscience and Piety, as to follow his Interest with a Prejudice to the Gospel, and the Kingdom of JESUS CHRIST, which he looks not upon as Duty, but as Flattery, and driving of Self-designs, under a pretence of maintaining Royal Authority and Greatness.

II. His Majesty being convinced in Conscience of the exceeding great Sinfulness and Unlawfulness of that Treaty and Peace made with the bloody Irish Rebels, who treacherously shed the Blood of so many of his faithful and loyal Subjects in Ireland, and of allowing unto them the Liberty of the Popish Religion, for the which he doth from his Heart desire to be deeply humbled before the Lord; and likewise considering how many Breaches have been upon their Part, doth declare the same to be void, and that his Majesty is absolved therefrom, being truly sorry that he should have sought unto so unlawful Help for restoring of him to his Throne, and resolving for the Time to come, rather to choose Affliction than sin.

III. As his Majesty did, in the late Treaty with his People in this Kingdom, agree to recal and anul all Commissions against any of his Subjects who did adhere to the Covenant and Monarchical Government in any of his Kingdoms; so doth he now declare, that by his commissioning of some Persons by Sea against the People of England, he did not intend Damage or Injury to his oppressed and harmless Subjects in that Kingdom, who follow their Trade of Merchandize in their lawful Callings, but only the opposing and suppressing of those who had usurped the Government, and not only barred him from his just Right, but also exercise an arbitrary Power over his People, in those Things which concern their Persons, Consciences and Estates: And as, since his coming into Scotland, he hath given no Commissions against any of his Subjects in England or Ireland; so he doth hereby assure and declare, that he will give none to their Prejudice or Damage; and whatever shall be the Wrongs of these Usurpers, that he will be so far from avenging these upon any who are free thereof, by interrupting and stopping the Liberty of Trade and Merchandize, or otherwise, that he will seek their Good, and to the utmost employ his Royal Power, that they may be protected and defended against the unjust Violence of all Men whatsoever. And albeit his Majesty desireth to construct well of the Intentions of those (in reference to his Majesty) who have been active in Counsel or Arms against the Covenant; yet being convinced that it doth conduce for the Honour of God, the Good of his Cause, and his own Honour and Happiness, and for the Peace and Safety of these Kingdoms, that such be not employed in Places of Power and Trust; he doth declare that he will not employ, nor give Commissions to any such, until they have not only taken or renewed the Covenant, but also have given sufficient Evidences of their Integrity, Courage and Affection to the Work of Reformation, and shall be declared capable of Trust by the Parliament of either Kingdom respective. And his Majesty, upon the same Grounds, doth hereby recal all Commissions given to any such Persons, conceiving all such Persons will so much tender a good Understanding betwixt him and his Subjects, and the settling and preserving a firm Peace in these Kingdoms, that they will not grudge nor repine at his Majesty's Resolutions and Proceedings herein, much less upon Discontent act any Thing in a divided Way unto the raising of new Troubles, especially since, upon their pious and good Deportment, there is a Regress left unto them in manner above expressed. And as his Majesty hath given Satisfaction unto the just and necessary Desires of the Kirk and Kingdom of Scotland, so doth he hereby assure and declare, that he is no less willing and desirous to give Satisfaction to the just and necessary Desires of his good Subjects of England and Ireland; and in token thereof, if the Houses of Parliament of England sitting in Freedom, should think fit to present unto him the Propositions of Peace agreed upon by both Kingdoms, he will not only accord to the same, and such Alterations thereanent, as the Houses of Parliament, in regard of the Constitution of Affairs, and the Good of his Majesty and his Kingdoms, shall judge necessary; but do what is further necessary for the prosecuting the Ends of the Solemn League and Covenant, especially in those Things which concern the Reformation of the Church of England, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline and Government; that not only the Directory of Worship, the Confession of Faith and Catechism, but also the Propositions and Directory for Church-government, accorded upon by the Synod of Divines at Westminster, may be settled, and that the Church of England may enjoy the full Liberty and Freedom of all Assemblies and Power of Kirk Censures, and of all the Ordinances of Jesus Christ, according to the Rule of his own Word; and that whatsoever is commanded by the God of Heaven, may be diligently done for the House of the God of Heaven. And whatever heretofore hath been the Suggestions of some to him, to render his Majesty jealous of his Parliament, and of the Servants of God; yet as he hath declared that in Scotland he will hearken to their Counsel, and follow their Advice in those things that concern that Kingdom and Kirk; so doth he also declare his firm Resolution to manage the Government of the Kingdom of England by the Advice of his Parliament, consisting of an House of Lords, and of an House of Commons there; and, in those things that concern Religion, to prefer the Counsels of the Ministers of the Gospel to all other Counsels whatsoever: And that all the World may see, how much he tends the Safety of his People, and how precious their Blood is in his Sight, and how desirous he is to recover his Crown and Government in England by peaceable Means, as he doth esteem the Service of those who first engaged in the Covenant, and have since that time faithfully followed the Ends thereof, to be Duty to God, and Loyalty to him; so is he willing, in regard of others who have been involved in these late Commotions in England against Religion and Government, to pass an Act of Oblivion, except excepting only some few in that Nation, who have been chief Obstructors of the Work of Reformation, and chief Authors of the Change of the Government, and of the Murder of his Royal Father: Provided that these who are to have the Benefit of this Act, lay down Arms, and return unto the Obedience of their lawful Sovereign.

The Committee of Estates of the Kingdom, and General Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland, having declared so fully in what concerns the Sectaries, and the present Designs, Resolutions and Actings of their Army against the Kingdom of Scotland, and the same Committee and Assembly having sufficiently laid open publick Dangers and Duties, both upon the right Hand and upon the left, it is not needful for his Majesty to add any thing thereunto, except that in those Things he doth commend and approve them, and that he resolves to live and die with them and his loyal Subjects, in prosecution of the Ends of the Covenant.

And whereas that prevailing Party in England, after all their strange Usurpations, and insolent Actings in that Land, do not only keep his Majesty from the Government of that Kingdom by force of Arms, but also have now invaded the Kingdom of Scotland, who have deserved better Things at their Hands, and against whom they have no just Quarrel; his Majesty therefore doth desire and expect that all his good Subjects in England, who are and resolve to be faithful to God, and to their King, according to the Covenant, will lay hold upon such an Opportunity, and use their utmost Endeavours to promote the Covenant and all the Ends thereof, and to recover and re-establish the ancient Government of the Kingdom of England (under which for many Generations it did flourish in Peace and Plenty at Home, and in Reputation Abroad) and Privileges of the Parliament, and native and just Liberty of the People: His Majesty desires to assure himself, that there doth remain in these so much Conscience of their Duty to Religion, their King and Country, and so many Sparkles of the ancient English Valour which shined so eminently in their noble Ancestors, as will put them on to bestir themselves for breaking the Yoke of those Mens Oppressions from off their Necks. Shall Men of Conscience and Honour set Religion, Liberties, and Government at so low a Rate, as not rather to undergo any Hazard, before they be thus deprived of them? Will not all generous Men count any Death more tolerable than to live in Servitude all their Days? And will not Posterity blame those who dare attempt nothing for themselves and for their Children in so good a Cause, in such an Exigent? Whereas if they gather themselves and take Courage, putting on a Resolution answerable to so a noble and just an Enterprize, they shall honour God, and gain themselves the Reputation of pious Men, worthy Patriots, and loyal Subjects, and be called the Repairers of the Breach, by the present and succeeding Generations, and they may certainly promise to themselves a Blessing from God, upon so just and honourable undertaking for the Lord and for his Cause, their own Liberties, their native King and Country, and the unvaluable Good and Happiness of the Posterity. Whatever hath formerly been his Majesty's Guiltiness before God, and the bad Success that these have had who owned his Affairs whilst he stood in Opposition to the Work of God, yet the State of the Question being now altered, and his Majesty having obtained Mercy to be on God's Side, and to prefer God's Interest before his own; he hopes that the Lord will be gracious, and countenance his own Cause in the Hands of weak and sinful Instruments, against all Enemies whatsoever. This is all that can be said by his Majesty at present, to these in England and Ireland, at such a Distance; and as they shall acquit themselves at this Time in active Discharge of their necessary Duties, so shall they be accepted before God, endeared to his Majesty, and their Names had in Remembrance throughout the World.

Given at our Court at Dumfermling, the Sixteenth Day of August, 1650. and in the Second Year of our Reign.

Minister [designed] Supplication, August 23^d, 1660. N^o. II.

Most Gracious and dread Sovereign,

WE your Majesty's most humble Subjects, considering the Duty which, as Christians, we ow unto our Lord JESUS CHRIST, who is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, and which, as Subjects, we ow unto your Majesty as our lawful and native King under him; we hold our selves bound to tender unto your Majesty this our most humble Address and Supplication. How hateful the Actings of the late usurping Powers, in offering Violence unto the Parliament of England, in their unchristian and barbarous Murder of your Royal Father, in their insolent changing of the ancient Civil Government of the Kingdom of England, and by armed Violence unjustly secluding your Majesty therefrom, in their unjust invading of the Kingdom of Scotland, and enthralling the same in subjection to themselves, and beyond all, in their impious Encroachings upon the Kingdom of JESUS CHRIST, and the Liberties thereof, and in promoting and establishing a vast Toleration in Things religious throughout these Nations, unto the perverting of the precious Truths of the Gospel, and defacing of the Ordinances of JESUS CHRIST, in opening a wide Door to all Sort of Errors, Heresies, Schisms, Impiety, and Profaneness; how abominable and hateful these things were unto us, the Lord, who searcheth the Reins and trieth the Hearts, doth know; against which we gave many publick Testimonies before the World, to witness our Abhorrency thereof: And the same Lord knoweth, that as we did earnestly pray for and breathe after his appearing to witness against these, so (saying that Christian Pity and Compassion that we ow unto the Persons of Men, though our very Enemies) we do rejoice in his putting down of them that did lift up themselves, and staining of the Pride of their Glory, and breaking the Yoke of their Power off the Necks of these Kingdoms. We hold our selves also bound thankfully to acknowledge the Lord's signal Preserving of your Majesty's Person, in the midst of manifold Dangers and Designs threatening the same these Years past, and that after a long Exile from your own House and People, he hath been pleased to bring you back to the same; and when the Foundations of the ancient Civil Government of these Kingdoms were overthrown, again to make way for repairing the Ruins, and building up the Breaches thereof, for establishing of the same upon right and sure Foundations, in your Majesty's Person and Family, and to do these Things when they were so little expected, in so quiet and peaceable a Way, and without the Effusion of Christian Blood, and embroiling of these Kingdoms in the Miseries and Calamities of a new War: And as we do adore the wonderful and wise Hand of God, and bless his Name who hath done these great Things; so it is not only our Practice for the present, but our sincere Purpose and Resolution also for the Time to come, to pour forth the fervent Desires and Supplications of our Souls, unto the most High, by whom Kings reign, for the Preservation and Safety of your Majesty's Person, and for the Multiplication and Increase of his Spirit upon you, that you may employ your Power unto his Praise and the Comfort of his People, and for the establishing of your just Power and Greatness, and, in Subordination to him, to be faithful and loyal in tending of all the Duties of Honour, and Subjection, and Obedience to your Majesty, that are due from humble and loving Subjects to their native and lawful Sovereign. And we desire to be persuaded, and with Confidence to promise to our selves, that your Majesty will accept of these our Professions as proceeding from honest and loyal Hearts, and allow us that Protection, Countenance, and Encouragement, in our Stations and Callings, that may be expected from a gracious King. And considering the great Happiness that ariseth both to Kirk and State, and all the Members thereof by the mutual Embracements of Religion and Righteousness, of Truth and Peace, and from the mutual good Understanding betwixt the supreme Magistrate and the Faithful of the Land, when it pleaseth Divine Providence so to dispose, and the many Calamities and Miseries that, in the holy Justice and Indignation of God, do attend the separating or violating of these only sure Foundations of States and Kingdoms; we are bold, in the Integrity of our Hearts, and in the Zeal of the Glory of God, and of the Good of his Church, and of your Majesty's Honour and Happiness, and from the Sense of the manifold and great Obligations that be upon us, before the Lord, so to declare, and particularly that of the Covenant, that what Lets we are not able our selves to suppress or overcome, we shall reveal and make known, that it may be truly prevented or removed, humbly to represent unto your Majesty the great Danger that threatens Religion, and the Work of Reformation in the Churches of God in these Kingdoms, from the Designs and Endeavours of the Remnant of the Popish, Prelatical, and malignant Party therein, which is beginning again to lift up the Head, and, not only to render hateful and bear down many of your Majesty's good Subjects, who have been employed as Instruments in that Work, and have kept within the Bounds of their Duty in promoting and pursuing the same, so far as human Infirmary would permit; but also to overthrow that blessed Work it self, and to reintroduce Prelacy, and the Ceremonies, and the Service-book, and all these Corruptions which were formerly cast out, as inconsistent with that pure and spotless Rule of Church-government, and Discipline and Divine Worship, delivered unto us in the Word of God, and as a Yoke of Bondage which neither we nor our Fathers were able to bear. Although we know that that Spirit will not want specious Pretences, and plausible and subtil Insinuations for compassing these Ends; yet as there cannot readily be greater Disservice to the Church of God, and to your Kingdoms, and to your Majesty's Honour and Happiness, than Actings of that Nature, so we cannot without Horror of Heart, and Astonishment of Spirit, think upon what dreadful Guiltiness, Kings, Princes, Ministers, and People, shall be involved into, and what fearful Wrath shall attend them from the Face of an angry and jealous God, if after all the Light that he hath made to shine in these Kingdoms from his blessed Word, for discovering the Error and Impiety of these Things, and after his Hand lifted up so high for calling out of the same, and after such solemn Vows and Engagements taken upon themselves before God, Angels and Men, against them; they should again lick up the Vomit thereof. God forbid that ever we should hear or see such heart-altering Things, which would turn the Mirth of the Lord's People into Mourning, and their Songs into most sad and bitter Lamentation. Neither are we less apprehensive of the Endeavours of the Spirit of Error, that possesseth Sectaries in these Nations, which, as it did at first promote the Practice of a vast Toleration in Things religious, and afterwards proceeded unto the framing of the Mischief thereof into a Law; so we doubt not, but it will still be active unto the promoting and procuring the same, under the specious Pretence of Liberty for tender Consciences; the Effects whereof have, in a few Years past, been so dreadful, that we cannot think of the continuing of it, but with much Trembling and Fear: Therefore knowing that to Kings, Princes, Rulers, and Magistrates, appertains the Conservation and Purgation of Religion, and that Unity and Peace be preserved in the Church, and that the Truth of God be kept pure and entire, that all Blasphemies and Heresies be suppressed, all Corruptions or Abuses in Discipline and Worship prevented or reformed, and all the Ordinances of God duly settled, administered and observed; and that nothing can more contribute unto the preserving and promoting of Religion, and of the Work of Reformation, than that all Places of Power and Trust be filled with Men of a blameless and Christian Conversation, and of approved Integrity, and known Affection to the Cause of God: We your Majesty's most humble Subjects do, with bowed Knees and bended Affections, humbly supplicate your Majesty, that you would employ your Royal Power unto the Preservation of the Reformed Religion in the Church of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government; and in the Reformation of Religion in the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, and unto the carrying on of the Work of Uniformity in Religion in the Churches of God in the Three Kingdoms, in one Confession of Faith, Form of Church-government, Directory for Worship and Catechizing, and to the Extirpation of Popery, Prelacy, Superstition, Heresie, Schism, Profaneness, and whatsoever shall be found contrary to sound Doctrine, and the Power of Godliness: And that all Places of Power and Trust under your Majesty, may be filled with such as have taken the Covenant, and are of approved Integrity and known Affection to the Cause of God. If in a Matter that so much concerns the Honour of God, and the Good of this Church, and your Majesty's Honour and Happiness, we be jealous with a godly Jealousie, we know your Majesty's Wisdom and Piety to be such, as will easily pardon it. The Sense of our Duty to God, and to your Majesty, with the Importunity of Men of a contrary mind, who seek to make your Majesty and these Kingdoms Transgressors, by building again the Things that were formerly warrantably destroyed, constrain us to be Petitioners against the same, and earnestly to intreat that any Beginnings of Stumbling which have already been given in these things, especially in the Matter of Prelacy, and the Ceremonies, and Service-book in your Majesty's Chapel and Family, and in other Places of your Dominions, may be removed and taken away, and that there may be no further Proceedings in these Things which grieve the Spirit of God, and give Offence to your Majesty's good Subjects, who are engaged with you in the same Covenant and Work of Reformation: And that your Majesty, for establishing the Hearts, and strengthening the Hands of these who are faithful in the Work of the Lord, and for quashing the Hopes and Endeavours of Adversaries, will be pleased to give publick Signification of your Approbation of the Covenant, and of your Purpose to adhere unto the same, and to carry on the Work of God in these Kingdoms according thereto; thereto ; and that your Majesty's Eyes may be upon the Faithful of the Land, that they may dwell with you. We hope that your Majesty will not take Offence, if we be the Lord's Remembrancers to you, that you were pleased, a little before your coming into this Kingdom, and afterwards at the Time of your Coronation, to assure and declare by your solemn Oath, under your Hand and Seal, in the Presence of Almighty God the Searcher of Hearts, your Allowance and Approbation of the National Covenant, and of the solemn League and Covenant, faithfully obliging your self to prosecute the Ends thereof in your Station and Calling : And that your Majesty, for your self and Successors, shall consent and agree to all Acts of Parliament enjoining the National Covenant, and the solemn League and Covenant, and fully establishing Presbyterian Government, the Directory of Worship, Confession of Faith, and Catechisms, in the Kingdom of Scotland, as they are approved by the General Assemblies of this Kirk, and Parliaments of this Kingdom ; and that your Majesty shall give your Royal Assent to Acts and Ordinances of Parliament, past or to be past, enjoining the same in your other Dominions, and that you shall observe these in your own Practice and Family, and shall never make Opposition to any of these, or endeavour any Change thereof. And we desire to be persuaded, that no Length of Time hath made your Majesty to forget, or weakened upon your Heart, the Sense of the Obligation of that great and solemn Oath of God in the Covenant ; yea, that the Afflictions wherewith God hath exercised your Majesty these Years past, and the great and wonderful Deliverance that of late he hath granted unto you, hath fixed deeper Impressions thereof upon your Spirit, and that amongst all the Kings of the Earth, Religion and Reformation shall have no greater Friend than your Majesty ; yea, that as you are more excellent than the Kings of the Earth, in regard of Purity of Profession, and solemn Engagements unto God, and long Exercisedness with manifold Afflictions, and in the Lord's setting you over these Kingdoms, which were not only through Grace amongst the first Fruits of the Gentiles, but also, in your princely Station and Dignity, are, amongst all that we know in the World, the most eminent for the Purity and Power of the Gospel ; so shall your Majesty excel them in Zeal for God, and for the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, and that by how much your Majesty is, by the Constitution and Hand of the Almighty, lifted up above the Sphere of that of your Subjects, by so much shall your Motions be more vigorous and active unto the carrying about, by the Influence of your Royal Commands and Example, all the Orbs of inferior Powers and Persons in these Kingdoms, in Subordination to God and your Majesty, in the Practice of Godliness and Virtue. It is the Desire of our Souls, that your Majesty may be like unto David, a Man according unto God's own Heart ; like unto Solomon, of an understanding Heart to judge the Lord's People, and to discern betwixt Good and Bad ; like unto Jehoshaphat, whose Heart was lifted up in the Ways of the Lord ; like unto Hezekiah eminent for Goodness and Integrity ; like unto Josias, who was of a tender Heart, and did humble himself before God, when he heard his Words against Jerusalem and Judah, and the Inhabitants thereof ; and not only made a Covenant before the Lord, to walk after the Lord, and to keep his Commandments with all his Heart, and with all his Soul, to perform the Words of the Covenant ; but also caused all that were in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it, and took away all the Abominations out of all the Countries that pertained to the Children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the Lord their God : So shall your Majesty inherit the Honour and Blessings of these Kings upon the Earth, and their Happiness in Heaven ; so shall your Majesty's Person be preserved, and your Government established over these Kingdoms ; which is the unfeigned Desire, and fervent Supplication of

Your Majesty's most humble and loyal Subjects.

ACT for securing Mr. James Guthrie and others. N^o. III.

At Edinburgh the 23^d Day of August, 1660.

THE Committee of Estates, now presently convened by his Majesty's special Warrant and Authority, upon Information given to them of a Conventicle and private Meeting of some Remonstrator and Protesting Ministers and others at Edinburgh, for which they had neither Warrant from the Ordinary, Civil, or Ecclesiastick Courts ; And the said Committee, being by his Majesty's special Commission and Commands, intrusted and empowered with the caring, ordering, and providing for what may conduce for the Peace of this his Majesty's ancient Kingdom, and Support of his Power and Authority therein, finding such unlawful Conventicles, upon what Pretence soever, without publick lawful Authority, expressly derogatory to his Majesty's Royal Prerogative, and tending to the Disturbance of the present Peace of his Majesty's Dominions ; Gave Order and Command to some of their Number, to search and make Trial after the Occasion and Reason of their Meeting, who in the said Enquiry, found them with Petitions subscribed, and some Papers and Letters scrolled, to be sent for convocating all of their own Judgment, containing many Particulars reflecting upon his sacred Majesty, the Government of our neighbour Church and Kingdom of England, and Constitution of this present Committee, and many other Things directly tending to Seditions, raising of new Tumults, and (if possible) rekindling a Civil War amongst his Majesty's good Subjects. Therefore, the said Committee have thought fit, and hereby ordains the Persons Subscribers of the said Papers, and these in Company at the updrawing thereof ; They are to say, Mr. James Guthrie, Mr. Robert Trail, Mr. John Stirling, Mr. Alexander Moncrief, Mr. John Semple, Mr. Thomas Ramsay, Mr. Gilbert Hall, Mr. John Scot, Mr. George Nairn, Mr. John Murray, Ministers, and John Kirke ruling Elder, to be committed Prisoners within the Castle of Edinburgh, therein to remain, until his Majesty's Pleasure shall be further made known : And gives Warrant to the present Captain of the said Castle, to receive them Prisoners, and to keep them in safe Custody.

Letter,

Letter, Mr. John Stirling Minister at Edinburgh, to his Session, when imprisoned by the Committee of Estates, 1660. N^o. IV.

Dearly Beloved,

I Hear there are some Thoughts among you, of Petitioning the honourable Committee of Estates, for my Release. I confess it is no small Refreshment to me, to think that I have so much Room in your Affections, as you are ready to look after me, or desire that I might yet continue to serve you, in the Work of the Gospel: And tho' I be your Debtor on this account, and do most heartily thank you, and all those in whose Hearts this Motion hath been entertained, yet I dare not advise you to follow it any further at present. My Brethren and I are joyntly to petition this Week, and we shall see what Issue that may take, before we desire our People to be engaged in suing for us.

If the Lord have any more Service for me among you, he can bring me to you again (I trust) in the Spirit and Power of the Gospel; and this Testimony of your Affection, shall, I hope, put a new Edge upon my Spirit, to be more willing than ever to spend and be spent, for the Advantage of your Souls: But if otherwise, the Will of the Lord be done. I am hopeful, that he who ministreth Seed to the Sower, shall minister to your Necessities; and I shall never forget you, by his Grace, but ever bear you upon my Heart, to hold you up before the Lord, so long as I am in this Body.

I know the Cause of our Sufferings is strangely represented to you; and, I confess, we were miserable Men, and unworthy of the Room we bear either in the Church or Kingdom, if that were true that is said of us. The personal Sufferings I am under, nor the Reproaches that are upon my Name, are not a very great Trouble, in comparison of the Fear I have that Satan may thereby take Advantage to cause the Lord's People stumble at the Gospel I have preached among them: Yet this is my Comfort, that whatever the World say or believe, the Cause I suffer for is the Lord's, and no less than the avowing of his Marriage-contract, in a sworn Covenant, betwixt the Three Kingdoms: And albeit we have not now Liberty to vindicate our selves from the Aspersions cast upon us, but must ly under the Reproaches of Jeditious Persons, and Raisers of a new War, (which, God knoweth, our Hearts do abhor) and Enemies to our King, (whom our Souls do honour, and I dare take you Witnesses of my good Wishes towards him) yet this is no new Thing; you know who was counted an Enemy to Cesar, even CHRIST our LORD, and Paul was a seditious Fellow, and went up and down the World as a Deceiver, and yet was true.

Yet all we were about, was an innocent Supplication, that his Majesty might mind the Oath of God, and opppse those abjured Corruptions of Prelacy, and Ceremonies that are coming in, and that he might, for advancing of Reformation, imploy fit Instruments in Places of Power and Trust, who are Friends thereunto; and we should desire no other Vindication, but that our Supplication might be printed.

Always, dearly beloved, till I be able, if the Lord will, to speak face to face, I shall desire no other Favour of you, but that you will endeavour that the People may not stumble, but retain somewhat of Charity to me, till God shall fulfil his Promise, in making Righteousness appear, that the upright in Heart may follow after it.

I beseech you, in the Bowels of Jesus Christ, take heed to your selves, and to the Flock over which the holy Ghost hath made you Overseers: Much more lieth upon you now, than formerly when I was with you. Remember, I beseech you, that you watch as those that must give an Account, and that the Adversary is going about, as a roring Lion, continually seeking whom he may devour. Ah! my Heart bleedeth to think how much he prevaieth with the most Part, and how few there are who will lay hold on the free Offers of Grace and Salvation through a Redeemer, and come to Jesus that they may have Life. Edinburgh hath long had the Plenty and Purity of the glorious Gospel, but ah! Who hath believed our Report, and to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed? It is true the Lord hath a Remnant, yea, a precious Remnant among us, else we should have been like to Gomorrhah; but yet alas for the Blindness and Hardness, the Looseness and Profanity of the most Part, who live, in effect, without God in the World: Ah, that in their Day they might know the Things that belong to their Peace, before they be hid from their Eyes! I know there are many such under your Charge, but let me beseech you to be serious with them, while you have Occasion, and to walk exemplarily before them. It is not to Preachers only, but to all Christ's Followers, in their own Place and Station, that he saith, Let your Light so shine before Men, that they seeing your good Works, may glorify your Father which is in Heaven.

As for me, the Lord knoweth, that as I have no greater Grief by this Restraint, than my Absence from you, (which would be a deep Sorrow indeed, but that I am perswaded of the Call of God to this Piece of Service that is now put in my Hands) so can I have no greater Joy and Comfort, than to hear of all your Happiness, and of your Love to the Gospel, and Care to adorn the same, by your holy and blameless Conversation. I shall add no more, but my earnest Request for your Prayers before the Throne of Grace: And so recommending you and all the Flock, to him who is the great Shepherd and Bishop of your Souls, I rest,

Your Servant for Christ's Sake,

JO. STIRLING.

A Proclamation against Two seditious Books or Pamphlets, the one entituled Lex Rex, the other, The Causes of God's Wrath, &c. No. V.

THE Committee of Estates, now presently convened by his Majesty's special Warrant and Authority, taking into their Consideration, That there are Two Books, the one entituled Lex Rex, and the other, The Causes of God's Wrath, &c. printed and dispersed by some rebellious and seditious Persons within this Kingdom, cunningly, and of purpose to corrupt the Minds of his Majesty's loyal Subjects, to alienate and withdraw them from that Duty of Love and Obedience, that they owe unto his sacred Person and Greatness, stirring them up against his Majesty and Kingly Government, and containing many Things injurious to the King's Majesty's Person and Authority, laying the Foundation and Seeds of Rebellion, for the present and future Generations: Therefore, in Consideration of the Premises, the said Committee of Estates do declare the said Two Books to be full of seditious and treasonable Matter, animating his Majesty's good Subjects to rise up in Rebellion against their lawful Prince and Sovereign, and poisoning their Hearts with many seditious and rebellious Principles, prejudicial to the King's Majesty's Person, his Royal Authority, and to the Peace of this Kingdom: And that the foresaid Two Books ought not to be read, perused, nor kept in the Hands or Custody of any of his Majesty's Lieges; but that the same be called in, and delivered up, that his Majesty's good Subjects be not longer infected or poisoned thereby. And for this Effect they do ordain all and whatsoever Persons, Havers of the said Books in their Hands or Custody, to bring and deliver the same to Mr. Robert Dalgleish his Majesty's Solicitor in Scotland, betwixt and the Sixteenth Day of October next to come: With Certification to all and every one of these who shall refuse to do the same, and with whom any of the said Books shall be found after the said Day, they, and each one of them, shall not only be esteemed Enemies to the King's Majesty, his Authority, and the Peace of this Kingdom, but also they shall be punished accordingly in their Persons and Estates, as the King's Majesty and Estates of Parliament, or the said Committee, shall think fit. And ordain their Presents to be forthwith Printed and Published at the Market-crosses of Edinburgh, and Head-burghs within the Shires of this Kingdom, that none pretend Ignorance hereof. Extracted forth of the Books of the said Committee, by me

A Proclamation against all seditious Railers and Slanderers, whether Civil or Ecclesiastick, of the King's Majesty and his Government; and against Remonstrators and their Adherents, and against all unlawful Convocation of his Majesty's Lieges. No. VI.

At Edinburgh, the 20th of September, 1660.

THE Committee of Estates, presently convened by his Majesty's special Warrant and Authority, laying seriously to Heart the great Trust committed to them, for carrying on, ordering, and using of all Means which may tend to the securing of the Peace of this Kingdom, and maintaining and furthering his Majesty's Power and Authority therein; considering, that by many Acts of Parliament, all Leasing-makers, and Tellers thereof, Makers of evil Information, or engendering Discord betwixt the King and his People, all Reproachers or Slanderers of his Majesty, Government, or Realms, Depravers of his Laws, Misconstruers of his Proceedings, Meddlers in the Affairs of his Estate; As also, all Hearers of any such Leasings, Calumnies, or Slanders, by Word or Writ, and Concealers thereof, should be punished as seditious Persons, Enemies to his Majesty, and the Pain of Death to be executed upon them, as at length is contained in the 43^d Act of King James I. his 3^d Parl. the 83^d Act of King James V. his 6th Parl. the 134th Act, Parl. 8th, the 10th Act, Parl. 10th, the 205th Act, Parl. 14th, of King James VI. and the 27th Act of the 2^d Parl. of his sacred Majesty's unquhile dearest Father, of blessed Memory; which, more particularly in relation to any such Reproaches, Lies, or Calumnies, concerning the Kingdom of England, and his Majesty's worthy Subjects therein, is expressly prohibited by the 9th Act of King James VI. his 20th Parl. holden in anno 1609. under the Pain specified in the said Act: Likeas, all Convocation of his Majesty's Lieges, without his Majesty's special Command, or express Licence, whatever Quality, Estate, or Function the Persons be of, Spiritual or Temporal, is expressly prohibited by the 131st Act, Parl. 8th, King James VI. under the Pains therein contained. As also, the Remonstrance presented to the Committee of Estates, in anno 1650. declared by his Majesty and Parliament, in July 1651. seditious and treasonable: Nevertheless, and albeit it hath pleased the almighty God, of his wonderful Goodness and Providence, happily to restore his sacred Majesty to the peaceable Government of his ancient Kingdoms, and all his Majesty's Subjects to their wonted Peace, Freedom, and Privilege, which is (as it ought to be) a Matter of great Rejoycing to all good Christians, and loyal Subjects whatsoever, both at Home and Abroad: Yet the said Committee of Estates, certainly knowing, and receiving daily Information, that several of his Majesty's Lieges, and Subjects within this Kingdom, do, contrary to the said Acts of Parliament, convocate, convene, and assemble themselves, without his Majesty's special Command and Licence; and that there are several scandalous seditious Speeches uttered and preached in Sermons, Declamations, and otherwise, and several calumnious Pasquils, Libels, Rhymes, and other Writs, devised, vented, and published, to the Reproach or Slander of his Majesty's Person, Estate, or Government: As also, That several his Majesty's Subjects do down, adhere to, avow, abet, or assist the foresaid Remonstrance, whereby his Majesty's loyal, well meaning meaning Subjects, may be drawn from their due Allegiance, and ensnared in such seditious Combinations and Meetings, and involved in their said treasonable Plots and Practices, unless timely Remedy be provided. Therefore, the Committee of Estates, in his Majesty's Name and Authority, command and charge, That no Subject, or Subjects within this Kingdom, of whatsoever Quality, Estate, or Function they be of, Spiritual or Temporal, presume, or take upon hand, to convocate, convene, or assemble themselves together, for holding of Councils, Conventions, or Assemblies, to treat, consult, or determinate in any Matter of Estate, Civil or Ecclesiastick, (except in the ordinary Judicatories) without his Majesty's special Command and expresse Licence, had and obtained to that effect: As also, That none of them, of whatsoever Function, Degree, or Quality, presume, nor take upon Hand, privately or publickly, in Sermons, Preachings, Declarations, Speeches, or otherwise, by Word or Writ, to utter, devise, or vent any Purpose of Reproach, or Slander, against his Majesty's Person, Estate, or Government, his Parents, or Progenitors, or to deprave his Laws and Acts of Parliament, or misconstrue his Proceedings, whereby any Mislking may be moved betwixt his Majesty, and his Nobility, and loving Subjects, or to meddle in the Affairs of his Majesty and his Estate, present, bygone, and in Time coming; or to own, abet, or assist the foresaid Remonstrance: With Certification, they shall be proceeded against, conform to the Tenors of the said respective Acts of Parliament. Likeas, the said Committee of Estates declare, that any Person or Persons, who hear any such Leasing, Calumny, or slanderous Speech, or shall see or have any such Pasquils, or Writs, as aforesaid, and reveal not the same to his Majesty, or one of the said Committee, or to the Sheriff, Steward, or Bailie of the Shire, Stewards in Regality or Royalty, or to the Provost, or one of the Bailies within Burgh, as with best Conveniency he may, by whom the same may come to the Knowledge of his Majesty, his Parliament, the said Committee of Estates, or his Majesty's Privy Council, by whom the said Leasing-makers, and Authors of such slanderous Speeches, may be called, tried, and punished, according to the said Acts; in that case they shall incur the like Censure or Punishment, as the principal Party Offender. And the said Committee of Estates considering, that his Majesty's Lieges are subject more easily to be ensnared and enticed to any such seditious or treasonable Courses and Practices, by Ministers in their Sermons, Prayers, Declamations, and private Discourses; The said Committee do declare, That upon Information given to them of any thing uttered or spoken, contrary to the Tenor of the preceeding Act, the same being lawfully proven in Presence of the said Committee, or Parliament, or his Majesty's Privy Council, they summarily will sequester their whole Stipend, and imprison their Person, until his Majesty, Parliament, or Committee of Estates, or any other Judge competent, shall proceed to the final Cognition and Sentencing of their said Crime or Crimes. And to the effect that this Act and Ordinance may come to the Knowledge of all his Majesty's Lieges, ordain Publication to be made thereof, at the Market-crosses of Edinburgh, and at the Market-crosses of the Head-burghs of the Shires; and ordain the Magistrates of the several Head-burghs, to send so many of the said Proclamations to each Collector of the Assessment of every Shire, requiring the said Collector to send the same to the several Parishes, that the foresaid Proclamation may be read after Sermon, and affix'd upon the Kirk-doors of each Parish, and upon the Market-crosses of each Head-burgh.

ACT concerning the President, and Oath of Parliament. N^o. VII.

FOrasmuch as it hath pleased almighty God, to compassionate the Troubles and Confusions of this Kingdom, by returning the King's most excellent Majesty to the Exercise of that Royal Government, under which, and its excellent Constitution, this Kingdom hath for many Ages enjoyed so much Happiness, Peace, and Plenty; and it being, upon good and important Considerations, an inviolable Practice in this Government before these Troubles, that the Person nominate by his Majesty to be his Chancellor within this Kingdom, did of Right, and as due to his Place, preside in all Meetings of Parliament, and other publick Judicatories of the Kingdom, where he was present for the Time: And his Majesty now considering the great Advantages do accresse to the publick Good of his Subjects, by the due Observance of such ancient and well grounded Customs and Constitutions, and the Prejudices that do accompany a Change thereof: Therefore his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, doth declare, That the present Lord Chancellor, and such as hereafter shall be nominate by his Majesty, or his Royal Successors, to succeed in that Place; and, in case of their Absence, such as shall be nominate by his Majesty, are, by virtue and Right of the said Office, and such Nomination respective, to preside in all Meetings of his Majesty's Parliaments, or other publick Judicatories of the Kingdom, where they shall happen to be present, and that they are now and in all Time coming to enjoy this Privilege. And in Discharge of this Trust, they are, at the first down-sitting of every Parliament, to administer to all the Members thereof, the Oath of Allegiance. (See the Oath in the History, Pag. 22^d.)

Likeas, his Majesty, with Advice aforesaid, doth hereby rescind and anul all Acts, Statutes, or Practices, as to the President or Oath of Parliament, which are prejudicial unto, or inconsistent with this present Act, and declare the same to be void and null in all Time coming.

ACT concerning the League and Covenant, and discharging the renewing thereof, without his Majesty's Warrant and Approbation. N^o. VIII.

FOrasmuch as the Power of Arms, and entring into, and making of Leagues and Bonds, is an undoubted Privilege of the Crown, and a proper Part of the Royal Prerogative of the Kings of this Kingdom, and that in Recognizance of his Majesty's just Right, the Estates of Parliament of this his most ancient Kingdom dom of Scotland, have declared it high Treason to the Subjects thereof, of whatsoever Number, less or more, upon any Pretext whatsoever, to rise, or continue in Arms, or to enter into Leagues and Bonds, with Foreigners, or among themselves, without his Majesty's special Warrant and Approbation had and obtained thereto; and have rescinded and annulled all Acts of Parliament, Conventions of Estates, or other Deeds whatsoever, contrary to, or inconsistent with the same. And whereas, during these Troubles, there have occurred divers Things, in the making and pursuance of Leagues and Bonds, which may be Occasion of Jealousy in and betwixt his Majesty's Dominions of Scotland, England, and Ireland; Therefore, and for preventing of all Scruples, Mistakes or Jealousies, that may hereafter arise upon these Grounds, the King's Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, doth hereby declare, That there is no Obligation upon this Kingdom, by Covenant, Treaties, or otherwise, to endeavour by Arms a Reformation of Religion in the Kingdom of England, or to meddle with the publick Government and Administration of that Kingdom. And the King's Majesty, with Advice and Consent foresaid, doth declare, That the League and Covenant, and all Treaties following thereupon, and Acts or Deeds that do or may relate thereto, are not obligatory, nor do infer any Obligation upon this Kingdom, or the Subjects thereof, to meddle or interfere by Arms, or any seditious Way, in any thing concerning the Religion and Government of the Churches of England and Ireland, or in what may concern the Administration of his Majesty's Government there. And further, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates, doth hereby discharge and inhibit all his Majesty's Subjects within this Kingdom, that none of them presume, upon any Pretext of any Authority whatsoever, to require the renewing or swearing of the said League and Covenant, or of any other Covenants, or publick Oaths, concerning the Government of the Church or Kingdom, without his Majesty's special Warrant and Approbation; and that none of his Majesty's Subjects offer to renew and swear the same, without his Majesty's Warrant, as said is, as they will be answerable at their highest Peril.

Abernethy's (Jesuit) Account of the Popish Government in Scotland. N^o. IX.

ALL Governments are either spiritual or temporal, and both require Three Things. 1. Rectores, these that rule and govern. 2. Rectus, these that are ruled and governed. 3. Modum regendi, the Form of their Government. All these Three Things are found in the Popish Government in Scotland. And 1st. Their Governors and Rulers are threefold, that is, remoti, propinqui, & proximi. Those I call remote, are the Pope, and that Congregation de propaganda (or rather, as I have heard themselves call it, for the politick Knavery of it, de extirpanda) vide. The nearer, or propinqui, are Monsieur Francisco Barberino, a Cardinal, Protector of our Nation, Mr. George Cons, Secretary for the Latin Tongue to the Pope, the Generals of the several Orders, but especially the Jesuits (they being in great Number in the Country) and Fathers, George Elphinstone in Rome, William Lefly in Down, John Robe younger in London, and William Henderson in Burghston, beside Edinburgh. Most near, or proximi, are some Sixteen or Eighteen, more or less, as they can find Houses in Scotland to place them in. They have all their several Places of Residence in Gentlemen or Noblemens Houses, according to William Henderson, Superior of the Mission, his Direction and Pleasure: For he has Notice of them all before they come into the Country, yea, of all their Dispositions and Qualities, by their Superiors or Confessors Letters; yet there is no less Budding, Bribing, Envy, Malice, and Hatred, for obtaining the Choice of these Houses, than for catching at Court a good fat Bishoprick. And this short Relation shall suffice for the Notice and Knowledge of the Rulers and Governors of this Papistical Mission.

Concerning the Second Point, that is, The Persons that are ruled and governed by their politick Brains, here is little or nothing to be said; altho' this Mass of Policy, according to the Priests Report, is nothing else but a zealous and pious Piece of Pains, for the Well of the Country, and the Salvation of poor Souls, kept under heretical Persecution and Bondage. But God knows what Spain means in giving Pensions to these zealous Men. But this I omit to another Place. The Number and Quality of their poor blindly led Folks, is (or should at least be better known to the Ordinaries of Dioceses) if they be not accessory, and Pastors of the particular Places of the Kingdom, than by me, who lived not Two Years in the Country with them. Yet, if I were stressed, I could set them as well in Order as the Litanies of the Saints are; for I know them both perquire. Therefore, ere I conclude this Point, I will only notice, That these Priests and Jesuits take Care, Power and Authority over the Papists of this Kingdom, as That these Priests and Jesuits take Care, Power and Authority over the Papists of this Kingdom, as over their own Parishioners in other Countries, and hear their Confessions, say their Masses, preach, baptize, marry, give extreme Unction to them, as if they were their own Subjects and Parishioners; whereof they send their Relations to the Congregation de propaganda fide, to the Pope and several Generals, once in the Year at least, and oftner if they please, making Mention of all that has been done by them or their Followers, good or evil, of the Government both spiritual and temporal, of this Kingdom: For this end, one of themselves, the best Rhetorician of the younger Sort, is chosen Secretary thereto. They are called litteræ annuæ, whereof are drawn out their Annals, and of thir composed their History. I might likewise speak of their Division or Distinction they give themselves to their Penitents, (as they call them) dividing them into Church-papists and Mass-papists. The First are these who hear the Word in Protestant Churches, subscribe and communicate, or in a word, they are inward Papists, and outward Protestants. The Second are these who do not hear the Word. The first were maintained by some of the Fathers who gave these Persons Absolution of their Sins, as well as others: The Second were governed by the Jesuits, who in end have procured at the Pope's Hands, that these who participate of the Protestant Sacraments, shall be excommunicated and debarred from their Sacraments; yet, for old Acquaintance, they will get Leave to be present at their Masses and Preachings, whereof I know sundry other their Benefactors or powerful Men. Yet, after all this, in articulo mortis, or upon Resolution not to return to that Sin again, they will obtain Remission or Absolution. But all this I pass, minding, God willing, to make it more publick to the World at another Occasion; concluding and ending this Point, that this Papistry in Scotland may be joyned to these old Proverbs, and say, Ex illa minore, Sol. 1. de Eu- ropa, Pons Polonicus, monachus Bohemus, miles australis, Suevica monialis, Italica dinotio, Ruthenorum religio, Teutonum jejunia, Gallorum constantia, castitas Anglicana, papismata Scoticana, nihil valere omnia.

The Third Thing I propounded of their Government, contains Three Points, 1^{mo}. The Fountain of this Government. 2^{do}. Their Proceeding in it. 3^{tio}. The Sinews of their Government, that is, their Entertainment and Maintenance. For the First, 'tis to be remembred, that Pope Gregory the XIII. (called Father of the Jesuits, for his Liberality to them) Paul the V. and Gregory the XV. have built a King-like House in Rome, called Congregatio de propaganda fide. The Members of this Congregation, is the Pope as supreme Head of the Kirk, and Judge of all Controversies. His Nephew Cardinal Francis Barberino is his Lieutenant, and immediate Governor of the whole Church, divers Cardinals and Generals of all the Orders that teach or preach, the great Master of the Inquisition, and some few Doctors, all as Judges of equal Authority, their Officers to have Care and Charge of the Missionaries in foreign Kingdoms and Countries, where their Religion is not professed, or has suffered Detriment, through all the World: So that there can be no Time assigned, Day or Night, but 'tis lawful to say, Now a Jesuit is saying Mass; and yet a Mass cannot be said after Twelve a Clock, without a Dispensation: So great are the Limits and Extent of their Bounds. For this end, they have many Colleges or Seminaries of divers Nations, and sundry Countries, as in Rome, of Germans, Hungarians, English, Scots, Irish, Greeks, Maronites or Armenians, Nephittes, Copties, &c. Of our Nation, out of the Country, there be Five Colleges or Seminaries, Rome in Italy, Paris in France, Doway in Flanders, Madrid in Spain, Brunsberg in Prussia. In their Colleges, Youth are brought up in their Discipline, throughout all their Humanity, Philosophy, and Divinity. Their Colleges are furnished with Scholars by the Jesuits residing in their several Countries, some by their Popish Parents, some under Promises of great Learning, some seduced by Jesuits and Priests in the Countries and Abroad, some for Poverty; all of the quickest and best Wits that the Jesuits can find out amongst many that are propounded to them for that Use. The Jesuits have the Care and Guiding of their Colleges, although ruled by the Popes, Cardinals, and Bishops, or other Benefactors. Their Youths, after they have remained Three Months in any College, they make a Vow to take on Priesthood, and return for the Conversion of their Country, after they be found fit, which is always after their Studies. The Jesuits having Charge of these seminary-Youths, put out the best Wits and rarest Judgments for their own Order. Others become Monks and Friars, and the shallowest remain secular or seminary Priests. Yet, whatsoever Order they be of, they are tied to their First Oath, by virtue of a Bull of this Pope's, in favour of the foresaid Congregation. So let this suffice as a short Relation of their Source and Fountain.

2^{dly}. Their Form of Proceeding is, That when they are found fit, after their Priesthood received, and Studies ended, to be sent to their Mission. First, they have Approbation of their sound Doctrine and godly Life, from the Jesuits, under whom they have been brought up. Thereafter, they get their Patent Letters from their Congregation or their General, if they be of any Order, to go to their Country, furnished with Two Suits of Apparel, all their Church-apparel, and Necessaries thereto, and Two, Three, Four, or Five hundred Crowns, as they have Favour, and are thought worthy for their Vocation. Next, to come to Doway, where Mr. William Lestly Superior there, gives them some Books out of the Mission's Bibliothek there, and Marks to know and be known of their Fellows and Country: Whence they depart, changing their Name always, and sometimes their Nations, and come to William Henderson in Burghton, in the Canongate, Paisly, or where he is; for he must visit them all once in the Year, in their several Residences. By him they are visited, if they have all Things fit for their Calling; if they have not, he furnishes them; if they have, he gives them a Letter to some Nobleman or Gentleman, where they are received, and kept till they have learned the Fashion of the Country. Thereafter they go Abroad as Gentlemen or Merchants, thereafter any other Dexterity they please to use, or Functions for their own Ends: And so I was Chamberlain and Bailie in Cathness, for my Lord Berrydale. The Reason of this is, because, among the rest of the Privileges they receive at their Departure from Rome, and kissing the Pope's Feet, with his Blessing, they get Power to dispense with themselves and others in all Things, yea, in articulo mortis & casu necessitatis, in Things reserved to the Pope himself, and absolve from all Sins, how many soever. Of these Fathers, as they call them, there be Four already governing in Colleges, some Agents in great Cities for Correspondence, whose Names are needless, and tedious to rehearse; some who are requisite to be named in Scotland, when I was in it with them, to wit, in Berwick, with Sir James Douglas, and thereabout, one Mr. Brown a Jesuit; in Setton, one Mr. Christison or Campbell, who uses likewise in sundry other Places, (excuse me if I know not their Names, for we came from several Parts at several Times) as he is desired, for he is thought of, and sent for in Edinburgh; William Robertson sometimes in Colonel Bruce's, Lady Margaret Hamilton's, Riddoch's, John Guthrie the Taylor's, who for some Years bygone brought me to the said William his Mass, in the said Margaret's House, with a little Frenchman, where there were some Twenty Persons, unknown truly to me. The Jesuits frequent Lady Margaret Hamilton's, Robert Scot's in the Canongate, Burghton, and with my Lord Semple often. For others I know none in Edinburgh, but by Report, not having much frequented the Town. In Paisly and thereabout, a very subtil Jesuit, and crafty Companion, and yet a Scholar, one Mr. Smith with the Marquis of Douglas, and Mr. David Tyrie a gray Friar in Niddale, and thereabout; and Mr. Lindsay a gray Friar in the West: One Mr. Lestly a Capuchin, called by himself the Captain, fled out of the North for having a Child in Angus. One Mr. Ogilvie a gray Friar, and Kinsman to my Lord Ogilvie; in Ardestie, Pitalpie, Drumkilbo, and thereabout, one Mr. Drummond; but truly all Jesuits. When I came to the Country, with my Lady Aboyn, and thereabout, were Mr. John Lestly now dead, and his Brother Mr. Andrew Lestly, both Jesuits. In Achigore, Lessindrum, Carne, Arren, and thereabout, one Mr. William Gibson an Augustin Friar. In Aberdeen, one Mr. Mortimer; in the Earl of Errol's and the Laird of Dalgetie's Houses, was one Mr. William Lestly, now Superior in Doway. In Buchan was Mr. John Seton and Mr. Tobie; now the one is at Madrid, and the other at London, Agents for the Two Missions. In the Bog and Elgin, and thereabout, Mr. Southwell, and Christie, a very timorous but subtil Fellow; the First is in Doway, the last in the Bog. In Cathness, and beyond Ardestie in Angus, my self was a certain Time, beside one Mr. Cusbet a Minim, a Pensioner of her Majesty's, one ready to all Travels, and Directions of her Majesty's Command, and Two others, one Mr. Duncan a Parson, alias Macpherson in Scotland, but unknown to me where they reside.

My Third Point was concerning their Entertainment, which is threefold. One from the Congregation de propaganda fide; above a Hundred Crowns, or more, as they have his Holiness and the Cardinals Favour. Another is their own Purchase, their Confessions, Preachings, Masses, Pardons, &c. and lately from the King of Spain

Spain, of whom every one of them that is out of their College, has Eighteen Shillings Scots a Day. Robert Irvine, called Cossopie, brings it in, William Hay Laird of Fetter-letter, is the Treasurer; both receive their Pensions therefore. What others receive, the Superior with his Counsellors, and the Treasurer only know, whereby it may be easily seen they lack nothing in temporalibus.

Now my Counsel for Extirpation of them, is only in Two Ways. 1st. To hold out all Appearances, although of indifferent Things, to come near to them, because they think ye will not come at once, but gradatim to them, and this holdeth them fast. 2^{do}. Let them not fail to hear, subscribe, and communicate; for by these Means ye shall make the Priests idle, having an Order to deal, that none be suffered to participate of their and your Sacraments. This I have written in Sincerity, for the Salvation of your Souls, and the Advancement of the Gospel, and not of any Malice I have to them, as God shall save my Soul at the great Day.

THO. ABERNETHY.

ACT for taking the Oath of Allegiance, and asserting the Royal Prerogative. No. X.

OUR Sovereign Lord, being truly sensible of the many Sufferings and sad Confusions that his dutiful and loyal Subjects have been brought under, during these Troubles, and desirous, that his Royal Government, in its due Administration, may be refreshing and comfortable unto them, and conceiving it necessary for that end, and for the Honour and Advancement of his own Service, the Welfare and Happiness of his Subjects, and the Peace and Quiet of this Kingdom, That the Places of publick Trust (which be the Chancels and Conduits by which his Majesty's Government is conveyed unto his People) be supplied and exercised by Persons of known Integrity, Abilities and Loyalty, Doth therefore declare, That it is and will be his Majesty's Royal Care, that those whom (according to the undoubted Right of the Crown) he hath, or shall think fit to call to his Councils, or any publick Employments, shall be so qualified; and that for the full Satisfaction of all his good Subjects, and for removing any Scruples or Jealousies can arise upon this Account, they shall, before their Admittance to, or Exercise of any such Trust, give such publick Testimony of their Duty and Loyalty, as may evidence to the World, they are such as the Kingdom, and all honest Men and good Subjects may justly confide in. And therefore the King's Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, doth statute and ordain, That all and whatsoever Person or Persons, who are, or shall be nominate by his Majesty, to be his Officers of State, of his Privy Council, Session, or Exchequer, Justice General, Admiral, Sheriffs, Commissars, and their Deputes, and Clerks, and all Magistrates and Council of Royal Burghs, at their Admission to their several Offices, and before they offer to exercise the same, shall take and swear the Oath of Allegiance, hereunto subjoyned: And also, that all other Persons, who shall be required by his Majesty's Privy Council, or any having Authority from them, shall be obliged to take and swear the same.

And since all the Troubles and Miseries that have overspread this Kingdom, and almost destroyed all religious and civil, all publick and private Interests, these Twenty Years bygone, and upwards, have arisen and sprung from these Invasions that have been made upon, and Contempts done to the Royal Authority and Prerogative of the Crown, his Majesty conceives himself obliged, both for his own Royal Interest, and for the publick Interest and Peace of his People, to be careful to prevent the like for the future. And therefore his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, statutes and ordains, That all Persons who are, or shall be called to any publick Trust, as said is, shall, beside the taking of the Oath of Allegiance, be obliged, before they enter to their Offices and Trusts, to assert under their Hand-writing, his Majesty's Royal Prerogative, as is express in the Acts past in this present Parliament, and in the Manner hereunto subjoyned: Certifying all such as, being required, shall refuse or delay to take the Oath of Allegiance, they shall not only thereby render themselves incapable of any publick Trust, but be lookt upon as Persons disaffected to his Majesty's Authority and Government; and such as shall refuse or delay to assert his Majesty's Prerogative, in Manner underwritten, shall from thenceforth be incapable of any publick Trust within this Kingdom.

Act concerning Religion and Church-government. No. XI.

OUR Sovereign Lord, being truly sensible of the Mercies of almighty God towards him in his Preservation, in the Times of greatest Trouble and Danger, and in his miraculous Restitution to his just Right and Government of his Kingdoms, and being desirous to improve these Mercies, to the Glory of God, and Honour of his great Name, doth, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, declare, That it is his full and firm Resolution, to maintain the true Reformed Protestant Religion, in its Purity of Doctrine and Worship, as it was established within this Kingdom, during the Reigns of his Royal Father and Grandfather of blessed Memory: And that his Majesty will be careful to promote the Power of Godliness, to encourage the Exercises of Religion, both publick and private, and to suppress all Profaneness and disorderly Walking; and for that end, will give all due Countenance and Protection to the Ministers of the Gospel, they containing themselves within the Bounds and Limits of their Ministerial Calling, and behaving themselves with that Submission and Obedience to his Majesty's Authority and Commands, Commands, that is suitable to the Allegiance and Duty of good Subjects. And as to the Government of the Church, his Majesty will make it his Care, to settle and secure the same, in such a Frame as shall be most agreeable to the Word of God, most suitable to Monarchical Government, and most complying with the publick Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. And in the mean time, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent foresaid, doth allow the present Administration by Sessions, Presbyteries and Synods, (they keeping within Bounds, and behaving themselves as said is) and that notwithstanding of the preceeding Act, rescissory of all pretended Parliaments, since the Year One thousand six hundred and thirty eight.

Act for a Solemn Anniversary Thanksgiving for his Majesty's Restoration to the Royal Government of his Kingdoms. No. XII.

THE Estates of Parliament of the Kingdom of Scotland, taking to their Consideration the sad Condition, Slavery, and Bondage, this ancient Kingdom hath groined under, during these Twenty three Years Troubles; in which, under the specious Pretences of Reformation, a publick Rebellion hath been, by the Treachery of some, and Misperwasion of others, violently carried on against sacred Authority, to the Ruin and Destruction, so far as was possible, of Religion, the King's Majesty, and his Royal Government, the Laws, Liberties, and Property of the People, and all the publick and private Interests of the Kingdom; so that Religion it self, which holds the Right of Kings to be sacred, hath been prostitute for the Warrant of all these treasonable Invasions made upon the Royal Authority, and disloyal Limitations put upon the Allegiance of the Subjects; and hath it not also been pretended unto, for the Warrant of all those vile and bloody Murders, which, in high Contempt of almighty God, and of his Majesty's Authority and Laws, were, under colour of Justice, committed upon his Majesty's good Subjects, merely for the Discharge of their Duty to God, and Loyalty to the King? Hath not that Royal Government, under whose Protection this Nation hath, to the Envy of the World, been so famous for many Ages, been of late troden under Foot, and new Governments and Governors established, and kept up without his Majesty's Authority, and against his expresse Commands? Hath not Law, which is the Birthright and Inheritance of the Subject, and the Security of their Lives and Fortunes, been laid in the Dust, and new and unjust Edicts and Orders past and published, for subjecting both Life and Fortune, and what else was dear unto any of his Majesty's good Subjects, to the cruel and ambitious Lusts of some usurping Rulers? Hath not Religion and Loyalty been the only Objects of their Rapine and Cruelty? And hath not their new and arbitrary Exactions and Burdens upon the People, exceeded in one Month whatever had been formerly in many Years paid to any of the Kings of this Kingdom? And when the best of Men, and the most excellent of the Kings of the Earth, had, in an unusual Way of Confidence, rendered his Person to the Trust and Loyalty of his native Subjects, was not the Security of Religion pretended unto by some, who then governed in Church and State, for the Ground of that base (and never enough to be abhorred) Transaction, in leaving such a Prince, their native and dread Sovereign, to the Will of these who were in open Rebellion, and for the Time had their Swords in their Hands against him? And that when by these and many such like undutiful Carriages, the King's Majesty was removed from his Kingdoms, the Foundations of this ancient and well constitute Government was overturned, the Liberties and Property of the People inverted, and this Kingdom exposed to be Captives and Slaves to Strangers, and nothing left unto them but the sad Meditation of their increasing Miseries, and the bitter Remembrance of their bypast Disloyalties: Yet even then it pleased almighty God to compassionate their low Condition, and, by the Power of his own right Hand, most miraculously to restore the King's most sacred Majesty, to the Royal Government of his Kingdoms; and thereby to redeem this Kingdom from its former Slavery and Bondage, and to restore it to its ancient and just Privileges and Freedom. And the King's Majesty acknowledging, with all Humility and Thankfulness, the Goodness, Wisdom, and Power of God, in this signal Act of his Mercy to him and his People, doth, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, statute and ordain, That in all Time coming there be a solemn yearly Commemoration of the same: And for that end, the Twenty ninth Day of May, (which Day God Almighty hath specially honoured, and rendered auspicious to this Kingdom, both by his Majesty's Royal Birth, and by his blessed Restoration to his Government) be for ever set apart as an Holy-day unto the Lord, and that in all the Churches of the Kingdom it be employed in publick Prayers, Preaching, Thanksgiving, and Praises to God, for so transcendent Mercies: And that all Trade, Merchandize, Work, Handy-labour, and other ordinary Employments be forborn, and the remaining Part of the Day spent in such lawful Divertisements as are suitable to so solemn an Occasion. And it is hereby recommended to all Ministers of the Gospel, and to all Sheriffs, Justices of Peace, and other publick Ministers in the several Counties, and to all Magistrates within Burghs, to be careful, that for this present Year, and in all Time coming, the Twentieth Day of May be accordingly kept and observed within their several Jurisdictions. And for the speedier and more full Intimation hereof to all his Majesty's Subjects, it is appointed thir Presents be Printed, and Published at all the Market-crosses of the Royal Burrows.

Act abolishing Patronages, March 9th, 1649. N^o. XIII.

THE Estates of Parliament, being sensible of the great Obligation that lies upon them by the national Covenant, and by the solemn League and Covenant, and by many Deliverances and Mercies from God, and by the late solemn Engagement unto Duties, to preserve the Doctrine, and maintain and vindicate the Liberties of the Kirk of Scotland, and to advance the Work of Reformation therein, to the utmost of their Power; and considering, that Patronages and Presentations of Kirks, is an Evil and Bondage, under which the Lord's People, and Ministers of this Land, have long groined, and that it hath no Warrant in God's Word, but is founded only on the common Law, and is a Custom Popish, and brought into the Kirk in Time of Ignorance and Superstition, and that the same is contrary to the Second Book of Discipline, in which, upon solid and good Ground, it is reckoned among Abuses that are desired to be reformed, and unto several Acts of General Assembly, and that it is prejudicial to the Liberty of the People, and Planting of Kirks, and unto the free Calling and Entry of Ministers unto their Charge: And the said Estates being willing and desirous to promote and advance the Reformation foresaid, that every Thing in the House of God may be ordered according to his Word and Commandment; do therefore, from the Sense of the former Obligations, and upon the former Grounds and Reasons, discharge for ever hereafter, all Patronages and Presentations of Kirks, whether belonging to the King or to any laick Patron, Presbyteries, or either, within this Kingdom, as being unlawful and unwarrantable by God's Word, and contrary to the Doctrine and Liberties of this Kirk; and do repeal, rescind, make void, and anul all Gifts and Rights granted thereanent, and all former Acts made in Parliament, or in any inferior Judicatory, in favours of any Patron or Patrons whatsoever, so far as the same doth, or may relate unto the Presentation of Kirks: And do statute and ordain, That no Person or Persons whatsoever, shall, at any Time hereafter, take upon them, under Pretext of any Title, Infeftment, Act of Parliament, Possession, or Warrant whatsoever, which are hereby repealed, to give, subscribe, or seal any Presentation to any Kirk within this Kingdom; and discharge the passing of any Infeftments hereafter, bearing the Right to Patronages to be granted in favours of these for whom the Infeftments are presented; and that no Person or Persons shall, either in the behalf of themselves or others, procure, receive, or make Use of any Presentation to any Kirk within this Kingdom. And it is further declared and ordained, That if any Presentation shall hereafter be given, procured, or received, that the samee is null and of no effect, and that it is lawful for Presbyteries to reject the same, and to refuse to admit any to Trials thereupon; and notwithstanding thereof, to proceed to the Planting of the Kirk, upon the Suit and Calling, or with the Consent of the Congregation, on whom none is to be obtruded against their Will. And it is decerned, statute, and ordained, That whosoever hereafter shall, upon the Suit and Calling of the Congregation, after due Examination of their Literature and Conversation, be admitted by the Presbytery unto the Exercise and Function of the Ministry, in any Parish within this Kingdom; That the said Person or Persons, without a Presentation, by virtue of their Mission, hath a sufficient Right and Title to possess and enjoy the Manse and Glebe, and the whole Rents, Profits, and Stipends, which the Ministers of that Church had formerly posselt and enjoyed, or that hereafter shall be modified by the Commission for Plantation of Kirks; and decern all Titulars and Tacksmen of Tithes, Heritors, Liferenters, or others, subject and liable in Payment of Ministers Stipends, to make Payment of the same, notwithstanding the Minister his Want of a Presentation; and ordain the Lords of Session, and other Judges competent, to give out Decrees and Sentences, Letters conform, Horning, Inhibition, and all other Executorials, upon the said Admission of Ministers by Presbyteries, as they were formerly in Use to do, upon Collation and Institution following upon Presentations from Patrons: Declaring always, That where Ministers are already admitted upon Presentation, and have obtained Decrees conform thereupon, that the said Decrees and Executorials following thereupon, shall be good and valid Rights to the Ministers, for suiting and obtaining Payment of his Stipend, and the Presentation and Decree conform, obtained before the Date hereof, shall be a valid Ground and Right for that effect, notwithstanding the annulling Presentations by virtue of this present Act. And because it is needful that the just and proper Interest of Congregations and Presbyteries, in providing of Kirks with Ministers, be clearly determined by the General Assembly, and what is to be accounted the Congregation having that Interest; therefore, it is hereby seriously recommended unto the next General Assembly, clearly to determine the same, and to condescend upon a certain standing Way, for being a settled Rule therein, for all Time coming. And it is hereby provided, declared, and ordained, That the taking away of Patronages and Presentations of Kirks, shall import nor inforce no Hurt nor Prejudice unto the Title and Right that any Patron hath unto the Tithes of the Parish, nor weaken his Infeftment wherein the same is contained; but that the said Title, Right, and Infeftment, shall in every respect (so far as doth concern the Tithes) be as valid and strong, as when Presentations were in Use. It is further statute and ordained, That the Tithes of these Kirks, whereof the Presentations are hereby abolished, shall belong heritably unto the said Patrons, and be secured unto them, and inserted in their Rights and Infeftments, in Place of the Patronage. Likeas, the Estates of Parliament declare said Patrons their Right therunto to be good and valid, hereby granting full Power to them to possess, sell, annalie, and dispone the same in Manner afterspecified, as fully and freely as the Minister and Patron might have done, before the making these Presents: Excepting always therefrom, these Tithes which the Heritors have had and posselt, by virtue of Tacks set to them by the Ministers, without any Deed or Consent of the Patrons; concerning which it is provided, That the said Tithes, at the Issue and Outrunning of the present Tacks, shall belong unto the Heritors *respe-*ctive; the said Heritors and the Patrons abovementioned, each of them for their Interest, being always liable to the Payment of the present Stipends to the Ministers, and to such Augmentation and Provision of new Stipends to one or more Ministers, such as the Parliament or Commission for Plantation of Kirks, shall think fit and appoint: Excepting also such Tithes as are and have been posselt and uplifted by the Ministers, as their proper Stipends; concerning which it is hereby declared, That the Minister shall enjoy the same without any Impediment, as formerly; it being hereby provided also, That this Act shall pre-judge no Person of the Right, Title, and Possession of their Tithes, by Infeftments, Tacks, and other lawful lawful Rights acquired by them, and the Predecessors and Authors, as accords of Law. Likeas, the Estates of Parliament renew the former Acts, granted in favours of Heritors, for valuing, leading, and buying of their Tithes; hereby ordaining any Patron, having Right to these Tithes made to them by this Act, and having no Right thereunto of before, to accept the Value of Six Years Rents, according to the Prices of valued Bolls respective, enjoyned and set down in the former Act thereanent, and that for the heritable Right of the said Tithes, and for all Title, Interest or Claim that the said Patrons can have or pretend thereunto by virtue of this Act.

Act anent Presentation of Ministers. N^o. XIV. A.

FOrasmuch as the King's most excellent Majesty, considering how necessary it is, for the right and orderly Administration of God's Worship, and the Exercises of Religion, and for keeping of his good Subjects within their Duties they ow to God, to his Majesty, to their native Country, and fellow Subjects, especially at this Time, after so many Confusions and Distractions, both among Churchmen and others, That more than ordinary Care be had in presenting of Ministers to all such Kirks as are or shall be vacant within this Kingdom, hath given particular Commission under his Great Seal, as to all Presentations to all Parsonages, Vicarages, and other Benefices and Kirks at his Majesty's Presentation. And as to all other Benefices and Kirks, whereof the Presentation belongs to any other Patron or Patrons whatsoever, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, statutes and ordains. That all Patrons or Persons whatsoever, who hath, or pretends any Right to the Presentations to any Patronages, Vicarages, or other Benefices of Cure, Kirks, or modified Stipends, be careful in all Time coming, that Presentations to these Benefices, Kirks, or Stipends, be granted by them to such Persons only, as shall give sufficient Evidence of their Piety, Loyalty, Literature, and peaceable Disposition, and shall, in Presence of the Patron or his Attorney, and of the Sheriff of the Shire, Steward of the Stewartry, or heritable Bailie, or Commissar of the Bounds, if it be in the Country, and of the Magistrates of the Burgh, before the granting and their accepting the Presentation, take and subscribe the Oath of Allegiance, the said Sheriff, Steward, Bailie, Commissar, and Magistrates, having first taken the Oath themselves. And it is hereby declared, That if any Person who hath not so taken the Oath of Allegiance, shall be presented by any Patron, not only shall the Presentation be void and null of it self, but the Right of the Patronage, as to that Vacancy, shall belong to the King's Majesty, and the Patrons be repute disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and Contemnners of his Royal Authority. And ordains thir Presents to be Printed, and published at the Market-crosses, that none pretend Ignorance.

Petition of the Presbytery of Edinburgh. N^o. XIV. B.

Unto the King's Commissioner, and the Honourable High Court of Parliament, the humble Petition of the Presbytery of Edinburgh.

When we reflect upon the sad Times that have past over this Church and Kingdom, during the Time of the late Usurpers, what Grief and Affliction of Spirit it has been to honest Christians, and true Countrymen, that their Country has been kept in Bondage, his sacred Majesty driven into a sad disconsolate Exile, our Nobles and Rulers scattered into Corners, cast into the far Countries, shut up into Prisons at Home and Abroad, and trode upon by base and bloody Men, and all our civil and religious Concernments left under the Feet of violent Usurpers, and with what Difficulties all honest Men have wrestled, (whereof we, with others of the Ministry, have had not a little Share) which then laboured to keep their Garments clean from the Defections of the Time, and to lament after the Lord, till he should in Mercy visit us: We cannot, now when the Lord has returned our Captivity, but be as Men that dream, and our Mouths filled with Laughter, and our Tongues with singing, the Lord having done great Things for us, whereof we are glad; and as we lookt upon it as a Mercy never to be forgotten, that the Lord in his infinite Goodness, has been pleased wonderfully to bring about his Majesty's Restoration to his Throne, and the Deliverance of this distressed Kingdom, from all that Misery and Bondage under which it hath groined; so 'tis our earnest Supplication to God, that this so great a Mercy may be improved by all Ranks, to the Honour of his great Name, whose Work this Deliverance is, and to the Good and Comfort of this afflicted Church and Kingdom. We do, with all Thankfulness to almighty God, observe and acknowledge his Mercy, who has restored our Judges as at the First, and our Counsellors as at the Beginning, that our Nobles are of our selves, and our Governors proceed from the Midst of us: And that now your Lordships are convened in this High Court by his Majesty's Authority, and with the Presence of his High Commissioner, that you may be the Repairers of the Breaches, and may seek the Wealth of your People, and may speak Peace to all your Seed. We have hitherto forbore to make any Applications to your Lordships, as being unwilling to interrupt you in your weighty and great Affairs; yet since there is not a General Assembly now sitting, which might more freely represent what is of publick Concernment to the whole Kirk, and might remove any Grounds of Jealousy which might be occasioned by the late Actings during our Troubles and Distractions, being upon the Place, and being unwilling to lose the Opportunity of your Lordships Meeting in this present Parliament, we do humbly offer unto your Lordships, (when now we hope many of your your Affairs are over) what we conceive may be for the Good of the Church, as his Majesty's gracious Letter, bearing his Resolution to provide and preserve the Government of the Church of Scotland, as it is settled by Law, without Violation, hath exceedingly gladdened the Hearts of good Men, as we understand by Letters from the several Presbyteries and Synods, some directed to his sacred Majesty or his Secretary, or some directed to us, by way of Return thereunto, and did secure them against all Fears in that Particular, or any Change ; so it was expected that this High Court of Parliament would confirm and ratify the true Religion, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, established by General Assemblies, approved and ratified by Acts of Parliament. Yet notwithstanding thereof, your Lordships have rescinded the Act anno 1640 and 1641. whereby our Government is to be cast loose, as to the civil Sanction thereof, and the Church in Danger, to be laid open to these Snares which formerly were troublesome and grievous to this Church ; therefore, whatever your Lordships have done for the settling and securing the Royal Power and Authority of our dread Sovereign, (whose Authority and Power we do heartily acquiesce, and cordially submit thereto) or for securing the Peace of the Kingdom, in which we acknowledge none of them ought to oppose one another ; yet we are very hopeful, and humbly supplicate, this High Court of Parliament will, by their civil Sanction, establish, maintain, and defend the true Religion, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline and Government, presently professed, received, and practised, and restrain and suppress all Impiety, Vice, and Profaneness, and whatsoever is contrary to Truth and Godliness. And whereas, through the Iniquity of the Times, and Prevalency of the Usurpers, the General Assembly convened in anno 1653. was interrupted, and all Meetings of General Assemblies declined by us, out of our due Respects to his Majesty's just Right and Authority, upon which they would have been ready to have encroached upon such an Opportunity, 'tis humbly desired your Lordships would be pleased to move to his Majesty, That, with the first Convenience, a free General Assembly may be called, which may not only take Care to compose and settle these sad and lamentable Divisions which have been in the Church, but also may recognise upon these Actings, which may be apt to give Offence, during the Time of the sad and unhappy Troubles ; and we may assure your Lordships, that it is the Purpose of honest Men, when they shall convene in an Assembly, to do what shall be found necessary for rectifying all Disorders, and to redress whatsoever has been offensive. We shall not stand to press these our humble Desires, by any Arguments taken from the Lawfulness or Warrantableness, or Necessity of the Things themselves, or from your Lordships Obligation to act for him who has so wonderfully restored you to sit in Judgment, or from the Consideration of our selves, who, with other honest Men, have Confidence to sympathize with the Afflictions of our Rulers and Country, and have not been wanting, to our Power and Station, to act for the happy Revolution, and are and shall be careful to promote his Majesty's Interest and Authority, of which his People and we do assure your Lordships, that, besides the Convictions of the Things desired, we have not been a little pressed to this humble Address, to our tender Regard and Zeal towards his Majesty's Affairs ; so our Desire is, That the Minds of God's People may be settled, whose only Aim and Desire is, that they, under the Shadow of his Majesty's Government, may enjoy the Ordinances of Christ in Power and Purity, as they are established, which will encourage all of us (as in Duty we are always bound) to pray for his Majesty's long and prosperous Reign over us, and for the Affluence of divine Grace and Blessings to be poured out upon his Royal Person and Family, and upon your Lordships and your Families for ever.

Mr. PETER BLAIR Moderator:

Mr. ROBERT HUNTER Cl. pro tempore.

A seasonable Word of necessary Exhortation and Admonition, by the Synod of Fife, convened at St. Andrews, the 2^d of April 1661. to all the People of GOD within their Charge. N^o. XV: A:

Many and divers have been the Temptations and Trials of the Church of God, from the Beginning even unto this Day, our holy Lord, in his Wisdom, ordering all these Things for manifesting those that are approved, for clearing of his Truth, purging of his House from Dross and Corruption, exercising his Servants and People in a holy contending for Truth and Piety, against the Spear of Evils that hath been always running in the World, and for the greater Advancement of the Glory of his Power and Goodness, in preserving and giving Outgate in end to his afflicted People tossed with Tempest. And now (Right worthy, and dearly beloved in the Lord) the Concernments of Religion, and the Work of God in this Land, being under apparent Hazard, sad Trials likely to ensue, unless the Mercy of God, and Piety and Justice of our dread Sovereign, using his Authority for God, avert the same, we were most unfaithful, if we should not at such a Time (when Prelacy, with the dangerous Attendants thereof, (of which this Church hath had sad Experience) is like to be introduced again amongst us) declare our constant Resolutions, according to the Tie that lies upon us, by the Authority of God, and our Engagements to him, and give timeous Warning to you the People of God, to keep your Garments clean, and that ye may not be led away to any Measure of Accession to these Evils, whereunto many may be turning aside. We know perfectly, that in our so doing we shall not escape the common Lot of faithful humble Contenders for the Truth, and be represented as intending Reflections on the lawful Authority God hath set over us, or as going about to raise Jealousies and Disaffections in the People towards them, or to move Sedition and Trouble ; and it may fall out that none be more ready to cast black Colours upon our Actions, than Men of our own Order and Rank. In giving this our faithful Admonition and Declaration, we have laid our Account with all that such Persons can load us with, and much more, being confident, that the constant Tenor of our Deeds hath sufficiently wiped, and shall wipe off all such unjust Aspersions. We have our Witness in Heaven, and a Witness every one of us within us, how much our Souls did long to have our present Sovereign established upon the Throne of his Kingdom among us, (after the horrible barbarous Murder of his Royal Father, of blessed Memory, by the English Sectaries) and it is great Joy to our Hearts, that God blessed us with Fidelity to the King's Majesty, in a very dark and dangerous Time, in the Year 1650. when we, with other faithful Subjects through the Land, followed our Duty to his Majesty, when our Land was half subdued, and the rest under the saddest Pressures; and we bless God that at that Time, and until this Day, we have not been following after the unwarrantable Principles and Practices of sundry in this Land, not a little injurious to his Majesty's just Right. It is also our Joy, that under Ten Years Bondage, neither the real Cruelty, nor seeming Civilities of Usurpers, have prevailed to debauch our Loyalty to our dread Sovereign, in whose Absence we sat on the Ground, as a Widow mourning for the Loss of her Husband. In our Darkness we wished for the Dawning of that Day, when the Lord shall bring back our Captivity, and restore our Sovereign, that under his Shadow we might rest: And how greatly we were affected with that signal Work of God, (who is wonderful in Counsel, and excellent in Working) in that happy Restoration of his Majesty, what Praises were rendered to God with signal Cheerfulness, will not soon be forgotten by the Lord's People. But our Hearts were more confirmed in Loyalty, when, at our last Meeting, we received his Majesty's gracious Letter to the Presbytery of Edinburgh, to be communicated: A Letter worthy to be engraven in Marble or in Gold, wherein his Majesty declares himself not only well satisfied with the Carriage of the Generality of the Ministers of Scotland, in the Time of Trial; but also, to prevent Jealousies which any might create in the Minds of well-meaning People, is pleased to give us Assurance, that, by the Grace of God, his Majesty resolves to discountenance Profanity, and all Contemners and Opposers of the Ordinances of the Gospel, and to protect and preserve the Government of the Kirk of Scotland, as it was then settled by Law, without Violation. Which Letter, so graciously sent to us by our Sovereign, preventing our Desires to express his Royal Resolution, as to the Maintenance of the Work of God amongst us, we look upon and esteem as a Kind of magna charta, given by our gracious King for our Church-order and Privileges. And as in our Letter, directed from us at our last Meeting, to his Majesty's noble Secretary for Scotland, to be humbly presented in our Name to his Majesty's own Hands, we did express our Sense of God's Mercy to us, in putting such a Thing into the King's Heart; so shall we be most loth to suffer such Thoughts to take place in our Hearts, as if so pious and Royal a Resolution were to be altered upon any Instance whatsoever: And we would count it a most undutiful Part in us, to be ready to suggest or express to the People of God, the Subjects of the King, any Fears of that Sort: But as our Loyalty in former Times, hath appeared, so we trust that our Carriage upon all Occasions, shall argue in us indelible Evidences of unstained Loyalty and Love to our Sovereign, whom we honour as a Man next unto God, inferior to none but God, who is his only Judge, invested by God with a peerless Supremacy over all Persons and Ranks of Persons, within his Majesty's Dominions, the chief Nurse-father of the Church, and Keeper of both Tables of God's Law, the sovereign Protector and Defender of the Worship and Ordinances of God, God's Vicegerent, sent by him to bear the Sword, with imperial Power to punish all evil Deeds, and Evil-doers trespassing against Religion and Piety, or moral Honesty, and Duties that Man doth owe to Man, and to put every one in his Dominions to the doing of their Duty to God and Man, the supreme civil Governor of all Persons, and in all Causes Civil and Ecclesiastick; though the Power of the Keys of spiritual Government belongs to the Officers of the Church, appointed by Christ: In a Word, we do willingly yield whatsoever that pious and learned Divine, Dr. Usher, attributes to the King, in the Exposition of the Oath of Supremacy, for which he was solemnly thanked, in a Letter yet extant in Print, by that learnedest of Princes, King James of blessed Memory, who knew the Bounds of Royal Supremacy, as well as any King on Earth; no less do we acknowledge to be due to our Sovereign Lord King Charles, that we may forever stop the Mouths of these who seek Occasion against us in this Matter, and may clear our Loyalty as with a Sun-beam. And we appeal to the great God, in the Point of hearty Loyalty to our Sovereign, though we dare not (and we know he wills us not) in the least Thing depart from the known Mind of our God, in the Matters concerning his House and Worship. And having premised this as a Guard against Mistakes, we aver it to be the true Zeal of our Hearts, towards the Matters of our God, his House and Worship, that hath laid a Necessity on us thus to declare our selves, and to admonish the People of God in our Charge, without any Intention of wronging lawful Authority, whom, if in any Thing to be enjoined, we cannot please with active Obedience, we hope they will be pacified by our passive Obedience, which we resolve to yield, as our God calleth us, rather than to sin against him.

Therefore, we declare to you the Lord's People in our Charge, whom he hath appointed us as Ministers to instruct, that we are convinced, that Prelacy of any one, with Majority of Power and Jurisdiction over Presbyteries and Churches, hath no Warrant from Christ in his written Word, which we are persuaded is a perfect sufficient Rule of Religion, holding forth all the Fundamentals of Church-government, whereunto belong the Offices and Officers, by which the Lord's People are to expect his Blessing; it being certain and undoubted, that no spiritual Efficacy can be in Faith expected by any Office in the Church, or any other religious Ordinance, but that which is appointed by God in his Word, but is contrary thereto, it being evident that our Lord Jesus Christ hath discharged and inhibited all such Majority among the Ministers of his Church, having committed the whole Parts of the spiritual Government thereof, to one united Company of Rulers, and never to one alone; neither did his Apostles, when they are purposely mentioning, in their Writings, the Officers given by Christ to his Church, ever make Mention of any such Prelates over many Pastors and Churches, nor of his Priority and Power, or Work, as distinct from the Presbyters; but do always speak of the Presbyter and Bishop, as of one Office under divers Names. And it being so that this Office hath no Footing in divine Scripture, it ought to be refused and rejected by those who know themselves to be bound to follow the Rule, not of human but of divine Wisdom, in the Government of the Church of Christ. And although those who stand in Opposition to us in this Point, do make a great Noise (to amaze the simple) about Antiquity, and the primitive Times of the Churches and Fathers, as if they all stood on their Side, it ought not to stumble the People of God, seeing ing that (were it so) Christian Consciences, wanting the Warrant of the Word to bottom Faith upon, can have no Consistency nor Establishment upon human Constitutions; and yet we dare plead with them at the Bar of purest Antiquity, nearest the Times of the Apostles, whilst the Church remained a chaste Virgin, and are confident, that for some Hundreds of Years after the Apostles, there's no Evidence of such a Bishop as we reject and plead against: And from History we can make appear, that there was no such Bishop in our own Church, more than Three hundred Years after receiving of the Christian Religion among us; but whenever that Office did creep in, we are bold to affirm, as our Lord said in another Case, It was not so from the Beginning.

II. Next, we declare to you our dear People, our own Resolutions, by the Strength of divine Grace, to adhere constantly, all the Days of our Life, to the Doctrine, Worship, and present Government of the Kirk of Scotland, by Presbyteries, without the foresaid Prelacy in any Degree, under the Name of a constant Moderator, or what else soever, which we have renounced upon the strongest Enforcements of Scripture-authority upon our Consciences, and are in that Matter under an indispensable Tie of a solemn Oath to God; and altho' we cannot, for our conscientious Resolutions, expect Trouble, being under the Protection of so gracious a Sovereign, (to whom we would not doubt to justify the Sincerity of our Hearts, in cleaving to that which is good, had we the Opportunity to represent our Faithfulness to God, and Loyalty to his Majesty) yet, however, in this our Distance from his Majesty, we should meet with Extremities in our Duty, we sha'll with Quietness commit our selves and Cause to him that judgeth righteously, resolving, in so honourable a Cause, to endure, through God's Strength, whatsoever Trial and Hardship it may please the Lord to exercise us with.

III. We do, in the Name of the Lord Jesus, exhort you the People of God in our Charges, (which we sha'll also endeavour, through Grace, for our Parts) speedily to renew our Repentance for our Unthankfulness under the Means of Grace, Neglect and Contempt of the Gospel, ungospel-like Conversation, for the which the Lord may justly remove all his Gospel-ordinances from us, and plague us with sundry Sorts of Judgments, pursuing us as dry Stubble, until we were consumed. As also we intreat that ye would stand fast to the Profession of the Truth of Christ, and to every Part of it, and to love the Order of the House of Christ, which is so well grounded on his Word, and tends so much to the Advancement of Godliness, and the Glory of God, not making light Accounts of that which is a Part of the Truth of the Gospel and of the Kingdom of Christ, after the lukewarm Indifferency of too many, in the holy Things of God. We are persuaded better Things of you, than that ye should be removed from your Stedfastness, after the Shining of so much Light, after so strong Engagements to the Lord: What horrible Guiltiness should this draw on us? How great should our Infamy be among all the Churches of Christ? Whither should we not cause our Shame to go for our Unstedfastness in the solemn Oath of God which is on our Spirits, in a Matter not only lawful, but also necessary for us to adhere to, having so much Light in it? Remember how dangerous Backsliding is; what better Fruits can be looked for from that Way of Government than appeared among us? How loth are we to suffer it to enter in our Hearts, that this Land shall make the Fruit of their loosing from Ten Years Bondage, a Shakeloose of the Government of Christ? or, that good Patriot or People, will embrace that which hath been so bitter to themselves and their Antecessors? How sad a Thing will it be to ly in Chains of our own making, and in end conclude with the simple Repentant, non putaram? Be exhorted to avoid that Evil of Prelacy, and all Attendants to it, under whatsoever Colours, as ye would have the Lord regard you.

IV. Finally, we exhort you to all Loyalty and Obedience in the Lord, to our Sovereign the King, not only for Wrath, but for Conscience Sake, and to due Obedience to all who have Authority from him, Judicatories and Persons. We have the Lord to be our Witness, that neither the Matter of our present Administration, nor our Purpose, hath any Tendency to make Trouble; we have done this merely for our own Exoneration, and with respect to your Good and the Honour of Christ. The LORD establish you with us, by his free Spirit.

Supplication of the Synod of Galloway, against the intended Change of Government, 1661. N^o. XV. B.

May it please your Honours,

WE the Ministers of Jesus Christ, within the Synod of Galloway, laying seriously to Heart the wonderful Mercies of God, manifested from Time to Time to this poor Nation, First, in the Days of our Forefathers, many Hundred Years ago, in which Time, a little after the Rising of the Sun of Righteousness to give Light to the Gentiles, the Lord was graciously pleased to visit this Land with the Light of the glorious Gospel, and to bless and honour the whole Nation, both with Purity of Doctrine and Government, for sundry Generations together: During which Time, until the Incoming of Palatius, ordained Bishop by Pope Celestine, the Scots knew not such a Thing as a Prelate-bishop, but had, for the Teachers of the Faith, Administers of the Sacraments, and Exercisers of Discipline, Presbyters only, (called Culdees, or Coldeis, because of their Piety) of whom some were appointed Overseers or Superintendants, but had no Preheminence or Rank of Dignity above the rest, neither were they of any distinct Order from the rest of their Brethren. Next, in the Days of our Fathers, when the Nation was involved in the Darknes of Popish Superstition and Idolatry, it graciously pleased the Lord to ransom the Land from the Bondage of Popish Tyranny and Superstition, and again to bless it with the Light and Liberty of the Gospel, and with Discipline and Government, established according to the Pattern shewed in the Mount: The beautiful Lustre of which glorious Reformation, remained for many Years unstained, until some ambitious and covetous Men-pleasing Churchmen, emboldned with the Smiles of Authority, not only marred and eclipsed the the Beauty and Glory of Christ's Government by presbytery, but almost overthrew the Government it self, in obtruding upon it, and setting over it a lordly Government in the Persons of Prelates. Which Course of Defection, to the great Grief of the Godly, and not without the constant Reluctancy, Counteracting, Protestings, and Witnessing of the most learned and faithful Pastors in the Land, to the contrary, was tyrannically carried on for the Space of Thirty eight Years or thereby. Yet, in the Third Place, even in our own Day, the Outgoings of the Lord, in the Year 37. and the Years following, has appeared so glorious and conspicuous, to the dashing and execrating of that lordly Prelacy, and to the replanting and re-establishing of Christ's own Government by Presbytery, in its Integrity, that it were superfluous for us to make Mention of these Things, which many of your Lordships Eyes have seen, wherein many of your Lordships have been honoured to be eminent Actors, and whereof all our Hearts have been joyful and glad. The serious Consideration of these Things, speaking the Lord's Unwillingness to depart, fixes a strong (and we trust) well grounded Perswasion on our Spirits, that our covenanted Lord has Thoughts of Peace, and not of Evil, towards this poor Land, so often, so deliberately, so seriously, and so solemnly, by Oath and Covenant, engaged to the most high God, and that he will be graciously pleased to fix his Tabernacle amongst us, and rest in his Love: And though on the contrary, he should, in his Righteousness, threaten a Departure from us, and denounce also Wo unto us when he departeth from us, (the Fears whereof, as swelling Waves, overwhelm the Spirits of the Lord's People at this present Time, who, for the most Part, are trembling under the sad Apprehensions of a Change) yet the Thoughts of his ancient and late Love to this Land, should persuade all, in their respective Stations, to lay hold on the Skirts of his Garments, and not to let him go: And therefore, the earnest Desire of our Hearts is, to plead in secret with the Lord, that he would mercifully preserve his Staves of Beauty and Bands, in their Beauty and Strength amongst us: So (Christ commanding, Necessity urging, and Duty calling for it at our Hands, to be faithful Office-bearers in the House of God) we trust that it will not be offensive to your Lordships, that (keeping within our own Sphere, and holding our selves within the Bounds of that Christian Moderation which becomes Godliness) we do in all Humility exhort your Honours, that with all Singleness of Heart, with all Love and Zeal to the Glory of God, with all tender Compassion to this yet panting Kirk, faintly lifting up the Neck from beneath the Yoke of this late exorbitant Tyrant of perfidious Men, that with all pious Respect to your Posterity in the Generations to come, whose Souls will bless your Remembrance, for transmitting a pure Reformation to them, and that with all prudent and Christian Regard to prevent the Stumbling, and provoke the holy Emulation of the Nations round about, whose Eyes are upon your Lordships, ye would see unto the exact and faithful keeping of the Engagements, Oaths and Vows of the Lord, lying on your Lordships and the whole Land, to preserve the reformed Religion in the Churches of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, against all the Enemies thereof: And that the Lord's People, his Majesty's loyal Subjects, may be delivered from the present Fears of a Change, which they are growing under, we humbly supplicate your Lordships would be pleased to ratify all former Acts of Parliament, in favour of the reformed Religion in this Church, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government: And that, as his Majesty has been pleased, in his gracious Letter directed to the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and by them to be directed to the rest of the Presbyteries in this Kirk, to declare his Resolution to protect and preserve the Government of the Church of Scotland, as it is settled by Law, without Violation; so your Lordships would be pleased to declare your Fixedness to the present settled Government, without the least Purpose of ever altering the same, or overcharging it with lordly Episcopacy: And that (besides the Considerations already hinted at) for the Reasons following, partly relating to the terminus a quo of such a Change, which we pray the Lord to avert, partly relating to the terminus ad quem, and partly relating to the Change it self.

First. If your Lordships will consider the terminus a quo of this Change we supplicate against, to wit, The Government of the Church of Scotland by Presbytery; First, It is the true Government of Christ's Kirk, who being faithful to him that appointed him, yea, and faithful as a Son over his own House, Heb. 3. 2, 6. has not left his House to Confusion, without Government, but has appointed the same as to be fed by Doctors and Pastors, so to be overseen and ruled by Seniors or Elders, in their lawful Assemblies in Christ's Name, where he has promised to be in the Midst of them; the whole Platform of which Government, erected in Christ's Church in this Nation, as to all the Essentials, is so clearly warranted in the holy Scriptures, that we may confidently say, It is the only Government according to that Pattern shewed in the Mount.

Secondly. Albeit in the Reformation of Religion, whether in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, or Government, the Example of the best reformed Churches is not to be contemned, but to have its due Respect; yet we have good Ground to assert, that the present Government of the Church of Scotland by Presbytery, was not inconsiderately borrowed from any other as the Pattern, nor headily obtruded on this Kirk, (a Calumny frequently cast on our Government by the Adversaries thereof) but that it is the Fruit of the many Prayers, and the Result of the faithful Pains and Labours of our pious Predecessors, who, by the Space of Six or Seven Years, did, in free and full Assemblies, deliberately debate every Point and Article of the said Government and Discipline, and so did in end, by the good Hand of God upon them, determine and conclude the same according to the Word of God, by the common Votes and uniform Consents of the whole Assembly of this Church.

Thirdly. This Government, clear in Scripture, deliberately closed with by our Progenitors, has now been frequently engaged unto, both, in the Days of our Forefathers, by the King's Majesty, the Nobles, and all Ranks of People within the Land, (whose national Oath is no less obliging of us their Offspring, than the Oath of Joshua and the Princes of Israel to the Gibeonites, was obliging of their Posterity, who were Four hundred Years thereafter dreadfully punished for the Breach thereof,) and also in our own Time we have solemnly engaged our selves by the sacred Oath of God, now thrice, to the said Government: And we may be sure, that such a threefold Knot and Tie will not be easily taken off the Conscience upon which it is indispensibly and indissolvably fastned by the divine Authority of that almighty God, the Searcher of all Hearts, whose Oath it is.

Fourthly. This Government has been ratified and established by many Acts of Parliament: It were impertinent for us to multiply Citations; your Honours know how clear and full the 114th Act, Parl. 12th, of King James VI. is, both for establishing the Government and Discipline of the Church, by Assemblies national and provincial, by Presbyteries and Sessions, and also, for abrogating, cassing, and annulling all former Acts of

Secondly. It will be palpable, not only to our selves, who are Members of this Church, but to all the Nations and Churches abroad, whether Protestant or Popish, that are in the least Measure acquainted with the Affairs of the Church of Scotland, and the Settlement of Government therein, what they have been been now these Hundred Years bygone, since our Reformation from Popery, that this feared and threatned Change will involve Persons of all Ranks within the Land, (who shall in any way have Accession to it) in the dreadful and horrid Guilt of Perjury, which will both expose the Land to the Wrath of an angry God, who will not hold them guiltless that take his Name in vain, but will prove a swift Witness against them, that swear falsely, and also expose our Religion and Nation to the insolent Blasphemy and Derision of our Adversaries the Papists, who may justly, with all others that hear tell of such a Change, change the ignominious Proverb, Punica fides to Scotica fides, and embolden the Papists to give us (ironically) no small Thanks, for that by our Perjury we have made the Lord angry with us, as did the Grecian Agesilaus to the Persian Tissaphernes, when he broke the League he made with him.

There be none that have the least Spark of Reason and Foresight, who may not see what sad Loss and Hurt will spring from this feared Change, unto the Lord's People under our Ministerial Charge. Will not poor Souls be in the same Case and Distraction of Thought, the People in Syria, Arabia and Egypt, were in about the 600 Year, anent the Opinion of Eutyches, when some denying, some affirming, the poor People were so brangled and shaken with contrary Doctrines, that in the End they lost all well grounded Persuasion of the true Religion ; so that within short Time, they did cast the Gates of their Hearts open to receive the vile, devilish, and blasphemous Doctrine of Mahomet? Even so, what can be expected in this Land, upon such a Change, which will unquestionably occasion not only one to affirm, and another to deny the same Position, but one and the same Man to affirm what he denied, and deny what he affirmed anent one and the same Position, in Matter of Religion? The Forebreathings of which Inconstancy are beginning to puff out already. We say, what can be expected in this Case through the Land, but that the Generality of the People shall become so doubtful and indifferent in the Matters of Religion, that they shall abandon all Piety, open their Hearts to Popery, and what Religion, or rather what Error and Fancy instead of Religion, you will? So that the Blood of their poor Souls will ly heavy on the Authors of the Change.

I. We are aggrieved that Ways are taken to seal up the Lips of the most faithful Ministers of Jesus Christ within the Land, from delivering their Master's Message with that Freedom and Plainness that becomes ; while, upon Occasion of the Proclamation at Edinburgh, September 20. 1660. Men disaffected to, or entertaining Grudges and Heart-burnings against Ministers, may and do take Encouragement to delate honest Men, using Freedom against Sin, as unloyal Slanderers and Trumpeters of Treason, Sedition, and Rebellion, when they are, in the Simplicity of their Heart, only giving Obedience to the Lord's Commands. Isa. 58. 1. Cry aloud, spare not, &c. We hope it will be acknowledged, that neither private nor publick Sins, personal nor national Sins, Sins in the State-members or in Church-members, are excepted in the Commission of the Ministers of the Gospel, (if any deny the Truth hereof, we are ready to instruct it from the Word of Truth) and it being so, Why should the Ministers faithful Discharge of Duty, in the Discovery of national Sins, whether in Church or State, be charged with the ignominious Aspersions of Railing, Slandering, &c. or they staged before civil Tribunals for the same, seeing that, according to their Commission, they are herein only aiming at the upstirring of People to Repentance, and to serious deprecating of the Wrath of God, that publick national Sins, and particular Faults in Rulers ordinarily draw on upon Lands? as is clear from Jer. 15. 4 and elsewhere.

II. We are aggrieved that the Oath of Allegiance does upon the Matter carry the Oath of Supremacy fully in its Bosom, and that in such an absolute, general, and comprehensive Term, without any express Limitation or Qualification, that in our humble Conception, there is conferred upon the King by it a Power to do Ecclesiastick Matters as he pleases ; and this is in effect to confer the same, or the like Headship over the Church, upon the King, as that which is taken from the Pope.

III. We are aggrieved that the civil Sanction is taken from the Covenant, whereupon the inviolable Obligation of the sacred Oath of God upon the Conscience, is trampled upon with Contempt, by very many, which cannot but grievously provoke the Lord, who has declared that he will be a swift Witness against them that swear falsely.

IV. We are aggrieved that there be such sad Breaches made in the Walls of our Jerusalem, which once was built a City compact together; we mean, that the Church-judicatories have not only suffered violent Interruption, but also are prohibited and discharged, through which Iniquity has more insolently faced the Cause these Three Quarters of a Year bygone, than it did for many Years before.

V. Looking upon these but as making a wide Gap in the Walls, the beautiful Porches whereof denied an Entry, we are most of all aggrieved to see the Trojan Horse now a harling in over the Gap, we mean, the Reintroduction of lordly Prelacy upon this Church and Kingdom, which being once excrete, and the whole Nation solemnly sworn before the almighty God to its Extirpation, it makes our Ears to tingle, when we think of what may be the sad Tokens of God's Displeasure against the Lands, for endeavouring to give Rooting again to that Plant which our heavenly Father never planted. And this being the aggrieving Evil which does most sadly afflict our Spirits, for Exoneration of our own Consciences before the Lord, and that it may appear that we are not aggrieved without Cause, we do in all Humility offer unto your Lordships, these few subsequent Reasons against the Change of our long established Government by Presbytery, unto that abjured hierarchical Government by lordly Prelacy.

Besides the foresaid Reasons drawn from the terminus a quo, the terminus ad quem of the Change, and from the Change it self, we do in all Humility beg Leave to add Two experimental Considerations, which we desire to express with that Simplicity and Singleness of Heart, in the Sight of God, that becomes the Ministers of Jesus Christ, who are looking to give shortly an Account of their Stewardship unto their Lord and Master.

And the First is this : We do find in our Experience, that when the Lord at any Time is graciously pleased to grant unto any of us more near and familiar Access unto himself, and to put our Spirits in a more lively, spiritual, and heavenly Frame, then are we also filled with more perfect Hatred, Abhorrency, and Detestation of that Prelatical Dominion we plead against, and in our Souls, at such Times, we are encouraged and strengthened in the Lord, to set our Faces as Flint against that Course and Way, whatever the Hazard be we may incur ; and when Fears of Hazard, in opposing that Course, do creep upon our Spirits, we do ingenuously confess it is but vain, when we are at a greater Distance from God, and in a more common and natural Frame.

The next is this: We do find in our Experience, that when at any Time, any of us are summoned with the Messengers of Death, or when free of these, we fall upon the serious Thoughts and Meditations of Death, presenting, as in God's Sight, to our selves, what is the Course in the Profession, avowing and maintaining whereof we durst venture upon Death, upon Eternity, and upon the last Judgment; and upon the other Hand, propose to our selves what is the Course in the Profession, avowing and maintaining whereof we durst not venture upon Death, upon Eternity, and the last Judgment; we do as of Sincerity, as of God, in the Sight of God, declare, That we durst not, for Ten thousand Worlds, venture upon Eternity, and face the great Judge of the Quick and the Dead, with the Guilt of being instrumental to re-establish, or with the Guilt of embracing or conforming unto re-established lordly Episcopacy, lying upon our Consciences: Whereas, upon the other Hand, our Desires and Endeavours to be faithful and constant in the received and established Government by Presbytery, according to the Scripture-pattern, is a Mean of gladning and rejoicing our Hearts, when we look and hope for the coming of the Lord.

And now, Right honourable, having, in the Simplicity of our Hearts, opened up our Grievances in part to your Lordships, we do in the last Place, for Remedy, in all Humility, prostrate our selves before your Lordships, most humbly and earnestly begging, in the Name of Jesus Christ, that your Honours would be pleased to intercede with the King's most excellent Majesty, First. To take off the Restraint laid upon the Exercise of the Government of the Church, in her Assemblies, by the late Proclamations, without which Profanity will abound. Next. That his Majesty would be graciously pleased to free and deliver his faithful and loyal Subjects of this his ancient Kingdom, under our respective Charges, and the Godly through the whole Land, from all Fears of innovating and changing the Government of the Church, by Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies, which is ratified and approved by King James VI. of blessed Memory, as is evident, Parl. 114. Junii, 1592. Thirdly. That his Majesty would be pleased to ratify all former Acts of Parliament in favours of the Church and her said Government, that she may fully exercise the Power granted to her by Jesus Christ, with Freedom and Liberty. Fourthly. That his Majesty would be pleased to ratify all Acts both of Parliament and the General Assemblies, against Papists and Popery, against Prelates and Prelacy, that aspiring Men get not the Church of Christ in this Land fetcht under Bondage again. Fifthly. That his Majesty would be graciously pleased to renew the national Covenant of this Land, first subscribed by King James VI. of worthy Memory, and then taken by Persons of all Ranks and Degrees throughout the Nation; and also that he would be pleased to revive the solemn League and Covenant, subscribed by his Majesty's self, and that he would be graciously pleased, by his Royal Mandate, to ordain that both these Covenants would be renewed, sworn to, and subscribed to, by Persons of all Ranks and Degrees, within his Majesty's Three Kingdoms of Scotland, England, and Ireland, and the Dominions thereto belonging. Thus will there be a strong Bar drawn in the Way of Popery, and Prelacy which ushers the Way to Popery, that neither of them shall have a Regress to a replanting in these Lands: Thus shall there not an evil Beast be left to push in all the Mountain of the Lord; and thus may we confidently expect that the Lord shall be One, and the Name of the Lord One, in all his Majesty's Dominions.

Having, in the Zeal and Fear of God, with all humble and due Respect unto your Honours, offered these Considerations against a Change, we humbly beg, that your Honours would lay them (with many more that cannot but be obvious to your Lordships) seriously to Heart, and in the Pensitation of them, and the whole Matter in Hand, sit your selves as in the Sight and Presence of the all-seeing God, who standeth in the Congregation of the Mighty; and judgeth amongst the Gods, and will arise to judge the Earth: Weigh the Matter (we beseech you) in the Balances of the Sanctuary, and not of carnal Reason and Policy: Remember that God has set you up not to be Stepfathers, but Nursing-fathers of his Kirk, not to be Crossers, but Promoters of Purity and Piety, not to be Destroyers of that which many of your selves have builded, (and so Makers of your selves Transgressors) but to be Accomplishers and On-putters of the Cape-stone upon the building of the Lord's House; acquit your selves zealously and faithfully in this so honourable and reasonable Service; and beware, above all Things, to strive against God with an open and displayed Banner, by building up again the Walls of Jericho, (we mean lordly Prelacy, the very Lair-stone of antichristian Hierarchy) which the Lord hath not only casten down, but also laid them under a terrible Interdiction and Execration, that they be not built up again. These Walls in this Land, by the Power of God, have been once and again demolished: They now ly under the Lord's terrible Interdiction and Execration; yea, we have all of us, with uplifted Hands to the most high God, sentenced our selves to this dreadful Curse, if we re-edify these Walls again: Assuredly, if there be amongst your Lordships, or within the Land (which the Lord forbid) an Hiel, one or more, as was in the Days of Ahab, to re-edify cursed Jericho, they shall not miss the dreadful Execration, and the Judgment threatened.

Therefore, we do once again, with all due and reverend Respect prostrate at your Honours Feet, humbly supplicate, First. That your Honours would ratify all former Acts of Parliament, in favours of the Work of Reformation, in favours of Presbyterial Government, in favours of the Freedom and Privileges of the Church, and particularly of the Ministers of the Gospel, in their faithful and free dispensing of the Word; and that your Lordships would cast and anul all Acts in the contrary. Next. We humbly supplicate, That your Honours, in your Wisdoms, would draw such a Bar in the Way of Episcopacy, that this Kirk may be fully delivered from the Fears and Evil thereof, and that corrupt and carnal-minded Churchmen, who have the Preheminence, may be for ever put out of the Hopes of lording it hereafter any more over the Lord's Inheritance. However it shall please the Lord to incline your Honours Hearts to hearken unto these our just and lawful Desires, it is the firm Resolution of our Hearts, to live in all dutiful Obedience unto our dread Sovereign the King's most excellent Majesty, whom we pray the Lord long to preserve under the Droppings of his Grace, and Overloadings of his best Benefits, and special Blessings. Yet we crave Liberty, first, in all Humility, to say, That it will tend much to the cheerful Quieting of our Hearts, and the Hearts of the Lord's People we labour among, that your Honours favourably grant our foresaid Desires, for which the present and succeeding Generations shall call you blessed. But next, if your Lordships proceed, (which we pray the Lord forbid) to act any thing to the Prejudice of the Work of Reformation, to the Prejudice of the Government of this Church, and to the Freedoms and Liberties thereof, of, or to do any thing less or more, directly or indirectly, in favours of Episcopacy, or tending towards the Change of our present Church-government, by Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies; then, and in that Case, we crave Liberty to except and protest: Likeas, by these Presents, we do, in the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall hold that great Court of Parliament, to judge both the Quick and the Dead, at his glorious Manifestation, and in the Name of our Mother-kirk, so richly blessed of God these many Years bygone, under the Government we plead for, and in the Name of the Synod and respective Presbyteries and Sessions we are Members of, and in the Name of the particular Congregations we labour among, for discharging of our necessary Duty, and disburdening of our own Consciences, except and protest against every Thing of the Kind aforesaid, done or to be done to the Prejudice of Reformation, of Presbyterial Government, and of the Liberties of the Church, and against all and every Thing done or to be done for the Advantage of Episcopacy, or any way tending to the Introduction, Erection, Confirmation or Ratification thereof, at this present Parliament; earnestly beseeching the Lord, that your Honours, this whole Nation, and our selves, may be kept free of the horrid Guilt of such a sinful Change of Christ's Government, and Encroachments upon his Royal Crown, and free of all the sad Inconveniencies ensuing inevitably thereupon, both to Kirk and State; and most humbly craving, that this our Supplication and Protestation may be admitted by your Honours, and registrated among the Acts and Statutes of this present Parliament, in case (as God forbid) any Thing be done to the Prejudice of Christ's Government, and Advantage of Episcopacy. Your Honours refreshing Answer humbly we expect.

Marquis of Argyle's Petition, with Reasons for a Precognition, February 12th, 1661. N^o. XVI.

THat forasmeikle as the Petitioner can, with a safe Conscience, affirm and solemnly protest, that whatever his Actings or Accession hath been, in relation to publick Business, since the Beginning of the Troubles, till his Majesty's Departure hence in the Year 1651. though he will not purge himself of Errors, Failings, and Mistakes, both in Judgment and Practice, incident to human Frailty, and common to him, if not with the whole, at least the greatest Part of the Nation; yet, in one Thing, though he were to die, he would still avouch and retain his Innocency, That he never intended any Thing treasonably, out of any pernicious Design against his Majesty's late Royal Father, of ever glorious Memory, or his present Majesty, (whom God may long preserve) their Persons or Government, but endeavoured always, to his uttermost, for settling the Differences betwixt their Majesties and their People. And as to any Actings before the Year 1641. or since the said Year, till his Majesty being in the Parliament at Pert and Stirling, your Petitioner did, with a full Assurance, rely upon his gracious Majesty, and his Royal Father, their Treaties, Approbation, Oblivion, and Indemnity, for what was past, and firmly believed, that the same should never have risen in Judgment, or that the Petitioner should have been drawn in question therefore; and during his Majesty's Absence, and being forced from the Exercise of his Royal Government by the late Usurpers, and long after that the Nation, by their Deputies, had accepted of their Authority and Government, and they in Possession, the Petitioner was forced to Capitulation with them, being in their Hands, and under Sicknes; and the same was, after all Endeavours used, according to the Duty of a good Subject, and, upon the Petitioner's Part, so innocent, and necessary for Self-preservation, without the least Intention, Action, or Effect, to his Majesty's Prejudice; that albeit, upon Misinformation, (as the Petitioner humbly conceives) his Actings and Compliance, both in their Designs and Quality, have been misrepresented, as particularly singular and personal, stating the Petitioner in a Degree of Guilt beyond others, and incapable of Pardon; the same have so far prevailed upon his Majesty, as to cloud and damp the propitious and comfortable Rays of his Royal Grace and Favour, and have strained his gracious Inclination beyond its natural Disposition of Clemency, exprest to his other Subjects, to commit the Petitioner's Person, and give Way to the Trial of his Carriage and Actings: Yet, so firmly rooted is the Petitioner's Perswasion of his Majesty's Justice and Clemency, and that he intends the Reclaiming, and not the Ruin of the meanest of his Subjects, who retain their Loyalty, Duty, and good Affection to his Person and Government; that, upon true and right Representation of the Petitioner's Carriage and Actings, he shall be able to vindicate himself of these Aspersions, and shall give his Majesty Satisfaction, at least so far to extenuate his Guilt, as may render him a fit Object of that Royal Clemency, which is of that Depth, that having swallowed and past by, not only personal, but national Guiltiness, of much more deep Dye as any the Petitioner can be charged with, or made out against him, and so will not strain to pass by and pardon the Faults and Failings of a Person who never acted but in a publick joyn't Way, without any sinister or treasonable Design against his Majesty, or his Royal Father; and against which he can defend himself either by Acts of Approbation and Oblivion, in verbo principis, which he conceives to be the supreme, sacred, and inviolable Security, or which he was forced to, much against his Inclination, by an insuperable Necessity. And albeit his Majesty's Grace and Favour is strictly tied to no other Rule but his Will and Pleasure, yet his Majesty's so innate, essential, and insuperable a Quality of his Royal Nature, that the Petitioner is perswaded, in all human Certainty, that the leaving and committing to his Parliament, (as is exprest in his Majesty's Declaration, October 12th, last bypast) the trying and judging of the Carriage of his Subjects, during the late Troubles, as indeed it is in its own Nature, and ought to be so accepted of all, as an undoubted Evidence of his Majesty's Affection to, and Confidence in his People; so no other Trial or Judging is therein meant, but a fair, just, legal, and usual Trial, without any Prejudice, Passion, or Prelimitation, or Precipitation. Likeas, by the said Declaration, there was a Freedom for all the People interested, to make their Application to the Parliament, or in the mean time to the Committee, from whom only his Majesty is pleased to declare he would receive Address and Information; and seeing it was the Petitioner's Misfortune, during the Sitting of the said Committee, to be Prisoner in England; whereas if he had been Prisoner here in Scotland, he would have made Application to them, and would have craved, and in Justice expected, that Precognition might have been taken by them to whom the preparing and ordering of that Affair (to wit, anent the Subjects Trials during the Troubles) was recommended, that the Petitioner's Absence, which was his Punishment, not his Fault, may not be prejudicial, seeing the Petitioner has lately received Two several Dittays, wherein there be many Crimes grossly false, with all the Aspersions and Aggravations imaginable laid to his Charge, importing no less than the Loss of his Life, Fame, and Estate, and the Ruin of him and his Posterity, which, he is confident, is not intended by his Majesty; and that by the Law and Practice of this Kingdom, consonant to all Reason and Equity, the Petitioner ought, upon his Desire, to have a Precognition, for taking the Deposition of certain Persons, which being frequently and usually practised in this Country, when any Person is defamed for any Crime, and therefore incarcerated, before he was brought to a Trial, at his Desire Precognition was taken in all Buiness relating thereto; which the Petitioner, in all Humility, conceives ought much more not to be denied to him, not only by reason of Respect to his Quality, and of the Importance and Consequence thereof to all his Majesty's Subjects, of all Quality, in all Time coming, but also in regard it has been so meaned and intended by his Majesty's Declaration foresaid. Likeas, the Manner of the Crimes objected, being Actions in Times of Wars and Troubles, the Guilt thereof was not personal and particular, but rather national and universal; and veiled and covered with Acts of Indemnity and Oblivion, and so tender and ticklish, that if duly pondered, after a Hearing allowed to the Petitioner, in Prudency and Policy, will not be found expedient to be tossed in Publick, or touched with every Hand, but rather to be precognosced upon by some wise, sober, noble, and judicious Persons, for these and several other Reasons in the Paper hereto annexed; nor does the Petitioner desire the same animo protelandi, nor needs the same breed any longer Delay, nor is it sought without an End of Zeal to his Majesty's Power, and Vindication of the Petitioner's Innocency, as to many Particulars wherewith he is aspersed; and it would be seriously pondered, that seeing cunctatio nulla longa, ubi agitur de vita hominis, far less can this small Delay, which is usual, and in this Case most expedient, if not absolutely necessary, be refused, ubi agitur, non solum de vita, sed de fama, and of all worldly Interests that can be dear or of Value to any Man.

Upon Consideration of the Premises, it is humbly craved that your Grace and the honourable Estates of Parliament, may grant the Petitioner's Desire, and to give Warrant to cite Persons to depone before your Grace and the Estates of Parliament, upon such Interrogatories as your Petitioner shall give in, for clearing of several Things concerning his Intention and Loyalty during the Troubles; and for such as are out of the Country, and Strangers, Residenters in England, Commissions may be directed to such as your Grace and the Parliament shall think fit, to take their Depositions upon Oath, and to return the same: And your Petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

Marquis of Argyle's Speech, April 9th 1661: No. XVII.

MY Regard to Parliaments is well known, and my Regard to this cannot be doubted, having his Majesty's Commissioner upon the Throne, and so many worthy Members in the same; therefore I hope it will not be mistaken, that I shew that Parliaments have in them two different inherent Powers or Qualities, the one legislative, the other executive, or judicial. The Legislative consists in the making and repelling Laws; the Executive or judicial in judging according to Law, whether it be betwixt Subject and Subject, or in relation to any particular Person; which I doubt not but your Lordships will seriously and wisely consider in all your Actions; whereby all Parliaments, and this in particular, will be the more acceptable to the People: And for this purpose his Majesty indicted the same, that therein all his Subjects Carriage during the Troubles, might be tried, his Honour and the Honour of this his ancient Kingdom vindicated, and the ancient Prerogatives of the Crown asserted; which being done, his Majesty declareth he will grant such a full and free Pardon and Act of Indemnity, as may witness there is nothing he more desireth, than that his People should be blessed with the Abundance of Happiness, Peace and Plenty under his Government. Your Lordships Care and Endeavour in these Things is not doubted, neither have I been wanting, according to my present Condition, to witness my Submission and Concurrence with the same, by offering my self and all I have, at all Occasions, to be disposed of as his Majesty should think fit. And although his Majesty's Proclamation be general, for trying all his Subjects Carriage during the Troubles, yet (without Envy or Prejudice to any, I speak it) no Laick Man's Carriage is brought in question, but mine own, whereby my Actions, however publick and common, may be the worse liked, when singly lookt upon; which if seen otherwise, would appear less censurable: And I am so charitable as to concede the main Reasons are these Two, which I take from the Libel, My alledged being a prime Leader and Plotter in all the publick Defences from the Beginning, which a short Narration of Affairs, I hope, will easily clear. The next, My being an Enemy to his Majesty, and his Royal Father, which are both most unjustly charged upon me: Therefore I am confident, when these are cleared, I shall find more Charity and less Prejudice from this honourable Meeting of Parliament.

And for satisfying your Lordships and all Men in these Things, I shall say nothing but Truth: That in all the Transactions of Affairs wherein I ever had my Hand (I thank God for it) I was never led in them by any private Design of Advantage to my self, either of Honour or Benefit, which are the main Things that sway the most Part of Mens Actions: So far was I from desiring Benefits, that I never had Pay as a Committee-man or Soldier in Scotland, England, or Ireland: Few Men can say the like who were in Employment. And sure if I had aimed at Honours, I wanted not Opportunities, if I durst have forsaken other Things wherein I was engaged by very strict Obligations, more binding upon me nor particular Ends.

Another Observation I have from the Libel, which is this, That after such an Inquisition, the like whereof was never known in Scotland, there is not one particular Crime found of my Maleadministration in any publick Trust, though I had the Honour to be in publick Employment since the Year 1626. neither any Ground for a Challenge in my private Conversation.

But to return to the Narration of Affairs, for vindicating my self from being the prime Plotter and Leader of Affairs during the late Troubles; as I forbear to mention the particular Grounds and Reasons of the Kirk and Kingdom of Scotland's Proceedings, which might readily be mistaken, as many Things concerning me have been, and are; neither shall I mention any Man's Name, because I intend no Reflection, some of the prime Actors being already with the Lord; I shall, for clearing the more easily to your Lordships, comprehend all my Actings during the late Troubles, in Three Periods of Time. First. Betwixt the Years 1633 and 1641. Secondly. Betwixt that and 1651. Thirdly. Betwixt that and the Year 1660. in which it pleased the Lord, in his Mercy, to restore his Majesty to the Possession of his just Right, to the great Comfort of all his People, and of my self in particular.

Now, in the First Period, from 1633. (at which Time the Differences first appeared) until the Year 1638. (though I am not to judge any other Man's Actions) there are none who then lived, but know that I had no Hand during that Time, in any of the publick Differences; neither, after that, did I subscribe the Covenant, until I was commanded by his Majesty's special Authority; and it was in Council then declared, that the subscribing of it was with the same Meaning which it had when it was first taken, in the Years 1580 and 1581. I may add likewise, that I was at that Time very earnestly dissuaded by some then called Covenanters, who are now dead, from subscribing the same by his Majesty's Command; not that they disliked the Covenant, or the King's Command for subscribing of it, but fearing a contrary Interpretation upon the Covenant, because it was thought, that Oaths were to be understood according to the Meaning of the Giver, and not of the Taker of them. Notwithstanding whereof, I subscribed, according to the Meaning given by the Council, which was cleared afterwards in the General Assembly of Glasgow, whereupon many Supplications were sent to his Majesty, for Approbation, but without Effect: Yet thereafter, I did not so much as subscribe any of the national Covenants, until the Year 1639. when there was an English Army upon the Border, and the Scottish Army at Dunse. And at that Time, my Endeavours werenot wanting, to my Power, for a Settling betwixt the King's Majesty and his People, which was then effectuate. And whatsoever I had acted, from my first taking of the Covenant, until his Majesty being in Scotland, in the Year 1641. was not only warranted by publick Commissions, but all my Service is approved by his Majesty in his Parliament, which, with his Majesty's Act of Oblivion at that Time, put a Clofe to that Period.

From that Time that his Majesty left Scotland, in the Year 1641. until the Year 1644. what I acted in the Fields or Counsels, was by publick Commissions, and the Service approved by the triennial Parliament indicted by his Majesty, who met in the Year 1644. And though in that Interval, betwixt 1641. and the Parliament 1644. there was a Meeting of the Convention of Estates, appointed by the Council, Commissioners for conserving the Peace, and these for common Burdens; which Council had Power by themselves to call a Convention of Estates, in which Convention the League and Covenant with England was agreed unto, and thereafter approved in the Parliament 1644. yet it is very well known, and I can make it very evidently appear, that I was one of the Men in Scotland who had least Correspondence in England. There are yet some of the Commissioners alive who were at that Time in England, who may evidence the Truth of this: Whereby it is manifest, I was no prime Plotter in such a Business.

And from the Year 1644. until his Majesty's coming unto Scotland, 1649. I never acted in relation to the late Troubles, but by virtue and Command of the Parliament, and their Committees, as I shall instruct by their Commissions, and Ratifications of my Service. I shall forbear here to repeat what I spake formerly, concerning my Proceedings with Montrose, Mr. Macdonald, and the Irish Rebels, and of my Agreement with Montrose, which I could not get ratified by the Committee of Estates, and therefore it broke off again: But one Thing I may say, That from the Year 1638. until 1648. there was never any considerable Difference (in publick Offices) among all these of Kirk or State, who had once joyned together, except a few who went to Montrose after Killyth. And any Difference which seemed to be in the Year 1648. was only anent the Form and Manner of proceeding, and not in the Manner of rescuing his Majesty, or relieving the Parliament of England from any Violence upon them; and the little Power that I had either in the Parliament 1647 or 1648. sheweth that I was no prime Leader in Affairs.

And for what was done in the Years 1646 and 1647. concerning the Disposal of his late Royal Majesty's Person, the Return of the Scottish Army, and the Agreement for the Money to be paid for their Arrears; it is well known that Instructions were sent to and again in these Affairs, both from Committees and Commissioners in Scotland and England: Yet it shall never be found, that ever either my Hand or Presence was at any Committees where any Thing was debated or resolved concerning the Disposal of his late Royal Majesty's Person, or upon any Treaties or Conclusions for Return of the Scots Army, or for the Money for the Satisfaction of their Arrears. So that I hope, when it is seriously considered, that I was one of the last in Scotland who subscribed the national Covenant, and never did the same till commanded by his Majesty, and that I was (of all these who acted in publick Affairs) one of these who had least Accession to those Things, though I be most blamed by common Report, That your Lordships will not find my Carriage during the late Troubles, to have deserved to have been put in so singular a Condition.

And as for what was acted in the Year 1649. it is very well known, that what Power and Interest I then had in the Parliament, I did, to my utmost Endeavours, employ the same for bringing Home his Majesty, and possessing him with his Crown, and Exercise of his Royal Authority. I shall not mention any Difficulty I had in the same, lest I might be thought to reflect upon others; but this I will say, that what I did, I did it really and faithfully for his Majesty's Service, and by his own Command, which was afterward acknowledged by his Majesty for good Service; and with the like Affection I assisted all the Time his Majesty was in Scotland: For, without Vanity and Presumption, I may also say, If my Counsel had been followed, his Majesty's Affairs had probably gone better; not that I condemn any other Man's different Opinion, because of Success, which is a very bad Rule to judge by ; but only to testify mine own Sincerity in all my Proceedings, during his Majesty's being in Scotland.

As to the last Period, after the Year 1651. it is well known the Condition that my nearest Relations were in when his Majesty went from Stirling, and that I did not then stay behind his Majesty, without his own particular Allowance, and kissing of his Hand, though no particular Charge or Employment was left upon me. I shall here mention nothing that past before the Defeat at Worcester, which, I may truly say, was as grievous to my self as any Scots Man; neither shall I trouble this honourable Parliament to mention many several Meetings which were held by several Noblemen and Gentlemen in this House, after that Time, wherein I was willing and ready to contribute what was in my Power; but nothing being found possible to be done, every Man was necessitate to retire to his own Family. And immediately after that Defeat of Worcester, his Majesty being driven from his Dominions, there were Commissioners sent from the pretended Parliament of England, unto Scotland, with whom I would never make any Agreement, neither did I ever capitulate, till long after all these in Arms, by Commission from his Majesty, had done the same, and the Representatives of the Nation had accepted the Tender of Union, to be under one Government, and thereafter had joyntly met together at Edinburgh, and sent their Deputies to London.

And it is likewise well known, that my self, and the Gentlemen (my Vassals and Tenants) within the Shire of Argyle, had endeavoured to get a Conjunction with our Neighbours in the Highlands, for Resistance of the English Power ; which was refused by our Neighbours, and the English acquainted therewith : Whereupon, they resolved upon very hard Courses against us. Yet, upon a safe Pass, I did meet with Major-general Dean, and others, at Dumbarton ; but because nothing would satisfy them, except I my self would take the Tender, and promise to promote their Interest, we parted without any Agreement, as a very eminent noble Person in this House can testify, who came to Dumbarton at that Time : So their Prejudice against me did the more increase. And they then fully resolved to invade the Highlands, and the poor Shire of Argyle in particular, on all Hands, by sending Regiments both of Horse and Foot, by Sea, on the east Side of it, and General-major Dean himself marching by Land to Lochaber, on the west Side. But when he came there, missing his Ship with his Provisions, he returned back very speedily, and shortly thereafter, came very unexpectedly to my House of Inverary, by a Frigate from Air, and (as it appeared afterwards) he had ordered his whole Party to meet him there, and to fly near unto my House. It pleased the Lord, that the same Time I was in a very great Fit of Sickness, as Doctor Cunningham's Certificate will testify, who was with me when Dean came there ; and after himself, and others of his Officers, had been a few Days in my House, keeping Centry both within and without the same, he presented a Paper to me, under his Secretary's Hand, (which Paper I yet have) which I did absolutely refuse : But the next Day he presented me with another, which, he told me, I must either yield unto, or he would carry me with him, and send me to some other Prison : Whereupon, after some few Alterations of it, I did agree, and signed the said Paper, which I have likewise ready to be shown. And although I shall say nothing for justifying of it, yet all Circumstances, and my Condition being seriously considered, I hope it shall be found a Fault, though not altogether excusable, yet very pardonable in me to do it, and afterwards, as Affairs stood, not to break the same.

And for any Thing which I did after that, in my Compliance with the English, being their Prisoner upon Demand, I never meddled, but, as I conceived, out of Necessity, for the Good of my Country in general, and Preservation of my self and Family from Ruin, and in nothing to hinder his Majesty's happy Restoration.

There are many other Things which I might instance, of many Aspersions falsely cast upon me by this Libel, which I shall pass by at this Time, being unwilling to be too troublesome to your Grace and this honourable Meeting: And because many of them are fully answered and cleared in my Defences and Duplies, I shall only humbly desire this honourable Meeting of Parliament, to consider the great Difficulty and Disadvantage I am put unto, if I shall be forced to debate the Grounds and Reasons, from the Lawfulness of the Kirk and Kingdom of Scotland's former Proceedings, or of the Lawfulness (Circumstances being considered) of Scotland, or any Person in it, their Compliance with a prevalent usurping Power, which had the full Possession which his Majesty (in his Declaration concerning the Treaty with Portugal) acknowledged they had. So that I hope, and am confident, That, these Things being considered, his Majesty will never allow, that his Father's, or his own Acts of Oblivion and Ratification, should be called in question, or his Subjects pursued for any Deed or Thing whereby they are indemnified by the same, they having nothing which they hold for a better Security. The Truth of these Things is very well known to the most Part of this honourable Meeting, that there was an Act of Oblivion by his late Royal Majesty, in the Year 1641. it is in Print: And that his gracious Majesty, who now is, did pass an Act of Ap probation, at St. Johnstown and Stirling, in the Years 1650 and 1651. after his Majority, there being none at that Time kept out of the Parliament, nor from his Majesty's Service in the Armies; for all Acts of Classes were rescinded. And I am also confident, if it were represented to his Majesty, by your Grace, and this honourable Parliament, that he would not be less gracious and merciful to these in Scotland, (who atted for him so long as they were able, till a prevailing Sword had driven him away, and subdued them) when his Majesty hath so freely pardoned and indemnified the Invaders themselves. And therefore, I humbly desire, before I be put to any further necessary Dispute in the Business, that your Grace and this honourable Parliament may be pleased to read this my humble Supplication and Submission, and recommend the same to his Majesty.

Marquis of Argyle's Speech, after Reading of his Process, April 16th, 1661.
N^o. XVIII.

My Lord Chancellor,

IT is no small Disadvantage to me to be standing before this honourable Assembly, in this Condition, and any, much more so many unjust Prejudices against me: But I hope, as my Duplies which have been read, have taken off many, as to the Libel, I desire to speak to some of them, and others not in the Papers; and I shall comprehend the Prejudices against me in Two. The First against my personal Carriage, the Second against my publick.

For the First, of what concerneth my Personal, some are in the Libel which are answered in the Defences and Duplies, and they are Three. First. Lawmont's Business. Secondly. The sending Men to starve in Jura. And Thirdly. The Business in Kintyre. For the first Two, I am as free of them as any Man; for I was not in Scotland when Toward was taken, and Articles broken: And I may say, I never harboured so base a Thought as to break Articles, neither did I ever allow it in others: Yet that can be no Excuse to others; for I hold it not lawful in any to do that which they condemn in others; yea, if the one Side of a Relation fail in their Duty, I think it no Excuse for the other to do the like.

And for the Second, the Business of Jura, it is so ridiculous, that till I came to Scotland last, I never heard a colourable Pretence for the Report.

For the Third, it will be clear it was the Act of a Council of War, by publick Authority, approved in Parliament, and no Deed of mine. I bless God, there is not one Deed in the Libel against me, for any Prejudice done to any Man's Person, when I was in the Fields commanding Forces in Chief, (as I was several Times) neither is there any thing in it for Deeds while his Majesty was in Scotland, but Two great Calumnies; The First, My Accession to the Act of the West-kirk. The Second, My corresponding at that Time with the English Army.

The Prejudices out of this Libel are many, which some of the Parties say they were pressed to give in; some of them for Deeds Thirty, some more Years ago, being lawful Decrees before the Session, when such Fools as Lawderdale, Haddingtoun, Southesk, and such Men, were in Employment, where truly I had no more Influence nor the Justice of my Cause procured to me. I hope no Man mistaketh my ironical Word, in calling these worthy able Men Fools.

I confess I thought it strange, when I came from before your Lordships on Munday last, I had a Summons, by Warrant of the Lords of Articles, at the Earl of Airlie's Instance, for these Things done before the Year 1641. so contrary to his Majesty's Act of Approbation of my Service, and his own Act of Oblivion in the same Year, 1641. but nothing of that Kind is strange to me.

One Thing not in the Libel, which I am informed taketh great Impression on some, to my Prejudice, it is this: Though I told to your Lordships formerly, that the Marquis of Huntley's Debt was a Million of Merks in the Year 1640. yet it is said, his Estate being great which I have possessed, I am satisfied of what was due to me, yet I possess all. The very Narration of his Rent what it is, will show the Falshood of this Calumny; for after the Death of Lewis Marquis of Huntley, my Nephew, now Earl Aboyne, and others of his Friends, with the Chamberlains of the Estate, met me and some others who are in this House, at Stirling; and when they had put the least Peat or Poultry in Money, the Height of all the Rent, as themselves gave it up, is but about Fifty thousand Merks Scots, which I could never find it to be by a good deal; out of which was to be deduced some Ministers Stipends, Chamberlains Fees, waste Lands, and ill Payments, with all publick Dues. And, (altho' it be but very small to a Person of that Quality) the Lady Huntley had, by my Connivance, Six thousand Merks in Possession, and the Earl Aboyne, upon the same Account, had Four thousand, though I acknowledge it is but small to a Person of his Worth and Quality. Yet these Things being deduced, I dare confidently say, I came very little above Half Interest of the Sums acknowledged due to me, under the Hands of Lewis Marquis of Huntley, and Earl of Aboyne. And I did certainly offer to give more Ease of the Sums than ever I got, if I might either get Money, Creditors taken off, or Land secured to me: And no reasonable Man can question the Justness of the Debts, when they shall but hear them.

The Second Prejudice against me, is in my publick Carriage and Constancy in the Way wherein I was engaged, which I think a hard Case to make my Crime. I profess if I had not thought the Engagement upon me binding for the Time, to such Things as I did, I think truly I had been much more guilty in doing as I did; for it is observable in one of the Heathen Emperors, who, to try his Christian Servants, imposed some Things contrary to their Profession, and such as refused he honoured, others he rejected.

And I shall here add an Argument, not in my Papers, to shew clearly to all, I was no prime Leader. It hath been told your Lordships by a noble Lord of this House, that in the Year 1647. which is the Year and Parliament wherein all the Business concerning the late King's remaining in England (when the Scots Army returned) was ended: In that Parliament it is told your Lordships, in Montrose's Process, that I pressed a Ratification of my Son's Disposition of Muckdock, but could not carry the same; and when I was not able to carry such a Particular, was I prime Leader let any rational Man judge: So with what is in my Papers, this Point cannot stick with any to my Prejudice.

But on the contrary I acknowledge my Duty to the lawful Magistrate to be jure divino, and to be contained under the Fifth Command, Honour thy Father and thy Mother. And as it is well observed by some, they have that Stile of Fathers to procure them all fatherly Subjection, Reverence and Duty from their Inferiors, and to stir them up to all Tenderness and Affection toward their Subjects.

I have forborn many Things in my Papers, of the Causes and Motives of the Church and Kingdom of Scotland's Proceeding, lest I should have been mistaken: I must do so here likewise, for if I should but mention

mention King James VI. his Words, in his own Book, concerning a King's Duty to his People, and the People's to their King; I might run the same Hazard. I shall therefore direct any to his Works, and the 155th Page; so 157, 195, 200, 174. so 493, 494, 495.

I shall here likewise clear that Point of Compliance, by an Observation which Divines have from this same Fifth Command, and the former, the Fourth, and it is this; That all the rest of the Commands are negative but these Two, and therefore they admit of some Exceptions: For, as they say, affirmative Precepts semper obligant, sed non ad semper, bind not at all Times; but negative Precepts semper obligant, sed ad semper, bind always, and at all Times. This is not only the Doctrine of Divines, but of Christ and his Disciples, which they practised; so did David, and so he instructeth his Children on his Death-bed; so teach the Apostles, and so is every Man ready to interpret the Fourth Command, though the Latitude of Liberty on that Day be not so great as many presume: But doubtless it is much for Works of Necessity and Charity. And the same Latitude cannot be well denied to the Fifth Command, as may be evidenced both by Precept and Practice of the Prophets and Apostles. But I will not insist in this, hoping it is clear to any.

I shall only at this Time, without Reflection upon any, regret to your Lordships my own Condition, that when his Majesty recommendeth the Trial of his Subjects, I am alone singled out, not to try my Carriage, it seemeth, but to find out any Crime, which is hard, nemo sine crimine vivit; neither am I to justify my self, who am as free as any, of all Things which have been worst looked upon in publick Transactions during the Troubles; and was as willing as any to contribute at all Times for a Settling betwixt his Majesty and his People, that his Throne might be established in Righteousness; whereof I gave Evidence at Dunse, in the Year 1639. and by my constant Advice and Correspondence with that noble Person the Earl of Rothes, at London, 1640. and no Man could do his Majesty better Service at that Time than I did, in refusing some Things thereafter in the Year 1641. in Scotland, where, in publick Parliament, I had his Majesty's gracious Testimony, that I dealt over honestly with him, though I was stiff as to the Point in Controversy. And as King James saith, Many Designations are taken in Scotland, from ill Hours. Some present know my Tendernefs of his Majesty, to bring that Business of the Incident to any publick Trial. After that Time, my Endeavours in the Year 1646. were extended for his Majesty's Service, in going twice to London by his Command and Allowance, at which Time (though it be otherwise falsely alledged) no Mention was ever made of any Thing relating to the Disposal of his Majesty's Person, wherein I get the Blame; though I may and do say truly, I deserve as little as any. But yet to shew the Reason of it, I shall mention a few Words of a very honest, learned, and godly Minister, Mr. Gee, in his Book of the Return of Prayer, in his Third Query concerning the Reason of God's hiding himself from his People's Prayers, grounded on his Promises, and his seeming to answer the contrary by his Providences: I hope no Man will mistake me in using his Words and Scripture-examples.

When he comes to speak of the Second Way of Enquiry for this, he telleth of Three Indispositions of Men, that blear our Eyes: First. Offence at the Thing fallen out. Secondly. Mens Partiality to themselves. Thirdly. Their Prejudice against others. I intend only the last: For the first he mentioneth the 37th Psalm, David's stumbling at the Prosperity of the Wicked. For the Second, Partiality to our selves, he saith, Self-indulgence spreads a Vail over the Eyes, and forestalleth the Judgment, that whatsoever Cause of the Thing be in our selves, we cannot easily see it. Few will say, What have I done? whereof the Prophet complaineth; fewer, with the Disciples, Is it I, Lord? but fewest with David, It is I, what have these done?

The Third Indisposition is, Prejudices against others; for we are no less (saith he) hasty and severe in sentencing and faulting other Men, than we are well conceited and favourable in judging our selves; which Humour Christ decyphereth, while he saith, Why beholdest thou the Mote in thy Brother's Eye, and considerest not the Beam in thine own? And as there is in Men a Prejudice towards others in general, through which they are disposed to find Fault with all but themselves, and to lay that Blame, which must rest somewhere, at another Man's Door rather than their own; so there is a more special and vehement Prejudice, when Men are banded (as he saith) in Parties, each against other, when usually Men, without standing to enquire or reflect on any other Way, they cast all the Charge and Procurement of calamitous Events, upon their contrary Way or Party. And for this, he instanceth that of Korah, which, after the Lord had cut them off by his own immediate Hand, the Conspirators said, It was Moses and Aaron had killed the People of the Lord. So did the Jew cast all the Blame of their hard Usage from the Romans, on Christ and his Apostles: So did the Romans, the Destruction of Rome by the Goths and Vandals, on Christians and Christianity, which occasioned Augustine to write that Book, de civitate Dei. All this may evidently shew the Ill of these Three Indispositions of Mind, and particularly this of Prejudice against others, especially to all who are concerned in it.

I have but only a few Words to say, in remembering your Lordships of Three Things observable in my Carriage during the late Troubles. First. My never joyning in the national Covenant, till commanded by his late Royal Majesty. Secondly. My never receiving any Pay during all the Troubles, either as Committeeman, Commander in Chief, Colonel, or Captain, in all the Services of England, Scotland, or Ireland, in a Parliament of the Year 1646. which was after all I had was destroyed by the Irish Rebels and their Associates: And what I got from the Parliament 1647. was after my Estates and Lands were ruined, and was only for my Family's Subsistence, and paying some necessitous Creditors some Annuallents; as the Act of Parliament 1647. and Order to the Scots Commissioners at London, the same Year, can shew. And for the first negative Part, Sir William Thomson's Hand will prove it, who was either depute or principal Receiver and Lay-er out of all publick Monies all that Time. Thirdly. My being free of any Actings in the Years 1646 and 1647. anent the disposing of his Majesty's Royal Father's Person, never having concurred in Committees in Scotland or England, nor as a Commissioner at London, went the same, nor in any Resolutions concerning the Return of the Scots Army, nor the Money for their Arrears agreed to in these Times; except that I was present in the Parliament 1647. which I do not well know.

By all which it is evident, how clearly and freely I may say, That I do not deserve to be the single Sufferer in all his Majesty's Dominions, for my Carriage during the late Troubles, his Majesty having (to his eternal Praise) pardoned all but some of the Murderers of his late Royal Father.

Therefore

Therefore I take the Boldness, now that all the Papers are read, to show your Lordships, that so much Pains needed not to have been taken in summoning Witnesses, and otherwise, in this Business; for I ever offered, and do offer to acknowledge all Matters of Fact which any Man can justly prove, (much of the Libel being Matter of Fact) except some alledged Words which are notoriously false and irrelevant, and even so libelled.

And as I did formerly, so I do still intreat, before any further Procedure, my humble Submission, with your Grace and this honourable Parliament's Recommendation, may be sent to his Majesty, which I hope none of your Lordships will ever have Cause to repent you of, having now heard and seen the Favourableness of my Cause, and Desire in this.

Marquis of Argyle's Speech upon the Scaffold, May 27th, 1661. N^o. XIX.

Gentlemen,

Many will expect that I will speak many Things; and according to their several Opinions and Dispositions, so will their Expectations be from me, and Constructions of me: But I resolve to disappoint many; for I came not either to justify myself, but the Lord, who is holy in all his Ways, and righteous in all his Works, holy and blessed is his Name; neither come I to condemn others. I know many will expect that I should speak against the Hardness of the Sentence pronounced against me, but I will say nothing to it. I bless the Lord I pardon all Men, as I desire to be pardoned of the Lord myself: Let the Will of the Lord be done, that is all that I desire. I hope that you will have more Charity to me now, than you would have had at another Time, since I speak before the Lord, to whom I must give Account shortly. I know very well that my Words have had but little Weight with many, and that many have mistaken my Words; many have thought me a great Enemy to those great Works that have of late been brought to pass: But do not mistake me, People, I speak it in the Presence of the Lord, I entred not upon the Work of Reformation, with any Design of Advantage to myself, or Prejudice to the King or his Government, as my Will (which was written in the Year 1655. and then delivered to a Friend, in whose Hands it still remains) can show. As for these Calumnies which have gone Abroad of me, I bless God I know them to be no more but Calumnies; and as I go to make a Reckoning to my God, I am free as to any of them, concerning the King's Person or Government. I was real and cordial in my Desires to bring the King Home, and in my Endeavours for him, when he was at Home; and I had no Correspondence with his Adversaries Army, or any of them, in the Time his Majesty was in Scotland; nor had I any Accession to his late Majesty's Murder, by Counsel or Knowledge of it, or any other Manner of Way. This is a Truth, as I shall answer to my Judge: And all the Time his Majesty was in Scotland, I was still endeavouring his Advantage; my Conscience beareth me Witness in it. That is for that. (At this he turned about, and said, I hope, Gentlemen, you will all remember this.)

I confess many look on my Condition as a suffering Condition, but I bless the Lord, that he that hath gone before me, hath trode the Wine-press of his Father's Wrath, by whose Offerings I hope that my Sufferings shall not be eternal. I bless him that hath taken away the Sting of my Sufferings. I may say my Charter was sealed this Day; for the Lord hath said to me, Son, be of good Cheer, thy Sins be forgiven thee: And so I hope my Sufferings shall be easy; and ye know the Scripture saith, That the Captain of our Salvation was made perfect through Sufferings. I shall not speak much to these Things that I am condemned for, lest I seem to condemn others: It is well known, it is only for Compliance, which is the epidemical Fault of this Nation; I wish the Lord may pardon them, I say no more. There was an Expression in my Submission, presented to the Parliament, of the Contagion of the Times, which may be misconstrued, as if I had intended thereby to lay Imputation upon the Work of Reformation; but I declare I intended no such Thing, but it was only in relation to the Corruptions and Failings of Men, occasioned by the Prevalency of the usurping Power.

Now, Gentlemen, I think there are Three Sorts of People that take up much of the World, and this Nation: There are, First. The openly profane; and truly, I may say, though I have been a Prisoner, yet I have not had mine Ears shut: I hear assuredly, that Whoring, Swearing, and Drinking were never more common; and never more countenanced than now; and truly if Magistrates were here, I would say to them, If they lay forth their Power, for the glorifying of God by the restraining of this, they would fare better; if they continue in not restraining of it, they will fare the worse. I say no more, but let either People shun Profanity, or Magistrates restrain it, or assuredly the Wrath of God will follow on it.

Secondly. Others they are not openly profane, every one will not allow that, but yet they are Gallio's in these Matters; if Things go well as to their private Interests, they care not whether Religion and the Church of God sink or swim: But whatever they think, God hath laid Engagements upon Scotland, we are tied by Covenant to Religion and Reformation; those that were then unborn are engaged to it, and in our Baptism we are engaged to it, and it passes the Power of any under Heaven to absolve a Man from the Oath of God, they deceive themselves, and it may be will deceive others that think otherwise; but I would caveat this. People would be ready to take this as a Kind of Instigation to Rebellion, but they are very far in the Wrong that think so, and that Religion and Loyalty are not consistent; if any Man separate them, Religion is not to be blamed, but they: It is the Duty of every Christian to be loyal, yet I think the Order of Things is to be observed, as well as their Nature, the Order of Religion as well as the Nature of it: Religion must not be the Cockboat, but the Ship; God must have what is his, as well as Cesar what is his; and those are the best Subjects that are the best Christians: And that I am looked upon as a Friend to Reformation is my Glory.

Thirdly. There is another Sort that are truly godly, and to speak to them I must say what I fear, and every one hath Reason to fear, ('tis good to fear Evil.) 'Tis true that the Lord may prevent it, but if so, I do not, and truly I cannot see any Possibility of it. These Times are like to be very sinning Times, or very suffering Times; and let Christians make Choice; there is a sad Dilemma in the Business, fin o c n. And truly he that will choose the better Part will choose to suffer; others that will choose to sin, escape Suffering; they shall suffer, but it may be, not as I do here, (turning him to the Maiden when he spake it) but worse; mine is but temporal, but theirs shall be eternal; when I shall be singing they shall be howling: Beware therefore of Sin, whatever ye beware of, especially in such Times. Yet I cannot say of my own Condition, but the Lord in his Providence hath minded Mercy to me, even in this World; for if I had been more favourably dealt with, I fear I might have been overcome with Temptations, as many others are, and I fear many more will be, and so should have gone out of the World with a more polluted Conscience than, through the Mercy of God, now I have: And hence my Condition is such now, as when I am gone, will be seen not to have been such as many imagined. It is fit God take me away before I fall into these Temptations that I see others are fallen into, and I fear many others will fall: I wish the Lord may prevent it. Yet blessed be his Name that I am kept both from present Evils and Evils to come.

Some will expect that I will regret my own Condition; but truly I neither grudge nor repine, nor desire any Revenge. And I declare I do not repent my going to London; for I had always rather have suffered any Thing than lie under such Reproaches as I did. I desire not that the Lord should judge any Man, nor do I judge any but my self: I wish, that as the Lord hath pardoned me, so may he pardon them for this and other Things, and that what they have done to me may never meet them in their Accounts. I have no more to say, but beg the Lord, that since I go away, he may bless them that stay behind.

His last Words, immediately before he laid his Head upon the Block, were the Vindication of his Innocency from that horrid Crime of the King's Murder, in these Words.

I desire you, Gentlemen, and all that hear me, again to take notice, and remember, That now when I am entering on Eternity, and am to appear before my Judge, and as I desire Salvation, and expect eternal Happiness from him, I am free from any Accession, by Knowledge, Contriving, Counsel, or any other Way, to his late Majesty's Death; and I pray the Lord to preserve the present King his Majesty, and to pour his best Blessings upon his Person and Government, and the Lord give him good and faithful Counsellors.

Summons to the Ministers of Edinburgh, before the Sheriff, for praying for the King, August 20th, 1655. with their Declinature. N^o. XX.

I John Cockburn summon you Mr. James Hamilton (and so the rest of the Ministers aftermentioned) Minister within the old Kirk of Edinburgh, to compare before the Sheriff-principal of Midlothian and Linlithgow, in the old Exchequer-house at Edinburgh, upon the 22^d Day of August, at Two Hours in the Afternoon, to hear and see Witnesses led and deposed against you, for not observing and obeying the Order and Inhibition lately emitted by the honourable Commissioners for visiting Universities, against the praying for the late King, and that under the highest Pain and Charge that may follow thereupon, conform unto the principal Warrant direct thereanent, dated at Edinburgh, the 20th Day of August, 1655.

The Ministers Declinature.

WE undersubscribing Ministers of Edinburgh, having received Summons to compare at this Diet, before the Sheriff of Lothian, about a Matter that directly concerns our Ministerial Function, and being unacquainted in this Land with Summons of this Nature, thought it incumbent on us to declare, likeas, by their Presents we do declare, That by this our Comparance we do not subject the Liberties of the Kingdom of Christ, or the immediate Acts of our Ministry, to the Judgment and Determination of a civil Judicatory; and declare in all Humility, according to the Duty we owe to our Lord and Master Jesus Christ, that his Ministers are not convenable for the immediate Acts of their Ministry, before any civil Judicatory; and that we do compare only to make our Master's Interest known, and lest our not comparing should be reckoned Contempt. And since, by the Providence of our God, we are brought here, we do earnestly desire and obtest, in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ, whose Servants we are, that nothing be done pre-judicial to the Liberties of this Kirk, and to the standing Ministry settled therein. Subscribed at Edinburgh, August 22. 1655.

DAVID DICKSON.

Mr. ROBERT DOUGLAS.

Mr. THO. GARVAN.

Mr. James Hamilton's Declinature at the same Time. N^o. XXI. A.

FORasmuch as I am brought before you the Sheriff of Midlothian, to answer in Matter of the Discharge of my Ministerial Function, the judging whereof, in the first Instance, is only competent to the Officers and Judicatories of the Kirk of Christ, our Lord and Master, according to the Order and Government of this Kirk, warranted by the Word of God, acknowledged and established by many Civil and Ecclesiastical Laws

Laws, and peaceably possess and enjoyed these many Years, to the Preservation whereof this Nation is bound, as by many Obligations, so by the National Covenant, and both Nations are obliged thereto by the first Article of the League and Covenant: I therefore, being in this Case called to give Testimony for that Interest, not out of any worldly Design or wilful Obstinacy, but (my Witness being on high) out of Zeal to the Glory of God, Conscience of the Oaths of God, Love to the precious Liberties of the Kirk of Christ within this Kingdom, which are dearer to me than my Life, Fear of being found accessory to the betraying the Interests of Christ to the Power of Men, and Desire to be found faithful in the Day of my Accounts to the great Shepherd of Souls, according to the laudable Examples of our worthy Predecessors, and of other Reformed Kirks, in the like Case, am necessitate to give this Testimony, against the subordinating the Privileges given to the Officers and Government of the Kirk of Jesus Christ, on whose Shoulders the Government of his House lieth, unto the Will and Power of Men; and do hereby decline your Judgment, as no ways competent in these Matters, my Appearance before you being only to give a Reason of my Actions, for clearing and vindicating them, my Ministry, and my self from all unjust Aspersions.

JA. HAMILTON.

INDICTMENT against Mr. James Guthrie, February 7th, 1661.
No. XXI. B.

MR. James Guthrie, sometime Minister at Stirling, you are indicted and accused, and are to answer at the Instance of Sir John Fletcher Knight, his Majesty's Advocate, for his Majesty's Interest, That whereas by the Laws of God, of Nations, and of all well governed Realms, the Common Law, Municipal Law, Acts of Parliament, and Practick of this his Majesty's ancient Kingdom, especially by the First Act, 18th Parliament of King James VI. of blessed Memory, and by several other Acts of Parliament, holden by his Majesty's Royal Predecessors, all his Majesty's good and loyal Subjects are bound and obliged perpetually to acknowledge, obey, maintain, and defend, and advance the Life, Honour, Safety, Dignity, sovereign Authority and Prerogative Royal of their Sovereign Lord and King's Majesty, their Heirs and Successors, and Privileges of their Throne, with their Lives, Lands and Goods, to the utmost of their Power, constantly and faithfully to withstand all and whatsoever Persons, Powers or Estates, who shall presume, press or intend any ways to impugn, prejudice, hurt, or impair the same, and shall no ways intend, attempt, enact, or do any Thing to the Violation, Hurt, Derogation, Impairing, Prejudice of his Majesty's sovereign Authority, Prerogative, or Privilege of his Crown, in any Point or Part, and whoever does in the contrary, to be punished as Traitors, and forfeit their Honours, Lives, Lands, and Goods: Likeas, by the 129th Act of King James VI. Parl. 8th, upon some treasonable, seditious and contumelious Speeches uttered in Pulpits, Schools, and otherwise, to the Disdain and Reproach of his Majesty's Progenitors and Council, some Persons being called before his Majesty and his Council, did contemptuously decline his and their Judgment in that behalf; his Majesty and his Three Estates in Parliament did ratify, approve and perpetually confirm the Royal Power and Authority over all States, as well Spiritual as Temporal, within this Realm, in the Person of the King's Majesty their sovereign Lord, his Heirs and Successors, and did statute and ordain, that his Majesty, his said Heirs and Successors, by themselves and their Council, were, and in Time to come should be Judges competent to all Persons his Majesty's Subjects of whatsoever Estate, Degree, Function, or Condition that ever they may be of, spiritual or temporal, in all Matters wherein they or any of them shall be apprehended, summoned or charged to answer to such Things as shall be enquired of them by his Majesty and his said Council, and that none of them who shall happen to be apprehended, called, or summoned to the Effect foresaid, presume, or take upon Hand to decline the Judgment of his Majesty, his Heirs or Successors, or their Council, in the Premises, under the Pain of Treason. As also by the 134th Act, Parl. 8th, the 10th Act of the 10th Parl. the 205th Act, Parl. 14th, King James VI. of blessed Memory, it is statute and ordained by his said Majesty and Three Estates in Parliament, That none of his Subjects (of whatsoever Degree, Function, or Quality, in Time coming, shall presume or take upon hand, privately or publicly, in Sermons, Declamations, or familiar Conferences, to utter any false, slanderous, or untrue Speeches, to the Disdain, Reproach, Contempt of his Majesty, his Council, and Proceedings, or to the Dishonour, Hurt, and Prejudice of his Majesty, his Parents and Progenitors, or to meddle in the Affairs of his Majesty and his Estates, present, bygone, and in Time coming, under the Pains contained in the Acts of Parliament made against Makers and Tellers of Leafings; and that whosoever hears any such Slanders, and reports not the same with Diligence, the like Pains should be executed against them with all Rigour, as at more Length is contained in the said Acts. And also, by the Act, of the 25th Day of November 1650 Years, past by his Majesty and his Committee of Estates, thereafter ratified upon the 4th Day of June 1651 Years, by his Majesty and his Estates of Parliament, a Paper called a Remonstrance, presented to the said Committee upon the 22^d Day of October, and insisted upon thereafter upon the 19th Day of November 1650. was declared to be scandalous and injurious to his Majesty's Person, prejudicial to his Authority, dishonourable to his Kingdom, holding forth the Seeds of Division, strengthening the Hands of the Enemy, and weakning the Hands of many honest Men: And also, by the 131st Act of the 8th Parl. King James VI. it is statute and ordained by his said Majesty and his Three Estates, That none of his Majesty's Subjects, of whatsoever Quality, Estate or Function they be of, Spiritual or Temporal, presume or take upon Hand, to convocate, convene, or assemble themselves together, for holding of Councils, Conventions or Assemblies, to treat, consult, or determine in any Matter of Estate, Civil or Ecclesiastical, (except in the ordinary Judicatories) without his Majesty's special Commandment, or express Licence had and obtained to that Effect, under the Pains ordained by the Laws and Acts of Parliament, against such as unlawfully convocate his Majesty's free Lieges. NEVERTHELESS it is of Verity, That you the said Mr. James Guthrie, having laid aside all Fear of God, Loyalty to his Majesty your Sovereign Lord and King, natural Duty and Affection to your Country and and Countrymen, Respect and Obedience to the Laws of all well governed Realms, the Common Law, and the Laws, Statutes, Acts of Parliament, and Practick of this his Majesty's ancient Kingdom, and having seditionously and traitorously intended and purposed the eradicating and subverting the fundamental Government of this his Majesty's ancient Kingdom, at least the enervating, violating, derogating, or impairing the Sovereign Authority, Royal Prerogative, and Privilege of his Majesty's Crown, did, for raising Division amongst his Subjects, and Sedition against his Majesty's Person, Dignity, Authority, and Privilege of his Crown, and, so far as in you lay, the alienating of the Affections, and brangling the Loyalty and Allegiance of his Majesty's People, to the great Encouragement and Advancement of the Designs and Attempts of that bloody Usurper Oliver Cromwel, and bringing of his Majesty, and his ancient and your native Country in Subjection and Bondage under him, contrive, complot, counsel, consult, draw up, frame, invent, spread abroad, or disseminate, speak, preach, declaim, or utter divers and sundry vile, seditious and treasonable Remonstrances, Declarations, Petitions, Instructions, Letters, Speeches, Preachings, Declamations, and other Expressions tending to the vilifying and contemning, Slander and Reproach of his Majesty, his Progenitors, his Person, Majesty, Dignity, Authority, Prerogative Royal, and Government, not only within this his ancient Kingdom of Scotland, but also in his Majesty's Kingdoms of England and Ireland; at least did hear and conceal, and not reveal the same to his Majesty, nor to any of his Judges or Officers, mentioned in the said Acts of Parliament; at least did aid and abet, or was Art and Part thereof, or of one or other of them, in so far as, after the cruel bloody Usurper Oliver Cromwel, and his Complices, had most barbarously and cruelly murdered his Majesty's Royal Father, of ever blessed Memory, their dread Sovereign and Lord, and his Majesty's Arrival to this his ancient Kingdom from foreign Parts, after a most tedious and dangerous Voyage at Sea, and after that treacherous Usurper, in pursuance of his horrid and treasonable Designs, for hindring his Majesty to inherit that his just and lawful Right to the Crown of the said Kingdom, had, with an Army of Sectaries, invaded the same; and that God Almighty had been pleased to blast and frustrate his Majesty's first Endeavours for opposing his said treasonable Invasion, by suffering his Majesty's Armies to fall and flee before him at Dunbar, upon the 3^d Day of September 1650 Years. First. You immediately thereafter did compile and draw up a Paper, commonly called the Remonstrance, and presented, or caused present the same to his Majesty's Committee of Estates at Perth, upon the 22^d Day of October, wherein most treasonably you utter and belch forth a great many damnable and execrable Leafings, Slanders and Reproaches against his Majesty's dearest Father, of eternal Memory, and others his Majesty's noble Progenitors, their Persons, Majesty, Dignity, Authority, and Government: And also, you not only disclaim his Majesty's Authority over you, and disown him in the Exercise of his Royal Power and Government, in the Right whereof his Majesty and his Predecessors were invested by God, and in Possession by a Series of One hundred and eight Progenitors; but also most treasonably reproach others his Majesty's good Subjects for doing the same, and most impiously held forth, that the main and great Cause of the Sufferings of his Majesty's People, under the Tyranny and Oppression of the bloody Usurper, is the owning of his Majesty's Interest in this his ancient Kingdom, and the Purpose of restoring his Majesty to his Throne and Government of his Kingdom of England, from which most wretchedly and godlessly you aver, that his Majesty was most justly removed; wherein also are many more bitter and ignominious Reflections, seditious, treacherous, and treasonable Expressions, tending to the Contempt and Disdain, Slander and Reproach of his Majesty, his Progenitors, in his Person, Majesty, Dignity, Authority and Government, as at more Length is contained in the said malicious Paper, and which is here repeated, as a Part of the Libel, brevitatis causa. Secondly. After it had pleased God to suffer the said bloody Enemies and Murderers of his Majesty's Royal Father, so far to prevail as to avoid their Fury and Cruelty, his Majesty was necessitate to withdraw himself from his Dominions, and live in foreign Parts, under great Difficulty and Hardships, (which low Condition of his Majesty's might have calmed and quieted the wicked and malicious Spirits of his Majesty's rebellious Subjects, at least their venomous and viperous Tongues and Pens) not the less the Bitterness and insatiable Malice of you the said Mr. James Guthrie, was such, that not satisfied with the Injuries committed by you against his Majesty's Person, Dignity, and Authority, express in the foresaid Paper of Remonstrance, you did contrive, write, compile, and that it might be the more publick, and follow his Majesty beyond Seas, and defame and bring him in Contempt with foreign Princes and States, caused print, in anno 1653 Years, a seditious Pamphlet called, The Causes of God's Wrath, not only containing all the former injurious, wicked, and seditious Reflections and Expressions, fully set down in the foresaid Papers, formerly condemned by Act of Parliament, and expressly relative thereto, but also many more malicious, ignominious, dishonourable, and treasonable Passages, at Length set down in the said Pamphlet, and specially in the Fifth and Sixth Articles thereof, and Enlargements in the said Articles, which is repeated as a Part of the Libel, and which being considered by the said Committee of Estates, they have found the same, by their Act of the Date the 19th Day of September 1660 Years, of so high and treasonable a Nature, and that it deserves publicly to be burnt with the Hand of the Hangman, and the Havers and Users thereof hereafter to be punished, in Manner as at more Length is exprest in the said Act. Thirdly. God, in his great Mercy to his Majesty and his oppressed Kingdoms, having wonderfully, contrary and in despite of all the wicked, damnable, and treasonable Practices and Machinations of you and your Complices, restored his Majesty again to his just and lawful Inheritance, as to the Exercise of his Royal Power and Authority in all his Dominions, in peaceable Manner, which so wonderful and immediate Acting of Divine Providence might have justly quieted the Spirits of all his Majesty's Enemies, and have made them acknowledge the Sinfulness of their former Ways and Courses, and that God was displeased therewith, and that they had highly provoked him thereby, and have made them walk more answerable to such Deliverances and Mercies, and have behaved themselves more dutifully and obediently to his Majesty: Yet the evil Spirit wherewith they are possessed, prevails so in them, that the more they see of the Lord's Appearances, the more they are hardened in their former wicked, malicious, and treasonable Designs and Attempts; and therefore knowing, that without great Hazard to themselves, they durst not so openly and avowedly act, Hearts and Affections of his Majesty's good Subjects to him) they durst not so openly and avowedly act, speak, or write against his Majesty, his Authority or Government, or any ways meddle in the Government-affairs, or Estate of either his Majesty's Kingdoms, as formerly they have done, and as is more fully exprest in the above written Article; you, in a most subtil and covered Manner, under the Pretext and Cover of Piety, Loyalty, and Zeal for Religion, with many insinuating Expressions of your Joy and Gladness for his Majesty's Restoration, and your good Wishes for him in Time coming, did, by way and in the Drefs and Garb of an humble Petition to his Majesty, not only most wickedly calumniate, traduce, and asperse his Majesty with Dissimulation and Perjury, but also most unwarrantably, seditiously and treasonably reflect upon his Majesty, and the lawful Government and Order of his Church and Estate of England and Ireland, and of his Majesty's Chapel and Family, and calling him to alter and invert the same, and most grossly encroach upon his Majesty, his Authority and Prerogative, in meddling with his Majesty's Affairs, and filling of all Places of Power and Trust under his Majesty, contrary to the foresaid Laws and Acts of Parliament, as is more fully express'd in the said pretended Petition, which is here repeated, brevitatis causa, as a Part of the Libel.

Fourthly. Not only did you and your Complices convocate your selves, but also by missive Letters, Commissions, and Instructions drawn up by you at the same Time, you did frame the foresaid pretended Petition, did presume and take upon you to convocate and convene his Majesty's Subjects and Lieges, whereby it is evident that you have not only contravened his Majesty's foresaid Acts of Parliament, made against unlawful Convocations of his Majesty's Lieges, but that your only Purpose and Intent in contriving the slanderous and infamous pretended Petition, was to publish and disperse the same, thereby to sow Sedition amongst his Majesty's Subjects, and, so far as in you lay, to render his Majesty and Government hateful and contemptible to them, as if his Majesty intended to subvert the true Protestant Religion, and bring in Popery and Idolatry amongst them.

Fifthly. You the said Mr. James Guthrie being convened before his Majesty and Committee of Estates at Perth, to answer for some seditious and unwarrantable Speeches uttered by you in your Sermons, at Stirling, and otherways, against his Majesty, his Authority and Laws, and having appeared, you most contemptuously, disobeyed, and treacherously did disclaim and decline his Majesty and his Authority, and did protest for Remede of Law against his Majesty, for a pretended Gravamen, as you term it, in convening you before his Majesty, and confining you, as the same had been contrary to the Laws of God, of Nature, and the Laws of the Land, the Right and Privilege of his Majesty's Subjects, as is more fully contained in Two Protestations given in and subscribed by you, dated in February 1651 Years, which are here also repeated as a Part of the Libel, brevitatis causa. And further, you the said Mr. James are indicted and accused for having, in Stirling, at a Meeting with certain Ministers and Ruling-elders, in anno 1650 or 1651. most treasonably moved, and offered as your Judgment, That his Majesty should not only be debarred the Exercise of his Royal Power, but that his Person might be secured and imprisoned within the Castle of Stirling; and in Answer was made thereto by some of the said Number, That they might as well proceed to the taking of his Life as the imprisoning of his Person: You did reply, It was not yet seasonable, nor Time to speak to that, but that it was necessary to do the one before the other.

By all which Particulars respective above express'd, it is clearly evinced, That you were Author, Contriver, Deviser, Consulter, Adviser, or Art and Part of the foresaid Crimes of Treason, and others respective above libelled, or one or other of them, in Manner above declared, and thereby has incurred the Pains and Punishment of high Treason, and others contained in the Laws and Acts of Parliament, which might and should be inflicted upon you with all Rigour, in Example to others in all Time coming.

Edinburgh, 7th February 1661.

The Lords of the Articles having heard, seen, and considered the abovewritten Indictment of Treason, do appoint the same to be given up to Mr. James Guthrie, to be seen by him, and to answer against Tuesday the 19th of this Instant.

GLENCAIRN Cancellarius, I. P. D. Art.

Mr. James Guthrie's Defences. No. XXI. C.

WHereas Mr. James Guthrie is indicted before my Lord Commissioner his Grace, and the Three Estates of Parliament, upon sundry Particulars alledged to be seditious and treasonable; he is glad, that through the holy and good Providence of God, it is his Lot to plead his Cause not before Strangers Usurpers, who, as they were not acquainted with the Doctrine and Laws, and the Estate of the Affairs of this Church and Kingdom, so have they not just Title or Claim to exercise any Power or Jurisdiction in or over the same, but before an honourable Court of Parliament of his own Nation, well acquainted with the Laws of this Kingdom, and bred up in the Doctrine and Profession of the Church, and called and countenanced by his Majesty, whose native and just Title to the Crown of these Kingdoms, as he did ever acknowledge, so doth he bless God for the Preservation of his Person, and for removing out of the Way these usurping Powers that hindred the Exercise of his Government, and prays that his Throne may be established in Righteousness over these Nations, that the Lord's People under him may live a quiet and peaceable Life in all Godliness and Honesty.

The Defender is glad also, that among the Laws mentioned in the Proposition of his Indictment, the Law of God is set in the first Room, that being the sovereign and supreme Law which is the Foundation and Source of all other Laws, according to which they are to be squared, and there being an express Act of Parliament, James VI. Parl. 1st. Cap. 3d. whereby all Laws and Statutes made against God's holy Word, are declared to be void and null in themselves; a Law well befitting, and most worthy of a Christian King and Kingdom: Therefore, the Defender doth humbly expect that Judgment shall be given of him, and of his Proceedings by this Law, especially as by that which is most perfect and absolute, and, in Confidence hereof, comes to his Defences:

And alledges, First. That there can be no Process upon this Libel, till the Act of the Committee of Estates, of the Date 25th of November 1650. and the Act of Parliament which is libelled upon, as ratifying the same, dated 24th of June 1651. anent the Paper called the Remonstrance, be produced and given up to the Defender to see; because albeit printed Laws allegari debent non probari; yet whatever is not a written Law, whether Acts, Decrees, and Writings, whereupon upon Processes are founded as they must be produced to the Judge, and not alledged only; so for the same Reason they must be given up to the Party to see, which is both our Law and Practick, and consonant to common Law, L. 1. §. 3. ff. de Edendo; ubi edenda sunt omnia quæ quis apud iudicem editurus est; that is, whatever the Party Pursuer is to produce before the Judge, that ought to be given up to see to the Defender; and the Reason is given there, and L. 3. Cod. eod. to wit, That the Defender may come prepared to make his Defence. This is so uncontroverted that it needs be confirmed by no more Law. But so it is, the foresaid Acts of Committee of Estates and Parliament anent that Remonstrance were never printed, and therefore ante omnia they ought to be produced, and, before they be produced, no Process.

I. Past from and not insisted.

Secundo. Every Libel ought to be clear, and criminal Dittays ought to be most clear. Damond. T. 3. N. 4. and should contain no Ambiguity nor Obscurity, Chap. Constitutis 6. Extra de Relig. Dom. and therefore, Libellus criminalis obscurus, parte etiam non excipiente, extenditur favore rei; that is, a criminal Libel that is obscure, is extended in favours of the Defender, though he should propound no Defence against it, Bald. in L. edita N. 10. C. de Edend. and other Doctors. But so it is, this Libel is indistinct and obscure, in so far as in the Proposition there are several different Acts of Parliament libelled upon, made upon Facts of divers Natures, and containing divers Pains; and in the Subsumption different Facts and alledged Crimes falling under the Compass of one and the same Law, ought, as the Defender humbly conceives, to have been libelled and subsumed immediately after the same, whereby the Defender might have known for Contravention of what Law by every Fact he was convicted, whereanent he is left now in an Uncertainty, and therefore the Libel herein is uncertain and obscure, and there can be no Process thereupon.

Tertio. As to the First Part of the Proposition of the Libel, founded upon the Act 1. Parl. 18. James VI. there is no such Act as is libelled, for it is libelled otherwise than it bears, against Act 107. Parl. 7. James I. whereby it is forbidden that any Man interpret his Majesty's Statutes otherwise than the Statutes bear; but so it is, that Statute, Act 1. Parl. 18. aforesaid, bears no Pain at all, let be the Pain of Treason, and Forfeiture of Honour, Life, Lands and Goods, and therefore there can be no Process of Treason thereupon founded to infer any Pain, far less the Pain of Treason, seeing it bears no Pain, as said is, which is confirmed. 2do. Because there can be no Process of Treason, but upon particular Acts of Parliament, made under the Pain of Treason against Dobyers and Contraveners, by the expresse Act of Parliament, Act 28. Parl. 2. Charles I. Anno 1640. But so it is, the Act libelled on, as said is, bears no such Pain; therefore it can found no Process of Treason. And 3tio. Every Pain ought to be irrogate and established by a Law, Doct. ad L. At si quis §. Divus ff. De Relig. & Semp. For. For it is by a Sanction of Law that Punishments are established, Legis 11. Virtus est imperare, vetare, permittere, punire. L. 7. de Leg. that it is the Virtue of Law to command, forbid, permit and punish. Now there is nothing in the said Law and Act of Parliament, but a Declarature of the King's Royal Prerogative, and of an Obligation of the three Estates to maintain the same; and therefore seeing that Law hath made no Sanction, neither of Treason nor any other, this Part of the Proposition of the Dittay founded thereupon, is altogether without Ground, and there can be no Process thereupon.

Quarto. No Process upon the Act of the Committee of Estates, libelled to be of the Date, 25th November 1650. and Act of Ratification in Parliament, libelled of the Date 24th of June 1651. anent the Paper called the Remonstrance, because these are not printed Acts, and are not produced, as said is.

The next Thing in the Indictment is the Subsumption, in which there is first a general Charge upon the Defender, of his being culpable of sundry seditious and treasonable Remonstrances, Declarations, Petitions, Instructions, Letters, Speeches, Declamations, &c. To all which he saith, That generalia non pungunt, they can have no Strength as to the inferring one Crime or Guilt upon the Defender, except in so far as they are instanced and verified in Particulars, and therefore doth he not judge himself bound to make any Answer thereunto, were it not that he is therein charged, to have seditiously and traiterously intended, and proposed the eradicating and subverting the fundamental Government of this his Majesty's ancient Kingdom, at least the enervating, violating and impairing his Majesty's Authority, by complying with, and being subservient unto the Designs and Purposes of that Usurper Oliver Cromwel, and his Complices: Concerning which he is bold to say, That it is an unjust Charge, and mere Forgery, there was never any such Intention or Purpose in his Heart, nor can it be proven from any of his Speeches, or Writings, or Actions. He dare and doth truly affirm, that as he never had any Compliances with the Designs and Counsels, or Actings of the late usurping Powers, against his Majesty's Royal Father, or himself, or against the Kingdom, or the ancient Government thereof, or of the Kingdom of England or Ireland, so there was no Part of their ungodly Courses, and unjust Attempts, and violent Usurpations and Actings, but he did, in his Station and Calling, both by Word and Writ, bear Testimony against the same, which is a Thing better known and more manifest than that he can be liable in the least to Suspicion therein, many of these Testimonies being given before many living Witnesses, and many of them being yet extant, and such as will be extant to Posterity for his Vindication in this Particular; besides two or three common solemn publick Testimonies, in which he joyned with many of his Brethren against these things, one of which was condescended upon and directed to these usurping Powers, at the very Time the Causes of the Lord's Controversy were condescended upon, which may sufficiently clear the Honesty of his Intentions and Actings as to these Causes: Besides these common publick Testimonies, he was violently thrust from the Pulpit, and quartered upon for Six Months together, for preaching against the Tender, and giving Warning to his Congregation not to take the same, as being destructive to Religion, and the Liberties of the Nation, and the ancient civil Government of this Kingdom in his Majesty's Person and Family. He was called before the President and some others of Oliver Cromwel his Council in Scotland, for writing and spreading a Paper, holding him forth in expresse Words to be an Usurper, and his Government to be Usurpation; he was threatned with Imprisonment for writing and communicating a Paper against Oliver Cromwel his usurping of the Crown of these Kingdoms; he was threatned with Banishment for being accessory to the offering of a publick subscribed Testimony against the Actings of the late usurping Powers, unto Richard Cromwel his Council in Scotland, immediately after his usurping of the Government of these Kingdoms: Which Things he should not mention, knowing that he hath nothing wherein to boast in himself, were it not that he is thereunto constrained, for vindicating himself from the unjust Aspersions that are cast upon him, and that by telling of known and manifest Truths, concerning his Faithfulness and Zeal against the King's King's Enemies, he may make it appear, that not only is he innocent of these Aspersions, but also in his Accession to the Causes of God's Wrath, and to the Supplication and Declinator mentioned in the Indictment, he had no Dole, or Fraud, or Intention to defame or reproach the King, but in these things he walked in the Simplicity of his Heart, with an Eye upon his Duty both to God and to his Majesty, and acted in these things from a true Principle of Piety towards God, and Loyalty towards his Majesty, and therefore cannot, because of his Accession to any of these things, be judged guilty of Treason and Sedition.

The First particular Deed subsumed in the Indictment against the Defender, is, That he did compile and draw up a Paper commonly called the Remonstrance, and presented it, or caused it to be presented to his Majesty, or the Committee of Estates, upon the 22^d October 1650. To which he answers, 1^{mo}. By denying what is alledged. He did not compile or draw up that Remonstrance, neither had he any Hand in the compiling or drawing up thereof, nor did he present it, nor caused it to be presented to his Majesty and the Committee of Estates; and it is notour, and the Defender could prove by many Hundreds of Witnesses, if need were, that he was so far alibi in the Time of the drawing up thereof, that he was at Stirling that Time, many Miles distant: And that he did not present the same, nor caused it to be presented, is also notour. And as to what may be alledged of his abetting the same in the Causes of Wrath, he shall answer it in its own place.

The Second particular Head, or Article of the Indictment, is anent the Defender's contriving, compiling, causing print, in Anno 1653 Years, that seditious Pamphlet (as it is libelled) called, The Causes of God's Wrath, containing many malicious, ignominious, and treasonable Passages, as is alledged therein, and specially in the 5th and 6th Articles thereof, and which is declared against by an Act of the Committee of Estates, of the Date the 19th Day of September 1660.

To this Article the Defender answers as follows. 1^{mo}. That Act of Committee, if any thing be intended to be founded thereon, ought to have been produced, and given up to see, and till then no Process, for the Reasons above alledged. 2^{do}. If it were produced, no Act can be a Ground to found a Dittay of Treason, and to infer the same, but an Act of Parliament, by the express Act of Parliament before cited, Act 28. Parl. 1640 Years, and that must be an Act made under the Pain of Treason against the Contraveners. But, 3^{do}. It seems, from the Place wherein this is libelled, being in the Subsumption, it is only intended for an Argument of the alledged Guilt of that Paper; and the Defender doubts nothing, but whatever it pleased the Committee to do anent that Paper, there being none concerned therein called and heard before them at that Time or before, yet the Commissioner's Grace and the Estates of Parliament will be very far from condemning the Defender unheard, and therefore he shall shortly premise the true Case of his Accession to that Paper, and Motives, and Ends therein; and thereafter shall proceed to his further Defences. The Case is truly thus.

The Lord, by the sad Defeats of our Armies at Dunbar, Innerkeithing and Worcester, and rendring our whole Nation Captives in all their precious Interests, unto the Cruelty and Lusts of usurping Strangers, having declared from Heaven much of his Wrath and Indignation against this whole Land, and all Ranks of Persons therein, from the highest to the lowest, especially against the Ministry of this Church; the Defender, with many of these Ministers and Elders who had been dissatisfied in their Consciences with the publick Proceedings of the former Year, did come together after Worcester, not to comply with or strengthen in any Thing the Hands of Adversaries, or to cast any Reproaches upon the Person of the King's Majesty, or do any Injury to the ancient civil Government of the Kingdom in his Majesty's Person and Family, but in Singleness of Heart to search into the Causes of all this great Wrath, both as to their own Sins, and the Sins of all Sorts of Persons in the Land, so far as God should be pleased, from the Light of his Word, to discover the same to them: Therefore, having first searched into and acknowledged their own Sins, they did, in the next Place, search into the Sins of the Land; and after Conference and Prayer, to the best of their Light and Apprehension, win at some Discoveries thereof, they did draw the same first into some short Heads and Articles, which they did afterwards enlarge, merely in order to a more clear Discovery of Sin and Guilt to such of the Land, especially of their own Congregations, whom God should be pleased by his Word and Spirit to convince thereof.

The Case being thus truly, the Defender alledges, 4^{to}. Whatever may be in the Matter of that Paper, yet this Article of the Dittay is no ways relevantly libelled, nor subsumed under the Acts of the Proposition to infer the Crime and Pain of Treason, because this Article can only be subsumed on that Part of the Proposition founded upon the Acts of James VI. Parl. 8th, 10th, and 14th, mentioned therein against Authors of slanderous Speeches or Writs against his Majesty, the Pain whereof is not the Pain of Treason in none of those, nor no other Acts of Parliament whereunto they may relate; for in the foresaid 134 Act, Parl. 8th, James VI. Relation is made to the Pains statuted against Leasing-makers, which is not the Pain of Treason, but of Tinsel of Life and Goods, as is clear by the 43. Act Parl. 2. James I. anent Leasing-makers, wherein, by Goods is only understood Goods moveable, and that Pain is no ways the Pain of Treason, nor is that Crime ordained to be Treason by any of our Acts of Parliament, as is clear by the Stile and Tenor of the same by Skene in his Treat of Crimes in the End of the Majesty, and by his Index of the Acts of Parliament on the Word Treason: And therefore, in so far as the Passages of that Paper are libelled here to be treasonable, the Article cannot be reasonably subsumed under the aforesaid Acts, nor no other Acts of Parliament, and the Defender ought to be absolved therefrom.

5^{to}. This Article, as it is subsumed upon the Acts of Parliament, false and scandalous Speeches and Writs against his Majesty, &c. is no ways relevantly libelled, because as all Crimes require as well Malice in the Person as Evil in the Thing done, that is, Dole & Malitia subjectiva as well as objectiva, D. D. ad L. 1. ff. de sua, so specially in Injuries, whether by Word, Writ or otherwise, Dole and an Intention to injure and reproach, is essentially requisite, so that without that there can be no Action of Injury; nam ad hoc debitum, requiritur animus injuriandi, say the Doctors, and the Law is express Lib. 3. § 1. ff. de injuriis & famosis libellis. In that Title of the Law anent Injuries and infamous Libels, the Words are, Injuria ex affectu consistit, that is, an Injury depends all upon the Intention of him who does it, thereby to injure; and the Doctors, following the Words, express that Law and Principle, Instit. de injuriis; and specially Craveta Concilio 419. N. 1. and Concil. 9. N. 36. says, That agens actione injuriarum debet allegare dolum dolum, that is, He that pursues an Action of Injury should alledge Dole. And Menoch. says in Concil. 197. Lib. 12. That the Words must be injurious, and must be prolata animo injuriandi, that is, they must be also spoken and written with Intention to injure; and many others, whom it were tedious to alledge. But so it is that there is nothing libelled to infer that the Defender had an evil, seditious, ignominious, dishonourable, or any ways sinister Intention, in order to his Majesty, in what Hand he had in that Paper, without which the Dittay in this Part is not relevant; but that neither is nor can be libelled: But on the contrar, to clear that the Defender had no Dole or Intention of Injury against his sacred Majesty, it is evident, 1^{mo}, because Menoch. in the forced Place, Concil. 197. Lib. 12. disputing the Case of Words of a Subject that may seem to reflect against his Prince, says, Animus injuriandi non præsumitur in bono subdito adversus principem, but rather prolata esse bono animo & zelo versus principem, that is, In a good Subject it is not presumed that he intended to injure his Prince, but rather that his Words (whether spoken or written, for both are but Words) was from a good Zeal towards his Prince. Now what a good Subject the Defender hath been, and what Zeal he has had for his Prince and against his Enemies, and how much he did suffer therefore, he is confident has been evident from the true Information thereanent abovementioned, and which is n. tour, as has been said: Whence Law and Reason will presume, that he intended no Injury against his Majesty by that Paper, especially seeing, 2^{do}. (which, if need be, he propones joynly) That the Nature and Quality of the Act, being that by which the Intention of the Agent is best known, as Lawiers observe well from d. l. 1. ff. ad. L. Cornel. de Sicar. it is clear from the Nature of the Act whereabouts the Defender was in that Paper, that he intended no Injury to his Majesty, nor was there any Dole or Malice in it; for it is an Act directory of Acknowledgment of Sins and Repentance, which consists of two Parts, Conviction and Sorrow for Sin, which is no ways Dole or Malice against the supposed Sinner, and without which Dole and Malice there is no Crime or Injury; but on the contrar the very End of it is the Recovery of the supposed Sinner, and appeasing of Divine Wrath against him: Whereunto adding 3^{io}. That Repentance is προς τον Θεον, that is, towards God, and so has no Tendency toward, and cannot be a Crime against any Creature. And 4^{to}. Though there were even a Mistake upon the Matter, in acknowledging and repenting of what were Duty, (or at least what were not sinful) for Sin, yet a naked Error in Opinion, without Dole or Malice, is no Crime, as has been said, though the Error were even lata culpa, that is, not to understand that that all understand, as it is defined in L. lata culpa, ff. de Verb. Signif. For where even a Law or Statute irrogates corporal Punishment or Death, there that lata culpa, or gross Mistake, is not sufficient to infer it. D. D. in Lib. 1. ff. de Sicar. and Godseid. super L. pen. Cod. de custod. reor & L. pen. ff. de in litem jurand. Battand. Reg. 8. prox. crim. in primo, citing many Doctors for it, and Dambond. Cap. 85. N. 11. Yea, it is not sufficient and relevant to infer but Infamy per Gloss. in L. in actionibus, ff. de in lit. jurand. Bastol. in L. Cod. nec Num. 20. cum seqq. ff. de Possit. But as to levis culpa, which is not giving that Diligence to do or to know, which other exact Persons may give, as it is commonly defined, was never made equivalent to Dole, or made the Ground of a Crime by no Lawier, and yet the Defender subsumes, that if there were any Mistake upon the Matter in that Paper, specially the 5th. Step (called) of Defection, it was an Opinion common to him and the Church, and States of the Kingdom, as by many of the Declarations may appear; and therefore in him had neither latam nor levem culpam in it, far less dolum, and so he is, as not culpable, so not criminal therein. 5^{to}. Quævis causa, injusta etiam & fatua, excusata dolo, and so from Injury, Clarus, Lib. 5. Sent. fin. & alii per L. igitur, Gloss. in L. Num. ff. Si quis jns dicenti non obtemperet & Jason. ibid. How much more ought the Defender to be excused, who had for the Cause and Motive of his and others Acknowledgments in that Paper, the Declarations, Warnings and other Papers, both of Church and State, particularly aftermentioned, and had a far other End than Malice, imported in the very Nature of the Action, as said is, to wit, deprecating and appeasing Divine Wrath, which had gone out against the whole Land, reconciling him by Repentance, as well to the Defender as others, from Love to all, eminently to his Majesty, as having eminently suffered by that Displeasure, under the Chastisement whereof all of us then were: In respect whereof the Defender ought to be absolved from any Dole or culpa, and so from any Action of Injury, and from all Crime and Pains libelled in or upon that Article. As for the Two Articles specially condescended on of the said Paper, viz. the 5 and 6 Articles, as they are designed in the Libel, it is answered, 1^{mo}. That these Articles are anent the Sin of Covetousness of the People, and Ministers and others who had been in the Army, and other Places military and civil over them, and their abusing of publick Faith; and as to these they are both incontroverted Sins, and clearly meant no ways of his Majesty, but of the People and other inferior Rulers, who, before his Majesty's Return, had been in Places of Power over them; but it seems, it is not meant of the 5 and 6 Steps (called) of Defection, and therefore the Defender, adhering to his general Answer made against all this Article, upon this Paper in general, alledges specially to the 5 Step.

1^{mo}. That for what is contained therein, has proceeded according to the proper Rules of Acknowledgment of Sins, and of Repentance, viz. Church-canons in their Declarations, and therefore culpa vacabat; the Defender was not culpable, and so not criminal therein, having therein walked according to Ecclesiastick Rules and Declarations then standing.

2^{do}. It is alledged that there is nothing in these Acts of Parliament cited in the Indictment, that concerns Lies, and Slanders, and Reproaches, &c. of his Majesty, that can infer or include the Crime of Treason and Sedition against the Defender, because any thing asserted in that Part of the Book of Causes of Wrath. For, first, Mr. Coke, in his Reports of the English Law, tells, That all the Judges certified his Majesty, that the speaking of any Words, whereby a personal Vice is charged upon the King, cannot be Treason, and this he said, Judge Zelvertown said, was told by the Judges in Debate, about Mr. Pothin's Case, who was judged for divers treasonable Speeches in his Sermon. And the same Mr. Coke in his Treatise of Treason, tells us, That Words may make an Heretick but not a Traitor. And for this there is an excellent Law Cod. Si quis imperatori maledixerit, si quis modestia nescius, & pudoris ignarus, improbo petulantique maledicto nomina vestra tradiderit laceffenda, ac temulentia turbulentus obrestator temporum nostrorum fuerit, eum poena nolumus subjugari, neque durum alicui nec asperum remittendum seu condemnandum. That is to say, If any Man ignorant, either of Modesty or Shame, thinks to provoke our Majesty or Name, by wicked or reproachful Speeches, and being troublesome through Drunkenness, become a Reproach of our Times, we will not have him punished, nor suffer any hard Thing therefore; because if it has proceeded of Levity it is to be despised, if of Madnes it is worthy of Pity, if of intention to injure it is to be forgiven. And in France, as Coke well observes, it is no Treason for a Hugonore to call the King an Heretick, for says he, it is no Treason to say, the King is a Catholick, neither is Treason to say, That a Catholick is an Heretick, which seems very agreeable to that of the Prophet Isaiab, wherein he reproves it as one of the Sins in his Time, that a Man was made an Offender for a Word. But, secondly. If it be true that it was a Sin, to close a Treaty with the King for investing him with the Exercise of his Royal Power, he still continuing in his former known Opposition of the Work of Reformation, as is asserted in the 5th Step of the Article, then cannot the Defender fall within the Compass of the Breach, or Pains of any of these Acts of Parliament relating to Slanders, Lyings, &c. But that it is true, that this was a Sin, is, as the Defender humbly conceives, holden forth and proven in the common received Doctrine of this Church, and publick declared Judgment of this Kingdom, both before the Treaty, and in the Time of the Treaty, and after the Close of the Treaty with the King at Breda. Therefore, for making out of the Subsumption, he doth humbly offer unto your Lordships, the serious Perusal of the following Paper herewith presented, in which are mentioned many clear Testimonies, out of the publick Papers of Kirk and State, confirming the same to have been their Judgment likewise; and craves it might be read, and as the Papers therein mentioned are notour, so your Lordships will find them conform to the Registers and Records, both of Kirk and State; and humbly craves, that your Lordships would hold these Testimonies sufficiently verified notorietae juris, most of them being printed; or if any thing further be needful for the verifying thereof, that your Lordships would search the Registers, and allow him Extracts out of the Registers themselves, in which these Testimonies are contained, and, as a Part of the publick Proceedings of this Kirk and Kingdom, are ratified by his Majesty's Treaty at Breda, and Act of Ratification at St. Johnstown, or Stirling, or is conform to that which was ratified. From all which, 3th. The Defender alledges, That seeing what is asserted in the 5th Step was warranted by the Acts of Church and State, and ratified in Manner foresaid, it cannot be libelled to infer a Crime against him, and he ought to be absolved from that Part of the Dittay; neither can these Acts of Parliament cited in the Indictment, against meddling with his Majesty's Affairs, conclude the Defender culpable in this Matter, because the Crime condemned by these Acts, is only extravagant and unwarrantable meddling, or such as do not fall within the Compass of, or is not confined within the Bounds of a Man's Station and Calling; otherwise it should be culpable for any of his Majesty's Officers, or for any subordinate Magistrate, or any Person whatsoever, to meddle in his Majesty's Affairs: But so it is, that the Defender his meddling in this Business was not extravagant or unwarrantable, but that whereunto he was called, and to which he was bound virtute or necessitate officii, as a Minister of the Gospel. It is competent and incumbent to the Ministers of the Gospel, to cry aloud, and not to spare in shewing the Lord's People their Transgressions and Sins, to warn Persons of all Sorts concerning Sin and Duties, and to declare the whole Counsel of God, the whole Book of God, which contains the whole Counsel of God, without Exception of any Part thereof; being the subject Matter of that Commission, which Ministers do receive from Jesus Christ their Lord and Master, and therefore, there be many Instances in the Book of God, the Practices of the Prophets and Apostles, and of Jesus Christ himself, discovering and reproving Sin in Persons of all Ranks, tho' it was their Lot often to be misconstrued and mistaken in their doing thereof, as tho' they had been no Friends to civil Authority.

In Defence of the 6th Step of the 9th Article of the Causes of Wrath, the Defender doth offer to your Lordships Consideration, that there is nothing therein that can be accounted treasonable, because there is nothing asserted therein but what is true, even that which relates to the Remonstrance it self, to wit, That it doth contain a Testimony concerning Sin and Duty, the Discovery whereof was rejected, as may appear from the publick Judgment of the Commissioners of the General Assembly at Perth, the 29th of December 1650, in their Remonstrance to the honourable Estates of Parliament, concerning this Business. The Words be these: 'Whatever has been your Lordships Sense of that Paper, presented to you by the Gentlemen, Officers and Ministers attending the Forces in the West, yet we with you seriously to lay to Heart the many sad Truths contained therein; we will not here mention the Sins relating to the King and the Royal Family, having particularly represented these to his Majesty's self, and appointed a Day of solemn Humiliation therefore; but we do with all Earnestness exhort your Lordships to take to Consideration, the Sins herein held forth relating to your selves, and to mourn before the Lord for them: And particularly, and in the first Place, That your Lordships may impartially, and in a self-denying Way, as in the Sight of the Lord, seriously ponder if there has not been, at least in some of you, sinful Precipitance, unstraight Designs and carnal Policy in appointing Addressees for treating with the King, and in a Way of carrying on and closing of the same.'

As to what is asserted in the Close of this Step, concerning the rejecting of the Means of Peace, it doth not strike against any Act of Parliament whatsoever, nor can be judged culpable, seeing Robbers and Pirates, and Brigandines, and Usurpers, and unjust Invaders may, yea, sometimes ought, in some Cases, be communed or treated with, upon Conditions that are sinless, and there may be Pride and Presumption of Spirit in not doing so.

To the Third Article of the Dittay, bearing, That the Defender under colour of Piety, Loyalty, and Zeal for Religion, and in the Address and Garb of a humble Petition, did calumniate his Majesty with Dissimulation and Perjury, reflected upon his Majesty, and the lawful Government of the Church and State of England and Ireland, and of his Chapel and Family, and challenged him to alter and invert the same, encroached upon his Authority and Prerogative, in meddling with his Majesty's Affairs, and filling all Places of Power and Trust under his Majesty.

It is answered, 1^{mo}. It is not relevantly libelled, except it had been libelled that the said Petition had been publicly presented, divulged and exhibited, being otherwise but nudus conatus, especially, seeing tho' the same had been, and of the Contents and Tenor libelled, yet could it not, upon any Act of the Proposition, infer the Crime and Punishment of Treason, seeing the Acts made against slanderous Speeches and Writs and Slanderers, under the which only it can be subsumed, are not made under the Pain of Treason, as has been abundantly evinced in the Answer to the former Article anent the Paper, called The Causes of God's Wrath. In which Crime of Lese-majesty alienarly affectus sine effectu is humilis. 2^{do}. Altho' the same had been printed, yet as to the calumniating his Majesty thereby, as the Defender denies any Intent or Purpose he had for that effect, so, with Confidence, thereto he doth oppose the Petition it self, bearing no such Thing. 3^{mo}. As to his reflecting upon, and meddling with his Majesty's Affairs, and the Government of his Church in England and Ireland, his Majesty's Chapel and Family, and filling of Places of Trust, &c. non relevat, except it had been libelled, and made appear by the Petition, that the same was to the Disdain, Reproach and Contempt

Contempt of his Majesty or his Government, as he is hopeful, no Word in that Petition can genuinely infer. Next, for any Expressions relating therein to the Government of the Church of England and his Majesty's Chapel, as there is no Mention made thereof in any of the Acts of the Proposition, wherein his Majesty's lawful Government is only exprest and forbidden, so he humbly conceives that Prelacy and the Chapel is no such lawful Government and Form, but that a Minister of the Church of Scotland, sworn against the same by the Oath of the National Covenant, and Solemn League and Covenant; both which are approved, authorized, and enjoined by the Canons of this Church and Law of this Land, and declared to have the Strength of Acts of Parliament, may in all Humility petition his Majesty, who is in the same Covenant with him, that the same be not established nor received in any Part of his Dominions, because of the Oath of God foresaid, and that he may, according to the received Doctrine of the Church of Scotland, and Confession of Faith of both Kingdoms, ratified by Parliament, publicly preach, that Prelacy is no lawful Government, and that the Order of the Chapel is no warrantable Worship, without incurring the Pains of Sedition and Treason, which yet is more than a private Petition; and without being thought a Meddler, or Busie-body in re aliena: In respect whereof he humbly conceives, he cannot be convict of any Crime, much less high Treason, upon this Article of the Dittay: And the whole Subjects of this Nation, being obliged by the solemn publick Oath of God in the 4th Article of the Solemn League and Covenant, to endeavour the Discovery of Malignants, which is approved not only by an Act of the Committee of Estates in the Year 1648. but also by an Act of Parliament 1649. that all Places of Power and Trust might be filled with Men of unquestionable Integrity and Affection to the Cause of God, and of a blameless and Christian Conversation; he doth humbly conceive that his petitioning his Majesty to this Effect, is so far from being treasonable, or seditious, or any Ways culpable by the Laws of God, or of the Land, that he was thereunto engaged by the indispensable Oath of God in the Covenant, and in the solemn publick Engagement unto Duties.

The next Part of this Article bearing, That the Defender and his Complices did not only convocate themselves, but also by their missive Letters, Commissions and Instructions drawn, they did presume to convocate his Majesty's Leiges, &c. It is answered, 1^{mo}. It is not relevantly subsumed under the Act of Parliament 131. Parl. 8th. James VI. in the Proposition. For first, In that Act Meetings only that take upon them Jurisdiction, lead Process give forth Sentence, and put the same to Execution, are prohibit, as is clear from the Occasion, Ground and Rise of that Law in the Beginning thereof, seeing that during Twenty Four Years preceeding the making of that Act, sundry Forms of Judgments and Jurisdictions as well in spiritual as temporal Causes, are entred in the Practice and Custom, whereby the King's Majesty's Subjects are often convocated, and assembled together, and Pains as well civil and pecunial as ecclesiastical enjoined to them, Process led and deduced, Sentence and Decrees given, and the same put to Execution. It is secondly clear from the dispositive Reason of the Act, which is, that there was no such Order, that is afore said, of Jurisdiction established by his Majesty and Three Estates, which is contrary to the common Custom observed in any well governed Commonwealth. Thirdly. From the statutory Words, which prohibit Jurisdictions, spiritual and temporal, not approved by his Majesty and Three Estates of Parliament, and convocating for holding of Council, Conventions, or Assemblies, to treat, consult and determine (not alternative, or determine as it is libelled) in Matters of State: But so it is, the Meeting or Convocation libelled was not taking upon them any Jurisdiction, nor to determine as having Power in any Matter to either, of State or others; and therefore comes not under the Compass of that Act, and cannot be relevantly subsumed thereupon. 2^{do}. Non relevant drawn up except subscribed, nor subscribed except sent, nor sent except thereupon some Convocation had happened, nor Convocation except the same had been tumultuary and seditious; and the Defender opposes the common unquestioned and proven Custom of the Nation, by which Persons of all Ranks, according to their several Occasions, bring together many of his Majesty's Lieges, and were never quarrelled therefore, except it manifestly appear, that they had been brought together of purpose to disturb the Peace, the contrary whereof was manifest in the Convocation, wherein the Petition was drawn up, they being assembled neither with Multitude nor Tumult, but in a very small Number, and for Business in it self lawful, to wit, humble petitioning of his Majesty for preserving and carrying on the Work of Reformation and Uniformity in Religion, according to the Covenant, which obliges them to do the same sincerely, really and constantly all the Days of their Life. Next 3^{tio}. Absolutor, because by the Act 29. Parl. 40. it is found and declared, that Councils, Conventions and Assemblies intended for the Defence and Preservation of Religion, are not prohibit by any preceeding Laws, such as the Acts of the Proposition are, and for this Purpose the Meeting was clearly intended of them: Therefore.

The Fifth Article bears, That the Defender being convened before his Majesty and the Committee of Estates at Perth, to answer for some seditious and unwarrantable Speeches uttered by him in Sermons, in Stirling, and otherways, against his Majesty's Authority, and having compeared, that the Defender did treasonably disclaim and decline his Majesty and his Authority, and that he did protest for Remed of Law for his Confinement, which at more Length is contained in the Declinator and Protestation, repeated as a Part of the Libel brevitatis causa.

It seems that this Article is specially founded on the 129 Act Parl. 8. James VI. Anno 1584. confirming his Majesty's Royal Power over all Estates and Subjects within this Realm; to which the Defender says, 1^{mo}. Non relevant as to the inferring the Crime and Punishment of Treason. First, That Act confirms no Power and Authority to his Majesty, but his Royal Power and Authority. And albeit the Defender doth most readily acknowledge his Majesty's Royal Power and Authority to extend to all Things civil, and that as civil Magistrate the Conservation and Purgation of Religion, as is asserted in the Confession of Faith of this Church, doth belong unto him, or that as it was said of the Christian Emperor, That he is Episcopus ad extra: Yet he humbly conceives, That the Power and Authority to judge of Ministers Doctrine in the first Instant, especially in an orthodox and rightly constituted Church, whose Judicatories are acknowledged and established by his Majesty's own Authority and Laws, is not a Power and Authority that belongs to him as civil Magistrate; but being a Power and Authority in its own Nature spiritual and ecclesiastical, which properly belongs to the spiritual Office-bearers of the House of God under Jesus Christ, who is Lord and Master over his own House, and Head of his Church, whose Kingdom is not of this World, and hath appointed that the Spirit of the Prophets should be subject to the Prophets; and the Magistrate's Power is not spiritual and ecclesiastick, but civil only, and what is most consistent with, and consonant to his Majesty's Royal Prerogative, as it is established by the 1 Act Parl. 18. James VI. afore said, can never contravene, as not that that Act it self libelled on, so neither the other Act 129. Parl. 8. James VI. also libelled on: That establishes that same Royal Power in his Majesty's Person over all Estates, in respect whereof he is Judge competent to all his Subjects of whatsoever Estate, and his Judgment to prohibit to be declined, because prior Laws are drawn to posterior Laws, non est novum, & L. idev. ff. de Leg. and this posterior Act 1. Parl. 18. is declaratory of that Prerogative confirmed in that first Act, in respect whereof his Majesty is Judge competent to Persons of all Estates in Manner therein contained: But so it is, the Declinator and Protestation mentioned in this Article does contravene that Act Parl. 18. in so far as all that is declared there, is that his Majesty has the sovereign Authority over all Estates, Persons, and Causes, which does no way take away nor exclude the proper Jurisdictions of the several Judicatories established by the Laws of the Kingdom, otherwise it should evacuate all the Jurisdictions of the same, and presently might bring all Causes immediately before his Majesty and Council; which will not be affirmed.

2^{do}. Non relevat, because of the transferring the Judgment of a Minister's Doctrine from his Majesty's immediate Decision in a civil Court, to the Decision of the Judicatories of the Kirk, is not a declining, but an acknowledging and maintaining and confirming his Majesty's Power and Authority in an orderly Way, or in such a Manner as his Power and Authority is asserted and established by himself, and his own Authority, in his Laws; because he hath by many Laws and Acts of Parliament, ratified and established the Judicatories of the Kirk, as the proper and competent Judges of Ministers Doctrine, particularly in his 114 Act, Parl. 12. Anno 1592. in which the haill Jurisdiction and Discipline of the Kirk over Judicatories is ratified and confirmed; and the 6 Act of the 12 Parl. Charles I. And therefore, tho' there may be Reason to condemn these Declinators of his Majesty's Royal Power and Authority, that are made upon Respect to Powers, foreign and exotick, which are not acknowledged by his Majesty, nor established by his Laws; yet there can be no Reason to condemn this, because the avocating of a Cause from one Court, or his Majesty's Jurisdiction and Authority in one Court, to another Court established by the same Authority, in and by the Laws of the Kingdom; it is but a taking of it a Casare ad Casarem, and from that Authority in one Court to the same, as approving the other, and that the Doctrine contained in the Protestation libelled on, belonged to the spiritual Jurisdiction of the Kirk doth yet more appear, because it was, as is clear by the Protestation it self, upon a Question merely spiritual, to wit, Whether the Resolutions were contrary to the Word of God, to the Oaths of the Covenant, and League and Covenant, to the solemn Engagement, to the Declarations, Remonstrances, Warnings, Causes of Humiliation, and Resolutions of the Kirk, offensive and scandalous, which are all mere spiritual Considerations, and no ways Civil and Politick.

3^{tio}. Non relevat, because Declinators that are not made upon the Account of foreign and exotick Jurisdictions, are lawful in all the Judicatories of the Kingdom from the highest to the lowest. It is usual to propose a Declinator or Exception of Incompetency, against any Judge or Judicatory within the Nation, when in the Exercise of their Jurisdiction, they do exceed the Bounds prescribed by the Law, which could not be said, if it were treasonable to decline the King and the Council as incompetent Judges in some Cases, because the King's Majesty may be personally present, and is always virtually and by his Authority present in all the Judicatories of this Nation, as effectually quoad omnes effectus juris, as in the Committee of Estates; and is it not daily ordinary that when Parties trouble his Majesty's Commissioner's Grace, and Three Estates of Parliament, with Causes and Business proper to the Lords of Session, that they refer it to the Judge Ordinary, and will not meddle therewith?

4^{to}. Absolvitor, because that Act, since the making thereof, hath been often repeated, first materially in the Year immediately thereafter, by a Declaration under King James his own Hand, sent to the Commissioners of the General Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland at Linlithgow, December 7th, 1585. which, he says, shall be as good and valid as any Act of Parliament whatsoever, insert in the Register of the Kirk; in which Declaration he hath these Words. 'I for my Part shall never, neither my Posterity ought ever cite, summon, apprehend any Pastor or Preacher for Matter of Doctrine in Religion, Salvation, Heresies, or true Interpretation of the Scripture, but, according to my first Act, which confirmeth the Liberty of Preaching, Ministration of the Sacraments, I avouch the same to be a Matter mere Ecclesiastick, and altogether impertinent to my Calling; therefore neither shall I, nor ever ought they, I mean my Posterity, acclaim any Power or Jurisdiction in the forefaids.' Which Declaration we cannot but look upon as a material repeating of that Act, because it was directly and of purpose penned and subscribed, and sent by the King to the Commissioner of the General Assembly, for removing the stumbling Offence, and easing of the Grievance and Complaint, which was made by the whole Kirk of Scotland, because of the making of that Act. Secondly. That Act is formally and expressly repealed in the 12 Parl. James VI. Act 114. in which the Government and Jurisdiction is established by Assemblies, Presbyteries, &c. And the Act libelled upon, in so far as concerns or is prejudicial to the Privilege of spiritual Office-bearers, concerning Heads of Religion, Herefy, Excommunication, or any Censure, specially grounded, and having Warrant from the Word of God: But so it is, That the Act of Parliament propounded upon by the Pursuer, doth in nothing concern the Jurisdiction of the Kirk, or the Privileges of the spiritual Officers thereof, but in so far as the same does establish his Majesty's Jurisdiction in spiritual Causes, and prohibits all Declinators of that Judgment, which, as in this derogatory and prejudicial Clause to the Privilege of the Kirk, is in this rescissory Act expressly cast and made void: Likeas, the 1 Act, Parl. 18. James VI. proponed upon, with the 3 Act of 1 Parl. Charles I. whereby the King's Authority and Prerogative is established over all Estates, Persons and Causes, is repealed, in so far as the same are prejudicial and derogatory to the Privilege of the Kirk of God, the Discipline and Government of her Office-bearers and Church-judicatories, in the 4 Act, Parl. 2. Charles I. and Act 5 of the same Parliament, wherein amongst the Causes of bygone Evils, the Jurisdiction of secular Powers in Matters spiritual is complained upon, and the committing of the Power of both Swords to Persons merely Ecclesiastical, and the giving the Keys to Persons merely civil against the Privilege of the Church, her Officers and Judicatories, and Remedy provided against the same for the Time to come; and likewise by the 6 Act, 2 Parl. Charles I. Jurisdiction and Power of the Kirk is solely and only in the General Assembly, provincial Synods, Presbyteries, as was established by the Act 1592. If therefore the Act 1592. did rescind that Act 1584. anent the Jurisdiction of the King in all Causes spiritual, and since by this Act of Charles I. the Act 1592. is confirmed, it must rescind and repeal the Act 1584. and doth in express Words rescind and anul all and whatsoever Acts of Parliament and Constitutions, in so far as they derogate and are prejudicial to the spiritual Nature, Jurisdiction, Discipline and Privileges of this Kirk in her General, Provincial, Presbyterial Assemblies blies and Kirk-sessions. Lastly: That Act Anno 1584. and all other Acts of that Nature, are rescinded and annulled both by the National Covenant, and by the Solemn League and Covenant, which were not only posterior in Time, and are ratified in Parliament, and declared to have the Strength of Laws and Acts of Parliament; but also in the Nature of them are of more Strength than any municipal Law or Statute, as being confirmed by the solemn publick Oath of God taken by his Majesty and all the Subjects of this Kingdom, which binds to maintain and defend the Doctrine, Worship, Discipline and Government of this Kirk; which Covenant is confirmed by the Treaty at Breda, and Ratifications at St. Johnstoun and Stirling ratifying the said Treaty, and Acts of Parliament that ratify these Covenants.

That it may further appear how good Reason there was for repealing and rescinding that Law, and for declining the civil Magistrate, as competent Judge of Ministers Doctrine in the first Instance, the Defender doth humbly propone, that such Declinators are warrantable, First, by the Word of God, which is the sovereign and supreme Law by which all other Laws are to be regulated and squared. Secondly. By the Confessions of Faith, and Doctrine of this Church, which doubtless ought to be acknowledged by all the Members thereof, to be binding and obligatory, and by all the Subjects of this Kingdom, seeing they are ratified and confirmed in Parliament. Thirdly. By the Practice of this Church, not only before, but also since that Act of Parliament, Anno 1684. was made. And Fourthly. By the Judgment of sound orthodox Divines, and the Strength of divine Reason.

The Word of God doth clearly hold forth, that Jesus Christ hath a visible Kingdom, which he exercises in or over his visible Church, which is wholly distinct from the civil Powers and Governments of the World, and not depending upon nor subordinate unto these Governments in the Administrations thereof, which are spiritual, and are to be regulated not by the Laws of Men, but by his own Laws set down in his Word, who is King and Lawgiver of his House, and hath committed the Ministry to his own Office-bearers under himself, John 18. 36 & 37. Matth. 16. 19. John 20. 28. Ezek. 43. 10, 11, 12. Heb. 3. 5, 6. The Confessions of Faith and Doctrines of this Church do also affirm the same Thing; these do acknowledge no Head or Lawgiver over the visible Church of Christ, but Jesus Christ himself, and do assert the Government of the Church to be distinct from that of the civil Magistrate, and such as ought to be squared by Christ's own Laws, and exercised by the Office-bearers of his own House, and may be seen in the Confessions of Faith and Books of Discipline of this Church: For the Practice of this Church there, there be many Instances of such Declinators extant in the Registers and Story thereof, particularly that of Mr. David Black in the Year 1596. which was first subscribed and given in by himself to the King's Majesty and his Council, then sitting at Edinburgh, upon Occasion of his being cited to compare before them to answer for some Doctrine which he had preached at St. Andrews, where he was then Minister, which was alledged by the King's Majesty and his Council to be treasonable and seditious; which Declinator was owned by the Assemblies of this Kirk; and a little after his giving in thereof, was subscribed by Three or Four hundred Ministers, who yet were not, because of so doing, judged nor proceeded against as guilty of Treason and Sedition. It would be tedious to cite the Testimonies of orthodox and sound Divines, who have written on this Subject, both ancient and modern. It is known what was said to the Emperors who were Arian, and took upon them to judge of the Doctrine of the Orthodox. Tibi Deus imperium commisit, nobis quæ sunt ecclesiæ concessit; dare, scriptum est, quæ sunt Cæsaris Cæsari, quæ sunt Dei Deo, neque fas est nobis imperium in terra tenere, neque cum imperator thyaniameton, & sacrorum, aut clarium ecclesiæ potestatem habes. The Treatises and Books of Scots, English, Belgick and French, and other Divines, written for the Defence and clearing of the divine Right of Church-government, and of the Power of the Magistrate about holy Things, and that Appeals from the Church in Church-matters to the civil Magistrate are not lawful, do contain many Assertions and Testimonies to this Purpose. As for divine Reason, the Defender doth only say, That if the Function of the Magistrate be distinct from the Ministerial Function in all the Causes thereof, then must needs the Jurisdictions and Exercises thereof be also distinct, and not depending one upon another; as the Church cannot lay hold upon the Sword of the Magistrate, so neither can the Magistrate take the Keys of the Church. The confounding of these, and the Clashings and Encroachments of the Civil and Ecclesiastical Powers, have been the Cause of much Trouble and Confusion in the World, and the preserving of them distinct, and giving to God the Things that are God's; and to Cesar the Things that are Cesar's, is the best Foundation of Order, Union and Peace, both in Church and State.

For the other Branch of this Article, viz. For protesting for Remeed of Law, non relevat, because there is no Act of Parliament contained in the Proposition, which doth prohibite the same, neither doth the Act anent declining his Majesty's Authority, concern the Protestation, seeing the same is consistent and compatible with his Majesty's Authority, and in criminalibus, especially in atrocibus delictis, as that of Treason; there can be no Extension of an Act of Parliament from the genuin native Sense of the Words of the Act it self, specially seeing by the 28 Act, Parl. 2. Charles I. it is expressly provided, That nothing shall be counted Treason, but that which is declared and statute to be such by an Act of Parliament. Secondly. Such a Protestation for Remeed, against a particular Law for Remeed, against a particular Grievance according to Law, is so far from importing any Declamation of his Majesty's Authority, that it doth import an acknowledging and establishing of the same, because it imports an establishing of his Majesty's Authority in his Laws, according to which, and no otherwise, Remeed is desired.

The last Article wherein the Defender is accused, for giving Advice in a certain Meeting of Ministers and Elders at Stirling, not only to suspend his Majesty from the Exercise of his Royal Power, but also to imprison him in the Castle of Stirling, and when it was answered by one of the Number, They might as well proceed against his Life, that the Defender replied, That it was not yet seasonable to speak of that, but that it was fit he should first be secured. To which the Defender answers, 1mo. That the same is an unjust and false Asperion; he had never such a Purpose in his Heart, much less did he utter any such Words. 2do. The Article, as it is conceived, is not relevant in so far as it doth condescend upon such a lax and wide Space of Time, viz. 1650. or 1651: whereas in Law the Pursuer ought to condescend upon the Year, Month, and Day of the Crime alledged, especially in delictis momentaneis, which are not reiterated nor repeated ex sua natura, but once only committed, L. 3. ff. de Accus. L. si quando, and if the Day were condescended upon, the Defender might have good Ground thereby given him to prove that he was alibi that Day. Lastly. The said Article is no ways relevant, in respect it doth not condescend upon the Names of the Ministers, and Rulers, or Elders in the Meeting, to whom these Words were alledged to have been spoken, neither upon the Name of that that Person who did answer the Defender his alledged Overture, nor upon the Circumstance of the Place, in Stirling, in which these Speeches are alledged to have been spoken, by which general Libelling the Defender is deprived of his lawful Defences, viz. That those Persons were alibi, or were dead : In respect whereof the Libel is irrelevant, and ought not to be sustained by your Lordships.

The Defender having now answered the whole Indictment, concludes thus, 1mo. That he did never purpose or intend to speak, write, or act any Thing disloyal, or seditious, or treasonable against his Majesty's Person, or Government, God is Witness. And what he has spoken, written or acted, in any of these Things, where-with he is charged, hath been merely and singly from a principle of Conscience ; that according to the weak Measure of Light given him of God, he might do his Duty in his Station and Calling, as a Minister of the Gospel, upon which account only, and no other, he hath meddled in these Matters, keeping himself within the Bounds of what was competent to a Minister of the Gospel. 2do. Because Conscience taken quovis modo, is not a sufficient Plea, tho' it may in a good Measure extenuate, it cannot wholly excuse; he doth humbly say, That he hath founded his Speeches, and Writings, and Actions in these Things, so far as he was accessory thereunto, upon the Word of God, and the Confessions of Faith, and Doctrine of this Church, and upon the National Covenant, and solemn League and Covenant, and solemn publick Acknowledgment of Sins, and Engagement unto Duties, and upon the Laws of the Land, and publick declared Judgment of the Kingdom : And therefore humbly prays and expects, that your Lordships will not look upon him as a Person guilty of any Disloyalty, or Sedition, or Treason, against his Majesty and his Laws, but that ye will absolve him from the Charge thereof, libelled against him in the Indictment.

Addition to the Defence of the 5th Step, of the 9th Article of the Causes of Wrath.

Testimonies out of the Declarations and publick Papers of the Kirk and Kingdom of Scotland.

First. The Commissioners of the General Assembly, in their Solemn and seasonable Warning, December 19th 1646. printed at Edinburgh, Page 4. have these Words : ' So long as his Majesty doth not approve in his Heart, and seal with his Hand, the League and Covenant, we cannot but apprehend that, according to his former Principles, he will walk in Opposition to the same, and study to draw us in to the violating thereof.

Secondly. The Kirk of Scotland did, before the Treaty with the King, in many of their publick Declarations and Papers, hold forth, That the King's Interest was subordinate to the Interest of God, and of Religion ; and therefore we find this Subordination holden forth, and engaged unto both in the National Covenant, and in the solemn League and Covenant, which doth oblige us to maintain and defend the King's Person, and Authority, in the Defence and Preservation of true Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdom, upon which Consideration the Commissioners of the General Assembly, in their humble Representation to the honourable Estates of Parliament, the 28th of April 1648. printed, do take notice of a new Interpretation, which the Declaration of the Parliament puts upon this Article of the solemn League and Covenant, and tell their Lordships, that no such Interpretation hath been made by the Assembly of the Kirk, of the solemn League and Covenant, as their Lordships are pleased there to make of it.

The Commissioners of the General Assembly, in their Declaration at Edinburgh, 1st March 1648. printed, do declare, ' That altho' in the Covenant, the Duty of defending and preserving the King's Majesty's Person and Authority be joyned with, and subordinate unto the Duty of preserving and defending the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdom ; and that although from the Beginning of the Cause, the Good, Safety and Security of Religion have been principally sought after, and insisted upon, yet Solicitations, Persuasions and Endeavours have not been, nor are wanting for his Majesty's Restitution to the Exercise of his Royal Power, and for espousing his Majesty's Quarrel, notwithstanding his not granting the publick Desires, concerning the Covenant and Religion ; and this Course is clearly contrary to the declared Resolution of the Parliament of this Kingdom, after Advice desired from us, upon the Case concerning the King then propounded to us ; and it is no less contrary (say they) to the Principles and Professions of the Convention and of the Committee of Estates, before any such Advice was desired or had from us.

The Commissioners of the General Assembly, in the Year 1650. in their Answer to the Estates Observations upon the Assembly's Declaration, printed, speak thus, Page 23. concerning the Subordination of civil Power, to the Good of Religion : ' It is granted by your Lordships, and that it is a great sin in Kings to do otherwise, but that, if Kings fail in Religion, the Subjects are notwithstanding tied to Obedience in Things civil. We conceive that it will not be denied, (say the Commissioners) that Subjects are as straitly tied to a Subordination of all to God as the King is. Doth not the Word oblige all Men, whether King or Subjects to prefer the Glory of God, and the Good of Religion to all Things, to seek it in the first Place, to postpone it to nothing whatsoever ? And again Page 28. of the same Answer, We are sorry (say they) to see their Interests still so carefully provided for, and so little Security for Religion, which indeed was the main and principal Cause of our Engagement in the late Wars. The Declaration also of the General Assembly in the Year 1648. printed, speaketh thus : Whereas the Duty of defending his Majesty's Person and Authority, is, by the 3^d Article of the Covenant, qualified with a Subordination unto the Preservation and Defence of the true Religion and Liberties, there is no such Qualification nor Subordination asserted in the present Engagement, but is so carried on, as to make Duties to God, and for Religion, conditional, qualified, limited, and Duties to the King absolute and unlimited : And again in the same Declaration, Malignancy is revived, in spreading of specious Pretences, vindicating Wrongs done to his Majesty. We desire not to be mistaken, as if Respect and Love to his Majesty were to be branded with the infamous Mark of Malignancy ; but we warn all who would not come under this foul Stain, not only in their Speech and Profession, but really in their whole Carriage, not to own nor prefer their own nor the Interest of any Creature whatsoever, before the Interest of Christ and Religion.

The Representation also of the Commissioners of the General Assembly 1648. April 28th Page 4. printed, speaketh thus : ' Your Lordships are obliged by the 3^d Article of the Covenant, to defend his Majesty's Per-Person and Authority, in the Defence and Preservation of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdom; we suppose your Lordships should not demand from, nor press upon the Kingdom of England, his Majesty's Restitution, except with that Qualification in the Covenant, and with Subordination to Religion, and the Liberties of the Kingdoms; and how can this Subordination according to the Covenant, be said to be observed in your Lordships Demand as it stands, if his Majesty be brought with Honour, Freedom and Safety, and without Security for establishing Religion and Peace? We then leave it to your Lordships Consciences, whether his Majesty shall be restored to his Honour, before Jesus Christ be restored to his Honour, and set upon his Throne of Government, before Jesus Christ be set upon his Throne of Government of his Church, and his Majesty put in a condition of Liberty, before the Ordinances of Christ have a free Course; and whether his Majesty's Safety shall not be provided for, and secured, before either Church or Kingdom can say, That they are in a Condition of Safety. And is this to endeavour the settling of Religion, before all worldly Interests, or rather it come after the King's Interest?

The same Representation in the 26 Pag. speaketh thus: 'We only put your Lordships in mind, that the National Covenant doth joyn with his Majesty's Safety, his good Behaviour in his Office, saying, That the Quietness and Stability of Religion and Kirk, doth depend upon the Safety and good Behaviour of his Majesty, as upon a comfortable Instrument of God's Mercy, granted to this Country for the Maintenance of this Kirk, and Ministration of Justice: Otherwise, if a King do not his Duty for the Maintenance of true Religion, and Ministration of Justice, it is not his Safety alone that makes the People to be in Quietness and Happiness. Withal, as our Quietness and Happiness dependeth on his Majesty, and his doing of his Duty, as an Instrument and Minister of God for Good, so the Honour, Greatness, and Happiness of the King's Royal Majesty, and the Welfare of his Subjects, doth depend upon the Purity of Religion, as is well exprest in your Lordships Oath of Parliament.'

In the printed Answer of the Commission to the Estates Observations on the Assembly's Declaration, August 1648. Pag. 19. be these Words. Their Lordships press doing Duties to his Majesty, viz. his restoring to Honour, Freedom and Safety, notwithstanding of the Fear of any bad Consequence, how much more ought we to do Duties to God, viz. to see the Security of Religion before his Majesty's Restitution, whatever Danger or bad Consequence come?

In the Declaration of the General Assembly to Eng'land, in the Year 1648. printed, be these Words: 'We are not against the restoring of his Majesty to the Exercise of his Power in a right and orderly Way; yet considering the great Expence of Blood, and Pains this Kingdom hath been at, for maintaining their just Liberties, and bringing the Work of Reformation this Length, and considering his Majesty's Averseness from the Reformation, and his adhering to Episcopacy, we trust, that Security shall yet be demanded for Religion, &c.'

And which is yet more considerable, not only is it acknowledged to be a Sin, in the solemn Acknowledgment of publick Sins, and Breach of the Covenant, condescended by the Commissioners of the General Assembly, and approved by the Committee of Estates, October 1648. and afterwards by the Parliament, and solemnly kept with a Day or two of solemn publick Humiliation, by all the Ministers and Congregations of the Land: 'That some among our selves have laboured to put into the Hands of our King, an arbitrary and unlimited Power, and that under the Pretence of relieving and doing for the King, whilst he refuses to do what is necessary for the House of God, some have ranversed and violated most of all the Articles of the Covenant.' But also in the solemn Engagement to Duties, condescended upon by the Commissioners of the General Assembly, and approved by the Committee of Estates and Parliament, and solemnly sworn by the whole Land at the Time of the renewing of the Covenant, we are all of us solemnly obliged in the first Article of that Engagement, 'That because Religion is of all Things the most excellent and precious, the advancing and promoting the Power thereof against all Ungodliness and Profanity, the securing and preserving the Purity thereof against Error, Heresy and Schism, and carrying on the Work of Uniformity, shall be studied and endeavoured by us before all worldly Interests, whether concerning the King, our selves, or any other whatsoever.'

Secondly. There be many Things to be found in the publick Papers of the Kirk of Scotland, arguing the Sinfulness of restoring the King to the Exercise of his Royal Power, whilst continuing in known Opposition to the Work of Reformation, or before necessary Security given for Religion, from the great End and Duty of Magistracy it self, from the mutual Covenants and Contracts betwixt the King and his People, from the Oath of Coronation, which is ratified by Act of Parliament, and is to be taken by all the Kings that reign over the Realm, at the Time of their Coronation, and Receipt of their Princely Authority, whereby they are obliged to be of one perfect Religion, or to serve the same eternal God to the utmost of their Power, according as he hath required in his most holy Word, and to maintain the true Religion of Christ Jesus, the preaching of his holy Word, and the due and right Administration of the Sacraments, now received and preached within this Realm, and that they shall abolish and gainstand all false Religion contrary to the same, and from the Danger of arbitrary and unlimited Power; and sundry other Grounds and Reasons of that kind, which would be tedious to repeat, with the Passages of the publick Papers wherein they are mentioned. Therefore, passing other Papers emitted by the Kirk concerning those Things, we do only refer unto the printed Declaration of the General Assembly 1649. in which we will find a brief Sum of the Arguments and Reasons that are more largely scattered in former Papers to this Purpose, with a Conclusion drawn therefrom concerning the Sinfulness of admitting the King to the Exercise of his Royal Power, before the obtaining real Security for Religion, which Security could not be obtained, he continuing in his former known Opposition to the Work of Reformation; which Declaration, in so far as concerns this Business, is repeated in the Book of the Causes of Wrath, in the Enlargement of the 5. Step of the 9. Article.

In the third Place it is to be remembered, That the Commissioners of the General Assembly, in the Years 1649 and 1650. do hold forth in their Instructions and Letters relating to the Treaty with the King, concerning this Purpose. First, in their Instructions 1649. they do require their Commissioners effectually and seriously to represent unto the King's Majesty, the Evil of the Popish, Prelatical and malignant Party, and to labour to perswade him to forsake their Counsels and Courses, and to cleave to those who would be faithful to God and to his Majesty. And in their Instructions 1650. they are instructed to desire him to take Course, that his Council and Family may consist only of such as are of known Integrity and Affection to the Cause of God, and of a blameless and Christian Conversation; which, they say, there is the more Reason to urge, because cause most of the Evils that have afflicted the King's House and his People, have issued in a special Manner from the King's Council and Family, their Disaffection and Looseness.

The Commissioners of the General Assembly, upon Report of closing of the Treaty with the King at Breda, in the Year 1650 by an Express sent from them for that Effect, they do in a large Letter written to their Commissioners, of the Date 20th of May 1650. profess their Disaffection therewith, in which Letter are these Passages. 'We cannot (say they) but profess our selves to be exceedingly unsatisfied with his Majesty's Concessions, as coming short of many of the material and important Desires of this Kirk and Kingdom, concerning the Security of Religion, and the Peace of the Kingdom. And in another Place of that Letter: Albeit (say they) we conceive our selves bound with all cordial Affection, heartily to invite and welcome his Majesty upon complete Satisfaction to the Desires of Kirk and Kingdom; yet it is Matter of Stumbling to us, that he should, not only without such Satisfaction so far as we could discern, but that Assurances are also given to him in Matters of great Importance, not yet determined by the Parliament of this Kingdom, or General Assembly, or Commissioners of the Kirk. And again in the same Letter: As we earnestly pray for, and desire to endeavour a sound Agreement with his Majesty, so we conceive our selves bound to discover and asseverate to endeavour a sound Agreement as will prove dangerous and destructive to the Kirk of God in our Hands; and therefore, as we are confident that ye will be short in no Duty that ye owe to the King, or that we may procure a right Understanding or happy Settling betwixt his Majesty and this Kirk and Kingdom, so we also perswade our selves that ye will take heed of Snares, and discern well of the Counsels of all these who have been involved in the late Defection, and are not yet convinced of, nor humbled for the Offence given thereby.'

The Commissioners of the General Assembly, did at the same Time send this particular Instruction to their Commissioners at Breda. 'You shall not fail, for preventing and removing of all Questions and Debates anent the King's Oath, to declare by a Paper to his Majesty, That it doth not only import his Allowance and Approbation of the National Covenant and solemn League and Covenant, to his Subjects, but also that his own Swearing and Subscribing the same, and in the Words subjoynd thereto, imports his Allowance and Approbation of all the Heads and Articles thereof, in his own particular Judgment, and his Engagement to every one of them, as much as the Oath of any of the Subjects thereto, imports their Approbation and Engagement.'

By these Things we hope it is manifest and clear, that the Kirk of Scotland did require in the King, a discontinuing from his former Opposition to the Work of Reformation, before admitting him to the Exercise of his Royal Power, as a Thing necessary for the Security of Religion, and that they judged it not Duty, but Sin to do otherwise.

Fourthly. We shall show this to have been the common received Doctrine, and publick Judgment of the Kirk of Scotland, after the Treaty with the King, or after the King's Homecoming into Scotland; which appears first from the printed Declaration of the Commissioners of the General Assembly, the 13th August 1650. which speaks in this Manner: 'The Commission of the General Assembly considering, that there may be just Ground of Stumbling, from the King's Majesty's refusing to subscribe and emit the Declaration offered to him by the Committee of Estates, and Commissioners of the General Assembly, concerning his former Carriage, and his Resolution for the future, in reference to the Cause of God, and the Enemies and Friends thereof, do heretofore declare, that this Kirk and Kingdom do not own nor espouse any malignant Quarrel or Interest, but that they fight merely upon their former Grounds and Principles, and in Defence of the Cause of God, and of the Kingdom, as they have done these Twelve Years past; and therefore, as they disclaim all the Sin and Guilt of his House, so they would not own him nor his Interest, otherways than with Subordination to God, and so far as he owns and prosecutes the Cause of God and the Covenant, and likewise all the Enemies and Friends thereof.'

Secondly. It appears from the Cause of the Fast at Stirling condescended upon, First, by the Presbytery with the Army, and afterwards approved by the Commissioners of the General Assembly at Stirling, a little after the Defeat at Dunbar, in which it is offered, That we ought to mourn for the manifold Provocations of the King's House, which we fear are not truly repented of, nor forsaken by him to this Day, together with the crooked and precipitant Ways that were taken by sundry of our Statesmen for carrying on the Treaty with the King. Secondly. The Commissioners of the General Assembly, in a Remonstrance of theirs to the States, of the Date at Perth, 29th of November 1650 do exhort, 'That they would seriously lay to Heart any Sin or Guiltiness through sinful Precipitancy, and unstraight Designs and carnal Policy, in appointing Addresses for treating with the King, and in the Way of carrying on and closing the same, and what, upon serious Search, your Lordships shall find may give Glory to God, in an ingenuous Confession and Acknowledgment thereof, and sincere Humiliation before him for the same.'

Thirdly. The Causes of the Fast at Perth, condescended upon by the Commissioners of the General Assembly, for the King and his Family, 26th of December 1650. In which Causes, besides what relates to the King, his Royal Father, and his Royal Grandfather, are these Things relating to the King himself, the present King, 'His entering to tread the same Step, by closing a Treaty with the Popish Irish Rebels, who had shed so much Blood, and granting them not only their personal Liberty, but also the free Exercise of the Popish Religion, so that he might use them against his Protestant Subjects. 2^{dly}. By commissionating James Graham again to invade the Kingdom, who were striving to be faithful to the Cause and to his Majesty, and to give Commissions for sundry at Sea and Land for that End. 3^{dly}. By his refusing for a Time the just Satisfaction which was desired by the Kirk and Kingdom. 4^{thly}. His entertaining private Correspondences with Malignants and Enemies to the Cause, contrary to the Covenant, whereupon he was drawn at last to a publick and scandalous deserting of the publick Judicatories of this Kingdom, so contrary to the Treaty, his Oath, Declarations, and Confessions; whereupon followed many Offences and Inconveniences, and to joyn with Malignants and perverse Men, who were by his Warrant encouraged to take Arms at such a Time, to the hazarding of the Cause, fostering of Jealousies, and the disturbing the Peace of this Kingdom. These Things, say the Commissioners of the General Assembly, in the Causes of Humiliation, being sensibly laid out before the Lord, he is with fervent Prayers to be intreated to do away the Controversies he has against the King or his House for these Transgressions, and that he may be graciously pleased to bless the King's Person and Government.' These Causes of Fast at Stirling and Perth, and the Remonstrance cited, are to be found in the Registers of the Kirk.

In the last Place, we shall bring some Things which may also prove the same to have been the publick Judgment of this State or Kingdom of Scotland. First. The Parliament 1648. in their Declaration concerning their Resolutions for Religion, King and Kingdoms, in pursuance of the Ends of the Covenant; as they do all along acknowledge the first Motive of these Kingdoms engaging in a Solemn League and Covenant, to have been for Reformation and Defence of Religion; so in the 6th Page of that Declaration, as it stands printed in the Acts of Parliament, they do expressly declare, 'That they resolved not to put in his Majesty's Hands, or any other whatsoever, any such Power, whereby the Ends of the Covenant, or any one of them may be obstructed or opposed, Religion or Presbyterian Government endangered; but on the contrar, before an Agreement or Condition to be made with his Majesty, having found his Majesty's late Concessions and Offers concerning Religion not satisfactory, that he give Assurance by his solemn Oath under his Hand and Seal, that he shall for himself and his Successors give his Royal Assent, and agree to such Act or Acts of Parliament, and Bills, as shall be presented to him by his Parliaments of both or either Kingdoms respective, by enjoining the League and Covenant, and fully establishing Presbyterian Government, Directory of Worship, and Confession of Faith, in all his Dominions, and that his Majesty shall never make any Opposition to any of these, nor endeavour any Change thereof.' 2dly. The Parliament 1649. as they do in their second Act, January 5th, approve of the solemn publick Confession of Sins, and Engagement unto Duties; so do they in the 4th Act, of the Date 16th of January 1649. approve of the Desires, Supplications, Remonstrances, Declarations of the Kirk, and Representation of the Commissioners of the General Assembly, against the restoring the King without sufficient Security first had from him concerning Religion, and do condemn the unsound Gloss that is put upon the Covenant and Acts of the General Assembly, in the Close of the Declaration of the Parliament 1648. in these Things that concern our Duty to the King. 3dly. The Parliament 1649. in the Act of the 7th of February, anent the securing the Covenant, Religion and Peace of the Kingdom, doth provide, 'That before the King's Majesty who now is, or any of his Successors, shall be admitted to the Exercise of his Royal Power, they shall not only swear the Oath of Coronation, and his Allowance of the National Covenant, and Obligation to prosecute the Ends thereof in his Station and Calling, and that he shall for himself and his Successors, consent and agree to Acts of Parliament enjoining the same, and fully establish Presbyterian Government, Confessions of Faith, and Catechisms of this Church, and Parliament of this Kingdom, in all his Majesty's Dominions, and that he shall observe these in his own Practice and Family; and that he shall never make Opposition to any of these, nor endeavour any Change thereof: But it is also declared and ordained in the same Act, That before the King, who now is to be admitted to the Exercise of his Royal Power, he shall leave all Counsel and Counsellors prejudicial to Religion and to the National Covenant, and to the Solemn League and Covenant.' 4thly. The Parliament at Edinburgh, 18th May 1650. taking to Consideration the Invitation that was given to his Majesty by their Commissioners at Breda, in their Explanation of the Invitation, do declare, 'That the Assurance given to his Majesty therein, doth include the Condition of his Majesty's performing Satisfaction to the Desires of the Kingdom, according to the Four Demands which they sent with that Explanation: And in their Instructions sent at that Time to the Commissioners, they do expressly instruct them, that they shall not fail, for removing all Questions and Doubts about the King's Oath, to declare by a Paper to his Majesty, that it doth not only import, that the National Covenant, and the Solemn League and Covenant betaken by the Subjects, but also that his own swearing and subscribing the same, and the Words subjoyned thereto, imports his Approbation of all the Heads and Articles thereof in his own particular Judgment, and his Engagement to every one of them, as much as the Oath of any of the Subjects imports their Approbation and Engagement thereto.' And it is considerable, that in these Instructions they do require clear Satisfaction from his Majesty to their necessary Desires, and that they do declare, that without such Satisfaction, not only will that Joy and Cheerfulness, wherewith all his Majesty's good Subjects desire to receive him, be impeded, but also his Coronation be delayed, and this Kirk and Kingdom be necessitate to Declarations, which will be inconvenient both for his Majesty and them. For instructing these Things we refer to the Registers of the Kingdom.

Lastly. As the Parliament and Committee of Estates of this Kingdom, did not for a good While after his Majesty's coming into Scotland, admit the King to the Exercise of his Royal Power; so the Committee of Estates, in order to the necessary Security of Religion, did, with Advice of the General Assembly, judge it necessary to desire him to subscribe a Declaration, concerning his former Carriage, and Resolutions for the future, in reference to the Cause of God, and the Enemies and Friends thereof; and upon his Majesty's refusing to subscribe that Declaration of the Commissioners of the General Assembly, of the 13th of August 1650. did approve of the Declaration, and heartily concur therein, as is evident from their own Act subjoyned thereto, and published therewith.

From these Things, we hope, it is manifest, that it was the common received Doctrine of the Church, and the publick Judgment of this Kingdom, concerning the necessary Security of Religion, that it was not our Duty, but our Sin, to close a Treaty with the King for invelling him with the Exercise of his Royal Power, he still continuing in his former known Opposition to the Work of Reformation.

MINUTES of the Process against Mr. James Guthrie. N^o. XXI. D.

AT Edinburgh, 11th April, 1661. In the criminal Pursuit and Indictment of Sedition and Treason, at the Instance of Sir John Fletcher his Majesty's Advocate for his Majesty's Interest, against Mr. James Guthrie sometime Minister at Stirling, before the Lord Commissioner the Earl of Middleton, and the Three Estates of Parliament; appeared for the King's Majesty's Interest the said Sir John Fletcher; and for and with the Pannel at the Bar, Mr. Robert Burnet, Mr. John Cuninghame, Mr. Andrew Birnie, and Mr. George Mackenzie, Advocates.

After reading of the Libel, Defences, Replies and Duplies, in open Parliament, his Majesty's Advocate declared he insisted against the Pannel upon the first Article, concerning the Remonstrance, without Prejudice of the rest, so far allenarly as he did own and homologate the same, by framing the 5th and 6th Steps of the 9th Article of the Causes of God's Wrath, and Explanation thereof; and declared he did not insist upon the Act of the Committee of Estates, in Anno 1650. condemning the Remonstrance, nor upon the Act of Parliament in Anno 1651. ratifying the said Act of the Committee of Estates, because they have not been, nor are produced for instructing that Part of the Libel. The Pannel at the Bar, being enquired concerning his Accession to the Causes of Wrath, acknowledges, that he was one that framed the same.

Edinburgh, 12th April, 1661.

THE Estates of Parliament, after advising the Relevancy of the whole Process, do repel the Alledgances against the first Two Articles of the Dittay, concerning the Remonstrance and Causes of Wrath; and notwithstanding thereof, find the Libel, as to those Two Articles thereof, relevant to bring the Pannel under the Compass of the Acts of Parliament made against Slanderers, viz. 134 Act, Parl. 8. James VI. the 205 Act. 14 Parl. James VI. and other Acts mentioned in this last Act. As likewise the said Estates of Parliament repel the Alledgances against the Third and Fourth Articles of the Dittay, concerning the Meeting libelled, and the Petition and Instructions, and others done therein; and notwithstanding thereof, find the Meeting, with the Petition, Instructions, and what else was in that Meeting, to have been unlawful and seditious: And also the said Estates of Parliament repel the Alledgance against the Fifth Article of the Dittay, concerning the declining his Majesty's Authority, and protesting for Remeed of Law against his Majesty and Committee of Estates, for a pretended Gravamen; and notwithstanding thereof, find the Declinator containing the Protestation falls under the 129 Act of the Parliament 1584. made anent the King's Majesty's Royal Power over all Estates.

Edinburgh, 15th April, 1661.

THE Lord Advocate declares, for proving the Articles of the Dittay, he repeats the Pannel's Confession at the Bar, and throughout the whole Defences, with the Remonstrance, Causes of Wrath, Petition, Instructions, Declinators, and others produced, all acknowledged, written, or subscribed by the Petitioner's own Hand, and renounces further Probation.

Thereafter, the Estates of Parliament having this Day again considered the former Interlocutors, as also having considered the Pannel's Confession at the Bar, and extant throughout his whole Defences, anent his Accession to the Pamphlet, entituled, The Causes of God's Wrath, wherein one of the Causes is mentioned to be the rejecting of the Remonstrance, and having considered the said Two Pamphlets themselves, they find the Libel sufficiently proven thereby, in so far as relates to the First and Second Articles; as also having considered the Petition, Instructions and others done in that Meeting, mentioned in the Third and Fourth Article, and his judicial Acknowledgment, that he was at the Meeting, and Subscriber of the Petition, and Writer of the Instructions; they find these Articles also proven: And having considered also the Declinator containing the Protestation, with the other Protestation, both acknowledged by the Pannel, and subscribed with his Hand; the Estates of Parliament find the Fifth Article thereby proven.

The Lord Advocate takes Instruments upon the Dittay being found relevant and proven, and protests; That the Pains contained in the Acts of Parliament may be inflicted upon the Pannel.

GLENCAIRN Cancell. I. P. D. Parl.

At Edinburgh, 28th May, 1661.

THE Estates of Parliament find, That Mr. James Guthrie, sometime Minister at Stirling, has committed the Crime of Treason against the King's Majesty, his sovereign Authority and Royal Government, and has slandered his Majesty's Person, State and Government, in so far as the said Mr. James had Accession to the framing of a Pamphlet called, The Causes of God's Wrath, wherein one of the Causes is mentioned to be the rejecting of the Remonstrance, and that thereby he has contravened the 205 Act 14 Parl. James VI. and the 10 Act of the 10 Parl. James VI. and incurred the Pain of Death therein contained: And likewise, the said Mr. James did contrive and petition at a Meeting of some Ministers in the Month of 1660. last bypast, which Meeting, Petition and Instructions, and what else was done at the said Meeting, the Estates of Parliament find unlawful and scandalous; and in so far as the said Mr. James did decline his Majesty's Authority, and protested for Remeed of Law against his Majesty and Committee of Estates, for a pretended Gravamen, and that thereby he has contravened the 1 Act 8 Parl. James VI. in Anno 1584. and incurred the Pain of Treason therein contained: And therefore, upon the Ground of the foresaid treasonable Crimes and Acts of Parliament abovementioned, thereby contravened, the King's Majesty, with Advice and Consent of the Estates of Parliament, finds and declares, That the said Mr. James Guthrie has incurred the Pain of High Treason, and other Pains contained in the said Acts, and decerns and ordains him to underlie the Punishment due to Traitors, viz. the Tinsel and Confiscation of his Life, and of all his Lands, Goods, moveable and immoveable, Offices, Dignities, Sums of Money, and all Rights and others whatsoever belonging to him, or which may any Way pertain or belong to him, and ordains the same to be confiscate and appertain to the King's Majesty, and to remain for ever with his Majesty in Property; and that he be hanged to Death at the Cross of Edinburgh, upon Saturday next, the 1st Day of June, at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, as a Traitor against his Majesty; and thereafter his Head be cutted off, and affixed on the Nether-bow of Edinburgh, and that presently his Arms be delete out of the Books of Heraldry, and torn in Pieces by the Lion-herald, at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and there to be left torn and ranveried, as a Testimony of the vile and abominable Treason; and declares his Children and Posterity incapable in all Time coming, to brunk, possess, or enjoy any Office, Dignities, Successions, Possessions, Lands, Goods, moveable and immoveable, or any other Thing within this Kingdom.

At Edinburgh, 28th May, 1661.

THIS Decreet read and voted in Parliament, approven and pronounced, touched with the Royal Sceptre, and appointed to be recorded, published, and put in Execution accordingly.

CRAWFORD I.P.D. Parl.

Mr. James Guthrie his last Speech, June 1. 1661. N^o. XXII.

MEn and Brethren, I fear many of you are come hither to gaze rather than to be edified by the Carriage and last Words of a dying Man: But if any have an Ear to hear, as I hope some of this great Confluence have, I desire your Audience to a few Words. I am come hither to lay down this earthly Tabernacle and mortal Flesh of mine, and, I bless God, through his Grace, I do it willingly, and not by Constraint. I say, I suffer willingly: If I had been so minded, I might have made a Diversion, and not been a Prisoner; but being conscious to my self of nothing worthy of Death, or of Bonds, I would not stain my Innocency with the Suspicion of Guiltiness, by my withdrawing: Neither have I wanted Opportunities and Advantages to escape since I was Prisoner, not by the Fault of my Keepers (God knoweth) but otherwise; but neither for this had I Light or Liberty, lest I should reflect upon the Lord's Name, and offend the Generation of the Righteous: And if some Men have not been mistaken, or dealt deceitfully in telling me so, I might have avoided not only the Severity of the Sentence, but also had much Favour and Countenance by complying with the Courses of the Time. But I durst not redeem my Life with the loss of my Integrity, God knoweth, I durst not; and that since I was Prisoner he hath so holden me by the Hand, that he never suffered me to bring it in Debate in my inward Thoughts, much less to propone or hearken to any Overture of that Kind. I did judge it better to suffer than to sin; and therefore I am come hither to lay down my Life this Day, and I bless God I die not as a Fool; not that I have any Thing wherein to glory in my self: I acknowledge that I am a Sinner, yea, one of the greatest and vilest that has owned a Profession of Religion, and one of the most unworthy that has preached the Gospel. My Corruptions have been strong and many, and have made me a Sinner in all Things, yea, even in following my Duty; and therefore Righteousness have I none of mine own, all is vile. But I do believe that Jesus Christ came into the World to save Sinners, whereof I am chief: Through Faith in his Righteousness and Blood have I obtained Mercy; and through him, and him alone, have I the Hope of a blessed Conquest and Victory over Sin and Satan, and Hell and Death, and that I shall attain unto the Resurrection of the Just, and be made Partaker of eternal Life. I know in whom I have believed, and that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that Day. I have preached Salvation through his Name, and as I have preached so do I believe, and do commend the Riches of his free Grace and Faith in his Name unto you all, as the only Way whereby ye can be saved.

And as I bless the Lord that I die not as a Fool, so also that I die not for Evil-doing. Not a few of you may haply judge, that I suffer as a Thief, or as a Murderer, or as an Evil-doer, or as a Busy-body in other Mens Matters. It was the Lot of the Lord Jesus Christ himself, and hath been of many of his precious Servants and People, to suffer by the World as Evil-doers; and as my Soul scareth not at it, but desireth to rejoyce in being brought into Conformity with my blessed Head, and so blessed a Company, in this Thing; and so I desire and pray that I may be to none of you to Day upon this account a Stone of Stumbling, and a Rock of Offence. Blessed is he that shall not be offended at Jesus Christ, and his poor Servants and Members, because of their being condemned as Evil-doers by the World. God is my Record, that in these Things for which Sentence of Death hath passed against me, I have a good Conscience. I bless God they are not Matters of Compliance with Sectaries, or Designs, or Practices against his Majesty's Person or Government, or the Person or Government of his Royal Father: My Heart (I bless God) is conscious unto no Disloyalty; nay, loyal I have been, and I commend it unto you to be loyal and obedient in the Lord. True Piety is the Foundation of true Loyalty: A wicked Man may be a Flatterer and a Time-server, but he will never be a loyal Subject. But to return to my Purpose; The Matters for which I am condemned are Matters belonging to my Calling and Function, as a Minister of the Gospel, such as the Discovery and reproof of Sin, the pressing and the holding fast of the Oath of God in the Covenant, and preserving and carrying on the Work of Religion and Reformation according thereto, and denying to acknowledge the civil Magistrate, as the proper competent immediate Judge in Causes Ecclesiastical: That in all these Things (which a God so ordering by his gracious Providence) are the Grounds of my Indictment and Death, I have a good Conscience, as having walked therein according to the Light and Rule of God's Word, and as did become a Minister of the Gospel.

I do also bless the Lord, that I do not die as one not desired. I know that by not a few, I neither have been nor am desired. It hath been my Lot to have been a Man of Contention and Sorrow; but it is my Comfort, that for my own Things I have not contended, but for the Things of Jesus Christ, for what relateth to his Interest and Work, and the well-being of his People. In Order to the preserving and promoting of these, I did protest against, and stood in Opposition unto these late Assemblies at St. Andrews, Dundee, and Edinburgh, and the publick Resolutions, for bringing the Malignant Party into the Judicatories and Armies of this Kingdom, conceiving the same contrary to the Word of God, and to our solemn Covenants and Engagements; and to be an Inlet to the Defection, and to the Ruin and Destruction of the Work of God. And it is now manifest to many Consciences, that I have not been therein mistaken, nor was not fighting against a Man of Straw: I was also desirous, and did use some poor Endeavours, to have the Church of God purged of insufficient and scandalous and corrupt Ministers and Elders; for these Things I have been mistaken by some, and hated by others: But I bless the Lord, as I had the Testimony of my own Conscience, so I was and am therein approven in the Consciences of many of the Lord's precious Servants and People; and however so little I may die desired by some, yet by these I know I do die desired, and their Approbation and Prayers, and Affection is of more Value with me, than the Contradiction or Reproach, or Hatred of many others; the Love of the one I cannot recompense, and the Mistake or Hatred or Reproach of the other I do with all my Heart forgive; and wherein I have offended any of them, do beg their Mercy and Forgiveness. I do from my Soul wish that my Death may be profitable unto both, that the one may be confirmed and established in the straight Ways of the Lord; and that the other, if the Lord so will, may be convinced, and cease from these Things that are not good, and do not edify, but destroy.

One Thing I would warn you all of, that God is wroth, yea, very wroth with Scotland, and threatneth to depart and remove his Candlestick. The Causes of his Wrath are many, and would to God it were not one great Cause, that Causes of Wrath are despised and rejected of Men: Consider the Cause that is recorded, Jer. 36. and the Consequence of it, and tremble and fear. I cannot but also say, that there is a great Addition and Increase of Wrath, 1st. By that Deluge of Profanity that overfloweth all the Land, and hath Reins loosened unto it every where, in so far that many have lost, not only all Use and Exercise of Religion, but even of Morality, and that common Civility that is to be found amongst the Heathen. 2^d. By that horrible Treachery and Perjury that is in the Matter of the Covenant, and Cause of God, and Work of Reformation: Be astonished, O ye Heavens, at this, and be ye horribly afraid, and be ye very desolate, saith the Lord; for my People have committed two great Evils, they have forsaken me the Fountain of Waters, and hewed them out Cisterns, broken Cisterns, that can hold no Water: Shall he break the Covenant and prosper? shall the Throne of Iniquity have Fellowship with God, which frameth Mischief by a Law? I fear the Lord be about to bring a Sword on these Lands, which shall avenge the Quarrel of his Covenant. 3^d. Horrible Ingratitude; the Lord, after Ten Years Oppression and Bondage, hath broken the Yoke of Strangers from off our Necks: But what do we render unto him for this Goodness? Most of the Fruit of our Delivery is, to work Wickedness, and to strengthen our selves to do Evil. 4th. A most dreadful Idolatry and sacrificing to the Creature; we have changed the Glory of the incorruptible God, into the Image of a corruptible Man, in whom many have placed almost all their Salvation and Desire, and have turned that which might have been a Blessing unto us (being kept in a due Line of Subordination under God) into an Idol of Jealousie, by preferring it before him. God is also wroth with a Generation of carnal, corrupt, Time-serving Ministers; I know and bear Testimony, that in the Church of Scotland there is a true and faithful Ministry: Blessed be God, we have yet many who study their Duty, and desire to be found faithful to their Lord and Master; and I pray you to honour, and reverence, and esteem much of these for their Work's sake; and I pray them to be encouraged in their Lord and Master, who is with them, to make them as iron Pillars and brazen Walls, and as a strong fenced City in the faithful following of their Duty: But oh! that there were not too many who mind earthly Things, and are Enemies to the Cross of Jesus Christ, who push with the Side and Shoulder, who strengthen the Hands of Evil-doers, who make themselves Transgressors, by studying to build again what they did formerly, warrantably destroy; I mean Prelacy, and the Ceremonies, and the Service-book, a Mystery of Iniquity that works amongst us, whose Steps lead unto the House of the great Whore Babylon, the Mother of Fornication; or whosoever else he be that buildeth this Jericho again, let him take heed of the Curse of Hiel the Bethelite, and of that flying Roll threatned, Zech. 5. And let all Ministers take heed that they watch, and be stedfast in the Faith, and quit themselves like Men, and be strong; and give faithful and seasonable Warning, concerning Sin and Duty. Many of the Lord's People do sadly complain of the Fainting and Silence of many Watchmen, and it concerneth them to consider what God calleth for at their Hands in such a Day: Silence now in a Watchman, when he is so much called to speak, and give his Testimony upon the Peril of his Life, is doubtless a great Sin. The Lord open the Mouths of his Servants, to speak his Word with all Boldness, that Covenant-breaking may be discovered and reprov'd, and that the Kingdom of Jesus Christ may not be supplanted, nor the Souls of his People be destroyed without a Witness. I have but a few Words more to add: All that are profane amongst you, I exhort them to Repentance, for the Day of the Lord's Vengeance hathneth, and is near; but there is yet a Door of Mercy open for you, if ye will not despise the Day of Salvation. All that are Maligners, and Reproachers, and Persecutors of Godliness, and of such as live godly, take heed what ye do; it will be hard for you to kick against the Pricks; you make your selves the But of the Lord's Fury, and his flaming Indignation, if you do not cease from, and repent of all your hard-Speeches and ungodly Deeds. All that are natural, and indifferent, and lukewarm Professors, be zealous and repent, lest the Lord spue you out of his Mouth. You that lament after the Lord, and mourn for all the Abominations that are done in this City and in the Land, and take Pleasure in the Stones and Dust of Sion, cast not away your Confidence, but be comforted and encouraged in the Lord; he will yet appear to your Joy: God hath not cast away his People nor Work in Britain and Ireland, I hope it shall once more revive by the Power of his Spirit, and take Root downward, and bear Fruit upward, and of this I am now confident. There is yet a holy Seed and precious Remnant, whom God will preserve and bring forth: But how long or dark our Night may be, I do not know, the Lord shorten it for the Sake of his Chosen. In the mean while be ye patient and stedfast, immoveable, always abounding in the Work of the Lord, and in Love one to another; beware of Snares which are strawed thick; cleave to the Covenant and Work of Reformation; do not decline the Cross of Jesus Christ, choose rather to suffer Affliction with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleasures of Sin for a Season, and account the Reproach of Christ greater Riches, than all the Treasure of the World. Let my Death grieve none of you, it will be more profitable and advantageous, both for me and for you, and for the Church of God, and for Christ's Interest and Honour, than my Life could have been. I forgive all Men the Guilt of it, and I desire you to do so also: Pray for them that persecute you, and bless them that curse you, bless, I say, and curse not. I die in the Faith of the Apostles and primitive Christians, and Protestant Reformed Churches, particularly of the Church of Scotland, whereof I am a Member and Minister. I do bear my Witness and Testimony to the Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government of the Church of Scotland, by Kirk-sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies; Popery and Prelacy, and all the Trumpery of Service and Ceremonies, that wait upon them, I do abhor. I do bear my Witness unto the National Covenant of Scotland, and solemn League and Covenant betwixt the Three Kingdoms of Scotland, England and Ireland: These sacred, solemn, publick Oaths of God, I believe can be loos'd nor dispensed with, by no Person or Party or Power upon Earth; but are still binding upon these Kingdoms, and will be for ever hereafter; and are ratified and sealed by the Conversion of many Thousand Souls, since our entering thereinto. I bear my Witness to the Protestation against the controverted Assemblies, and the publick Resolutions, to the Testimonies given against the Sectaries, against the Course of Backsliding and Defection that is now on foot in the Land, and all the Branches and Parts thereof, under whatsoever Name or Notion, or acted by whatsoever Party or Person. And in the last place, I bear my Witness to the Cross of Jesus Christ, and that I never had Cause, nor have Cause this Day to repent, because of any Thing I have suffered, or can now suffer for his Name: I take God to record upon my Soul, I would not exchange this Scaffold with the Palace or Mitre of the greatest Prelate in Britain. Blessed be God who hath shewed Mercy to such a Wretch, and hath revealed his Son in me, and made me a Minister of the everlasting Gospel, and that he hath deigned, in the Midst of much Contradiction from Satan and the World, to seal my Ministry upon the Hearts of not a few of his People, and especially in the Station wherein I was last, I mean the Congregation and Presbytery of Stirling; and I hope the Lord will visit that Congregation and Presbytery once more, with faithful Pastors. God forgive the poor empty Man that did there intrude upon my Labours, and hath made a Prey of many poor Souls, and exposed others to Reproach and Oppression, and a Famine of the Word of the Lord. God forgive the Misleaders of that Part of the poor People, who tempted them to reject their own Pastor, and to admit of Intruders; and the Father of Mercies pity that poor misled People, and the Lord visit the Congregation and Presbytery of Stirling once more with faithful Pastors, and grant that the Work and People of God, may be revived through all Britain, and over all the World. Jesus Christ is my Light and my Life, my Righteousness, my Strength, and my Salvation, and all my Desire: Him, O him I do with all the Strength of my Soul commend unto you: Blessed are they that are not offended in him; blessed are they that trust in him. Bless him, O my Soul, from henceforth even for ever. Rejoyce, rejoyce all ye that love him, be patient and rejoyce in Tribulation: Blessed are you, and blessed shall you be for ever and ever; everlasting Righteousness and eternal Salvation is yours; all are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. Remember me, O Lord, with the Favour thou bearest to thy People; O visit me with thy Salvation, that I may see the Good of thy Chosen, that I may rejoyce in the Gladness of thy Nation, that I may glory with thine Inheritance. Now let thy Servant depart in Peace, since mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation.

Captain Govan's Speech upon the Scaffold at his Death, June 1st, 1661. N^o. XXIII.

Gentlemen and Countrymen,

I Am here to suffer this Day; and that I may declare to you the Cause, It is for laying down my Arms at Hamilton, as did all the rest of the Company that was there. What was I, that King and Parliament should have taken Notice of me, being a private Boy thrust forth into the Fields, who was not worthy to be noticed by any? for as I was obscure in my self, so were my Actions not conspicuous: Yet it pleased the Lord to imploy me as a Mean and Instrument (unworthy as I was) for carrying on a Part of the late Reformation; which I did faithfully endeavour in my Station, not going beyond it; for which I am to suffer here this Day.

Licentious People have taken Occasion to calumniate me this Time past, in saying I was an Instrument of his late Majesty's Death, and that I should have said, I was on the Scaffold in the Time of his Execution; all which I do here deny in the Presence of almighty God, to whom I must shortly answer: And before you all, I do here protest, as I hope for Salvation, that I was not instrumental in that, either in Word or Deed; but, on the contrary, it was fore against my Heart, who was still a Wellwisher to his Majesty, and even wished he might be unto thir Lands as David, Solomon and Josiah: But what could a simple Protestation of one who is the least among Men do? I do indeed remember I was honoured to bring up Montrose his Standard through thir Streets, and deliver it to the Parliament, in which I glory, as Thousands more than I did at that Time, for I was but an Executioner, but now I am a Sufferer for those Things.

Let me now speak a Word to some Sorts of People. First of all, you that are profane, leave off your Profanity, forbear Sin and seek Mercy, otherwise you will undoubtedly repent it when too late; for ere long you must answer, as I am shortly to do, before a just God. Again, to you Civilians and indifferent Folks, who if your own private earthly Interest prosper, do not care how the Affairs of Christ and his Church go; know that that will not do your Turn, you must bear Testimony for God, be zealous for his Cause, and repent now of your Sins; so shall you avoid that Curse pronounced against the lukewarm Laodiceans, I will spue you out of my Mouth. As to the really godly, I would say this, Be not afraid nor astonished to bear Testimony, and suffer for his Truth.

As for my self, it pleased the Lord, in the Fourteenth Year of my Age, to manifest his Love to me, and now it is about Twenty four Years since, all which Time I professed the Truth, which I suffer for, and bear Testimony to at this Day; and am not afraid of the Cross upon that account: It is sweet, it is sweet, otherwise how durst I look upon the Corps of him who hangs there, with Courage, and smile upon those Sticks and that Gibbet, as the Gates of Heaven. I die confident in the Faith of the Prophets and Apostles, bearing my Testimony to the Gospel, as it is now preached by an honest Ministry in this City; tho' alas! there be a corrupt Generation among the Ministry.

I bear witness with my Blood to the persecuted Government of this Church, in General Assemblies, Synods and Presbyteries, and also to the Protestation against the publick Resolutions. I bear witness to the Covenants, National and solemn League, and now am to seal these with my Blood. I likewise testify against all Popery, Prelacy, Idolatry, Superstition and the Service-book, for I have not taken a little Pains in searching out those Things, and have found them to be but the Relicks of the Romish Superstition and Idolatry, left in King Henry VIII. his Time, who, tho' it pleased the Lord to make use of him for beginning the Work of Reformation, yet he was no good Man.

The King's Majesty's Proclamation concerning Church-affairs. June 10th 1661. N^o. XXIV.

CHARLES R.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Scotland, England, France and Ire'land, Defender of the Faith, To Our Lovits, Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren Herald, Messengers, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, greeting. Assoon as it pleased almighty God, by his own outstretched Arm, wonderfully to bring Us back in Peace, to the Exercise of Our Royal Government, We did apply Our self to the restoring of Our Kingdoms to that Liberty and Happinefs which they enjoyed under the Government of Our Royal Ancestors; and in order thereunto, We called a Parliament in that Our ancient Kingdom of Scotland, as the most proper Mean to settle the same, after so many Years Troubles, and to restore its ancient Liberty, after those grievous Sufferings, and that heavy Bondage imposed of late by bloody Usurpers, because of their Loyalty expressed to Us. And whereas the Estates of Parliament of that Our ancient Kingdom, have so fully, freely, and unanimously vindicated their own Honour, in asserting Our Royal Power, Prerogative, the Privileges of Our Crown, and Our Supremacy over all Persons in all Causes, as absolutely as ever any of Our Royal Progenitors, Kings of Scotland, at any Time possessed, used and exercised the same, not only by taking away of these Invasions, brought on by the Iniquity of the Times, during the late Troubles; but also by their rescinding all those pretended Parliaments, wherein any Force might have appeared to have been put on Our Royal Father, since the Year 1633. reserving private Rights, and indemnifying Our Subjects, for what was done during that Time: And whereas Our Parliament, by their Act the Twenty ninth of March, hath declared, That it is Our full and firm Resolution, to maintain the true Protestant Religion, in its Purity of Doctrine and Worship, as it was established within that Our Kingdom, during the Reigns of Our Royal Father and Grandfather of blessed Memory, and that We will be careful to promote the Power of Godliness, to encourage the Exercises of Religion, both publick and private, and to suppress all Profaneness and disorderly Walking; and for that end, will give all due Countenance and Protection to the Ministers of the Gospel, they containing themselves within the Bounds and Limits of their Ministerial Calling, and behaving themselves with that Submission and Obedience to Our Authority and Commands, that is suitable to the Allegiance and Duty of good Subjects. And as to the Government of the Church, That We will make it Our Care to settle and secure the same in such a Frame as shall be most agreeable to the Word of God, most suitable to Monarchical Government, and most complying with the publick Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom: And in the mean Time, that We do allow the present Administration by Sessions, Presbyteries and Synods (they keeping within Bounds, and behaving themselves as said is) and that notwithstanding of the Act past that Day, rescissory of all pretended Parliaments since the Year 1633. Therefore We have thought fit, by this Our Proclamation, not only to declare Our gracious Acceptance of these ample Testimonies of the Duty and Affection of that Our Parliament, by which the World may take Notice, how unanimously loyal that Kingdom is, and how hearty in Our Service, of which We Our self was ever confident: But also to make known Our firm Resolution, to maintain and preserve that Our Kingdom in their just Liberties; and likewise to make good what Our Parliament have declared in Our Name, as to Matters of Religion. And considering how much Our Interest and the Quiet of that Kingdom is concerned, in the right Settlement and Peace of that Our Church, which through the Confusions of these latter Times, hath been much discomposed, We do purpose, after mature Deliberation, with such as We shall call, to imploy Our Royal Authority, for settling and securing the Government and the Administration thereof, in such a Way as may best conduce to the glory of God, to the Good of Religion, to Unity, Order, and to the publick Peace and Satisfaction of Our Kingdom: And in the mean Time, We will and command all Our loving Subjects, Ministers and others, as they will answer at their Peril, to abstain from meddling with what may concern the publick Government of that Our Church, either by Preaching, Remonstrances, Warnings, Declarations, Acts, or Petitions of Church-judicatories, or any other Way; and to compose themselves to that Quietness and inoffensive Deportment, which their Duty to Us, and the Peace of the Church doth require. Our Will is herefore, and We charge you straitly and command, That, incontinent these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-crofs of Our Burgh of Edinburgh, and to the remanent Market-crofses of the Head-burghs of that Our Kingdom, and there, by open Proclamation, in Our Name and Authority, make Publication hereof to all Our Lieges and Subjects, wherethrough none pretend Ignorance of the same, as you will answer to Us. The which to do We commit to you conjunctly and severally, Our full Power by these Our Letters, delivering the same by you duly execute, and indorsed again to the Bearer. Given under Our Hand at Whitehall, the Tenth Day of June, 1661. and of Our Reign the thirteenth Year.

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE

Act of Council at Edinburgh, the 6th Day of September, 1661. N^o. XXV.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having considered his Majesty's Letter, of the Date, at Whitehall the Fourteenth Day of August last, bearing, That whereas his Majesty, by his Letter to the Presbytery of Edinburgh, in the Month of August, One thousand six hundred and sixty Years, declared his Royal Purpose, to maintain the Government of the Church of Scotland settled by Law. And the Estates of Parliament of this Kingdom, having since that Time, not only rescinded all the Acts since the Troubles began, relating to that Government, but also declared all those Parliaments null and void, leaving to his Majesty the settling of Church-government: Therefore, in Compliance with that Act rescissory, and in pursuance of his Majesty's Proclamation of the Tenth of June last, and in Contemplation of the Inconveniencies that that accompanied and issued from the Church-government, as it hath been exercised these Twenty three Years past, and of the Unsuitableness thereof to his Majesty's monarchical Estate, and of the sadly experienced Confusions, which, during these late Troubles, have been caused by the Violences done to his Majesty's Royal Prerogative, and to the Government Civil and Ecclesiastical, established by unquestionable Authority: His Majesty, having Respect to the Glory of God, and the good and Interest of the Protestant Religion, and being zealous of the Order, Unity, Peace and Stability of the Church within this Kingdom, and of its better Harmony with the Government of the Churches of England and Ireland, hath been pleased, after mature Deliberation, to declare unto his Council, his firm Resolution to intetpose his Royal Authority, for restoring of this Church to its right Government by Bishops, as it was by Law before the late Troubles, during the Reigns of his Majesty's Royal Father and Grandfather of blessed Memory, and as it now stands settled by Law, and that the Rents belonging to the several Bishopricks and Deanries, be restored and made useful to the Church, according to Justice and the standing Law; have therefore, in obedience of, and conform to his Majesty's Royal Pleasure aforesaid, ordained, and by these presents Ordain the Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Pursevants and Messengers of Arms, to pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh and other Royal Burrows of the Kingdom, and there by open Proclamation, to make Publication of this his Majesty's Royal Pleasure, for restoring the Church of this Kingdom to its right Government by Bishops; and in his Majesty's Name, to require all his good Subjects, to compose themselves to a cheerful Acquiescence and Obedience to the same, and to his Majesty's sovereign Authority now exercised within this Kingdom. And that none of them presume, upon any Pretence whatsoever, by discourging, preaching, reviling, or any irregular and unlawful Way, the endeavouring to alienate the Affections of his Majesty's good Subjects, or dispose them to an evil Opinion of his Majesty or his Government, or to the Disturbance of the Peace of the Kingdom, and to inhibit and discharge the assembling of Ministers in their several Synodical Meetings, until his Majesty's further Pleasure therein be known: Commanding hereby, all Sheriffs, Bailies of Bailiaries, Stewards of Stewartries and their Deputes, all Justices of Peace, and Magistrates and Council of Burrows, and all other publick Ministers, to be careful within their several Bounds and Jurisdictions, to see this Act punctually obeyed: And if they shall find any Person or Persons, upon any Pretexs whatsoever, by discourging, preaching, reviling, or otherwise, as aforesaid, failing in their due Obedience hereunto, or doing any Thing in the contrary thereof, that they forthwith commit them to Prison, till his Majesty's Privy Council, after Information of the Offence, give further Order therein. And hercof the Sheriffs, and others aforementioned, are to have a special Care, as they will answer upon their Duty and Allegiance to his Majesty. And further, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do hereby inhibit and discharge all Persons liable in Payment of any of the Rents formerly belonging to the Bishopricks and Deanries, from paying of the Rents of this present Year, One thousand six hundred and sixty one Years, or in Time coming, or any Part thereof, to any Person whatsoever, until they receive new Order thereanent from his Majesty or his Council: And ordain these Presents to be printed and published, as said is, that none may pretend Ignorance of the same.

At Edinburgh, 9th of January, 1662. N^o. XXVI. A.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having considered his Majesty's Letter, of the Date, at Whitehall the 28th of December last, 1661. bearing, That whereas by the Advice and Consent of the Parliament, his Majesty did allow the Administration of the Church-government of this Kingdom, by Sessions, Presbyteries and Synods, notwithstanding of the Act Rescissory, until his Majesty should take care for the better settling of the Government thereof: And that having, by a late Proclamation, of the Date the 6th of September 1661. declared his Royal Pleasure for restoring the ancient and legal Government of the Church, by Archbishops and Bishops, as it was exercised in the Year 1637. and that in pursuance of that Resolution, his Majesty hath nominated and presented Persons to the several Bishopricks of this Kingdom, of whom some have been lately consecrated, and invested with the same Dignities, Church-power and Authority, which was formerly competent to the Archbishops and Bishops of this Church, in the Reigns of his Royal Grandfather and Father, of blessed Memory; and that the Allowance of the Administration of this Church, in the way it hath been, since the violent Interruption of Episcopal Government, being inconsistent with the same now established, is now of it self void and expired, as being only for a Time, till his Majesty should settle and secure Church-government in a Frame most suitable to Monarchy, and complying with the Peace of the Kingdom; and so the said Allowance should be of no further Force and Continuance, but the Jurisdiction and Exercise of Church-government should be ordered in the respective Synods, Presbyteries and Sessions of this Church, by the Appointment and Authority of the Archbishops and Bishops thereof, according to the standing Laws, and their known Privilege, and Practice conform thereto: And that special Care be taken that all due Reverence and Respect be given by all the Subjects, to the Archbishops and Bishops of the Church, and that they have all Countenance, Assistance and Encouragement, from the Nobility, Gentry and others, in the Discharge of their Office and Service to his Majesty in the Church: And that strict Notice be taken of all and every one who shall presume to reflect or expresse any Disrespect to their Persons, Function or Authority, with which they are invested; which his Majesty requires to be intimate to the whole Lieges by Proclamation, discharging all Ecclesiastical Meetings in Synods, Presbyteries or Sessions, until they be authorized and ordered by the Archbishops and Bishops, upon their Entry unto the Government of their respective Sees, which is to be done speedily: Therefore, in obedience of, and conform to his Majesty's Royal Pleasure and Command, have ordained, and by these Presents ordain the Lyon King at Armes, and his Brethren Heralds, Pursevants, and Messengers at Arms, to pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and there, by open Proclamation, to make Publication of his Majesty's Royal Pleasure foresaid; discharging all Ecclesiastical Meetings in Synods, Presbyteries and Sessions, until they be authorized and ordered by the Archbishops and Bishops, upon their entering unto the Government of their respective Sees, as said is; and to require all his Majesty's Subjects of whatsoever Rank, Quality or Degree they be, to give all due Reverence and Respect unto the Archbishops and Bishops; and that all the Nobility, Gentry and Burroughs, Sheriffs of Shires, Stewards of Stewartries, Bailies of Regalities, Magistrates of Burghs, Justices of Peace, and other publick Ministers, within their respective Bounds and Jurisdictions, at all Times, give all Countenance, Assistance and Encouragement to them, in the Discharge of their Office and Service to his Majesty in the Church: With Certification, that if any shall presume to reflect, or express any Disrespect to their Persons, Function, or Authority with which they are invested, they shall be severely and exemplarily punished, according to the Nature and Quality of their Offence. And ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, as said is, and other Places needful, that none may pretend Ignorance.

Address to Parliament from the Presbytery of Kirkcudbright. N^o. XXVI. B.

‘ Although we have no Desire to appear in publick View, but incline rather to weep in secret, and pour out our Complaints and Supplications in Zion's behalf, before the Lord, who sees the Afflictions of his People, and hears their Cry; yet having this happy Opportunity of your Honours being assembled in this present Parliament, under his most excellent Majesty our dear and dread Sovereign, (the Fruits of whose fatherly Care and gracious Inclination to relieve the oppressed, and refresh the wearied, conveyed to us by your Honours Endeavours, we hopefully expect to taste of) we should be unfaithful to God and his Cause, undutiful to our Sovereign, cruel to our selves, and to the present and following Generations, if we should let the present Occasion slip by in deep Silence, not making so much as a Mint to grope out our Grievances before your Honours, who in the Lord's Providence seem to be brought together for such a Time as this, that Enlargement may arise by you, as noble and worthy Instruments, unto the People and Work of God.

‘ We shall forbear to mention the Height that the glorious Work of Reformation had attained to in this Kirk, both in our Forefathers Time, and especially in our own, in this Land. All Monuments of Idolatry, all Superfluity of pompous Ceremony, all Superiority of lordly Prelacy, Root and Branch, being cut off and removed; the pure Worship of God in Word and Sacraments, the pure Government of his House was restored, according to the Pattern shewed in the Mount, and solemnly engaged unto: Then were we a Crown of Glory in the Hand of the Lord, and a royal Diadem in the Hand of our God; then the Lord accompanied his Word in the Mouth of his faithful Servants, with such Power and Life in converting, comforting, and confirming Souls, that it was indeed the Power of God unto Salvation, and backed it with such Power and Authority against Sin, that by it the Works of the Devil were destroyed, and Satan fell like Lightning, Profanity was dashed, and Atheists changed either in Heart, or at least in Countenance; Popery, with all Error and Heresie, so curbed, that it durst not set up its Head. Those are so notour that to insist upon them were to trouble your Honours by a Recital of Things, which are so manifestly known that our Adversaries themselves cannot deny them; or if they should, many of your Honours, being eminently instrumental in the late glorious Reformation, and Eye-witnesses of the blessed Effects thereof, which increased daily until obstructed by the unlawful Invasion of the perfidious Usurper, whose Feet the Lord made to slide in due Time, could put them to Shame and Silence.

‘ And tho' we did give real Demonstrations of our loyal Affections to his Majesty, during that unjust and rebellious Usurpation, and may, as to this, without Vanity compare and reckon in the Gate with several, who now, pretending much to Loyalty, do restlessly endeavour to fetch, and keep us, with many others of his Majesty's faithful Subjects, under the Lash of the Law, and Discountenance of sacred Authority, as if we were the most disloyal Persons on the Face of the Earth, which the Lord knows, is far from our Thoughts; neither can any justly or rationally gather any such Charge against us from our Actions, we having obtained Mercy, to carry so under the greatest Difficulties, and darkest of Times, as our Heart doth not reproach us, and, we hope, are approved of God who is greater than our Heart; so we are able sufficiently to stop the Mouth of Calumny it self in speaking against us in this Matter. But the Vindication of our selves, however necessary in its own Place, not being our main Intendment, we can easily command our selves Silence, as willing to be repute any Thing, or nothing, for God. We spare to speak upon this Subject; if it were our Things we were to speak for, we should choose to put our Mouths in the Dust, and be altogether silent rather than move a Lip: But considering the Cause we plead for, is the Lord Jesus Christ's, which nearly concerns the Souls of his People, and knowing that sinful Silence of the Mouth in such Matters, will make the Conscience within to cry, we crave your Honours Leave and Pardon to pour out our Complaints and humble Desires before you.

‘ After our patient enduring of Trouble, and our faithful and loyal Deportment in relation to his Majesty and his Interest, during the Time of the Usurper's prevailing, and of his Majesty's sad Suffering, we expected, upon his Majesty's Restoration, not only a reviving from our Bondage, but also the promoting and supporting of the Covenanted Work of Reformation; and now that it is fallen out otherwise, is the Matter of our Grief, and has been the Occasion of sad Sufferings to many of his Majesty's most faithful and loyal Subjects, in their Consciences, Persons, Names and Estates, while they refused to give active Compliance in such Things as they cannot obtain of their Consciences to come up to: Instead of promoting the Reformation, we have lost all that we formerly attained unto; and the Glory of our Kirk, once beautiful in the Eyes of the Nations, is now turned into Shame, and we are become a Reproach unto our Neighbours round about: The Word was purely and powerfully preached, and followed with a Blessing from the Lord, Discipline was impartially exercised, then the Government of his House did run in the right Channel, and was execute by those to whom God had given that Charge, in Opposition both to Episcopacy, Independency and Erasianism, and the Lord thus feeding his Flock, both with the Staves of Beauty and Bands, by by his sent and sealed Servants, the Staves being in tight Hands, the Church of Christ in the Land was edified, Holiness was countenanced, Profanity decied, and the Lord rested in his Love among us.

But now the Poor of the Flock that wait upon the Lord, cry out of Soul-starving, and that they are destroyed for Lack of Knowledge. Now Profanity and Dissoluteness lift up the Head, without Shame, without Reproof, and keep the Crown of the Causey. Now Popery spreads in all the Corners of the Land, and Papists not only avow themselves, but talk insolently. Now irrational Quakers traffick from Place to Place, and make their Profelytes among the simple and unstable. Now the Wicked are hardened and emboldned in their Sins, and the tender Godly, who will not run with them into the same excess of Riot, reproached, discountenanced and persecuted. Now Atheism abounds, and the Generality are become so ignorant of, and indifferent about the Matters of God, and their Soul-concernments, that they are apt to receive the Impress of any Religion, how corrupt soever. And all these Wrath-provoking Evils do flow, as may be evident to all who do not shut their Eyes, from reintroduced Prelacy; for the Prelates having abandoned Discipline, and thrust in and kept in useles, insufficient and scandalous Persons upon the Lord's People, several of whom are not worthy to be Members of a civil Commonwealth, much less to officiate in the House of God; from hence it is that Profanity, as from a foul Puddle, does flow through the whole Land.

For those Things our Souls mourn, and for Remedy thereof we make this Application to your Honours, humbly beseeching your Lordships, that as you respect the Glory of God, the Flourishing of Christ's Kingdom in the Land, the Safety of immortal Souls, the adorning of his Majesty's Crown, the Quiet of the Persons of his Majesty's loving and loyal Subjects, your own endless Praise, and flourishing of your honourable Families, the Comfort of many oppressed Ministers and groining Congregations within the Kingdom; and that as you respect your own Comfort and Peace in the great Day of your Accounts, you would grant a favourable Answer to our most just, reasonable, and in order to the remedying of the forementioned Evils, necessary Desires.

And 1st. We humbly beg, That by your Honours timeous Intercession at his Majesty's Hands (and the Lord grant you Favour in the Presence of the King) and by your own Authority and Power, this poor Kirk and Kingdom lying in her Tears, Grief, and Fear, may be delivered from the burdensom Yoke of Prelacy, a Yoke which neither we nor our Fathers were able to bear, a Plant which our heavenly Father hath not planted, and which never took, even from the Reformation hitherto, with this Kirk and Kingdom as its kindly Soil, but has still been the Occasion and Cause of many grievous Evils, as Experience of old, of late, and at this present, does abundantly witness. 2^{dly}. We humbly beg, that the pure Government of the Church, by Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies, may be restored, and suffered without all Encroachments to reside in right Hands, and all former Acts of Parliament in favours of the same be revived and ratified for its Establishment; that the Courts of Christ, thus countenanced by the Civil Authority, may be in case to purge this Church from scandalous Ministers and Members. 3^{dly}. That all Ministers removed from their Charges, be restored to their Places and Functions, to feed the Flock of Christ, purchased by his own Blood, that the Banished be called Home, and that his Gracious Majesty would lay aside his Displeasure conceived against others of his Majesty's faithful and loving Subjects. 4^{thly}. That your Lordships would take an effectual Way for removing the useles, insufficient, and scandalous Persons, that have been thrust in, and kept in upon the Lord's People, to their great Grief, and the starving of their Souls. 5^{thly}. That a sufficient Defence be provided by your Lordships, against all Novations in Doctrine, Sacraments, Worship and Discipline, and that no Act pass in prejudice of our Religion, as reformed in all these, or in Corroboration of new Opinions against the same, whether Episcopacy, Ceremonies, or any Thing else which should be rejected and not ratified. 6^{thly}. That all former Acts of Parliament, against Cursing, Swearing, and fearful Blasphemy of God's Name, profaning the Lord's Day, Drinking, Whoring, and other abominable Sins, universally abounding in the Land, and against Popery and Popish Emisaries, by whose means it so much spreadeth every where, be revived, and put in due and ready Execution.

Thus, earnestly praying God to bless your Honours, with the Spirit of righteous Judgment in the Fear of the Lord, and to direct and enable you to do that which may be right in his Sight, profitable and refreshing to this poor languishing Kirk, comfortable to your own Souls in the Day of your Appearance before the Judgment-seat of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to bless and preserve his Majesty's Royal Person, and to establish his Throne in Righteousness, to endure as long as Sun and Moon run in their Courses, and to bless your Honours with sincere Zeal for God, true Loyalty to his Majesty, and endless Glory with Christ for ever, we expect your Lordships favourable and refreshing Answer.

Act for the Restitution and Re-establishment of the ancient Government of the Church, by Archbishops and Bishops. N^o. XXVII.

FORasmuch as the Ordering and Disposal of the external Government and Policy of the Church, doth properly belong unto his Majesty, as an inherent Right of the Crown, by virtue of his Royal Prerogative and Supremacy in Causes Ecclesiastical; and in Discharge of this Trust, his Majesty, and his Estates of Parliament, taking to their serious Consideration, that in the Beginning of, and by the late Rebellion within this Kingdom, in the Year 1637. the ancient and sacred Order of Bishops was cast off, their Persons and Rights were injured and overturned, and a seeming Parity among the Clergy factiously and violently brought in, to the great Disturbance of the publick Peace, the Reproach of the Reformed Religion, and Violation of the excellent Laws of the Realm, for preserving an orderly Subordination in the Church: And therewithal considering, what Disorders and Exorbitances have been in the Church, what Encroachments upon the Prerogative and Rights of the Crown, what Usurpations upon the Authority of Parliaments, and what Prejudice the Liberty of the Subject hath suffered, by the Invasions made upon the Bishops and Episcopal Government, which they find to be the Church-government most agreeable to the Word of God, most convenient and effectual for the Preservation of Truth, Order and Unity, and most suitable to Monarchy, and the Peace and Quiet of the State: Therefore his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, hath thought it necessary, and accordingly doth hereby redintegrate the State of Bishops to their ancient Places and undoubted Privileges in Parliament, and to all their other accustomed Dignities, Privileges and Jurisdictions, and doth hereby restore them to the Exercise of their Episcopal Function, Precedence in the Church, Power of Ordination, Inflicting of Censures, and all other Acts of Church-discipline, which they are to perform with Advice and Assistance of such of the Clergy as they shall find to be of known Loyalty and Prudence. And his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth revive, ratifie and renew all Acts of any former Parliaments, made for the Establishment, and in favours of this ancient Government, and doth ratifie and approve all Acts and Proclamations emitted by his Majesty or his privy Council, since the First Day of June last, in order to the Restitution of Bishops. And further, it is hereby declared, that whatever shall be determined by his Majesty, with Advice of the Archbishops and Bishops, and such of the Clergy as shall be nominated by his Majesty, in the external Government and Policy of the Church (the same consisting with the standing Laws of the Kingdom) shall be valid and effectual. And his Majesty, considering how necessary it is, that all Doubts or Scruples, which from former Acts or Practices may occur to any concerning this sacred Order, be cleared and removed, doth therefore, of certain Knowledge, and with Advice foresaid, rescind, cass and anul all Acts of Parliament, by which the sole and only Power and Jurisdiction within this Church, doth stand in the Church, and in the General, Provincial and Presbyterial Assemblies, and Kirk-sessions, and all Acts of Parliament or Council which may be interpreted to have given any Church-power, Jurisdiction or Government, to the Office-bearers of the Church, their respective Meetings, other than that which acknowledgeth a Dependence upon, and Subordination to the sovereign Power of the King, as Supreme, and which is to be regulated and authorized, in the Exercise thereof, by the Archbishops and Bishops who are to put Order to all Ecclesiastical Matters and Causes, and to be accountable to his Majesty for their Administrations. And particularly, his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth rescind and anul the First Act of the Twelfth Parliament of King James VI. holden in the Year 1592. and declares the same, and all the Heads, Clauses and Articles thereof, void and null, in all Time coming. And his Majesty considering, that the Jurisdiction of the Commissariots is a proper Part of the Rights and Privileges belonging to the Bishops, doth therefore, with Advice foresaid, restore the Archbishops and Bishops to their said Jurisdiction of Commissariots, according to the Sixth Act of the Parliament 1609. which is hereby ratified and renewed: And accordingly ordains, that in all Time coming the Quotes of Testaments be paid in to the Archbishops and Bishops, in their respective Dioceses, as formerly; and rescinds and anuls the Twenty eighth Act of the last Session of this present Parliament, anent the Quotes of Testaments, and declares the same void in all Time coming. It is always hereby declared, that this Act is without Prejudice of the present Commissaries, their Clerks and Fiscals, their enjoying their Places and Benefits thereof, conform to their Gifts and Laws of this Kingdom; unless, for their Insufficiency or Misdemeanours they be found incapable of the same. Further, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent foresaid, statutes and ordains, That no Act, Gift, Tack or Deed, passed by whatsoever Authority, since the Interruption of the Government by Archbishops and Bishops, in the Year 1637. to the Prejudice of their Rights, Patronages, Admiralties, Superiorities, Rents, Possessions and Jurisdictions pertaining to the several Bishopricks, stand valid or be in Force: But that the said Archbishops and Bishops may have their Claim, Right and Possession for the Year 1661. and all Years following, to whatsoever was posselt by, or by the Laws of the Kingdom was due to their Predecessors in anno 1637. and that notwithstanding of any Donation or Rights made to Colleges, Churches, Corporations, Ministers, or any other Persons, since the Year 1637. by whatsoever Order, Deed or Warrant, excepting as is afore said, in favours of Commissaries, Clerks and Fiscals. And whereas, divers Persons having Right to Lands, Annualrents, or some other Estate holden formerly of Bishops, or who had succeeded, or acquired Rights to the said Lands, and others of the Nature and Holding foresaid, have been forced, during the late Troubles, there being no other Way or Superior for the Time, to obtain themselves, in feft therein, holden of his Majesty or his Royal Father, or of their Donators having Right for the Time; and to that effect did take Precepts out of the Chancery, and to pass Infeftments under the Great Seal, and to obtain Precepts and Charters from the said other Persons who had Right to their Superiorities for the Time; and his Majesty being graciously pleased, that such Rights and Infeftments as, for the Time, were necessary and of course taken and past in Manner foresaid, should not be prejudged: Therefore it is statute and declared, That all Persons, who, since the Beginning of the Troubles in the Year 1638. are entred or in feft by his Majesty or his Royal Father, by the pretended Authority for the Time, or any other Person having Right from them in any Land or Estate holden immediately of the Bishops before the said Troubles, shall now hold the same of the respective Archbishops and Bishops, their lawful Superiors, in the same Manner as they, their Predecessors and Authors, held the same before the late Troubles. And it is declared, That neither this nor any other Act of the last or present Session of this Parliament, shall prejudice any Retours, Signatures, Charters, Precepts, Infeftments, Sasines of Lands, Annualrents, or any other Estate holden immediately of Bishops, whereby the same are retoured, or Infeftments of the same are taken, to be holden of the King or his Donators, since the Time foresaid, upon Retours, Resignations, Comprisings, Adjudications, or by way of Confirmation, or Precepts of clare constat, or otherways: Which Infeftments being orderly past, as they ought to have been for the Time, with the Retours, Signatures and other Warrants of the same, his Majesty, with Consent foresaid, doth ratifie and approve, and declares to be valid Rights, as if the same had been granted or renewed by the said Archbishops or Bishops. It is always declared, that the Declaration and Ratification foresaid, shall not be extended to any new Gift or Grant, or any other Clause or Right contained in the said Infeftments or Signatures, or other Warrants of the same, whereby any new Gift or original Right of the said Lands and others are given, or the Right of the same is granted or conveyed otherways than conform to the Rights and Infeftments thereof, before the Time afore said. Likeas it is declared, That the said Ratification and Declaration foresaid, shall not corroborate or import any Ratification to the said Vassals, their former Rights, which are to be in the same Case as they were in the Beginning of the said Troubles, in the Year foresaid; in regard it is his Majesty's Intention: Likeas it is declared by his Majesty, with Consent foresaid, That the Archbishops and Bishops shall be, as to their Patrimony and Rents, in the same Case and Condition as they were in the Year foresaid, notwithstanding of whatsoever Acts of the pretended Parliaments since the Time foresaid, to the contrar: And notwithstanding of whatsoever Rights, Grants or Deeds flowing from, or depending upon, or done or granted by virtue of any Act or Acts of the said pretended Parliaments, which his Majesty, with Consent foresaid, doth declare, decern and determine to be void and null, except in so far as is reserved and ratified in Manner abovewritten. It is hereby declared, That this Act of Restitution shall give no Right to any of the said Archbishops or Bishops, or their Successors, nor to the Heirs or Executors of the deceased Bishops, of any Rents belonging to the Archbishopricks or Bishopricks, preceeding the Year 1661. after the said Year 1638. but that all the said Rents intromitted with by, and pertaining to such Persons as had Right thereto for the Time, and wherewith they have or might have intromitted, shall be secured to them. As also, all such Persons who, bona fide, have made Payment of their Feu-duties, Tiends and Tiend-duties, and others, Rents of their Bishopricks, are and shall be also secured for Bygones allenarly, free of any Action or Question, notwithstanding of this present Act, or any Thing therein contained.

Act 114. Parl. 12. James VI. 1592. Ratifying the Liberty of the True Kirk, &c. N^o. XXVIII.

Our Sovereign Lord, and Estates of this present Parliament, following the loveable and good Example of their Predecessors, has ratified and approved, and by the Tenor of this present Act ratifies and approves all Liberties, Privileges, and Immunities, and Freedoms whatsoever, given and granted by his Highness, his Regents in his Name, or any of his Predecessors, to the true and holy Kirk, presently established within this Realm, and declared in the first Act of his Highness's Parliament, the Twentieth Day of October, the Year of God 1579. and all and whatsoever Acts of Parliament, and Statutes made of before by his Highness and his Regents, anent the Liberty and Freedom of the said Kirk: And specially the first Act of the Parliament holden at Edinburgh the Twenty fourth Day of October, the Year of God 1581. with the haill particular Acts there mentioned: Which shall be as sufficient as if the same were here expressed, and all other Acts of Parliament made sensine in Favour of the true Kirk: And sikklike ratifies and approves the general Assemblies appointed by the said Kirk, and declares that it shall be lawful to the Kirk and Ministers, every Year at the least, and oftner pro venata, as Occasion and Necessity shall require, to hold and keep General Assemblies, providing that the King's Majesty, or his Commissioners with them to be appointed by his Highness, be present at ilk General Assembly before the dissolving thereof, nominate and appoint Time and Place when and where the next General Assembly shall be holden; and in case neither his Majesty nor his said Commissioners be present for the Time in that Town where the said General Assembly beis holden; then and in that Case it shall be leifom to the said General Assembly by themselves to nominate and appoint Time and Place where the next General Assembly of the Kirk shall be kept and holden, as they have been in Use to do thir Times past. And also ratifies and approves the Synodal and Provincial Assemblies to be holden by the said Kirk and Ministers twice ilk Year, as they have been and are presently in Use to do, within every Province in this Realm: And ratifies and approves the Presbyteries and particular Sessions appointed by the said Kirk, with the haill Jurisdiction and Discipline of the same Kirk, agreed upon by his Majesty, in Conference had by his Highness, with certain of the Ministers convened to that Effect: Of the which Articles the Tenor follows. Matters to be entreated in provincial Assemblies. Thir Assemblies are constitute for weighty Matters, necessary to be entreated by mutual Consent and Assistance of Brethren within the Province, as Need requires. This Assembly has Power to handle, order and redress all Things omitted or done amiss in the particular Assemblies: It has Power to depose the Office-bearers of that Province, for good and just Cause deserving Deprivation: And generally thir Assemblies have the haill Power of the particular Elderships whereof they are collected. Matters to be entreated in the Presbyteries. The Power of the Presbyteries is to give diligent Labours in the Bounds committed to their Charge: That the Kirks be kept in good Order; to enquire diligently of naughty ungodly Persons, and to travel to bring them in the Way again by Admonition, or Threatning of God's Judgments, or by Correction. It appertains to the Eldership, to take heed that the Word of God be purely preached within their Bounds; the Sacraments richly ministred, the Discipline entertained, and Ecclesiastical Goods uncorruptly distributed. It belongs to this Kind of Assemblies, to cause the Ordinances made by the Assemblies, Provincials, Nationals and Generals, to be kept and put in Execution; to make Constitutions which concern τὸ πρῶτον in the Kirk, for decent Order in the particular Kirk where they govern, providing that they alter no Rules made by the Provincial or General Assemblies; and that they make the Provincial Assemblies foresaid privy of the Rules that they shall make; and to abolish Constitutions tending to the Hurt of the same. It has Power to excommunicate the Obstinate, formal Procefs being led, and due Interval of Times observed. Anent particular Kirks, if they be lawfully ruled by sufficient Ministry and Session, they have Power and Jurisdiction in their own Congregation in Matters Ecclesiastical. And decerns and declares the said Assemblies, Presbyteries and Sessions, Jurisdiction and Discipline thereof foresaid, to be in all Times coming most just, good and godly in the self, notwithstanding of whatsoever Statutes, Acts, Canon, Civil, or Municipal Laws made in the contrar; to the which and every one of them thir Presents shall make exprefs Derogation. And because there are divers Acts of Parliament made in favour of the Papistical Kirk, tending to the Prejudice of the Liberty of the true Kirk of God, presently professed within this Realm, Jurisdiction and Discipline thereof, which stand yet in the Books of the Acts of Parliament not abrogated nor annulled, therefore his Highness, and Estates foresaid, has abrogated, called and annulled, and by the Tenor hereof abrogates, calls and annuls all Acts of Parliament made by any of his Highness's Predecessors for Maintenance of Superstition and Idolatry, with all and whatsoever Acts, Laws and Statutes made at any Time before the Day and Date hereof, against the Liberty of the true Kirk, Jurisdiction and Discipline thereof, as the same is used and exercised within this Realm.

And in special, that Part of the Act of Parliament holden at Stirling the Fourth Day of November, the Year of God 1443. commanding Obedience to be given to Eugenius the Pope for the Time; the Act made by King James III. in his Parliament holden at Edinburgh the 24th Day of February, the Year of God 1480. and all other Acts whereby the Pope's Authority is established: The Act of King James III. in his Parliament holden at Edinburgh the 20th Day of November, the Year of God 1469. anent the Saturday and other Vigils to be Holy-days, from Even-song to Even-song.

Item. That part of the Act, made by the Queen Regent, in the Parliament holden at Edinburgh, the first Day of February, the Year of God 1551. giving special Licence for holding the Pasch and Yule. Item. The King's Majesty and Estates foresaid declare, That the 129th Act of the Parliament, holden at Edinburgh the 22^d Day of May 1584. shall no ways be prejudicial, nor derogate any Thing to the Privilege that God has given to the spiritual Office-bearers in the Kirk, concerning Heads of Religion, Matters of Heresie, Excommunication, Collation, or Deprivation of Ministers, or any siklike essential Censures, specially grounded and having Warrant of the Word of God. Item. Our Sovereign Lord and Estates of Parliament foresaid, abrogate, cass and annul the Act of the same Parliament, holden at Edinburgh the said Year 1584. granting Commission to Bishops and other Judges, constitute in Ecclesiastical Causes, to receive his Highness's Presentations to Benefices; to give Collation thereupon, and to put Order in all Causes Ecclesiastical, which his Majesty and Estates foresaid declare to be expired in the self, and to be null in Time coming, and of none Avail, Force nor Effect: And therefore, ordain all Presentations to Benefices, to be direct to the particular Presbyteries in all Time coming, with full Power to give Collation thereupon; and to put Order to all Matters and Causes Ecclesiastical within their Bounds, according to the Discipline of the Kirk: Providing the foresaid Presbyteries be bound and affricted to receive and admit whatsoever qualified Minister, presented by his Majesty, or laick Patrons.

Act for Preservation of his Majesty's Person, Authority and Government. N^o. XXIX.

THE Estates of Parliament, taking into their Consideration the Miseries, Confusions, Bondage and Oppressions this Kingdom hath groined under, since the Year 1637. with the Causes and Occasions thereof, do with all humble Duty and Thankfulness acknowledge his Majesty's unparalleled Grace and Goodness, in passing by the many Milcarriages of his Subjects, and restoring the Church and State to their ancient Liberties, Freedom, Rights and Possessions; and the great Obligations thereby lying upon them to express all possible Care and Zeal in the Preservation of his Majesty's Person, (in whose Honour and Happiness consisteth the Good and Welfare of his People) and in the Security and Establishment of his Royal Authority and Government, against all such wicked Attempts and Practices for the Time to come. And since the Rise and Progress of the late Troubles, did, in a great Measure, proceed from some treasonable and seditious Positions infused into the People, That it was lawful to Subjects, for Reformation, to enter into Covenants and Leagues, or to take up Arms against the King, or those commissioned by him, and suchlike: And that many wild and rebellious Courses were taken and practised in pursuance thereof, by unlawful Meetings and Gatherings of the People by mutinous and tumultuary Petitions, by insolent and seditious Protestations against his Majesty's Royal and just Commands, by entering into unlawful Oaths and Covenants, by usurping the Name and Power of Council-tables and Church-judicatories, after they were by his Majesty discharged, by treasonable Declarations, that his Majesty was not to be admitted to the Exercise of his Royal Power, until he should grant their unjust Desires, and approve their wicked Practices, by rebellious Rising in Arms against his Majesty, and such as had Commission from him; and by the great Countenance, Allowance and Encouragement given to these pernicious Courses by the Multitude of seditious Sermons, Libels and Discourses, preached, printed, and published, in Defence thereof. And considering, that as the present Age is not fully freed of those Distempers, so Posterity may be apt to relapse therein, if timeous Remedy be not provided: Therefore the King's Majesty and Estates of Parliament do declare, that these Positions, That it is lawful to Subjects, upon Pretence of Reformation, or other Pretence whatsoever, to enter into Leagues and Covenants, or to take up Arms against the King; or that it is lawful to Subjects, pretending his Majesty's Authority, to take up Arms against his Person or those commissioned by him, or to suspend him from the Exercise of his Royal Government, or to put Limitations upon their due Obedience and Allegiance, are rebellious and treasonable; and that all these Gatherings, Convocations, Petitions, Protestations, and erecting, and keeping of Council-tables, that were used in the Beginning, and for carrying on of the late Troubles, were unlawful and seditious: And particularly, that these Oaths, whereof the one was commonly called, The National Covenant, (as it was sworn and explained in the Year 1638. and thereafter) and the other entituled, A Solemn League and Covenant, were and are in themselves unlawful Oaths, and were taken by, and imposed upon the Subjects of this Kingdom, against the fundamental Laws and Liberties of the same; and that there lieth no Obligation upon any of the Subjects from the said Oaths, or either of them, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of Government either in Church or State; and therefore anul all Acts and Constitutions, Ecclesiastical or Civil, approving the said pretended National Covenant, or League and Covenant, or making any Interpretations of the same or either of them. And also it is hereby declared by his Majesty and Estates of Parliament, That the pretended Assembly, kept at Glasgow in the Year 1638. was in it self (after the same was by his Majesty discharged, under the Pain of Treason) an unlawful and seditious Meeting; and that all Acts, Deeds, Sentences, Orders or Decrees past therein, or by virtue of any pretended Authority from the same, were in themselves from the Beginning, are now, and in all Time coming, to be reputed unlawful, void and null: And that all Ratifications or Confirmations of the same, past by whatsoever Authority, or in whatsoever Meetings, shall from henceforth be void and null. Likeas, his Majesty and Estates of Parliament, reflecting on the sad Consequences of these rebellious Courses, and being careful to prevent the like for the future, have therefore statute and ordained, and by these Presents statute and ordain, That if any Person or Persons shall hereafter plot, contrive or intend Death or Destruction to the King's Majesty, or any bodily Harm tending to Death or Destruction, or any Restraint upon his Royal Person, or to deprive, depose or suspend him from the Stile, Honour and Kingly Name of the Imperial Crown of this Realm, or any others his Majesty's Dominions, or to suspend suspend him from the Exercise of his Royal Government, or to levy War or take up Arms against his Majesty or any commissioned by him, or shall entice any Strangers or others, to invade any of his Majesty's Dominions, and shall, by Writing, Printing, Preaching, or other malicious and advised Speaking, express or declare such their treasonable Intentions, every such Person or Persons, being upon sufficient Probation legally convicted thereof, shall be deemed, declared and adjudged Traitors, and shall suffer Forfeiture of Life, Honour, Lands and Goods, as in Cases of high Treason. And further, it is by his Majesty and Estates of Parliament declared, statute and enacted, That if any Person or Persons shall, by Writing, Printing, Praying, Preaching, Libelling, Remonstrating, or by any malicious and advised Speaking, express, publish or declare any Words or Sentences, to stir up the People to the Hatred or Dislike of his Majesty's Royal Prerogative and Supremacy in Causes Ecclesiastick, or of the Government of the Church by Archbishops and Bishops, as it is now settled by Law; or to justify any of the Deeds, Actings, Practices, or Things abovementioned, and declared against by this present Act, that every such Person or Persons so offending, and being, as said is, legally convicted thereof, are hereby declared incapable to enjoy or exercise any Place or Employment, Civil, Ecclesiastical, or Military, within this Church and Kingdom, and shall be liable to such further Pains as are due by the Law in such Cases: Provided always, that no Person be processed for any of the Offences aforesaid, contained in this Act, (other than these that are declared to be high Treason) unless it be by Order from his Majesty, or by Order of his Privy Council for the Time; neither shall they incur any of the Penalties abovementioned, unless they be pursued within Eight Months after the Offence committed, and sentenced thereupon within four Months after the intenting of the Process. And it is also declared, That if his Majesty grant his Pardon to any Person convicted for any of the Offences contained in this present Act, after such Pardon, the Party pardoned shall be restored to all Intents and Purposes, as if he had never been pursued nor convicted; any Thing in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Act concerning such Benefices and Stipends as have been possessed without Presentations from the lawful Patrons. 1662. N^o. XXX.

THE King's most excellent Majesty being desirous, that all his good Subjects may be sensible of the happy Effects and Fruits of the Royal Government, by a free, peaceable and safe Enjoyment of their due Interests and Properties under his Protection; and that in his Restoration they may find themselves restored to these Rights which by Law were secured unto them, and by the Violence and Injustice of these late Troubles and Confusions have been wrested from them: And considering, that notwithstanding the Right of Patronages be duly settled and established by the ancient and fundamental Laws and Constitutions of this Kingdom; yet, divers Ministers in this Church have, and do possess Benefices and Stipends in their respective Cures, without any Right or Presentation to the same from the Patrons: And it being therefore most just, that the lawful and undoubted Patrons of Kirks, be restored to the Possession of the Rights of their respective Advocations, Donations and Patronages; therefore, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, doth statute and ordain, that all these Ministers who entred to the Cure of any Parish in Burgh or Land within this Kingdom, in or since the Year 1649. (at and before which Time the Patrons were most injuriously dispossessed of their Patronages) have no Right unto, nor shall receive, uplift nor possess the Rents of any Benefice, modified Stipend, Manse or Glebe for this present Crop, 1662. nor any Year following, but their Places, Benefices and Kirks are, ipso jure, vacant. Yet, his Majesty, to evidence his Willingness to pass by and cover the Miscarriages of his People, doth, with Advice foresaid, declare, that this Act shall not be prejudicial to any of these Ministers in what they have possessed, or is due to them, since their Admission: And that every such Minister who shall obtain a Presentation from the lawful Patron, and have Collation from the Bishop of the Diocese where he liveth, betwixt and the 20th of September next to come, shall from thenceforth have Right to, and enjoy his Church, Benefice, Manse and Glebe, as fully and freely as if he had been lawfully presented and admitted thereto at his first Entry, or as any other Minister within the Kingdom doth or may do. And for that end, it is hereby ordained, That the respective Patrons shall give Presentations to all the present Incumbents, who in due Time shall make Application to them for the same. And in case any of these Churches shall not be thus duly provided before the said 20th of September, then the Patron shall have Freedom to present another betwixt and the 20th Day of March 1663. Which if he shall refuse or neglect, the Presentation shall then fall to the Bishop, jure devoluto, according to former Laws. And suchlike his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth statute and ordain the Archbishops and Bishops, to have the Power of new Admission and Collation, to all such Churches and Benefices as belong to their respective Sees, and which have vaiked since the Year 1637. and to be careful to plant and provide these their own Kirks conform to this Act.

Act concerning Masters of Universities, Ministers, &c. 1662. N^o. XXXI.

THE King's most excellent Majesty, according to the laudable Example of his Royal Progenitors in former Parliaments, doth, with Advice and Consent of his Estates convened in this present Parliament, ratify and approve all and whatsoever Acts and Statutes, heretofore made, concerning the Liberty and Freedom of the true Church of God, and the Religion now professed and established within this Kingdom: And considering how necessary it is for the Advancement of Religion and Learning, for the Good of the Church, and Peace of the Kingdom, that the Universities and Colleges be provided and served with Professors, Principal, Regents and Masters well affected to his Majesty, and the established Government in Church and State; his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth statute, ordain and enact, That from this Time forth, no

Masters, Principal, Regents, nor other Professors in Universities or Colleges within this Kingdom, be admitted, nor allowed to continue in the Exercise of any Function within the same, but such as are of a pious, loyal and peaceable Conversation, submitting to, and owning the Government of the Church by Archbishops and Bishops, now settled by Law; and who having given Satisfaction therein to the Bishops of the respective Dioceses, and Patrons, and having in their Presence, taken the Oath of Allegiance, shall procure their Attestation of the same; that is to say, the Professors and other Masters of the Universities of St. Andrews, Glasgow and Aberdeen, to have the Approbation and Attestation of the Archbishops and Bishops, who are the respective Chancellors of the said Universities; and the Professors and other Masters of the New-town College in Aberdeen, and College of Edinburgh, to have the Approbation of the respective Patrons, the Earl of Marshall, and Magistrates of Edinburgh and Aberdeen, and an Attestation and Certificate under the Hand of the Bishops of Edinburgh and Aberdeen, respectively, that they have taken the Oath of Allegiance, and that they are Persons who submit to, and own the Church-government as now settled by Law. Likeas, his Majesty, finding it necessary for the Peace and Quiet of the Church, that the Ministers be such as will acknowledge and comply with the present Government of the same, doth therefore, with Advice foresaid, statute and enact, That whatsoever Minister shall, without a lawful Excuse, to be admitted by his Ordinary, absent himself from the Visitations of the Diocese, which are to be performed by the Bishop, or some of the Ministers to be appointed by him, or from the diocesan Assembly; or who shall not, according to his Duty, concur therein, or who shall not give their Assistance in all the Acts of Church-discipline, as they shall be required thereunto by the Archbishop or Bishop of the Diocese, every such Minister so offending shall, for the first Fault, be suspended from his Office and Benefice till the next diocesan Meeting; and if he amend not, shall be deprived, and the Church and Benefice to be provided as the Law alloweth in other Cases of Vacancies. And his Majesty considering, that under the pretext of religious Exercises, divers unlawful Meetings and Conventicles (the Nurseries of Sedition) have been kept in private Families, hath thought fit, with Advice foresaid, hereby to declare, That as he doth and will give all due Encouragement to the Worship of God in Families, amongst the Persons of the Family, and others who shall be occasionally there for the Time, so he doth hereby discharge all private Meetings or Conventicles in Houses, which under the pretence of, or for religious Exercises, may tend to the Prejudice of the publick Worship of God in the Churches, or to the alienating of the People from their lawful Pastors, and that Duty and Obedience they owe to Church and State. And it is hereby ordained, That none be hereafter permitted to preach in publick, or in Families, within any Diocese, or teach any publick School, or to be Pedagogues to the Children of Persons of Quality, without the Licence of the Ordinary of the Diocese.

Act concerning the Declaration, to be signed by all Persons in publick Trust. N^o. XXXII.

Forasmuch as it hath pleased almighty God, in his Majesty's Restitution to his Royal Government, to restore this Kingdom to its ancient Liberties and Peace, and to deliver his Majesty's good Subjects from these Miseries and Bondage whereby they have been oppressed during these Troubles; and the Estates of Parliament, finding themselves obliged, in a due Resentment of this Mercy, and in discharge of that Duty they owe to God, to the King's Majesty, to the publick Peace of the Kingdom, and the Good of his Subjects, to use all Means for the due Preservation of that Peace and Happiness they now enjoy under his Royal Government; and to prevent and suppress every Thing that may tend to the renewing or favouring of these Courses, by which the late Rebellion hath been fomented and carried on; and conceiving that the employing of Persons of sound Principles and entire Loyalty, in all Offices of Trust, and Places of publick Administration, will conduce much to these Ends: Therefore, and for quieting the Spirits of his Majesty's good Subjects, and begetting a Confidence in them of their Security for the future, his Majesty hath thought fit, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, to statute, ordain and enact; likeas his Majesty by these Presents, doth, with Advice foresaid, statute, ordain, and enact, That all such Persons as shall hereafter be called or admitted to any publick Trust or Office, under his Majesty's Government within this Kingdom; that is to say, to be Officers of State, Members of Parliament, Privy Counsellors, Lords of Session, Commissioners in Exchequer, Members of the College of Justice, Sheriffs, Stewards or Commissaries, their Deputies and Clerks, Magistrates and Council of Burroughs, Justices of Peace and their Clerks, or any other publick Charge, Office and Trust within this Kingdom; shall, at and before their Admission to the Exercise of such Places or Offices, publickly, in Face of the respective Courts they relate to, subscribe the Declaration underwritten: And that they shall have no Right to their said Offices or Benefits thereof, until they subscribe the same, as said is; but that every such Person who shall offer to enter and exercise any such Office, before he subscribe the Declaration, is to be reputed and punished as an Usurper of his Majesty's Authority, and the Place to be disposed to another. Likeas his Majesty doth, with Advice foresaid, remit to his Commissioner, to take such Course as he shall think fit, how these who are presently in Office may subscribe the said Declaration. And it is hereby declared, that this Act is without Prejudice of any former Acts, for taking the Oath of Allegiance, and asserting the Royal Prerogative.

I Do sincerely affirm and declare, that I judge it unlawful to Subjects, upon pretence of Reformation or other pretence whatsoever, to enter into Leagues and Covenants, or to take up Arms against the King, or those commissioned by him; and that all these Gatherings, Convocations, Petitions, Protestations, and erecting and keeping of Council-tables, that were used in the Beginning, and for carrying on of the late Troubles, were unlawful and seditious: And particularly, that these Oaths, whereof the one was commonly called, The National Covenant, (as it was sworn and explained in the Year 1638. and thereafter) and the other, entituled, A Solemn League and Covenant, were and are in themselves unlawful Oaths, and were taken by, and imposed upon the Subjects of this Kingdom, against the fundamental Laws and Liberties of the same. And that there lieth no Obligation upon me, or any of the Subjects, from the said Oaths, or either of them, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of the Government, either in Church or State, as it is now established by the Laws of the Kingdom.

Act of Council anent Diocesan Meetings. N^o. XXXIV.

At Holyroodhouse, the 10th Day of September, 1662.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having, in pursuance of his Majesty's Royal Pleasure and Commands, by the Proclamation, dated at Edinburgh the 9th Day of January last bypast, discharged all Ecclesiastical Meetings in Synods, Presbyteries and Church-sessions, until they be authorized and ordered by the Archbishops and Bishops in their respective Sees. And considering, that the Lords Archbishops and Bishops, have, all this Session of Parliament, been engaged to attend the Service thereof, and now are to repair to their respective Sees, for exercising of the Government, and ordering the Affairs of the Church, according to that Authority and Jurisdiction which is settled and established upon them by the Law; and for that effect, have resolved to hold their Diocesan Assemblies in the Dioceses of St. Andrews, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dunkeld, Brechin and Dumblain, upon the second Tuesday of October next, and to hold the Assemblies in the Dioceses of Galloway, Aberdeen, Murray, Ross, Cathness, Isles, Argyle and Orkney, upon the Third Tuesday of the said Month. Therefore, the Lord Commissioner his Grace, and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, do think fit, by open Proclamation, to make Publication hereof to all Persons concerned, and to command and require, that all Persons, Vicars, Ministers in Burgh or Land, within these respective Dioceses, do repair to the said Diocesan Meetings, upon the foresaid Days, and in Time coming, as they shall be required to give their Concurrence in their Stations, for the Exercise of ministerial Duties, for the Order and Peace of the Church: With Certification, That whosoever shall presume not to give their Presence and dutiful Attendance upon these Diocesan Assemblies, and shall not concur in other Church-meetings, as they shall be appointed and authorized by the respective Archbishops and Bishops, shall be holden as Contemners of his Majesty's Authority, and incur the Censures provided in such Cases. And it is hereby always provided, that no Minister or Ministers, upon whatsoever Cause or Pretence, shall presume to keep any Ecclesiastick Meetings, who shall not submit to, and own the Ecclesiastick Government by Archbishops and Bishops; with Certification, that all such Meetings shall be holden henceforth as seditious. And ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-crosses of the head Burghs of the Shires, that none pretend Ignorance.

Act of Council. N^o. XXXV.At Edinburgh, the 23^d Day of December 1662.

THe Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, taking to Consideration the great Happiness this Kingdom doth now enjoy in his Majesty's Restitution, the Church being thereby restored to its ancient and right Government, the Laws to their due Course and Splendor, and the Subjects to the peaceable Possession of their Rights and Properties; and the Administration of all these, tempered with that Moderation, which should justly endear them to all honest and loyal Subjects, but especially to these of the Ministry, who have so largely shared in his Majesty's Grace and Pardon, both as to their publick Actings and their undue possessing of Benefices, many of them having, during these late Troubles, intruded themselves into Churches, Stipends and Benefices, without any Right from the lawful Patrons, and so being liable in Law for their Intromission; yet were, by his Majesty's Favour, indemnified for what they had possest, and the Patrons ordained to give to them new Presentations, and a competent Time allowed for obtaining the same with Collation from the Bishop of the Dioceses thereupon; which being done, they were from thenceforth to enjoy their Churches as freely as any other Ministers within the Kingdom. And albeit such favourable Dealing might have challenged a most cheerful Submission and Obedience from all concerned therein; yet, such was the froward Disposition of some, in slighting of his Majesty's Favour, by not accepting of Presentations, and in contemning his Majesty's Authority, by continuing in the Exercise of their Ministry, that the Council was necessitated by their Act at Glasgow, upon the first of October last, to discharge all such Ministers from exercising any part of their Ministry, and to charge them to remove themselves and their Families out of their Parishes; and though in order thereunto, the Carriage of divers hath not been suitable to their Duty, yet, the Council being desirous to exercise further Indulgence towards these Men, if possibly they may be reclaimed, have therefore thought fit (being also thereunto solicited by such of the Lords of the Clergy as were upon the Place) to allow a further Time until the first Day of February next 1663. betwixt and which they may yet obtain Presentations and Collations, as said is, provided, that such who since the first of October are already placed, or may be judged fit to be placed in these Places declared vacant, by Act aforesaid, shall enjoy their Churches and Benefices, any Thing in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding: Certifying always, such as shall fail in obtaining their Presentations and Collations, they are from thenceforth to be esteemed and holden as Persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government: And such of them as are within the Dioceses of Glasgow, Argyle and Galloway, are, conform to the former Act of Council, to remove themselves and their Families forth of the Bounds of their respective Presbyteries, but that they do not offer to stay nor reside within the Bounds either of the Dioceses of St. Andrews or Edinburgh; and wherever else they shall happen to reside, they are hereby discharged two of them to reside in one Parish: And such within the Dioceses of St. Andrews and Edinburgh as shall not obtain Presentation and Collation betwixt and the said first Day of February next to come, they are from thenceforth to retire themselves, and stay and reside benorth the River of Tay; and all of them who shall not give Satisfaction as aforesaid, are hereby discharged from exercising any part of their Ministry in publick or in private, and from keeping any Meetings in Families, upon Pretence of religious Exercises, except in and with their own Families; with Certification, to such as shall contravene any part of this Act, they are to be punished as seditious Persons. And forasmuch, as besides these Persons abovesigned, there be divers Ministers, who, in contempt of his Majesty's Authority and Command, did absent themselves from the Meetings of the Synods whereto they were called by his Majesty's Authority; and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, being desirous to reclaim all of them, have therefore at this Time thought fit, only to confine them within their several Parishes, until the next Meeting of the Synod, discharging them hereby to transgress the Bounds of their Confinement, unless, upon Application to the Bishop of the Diocese, they obtain a Warrant under his Hand for the same. And since the disorderly Carriage of some Ministers hath occasioned, that divers of the People, with whom they have Interest, do withdraw from the Worship of God in their own Parish Churches, to the Dishonour of God, the Contempt of his Ordinances, and the Scandal of the Protestant Religion, for making way for Atheism, Schism and Separation in this Reformed Church, and for alienating of People from their Duty and Obedience to the Authority established therein: Therefore the Council do hereby appoint all his Majesty's Subjects, to frequent the ordinary Meetings of publick Worship in their own Parish Churches; and in case there be no Sermon there, that they go to the next Church where Sermon is, and that otherways they presume not, without lawful Excuse, to stay from their own Parish Church, or go out of their own Parishes on the Sabbath-day: Commanding hereby, all Magistrates within Burgh, and Justices of Peace, to take trial of the Contraveners, and to punish them as Sabbath-breakers, and to exact twenty Shillings Scots from each of them, toties quoties, to be applied for Relief of the Poor of the Parish. And whereas the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper (which was instituted as a special Mean and Bond of Love and Unity, Duty and Obedience amongst Christians) is, at the Administration thereof in some Places, abused and perverted, by the unlicentiate Confluence of some People, and extravagant Sermons of some Ministers of unquiet and factious Spirits, and made a special Engine to debauch People from their Duty, and lead them to Disobedience, Schism and Rebellion: Therefore, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, in pursuance of the Trust reposed in them, and for preventing of Disorder and Disturbance, do prohibit and discharge every Minister of a Parish, to use or imploy the Assistance of any more Ministers, by Preaching or Administering the holy Communion, save one or two neighbouring Ministers, unless they be licentiate thereunto by the Bishop of the Diocese; and that no Person of another Parish be admitted to the said Person doth reside. And ordain these Presents to be forthwith printed, and published at the Market-crofts of Edinburgh and other Places needful, that none may pretend Ignorance.

P. T. WEDDERBURN Cl. Secr. Concilii.

Mr. John Livingstone's Letter to his Parish, 1663. N^o. XXXVI.

To the Flock of Jesus Christ in Ancrum, Light, Life and Love, and the Consolation of the holy Ghost be multiplied.

Wellbeloved in the Lord,

THAT which our Sins, even yours and mine, have been a long Time procuring, and which hath been often threatned, but never well believed, is now come, even a Separation. How long it may continue, it is in the Lord's Hand; but it will be our Part, to search out, and moun for these Sins that have drawn down such a Stroke. It is not needful to look much to Instruments; I have from my Heart forgiven them all, and would wish you to do the like, and pray for them, that it be not laid to their Charge; but let us look to him, without whose Doing there is no Evil in a City, for he hath torn, and he will heal us, he hath smitten, and he will bind us up. Let us neither despise his Chastning, nor faint when we are rebuked of him. It may be, we shall not suddenly find out every Controversy he hath against us, but if there be upright Dealing in such Things as are obvious, and an impartial Dealing, for Discovery of what is hid, he will reveal even that to us. Neither is there any greater Hindrance of Repentance, than a secure desperate Questioning, Whether he will accept of us or not? Christ hath been, and will be in all Ages, a Stone of Stumbling, and Rock of Offence to such as stumble at the Word, and refuse to receive his rich Offer; but to others a Foundation, and a Corner-stone, elect and precious, and he that believeth on him, shall not be confounded. We have reason to believe, that whatever he doth, is only best. God saw all that he had made, and behold, it was very good. That Word will hold through to the World's End: For my Part, I bless his Name, I have great Peace in the Matter of my Suffering. I need not repeat, you know my Testimony of the Things in Controversy. Jesus Christ is a King, and only hath Power to appoint the Officers and Government of his House. It is a fearful Thing to violate the Oath of God, and fall into the Hands of a living God. It could not well be expected, but there having been so fair and so general Professions through the Land, the Lord would put Men to it, and it is like it shall come to every Man's Door, that when every one, according to their Inclinations, have acted their Part, and he seems to stand by, he may come at last and act his Part, and vindicate his Glory and Truth: I have often shewed you, that it is the greatest Difficulty under Heaven, to believe that there is a God, and a Life after this, and have often told you, that for my Part, I could never make it a chief Part of my Work to insist upon the particular Debates of the Time, as being assured, that if a Man drink in the Knowledge, and the main Foundations of Christian Religion, and have the Work of God's Spirit in his Heart, to make him walk with God, and make Conscience of his Ways, such an one (except he be giddy with Self-conceit) shall not readily mistake Christ's Quarrel, to joyn either with a profane atheist Party, or any phanatick atheist Party; but the Secret of the Lord will be with them that fear him, and he will shew them his Covenant: And I have thought it not far from a sure Argument, that a Course is not approven of God, when generally all they that are godly, and all profane Men turning penitent scunner at it, and, it may be, cannot tell why, and generally all the profane, at the first Sight, and all that had a Profession of Piety, when they turn loose, embrace it, and, it may be, cannot tell why. There may be Diversity of Judgment, and sometime sharp Debates among them that are going to Heaven, but certainly a Spirit guides the Seed of the Woman, and another Spirit the Seed of the Serpent; and blessed are they that know their Master's Will, and do it; blessed are they that endure to the End. Both you and I have great Cause to bless the Lord, howbeit I be the unworthiest of all that ever spake in his Name, yet my Labour amongst you hath not been altogether in vain, but some hath given Evidence of a real Work of the Spirit of Grace upon their Heart and Life, of which Number some are already in Glory, and others wrestling through an evil World, and I trust some, that have not yet given great Evidence of a real Work of the Spirit of God upon their Heart, may have the Seed of God in them, that may in due Time bud forth, at least at their Death. But ah! what shall be said of them, in whom yet an evil Spirit of Drunkenness, of Greed and Falshood, of Malice, of Licentiousness, of wilful Ignorance and Neglect of Prayer, and all the Means of Salvation, is still reigning and raging, who possibly will now be glad that they get loose Reins to run to all Wickedness, yea, may be carried on to open Apostacy and Persecution. These and all of you, I request in the Bowels of our Lord Jesus Christ, yea, I obtest and charge you, in the Name and Authority of him that shall judge the Quick and the Dead, that you turn speedily to the Lord, and make Conscience of Prayer, Morning and Evening, and read, or cause read to you some of his Word, where you will find all Things necessary for Faith and Conversation. It is true, Snares and Temptations are many and strong from Satan, from the World, and from the Mind and Heart within, but Faith in God, and diligent Seeking of him shall overcome them all. Shall not the Care of your immortal Souls go beyond the Love of this Life, or any Thing in this World? Oh! that you would but taste and see the Goodness of the Lord, and take an Essay for a while of sincere Serving of him, and prove him, if he will not open the Windows of Heaven, and pour out a Blessing. Let me obtain this of you, as a Remembrance of all the Labour I have had amongst you, and as an allaying of all my Sufferings. I am put to compence of all the Labour I have had amongst you, and as an allaying of all my Sufferings. I am put to that, after you read this, you will set some Time apart each of you alone, or in your Families, as you have Convenience, to think on these Directions have been formerly given you from the Word of God, and deal earnestly with him, that you may remember and obey them, and engage your Hearts to him, that in his Strength you will walk in his Ways; and if any should stubbornly neglect such a wholesome Counsel, that comes from an earnest Desire of your Salvation, I will be forced to bear witness against you, yea, these Words you now hear read shall bear witness against you in the Day of the Lord, that Light was holden out to you, and you loved Darkness rather than Light; but I desire to hope better Things of you. If the Lord see it good, we may see the Day we may meet again, and bless his Name solemnly, that altho' he was angry, his Anger is turned away; but if not, the good Will of the Lord be done. I think I may say, I could have been well content, altho' it had been with many Discouragements and Straits, to have gone on and served you all, as I could, in the Gospel of Jesus Christ; but the Prerogative Royal of Jesus Christ, and the Peace of a Man's own Conscience, are not to be violated on any Consideration, neither hath there been a Blessing Blessing on ought that is done against these. I was very desirous, and used Means, that I might have come and seen you, and at least, in a private Way, bidden you Farewell, ere I had gone, but wise Providence hath otherwise ordered it, yet howsoever, I carry your Names alongst with me in my Book, yea, shall carry them in my Heart whithersoever I go, and begs your mutual Prayers for me, that I may be kept faithful, and fruitful, and blameless even to the End, and that, if it be his Will, I may be restored to you. In the mean time, love and help one another. Have a Care to breed your Children to know the Lord, and to keep themselves from the Pollutions of an evil World. I recommend to you above all Books (except the blessed Word of God) the Confession of Faith and larger Catechism. Be grounding your selves and one another, against the Abominations of Popery, in case it should prove the Trial of the Time, as I apprehend it may. Let a Care be had of the Poor and Sick; there is left as much in an ordinary Way, as will suffice for Meat and Money, a Year and more. I cannot insist on the several Particulars, wherein possibly you would crave Advice: The Word is a Lamp, and the Spirit of Christ will guide into all Truth. The Light that comes of the unfeigned Humiliation, and Self-denial, and earnest Prayer, and Search of the Scriptures, is a sure Light. I know that my Word and Writ is of small Value; yet I could not forbear, but, in a few Words, salute you before I went. And now, dearly beloved and longed for, farewell. The Lord of all Grace, who hath called us unto his eternal Glory by Jesus Christ, after you have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, settle, strengthen you. To him be Glory and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

By your loving Servant and Pastor in the Lord,

Act of Council, Edinburgh, August 13, 1663. N^o. XXXIX.

FOrasmuch as it doth appear, that divers Ministers, who, by the Law, have no Right to preach or remain in those Parishes which did belong to their Cure, do notwithstanding presume to assemble his Majesty's Subjects in Churches and elsewhere, to preach, administer the Sacraments, and to keep Conventicles and disorderly Meetings; and do go about to corrupt and dissuade the People from that Affection, Duty, Obedience and Gratitude they owe to his Majesty's Government, the Laws and Authority established, under which the Kingdom doth enjoy this great Tranquillity and the Blessings thereof: As likewise, that many Subjects do countenance and joyn in these unlawful Meetings, contrary to the Acts of Parliament prohibiting the same. Therefore, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, in discharge of the Trust reposed in them, for preserving the publick Peace and the Laws in their Authority and Vigour, and that turbulent and disaffected Ministers may not have such Opportunity, as they have hitherto had, to continue their evil Practices in seducing too many People into Ways of Schism, Separation and Sedition, tending to the Disquieting and Overturning of the established Government of the State, as well as that of the Church; and in pursuance of what is recommended by his Majesty and the Estates of Parliament, in the late Act of the Tenth of July, intituled, Act against Separation and Disobedience to Ecclesiastical Authority, Do hereby command and charge all Ministers, who are or shall be found to preach seditiously against the Government of Church and State, who entered in or since the Year 1649. and have not since obtained Presentations from their lawful Patrons, and Collations and Admissions from their Ordinary, and have notwithstanding continued to preach or exercise any Duty, proper to the Function of the Ministers, either at these Parish Churches where they were Incumbents, or at any other Place, House or Family, to remove themselves, their Families and Goods belonging to them, within Twenty Days after Publication hereof, out of these respective Parishes where they were Incumbents, and not to reside within Twenty Miles of the same, nor within six Miles of Edinburgh or any Cathedral Church, or three Miles of any Burgh Royal within this Kingdom; with Cer-tification, that if they fail to remove themselves, as said is, and to give exact Obedience hereunto, (unless they have the Permission of the Lords of Privy Council, or of the Bishop of the Diocese) they are to incur the Penalties of the Laws against Movers of Sedition, and to be proceeded against with that Strictness that is due to so great Contempts of his Majesty's Authority over Church and State. And do hereby inhibit and discharge all Heritors and Housholders in Burgh or Land, to give any Presence or Countenance to any one or more of these Ministers, removed by this Act, to preach or exercise any Act of the Office of a Minister; with Certification, if they, after Publication hereof, shall presume so to do, they are to be proceeded against according to Law. And being likewise informed, that divers Ministers who were entred by lawful Presentations before the Year 1649. and do still continue in their Exercise of their Ministry, do yet forbear to attend Ecclesiastical Meetings appointed by Authority, and to exercise Discipline in their Parishes, without giving any Account of their Administrations, to the great Detriment of the Order and Peace of the Church: Therefore they command and charge all those Ministers to keep the diocesan Synods, and other Ecclesiastical Meetings appointed by Authority; with Certification, that if, after Publication hereof, they fail so to do, and disobey the Acts of Parliament and Council made thereanent, they are to be proceeded against as Contemnners of his Majesty's Authority. And ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, that none pretend Ignorance.

Act against Separation and Disobedience to Ecclesiastical Authority. N^o. XL.

FOrasmuch as the King's Majesty, considering the Prejudices which did ensue to the Church and Protestant Religion, to the Prerogative of the Crown, to the Authority of Parliament, to the Liberties of the Subject, and to the publick Laws and Peace of the Kingdom, by the Invasions made upon Episcopal Government, during the late Troubles; and finding that Government, to be the Church-government, most agreeable to the Word of God, most convenient and effectual for Preservation of Truth, Order, and Unity, and most suitable to Monarchy, and to the Peace and Quiet of the State; hath therefore, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, by several Acts past in the Second Session of this Parliament, restored the Church to its ancient and right Government, by Archbishops and Bishops, and hath reintegrated the Estate of Bishops to the Exercise of their Episcopal Function, and to all the Privileges, Dignities, Jurisdictions, and Possessions due, and formerly belonging thereunto. And in further order to the Settlement of the Church, and bringing the Ministers to a due Acknowledgment of, and Compliance with the Government thereof, thus established by Law, his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, hath also statute and ordained, That all these Ministers, who entred to the Cure of any Parish, without Right of Presentations from the lawful Patrons, in and since the Year One thousand six hundred and forty nine, and should not, betwixt and the Twentieth of September last, obtain Presentations from their several Patrons, and Collation from the Bishop of the Diocese where they lived, should have no Right to the uplifting the Rents of any Benefice or Stipend for the Year One thousand six hundred and sixty two, but that their Places, Benefices, and Kirks should be, ipso jure, vacant: And that whatever Ministers should, without a lawful Excuse to be admitted by their Ordinary, absent themselves from the diocesan Assembly, or who should not concur in all the Acts of the Church-discipline, as they should be thereunto required by the Archbishop or Bishop of the Diocese, should be for the first Fault suspended from their Office and Benefice till the next diocesan Meeting; and if they amend not, should be deprived, and the Church and Benefice to be provided as in other Cases of Vacancies. And the King's Majesty, having resolved to conserve and maintain the Church in the present State and Government thereof, by Archbishops and Bishops, and others bearing Office therein, and not to endure nor give way or Connivance to any Variation therein in the least, doth therefore, with Advice and Consent of his Estates convened in this third Session of his Parliament, ratify and approve the aforementioned Acts, and all other Acts and Laws made in the Two former Sessions of Parliament, in order to the settling of Episcopal Dignity, Jurisdiction and Authority within this Kingdom; and ordains them to stand in full Force as publick Laws of the Kingdom, and to be put to further Execution in all Points, conform to the Tenor thereof. And in pursuance of his Majesty's Royal Resolution herein, his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth recommend to the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, to take speedy and effectual Course, that these Acts receive ready and due Obedience from all his Majesty's Subjects; and for that end, that they call before them all such Ministers, who, having entred in or since the Year One thousand six hundred and forty nine, and have not as yet obtained Presentations and Collations, as aforesaid, yet dared to preach in Contempt of the Law, and to punish them as seditious Persons, and Contemnners of the Royal Authority. As also, that they be careful, that such Ministers, who keep not the diocesan Meetings, and concur not with the Bishops in the Acts of Church-discipline, being for the same suspended or deprived, as said is, be accordingly, after Deprivation, removed from their Benefices, Glebes and Manfes; and if any of them shall notwithstanding, offer to retain the Possession of their Benefices or Manfes, that they take present Course to see them dispossess; and if they shall thereafter presume to exercise their Ministry, that they be punished as seditious Persons, and such as contemn the Authority of Church and State.

And as his Majesty doth expect, from all his good and dutiful Subjects, a due Acknowledgment of, and hearty Compliance with his Majesty's Government, Ecclesiastical and Civil, as it is now established by Law within this Kingdom, and that in order thereunto, they will give their cheerful Concurrence, Countenance, and Assistance to such Ministers, as by publick Authority are or shall be admitted in their several Parishes, and attend all the ordinary Meetings for divine Worship in the same; so his Majesty doth declare, That he will, and doth account a withdrawing from, and not keeping and joyning in these Meetings, to be seditious, and of dangerous Example and Consequence. And therefore, and for preventing the same for the future, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates in Parliament, doth hereby statute, ordain, and declare, declare, That all and every such Person or Persons, who shall hereafter ordinarily and wilfully withdraw and absent themselves from the ordinary Meetings of divine Worship, in their own Parish-church, on the Lord's Day, (whether upon account of Popery, or other Disaffection to the present Government of the Church) shall thereby incur the Pains and Penalties underwritten, viz. Each Nobleman, Gentleman, and Heritor, the Loss of a fourth Part of ilk Year's Rent, in which they shall be accused and convicted; and every Yeoman, Tenant, or Farmer, the Loss of such a Proportion of their free Moveables, (after the Payment of their Rents due to their Master and Landlord) as his Majesty's Council shall think fit, not exceeding a fourth Part thereof; and every Burgefs to lose the Liberty of Merchandizing, Trading, and all other Privileges within Burgh, and fourth Part of their Moveables. And his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth hereby authorize and require the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, to be careful to see this Act put to due Execution; and for that end, to call before them all such Persons as, after Admonition of the Minister, in Presence of Two sufficient Witnesses, and by him so attested, shall be given up to the Council as Transgressors of this Act, in withdrawing from their Parish-churches, as aforesaid; and the same, after hearing of the Parties, being duly found, to decern and inflict the Censures and Penalties abovementioned, and such other corporal Punishment as they shall think fit; and direct all Execution necessary for making the same effectual, and to do every other thing they shall find necessary, for procuring Obedience to this Act, and putting the same to punctual Execution, conform to the Tenor and Intent thereof.

Act for the Establishment and Constitution of a National Synod. N^o. XLI.

FOrasmuch as the Ordering and Disposal of the external Government of the Church, and the Nomination of the Persons, by whose Advice Matters relating to the same are to be settled, doth belong to his Majesty, as an inherent Right of the Crown, by virtue of his Prerogative Royal, and supreme Authority in Causes Ecclesiastical: And in prosecution of this Trust, his Majesty, considering how fit and necessary it is, for the Honour and Service of almighty God, the Good and Quiet of the Church, and the better Government thereof in Unity and Order, that there be a National Synod and Assembly duly constitute within this Kingdom, hath therefore appointed and declared, and by these Presents appoints and declares, that there shall be a National Synod of the Church of Scotland; and that this Synod, for the lawful Members thereof, shall consist and be constitute of the Archbishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow, and the remanent Bishops of these Two Provinces, of all Deans of Cathedral Churches, Archdeacons, of all the Moderators of Meetings for Exercise, allowed by the Bishops of the respective Dioceses, and of one Presbyter or Minister of each Meeting, to be chosen and elected by the Moderator and Plurality of Presbyters of the same, and of one or Two from the University of St. Andrews, one from Glasgow, one from the King's College, one from Marshall's College of Aberdeen, and one from the College of Edinburgh; and this Synod, thus constitute, is to meet at such Times and Places, as his Majesty, by his Proclamation, shall appoint; and is to debate, treat, consider, consult, conclude, and determine upon such pious Matters, Causes, and Things, concerning the Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government of this Church, as his Majesty shall from Time to Time, under his Royal Hand, deliver, or cause be delivered, to the Archbishop of St. Andrews, President of the said National Assembly, to be by him offered to their Consideration. The Estates of Parliament do humbly recognise and acknowledge his Majesty's Royal Power and Prerogative aforesaid, with the Piety, Justice, and Prudence of his Majesty's Resolution herein; likewise, his Majesty, with their Advice and Consent, doth hereby establish, ratify, and confirm this Constitution of a National Assembly, as the lawful Constitution of the National Synods and Assemblies of this Church, his Majesty, or his Commissioner, (without whose Presence no National Synod can be kept) being always present: And declares, That no Act, Canon, Order, or Ordinance, shall be owned as an Act of the National Synod of the Church of Scotland, so as to be of any Effect, Force, or Validity in Law, to be observed and kept by the Archbishops and Bishops, the inferior Clergy, and all other Persons within this Realm, (as far as lawfully, being Members of this National Church, it may concern them) but that which shall be considered, consulted, and agreed upon, by the President, and major Part of the Members abovespecified. It is always hereby provided, that nothing be enacted or put in Execution, by Authority of a National Synod within this Kingdom, which shall be contrary to his Majesty's Royal Prerogative, or the Laws of the Kingdom; and that no Act, Matter, or Cause, be debated, consulted, and concluded upon, but what shall be allowed, approved, and confirmed by his Majesty or his Commissioner, present at the said National Synod.

Lord Waristoun's Speech, July 22^d, 1663. with some Account of his Carriage.
N^o. XLII.

Right honourable, much honoured, and beloved Auditors and Spectators, that which I intended and prepared to have spoken at this Time, and in this Condition, immediately before my Death, (if it should be so ordered that this should be my Lot) is not at present in my Power, being taken from me when apprehended; but I hope the Lord shall preserve it to bear my Testimony more fully and clearly than now I can in this Condition, having my Memory much destroyed through much fore and long Sickness, Melancholy, and the excessive drawing of my Blood: Yet, I bless the Lord, (that notwithstanding all these forementioned Distempers) I am in any Capacity to leave this weak and short Testimony.

I. I desire, in the first Place, to confess my Sins, so far as is proper to this Place and Case, and to acknowledge God's Mercies, and to express my Repentance of the one, and my Faith of the other, through the Merits of our Lord Jesus Christ, our gracious Redeemer and Mediator. I confess that my natural Temper Temper hath been hasty and passionate, and that in my Manner of going about and prosecuting the best Pieces of Work and Service to the Lord, and to my Generation, I have been subject to my Excess of Heat, and thereby to some Precipitations, which hath no doubt offended Standers by and Lookers on, and exposed both me and the Work to their Mistakes, whereby the Beauty of that Work hath been much obscured. Neither have I, in following the Lord's Work, his good Work, been altogether free of self-seeking, to the Grief of my own Conscience, which hath made me oftentimes cry out with the Apostle, O wretched Man that I am, who shall deliver me from this Body of Death? and to ly low in the Dust, mourning and lamenting over the same, deprecating God's Wrath, and begging his tender Mercies to pardon, and his powerful Grace to cure all these Evils. I must confess withal, that it doth not a little trouble me, ly heavy upon my Spirit, and will bring me down with Sorrow to the Grave, (though I was not alone in this Offence, but had the Body of the Nation going before me, and the Example of Persons of all Ranks to ensnare me) that I suffered my self, through the Power of Temptations, and too much Fear anent the Straits that my numerous Family might be brought into, to be carried into so great a Length of Compliance in England with the late Usurpers, which did much grieve the Hearts of the Godly, and made those that sought God ashamed, and confounded for my sake; and did give no small Occasion to the Adversary to reproach and blaspheme, and did withal not a little obscure and darken the Beauty of several former Actings about his glorious and blessed Work of Reformation, so happily begun, and far advanced in these Lands; wherein he was graciously pleased to imploy, and by imploying, to honour me to be an Instrument, (tho' the least and unworthiest of many) whereof I am not at all ashamed this Day, but account it my Glory, however that Work be now cried down, opposed, laid in the Dust, and trode upon; and my turning aside to comply with these Men, was the more aggravated in my Person, that I had so frequently and seriously made Profession of my Averseness from, and Abhorrency of that Way, and had shewed much Dissatisfaction with others that had not gone so great a Length: For which, as I seek God's Mercy in Christ Jesus, so I desire that all the Lord's People may, from my Example, be the more stirred up to watch and pray, that they enter not into Temptation.

II. I dare not deny, on the other Hand, but must testify, in the second Place, to the Glory of his free Grace, that the Lord my God hath often shewed, ensured into, and engraven upon my Conscience, the Testimony of his reconciled Mercy, through the Merits of Jesus Christ, pardoning all my Iniquities, and assuring me that he would deliver me also, by the Grace of his holy Spirit, from the Spite, Tyranny, and Dominion thereof, and hath often drawn forth my Spirit to the Exercise of Repentance and Faith, and hath often engraven upon my Heart, in legible Characters, the merciful Pardoning, and gracious begun Cure thereof, to be perfected thereafter to the Glory of his Name, Salvation of my own Soul, and Edification of his own Church.

III. I am pressed in Conscience to leave here at my Death, my true and honest Testimony, in the Sight of God and Man, unto and for the National Covenant, the solemn League and Covenant, the solemn Acknowledgment of our Sins, and Engagements to our Duties, and to all the Grounds and Causes of Fasts and Humiliations, and of the Lord's Displeasure and Contendings with the Land, and to the several Testimonies given for his Interests, by general Assemblies, Commissions of the Kirks, Synods, Presbyteries, and other faithful Ministers and Professors.

IV. I am also pressed to encourage his doing, suffering, witnessing People, and sympathizing Ones with those that suffer, that they would continue in their Duties of mourning, praying, believing, witnessing, and sympathizing with others; and humbly to assure them, in the Name of the Lord our God, the God of his own Word, and Work of his Covenant, Cause and People, that he will be seen, found and felt in his own gracious Way and Time, by his own Means and Instruments, for his own Honour and Glory, to return to his own Truths, Interests, and Servants, to revive his Name, his Covenant, his Word, his Work, his Sanctuary, and his Saints in this Nation, yea, even in these Three covenanted Nations, which were by solemn Bonds, Covenants, Subscriptions, and Oaths, given away and devoted to himself.

V. I exhort all these that have been or are Enemies, or unfriendly to the Lord's Name, Covenant, or Cause, Word, Work, or People in Britain and Ireland, to repent and amend before these sad Judgments that are posting fast, come upon them, for their sinning so highly against the Lord, because of any Temptations of the Time on the right Hand or on the left, by Baits or Straits whatsoever, and that after so many Engagements and Professions of not a few of themselves to the contrary.

VI. I dare not conceal from you who are friendly to all the Lord's precious Interests in Britain and Ireland, that the Lord (to the Commendation of his Grace be it humbly spoken) hath several Times, in the Exercise of my Repentance and Faith, (during my Troubles) and after Groans and Tears upon these Three notable Chapters, viz. the Ninth of Ezra, the Ninth of Nehemiah, and the Ninth of Daniel, together with other suitable Scriptures, even in the very Nick of humble and fervent Prayers and Supplications to him, for reviving again of his Name, Covenant, Cause, Word, and Work of Reformation, in these covenanted Nations, and particularly in poor Scotland, (yea, O dear Scotland!) which solemnly re-engaged unto him, to the good Example and Encouragement of his People in the other Two Nations, to covenant with him also; that the Lord, I say, hath several times given me good Grounds of Hope, and lively Expectations of his merciful, gracious, powerful, and wonderful renewing, reviving again of all his former great Interests in these covenanted Nations, and that in such a Way, by such Means and Instruments, with such Antecedents, Concurrents, Consequences, and Effects, as shall wonderfully rejoyce his mourning Friends, and astonish his contradicting and contra-acting Enemies.

VII. I do earnestly recommend my poor afflicted Wife and Children, and their Posterity, to the choicest Blessings of God, and unto the Prayers and Favours of all the Lord's Children and Servants, in their earnest Dealings with God and Man in their Behalf, that they may not be ruined for my sake, but that, for the Lord my God's sake, they may be favoured, assisted, supplied, and comforted, and may be also fitted of the Lord for his Fellowship and Service, whom God himself hath moved me often in their own Presence, and with their own Consents, to dedicate, devote, resign, alike, and as well as I devoted and resigned my own Soul unto him, for all Time and Eternity.

VIII. Now here, I beseech the Lord to open the Eyes of all the Instruments of my Trouble, who are not deadly irreconcilable Enemies to himself and his People, that they may see the Wrong done by them to his Interest and People, and to me and mine, and may repent thereof, return to the Lord, and more cordially maintain maintain, own and adhere unto all his Interests in Time to come. The Lord give unto them Repentance, Remission and Amendment, which is the worst Wish I do, and the best Wish I can wish unto them; for I can wish no better to my self.

IX. I do most humbly and earnestly beg the fervent Prayers of all his praying Children, Servants, and Instruments, wheresoever they be, whether absent or present, to be put up in behalf of his Name, Cause, Covenant, Work, and People, and also in behalf of my Wife and Children, and their Posterity, and that the Lord would glorify himself, edify his Church, encourage his Saints further, and accomplish his good Work by all his Doings and Dealings, in Substance towards all his own.

X. Whereas I hear, that some of my own Friends have slandered and defamed my Name, as if I had been accessory to his late Majesty's Death, and to the making the Change of the Government thereupon; I am free, as I shall now answer before his Tribunal, from any Accession by Counsel or Contrivance, or any other Way, to his late Majesty's Death, or to their making that Change of the Government; and the Lord judge between me and mine Accusers: And I pray the Lord to preserve the present King his Majesty, and to pour his best Blessings upon him and his Royal Posterity; and the Lord give unto them good and faithful Counsellors, holy and wise Counsels, and prosperous Success, to God's Glory, and the Good of his Interest and People, and to their own Honour and Happiness.

XI. I do here submit and commit my Soul and Body, Wife and Children, and their Childrens Children, from Generation to Generation, for ever, with all others our Lord's Friends and Followers, and all his doing, suffering, witnessing, and sympathizing ones, in the present and subsequent Generations, unto the Lord's choicest Mercies, Graces, Favours, Services, Employments, Impowerments, Enjoyments, Improvements, and Inheritments in Earth, and in Heaven, in Time and Eternity; all which Suits, with all others which he hath at any Time, by his Spirit, moved and assisted me to make, and put up according to his Will, I leave before the Throne, and upon the Father's merciful Bowels, and the Son's mediating Merits, and the holy Spirit's compassionating Graces, for now and for evermore. Amen.

Short Narrative of his Carriage before and after his last Discourse above.

HIS Carriage all the Time from his coming from London, was most convincingly Christian, full of Tenderness of Spirit, and Meekness towards all, so that all who were in his Company, both in the Ship and at other Times, asserted, they were never in the Company of a more godly, sincere, fervent Seeker of God, and one that was most sensible of the least Tenderness exercised towards himself. Before he came out of the Ship he prayed for a Blessing upon his Majesty, and upon State and Kirk, and when landed at Leith he enquired for the Ministers of Edinburgh; to which it was answered, they are all silenced and put out of the Town. Well (said he) their Silence does preach, and truly Mr. Douglas, &c. might have preached either before State or Kirk.

During the whole Time of this Imprisonment the Lord kept him in a most spiritual tender Frame, even to the Conviction of some that hated him formerly. The great Thing he most desired, was gracious through-bearing, which he said was only to be had through the Supply of the Spirit, and Intercession of the Saints; and the Thing he most feared, was fainting in the Hour of Trial, and for that Cause did earnestly desire, that Prayer might fervently be put up to God for him, which was indeed done in all Parts of the Land, which had its good Success in God's own Way.

When he received his Sentence, he did receive it with exceeding great Meekness, to the Admiration of all, desiring the best Blessings of Heaven to be upon his Majesty, and upon State and Kirk, whatever befel himself, and that God would give his Majesty true and faithful Counsellors, &c.

The nearer he was to his Death he was the more quieted in his Mind, which had been discomposed by Poison, and the drawing of Threescore Ounces of Blood, the Physicians intending hereby to distract him, or make him an idiot Fool. The Night before his Death he slept very sweetly, and in the Morning was very full of Comfort, uttering many sweet Expressions as to his Assurance of being clothed with a long white Robe before Night, and of getting a new Song of the Lamb's Praise put in his Mouth. He dined very cheerfully, hoping to sup in Heaven, and to drink the next Cup fresh and new in his Father's Kingdom.

Thereafter he was alone till the Time of his being brought forth. When he was going to the Scaffold he said frequently to the People, Your Prayers, your Prayers. The Lord kept him very composed under some Disturbances in the Streets. When come up to the Scaffold, he said to the People, I intreat you quiet your selves a little, till this dying Man deliver his last Words among you. He likewise desired them not to be offended that he made some Use of his Paper to help his Memory, so much wasted by long Sickness and Malice of Physicians; then he delivered the above Discourse, and repeated it again on the other Side of the Scaffold.

After this he prayed with the greatest Fervour and Humility, beginning thus, Abba, Abba, Father, Father, accept this thy poor sinful Servant, coming unto thee through the Merits of Jesus Christ, &c. After he had taken his Leave of his Friends, he prayed again at the Foot of the Ladder, cheerfully resigning God's Interests and his own Soul into the Hands of his heavenly Father. There were no Ministers allowed to be with him, but a Person present observed, that there was no missing of Ministers there, and the Lord made good those blessed Words, Philip. 4. 19. and 2 Cor. 1. 5. The Executioner came to him desiring his Forgiveness, to whom he said, The Lord forgive thee poor Man, which I also do, and gave him some Money, and bade him do his Work right. He was helped up the Ladder by some of his Friends in deep Mourning: As he ascended, he said, Your Prayers, your Prayers; I desire your Prayers in the Name of the Lord; so great at all Times was his Esteem of Prayers. The other Circumstances of his Death have been already noticed in the History.

A Proclamation for a publick general Fast, throughout the Realm of Scotland.
No. XLIV.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Scotland, England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all and sundry Our good Subjects, Greeting: Forasmuch as We, by the great Injuries and Provocations from the States of the United Provinces, have been forced, for the just Defence and Vindication of Our own and Our Subjects Rights, to prepare and set out Naval Forces, and to engage in a War, upon most important Reasons of Honour and Justice: And We, out of Our religious Disposition, being readily inclined to approve of an humble Motion made to Us, for commanding a general Fast to be kept throughout this Our whole Kingdom, for imploring the Blessing of almighty God, upon Our Councils and Forces employed in this Expedition; have thought fit, by this Our Proclamation, to indict a general and publick Fast, and Day of Humiliation, for the end foresaid. Our Will is therefore, and We straitly command and charge, that the said Fast be religiously and solemnly kept throughout this Our whole Kingdom, by all Our Subjects and People within the same, upon the First Wednesday of June, being the Seventh Day thereof: Requiring hereby the Reverend Archbishops and Bishops, to give Notice hereof to the Ministers in their respective Dioceses, that upon the Lord's Day immediately preceeding the said Seventh Day of June, they cause read this Our Proclamation from the Pulpit, in every Parish-church, and that they exhort all Our loving Subjects, to a sober and devout Performance of the said Fasting and Humiliation, as they tender the Favour of almighty God, the Duty they owe to Us, and the Peace and Preservation of their Country; certifying all those who shall contemn or neglect such a religious and necessary Work, they shall be proceeded against, and punished as Contemners of Our Authority, and Persons disaffected to the Honour and Safety of their Country. Act of Council against Ministers, Edinburgh, December 7th, 1665. N^o. XLV.

THe Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council finding it now, after a long and tender Forbearance, necessary, that their Acts of the Third of December, One thousand six hundred and sixty two, and Thirteenth of August, One thousand six hundred and sixty three Years, against such Ministers as entred in, or since the Year One thousand six hundred and forty nine, and had not since obtained Presentations from their lawful Patrons, and Collations and Admissions from their Ordinaries, be, upon some weighty Grounds and Considerations therein mentioned, extended against all such other Ministers, who being entred before the Year Forty nine, have, since the Restitution of the Government of the Church by Archbishops and Bishops, relinquished their Ministry, or been deposed therefrom by their Ordinary; do therefore command and charge all such Ministers, within Forty Days after Publication hereof, and all such Ministers as shall hereafter relinquish their Ministry, or be deposed therefrom by their Ordinary, (within Forty Days after their relinquishing and Deposition) to remove themselves, their Families and Goods belonging to them, out of these respective Parishes where they were Incumbents, and not to reside within Twenty Miles of the same, or within Six Miles of Edinburgh or any Cathedral Church, or Three Miles of any Burgh Royal within this Kingdom, or to reside Two of them within one Parish: With Certification, if they fail to remove themselves as said is, and to give exact Obedience hereunto, (unless they have the Permission of the Lords of the Privy Council, Lords of his Majesty's Commission for Church-affairs, or of the Bishop of the Diocese) they are to incur the Penalties of the Laws made against Movers of Sedition, and to be proceeded against with that Strictness which is due to so great Contempt of his Majesty's Authority over Church and State. And do hereby inhibit and discharge all Heritors and Householders in Burgh or Land, to give any Presence or Countenance to any one or more of these Ministers, removed by this present Act, to preach or exercise any Act of the Office of a Minister: With Certification, if they, after Publication hereof, shall presume so to do, they are to be proceeded against according to Law: And commanding and requiring all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Magistrates of Burghs, and Justices of Peace, to make diligent Search and Inquiry within their respective Jurisdictions, if any such Ministers, as fall within the Compass of this or the other Two Acts of Council aforesaid, do reside within the Bounds therein prohibited, and to seize upon and imprison their Persons, ay and while they find sufficient Caution to compare before the Lords of his Majesty's Council or Commission, betwixt and such a short Day, as the said Sheriffs, Stewarts, Magistrates of Burghs, and Justices of Peace, shall, upon Consideration of the Distance of the Place, judge convenient: And in case of not meeting of the Council or Commission at the Day foresaid, to compare the next Meeting Day thereafter; certifying all Sheriffs, Magistrates of Burghs, and Justices of Peace, that his Majesty will account their Neglect and Remissness in this Affair, an high Contempt of his Authority and Commands, and punish the same accordingly. And ordain these Presents to be printed and published, that none pretend Ignorance.

Proclamation against Conventicles, Edinburgh, December 7th, 1665. N^o. XLVI.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To Our Lovits, Heralds, Pursevants, Macers, and Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as the assembling and convening Our Subjects, without Our Warrant and Authority, is a most dangerous and unlawful Practice, prohibited and discharged by several Laws and Acts of Parliament, under the Pains against such as unlawfully convocate Our Lieges; and notwithstanding thereof, and that it is the Duty of all Our good and faithful Subjects, to acknowledge and comply with Our Government Ecclesiastick and Civil, as it is now established by Law within this Kingdom, and in order thereto, to give their cheerful Concurrence, Countenance and Assistance to such Ministers, as by publick Authority are, or shall be admitted in their several Parishes, and to attend the ordinary Meetings for Divine Worship of the same. And by the first Act in the Third Session of Our late Parliament, it is declared, that the withdrawing from, and not joyning in the said publick and ordinary Meetings for Divine Worship, is to be accounted seditious: And likewise, by an expresse Clause of the First Act of the Third Session of Our said Parliament, all such Ministers as have not obtained Presentations and Collations, and all such as should be suspended or deprived, and yet should dare to presume to exercise their Ministry, are to be punished as seditious Persons. Nevertheless, divers Persons, disaffected to Our Authority and Government, do not only withdraw from the publick Meetings of Divine Worship in their own Parish-churches, but under the Pretence of Religion assemble themselves: Likeas, some of the foresaid pretended Ministers presume to preach, lecture, pray or perform other Acts belonging to the Ministerial Function, contrary to the foresaid Acts of Parliament, and to many other Acts of Parliament, made by Our Royal Ancestors, and revived by Our self, against such seditious Practices. And albeit it is Our Royal Resolution to give all due Encouragement to Piety and pious Persons, in the Worship and Service of God, in an orderly Way; yet, considering that Conventicles and unwarrantable Meetings and Conventions, under Pretence and Colour of Religion, and the Exercises thereof, have been the ordinary Seminaries of Separation and Rebellion, and are in themselves reproachful to Our Authority and Government Ecclesiastick and Civil, and tending to the alienating of Our Subjects Hearts and Affections from the same, and ministering Opportunities for infusing these pernicious and poisonous Principles, the Consequences whereof threaten no less than the Confusion and Ruin of Church and Kingdom. Our Will is herefore, and We charge you strictly and command, that, incontinent these Our Letters seen, you pass, and in Our Name and Authority, inhibit and discharge all Conventicles, Conventions, and other Meetings, of what Number soever, for, and under the Pretence of the Exercise of Religion

ligion, except such Meetings for Divine Worship, and other relating hereunto, as are allowed by Authority: Certifying all such Persons as shall be present at such unlawful Meetings, they shall be looked upon as seditious Persons, and shall be punished by fining, confining, and other corporal Punishments, as Our Privy Council, or such as have, or shall have Our Commission for that Effect, shall think fit; and also certifying all such Ministers as shall dare to perform any Acts of the Ministerial Function, contrary to the foresaid Acts, and all such as shall reset any of these disorderly Persons, known to be such, or who shall have any Hand in contriving of, or enticing others to keep the said Conventicles, or shall suffer the same to be kept within their Houses, where they are dwelling for the Time; that they shall, after due Conviction, be liable not only to the foresaid Pains, but also to the highest Pains which are due to, and may, by the Laws of this Kingdom, be inflicted upon seditious Persons. And for the better preventing of all such unlawful Meetings, We do hereby command and require all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Magistrates of Burghs, Bailies of Regalities, Justices of Peace, Constables, and other Our publick Ministers, to make exact Search from Time to Time in all Places, where any such Meetings have been, shall, or may be suspected, and to apprehend every such Person, who shall keep or frequent these Meetings, and to commit them to the next Prison, therein to remain till further Order be taken with them, by such as have, or shall have Our Authority for that Effect: And ordains you to make Publication hereof at the Market-crosses of Our Royal Burroughs, and at every Parish-church within the Kingdom on the Lord's Day, wherethrough none pretend Ignorance thereof, as ye will answer to Us thereupon. The which to do, We commit to you, conjunctly and severally, Our full Power by these Our Letters, delivering them by you duly execute and indorsed again to the Bearer. Given at Edinburgh, the Seventh Day of December, and of Our Reign the Seventh Year, 1665.

APPENDIX.

BOOK SECOND.

PROCLAMATION against the Apologetical Narration, February 8th, 1666. N^o. I.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering that by divers ancient and laudable Laws and Acts of Parliament, and particularly the 10 Act, 10 Parl. the 134 Act, 8 Parl. of King James VI. of blessed Memory, and by several other Laws and Acts, the Authors, Printers, Venders, or Disposers of infamous and scandalous Libels, are punishable by Death, Confiscation of Moveables, and divers other high Pains and Punishments; and the said Lords being informed, that there has been a Pamphlet, of the Nature foresaid, imported, An Apologetical Narration of the suffering Ministers of the Kirk of Scotland, since August 1661. which is printed and dispersed into several Parts of this Kingdom; and, upon Examination and Perusal thereof, is found to be full of seditious, treasonable, and rebellious Principles, contrived of purpose to traduce the King's Authority and Government, the Proceedings of the late Parliament, and established by Law; and thereby to seduce the Lieges from their Allegiance and Obedience, and to strengthen the disaffected in their rebellious Principles, Tenets, and Practices. Therefore, and to vindicate the Honour of this Kingdom, and to witness and declare, that such Principles and Tenets, as are contained in the said Pamphlet, are detested and abhorred by them, as treasonable and seditious, and are contrary to the Laws of this Kingdom, and destructive to the King's Authority and Prerogative Royal, under which this Kingdom hath flourished for many Ages, and that they may show how much they abominate such Tenets and Principles, they ordain, That upon the 14th Day of February instant, the said Pamphlet be publicly burnt on the high Street of Edinburgh, near to the Market-cross, by the Hand of the Hangman; and that all Havers of any of the said Pamphlets, residing besouth the Water of Tay, shall bring in and deliver the same to the Sheriffs of the respective Shires, or their Deputies, to be transmitted to the Clerk of Privy Council by them, betwixt and the last Day of February instant; and benorth the said Water, betwixt and the 21st Day of March next: With Certification, that if thereafter any Person of whatsoever Degree, Quality or Sex they shall be of, shall have any of the said printed Copies in their Custody or Possession, that they shall be liable in Payment of the Sum of Two thousand Pounds Scots Money, to be exacted without any Favour or Defalcation. And further, if they or any other Person shall be found hereafter to be Contriver, Abetter, or Assister to the making up, printing, publishing, or dispersing of the said seditious Pamphlets, that they shall be proceeded against as Authors, Printers, Importers, Venders, or Dispersers of seditious and infamous Libels, and all Pains and Penalties made against them, shall be inflicted without Mercy; and ordain the Magistrates of the Town of Edinburgh, to cause burn one of the Copies of the said Pamphlets, lets, in Manner foresaid; and these Presents to be forthwith printed and published at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, that none pretend Ignorance.

Letter from a Gentleman in Galloway. N^o. II.

Sir,

Your Desire to know the present Condition of this afflicted Country, hath offered me Occasion to procure you some Account of the grievous Sufferings of several Parishes, especially within the Stewartry of Galloway, upon the account of not submitting to the Government of Prelacy, and such Preachers as are thrust in upon them by it. Sir, Any thing I can say here, is but a Hint, in comparison of what might be found upon a more full Search; yet the little View that is given you here, I suppose, is well instructed from the Particulars of every Family and Person who suffered in these Parishes, though (for Shortness) I have sent you only the Sum of the whole in each Parish. Truly, Sir, though I be no Phanatick, nor Favourer of Phanaticism, yet I cannot but be deeply affected, not only as a Christian, but as a Man and Member within this Kingdom; for these Things that are fallen out here, seem to import, not only the breaking of some of that Party called Phanaticks, but the quite undoing of a considerable Part of this Kingdom, and putting them out of all Capacity to be serviceable in the necessary Defence of the rest, against the Invasions of a foreign Army, when we are so often threatned: For in these Bounds generally all Men (without Difference) are disobliged, and discouraged from doing any Service in that Sort, if there should be Occasion offered. I wish a due Impression upon you also, and every one who minds the general Good of the Land, and chiefly our Rulers, upon whom are the managing of Affairs under his Majesty, that Remedy might be found out for preventing the weakning and destroying our own selves, especially now when we are in Hazard from our Enemies Abroad: But it is a sad Matter, that no Man dare represent his Grievances, or complain of Wrongs done to him or his Interests, lest he be ill lookt on, and put himself in Hazard of greater Sufferings, as several here have found by sad Experience, for complaining to the Commanders. The First of these Sufferings was begun the Year 1663. about Mid-may, when the Forces came into Dumfries and Kirkcudbright. The Second was in the Year 1665. when the Party, Horse and Foot, came in under the Command of Sir James Turner. The Third was in this present Year 1666. about the Month of March, or Beginning of April, when the Party came in under the Command of the said Sir James Turner, who yet continues in the Country. At the first Two Times, the Stewartry of Galloway mainly suffered by them, but in this last Expedition, not only Galloway, but also the Sherifdom of Nithsdale hath suffered, (of both which I have sent you a short Account here inclosed.) First, as to their grievous Exactions from that People, who were but poor before this Time, in comparison of other Parts. Next, you will find some Instances of several of the Soldiers inhuman, and also atheistical Deportment, in these Bounds. I could have sent you likewise Account of many stumbling Blocks the People have from their present Preachers, whom they call Curates, both as to their abrupt Entry, and contrary their Consent; and as to the light and unseemly Carriage in Pulpit: But I forbear in this, lest I trouble you with Tedioufness, there are so many Instances of this Sort; and it is needless, seeing they are so notour to all Men in these Bounds: Only (to make you laugh) I must add one, before I proceed, which is certain. One of these called Curates, on a certain Sabbath, inveighing against his People that they did not keep the Kirk, he threatned them after this manner, God nor I be hanged over the Balk of that Kirk; and at another Time, God nor I be hanged over this Pulpit, but I shall gar you all come in from the highest to the lowest. By these Things, you may easily guess if these Men be fit to travel in the weighty Work of the Ministry, or that they can either gain Love or Authority among the People, for all the Business that is made to bring them to Subjection. Sir, I hope you will not question but I am a Lover of his Majesty's Interest, and the Country's Good, having given some Proof of this in former Times; but considering the Carriage of these Men, and of them who are employed at this Time to bring the People to Conformity, I am far mistaken if either the one or the other be fit Instruments for perswading others to their Duty either to God or Man; yea, I am apprehensive that the Way which is taken, shall prove a Means of strengthning that People in their former Principles, and rendring Episcopacy, Bishops, and such Preachers, more hateful to them than ever before, rather than bring them to a cheerful Submission; and others who shall hear of the very deplorable Case of this Country, cannot but be induced both to compassionate them, and also grow in more Dislike of the Course now carried on. And to speak the Truth, it seems, there could not have been a more expeditious Way found out for weakning that Cause of Conformity, and strengthning that Cause of those who now suffer; yea, I dare say, it hath done as much to this purpose, if not more, than all the preachings on the Hills and in Houses, by the casten out Ministers. This People are weakned in their Estates indeed, but confirmed in their Opinion. It is palpable that the intended Conformity cannot be gained by such extreme Dealing, but rather marred; and will not the Report of this rigid Dealing, (which cannot be hid) have Influence upon all those of their Judgment, to alienate them the more from the Course? I confess, this Consideration is like to have little Weight with some covetous Soldiers, (employed here) assuming to themselves an arbitrary Power to prey upon a desolate People for their own private Gain: But I expect that judicious and unbiaised Men, who tender the Good of the Country, and his Majesty's Interest therein, will lay this to Heart, and take their best Way to represent it to our Rulers, for Remedy in the Matter, and moving their Compassion toward a poor People, that have few to speak for them. Sir, I shall detain you no longer from reading this inclosed Relation, but tendring my Respects to your Wife, I rest,

Sir,

Your humble Servant.

Follows

In the Sheriffdom of Nithsdale, or Dumfries Shire.

1. In the Town and Parish of Dumfries , from Fifty one Families, was exacted the Sum of	4617	15	4
2. In the Parish of Kirkmah0 , from Twenty poor Families,	1341	6	8
3. In Dunscore Parish, from Fourteen Families,	1411	13	4
4. In Glencairn Parish, from Families,	2146	14	8
The Total of these Sums extends to	51575	13	4

Besides all these abovenamed Sums, which are instructed in every particular Parish,

I. There are Six or Seven Parishes in the Stewartry of Galloway, and Fourteen in the Sheriffdom of Nithsdale, of whom I have received no particular Account as yet, but you may judge the Lion by his Paw.

II. Besides the Sums abovenamed, it is to be considered, that the great Expence of Quartering is not received in the most Part of the Parishes abovenamed, which would make a great Addition to the former Sums; but it cannot well be counted.

III. Besides that which they have gotten out already, there are several Persons that have not got their Fines, and others their Cefs-money, as yet paid; but is to be exacted.

IV. That several of the poor People (through Fear) have given out divers Times Buds and Bribes in Money and other Things, to some Officers and Soldiers, for keeping Cefs and Quarter off them, which notwithstanding profited little or nothing.

V. That all these forementioned Sums are, by and attour all the Fines, imposed by the State, which, within the Stewartry of Galloway, upon Ninety one Persons, extends to the Sum of

29260 00 00

And in the Sheriffdom of Nithsdale, upon Forty one Persons, extends to Which being laid together, the Parliament-fines within the Stewartry of Galloway, and Sheriffdom of Nithsdale, extend to

77120 00 00

And that, besides the Expences of Cefs and Quarter for the Fines themselves, for several Persons, was put to pay near as much more Cefs as their Fines came to, besides Quarter.

VI. That by and attour all the foresaid Losses, there are many Families (whose Sums are not here reckoned) in Probability totally ruined, and many others scattered already; for Instance, In Lochrutton, a little Parish, I find to be reckoned to be above Sixteen Families utterly broken. In Irongray Parish, the most Part of the Families put from House-keeping already, the Soldiers having violently taken away, both there and elsewhere, from several Families, the Thing they should have lived on, even to the leading away of their Hay-stacks. I forbear to set down the rest of the broken and ruined Families, until I can give you a more distinct Account: Only I can tell you in the general, that utter Ruin, to the most Part of the Families in this Country, is like to be the Consequence of these grievous and intolerable Impositions; and also, to my certain Knowledge, there are several Gentlemen who formerly were well to live, that are now put from House-keeping, and forced to wander; yea, oft-time to be beholden to others for a Night's Lodging, the Soldiers having possessed themselves in their Houses, Cattle, plenishing, Barns, &c.

VII. Ordinarily, wherever they come to quarter, they do not rest content with Sufficiency, but set themselves to waste needlessly; at some times lend for Sheep off the Hill, and cast whole Barks of them to their Hounds and Ratches: Also by treading and scattering Corn and Straw, they and their Pedies at their Pleasure, and usually saying, We came to destroy, and we shall destroy you.

VIII. They have this for an ordinary Use, that when they have eaten up the Master or Landlord, they fall next upon the poor Tenants to eat them up also; yea, though they were never so conformed to hearing, &c. whereof I could shew many Instances, which I cannot for Shortness. Also in other Places, when they have consumed the Tenant, they have fallen upon the Landlord; this they did in Kirkmahoe upon a Gentleman, who (for ought I know) conforms all the length they press him to as yet.

IX. It is observed every where in that Country, that these who have conformed, and are obedient to the Laws from the Beginning, and others who have conformed of late, do no less suffer than those who hold out to the last; yea, some in several Parishes, who have given Subjection to what is demanded, have suffered more than some who have given none, which has produced an universal Discontent and Outcry in this Country: And many Husbands here who yield Obedience to the full length, are punished by Fines, Cess, and Quarter, for their Wives not Obedience; and ye know, Sir, that is sad, for there are many Wives who will not be commanded by their Husbands in lesser Things than this; but I must tell you that this hath occasioned much Contention, Fire, and Strife in Families, and brought it to this Height, that some Wives are found to flee from their Husbands, and seek a Shelter elsewhere, and so the poor Good-man is doubly punished for all his Conformity.

X. It is specially to be considered, that besides all which this Country hath suffered hitherto, the Soldiers are sent forth through the Country again, and Fine, Cess, and Quarter is imposed of new upon the same Persons and Families who were fined before, yea, upon some it is doubled and trebled. I have lately heard that some Yeomen are fined in Five hundred Merks, besides, the Gentlemen in Six or Seven hundred Pounds. I cannot see what shall be the Fruit of these Things, except utter Ruin to their worldly Estates.

XI. That all the Papists that are in this Country, none of them are troubled, except it be very few, and these inconsiderable Persons, who are fined in some feckless Thing for the Fashion.

XII. Wherever the Soldiers come to quarter, they ordinarily hinder, or else interrupt the Worship of God in Families, by their Threatnings and blasphemous Expressions; yea, the poor People are so straitened that scarcely they have Liberty to call on God in secret Places, but they are punished by those Men, and cruelly mocked, to the constant Grief, Vexation, and Disquiet of those upon whom they are quartered.

XIII. Notwithstanding of all these Impositions upon that People, and Aggravations of their Sufferings abovementioned, yet the People are commanded to take a Bond, wherein (besides all the particular Obligations required in that Bond) is contained an Acknowledgment, that the Commander of that Party has dealt civilly and discreetly with them.

The particular Instances which follow in the Autograph are not inserted, because they are pretty much evinced with those already printed in Nephthali.

Proclamation for procuring Obedience to Ecclesiastical Authority, October 11th, 1666. N^o. III.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, to Macers of Our Privy Council, and Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as by the First Act of the Third Session of Our late Parliament, entituled, Act against Separation and Disobedience to Ecclesiastical Authority, it is recommended to the Lords of Our Privy Council to take speedy and effectual Course that the said Act, enjoying Obedience to the Government of the Church, as it is now settled by Law, receive due and ready Obedience from all Subjects; with Power to them to decern and inflict such Censures, Penalties and corporal Punishments, as they shall think fit, upon the Contraveners, and direct all Execution necessary, for making the same effectual, and to do every other Thing needful for procuring Obedience to the said Act, and putting the same to punctual Execution, conform to the Tenor and Intent thereof. And by divers other Acts of Parliament and Council, made against Papists, Quakers, and other disaffected Persons, they are commanded, under great Pains and Penalties, to frequent the Ordinances, in hearing Sermon, and partaking of the Sacraments, and all other Acts of publick Worship, at their own Parish-churches, and not to keep any private Meetings or Conventicles: Nevertheless, the said Acts have not received that vigorous Execution and Obedience in some Parts of the Kingdom, which might have been given, if Masters of Families, Heritors, and Landlords in the Country, and Magistrates within Burghs Royal, had been careful and zealous in their Stations in procuring Obedience from their Servants, Tenants, and Inhabitants, over whom they have Power and Jurisdiction; so that it is more than high Time to prevent the Increase and spreading of these Disorders, which, by evil Example, might poison and infect these that are yet found in their Principles, and well affected to Our Government. OUR WILL IS HEREFOR E, and We charge you straitly, and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, remanent head Burghs of the several Shires and other Places needful, and there, by open Proclamation, in Our Name and Authority, command and charge all Masters of Families that they cause their domestick Servants, Grieves, Chamberlains, and others entertained by them, to give Obedience to Our Laws foresaid, and Acts of Council; and particularly that they frequent the publick Worship and Ordinances at their own Parish-churches, and participate of the Sacraments, and abstain from all Conventicles and private Meetings, and that they retain none in their Service but such as they will be answerable for; and in case of their Disobedience, that they remove them out of their Service immediately after Intimation thereof by the Minister of the Parish: As also, that all Heritors, Landlords, and Life-renters, who have granted any Tacks or Rentals to their Tenants, which are yet standing unexpired, cause their Tenants and Rentallers give sufficient Bond and Surety for obeying the said Acts of Parliament and and Council, and specially for frequenting publick Worship and Ordinances, as said is, and abstaining from private Meetings; and if Need be, that they raise Letters under the Signet of Our Privy Council, and charge them, for that Effect, upon Six Days, and in case of Disobedience, to denounce them to Our Horn, and registrate the same; for which End, Warrant is given to direct Letters in their Name against all and sundry their Tenants and Rentallors: And We do declare, that We will give and bestow the Escheats falling to Us by the said Hornings, upon the Landlords and Setters of these Tacks and Rentals, in so far as may be extended thereto; recommending hereby to Our Treasurer-principal, and Treasurer-depute, and others of Our Exchequer, to grant the same accordingly: And in case the Tenants be removeable, and refuse to give Obedience, that they warn and pursue them to remove, and obtain Decrets of Ejection against them; and that no Heritor, Landlord, or Liferenter, set their Lands hereafter to any Person, by Word or Writ, but to such as they will be answerable for, as said is; and that they take Surety from them by Provisions and Obligements to be insert in their Tacks, or otherwise by Bond apart, in case there be no Writ, that the said Tacksmen, Rentallors and all others their Hindes, Cottars, and Servants, who shall live under them upon the said Lands, shall give Obedience in manner foresaid; otherwise, that their Tacks, Rentals, and whole Interest, Right and Possession shall be void and expire, ipso facto, as if they had never been granted, and that without any Declarator or further Process, and then as now, and now as then, that they shall renounce all Right that they shall have thereto, and shall remove themselves without any Warning; and in case of Failure, the Landlords and others are to charge and denounce them in manner foresaid. As likewise, that all Magistrates of Royal Burrows take special Care and Notice, and be answerable, that their Burghesses and Inhabitants be obedient to the foresaid Acts of Parliament and Council, and that they cause charge such of them, as they shall think fit, and are suspected, to give Bond and Surety, as said is; and for the Magistrates own Relief, in case they contravene, and if they fail, to denounce them in manner foresaid: With Certification, that all Masters of Families, Landlords, and Magistrates of Burghs, who shall not give punctual Obedience in manner above written, that they shall be liable to the same Pains and Penalties due to the Contraveners, but prejudice always of proceeding against the Contraveners themselves, and inflicting the said Pains, and all other Pains contained in any Act of Parliament or Council heretofore made against Papists, Quakers, and Persons disobedient: Certifying also all concerned, that the Lords of Our Privy Council will not only take special Care to secure the publick Peace, but also to discover all secret Attempts and Designs to disturb the same, and to punish all Persons that shall be found guilty, according to the Quality of their Offence. And ordains these Presents to be printed and published, that none pretend Ignorance.

Council's Letter to the Commissioner, November 17th, 1666. N^o. IV.

May it please your Grace,

THe Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having received Information of some Risings, and Appearances of Disorders in Kirkcudbright and other Places adjacent, have thought it their Duty to give his Majesty timely Notice thereof, and that Orders are given for suppressing of the same, which they do hereby offer to your Grace to be presented to his Majesty.

Yesternight one of the Bailies of Dumfries came hither, and informed, that on Thursday last towards the Break of Day, about Fourscore of Horles in Arms, and also many Foot entred the Town of Dumfries, and having about one Hundred and Fifty Foot without the Town, did set Guards to the Magistrates Houses, and invaded the House where Sir James Turner was, seized upon his Person, carried him from his Bed to the Streets, and through the Town, and at last carried him away with them. The Bailie having seen this, came immediately hither to give us Notice: He says, there are no Persons of any Quality among them, but that they give out themselves that Gillbert Ker is there. This Morning we have received further Notice of the Gatherings of some People in these Places, which we are very hopeful will soon vanish, or speedily be suppressed. Yet we have thought it our Duty, in discharge of our Trust we have from his Majesty, to apply his Majesty's Authority for the speedy suppressing of the same, as the Beginning of a most desperate Rebellion; and thereupon have given Orders to the Lieutenant-general of his Majesty's Forces, for marching presently against them, as will more fully appear to your Grace by the Order itself, the Copy whereof is herein inclosed. Orders are also sent to Persons of greatest Interest in these Countries, to be assisting in this Affair; of which Orders there is a Copy also inclosed. This being all the Information we have yet gotten, we could do no more at present; for the Forces they are to march the Morrow Morning: But, according as we shall receive further Intelligence, we shall not be wanting in the Discharge of our Duty for the suppressing thir Rebels, and securing the Peace. And, upon this Occasion, the Council having had their Thoughts upon the fittest Means for securing the Peace, it is their unanimous Judgment, that it is most necessary for that end, that the Heritors of the several Countries, especially of the Southern and Western Shires, and such other as his Majesty's Council shall think fit, be presently required to sign the Declaration concerning the Covenant, and that such as shall delay or refuse, be secured and lockt upon as Enemies to his Majesty's Authority and Government: As this will be a ready Mean to discover who are well or ill affected to his Majesty, so without it, we conceive, neither the publick Peace nor his Majesty's Government can be well secured.

We rest your Grace's humble Servants,

Proclamation against the Rebels in Arms, November 21. 1666. N^o. V.

CHARLES, &c. To all and sundry Our good Subjects, Greeting : Whereas by the clear and expresse Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom, it is declared to be high Treason for the Subjects of the same, or any Number of them, more or less, upon any Ground or Pretext whatsoever, to rise or continue in Arms, without Our special Authority and Approbation ; and nevertheless, a Party of disloyal Persons, disaffected to Our Government and Laws, who have formerly tasted of Our Royal Bounty and Clemency, whereunto they ow their Lives and Fortunes, having forfeited the same by their former rebellious practices, under the Cloke of Religion, the ordinary Colour and Pretext of Rebellion, have now again risen in Arms, within the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Shires of Galloway and Air, and other Western Shires ; and having in a hostile Way entred within the Town of Dumfries, has there, and in other Places of the Country, seized upon the Persons of divers of Our good Subjects, has plundered and robbed them, and others of their Horses, Arms, and other Goods, and has done and committed many Outrages and treasonable Deeds and Attempts against Our Authority, and against and upon Our Royal Subjects. And We, out of Our Royal Tenderneſs for the Peace and Quiet of this Our ancient Kingdom, being careful to repress the said Rebellion, and that simple People be not ensnared by the said Rebels and their Emissaries, and involved in their Rebellion ; and, to take off all Pretence of Ignorance or Excuse, do therefore, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, declare the said Insurrection to be an open, manifest, and horrid Rebellion, and high Treason ; and that the Authors and Actors in the same, and their Adherents, are and ought to be pursued as profest and declared Traitors to Us : And do hereby command and charge all Persons, who are in Arms against, or without Our Warrant and Authority, to desist from their Rebellion, and to lay down their Arms, and to render and present their Persons to the Lieutenant-general of Our Forces, or some others of Our Officers or Magistrates, within Twenty four Hours after Publication hereof : With Certification, that if they continue in their Rebellion after the said Time, they shall be holden and proceeded against as incorrigible and desperate Traitors, and that they shall be incapable of Mercy and Pardon. And We do discharge and command all Our Subjects, that no Person presume to aid, assist, harbour, reset, or any way supply the said Rebels, or any of them, under the Pain of Treason ; and that they do not keep Correspondence, or intercommune with them, without Warrant of Our said Lieutenant-general, under the Pain foresaid : And We do expect in this Juncture, and do require and command all Our Subjects, to be assisting to Our said Lieutenant-general, under the Pain foresaid, and being required by him, or others having Authority from him, to that effect, to rise in Arms with all their Power, and to joyn and concur with them for suppressing the said Rebels, under the Pain of Treason, if they refuse or disobey. And further, We do strictly enjoyn and command all Masters of Families, Heritors, and other Landlords, that they be careful and vigilant that their Children, Servants, and Domesticks, and their Tenants and others under their Power, do not break out and joyn with the said Rebels ; certifying them, if they be found negligent in their Duty, or otherwise culpable in that behalf, they shall be lookt upon, and severely punished, as disaffected Persons, and favouring and complying with Rebels. And hereby We give Warrant and Command to Our Lyon, King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Pursuivants, Macers, or Messengers at Arms, to pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and make Publication hereof, that none pretend Ignorance. Given under Our Signet, at Edinburgh, the Twenty one Day of November, and of Our Reign the Eighteenth Year.

Subscribed ut federunt.Council's Act for Defence of the Country, November 21. 1666. N^o. VI.

Forasmeikle as the Insurrection at Dumfries and the Western Shires, is grown into an open Rebellion, and that the Number of these desperate Rebels does increase so, that all his Majesty's loyal Subjects, in their several Shires, ought timeously to look to their own Security, and put themselves in a Posture to defend the King's Authority, and to oppose all Attempts of desperate and wicked Rebels ; therefore, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, do hereby command and require all Heritors, who are fencible Persons, within the Shires of Middle, East, and West Lothians, Fife, Perth Shire, (except the Country of Arthole) Stirling Shire, Dumbarton Shire, Merse and Teviotdale, Tweddale, Clackmannan, the Forest, Angus and Mearns, to convene at such Places as the Commanders aftermentioned shall appoint, and to receive the Orders, and to be under the Command of the Persons underwritten, viz. Midlothian to meet upon the Twenty third of November instant, and to be under the Command of Lord George Ramsay ; Eastlothian, to meet on the Twenty sixth of the said Month, and to be under the Command of the Earl of Wintoun, and Viscount of Kingstoun ; Westlothian, to meet the Twenty third of this Instant, and to be under the Command of Sir Walter Seton of Abercorn ; Stirling Shire, to meet the Twenty sixth of November, to be under the Command of the Earl of Callender, and Lord Almond ; Fife, to meet the Twenty ninth Instant, to be under the Command of the Earl of Weems and Lord Newark ; Perth Shire, to meet the Twenty ninth Instant, and to be under the Command of the Earls of Perth and Tullibardin, excepting as said is ; Dumbarton, to meet upon the Twenty eighth Instant, and to be under the Command of the Earl of Wigtoun ; Merse, to meet the said Twenty eighth Instant, to be under the Command of the Earl of Hume ; Teviotdale, to meet the Twenty eighth Instant, and to be under the Command of Sir William Murray of Stanhop, and the Laird of Blackbarony younger ; Clackmannan, to meet the Twenty ninth Instant, to be under the Command of the Laird of Clackmannan ; Forest, to meet the Twenty eighth Instant, and to be under the Command of Philippaugh ; Angus, to meet the Twenty ninth Instant, to be under the Command of the Earl of Panmure and Lord Carnegie ; the Shire of Mearns, to meet the Twenty ninth Instant, to be under the Command of the Earl of Marisbal, and Lord Arbuthnot :

luthnot : With full Power to them, to seize upon all disaffected Persons within their respective Bounds, or such as shall be suspect to be going out of the Shire to the Rebels ; with Power likewise to the said Commanders, to appoint Officers under them, to command in the several Divisions of the Shires. And further, ordain the said respective Commanders, to make publick Proclamation and Intimation hereof, to the respective Shires under Command, immediately after the same shall come to their Hands, that the said Meetings may be punctually kept.

King's Letter to the Council, November 24th, 1666. N^o. VII.

Right Trusty, &c. We have seen your Letter of the 17th of this Month, with the Account of what then you knew of the rebellious Insolence at Dumfries : We have also seen the Orders you have given for the speedy March of Our Lieutenant-general, with such of Our Forces as he should think fit, and for the Concurrency of such Persons of Quality, as live near those Places where the Rebellion broke out. All which We do very well approve, and doubt not but, by God's Blessing upon Our Forces, and your Counsels, the Mischief of this Rebellion shall turn upon the Heads of the Rebels. And We specially recommend to you all Care and Diligence for preventing any joyning with the Rebels ; and that you take special Care of Our Castles, and of the Prisoners in them : You shall also send Us frequent Intelligence of what you hear, and that by express Paquets ; and give Order that Our Lieutenant-general keep Correspondence with Our Governor of Carlisle ; and that also he send Us a frequent Account of his Proceedings, and direct his Letters to Carlisle, to be transmitted to Us. We intend very speedily to dispatch Our Commissioner, who shall bring Our full Directions ; and, until he come, you shall suspend the putting in Execution your Order for the subscribing the Declaration ; and so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 24th Day of November, 1666. and of Our Reign the Eighteenth Year.

By His Majesty's Command,
LAWDERDALE.

YOU, and ilk one of you, are indicted and accused for that, albeit by the common Law, and the Law of Nations, and the Law and Practick of this Kingdom, and many clear and expresse Acts of Parliament, the rising of his Majesty's Subjects, or any Number of them, and the joyning and assembling together in Arms, without Command, Warrant, or Authority, and specially, when the same is not only without, but against, and in Opposition to his Majesty's Authority and Laws, are most horrid and hainous Crimes of Rebellion, Treason, and Lese-majesty, in the highest Degree, and all Persons committing, and guilty of the said Crimes, or any wise accessory thereto, or who doth abet, assist, reset, intercommune with, or keep Correspondence with such Rebels, or any wise doth supply them in any Manner of way; or being required by Proclamation, or other wise, doth not rise with and assist his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and others having Power and Authority, for repressing these Rebels, ought to be proceeded against, and severely punished as Traitors, conform to the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom: And in particular, it is shewed as Traitors, conform to the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom: And in particular, it is statute and ordained, by the Third Act of King James I. his First Parliament, That no Man openly or notoriously rebel against the King, under the Pain of forfeiting Life, Lands, and Goods; and by the Twenty seventh Act of the said King James his Second Parliament, it is statute, That no Man wilfully reset, maintain, nor do Favour to open and manifest Rebels, against the King's Majesty, and common Law, under the Pain of Forfeiture; and by the Fourteenth Act of King James II. his Sixteenth Parliament, entituled, That no Rebel against the King's Person or Authority, it is statute, That whosoever doth rebel against the King's Person and Authority, or makes War against the King's Lieges, that they should be punished according and after the Quality of their Offence and Rebellion; and by the Twenty fifth Act of the said King James II. his Sixth Parliament, entituled, Sundry Points of Treason, it is statute, That if any Man commit or do Treason against the King his Person or Authority, or rise in feir of War against him, or resets any that has committed Treason, or supplies him in Help, Red or Counsel, shall be punished as Traitors; and the Hundred and forty fourth Act of King James VI. his Twelfth Parliament, it is statute, That wherever any declared Traitors or Rebels repair in any Place of this Realm, none of our Sovereign's Lieges shall presume to reset, supply, or intercommune with them, or to give them any Relief or Comtort; and that, immediately upon Knowledge of their repairing to the Bounds, all his Highness's obedient Subjects do their exact Diligence, in searching and apprehending the said Traitors and Rebels, and that with all Speed they certify his Majesty, or some of his secret Council, or some chief Persons of Authority and Credit within the Shire, that such Rebels are within the same, under the Pain that the said Traitors and Rebels ought to sustain, if they were apprehended, and convict by Justice: Likeas by the Fifth Act of his Majesty's late Parliament, and First Session thereof, it is declared, that it shall be high Treason to the Subjects of this Kingdom, or any Number of them more or less, upon any Ground or Pretext whatsoever, to rise or continue in Arms, to make Peace or War, or make any Treaties or Leagues with foreign Princes or Estates, or amongst themselves, without his Majesty's special Authority or Approbation first interponed thereto; and his Majesty's Subjects are discharged, upon any Pretext whatsoever, to attempt any of these Things under the said Pain of Treason: And by the Seventh Act of his Majesty's foresaid Parliament, and First Session thereof, all his Majesty's Subjects are discharged and inhibited, that none of them presume, upon any Pretext or Authority whatsoever, to require the renewing or swearing the League or Covenant, or of any other Covenant or publick Oaths, concerning the Government of the Church or Kingdom, without his Majesty's special Warrant and Approbation, and that none of his Majesty's Subjects offer to renew, or swear the same, without his Majesty's Warrant, as they will be answerable at their highest Peril: N E V E R T H E L E S S, ye, and your Complices, shaking off all Fear of God, and Conscience of Duty, Allegiance and Loyalty to his Sacred Majesty, your native and sovereign Prince, and natural Tendernefs to your Country, have most perfidiously and treasonably contravened the said Laws and Acts of parliament, and committed the said Crimes in manner after-specified: In so far as this his Majesty's ancient Kingdom, having for many Years suffered and endured all the Calamities, Miseries, tragical Effects and Consequences of a civil and intestine War, and foreign Usurpation; and now, after his Majesty's happy Restitution, beginning to recover, of so long and waiting a Consumption, through the Blessing of God, and his Majesty's incomparable Goodness and Clemency, having by an Act of Oblivion secured the Lives and Fortunes of you and others, who were conscious to themselves, and might have justly feared to be under the Lash and Compass of Law and Justice; and when his Majesty and his good People had just Reason to expect Security and Quiet at home, and Assistance against his Enemies abroad: yet ye and a Party of seditious Persons, retaining and persisting in your inveterate Disloyalty and Disaffection to his Majesty's Government and Laws, did take Advantage and Opportunity of the Time, when his Majesty was engaged in a chargeable and bloody War with divers his neighbour Princes and

and States, being jealous of and envying his Majesty's Greatness and Prosperity, and the Happiness of these Kingdoms under his Majesty's Government, and having contrived and projected a most horrid Insurrection and Rebellion, tending to involve again his Majesty's Kingdoms in Blood and Confusion, and to encourage and strengthen his Enemies, did rise, convene and assemble your selves together in Arms, and, upon the Day of November last, did march to, and enter within his Majesty's Town of Dumfries, in an hostile Manner, with your drawn Swords and other Arms, and did beset the House where Sir James Turner, one of the Officers of his Majesty's Forces, was lodged for the Time, and did violently seize upon the said Sir James his Person and Goods within his Lodging, and did detain and carry him about with you captive, and as a lawful Prisoner taken from an Enemy, and did search for and would have taken the Minister of the said Town, if he had not escaped; and while ye were in the said Town, ye and your Complices d'd many other Acts of Insolence and Rebellion, and having in manner foresaid, openly avowed and proclaimed your Rebellion, in so publick and insolent a Way, to the great Contempt and Atfront of Authority, ye and your Complices, in pursuance thereof, by your selves and others your Emissaries and Instruments, sent up and down through the Country, of purpose to be Trumpets of your Sedition, did convocate his Majesty's People and Subjects, and did endeavour to stir them up and perswade them to joyn in the foresaid Rebellion, and did seize upon the Persons, Horses, and Arms, and plunder and rifle the Goods and Houses of divers his Majesty's good Subjects, and in special of faithful and loyal Ministers, and by seditious Sermons, Insinuations, and other Practices, did so far prevail within the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and Shire of Wigtoun, and Shires of Air, Lanerk, and other western Shires, the many Persons flocking and resorting to you, ye had the Boldness to send a considerable Party to his Majesty's Town of Air, and did seize upon and take all the Arms were there, and not being content to proceed to the Height of Rebellion in manner foresaid, ye and your Complices did presume to regulate your monstrous and irregular Rebellion, in the Formality and Frame, and under the Name and Notion of an Army, and to form and model your selves in Troops, Companies, Regiments, and to name Captains of Foot, Commanders of Troops, and other Officers, under the Command of James Wallace of Achens, Joseph Learmont, and other Persons of known Disaffection to his Majesty and his Government; and though his Majesty's Lieutenant-general did march speedily for repressing the said Rebellion and Insurrection, and his Majesty's Privy Council did emit and issue a Proclamation, declaring the said Insurrection to be a manifest and horrid Rebellion, and high Treason, and commanding the said Rebels to desist and lay down Arms; with Certification, if they should continue in their Rebellion, they should be proceeded against as desperate and incorrigible Traitors, and discharging all his Majesty's Subjects to joyn, resist, supply or intercommune with them, and commanding them to rise and joyn with his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and the Forces under him, under the Pain of Treason: Yet ye and your Complices did obstinately continue, and march in Arms through the Country with your modelled Army, as if you had been an Enemy, and in Capacity to encounter, and dispute by Arms with your sovereign Lord and his Forces, and did in a warlike and hostile Manner and Posture, enter within his Majesty's Town of Lanerk, and there, upon Munday the 26th of November last, to palliate your Rebellion with the Colour of Religion, did renew and take the Oath of the Covenant, and thence did march, quartering all alongst upon, and oppressing his Majesty's Subjects, until ye had the Boldness and Confidence to approach within Two Miles of his Majesty's City of Edinburgh, where his Majesty's Judicatories and Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council and Session were sitting for the Time; and having quartered all Night within the Parish of Collingroun, at so near a Distance from the said City, ye and your Complices, upon Wednesday the 8th of the said Month of November last, did dare and presume to encounter, engage, and fight his Majesty's Army and Forces, under the Command and Conduct of his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and other Officers, at Pentland Hills, and did wound and kill in the said Fight and Conflict, divers of his Majesty's good Subjects, and did all ye could to destroy his Majesty's Army, until, by the Mercy of God, and Conduct and Valour of his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and other Officers and Soldiers under him, ye were vanquished, routed and dissipated, in doing of which, and one or other of the said Deeds, ye have committed and incurred the Crime and Pain of Treason, and are guilty of being Authors, Actors, Abettors, and accessory to the said Rebellion, and are Art and Part of the same, and therefore you, and ilk one of you, ought to be exemplarily punished with the Loss and Forfeiture of Life, Land and Goods, as Traitors to his Majesty, to the Terror and Example of others to commit the like hereafter.

Mr. William Maxwell for the Pannels alledges, the Pannels cannot pass to the Knowledge of an Assize upon this Indictment, nor no Process against them upon this Citation, because this being an Indictment of Treason, all Charges to be given to Persons so indicted, ought to be by a Lyon Herald, Pursivant or Macer, and is so ordained by Act of Parliament, James VI. P. 12. Cap. 125. in Anno 1492. But so it is that thir Pannels are not charged by Heralds, Pursivants, or Macers, conform to the Act, and therefore are not obliged to answer.

My Lord Advocate answers to the Alledgance, That it ought to be repelled, as no ways relevant, because the Act of Parliament doth militate only in the Case, when any Person is charged by Letters of Treason, to deliver their Houses, or do any other Thing under the Pain of Treason, and doth not militate in the Case of Citations, and specially in this Case, where the Parties are imprisoned; and the daily uncontroverted Practick is opposed, there being nothing more ordinary than the Person guilty of Crimes, and especially of Treason, and being in Hands and Prison for the same, should be brought to Trial, without any other Formality or Citation, but giving them a Dittay.

Sir George Lockhart, for the Pannels, replies, That the Defence stands relevant, notwithstanding of the Answer, because the Act of Parliament is opposed, which bears the express Reason thereof, to be founded upon the Importance and Weightiness of the Crime of Treason, which equally militates, whether the Parties accused of such Crimes be in Prison, yea or not; and Practice and Custom has cleared the Sense of the said Act of Parliament: For it is notour and known, that all Indictments of Treason, before the last Act of Parliament, given to Parties accused thereof, albeit in Prison, yet was done by Heralds and Pursivants, as being the Solemnity required by the said Act; and there is no Warrant from the Act of Parliament, to restrict it to the Case of charging for Delivery of Houses, or the like.

Sir George Mackenzie, for the Pannels, says further, That the Defence stands relevant, notwithstanding of the Answer, seeing an Indictment is a Summons and Citation; and the Act of Parliament is opposed, declaring, That if any other Execution of Treason shall be otherwise executed, the same shall be null; and the Particle any, comprehends all, and therefore the Act is conceived in the same Terms, as if it had said expressly, That all Executions of Treason, not executed in Manner foresaid, shall be null: And Skene does explain the same in Manner foresaid; neither can the Act of Parliament be restricted to Executions anent delivering of Houses, seeing, after that Part of the Act is finished, this begins with a new Distinction and Item.

My Lord Advocate replies, The former Answer, and Act of Parliament opposed, being clear and express anent Charges and Executions under the Pain of Treason; whereas the Dittay and Charge given to the Pannels, bears no Certification that they should appear under the Pain of Treason, and cannot be subsumed, conform to the Act of Parliament, that the Execution in question is an Execution under the Pain of Treason; and for the Citation, the Time of the late Parliament, it cannot be obtruded, because such Solemnity, if any was used before so high a Judicatory as the Parliament, was unnecessary and superfluous, and per sua non nocent, and cannot be urged as a Practick.

Mr. William Maxwell, for the Pannels, duplies, That the Defence stands relevant, notwithstanding of the Replies, that whereas it is alledged, that the Act is only where there is a Certification under the Pain of Treason; but this Dittay bears no Certification of such a Pain: It is answered, That the Dittay concludes the Pain of Treason; so that the Certification and Conclusion are idem: And there is no Letters for Treason, or Indictment for Treason, but the Pain and Certification is Treason; and so the Defence stands good from the Act of Parliament. And whereas it is alledged, That the Citations before the Parliament by Heralds, the Parliament being so supreme a Judicatory, was superfluous; It is answered, The Parliament being a supreme Judicatory, they might the better dispense with it, and yet all these Charges was by Lyon-heralds; but the Justices, in their Proceedings, are tied to proceed conform to the Laws of the Kingdom.

The Justices repel the Alledgance proposed for the Pannels, in respect of the Reply.

Sir George Lockhart, for the Pannels, alledges, That the Dittay cannot be put to the Knowledge of an Assize, whereupon to infer and conclude the Pain of Death against the Pannels, because, always deaying the Dittay, yet albeit the Pannels had been accessory to the Acts and Deeds of Rebellion libelled; yet, as it is acknowledged by the Dittay it self, they did frame and model themselves in the Notion of Officers, Regiments, Companies, and were assaulted by his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and Forces, who, by virtue of his Capacity and Commission, he, and all Officers and Soldiers under his Command, might, and de facto did, upon the taking and Apprehension of the Pannels, grant them Quarter, whereupon they were taken, and laid down their Arms; and which Quarter being publica fides, and offered and granted to the Pannels in Manner foresaid, should be inviolably observed, and secure them as to their Lives.

My Lord Advocate answers, That the former Alledgance ought to be repelled, as most irrelevant, and having no Ground and Foundation in Law: And as to that Pretence that is acknowledged in the Dittay, that the Pannels, and their Complices who joyned with them in the late Rebellion, did model themselves in Companies ad Regiments, and in an Army; it is most absurd to infer from that, which is libelled as an hainous Aggravation of their Presumption and Rebellion, that they should have had the Boldness as to put, or think themselves in a Capacity to dispute by Arms with their sovereign Lord, and Master, should be a Ground of Defence or Extenuation. And as to that Assertion, That the General, and not only he, but his inferior Officers, and the meanest of his Soldiers, was in a Capacity to grant Quarters, and to secure the Lives of Rebels and Traitors: It is a most unwarrantable and illegal Assertion, and, with all Respect to the Gentlemen that oppose the same, it is answered, That it is an Alledgance most derogative to his Majesty's Royal Power and Prerogative, who only has Power to remit Crimes, and in special Treason, the greatest of Crimes; so that either to assume, or to give and prostitute so high a Prerogative, to any other Persons, and especially to Officers and common Soldiers, it does reflect upon his Royal Majesty, unless it were relevantly alledged, That his Majesty had, by his Commission, given so high Power expressly to his General and Soldiers, to remit and secure the Lives of Traitors, which cannot be fancied, much less alledged: And as to the Point and Pretence of Quarters, and that ipso facto thir Persons being found in Arms, got Quarters, and were secured as to their Lives, even in other Cases, it is not questionable; and though, ex honestate, it may be pretended, that in bello justo the Persons that are taken upon Quarter may be spared, yet, ex necessitate, there is no Obligation to that purpose, except when an express Capitulation and deditio, and explicate Paction to that effect is express; but in this Case, it is without all question, where there is not bellumustum, but perduellio, there is not hostes, but proditores, there is not the least Shadow of Pretence for the Plea of Quarters, except his Majesty had expressly impowered his General, and all under him, to secure the Lives of Rebels subdued by them. And that we are not in the Case of bellumustum, which is only betwixt Princes or States that have no Dependence one upon another, and cannot debate and decide the Difference but by the Law of Arms; and bellum est inter pares, judicium in subditos. And that in this Case there is no jura belli, either postliminium, Quarters, or such like; seeing, by the common Law, resistentia subditorum is altogether forbidden as unlawful; and they are not hostes but prædones, and by the Law of this Nation, and specially the Acts of Parliament that are cited in the Dittay, it is not War or bellum, but Treason in the highest Degree, for any Number of his Majesty's Subjects to rise in Arms, without (though it were not against) his Majesty's Authority, as in the Case of this Rebellion; so that seeing we are not in the Case of bellum, this Pretence being founded upon a pretended bellumustum, is most irrelevant; specially, being considered, that his Majesty's Council, in pursuance of their Duty, for repressing the said Rebellion and Treason, has emitted a Proclamation, founded upon the common Laws, and the Laws of the Kingdom, declaring the same to be Rebellion and high Treason, and commands the Rebels to lay down Arms; with Certification, that if they should continue in Arms, they should be holden and proceeded against as desperate and incorrigible Traitors, and should be incapable of all Mercy or Pardon.

Sir George Mackenzie, for the Pannels, alledges, That the Pannels, and such as appear for them, (except Arnot, for whom they do not alledge the getting of Quarter) do, with all Submission to his Majesty's Prerogative, propone both the foresaid Defence and this Duply; intending to assert his Majesty's Prerogative, by sheltering themselves under his Mercy, and acknowledging that his Power is so great, that the meanest of his Soldiers can give Quarters; and, without debating the Justness of the War, which they here decline, it is alledged for them, That capiti in bello, abstracting from justum or injustum, are in its Latitude capable of Quarter, and Quarters being given them by such as are listed Soldiers, doth secure them as to their Life, seeing eo ipso that Soldiers are commissionate and listed, they have Power for that which is necessarily inherent in their Employment, and Quarter uses to be valued jure belli, when given by the meanest Soldier; for such only use to give Quarter, general Persons and superior Officers not being ordinarily in Use to take Prisoners: So that seeing these had Power to give (which is only here controvertible) when given, it is valid, without debating the Justness of the War; for seeing any of the Pannels, being then in Arms, might have disputed and defended his own Life, and might have possibly reached the Lives of the greatest that opposed them, in accepting of Quarters, and laying aside these Arms, they have in effect ransomed their own Life, and exchanged it in favours of his Majesty and his Forces, with the Lives of others: And many Lawiers debating this Subject, call this a Transaction, and that it should be kept upon that account, as namely Grotius in his 11 Chap. 14 Parag. 3 Book, where he debates this Case indefinitely; and Claudius de Cotte, De jure & privilegiis militum, Paris De Puteo, de re militari. And in reason, Soldiers, who may defend their own Life, are not obliged, nor is it in use when Quarters are offered them, to seek the Granter's Commission, seeing nec mora patitur, nec est consentaneum natura actum, private Soldiers being in Use generally to grant the same; and what is customary semper inest, except it be expressly forbidden, and the Prohibition so known to the Transgressors, that they are thereby put in mala fide. And the Difference betwixt quando justum & injustum, lies not here, seeing the Reason of Quarter is the sparing, in Prudence, the Blood of the one Party, and conserving, in Humanity, that of the other, the one whereof is at least common to both bellumustum & injustum, but the Difference is, that in bello justo Prisoners taken (though without Quarter) cannot be killed, but in injusto they may, except they have Quarter, and that Quarter is given betwixt King and Subjects, when formed once (whether justly or unjustly) in modelled Armies, which is offered to be proven by Persons that understand that Trade, to have been actually allowed betwixt the Hollanders and the King of Spain, betwixt the Protestant Rochellers in France and the King, and allowed by his Majesty's Forces in the Hills, and the rebellious English, though there was no just War amongst those Parties, upon the Ground foresaid; neither is it debated that any but his Majesty can grant Remissions; but in listed Soldiers their giving of Quarters, his Majesty doth in effect give it: And seeing neither Armies nor Soldiers could subsist without Quarter, quantum do aliquid conceditur, omnia concessa videntur, sine quibus principale concessum consistere nequit; and as the Council, for seen Reasons, might, without express Warrant from his Majesty, have secured, upon Submission, the Lives of those Prisoners, so might much more Soldiers, whose proper Trade and Calling it is.

Sir George Lockhart, for the Pannels, answers further, That the foresaid Reply for the Pannels, founded upon the offering of Quarters, and the Pannels accepting of the same, stands relevant, and is no way elided by the foresaid Answer; and that there may be no Mistake of what the Pannels and their Procurators plead, under the Terms and Notion of Quarters, it is condescended that Quarter, mentioned in the Defences, proposed and understood in thir Terms, viz. That the Pannels being in Arms and actual Resistance, and not in the Power of the Takers, did give up their Arms, and became in the Power of the Takers, upon the granting of Quarter, and that Quarter so given, should in Law operate the Security of the Lives of the Persons so taken, is evident and apparent, in so far as it is a Transaction and Paction, and fi- des data est accepta, and accordingly fulfilled upon the part of those who were taken; and in Law, all Pactions and Transactions being justitia commutativa, it abstracts and does not consider the Quality and Merit of Persons, but the Terms, Sense and Meaning of such Pactions and Transactions. And whereas it is pretended, That the Granters of Quarters, specially mean Soldiers, had no Power to do the same, as intrenching upon his Majesty's Prerogative; it is answered, That it ought to be repelled, because what his Majesty's Officers and Soldiers did act, consequently and suitably to the Nature of their Offices, and to the Exercise of their Duties, did flow from, and was warranted by his Majesty's Authority; so that they ought not to be contradistinguished, the Authority of his Majesty's Officers and Soldiers being derived from his Majesty, as the Fountain of the same: But specially in this Case, where first, before they did enter in Fight, there was no Discharge nor Prohibition as to the granting of Quarter, but on the contrary, the Lieutenant-general and all the Officers being present, were Witnesses to the granting of Quarter, and thereby the same were not Acts of simple Soldiers, but Acts warranted and authorized by the Knowledge and Allowance of Persons having supreme Commands. And as to that Part, that there was not bellum justum upon the part of the Pannels and their Complices, it is answered, That the Pannels do with all Submission and Humility acknowledge the same, but the Consequence that can be inferred thereupon, is not that Quarter given should not be observed, but that Quarter might have been justly refused; and there is no doubt but jura belli, which do naturally arise, without express Covenant and Paction, cannot be extended to this Case; but notwithstanding thereof, where Quarter was granted in Manner foresaid, it cannot be so interpret in Law or Reason, as to be a Snare to any who were resisting the Power of the Granters, justly or unjustly: And 'tis a common and known Distinction inter deditos & captos, the first being in the Case of a simple Surrender, which can import no more but at most a Submission upon Mercy, but is far otherwise in the Case of Persons taken upon the express Terms of granting and accepting Quarter; and that this Position is neither absurd nor illegal, nor destitute of the Authority of eminent Lawiers, and the Practices of most famous and military Nations, may appear from the judicious and learned Grotius, who has writ ex instituto, and most excellently upon the same Subject, which he entitles, De jure belli & pacis; and who, in his 19 Chap. 3 Book, entituled, De fide inter hostes, 6 Parag. after having premised what does import fides, which he resolves not only to be inferred from Writ and Words, but even from Sense known and customary, he does expressly state this Question, Quid ergo dicemus de subditorum bellis, adversus reges aliasque summas potestates? Where he resolves the Question upon the former Ground, that Paction and Transaction do abstract from the Quality and Demerit of Persons, that illis etiam fides data servanda est, & generaliter fidem datam servandam etiam perfidis; and the Reason is clear, because there is no apparent Reason why the Granters of Quarters, having interposed their Faith, should violate the same. And as to that Pretence, That none grant Quarters but these who remit the Crime of Treason, 'tis answered, That 'tis humbly conceived there is a vast Disparity; for in the Act of Remission of either the Crime of Treason or any other, 'tis pura oblatio, and the sole Act of the Granter; whereas the granting of Quarters is by way of Paction and Transaction, in impetu & furore belli, and in Contemplation whereof, the Persons, supposing themselves secured as to their Lives by Quarter, became in the Power of the Granters without Resistance. And as to that Ground, that his Majesty, by the Authority of the Lords of his Privy Council, did emit a Proclamation, declaring, That the Convocation libelled was a Rebellion, and that all who were accessory thereto, if they did not lay down their Arms, should be incapable of Mercy; It is answered first, That this Proclamation was not intimate to the Pannels, nor did consist in their Knowledge; yet suppose it had been known, it cannot elide the Quarter granted to the Pannels, because, notwithstanding of any such Proclamation, his Majesty's Officers and Soldiers did grant the same long after the emitting of the Proclamation; and the Pannels were in optima fide, finding his Majesty's Officers and Soldiers willing, who cannot be supposed but to have known his Majesty and the Lords of his Privy Council, their Sense and Meaning of the Proclamation, which behoved to have restrained them from giving of Quarter; yet notwithstanding, seeing the same was granted, the Pannels had Reason to believe that they were sufficiently warranted to that effect, and have rested upon their Faith in accepting the same; and albeit by Proclamation they were declared incapable of Mercy, that neither in Reason or Words can be interpreted to the Case of Quarter, which was not an Act of simple Mercy, but upon Paction and Transaction.

Sir George Mackenzie adds to this former Allegiance, That pactions betwixt King and Subjects, though they cannot be forced, and it is Rebellion in Subjects to require them, yet being once made, they not only are ordinarily kept among all Nations, but his Majesty who now reigns, having made with the greatest of the Rebels a more dishonourable Paction, did observe the same, viz. the Parliament 1649. which his Majesty ordered to be observed by an express Order.

My Lord Advocate answers and triplies, 1mo, Though we were in bello, as we are not, and in the Case of Quarter, yet the Allegiance is no ways relevant as it is proponed and qualified, and it is not condescended, what Persons did give Quarters to the Pannels or any of them, nor in what Terms; and to infer Quarters and Impunity from the naked taking of the Pannels, and because they are Prisoners, it is without any Law or Reason, seeing the Pannels might have been overpowered and taken; and it is to be presumed, that his Majesty's Army being more numerous and victorious, that they were overpowered and vanquished, and that they were not taken either upon an express or an implicate Condition or Capitulation, and the Rebels being routed, it cannot be thought that his Majesty's Officers and Soldiers, and Persons of such Valour, would have given Quarters, upon account of a pretended Transaction, and in order to their own Safety, and that they would ow their Lives dishonourably to Traitors. 2do, The former Answer is repeated, and it is most evident, that we are not in the Case of Quarters, and though, where there is bellum, and where there is the Relation of hostes, it may be pretended that Quarters ought to be observed, with Abstraction from the Quality of the Difference of the War, whether just or unjust, as when War is betwixt his Majesty and any his neighbour Princes and Estates, though it be unjust upon the Part of these Enemies, Quarters may and ought to be kept; yet in this Case where there is no bellum, but rebellio & proditio & latio Majestatis, where there is not hostes but prædones, such as all Persons are, that are in the Condition of the Pannels, who perfidiously do rise up against their sovereign Lord, there can be no Pretence for any Privilege of jus belli and of Quarters: And as to that Pretence, that fides publica est servanda, it is without all question, that when fides is given by an express Treaty, not only between his Majesty and any other Stranger, Princes or States, but betwixt his Majesty and his Subjects, by an Act of Pacification or any other Treaty, ought to be observed religiously; but we are not in the Case where fides publica is given either by his Majesty, or any authorized by him, him, and having exprefs Power to that purpose, and that his Majesty's General, or his Officers or Soldiers, has Power to grant any such fides, unless the Commission were exprefs to that purpose, is petitio principii, and is altogether denied, and that the most that Quarters can import in this Case, though it could be made out that Quarters were granted, is, that the General, or his Officers and Soldiers, by granting of Quarters might have secured them as to that which were in their Power, viz that they should not then be presently cut off; but that they should have secured them from that which was not in their Power, from the just Stroke of Justice, is altogether denied. And as to the Pretence of Transactions, and the Reasons and Arguments adduced for the Pannels to that purpose, if there were any Weight therein, the most it could operate, were to be Motives for making a Law to that purpose, that his Majesty's Officers, et ipso that they are in Power to serve under him, should have Power by granting of Quarters, to secure the Lives, of Traitors; but there is no such Law: And a General being commisionate, and having gone to suppress Rebels, without any Hint to the purpose foresaid, the Defence being neither founded on the common Law, nor upon Laws nor Acts of Parliament known in this Country, is most irrelevant, specially being considered that it is an undoubted Principle, that Treason, being of so high a Nature, cannot be remitted but by an immediate Grant and Remission of his Majesty under the Great Seal, or some Person having Commission under the Great Seal expressly. As to the Authority from the Lawyers mentioned in the Alledgance, they are but the Opinions of private Men, and do not amount to the Authority of a Law, specially in this Kingdom, there being clear and exprefs Acts of Parliament, and fundamental Laws, that his Majesty's Lieges and People should be governed and judged by his Majesty's Laws alienarly, and not by the Laws of any Nation, and much less by the simple Opinions and School-dictates of Lawyers: Likeas, the said Authorities, though they were of any Weight, they do not meet nor quadrate the Case in question, in respect they are only the Case of bellum, as said is, or when there are exprefs and publick Transactions, by Treaties, Edicts, or Acts of Amnesty and Oblivion. And Grotius, though he might be suspect, as being the Subject of an Estate who had shaken off the Government of their Prince; yet he is most clear in the Case, that there is no bellum betwixt subditi and their sovereign Lord; and that resistentia subditorum is vetita omni jure, and cannot pretend to the jura and Rights and Privileges of War, unless the sovereign Authority be pleased to condescend so far, as to capitulate expressly and treat with the Subjects; and it is a most groundless Pretence, that of a Transaction between the General, or any Soldiers or Officers as to the Matter of Quarters, seeing it cannot be said that the General had Power to transact by an exprefs Capitulation betwixt him and the Rebels; and it is without all question, that the General could not have secured the Rebels of this Army, by a Transaction by himself, without exprefs Warrant from his Majesty, or from his Council; and consequently, seeing by a downright and exprefs Transaction of treating, he could not secure Traitors, it is gratis and without Warrant asserted, that he, and much less his Officers and common Soldiers, could, by a pretended implicate Transaction, secure and indemnify Traitors: And it is without all question, notwithstanding of the Pretences in the contrary, that the General had no Power to grant the said Security, if his Commission had related to Quarters, as it could not do in this Case, having to do with Rebels and Traitors, and not with an Enemy; and if his Commission had been exprefs, that he should not have Power to secure the Rebels by Quarters, but that they should be altogether incapable of Mercy, no Person could have the Confidence to assert, that he would grant Quarters in the Case foresaid; and it is clear that we are in a stronger Case, seeing the General had no such Commission and Power to grant Quarters: And the Council, by their Proclamation foresaid, does declare the Rebels, as said is, incapable of Pardon; which being intimate to the General, and being sent to him, and intimate to all Persons concerned, by Proclamation, to plead in pretence of ignorantia or bona fides, is most frivolous and unwarrantable, seeing ignorantia juris nemini prodesse debet; and it is their own Fault, if, being engaged and busied in their rebellious Course, they did not come to the Knowledge of the said Proclamation, being founded upon the common Law, and the Law of the Kingdom; it being a Principle of both, that Traitors are nulli, and no Men in the Construction of Law, as to any Benefit and Capacity of any pretended Transaction. And as to the Instances from the Practices of Spain, Holland, France, and other Kingdoms, they do no ways quadrate in this Case, the same being, as said is, of publica edicta, and exprefs Treaties and Transactions; in respect of all which the Defence ought to be repelled.

Mr. William Maxwell, for the Pannels, quadruples, That whereas it is answered, that the Defence is not definitely qualified, nor condescended upon the Persons Granters of Quarters, and in what Manner, It is answered, That it shall be condescended upon in Writ who granted the same, being listed Soldiers and Officers under the General; and as for the Manner, the same was in usual Form that Quarters are granted, viz. Assurance of their Lives from those who granted Quarters. Next, where it is alledged, that Quarters cannot be presumed to have been granted, his Majesty's Army being victorious and the other Party routed, who alledges to have gotten Quarters, It is answered, that no Supposition can be admitted against a positive Defence, which is offered to be proven. As for the Third, whereby it is alledged there can be no Quarters sustained as lawful, but where the War is just, which cannot be in this Case between his Majesty's General and the Rebels: It is answered, that the Pannels oppose their former Answer, and add that the Question is not here in the Lawfulness of the Pannels Quarrel, but whether or no his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, being constitute as a General, by his Commission, could give Quarters, or not; which the Pannels maintain he had Power to do, being his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, by Commission; neither needed any such exprefs Power be insert in his Commission, for giving of Quarters, because inerat in his Commission, and every listed Officer and Soldier under him, he having the said Commission, the like Power, as any other Prince's listed Officer and Soldier under him, has; and to hold the contrary it seems strange, for it was never called in question in any Nation heretofore, nor did ever his Majesty or his Royal Father, call in question the Quarters granted by their General Officers, or listed Soldiers under him in the Fields, but esteemed the same ever sacred, to be kept even unto these, who were in a Model of an Army of Rebellion in the Time; and if Quarters should not be kept, but elided by a secondary Way of panneling the Persons Receivers of the Quarters, it should both intrench upon the Word of the General, his Commission, and Soldiers, to whom hereafter none may give Trust, especially in a Matter of so high Concernment, after their Lives are secured to them by Quarters. And as for the Alledgance, that the General could not treat or assure them by a publick Transaction, without the Consent of his Majesty or his Council, the Pannels first leave that to the Consideration of his Majesty and his Secret Council, if the General being clad with a Commission from his Majesty, has not Power to treat, to grant Quarters, or receive any of those who are in Rebellion, to Peace, wherein wherein his Commission is ample and not restrictive: The Pannels answer no further, but oppose the Amplitude of the Commission, the constant Course observed by his Majesty and his Father's Generals of before, the Assurance given for their Lives by the Quarter, and the dangerous Consequence may ensue thereupon. And whereas it is alledged, that the Pannels being Traitors, the Quarters cannot operate for them, to exeme them from the Trial, and inflicting the Punishment conform to the Law of the Kingdom; and there is no Law that can warrant their Rebellion, or exeme them from the Punishment due to Rebels: It is answered, That the Case now in debate is, Whether Quarters given to Persons mortalled in an Army in the Fields, if they having received Quarters, their being no Law to discharge their General to give Quarters, if they did not lawfully accept thereof, he lawfully grant it; for albeit the Laws of this Kingdom rule in Time of Peace amongst all the Subjects, but in the Time of War, where there are Two Armies in the Fields, there the Law of Arms takes Place, and the Law of Nations whereupon the Faith given in Quarters is founded, must be kept, and never was broken. And as for the Alledgance, that if the General had been retrained by the Commission to give Quarters, the Quarters given by him could not be respected, and that it is alledged the Case is alike here, there being a Proclamation emitted by the Council, declaring the Pannels Actions to be Rebellion, and that they were commanded by the same, to lay down their Arms within a certain Space, otherwise to be proceeded against as the worst of Rebels and Traitors, and not to have Mercy: It is answered, First, That Proclamation does no ways derogate to the General's Commission, which remained as absolute as before, so long as he remained in the Fields; nor does the Council, by the said Proclamation, discharge him to give Quarters, thereby to retrench the Power of his Commission. Secondly. The Proclamation could not be known to the Pannels, who could not have Access to the Market-cross where the same was to be promulgate, Proclamations at Market-crosses being the Course of making known the Council's Pleasure in peaceable Times; but the Course of War is, when Two Armies are in the Fields, the one sends a Trumpet with a Proclamation to intimate the same. Thirdly. They not knowing the Proclamation in the Time of the Conflict, and the Pannels being required to lay down Arms, showing it was the Council's Will, and Quarters being given thereupon, as they would have had a good Defence, if they had laid down Arms within the Time prescribed by the Proclamation, if the same had come to their Knowledge; so likewise in this Case, being intimate to them the Time of the Quarters, and they having given Obedience thereto, upon Assurance of their Lives, ought not to be broken; in respect whereof the Defence stands relevant, notwithstanding of the former Triply.

Sir George Mackenzie, for the Pannels, adds, That the Subject Matter of this Debate is the Law of Arms, and there being no expresse positive Law to regulate the same, it is offered to be proven, by such as understand the Law of Arms, that Quarter is allowed where Subjects in Arms rise against their Prince, though given but by private Soldiers, except there be an expresse Prohibition in the contrary: Likeas, it is offered to be proven by the General, Lieutenant-general, and other Officers, that in this Case, they either gave Quarter, or allowed the giving of Quarter, and that Honour being concerned, it is hoped, that the Justices will advise with the Council, by whose Commission they acted, and against whose Order this Debate will infer he has malversed; and it is not known upon what account he thought himself authorized to give, or allow the giving of Quarter, of which he himself can only give an account; and all the Lieges in the Nation are here concerned, seeing in all subsequent and supervenient Broils, every Man, to make sure, shall cut his Neighbour's Throat, so that the innocent shall have no Defence, and Rebels shall be fortified in their Courage; and Necessity, which dignifies all other Acts, in the Opinion of such as, in furor belli, consult with nothing but with their Safety, will obdure them much more than formerly, and of ordinary Rebels make them insupportable Traitors and Rebels; and that Place in the Kings, spoken of by one of the Prophets to a King of Israel, is here remembred, Wilt thou take the Life of those whom thou hast taken by thy Bow and Sword?

Mr. William Maxwell, for the Pannel John Shiels in Tirwood, alledges, The Conclusion of the Dittay cannot be inferred against him, because 'tis offered to be proven, that he was in the Army with his Majesty's General the Time of the Proclamation, which coming to his Knowledge, if he had any Arms then, he was willing to lay them down, and so have obeyed the Proclamation by his Willingness, if he had been in the Field; so that if he had been out with the rest of the Pannels, he would have had the Benefit of the said Proclamation; and being then in Firmance, and Prisoner with the General, and being most willing to obey the Proclamation, the Conclusion cannot be inferred against him: And whereas the Proclamation, even for these who should give Obedience thereto, the Effect thereof to them could be to come to Mercy, the Pannel does humbly conceive, that the Council's Meaning was never to take the Lives of these who obeyed the Proclamation, specially seeing the Certification is expresse, that to such as are disobedient, they should be proceeded against as Traitors, without Mercy, which clearly includes Mercy to the obedient.

Mr. Robert Dickson, for the Pannel John Ross, repeats the whole former Defences upon the Benefit of Quarter, and repeats the last Defence proponed for John Shiels, and humbly craves the Benefit of his Majesty's Proclamation.

My Lord Advocate answers shortly to the Alledgance for Shiels and Ross, That the same merits no Answer, in respect the said Persons were taken as Spies and Emislaries, for giving Intelligence to the Rebels, and were Prisoners for the Time, and their Arms being taken from them upon the Occasion foresaid, they could not lay down the same, nor plead the Benefit of the Proclamation, conceiving these who should be in Arms the Time of the issuing and proclaiming the same, whatever the Import, and Benefit, and Extent of the Proclamation be, which the Pursuer neither doth nor is concerned to dispute in the Case of the said Pannels.

The Justices repel the Defence, Duply, and Quadruply proponed for the Pannels, in respect of the Reply and Triply proponed by his Majesty's Advocate; as also the Defence proponed for Shiels and Ross, in respect of the Reply; and ordain the Dittay to pass to the Knowledge of an Inquest.

The Affize lawfully sworn, no Objection in the contrary.

My Lord Advocate, for proving the Dittay, produces the Pannels Confession made to the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council and a Committee of them, whereof the Tenor follows, viz. The said Captain Arnot did confess, that he did joyn with the rebellious Party in the West, at Air; and came alongst with them in their March to this Country, and that he did accept the Command of one of their Troops, and did ride upon the Head thereof; that he came with them to Lanerk, and took the Covenant with them there, and did ride alongst with them to Bathgate, Collingtoun, and Pentland, and was at the late Fight in Arms with his Sword

The said James Hamilton did confess, That he joyned with the Rebels Party, and was with them at Lanerk, where he did take the Covenant, and marched along with them in Barfco's Troop, with Sword and Pistols, and came along with them to Collingtoun, and from thence to Pentland, and was there in Arms when the Rebels were defeat. Which Confessions being read to the Pannels, and they particularly and severally accused conform thereto, and having judicially, and in presence of the Assize, acknowledged and renewed the same, my Lord Advocate thereupon took Instruments.

The Assize, by Plurality of Voice, elect Sir Alexander Urquhart Chancellor. The Assize unanimously, all in one Voice, by the Report of Sir Alexander Urquhart of Cromarty their Chancellor, find the Persons impannelled, above and afternamed, to be guilty and culpable of the particular treasonable Acts aftermentioned, contained in the Indictment, viz. Captain Andrew Arnot to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels in the West, coming along with them in their March, accepting the Command of one of their Troops, and riding upon the Head thereof, and coming with them to Lanerk, and there taking the Covenant with them, and of coming along with them to Barfgate, Collingtoun and Pentland, and of being at the late Conflict there in Arms, with his Sword drawn. The said Major John M'Culloch, to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels in the West, and coming with them to Lanerk, and taking the Covenant with them there, and continuing with them in Arms until Wednesday the Day of the Conflict, being with them in Arms there, where he was taken Prisoner. Garvin Hamilton in Mauldsie, to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels in the West, and coming along with them in Arms, in M'Clellan of Barfco's Troop, and in being in Arms at the Fight of Pentland, where he was taken. John Gordon of Knockbreck, to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels before they came to Lanerk, where he having taken the Covenant with them, he marched along with them to Collingtoun and Pentland on Horseback, in Arms with the Rebels, and being in Arms with them at the Conflict, where the Rebels were defeat, and he taken. Christopher Strang Tenant in Kilbride, to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels in the West, and being at Lanerk with them, where he took the Covenant, and coming along with them from Lanerk to Pentland, an Horseman armed with Sword and Pistols, under the Command of Captain Paton, Commander of one of the Rebels Troops, and being in Arms at the Conflict at Pentland, where he was taken. Robert Gordon Brother to John Gordon of Knockbreck, to be guilty and culpable of joyning with the Rebels at Douglas, and coming along with them, having Charge as a Cornet of a Troop of Horse, under the Rebels, whereof Maxwel younger of Monrief was Captain, and of being in Arms with the Rebels at the Conflict at Pentland, where he was taken. John Parker Walker at Kilbride, to be guilty of joyning in Arms with the Rebels in the West, and coming along with them to Pentland, where he was taken under the Command of Colonel Wallace. John Ross in Mauchlin, to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels in the West, at the Desire of Mr. John Guthrie and some of the Officers of that Party, and of going along to discover if the King's Forces were coming to Kilmarnock, he being in Arms, and having Pistols, and going to bring the Rebels Intelligence. James Hamilton Tenant in Kittimuir, to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels that rose in the West, being with them at Lanerk, where he took the Covenant, and marching along with the Rebels in Barfco's Troop, with Sword and Pistols, and coming along with the Rebels to Collingtoun and Pentland, and being there in Arms with them when they were defeat. John Shiels in Titwood, to be guilty of joyning with the Rebels, and of going, at the Desire of Mr. John Guthrie and some of their Officers, to see if the King's Forces were come to Kilmarnock, and to bring the Rebels Intelligence, and that conform to their several Confessions.

Commission for Justiciary at Glasgow, December, 1666. N^o. X.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To all and sundry Our good and faithful Subjects, whom these Presents do or may concern, Greeting: Forasmuch as, albeit it hath pleased almighty GOD, to bless Our Forces under the Command and Conduct of Our Lieutenant-general, with an absolute Victory of those Rebels who did first rise in Arms at Dumfries, and so far prosecute these rebellious Courses, as to embody themselves in a military Posture, and march through many Shires for getting Associates and Complices, and at last, in open Fields near Pentland Hills, did encounter Our Forces, and endeavour their Overthrow; yet nevertheless the Danger of that horrid Rebellion does still continue, and, if not timeously prevented, may again break out and involve the Kingdom in new Troubles and Confusions, to the Hazard of the Lives of many of Our good Subjects, and subverting of Religion and Ecclesiastical Government, and of Our Authority and Laws, there being many desperate and incorrigible Traitors engaged in that Rebellion, who did not at first appear themselves in Arms, but have been Abettors or Assisters thereof, by Correspondence, Intercommuning, or giving Intelligence, for carrying on their wicked Designs, or by resetting of their Persons, have been Promoters of the said treasonable Courses; as likewise some Gentlemen, Ministers and others did convocate and put themselves in Arms in the Shire of Air, and there determine to rise, and associate to themselves all such who were disaffected to Our Government, that they might joyn with these Rebels who had first risen in Arms, and hereby added such Strength and Vigour to the carrying on of that Rebellion, that they might have continued longer, and brought on this Our Kingdom all the Miseries of an unhappy and bloody War, if the Defeat and Overthrow of that Party at Pentland had not happened. Therefore, and for preventing these Mischiefs, and securing the Peace of Our Kingdom, and Our Authority and Government for the future, We, with the Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, have nominated and appointed Our right trusty and well-beloved Counsellors and Cousins, the Lord Duke Hamilton, the Lord Marquis of Montrose, the Earl of Argyle, the Earl of Linlithgow, the Earl of Kelly, the Earl of Galloway, the Earl of Wigton, the Earl of Nithsdale, the Earl of Dumfries, the Earl of Callender, the Earl of Airly, the Earl of Annandale, the Lord Montgomery, the Lord Drumlanerk, the Master of Cochran, General Dalziel, Lieutenant-general Drummond, James Crichton Brother to the Earl of Dumfries, Colonel James Montgomery, Charles Mairland of Haltoun, Mungo Murray, or any Three of them, giving them full Power, Warrant, and Authority, to go to any Shire, Burgh, or Place, where there was any Rising or Insurrection, and there to hold Courts, cite Parties and examine Witnesses, and take all other Courses which they shall think fit, for trying and discovering all such Persons who were Authors, Aiders, or Abettors of the said Rebellion, and did keep Correspondence, intercommune with, or reset the Persons of any of these Rebels, or furnished them with Ammunition, Arms, Horses, or any other Things which might supply or strengthen them in the prosecution of their rebellious Courses; with Power likewise to seize upon their Persons, and incarcerate them till they be tried, and to search their Houses and other suspected Places, and to enter the same by Force in case of Resistance, or otherwise to take Bond and Security for their Appearance, whenever they shall be called. And for their more speedy and effectual carrying on of this their Commission, with Power to divide themselves that they may go to several Places at one Time, and for that end, any one or Two of their Number to take Trial, search, and apprehend all Persons suspect within their several Divisions; and further, in case, after Examination and Trial, there shall be any Persons who shall appear guilty of the Crimes foresaid, by clear and undoubted Evidences, We give full Power and Commission to the Persons foresaid, or any Three of them, which are declared to be a full Quorum, to be Our Justices in that Part, with Power to them to meet at such Times and Places as they shall think convenient and then and there, to affix and hold Courts, create Clerks, Sergeants, Dempsters, and all other Members of Court needful, to call Assizes of Persons of best Understanding, Absents to amerciate, Unlaws and Amerciements merciaments to be uplifted and exacted ; and in the said Courts to call the whole Persons guilty and suspect to be guilty of the Crimes foresaid, and put them to their Trial, and Knowledge of an Assize, and according as they shall be found innocent or guilty of the said Crimes, that they cause Justice to be done upon them accordingly ; and generally all and sundry other Things requisite and necessary for executing the said Commission, to do, use and exerce, promising to hold firm and stable ; commanding hereby Our Advocate or his Deputes to draw their Indictments, and pursue them before Our Commissioners toresaid ; and in case they find any Difficulty in the Matter of Probation or Evidence, that they secure the Person until they advertise the Lords of Our Privy Council, that they may ordain Our Justice-general or his Deputes, to proceed against them : And We hereby require the Commanders and Officers of Our Forces, and all Sheriffs, Magistrates of Burghs, and others, to be assisting to Our Commissioners, in prosecution of this Our Service, as they will be answerable. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Fifth Day of December 1666. and of Our Reign the Eighteenth Year.

William Sutherland's Declaration and Examination. N^o. XI.

THe Sense of God's Goodness, who justifies the ungodly, and calls Things that are not, and the Perswasion of Christian Friends, to whose Charity I was much obliged during my Imprisonment at Air for many Weeks, moved me to declare as follows.

I being come of poor Parents in Strathnaver, (the wildest Part of the North Highlands) who were not able to keep me, I was hired with a Master who sent me to bring back a Horse that Colonel Morgan's Party had taken from him ; which Party I followed till the Enemy fell betwixt me and home, and being afraid to go back, and having a Desire to learn the Lowland Tongue, I came alongst in a sad Condition with the said Party, till I came to Spey-side, where I herded Cattle for a Year in the Parish of Bubarm, at a Place called the New Kirk ; from thence I came to the Parish of Fyvie in Buchan, where I also herded Cattle for another Year ; from that Place I came to the Bridge of Stirling, where I followed the same Employment a Third Year, which was the Year the King came home ; and from thence I came to Paisly, where, after herding Cattle a Fourth Year, I fell in extreme Want, and that by the Reason, the Master whom I served being owing to one of the Bailies, called John Weres, the Bailie seized upon my Master's Goods, so that he ran away, and I lost my Fee, and was engaged by the Countel of some honest Men from that Scripture, Suffer not a Witch to live, to execute a Witch, and to cleanse Chimney Heads, whereby I gained somewhat for Liveliness ; and having a Mind to learn to read, I bought a Question Book, but finding the People there to fear at my Company, so that none would give me a Lesson, I came from Paisly to Irwin, about Five Years since, where, finding the People more charitable, and to encourage me in Learning, I did so affect my Book, the People, and the Place, that without Engagement I did act the Part of an Executioner, when they had any Malefactors to put to Death, and so with much Trouble I attained to learn to read English, and as I grew acquainted with the Bible, I began to scruple to execute any, except I was clear they deserved to die ; and when the Business of being Executioner to some Southland Men in Air came to my Door, the Scruples of my Conscience grew upon my Hand, because I had heard they were godly Men, who had been oppressed by the Bishops, whom I never liked since I loved the Bible ; therefore I having a Jealousie in my Mind, that I should be troubled, I had a Mind to go from the Town after I heard some Sermons ; it being the Lord's Day, I having come to the Kirk, opened my Book, and the first Place that came to my Eyes, was that Scripture, Heb. 4. 12. to the End of the Chapter. This Word, by the Blessing of the Lord God blessing it to me, was so strengthening and refreshing to me, that all the Trouble in the World was not able to quench it out of my Heart ; and I having gone again in the Afternoon to the Kirk, I was taken out of the Kirk and brought before the Provost, and I refused to go willingly to Air. The Provost told me, I would be forced against my Will. I told him, One might lead a Horse to the Water, but Twenty four would not make him drink, no more should any make me to do that Deed ; whereupon I was put in the Tolbooth till Monday at Night, (where I got much Comfort reading the fourth Chapter of the Epistle to the Heb.) when a Serjeant with Six Soldiers came from Air to Irwin for me, and the Provost, to terrify me, brought me out before them ; and when they saw it would not do, then I was sent back again to Prison until Tuesday Morning, then I was constrained to go with the Guard that came for me to Air. They offered me Meat and Drink, but I refused and would not take it, but bought a Farthel of Bread and a Mutchkin of Ale ; and when I came thither I was brought before the Provost, and notwithstanding of many Promises by the Provost, and those that were with him, I refused to undertike to execute the Southland Men, whereupon I was presently committed to Prison in the Tolbooth ; and the first Night I was Prisoner, there was one Mr. White a Curate came to me to perswade me to do my Office on the said persons, and said, What is this you are doing? do ye not know that thir Men are guilty of Rebellion? and from 1 Sam. 15. told me that the Rebellion whereof these Men were guilty, was as the Sin of Witchcraft: To whom I answered, That that Rebellion was Saul's Rebellion against the immediate Command and revealed Will of God, and that for sparing Agag and the best of the Cattle; and was as the Rebellion spoken of the Children of Israel, when they rebelled and refused to go to the Land of Canaan, but would have chosen Captains, and have gone back again to Egypt ; and that is like the Rebellion spoken of by the Prophet Isaiah, All Day long have I stretched out my Hands to a stiff-necked, rebellious, and gainsaying People. I told him this was not Rebellion against Man, and in the New Testament it is called a Trespas, and our Lord said to Peter, If thy Brother trespass against thee, forgive unto Seventy Times seven. So I think, if the Galloway Men should trespass Twenty Times, it was far fewer than Seventy Times seven, the King should forgive them, tho' it were Rebellion against him, which I do deny: Remember what good King David did when he fled from Absalom, when Shimei came out and cursed him, and cast Earth and Stone at him, but yet he forgave him, much more I think our King should forgive the Galloway Men, who respected and prayed for him, and who, if he were amongst them, would not let a Hair of his Head fall to the Ground. But, said Mr. White, David was a Prophet and a merciful Man: Well, said I, Sir, will ye make ill Men your Example, and not good Men, what Divinity is that?

At which he was so ashamed, the Soldiers laughing at him, that he said in his Anger, Away with thee, the Devil is in thee, and thou hast Dealing with familiar Spirits. I answered, If the Devil be in me, he is an unnatural Devil, for if he were like the rest of Devils, he would bid me take as many Lives as I could, that he might get many Souls; but the Spirit that is in me will not suffer me to take good Mens Lives. Then Mr. White left me, and a Number of cursed blaspheming Soldiers came about me, and brought me before the General and Lieutenant-general, my Lord Kellie, my Lord Provost, and several other Gentlemen, where they were met together in a Lodging in the Town: Some of them boasted me, and some of them scorned me, and some of them said, I would go to the Devil with the rest of the Country Folk. Others asked me, If I were a Covenanter, he must be a Covenanter. I said, Tho' I was no Covenanter, yet I had Respect to it for his sake by whom it was named, and who had in his Word threatned to send a Sword to avenge the Quarrel of his Covenant; and I said, What a Covenant will ye give us? if ye take away the Covenant of God, ye will give us the Covenant of the Devil, for there is but Two Covenants, a good one and a bad one. Then they called for the Boots to put me in; and I said, Bring the Boots and the Spurs too, you shall not prevail. Then they were angry, and said, The Rogue scorns us, and thinks no better than to do so. Then they mentioned that a Cruse full of hot Lead should be poured on my Hands, and while the Lead was melting, they went aside and spake Latin, as I thought, among themselves, and when they had done, they brought the Lead to pour it on my Hands, and I was willing to receive it rather than to obey; then they were astonished, and bad put it on the Fire again until they should get more Speech out of me. Then my Lord Kellie came unto me, and flattering me, said, Poor Man, I heard they wronged thee, and brought thee out of the Kirk on the Sabbath-day berwixt the Preachings, they might have let thee heard the Sermon, I heard they put thee in the Tolbooth; who came to see you when you were in the Prison? did not your Minister Mr. Alexander Nisbet come to see you, nor any of the honest Men of the Town? I answered, (as it was true) None came to see me. He said, They have been very unkind; did you not see Mr. James Fergusson since we came West? I said, No. Then said the Lieutenant-general, Away with him, they have forbidden him to tell, and have said, nothing shall ail him, but he shall rue it when he shall be hanged, and casten out to be eaten of Dogs: Tell me quickly, said he, who learned you these Answers, and forbade you to tell; I perceive you have gotten a Paper from some of these rebellious Ministers, and has gotten your Answers perquire. I said, Not so my Lord, but God, that said, Fear not when ye shall be brought before Kings and Rulers for my sake, it shall be given you in that Hour what you shall say, I will give thee a Mouth, and Wisdom that thine Adversaries shall not be able to answer, he makes his Promise good to me. Then a Number of the Gentlemen said, Away with him, the Devil is in him, he has Dealing with familiar Spirits. I answered him, as I answered Mr. White before. Then said the Lieutenant-general, Tell me quickly who put these Words in thy Mouth, or you shall be hanged: To which I answered, Even he who made Balaam's Ass to speak and reprove the Madnefs of the Prophet; and marvel not, for he that could make a dumb Ass to speak, can much more make me a reasonable Creature to speak, it is he that gave me these Answers, and likewise forbids me to do this, it is he and no other. Then said my Lord Kellie, He thinks no better Sport than to bring Scripture as he would confound us with it, but you shall rue it when you are going to be hanged. I answered, If this confound you, ye shall be better confounded yet, read ye never that Chapter, 1 Cor. 1. 26. How not many wise Men after the Flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the foolish Things of the World to confound the Things that are mighty; and base Things of the World, and Things that are despised hath God chosen, and Things that are not, to bring to nought the Things that are, that no Flesh should glory in his Presence. Then said my Lord Kellie, Take the Devil out of my Sight, and put him in the narrowest Place of the Stocks. The Provost of Air when he saw me altogether refusing, he rounded in my Lug, What are you afraid of the Country Folk, I shall give you Fifty Dollars, and you may go to the Highlands, or where your please. I answered him, speaking out loud, that all might hear. What would you have me sell my Conscience, where can I flee from God? Remember Jonas fled from God, but the Lord found him out, and ducked him over the Lugs, so shall he me if I go over the Light of my Conscience. Then I was taken away and put in the Stocks; then came Four Musketeers before me, and charged their Muskets, lighted their Matches, the more to terrify me, and brought a Cap for my Head; but when they saw me open my Breast to receive the Shots, and that I was willing to die, then came one and said, Let him alone, he shall not be shot, he shall be hanged and drawn out of the Town that Dogs may eat him, for Shots is over good a Death for him. While I was thus in the Stocks I was very thirsty, and called for a Drink; then they intended to bring me a Drink of Wine; but one of the Soldiers, an Irish Man that could speak Latin forbade me to take of their Wine, as he told me afterwards, they had a Mind rather to poison me, and to give me that which would distract me; and because I refused, they threatned in their Anger, that whosoever gave me a Drink of Water should get the Goad-loup; so I lay until it was dark Night, and there was People that would have given me Meat and Drink, but the Soldiers would say blasphemously, If ye come one Foot further here, I shall rash my Pike through your Soul; then I said to that Soldier that was Centry over me, and sitting beside me, Give me a Chopin of Water, and I will give you a Chopin of Ale for it; but he said, I dare not, you heard what was threatned, but if you will give me a Sixpence I will hazard; so I gave him a Sixpence, I having half a Crown about me, and thinking to die to Morrow, I thought a Chopin of Water was better to me than all the Money in the World; then he brought me the Chopin of Water, and held his Cloke betwixt me and the Light, for Fear the rest of the Soldiers should see; and when I had drunk I was much refreshed. Thereafter some standing by, said to me, What needs you or any others make Din about Bishops, seeing there is no other Gospel pressed upon you but what was before? To whom I answered, Know ye not what Paul says, Gal. 1. 6. I marvel that ye are so soon removed to another Gospel, which is not another, but there are some that trouble you, and pervert the Gospel of Christ; and if any Man says he brings another Gospel, or perverts the same Gospel, let him be accursed, and consider to whom that belongs: But what think ye of the Bishops, said some? I answered, That I truly think the Bishops take more on them, than Christ who was a better Preacher than any of them; for he would not meddle with the dividing the Inheritance among the Brethren; as when the young Man in the Gospel came to Christ, saying to him, Master, bid my Brother divide the Inheritance with me; but our Lord refused, saying, Who made me a Judge? seeing, he being a spiritual Teacher, refused to meddle with Civil Law, why will our Bishops sit in Parliament, and go in before Earls? I am informed, they sit and ride in Parliament, and judge in in worldly Affairs ; they have their Coaches to sit in, but neither Christ nor his Apostles had them ; they are Lords over God's Heritage, and our Saviour says to his Ministers, The Princes of the Gentiles exercise Dominion, but it shall not be so among you, but he that will be greatest shall be Servant of all. The Bishops are like the Scribes and Pharisees against whom the Lord pronounced many a Wo ; Wo be to you, Scribes and Pharisees, ye love the chief Seats in the Synagogues, so love our Bishops the chief Seats of the Parliament ; Wo be to you, Scribes and Pharisees, for ye love to wear long Robes, and to be called of Men Rabbi : The Bishops desire side Gowns, and a Man to bear up their Tails too, and they think they never get their right Stile till they be called My Lord, and some of them Your Grace ; you give Grace to a graceless Face ; they oppress the poor People to feed their own Bellies, for which the Lord pronounces many a Wo against them. Then said they, Timothy and Titus were Bishops. I answered, They were preaching Bishops, but not Bishops over whole Dioceses ; and as the Apostle says, 1 Tim. 3. A Bishop should be blameless, the Husband of one Wife, vigilant, sober, of good Behaviour, given to Hospitality, apt to teach ; so I think a preaching Bishop should have but one Flock, but they will not be content with one Kirk ; and if every Bishop had as many of your Wives as he has Kirks, you would be as ill pleased with them as I am. Remember ye not that Scriptre, He that will not work should not eat. The Bishops must have Thousands in the Year, but they preach but when they will. Then they asked me, What think you of the King ? I said, Would ye have me speak Treason ? the King is set over us all by God, and all his Subjects should pray for him, and defend his Person and Government, and obey in all Things according to the Word of God ; but I wish that his Majesty and all Kings may take good heed to the Law of the Lord. Remember ye what beset King Uzziah that went into the Temple to burn Incense, which was not his Office, and the Priests forbade him, and said, It shall not be for thy Honour ; and the Plague of God broke out upon him, and he remained a Leper all his Days ; so I think, our King should fear God's Judgments for breaking and changing the Worship of God. Remember ye not the King of Jerusalem that made a Covenant with the King of Babylon, and the Lord owned it as his Covenant ; when he broke it, he said he should be punished, his Children were slain before his Eyes, and his Eyes plucked out, and he carried Prisoner to Babylon, where he died. Remember you not, how Herod in the 12 of the Acts, went up to the high Place to make an Oration, and the People said, It is the Voice of a God, and not of a Man, and the Lord sent his Angel and smote him, and he was eaten of Worms, that he died ; so I perceive there is no Difference before God between the King and the Beggar. Remember that Covenant that was between the Turk and the Christian King ; the Christian brake the Covenant, and the Turk held up the Covenant, and said, If thou be a God, as the Christians say, and as we dream thou art, revenge the Quarrel of thy perfidious People, who in their Deeds deny thee to be God, and he won the Battle ; and think ye not the King should be afraid for the breaking of his lawful Oath ? Then Mr. White came in and disguised himself, and put on a gray Hat and gray Clothes that I should not know him, and he sat down upon the Stocks beside me, and began to say, I wonder at these Country Folks, if they had any other Gospel preached unto them, it were something : Then I answered, See what the Scripture says, Gal. 1. 6. I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the Grace of Christ, into another Gospel, which is not another ; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the Gospel of Christ : But though I or an Angel from Heaven preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed ; for do I now persuade Men or God, or do I speak to please Men ? for if I yet please Men I should not be the Servant of Christ. Then said they, Have you learned your Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, that you should know these Things ? as long as better Scholars and great Men have done it, what needs you trouble your self ? That is, said I, as spoken in the Gospel of ohn, when the Scribes and Pharisees sent Officers to take Christ when he spake that Parable, He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his Belly shall flow Rivers of living Waters ; then the Scribes sent Officers to take him, and when they had not taken him, they asked, Why have ye not brought him ? The Officers answered, Never Man spake as this Man ; then answered the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived, have any of the Rulers believed on him ? But this People who know not the Law are accursed. Remember ye not what our blessed Lord said, I thank thee, O Father of Heaven and Earth, that thou hast hid these Things from the wise and prudent, and revealed them to Babes. How know ye, but the Lord has revealed more to me than your Bishops with their side Tails ? Then came the Captain of the Guard and said, You may see we are right and they are wrong ; for we have win and they have lost : I did then remember what the Scripture saith of John the Baptist, There was not one greater born among Women, who was the Forerunner of Christ, yet when he had done the Work the Lord sent him for, he was beheaded by cursed Herod ; many of you say that Herod was right, and John the Baptist wrong. They were not able to answer this, then I said, When Cromwel took his Prisoners, he neither headed them nor hanged them as ye do ; then they answered me, Cromwel had not Right nor Law as we have : I said, I will seek no other Words against you than that of your own Mouth, for ye say, that Cromwel had no Right nor Law, yet he won many a Battle against you, and over-ruled the best of you ; ye see a wicked Man may prosper in an evil Cause ; for your Law, I trow, it be like that cursed Law, By our Law he must die, and by our Law they must die. Then came some of the Soldiers and said, We have heard tell of some of your Country Men that have been hanged for stealing Kine and Horse and Sheep, but you are the first we have heard of laid down his Life for Religion : Then I answered, If one that is barbarous, or come out of a barbarous Place, has Respect to his Conscience, what shall come of you who think your self brought up at the Feet of Gamaliel, that has no Respect to your Conscience, what think you shall become of you when you shall be judged at the last Day ? Then said they, Speak no more to him, let him alone. Then after that I heard that they would take no more Lives, then came some of the greatest Men to me, and said, What think you of your self now ? there is a Barrel with Pikes made to put thee in, and roll thee up and down : I said, I even think of my self as I did at first ; I said unto him, Why have you not taken all their Lives, seeing they are all alike guilty ? Then they said, You are more cruel than we are, for we have taken but some to be Example to others ; then I said, Wo be to your Example, for your Example is not according to the Word of God, for remember what the Word of God saith, The Son shall not die for the Father, nor the Father for the Son, far less should a Man be an Example to one that is born in England or Ireland. I heard that they were minded to strangle me in Prison, but they could not agree among themselves ; they said, We cannot tell how to do it, but Word will be gotten of it, and then it will make us more odious. After I came out of Prison, my Lord Eglintoun sent for me, and asked me of thir Passages, and he said to me, Poor Man, Man, poor Man, you did well in not doing what they would have had you do: I answered to my Lord, You are speaking Treason, you say I have done well, whereas you persecute them from the first to the last; this tells me in Experience, that you have gone against the Light of your Conscience; Wo will be to you that go against the Light of your Conscience. My Lord said, Know you not I kept you from being hanged, and are you telling me that? I answered, Keep me from drowning too, I will tell you the Verity.

Association at Exeter, 1688. N^o. XII.

WE whose Names are hereunto subjoyned, who have now joyned with the Prince of Orange, for the Defence of the Protestant Religion, and for the maintaining the ancient Government, and the Laws and Liberties of England, Scotland, and Ireland, do engage to almighty God, to his Highness the Prince of Orange, and to one another, to stick firm to this Cause, in the Defence of it, and never to depart from it, until our Religion, Laws, and Liberties are so far secured to us in a free Parliament, that we shall be no more in Danger of falling under Popery and Slavery. And whereas we are engaged in this common Cause, under the Protection of the Prince of Orange, by which Case his Person might be exposed to Danger, and to the cursed Attempts of Papists and other bloody Men; we do therefore solemnly engage to God, and one another, That if any such Attempt be made upon him, we will pursue not only those that make it, but all their Adherents, and all that we find in Arms against us, with the utmost Severity of a just Revenge, to their Ruin and Destruction. And that the Execution of any such Attempt (which God of his infinite Mercy forbid) shall not divert us from prosecuting this Cause, which we do now undertake, but that it shall engage us to carry it on with all the Vigour that so barbarous an Action shall deserve.

Association in the North of England, 1688. N^o. XIII.

WE being made sadly sensible of the arbitrary and tyrannical Government that is, by the Influence of Jesuitical Counsels, coming upon us, do unanimously declare, That not being willing to deliver our Posterity over to such a Condition of Popery and Slavery, as the aforesaid Illegalities do inevitably threaten, we will, to the utmost of our Power, oppose the same, by joyning with the Prince of Orange, &c. And herein we hope all good Protestants will, with their Lives and Fortunes, be assistant to us, and not be bugbear'd with the opprobrious Terms of Rebels, by which they would fright us to become perfect Slaves to their tyrannical Insolencies and Usurpations: For we assure our selves, that no rational and unbiass'd Person will judge it Rebellion to defend our Laws and Religion, which all our Princes have sworn at their Coronation; which Oath, how well it hath been observed of late, we desire a free Parliament may have the Consideration of. We own it Rebellion to resist a King that governs by Law, but he was always accounted a Tyrant, that made his Will his Law; and to resist such a one, we justly esteem no Rebellion, but a necessary Defence, &c.

And by the 27th Act of the said King James I. his second Parliament, it is statute, That no Man shall wllfully resist, maintain, and do Favour to open and manifest Rebels against his Majesty and the common Laws, under the Pain of Forfeiture. And by the 14th Act of King James II. his Sixteenth Parliament, entituled, Sundry Points of Treason, it is statute, That if any Man do, or commit Treason against the King's Person or his Majesty, or rises in Bier of War against him, or refects any that has committed Treason, or supplies them in Help, Ease, or Counsel, they shall be punished as Traitors. And by the 144 Act of King James VI. Parl. 12. it is statute, That where any declared Traitor repairs in any Part of this Realm, none of his Majesty's Subjects shall presume to refect, supply or intercommune with them, or give them any Relief or Comfort; and that immediately upon their repairing in the Bounds, all his Majesty's good Subjects do their exact Diligence in apprehending the said Traitors and Rebels; and that with all Speed they certify his Majesty, or some of his secret Council, or some Persons of Authority and Credit within the Shire, that such Rebels are within the same, under the Pain that the said Rebels and Traitors ought to sustain, if they were apprehended, and convicted by Justice. Likeas, by the 5th Act of his Majesty's late Parliament, and first Session thereof, it is declared, That it shall be high Treason to the Subjects of this Kingdom, or any Number of them, more or less, upon any Ground or Pretext whatsoever, to rise and continue in Arms, to make Peace or War, to make Treaties or Leagues with any foreign Princes or Estates, or amongst themselves, without his Majesty's special Authority and Approbation first interponed thereto; and all other Subjects are discharged, upon any pretext whatsoever, to attempt any of those Things under the said Pain of Treason. And by the 7th Act of the foresaid Parliament, and first Session thereof, all his Majesty's Subjects are inhibited and discharged, that none of them presume, upon any Pretext or Authority whatsoever, to require the renewing or swearing of the League and Covenant, or any other Covenant or publick Oaths, concerning the Government of the Church and Kingdom, without his Majesty's special Warrant and Approbation; and that none of his Majesty's Subjects offer to renew or swear the same, without his Majesty's Warrant, as they will be answerable at their highest Perils. Nevertheless, the foresaid Persons and their Associates, shaking off all Fear of God, and Conscience of Duty and Loyalty to his Majesty, their native sovereign Prince, and natural Tendernefs to their Country, have most perfidiously and treasonably contravened the said Laws and Acts of Parliament, and committed the Crimes foresaid in Manner above specified, in so far as this his Majesty's ancient Kingdom, having for many Years suffered and incurred all the Calamities and Miseries, and tragical Effects and Consequents of a civil War and foreign Usurpation, and now, after his Majesty's happy Restitution, beginning to recover of so long and wasting a Consumption, through the Blessing of God, and his Majesty's incomparable Goodness and Clemency, and having, by an Act of Oblivion, secured the Lives and Fortunes of the said Persons, and others who were conscious to themselves, and might have justly feared to be under the Last and Compass of Law and Justice; and when his Majesty and his good People, had just Reason to expect Security and Quiet at Home, and Assistance against his Enemies Abroad, yet they, and a Party of seditious Persons, retaining and persisting in their inveterate Disloyalty and Disaffection to his Majesty's Government and Laws, did take Advantage and Opportunity of the Time, when he was engaged in a chargeable and bloody War, with divers of his neighbour Princes and Estates, being jealous of, and envying his Majesty's Greatness and Prosperity, and the Happiness of these Kingdoms under his Government, and having contrived and projected a most horrid Insurrection and Rebellion, tending to involve his Majesty's Kingdoms in Blood and Confusion, and to encourage and strengthen his Enemies, did rise, convene, and assemble themselves together in Arms, and upon the — Day of November last, did march to, and enter within his Majesty's Town of Dumfries, in an hostile Manner, with their drawn Swords and other Arms, and did beset the House where Sir James Turner and other of the Officers of his Majesty's Forces were lodged for the Time, and did violently seize upon the said Sir James his Person and Goods within his Lodging, and did detain and carry him about with them captive, and as a lawful Prisoner taken from an Enemy, and did search for, and would have taken the Minister of the said Town, if he had not escaped; and while the foresaid Persons were in the said Town, they, their Accomplices, and Associates, did many other Acts of Insolence and Rebellion; and having in the Manner foresaid, openly avowed and proclaimed their Rebellion, in so publick and insolent a Way, to the great Contempt and Affront of Authority, they and their Complices, in pursuance of the same, did congregate his Majesty's People and Subjects, and endeavoured to stir them up, and persuade them to joyn in the foresaid Rebellion, and seize upon the Persons, Horses and Arms, and plunder and rifle the Goods and Houses of divers his Majesty's good Subjects, and in special of faithful and loyal Ministers; and, by seditious Sermons, Insinuations, and other Practices, did so far prevail in the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and the Shire of Wigton, and the Shires of Air, Lanerk, and other Western Shires, that many Persons flocking and resorting to them and their Complices, they had the Boldness and Confidence to send a considerable Party to his Majesty's Town of Air, and seize upon and take all the Arms were there; and not content to proceed to the Height of Rebellion in Manner foresaid, they and their Complices did presume to regulate their monstrous and irregular Rebellion, and in the Formality and Frame, and under the Name and Notion, to form and model themselves in Companies and Regiments, and to name Captains of Foot, Commanders of Troops, and other Officers, under the Command of the said Colonel James Wallace, Joseph Learmont, and other Persons of known Disaffection to his Majesty and his Government; and though his Majesty's Lieutenant-general did march speedily for repressing the said Rebellion and Insurrection, and his Majesty's Council did emit and issue a Proclamation, declaring the said Insurrection to be a manifest and horrid Rebellion, and high Treason, and commanding the said Rebels to desist and lay down Arms; with Certification if they would continue in their Rebellion, they should be proceeded against as desperate and incorrigible Traitors; and discharging all his Majesty's Subjects to joyn, reset, supply, or intercommune with them, and commanding them to rise and joyn with his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and the Forces under him, under the Pain of Treason: Yet the foresaid Persons and their Accomplices, did obstinately continue and march through the Country, in their modelled Army, as if they had been an Enemy, and in a Capacity to encounter and dispute with Arms with his Majesty, their sovereign Lord, and his Forces; and did, in a warlike and hostile Manner and Posture, enter within his Majesty's Town of Lanerk, and there, upon the 26th Day of November, to palliate their Rebellion with the Colour of Religion, did renew and take the Oath of the Covenant, and thence did march, quartering all alongst upon, and oppressing his Majesty's good Subjects, until they had the Boldness and Confidence to approach within Two Miles of his Majesty's City of Edinburgh, where his Judicatories and Lords of Privy Council and Session were sitting for the Time, and having quartered all Night within the Parish of Collington, at so near a Distance from the said City, the said Persons and their Accomplices, upon Wednesday the 28th Day of November, did dare and presume to encounter and fight with his Majesty's Armies and Forces, under the Command and Conduct of his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and other Officers, at Pentland-hills, and did wound and kill in the said Fight or Conflict, divers of his Majesty's good Subjects, and endeavoured and did all they could to destroy his Majesty's Army, until, by the Mercy of God, and Conduct and Valour of his Majesty's Lieutenant, and other Officers and Soldiers under him, they were vanquished, routed, and dissipated. Likeas, notwithstanding the Laws, Acts of Parliament, and Proclamation foresaid, and that thereafter a Proclamation was emitted upon the 4th Day of December, whereby his Majesty, with Advice of his Privy Council, did again discharge and inhibit all his Subjects, that none of them should offer or presume to harbour, reset, supply, correspond with, or conceal the Persons therein mentioned, or any other who concurred or joyned in the said last Rebellion, or, upon account thereof, appeared in Arms in any Part of this his Majesty's Kingdom, but to pursue them as the worst of Traitors, and present such of them as they shall have in their Power, to the Lords of Privy Council, Sheriff of the Shire, or Magistrates of the next adjacent Burgh Royal, to be by them forthcoming by Law: certifying all such as should be found to fail in their Duty therein, they should be esteemed and punished as Favourers of the said Rebellion, and as Persons accessory and guilty of the same. Nevertheless divers of the foresaid Persons, did not only disloyally fail in their Duty, and did not rise and joyn with his Majesty's Lieutenant-general, and Officers under him, for repressing and subduing the said Rebels, but most perfidiously and treasonably did their uttermost Endeavours to advance, strengthen and promote the said Rebellion; and, in order thereto, in the Months of

One thousand six hundred and sixty six, and several Days thereof, or one or other of the said Months or Days, they met and convened at the Bankend, Caldwell, Knockenmade, Chitterfleet, the Mearns, and divers other Places within the Western Shires, and Sheriffdoms of and did conclude and resolve to joyn with the said rebellious Party; and being armed with Swords, Pistols, and otherwise, they joyned themselves in Troops and Companies, and did elect and choose Captains, Lieutenants, and other Officers, and did accept the said Charges and Employments, and did accordingly ride and march from Place to Place, and did write Letters to Friends and Neighbours to joyn with them, and did intercept Letters, that thereby they might have Notice and Intelligence where his Majesty's Armies and Forces were, and of their Forces, Motions, and Designs; and, to the same purpose, did go and send out others for Intelligence, and divers other Acts of Treason and Hostility, and in the Months foresaid, as also, after the Defeat of the said rebellious Party, in the ensuing Months, betwixt the said Defeat and the Date of the said Proclamation, and one or other of the said Months, and several Days thereof, the foresaid Persons, within the said Western Shires and Sheriffdoms of within their own Bounds, and their own Tenants Houses, and other Places, did harbour, conceal, reset, supply, correspond and intercommune with the Persons particularly abovenamed, contained in the said Proclamation, the said 4th of December. One thousand six hundred and sixty six Years, and others who concurred and joyned in the said late Rebellion, and who upon that account appeared in Arms. In doing of which, and one or other of the said Deeds, the foresaid Persons, and ilk one of them, have committed and incurred the Pains and Crimes of Treason, and are guilty of being Authors, Actors, accessory, Art and Part thereof; which being found by an Assize, they ought to be punished in their Persons and Goods, to the Terror and Example of others; as they who, upon the 29th of May, 26th, 27th, and 28th Days of June, 1st, 2d, and 3d Days of July, respective, last bypast, were lawfully charged by John Telfer Herald, Alexander Murray, and James Alison Pursevents, to have found Caution acted in the Books of Adjournal for that Effect, lawful Time of Day being bidden, and the forenamed Persons not entring nor compearing to the effect abovementioned.

Proclamation for bringing in Arms, March 25. 1667. N^o. XX.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; To Our Lovits, Messengers, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as the late Rebellion and Rising in Arms in the Western Shires, is too great an Evidence that there are many disaffected Persons in these Places, who are ready to involve the Kingdom again in a bloody and unnatural War; and that We have just Reason to suspect that these Rebels will be ready to lay hold on this Opportunity to rise in Arms, when We are necessitate to continue the War with Our foreign Enemies, and not only to make use of such Arms, Powder and Ammunition, as they have concealed, or may be transported to them from Our Enemies; but will seize upon the Arms of Our well affected Subjects, who reside amongst them, and are not able to make Resistance, which may endanger the Peace of the Kingdom, and weaken Our Forces, necessitating them at one Time to oppose foreign Invasions and intestine Commotions: As likewise, that according to their former wicked Practices, they may invade the Ministers of the Gospel, who are lawfully admitted Preachers amongst them, and do Violence or Injury to their Persons, to the great Contempt of Our Authority, and Scandal of the reformed Religion, as it is now profest. Therefore, We, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, command and charge all Persons residing within the Shires of Lanerk, Air, Renfrew, Wigton, and the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, betwixt and the First Day of May next, to bring in all their Arms and Ammunition which they have in their Possession, of whatsoever Sort, (allowing Gentlemen only to carry Swords, and none other) to the Head-burghs of the respective Shires and Stewartry, and deliver the same to the Sheriff, his Depute, or any having his Order: With Certification to them, if they fail, they shall be fined by Our secret Council in the Sums of Money underwritten, viz. 11k Gentleman in the Sum of Two thousand Merks, and every other Person in the Sum of Five hundred Merks, to be divided, the one Half to be paid to Our Exchequer, and the other Half to any Person who shall first discover the Concealers; and further, shall be proceeded against as seditious Persons, and disaffected to Our Government. Likeas, We ordain the said Sheriff, his Depute, or any other appointed by him, immediately, upon the Delivery of their said Arms or Ammunition, to carry the same to Stirling or Dumbar-ton Castles, which shall be next adjacent, there to be kept by the Governor thereof. As likewise We command and charge, That all Heritors and Parishoners, residing in any of the Parishes within the said Bounds, protect and defend the Persons, Families and Goods of their respective Ministers within their several Parishes, from all Affronts and Injuries to be committed by insolent and disaffected Persons to the present Government, as well when they are in the Exercise of the Ministerial Function, as residing at their own Houses and Dwellings: With Certification, that if any Injury or Affront shall be done to them, in their Persons or Goods, that the Parishoners who shall suffer the same to be done, and not oppose the doing thereof, shall be reputed and holden as Art and Part of the said Crimes and Violence, and be proceeded against by Law as guilty thereof, and punished according to the Quality of their Offence with all Rigour. And in case the said Injuries shall be done by Surprisal, that they follow and pursue the Committers thereof, until they apprehend their Persons, and present them to Our secret Council, to be judged by them as they shall order: Otherwise We declare, that they themselves shall be liable for such Reparation, Damage, and Interest, as the said Lords of Council shall think fit to determine. And ordains the said Sheriffs to cause intimate these Presents by publick Proclamation, at the Market-crosses of the Head-burghs of the said respective Shires and Stewartries, and cause read the same at all the Parish-churches within the said Shires and Stewartry, upon a Sunday before Noon, after divine Service, with all Diligence; and that these Presents be printed, that none pretend Ignorance.

Proclamation for bringing in Horses, March 25. 1667. N^o. XXI.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; To Our Lovits, Messengers, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as it is more than high Time, to prevent the rising of disaffected Persons, who, during the Continuance of the War with Our foreign Enemies, are ready to break out in open Rebellion, and rise in Arms against Us and Our Authority, by disabling them from putting themselves in a military Posture, and in a Condition to make any sudden Marches, or Attempts upon Our well affected Subjects, or any Part of Our standing Forces, or to joyn with these, who are of their own pernicious and disloyal Principles, who live at a Distance from them. Therefore, We, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, command and charge all Persons within the Shires of Lanerk, Air, Renfrew, Wigton, and Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, of whatsoever Quality, who have refused to accept of any publick Trust, or have deserted the same, being in Place; as also, all those who withdraw from publick Ordinances, and do not keep their own Parish-churches, or do not submit to the present Government of Church and State; as likewise all those who being warned to rise, and joyn with Our Forces, for suppressing the late Rebellion, did not give Obedience, unless the said Persons will take the Oath of Allegiance, and subscribe the Declaration appointed by the late Act of Parliament, that after the Fifteenth Day of May next, they, by themselves, nor no Persons to their Use and Behoof, do not keep any serviceable Horses, above the Rate of one hundred Merks Scots, under any Pretext whatsoever: With Certification, if they fail, that upon Information of any Person well affected, the Sheriff, or any Two of the Justices of Peace within the Shire, shall cause value such Horses, and finding them above the Rate foresaid, shall cause deliver them to the Informer, and that without any Payment or Satisfaction to be made therefore. And requires all Sheriffs and Justices of Peace, within their respective Bounds, Bounds, to issue Orders, for convening the Contraveners of this Act before them, and causing apprise any such Horses, by indifferent Persons, that it may be known, if they be above the Rate foresaid. And, in case that the Persons who compear, shall offer to purge themselves of any Suspicion of Disaffection to Our Government, upon the Accounts foresaid, that they administer to them the Oath of Allegiance, and after the Declaration to be subscribed by them, which being taken, and subscribed by them, as said is, then We enjoyn them to dismiss the said Persons with their Horses, to be kept by them, without any further Trouble or Molestation, otherwise, that they proceed as said is. And ordains the Sheriffs of the said Shires, to cause intimate these Presents by publick Proclamation, at the Market-crosses of the Head-burghs of the said respective Shires and Stewartry, and cause read the same at all the Parish-churches of the said Bounds, upon a Sunday before Noon, after Divine Service, with all Diligence, and that these Presents be printed, that none pretend Ignorance.

Council's Letter to the King, March 25. 1667. N^o. XXII.

MOST sacred Sovereign, In obedience to your Majesty's Letter of the 12th of this Instant, we have seriously gone about the Performance of these Particulars recommended to us, with that Diligence and Faithfulness which is suitable to your Majesty's tender Care of this your ancient Kingdom, and your Royal Wisdom, in providing timeously for such Means as may secure your Royal Subjects from the Dangers that are threatned from your Enemies abroad, and the disaffected Party amongst our selves, whose rebellious Principles may have led them, in this Juncture of Affairs, to desperate and new Undertakings; and, after full Deliberation, have resolved on the following Orders, whereof we found our selves bound in Duty to give your Majesty an Account.

As to the First, concerning the Tender of the Oath of Allegiance and Declaration, to active and leading Persons of the disaffected Party, we are resolved to go about the same with all Diligence, and hope in a short Time to give your Majesty a full Account thereof.

As to the Second and Sixth Articles, which relate only to some western Shires, we have issued a Proclamation in your Majesty's Name, for calling in all Arms and Ammunition, and securing from Violence the Persons of Ministers in those Places, whereof printed Copies are herewith transmitted to your Majesty.

As to the Third, for seizing all serviceable Horses belonging to disaffected or suspected Persons, we have agreed upon some Characters whereby such Persons may be known, and accordingly have emitted a Proclamation; but because it is not clear to us that your Majesty did intend that this shall be put in Execution over all the Kingdom, we have restricted it only to some western Shires, until we know your Majesty's further Pleasure.

As to the Fourth, we having considered the late Act of Parliament, whereby the Estates did tender to your Majesty Twenty thousand Foot, and Two thousand Horse, to be levied out of all the Shires and Burrows of the Kingdom, according to the Proportions therein set down, and humbly conceive at this Time your Majesty may nominate Officers for the several Divisions, as the said Act bears; yet because there will be great Difficulty to get Arms, and a Burden to the Subjects to provide for the whole Number, that it may prove more effectual for your Majesty's Service, that the Half of that Number may always be in Readiness to be trained in their several Divisions, for to march to any Place they shall be appointed: It is our humble Opinion, that your Majesty may order only the Half to be always in Readiness, when they shall be called to these Duties, and the rest if Necessity require; and seeing the western Shires, who are to be disarmed, and their Horses taken from them, cannot be ordered to have their Militia in Readiness, they must be excepted out of that Order, and no Officers are to be commissioned by your Majesty as to these Bounds; yet it is offered to us by Duke Hamilton, that as many Horsemen may be got out of Lanark Shire as their Proportion will amount to, who will take the Oath of Allegiance and Declaration, upon which account we humbly may name Officers of Horse as to that Shire.

As to the Fifth, anent providing of Arms and Ammunition, we have recommended the Performance thereof to the Lord Commissioner his Grace, who (we are confident) will effectually go about the same.

As to the last, Orders are given to your Majesty's Advocate to intent Processes against all such Persons as are named in that Article, before the Justice-general, that the Sentence of Forfeiture may be given against them without Delay: So praying God to bless your Majesty and all your Undertakings, we remain your Majesty's most faithful and obedient Subjects and Servants. Subscribed ut federunt.

Proclamation about Ministers, June 13. 1667. N^o. XXIII.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; To Our Lovits, Messengers, Our Sheriffs, in that Part conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as, We, by divers Acts of Parliament and Proclamations, have expressed and declared Our Royal Care and Resolution to protect the orthodox and well affected Clergy and Ministers; and to that Effect and Purpose a Proclamation was issued by Us, upon the 5th of March last, commanding all Heritors and Parishoners within the western Shires there mentioned, to protect and defend the Persons, Families, and Goods of their respective Ministers, within the several Parishes, from all Affronts and Injuries to be committed by insolent and disaffected Persons to the present Government, in manner, with, and under the Certifications and Pains therein contained: And nevertheless, the Malice and Rage of such Persons is so implacable against loyal Ministers, upon no other account, but that they are faithful and obedient to Our Laws and Authority, that that of late, since the said Proclamation, divers Outrages have been committed within the said western and other Shires, by invading and wounding the Persons of several Ministers, assaulting them in their Houses, and plundering and robbing their Goods, to the great Scandal of Religion, Contempt of Our Authority, and Discouragement of the Preachers of the Gospel; and it is a great Encouragement to such sacrilegious and wicked Persons, that within the Parishes where such Insolencies are committed and done to Ministers, there are not wanting Persons of the same Temper and Principles, who do secretly favour and encourage and comply with them; and they do presume that the Actors withdrawing, the Parishoners will not be questioned, and that they will not think themselves concerned to repair the Wrongs done to the Ministers. Thereupon We, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, command and charge all Heritors, Liferenters, and others having any real Interest or Rent within the several Parishes of the Kingdom, whether they reside within the same or not, their Bailies, Chamberlains, and others having Trust under them, and all other Parishoners, to protect, defend, and secure the Persons, Families, and Goods of their Ministers, not only in the Exercise of their Ministerial Function, but in their Dwelling-houses, or being elsewhere within the Parish, from all Injuries, Affronts, and Prejudices, which they may incur in their Persons and Goods, from the Violence and Invasion of any disaffected or phanatick Person; and that upon the Notice of any Attempt of such, they immediately repair to any Place where they shall hear such Injuries are offered, and seize upon the Persons of the Committers; and in case they flee out of the said Bounds, that they give Notice to the Sheriff, or any Garison, or Forces that shall be nearest to these Places, that they may pursue them till they be apprehended and brought to Trial: With Certification, that if any such Outrages shall be committed, the Actors and all Persons who shall have any Accession to the same, and shall aid and assist, or any way comply with, or shall willingly reset or conceal the Delinquents, shall be proceeded against, and punished with all Severity, as equally guilty with the Invaders. And further, if they be not apprehended and brought to Trial, by the Means and Diligence of the Parishoners, Letters shall be directed at the Instance of Our Advocate, to cite the Parishoners to compare before the Lords of Our Privy Council, at the least to send Three or Four of their Number, specially authorized for that Effect, to hear and see the Parishoners decerned to pay the Minister for Reparation, Damage, and Interest, such a Sum and Fine as Our Council shall be pleased to determine specially, Consideration being always had of well affected Heritors and Parishoners, who constantly attend the publick Ordinances, and as they are required by the Ministers, concur with them in the Exercise of Church Discipline, who are to be tried to be such by the Justices of Peace, or their Judge ordinary, and a Citation of the Parishoners in general, at the Market-cross of the Shire, being intimate at the Parish-church upon a Sunday before Noon, after Divine Service, We declare to be sufficient: And the said Sum modified, shall be divided amongst the Heritors and Liferenters, and others, according to their respective Valuations, and is to be advanced and paid by them to the Sheriffs, Stewarts, or Bailies of Regalities and Bailiaries, who are hereby ordained by themselves or Deputes, to uplift the same for the Use of the Minister, and to use all lawful Execution for that Effect, and for Relief of the said Heritors, Liferenters, and others foresaid, their several Tenants are hereby ordained to pay the Third Part of the several Proportions payable to their Masters; and where any Person has more Tenants than the Third Part payable for Relief of their Master, is to be divided and proportioned betwixt their Tenants proportionally, and according to the Duty they pay respective; and if any Question arise thereanent, either amongst the Tenants themselves, or the Tenants and their Masters, the same to be determined by the Justice of Peace, Sheriff of the Shire, or other Judges ordinary, in whose Jurisdiction they reside, in the Option of the Complainers. And ordains these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-crosses of the Head-burghs of this Kingdom, and read at all Parish-churches upon a Sunday before Noon, after Divine Service, that none pretend Ignorance.

King's Letter to the Council about Forfeitures, May 4. N. XXIV.

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty, &c. We greet you well. We did by Our Dispatch, which Our Major-general carried, amongst other Things, require you to cause proceed in a Process of Forfeiture, against those Heritors, Gentlemen, and Ministers, who were in actual Arms in the late Rebellion, or who gathered together without Our Authority, in order to joyn with the Rebels. We expect you will be careful to hasten that Process, and give us an Account of it. And whereas We are informed, That divers of the Rebels do lurk or wander in the Country, We do now further require you to issue a Proclamation in Our Name, by which all the rest of the Rebels who are not yet taken may be cited by Name, to appear at a certain Day to be named by you, to the end they may be proceeded against according to Law, and that such as do not appear may be criminally out-lawed and declared Fugitives; and that all who shall afterwards reset, conceal, or keep any Manner of Correspondence with any of them, may be punished according to Law. This you are to do in the ordinary Form, with all Clauses necessary. And whereas We have been several Times informed, That both in the Commission for Church-affairs, and at Our Council-board, those who have been cited for Conventicles, and other Crimes contrary to Law, nay, even divers of the Rebels have been pleaded for, and countenanced, even in these Our Judicatories, and to this Day We could never hear any Body named or countenanced upon; therefore We do positively command you Our Commissioner, when by any Person in Authority under Us any Obstruction is given to Our Service, any forswearing Our Commands, by countenancing or pleading for Forfeitters, Conventicle-keepers, or disobedient Persons to Ecclesiastical Government, who shall be brought before any of these Judicatories, that you Our Commissioner give Us particular Information of the Names of such Persons who are in any Trust under Us, to the end We may take such Courses therewith, as may thereafter prevent such Practices.

And because it will be necessary for Our Service, that a constant Correspondence be kept betwixt you and Our Lieutenant of Ireland, you shall settle a Way of Correspondence through that Part of Scotland, as We will will order Our Lieutenant to do the like in the Irish Side ; and so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall the Fourth Day of May, and of Our Reign the Nineteenth Year.

By his Majesty's Command,

King's Letter to Council, August 23. 1667. No. XXV.

CHARLES R.

Right trusty, &c. We Greet you well. The great Care We had of the Honour and Safety of that Our ancient Kingdom, obliged Us to raise both Horses and Foot, in a Proportion much above what that Kingdom could long bear ; and now when God hath blessed Us with so fair a Prospect of Peace, that same Care obliges Us to ease the Country of so heavy a Burden, as soon as is possible : Therefore We have thought fit and necessary to acquaint you with Our Resolution to disband all the Horse, (excepting the Two Troops of the Guards commanded by you, Our Commissioner, and the Earl of Newburgh) as also the greatest Part of the Foot. We shall, together with the Orders for publishing the peace, send particular Orders for disbanding all the Troops, and as many of the Foot as We shall think fit : In the mean time, We have given Command to Our Commissioner of Our Treasury, to use all possible Endeavours for raising Money to pay these Troops and Companies so to be disbanded ; and We do require you of Our Privy Council, to be assistant with your utmost Concurrences, in what shall be desired by the Commissioners of Our Treasury for that effect : So expecting your Obedience in so necessary a Work, We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 23d Day of August, 1667. and of Our Reign the Nineteenth Year.

By His Majesty's Command,

N^o. XXVI.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Scotland, England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith ; To all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects whom these Presents do, or may concern, Greeting : Forasmuch as it hath been always Our greatest Care, that Our good Subjects may live in Peace and Happiness under Our Government, so We have, for that purpose, been more desirous to make Use of Our Mercy, to induce them to a dutiful Submission to Our Laws, than to take special Notice of any Disorders committed by them, as the Acts of Indemnity and Grace lately granted by Us will witness. And the same Tenderness towards them still possessing Us, in order to those who have been seduced and misled in the late Rebellion and Insurrection that appeared in some of the Western Shires, in the Month of November last, We are resolved that Our Mercy to them shall far exceed Our Justice : And therefore, out of Our special Grace and Favour, We do by these Presents grant Our full and free Pardon and Indemnity to all Persons who were engaged in the said Rebellion, or who had Accession thereto, from all Pain or Punishment which by the Law they are liable to for the said Rebellion, and for all Deeds done by them in the same, or in relation thereto : Excepting always from this Pardon, the Persons and Fortunes of Colonel James Wallace, Major Learnmont,

THe Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, in pursuance of his Majesty's Commands for securing the Peace of the Kingdom, have nominated and appointed the Earls of Edinburgh, Dumfries, and Lowland, the Lords Cochran, Ross, and Stair for the Shires of Air and Renfrew; the Lord Duke Hamilton, the Marquis of Douglas, the Earls of Linlithgow and Wigtoun, and the Lord Lee, for the Shire of Lanerk; the Earls of Linlithgow, Annandale, Galloway, and the Lord Drumlanrig, for the Shire of Wigtoun, and Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, as also for the Shire of Dumfries and Stewartry of Annandale; with Power to them, or any Two of them, for the said Shires and Stewartries, to appoint the haill Noblemen, Gentlemen, Heritors, and Feuars of the said respective Shires and Stewartries, to meet at the Head-burgh of the Shire or Stewartry upon the Days following, viz. the Shire of Air and Renfrew upon the last of this Instant, the Shire of Lanerk upon the 24th Instant, and the Shire of Wigtoun and Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Shire of Dumfries and Stewartry of Annandale upon the 7th of November next, and thereafter to appoint their own Diets, and there to offer to them a Bond agreed upon by the Council, and herewith sent subscribed by their Clerk, to be subscribed by them, for themselves, their Tenants and Servants, for keeping the Peace, under the Penalty therein contained; and grant Power to all such Noblemen, Heritors, and Feuars of the said respective Shires and Stewartries, who shall subscribe the same, to require their respective Men, Tenants, and Servants, to subscribe a Bond for their keeping the Peace, and relieving them of their Engagements. And for the said Noblemen, Gentlemen, Heritors, and Feuars foresaid, their Encouragement to engage, as said is, the said Lords grant them full Power and Warrant, in case their said Tenants refuse to bind for their Relief, to disarm them; and if they have no Tacks or Rentals, to remove them from their Possessions; and if they have standing Tacks or Rentals for Years yet to run, give Warrant to the Clerk of Council upon their Desire, to grant Letters to charge them to find the said Caution; and if they continue disobedient, ordain them to be denounced Rebels, and put to the Horn; upon which Denunciation the Lords declare, that the said Noblemen, Gentlemen, Heritors, or Feuars, their Masters shall have the Gift of their single or Liferent-escheat gratis, in so far as may be extended to the Rooms and Possessions belonging to them; and ordain the said Commissioners to return the said Bonds to the Clerk of Council, to be by him regisstrate in the Books thereof, betwixt and the 15th Day of January next: As likewise the said Lords give Warrant to the said Commissioners to declare to such Noblemen, Gentlemen, Heritors, and Feuars, as shall give Bond, as said is, that they shall not be pressed to take the Declaration, unless they be admitted to Places of publick Trust, conform to the late Act of Parliament made thereanent. The Copy of the Bond follows, see the Body of the History.

Instrument taken at subscribing the Bond, December 30. 1667. N^o. XXIX.

Apud penultimo die mensis Decembris, Anno Dom. millesimo sexcentesimo sexagesimo septimo, regnique S. D. N. Regis anno decimonono.

THe whilk Day, in presence of me Notar Publick undersubscribing, and Witnesses after named ——— being called, compeared personally, before ——— and ——— Two of the Commissioners for the Sherifdom of ——— appointed by the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, for receiving of the Bonds for keeping the Peace, according to the Act of Council, dated the 9th Day of October last by past, and there the said ——— declared that ——— and he were come to ——— to tender the Bonds for keeping the Peace to the Persons therein concerned, and therefore required the said ——— to subscribe the said Bond, to which the said ——— answered, That he was most willing to evidence his Respect to Authority, and to justify his Loyalty to his Majesty upon every Occasion, but declared, though the Expressions in the said Bond of keeping the publick Peace, and not rising in Arms against, or without his Majesty's Authority, being considered in themselves, seemed to import nothing in the plain and genuine Sense of the Words, but what is the incumbent Duty of a good Subject, under a lawful and well governing Magistrate; that yet he feared that Bond, as it is circumstance with Time, Place, Persons, and other Circumstances, was intended for obliging the Subject, to approve of, and submit unto Prelatical Government, and to give Obedience unto all Acts made, or to be made in favours thereof, and to prelimit and restrict from acting or doing any Thing for Extirpation of the same, contrary to that sacred indissoluble standing Bond, the solemn League and Covenant, and Second Article thereof; and if the said Bond, considered either in the Substance or Circumstances, could bear such a Sense, or be any ways interpret to import any such Thing, he held it to be most sinful and perfidious, and utterly to be refused: And also declared, That he likewise feared that the said Bond was contrived for subverting and taking away all innocent Self-defence, and giving unlimited and arbitrary Obedience to Persons in Authority; and that such Sense would be put thereupon, as should enervate and overturn former Bonds and Engagements, and tend to the Prejudice of Religion, Liberties of the Subject, and true Peace of the Kingdom, and if so, the taking of the said Bond would be most sinful and unlawful, and therefore he could not in Conscience subscribe the same. Whereunto the said ——— replied, That the said Bond, neither as to the Occasion, Import or Intent of it, did oblige to the approving of the present Establishment of Episcopal Government, or giving Obedience to the Acts made in favours thereof, nor did it relate to Ecclesiastical Affairs, nor was it any ways contrary to former publick lawful Bonds and Engagements, nor inconsistent with the Covenant, nor did it condemn innocent Self-defence, nor imply any Thing contrary to the Word of God, but only and simply obligeth to that which is the Duty and Allegiance of every good Subject, and becometh every good Christian; and that in taking of the said Bond, there was no Ground for any of these Fears mentioned by the said ——— Unto which the the said ——— answered, That since the said Bond, according to his Judgment, did not imply nor infer in the plain and common Sense of the Words, any Thing but what is the Duty of every good and faithful Subject, under a lawful and well governing Magistrate; and seeing that the said ——— as one authorized with Commission from the Council, had removed the Grounds of his Scruples and Fears, by giving the E plication and Declaration before exprest, thereby removing from the said Bond every Sense, which could render the same any ways in consonant to the Word of God, or inconsistent with the Covenant, but making it very agreeable to both, he declared himself willing to sign and subscribe the said Bond, as so signed and explained, protesting that it should no ways be interpret to imply or infer any Thing but what is incumbent Duty for him, according to the Word of God, and solemn League and Covenant: After repeating thereof to the said ——— again and again, he subscribed the said Bond, calling God to Witness, and the Persons afternamed, that he subscribed the same in the plain late Sense thereof, declared by him, and acknowledged by the said ——— in manner before rehearsed. Upon all and sundry the hail Premises, the said ——— asked and required Instruments in the Hands of me Notar publick. These Things were spoken and done Day, Month, Year, and Place respectively abovespecified, in presence of M. and R. Witnesses, specially called and required to the Premises.

And in that Case grants him Power to command as many of the Foot, as he pleases, with competent Forces to march with him; and if he judge it necessary, with Power to him, to mount some or all of the Musketeers on Horseback, or Dragoons, to do all military Actions, as he shall command; and so by one or more Parties, the hail Horse and Foot in his Garison, he is ordered to seek out these risen in Arms, and attempt to defeat and destroy the same, without staying for any further Force.

XIII. As soon as he shall get any such Information or Alarm of People risen in Arms, ordain him forthwith to acquaint the Lord Chancellor, or, in his absence, the Lord Convener of the Council at Edinburgh, with the same, as also the Officers of other Garisons.

FOrasmuch as the standing Forces of Horse and Foot are ordered to quarter in the Shires of Lanerk, Air, Dumfries, Wigtoun, and Stewartes thereof, and certain other Places, till the Council's further Order, and that, for levying and exacting of Money, or for Entertainment in their Quarters, or for the Prices of Corn and Straw, there may be Abuses committed, which may occasion Complaints and Grievances: Therefore, and for preventing thereof, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do ordain and command, That no Officer or Soldier shall levy any Money from any of the Burghs or Subjects by Quartering or otherwise, but by express Order in Writing, from Sir William Bruce, for the Cess and Fines, the Commissioners of Excise, and others authorized by Acts of Parliament or Convention of Estates, for the respective Dues; and ordain that the same be exacted orderly and regularly, as is subscribed by the Act of the late Convention; and in case any inferior Officer, Troopers or Soldiers, shall be necessitate to take their Entertainment upon Truill, ordain the same to be done by Direction of the chief Officers present, respectively, who are to engage to make Satisfaction for the same, conform to the said Act: And if any Disorder or Abuse happen to be committed by any Horseman or Foot-soldier, ordain the respective Officers, commanding in Chief for the Time, in the Place, to cause them make Satisfaction for the same, or punish them according to Justice, or otherwise he himself shall be answerable. And ordain the said Commissioners to make Intimation hereof, by affixing Copies of the same upon the Market-crosses of the several Burghs and Shires, and Parish-kirks thereof, that none pretend Ignorance.

Proclamation against Rebels who have not accepted the Indemnity, May 9. 1668. N^o. XXXII.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith;
To
Macers or Messengers at Arms, conjunctly and severally, and to all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects whom it concerns, Greeting: Forasmuch as We, by Our Act of Indemnity and Proclamation, of the Date the Ninth of Oct. ber, One thousand six hundred and sixty seven, were graciously pleased to make Intimation of Our Tendernefs and Care, to reduce such of the late Rebels as were seduced and misled, to their due Obedience to Our Authority and Laws, (excepting only such as were therein named) provided always that they should appear betwixt and the First Day of January last bypast, before such as were then authorized by the Lords of Our Privy Council, and give such Bonds for keeping the publick Peace of the Kingdom, as is therein appointed. And yet notwithstanding of Our gracious Pleasure timeously intimate, many of the said Rebels continue yet so desperate and wicked, that they have refused, within the Time limited, to make their Appearance; whereby they have justly forfeited the Benefit of Our gracious Offer, and deserve to be proceeded against with all Rigour, till they be brought to condign Punishment. Therefore, We, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, command and require all Sheriffs of Sheriffdoms, Stewards of Stewartries, Magistrates of Royal Burghs, Bailies of Regalities and Baronies, and all others Our Ministers of Justice, and Officers of Our standing Forces, as they will be answerable to Us upon their Allegiance and Duty, immediately after Notice hereof, to seize upon, and apprehend the Persons of the Rebels underwritten, viz.

Consenting, &c. in common Form.

Mr. John Wilkie's Examination before the Council, July 28. 1668. N^o. XXXIV.

I Was interrogated by my Lord Advocate, What is your Name, Sir? I answered, My Lord, my Name is Mr. John Wilkie. Q. Where were you Minister? A. In the Parish of Twynnam, in the Presbytery of Kirkcudbright. Q. What is your Wife's Name? A. Anna Rae Daughter to Mr. Adam Rae Minister at Halywood. Q. What Country Woman is she? A. A Nithsdale Woman. Q. How long since you came to Edinburgh? A. Two Years bygone in April. Q. What brought you here? A. To consult the Doctors anent my Health, with whom I have been dregging and dressing ever since I came here. Q. But how could you come to Edinburgh, exprels contrary to the Law, without Liberty obtained? To which I answered nothing, but waved the Question, and cast in another Discourse. My Lord Advocate asked me, if I knew who shot the Bishop? I answered, I knew not, and did presently depone upon Outh, that I neither shot him, nor knew who shot him. He asked me, If I knew any of their West Country Rebels, especially Major Learmont, Barfcob, Mardrogate, young Murrieff, Barmagachan, Mr. John Wesh, Cornley. I answered, I know them all, all, for they were my old Acquaintances. Then he asked, if I had seen them since the Fight? I answered, I had seen them all; for being my Acquaintances, they came to visit me on my supposed Death-bed. He asked, if I knew where Learmont did now quarter? A I knew not at all. Q Where Bumigachan is now? A I suppose he be not in Scotland. Q Do you know the proper Name of one that goes under the Name of James Small? A I am not much acquaint with the Man; but, seeing your Lordship urgeth me, I think the Business is not tanti as to conceal it, for ought I know his Name is Mr. James Mitchell. Q Is he a Minister? A I alledge, not. Q What Age is he of? A I never enquired. Q What Colour of Hair hath he? A It is hard to know, seeing ye all wear Periwigs. Q What Colour is his Perwig? A I think it may be the Colour of that (pointing at Hugh Stevenson's, Subclerk.) Q Do you keep Conventicles? A I am not able, by reason of sore and long continued Sickness; but I use, when I have Health, to exercise in my own Family both Sabbath and Week-day. Q What Time take you on the Sabbath? A Betwixt Sermons, beginning at Half Twelve, and continuing so long as I am able. Q Admit you any to your Family-exercise? A I invite none, I debar none. Q It seems you are clear to admit any that come? A Yes, my Lord, you should be welcome, and the Archbishop of St. Andrews should not be debarred. Q Good-footh, Mr. Wilkie, you would go Four Miles about (in that Cafe) to visit a Friend. A No, my Lord, I would find him within less than Half a Mile. Your Lordship remembers of a Story betwixt my Lord Scane, and an honest old Minister, who alledged that in every Text he found my Lord Scane. Upon this I tell a little faint and weary with standing, and they caused set in a Seat to me, where I sat and discoursed with them as follows. Q What I heard concerning him that shot the Bishop? A My Lord, for me to bring what Clatters I hear before this honourable Court, were not fair, neither can they bear any Weight in Judgment. Q But, Mr. Wilkie, tell us what you hear? A My Lord, seeing you urge me, I will tell you what I hear. 1. Some think it to be a Jesuitical Prank. 2. Some think it to be out of private Revenge, a Gentleman in Orkney being wronged by his Bishop. 3. Some say, That it is some of the West-country Men. 4. Some alledge that it is done by some of their own Emissaries. The Advocate being astonished, began to fain himself; Could any of themselves attempt the like against themselves? A These who are of that Judgment think that it is done to obstruct a greater Good intended. The Provost of Edinburgh, (I knew him not then) till I asked him if he was Provost of Edinburgh, which he answered he was for Want of a better, desired my Lord Advocate to urge me in that, What I meant by the obstructing of a better Work? A Your Lordship, who sits upon these Cabinet-councils, knows better than I do. Q But, Mr. John, I pray you be free, and tell what it is? A My Lord, frae you will have me to tell you it, There were, and yet are great Rumours that we who are old Ministers should all have our Mouths opened, and Liberty to preach where we get a Call. To which there was not one Word replied. My Lord Advocate urged me again that I should admit none to my Family-exercise, but the Members of the Family. To which I answered as formerly, That I invited none, and I would debar none, using an Argument ad hominem: My Lord, would you think it fair, if your Lordship, being of my Acquaintance, came to make a Visit at the Nick of Time of Family worship, if my Servant should keep you at the Door, saying, My Lord, you must not come here, we are at the Worship of God; surely, my Lord, you would not take it well: And more, my Lord, I am still bound to preach when called, and able for that Work, under the Hazard of that, Wo is unto me, if I preach not the Gospel. Then my Lord Advocate urged me, In what Families I used to exercise? I answered, My long and sore Sickness made me incapable of going Abroad; and, to the best of my Knowledge, since October last, I supped not save twice out of mine own House, where indeed I made the Fashion of Family-exercise. Q What were these Two Houses? A My Lord, it were both impertinent and imprudent in me to tell this honourable Court, who invites me to dine or sup with them; and so your Lordship must pardon me, for I cannot in Discretion tell: But if your Lordship should urge me to tell, you will not gain any thing; for I know no Law as yet discharging the Service of the living God. The Advocate answered, You need not tell us that, for we know it is true. The Business coming to this Close, the Advocate desired me to have my Surety ready against Ten o' Clock to Morrow, to find Bonds to present my self before the Council, when called, because I was a sick Man, and not fit for the Prison; and so I took my Leave. My Lord Advocate requested the Goodman of the Tolbooth to grant me a Chamber in his House; but he said, his House was all taken up, so I was carried back to Prison. July 29. I was arraigned before the secret Council, and made to stand without the Bar at a great Distance, where (by reason of my Shortness of Sight) I could not well discern any of their Faces so as to know them. At the first my Lord Chancellor charged me with laughing. I answered, my Lord, I marvel your Honour should charge me with laughing; for I am even now as sick as I am able to stand on my Feet. After this, he makes an historical Narration of what had past betwixt the Committee and me; that I had confessed my coming to Edinburgh contrary to the Law; that I had conversed with these West-country Rebels; that I exercised in my Family, and admitted all that came. I granted all that to be true, and that I had satisfied the Committee, in Reason, as to every Particular. Chanc. But, Mr. Wilkie, you stick at one Particular, you will not declare what these Two Families were wherein you supped? A My Lord, I think it not prudent to tell. Chanc. What, Sir, are you beginning to teach the Council Prudence? A No, my Lord, I am only studying how to carry prudently before the Council. Chanc. But, Sir, you must tell what these Two Families are? A I cannot for Shame tell; would your Lordship, being of my Acquaintance, think it fair Play, if your Honour had invited me to dine with you yesterday, that I should come in and tell his Majesty's secret Council the Morn. Chanc. Nay, Mr. Wilkie, you mistake the Business, it is not where you have dined or supped, but what you did there as to the Point of Exercise? A My Lord, I intreat Forbearance in that Point, for your Lordship will find nothing in it. Chanc. Nay, but you must declare it, and that upon Oath. A Let your Lordship think that there is some Mystery in the Matter, I will declare, and you shall gain nothing. Chanc. Clerk, go to the Bar, and administer the Oath. The Oath being administered, the Chancellor began to exhort me to remember I was upon my Oath. I told his Lordship, I did remember very well, and I should swear nothing but the Truth. Chanc. What were these Two Houses? A One of them is a Friend called John Wilson, with whom I supped not long since. Chanc. What did you there? A I took my Supper, blessed the Table, gave Thanks, sang, read, noted and prayed. Chanc. Who was there present? A Not one Soul save the Members of the Family. Chanc. What was the other Family? A My Lord, you will gain as little of it, and therefore forbear. Chanc. But you must tell, you are now upon Oath. A It was, my Lord, Sabbath last, in one Mr. George's House, who hath some Relations of mine breeding at School. Chanc. What did you there? A I took took my Supper, as I could, gave Thanks, sang, read, and essayed to note, but fell sick, and so was forced to cut short. Chanc. Who was there? A. If there was any there but the Family, is more than I know; for I was never there before, and was never there since. Chanc. But what Number would have been there? A. I think there would have been about Eight or Nine Persons. Upon this I grew weary with standing, and told my Lord Chancellor that I was very sick, and requested the honourable Council, that I might be quickly dispatched; which was yielded to at the first, and I was removed to an outer Room. Having past an Interlocutor upon me, I am called in, and, after Recapitulation of all my alledged Crimes, together with an Harangue of the Council's Clemency and Gentleness towards me, notwithstanding of my great Offence, I am sentenced to confine my self to Cowart of Angus, within Ten Days after my Liberation out of Prison. The Sentence is read, and I presently commanded to subscribe. I answered, My Lord, no Man is bound to subscribe to Impossibleities; for where Cowart of Angus is I know not; but well I know, that this last Summer I rode to Edinburgh, with no less than the Hazard of my Life; and for the present I am neither able to sit on Horse, or walk on Foot. Chanc. Sir, I perceive you love to live in Edinburgh. A. My Lord, your Honour is quite mistaken, 'tis all ere to me where I live, whether in Prison or at Liberty; for at Liberty I am sick, and in Prison I will be but sick. Chanc. Mr. Wilkie, your Eufinels stands at this, you will not engage to forbear Preaching. A. My Lord, offer nothing to me that may lay the least Tash upon my Ministry; for do with me what you please, in the Strength of the Lord, I will never yield: I satisfied the Committee Yesterday in that; but, my Lord, I have somewhat that supports me, that every one knows not. Herein do I exercise my self, always to have a Conscience void of Offence both towards God, and also towards Man. So taking my Leave of the Council, refusing to subscribe my Sentence, I am committed again to Prison, where I am continued for the Space of Forty Days. All the Promises I alert to be of Truth, and that nothing (to the best of my Memory) past betwixt the Committee and me, or the honourable Council and me, but what is here recorded; as Witness my Hand, at Misgat, the Place of my Confinement, October 28. 1668.

JOHN WILKIE.

Only this past betwixt the Council and me. My Lord Chancellor, when he was speaking to me as to the Point of Preaching, alledged that I was (for what he saw) clear to preach in a Kirk. I answered, Why not, my Lord, I am still a Minister, and who has exauctorated me? Chanc. Then I see you are clear to preach upon a Call. A. Yes, my Lord, if the Call have a cleanly Rise. Chanc. Mark that, a cleanly Rise! But what call you a cleanly Call for a Minister? A. My Lord, you know it well enough, why do you ask me? Q. I pray you tell us? A. My Lord, I make the Supposition, If your Honour invited me to preach in one of your Kirks, I being able and qualified for the Work, how durst I in Conscience refuse, under the Pain of that Wo, Wo is unto me if I preach not the Gospel? What then should hinder me to preach in a Kirk? Nay more, my Lord, I was this Summer at Misgat-well, and the Chield that's there is run away from them for Debt, (as I hear) and the Place in a Manner vacant, if these in Power in that Place, had had Courage to have given me a Call, I would have taken my Venture to have preached. To which there was not one Word replied. I testify this also to be of Truth; as Witness my Hand, Day, Year and Place foresaid.

JOHN WILKIE.

When I took my Leave of the Committee, I entred this Protestation, that no Man should follow my Footsteps for I had laid a bad Preparative in answering to Questions, whereas I should have had an Indictment, and Time competent to have answered the same.

Act anent the Supremacy, November 16. 1669. N^o. XXXV.

THE Estates of Parliament having seriously considered, how necessary it is, for the Good and Peace of the Church and State, that his Majesty's Power and Authority, in relation to Matters and Persons Ecclesiastical, be more clearly asserted by an Act of Parliament, have therefore thought fit it be enacted, asserted, and declared; likewise, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, doth hereby enact, assert, and declare, That his Majesty hath the supreme Authority and Supremacy over all Persons, and in all Causes Ecclesiastical within this his Kingdom; and that by virtue thereof, the Ordering and Disposal of the external Government and Policy of the Church, doth properly belong to his Majesty and his Successors, as an inherent Right to the Crown; and that his Majesty and his Successors may settle, enact, and emit such Constitutions, Acts and Orders, concerning the Administration of the external Government of the Church, and the Persons employed in the same, and concerning all Ecclesiastical Meetings, and Matters to be proposed and determined therein, as they in their Royal Wisdom shall think fit; which Acts, Orders, and Constitutions, being recorded in the Books of Council, and duly published, are to be observed and obeyed by all his Majesty's Subjects, any Law, Act, or Custom to the contrary notwithstanding: Likewise, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent foresaid, doth rescind and annul all Laws, Acts and Chartes thereof, and all Customs and Constitutions Civil or Ecclesiastick, which are contrary to, or inconsistent with his Majesty's Supremacy, as it is hereby asserted, and declares the same void and null in all Time coming.

Act anent Ministers, November 30. 1669. N^o. XXXVI.

FORASMUCH as the King's Majesty, considering how just and necessary it was, that the orthodox Clergy should be protected from the Violence of disaffected and disloyal Persons, did therefore, with Advice of his Privy Council, by his Royal Proclamations of the 15th of March and 13th of June, One thousand thousand six hundred and sixty seven, command and charge all Heritors, Liferenters, and others, having any real Interest or Rent within the several Parishes of the Kingdom, to protect, defend, and secure the Persons, Families, and Goods of their Ministers, not only in the Exercise of their Ministerial Function, but in their Dwelling-houses, or being elsewhere within the Parish, from all Injuries, Affronts, and Prejudices, which they might incur in their Persons or Goods, from the Violence and Invasion of any disaffected, disloyal, or other wicked Person: With Certification, if the Actors of such Outrages should not be apprehended and brought to Trial, by the Means and Diligence of the Parishoners, the Parishoners should be decreed to pay to the suffering Minister, for Reparation, Damage, and Interest, such a Sum and Fine as his Majesty's Council should determine, as is more fully express in the said Proclamations. And the Estates of Parliament, having taken to their Consideration the Proceedings of his Majesty's Council herein, and finding, that the Protection of the orthodox Clergy, and the restraining of the Insolency of disaffected, disloyal, and wicked Persons at this Time, did require more nor ordinary Means and Care from his Majesty's Council, have therefore thought fit: Likeas, his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates, doth hereby ratify and approve the Two Proclamations aforesaid, and the Proceedings of his Majesty's Council in Prosecution thereof, and authorizeth them still to prosecute the same, as Occasion shall offer, until his Majesty in his next Parliament give further Orders therein: And it is declared, That this Act is and shall be but Prejudice of any former Laws and Acts of Parliament, made against the Invaders of Ministers, and of the Pains therein contained; and particularly the Twenty seventh Act of the eleventh Parliament of King James VI. and Seventh Act of King Charles I. his Parliament, in Anno 1633. which Acts his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth hereby ratify and approve, and declares the same to stand in full Force, Strength and Effect in Time coming.

Proclamation anent Conventicles, February 3. 1670. N^o. XXXVII.

CHARLES, &c. Forasmuch as We have taken into Consideration the disorderly Carriage of several Heritors, outed Ministers, Tenants, and others of the Commons within this Kingdom, by their keeping of Conventicles, and baptizing of their Children by Persons not publickly authorized and allowed, which not only foments and nourishes Separation and Schism, but tends to Sedition and Disturbance of the publick Peace: We therefore, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do hereby require all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Regality, and their Deputes, Magistrates of Burghs, in their respective Bounds, and Commissioners of the Militia, to inform themselves where such Conventicles have been kept, since the 19th Day of October last, or shall happen to be kept thereafter, and to call before them the Ministers who have preached, or shall preach at them, the Heritors, and substantial Tenants who have been or shall be present, or have had their Children baptized since the said 19th Day of October, or shall procure them to be baptized by any not allowed or authorized to do the same, and according as they shall find any of them guilty, that they take Caution of them for their Appearance before the Council, whenever they shall be called; and in case any of them be called before the said Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies, or Magistrates foresaid, and compear not, or compearing shall refuse to give Caution, that they, with the Advice or Concurrence of the Captain, Lieutenant, or Cornet of any of the Militia Troops of the Shire, seize upon their Persons, and send them to the Lords of Our Council by a Party, which Party shall be paid at 18 Shillings Scots a Day for each Horseman, and Three Shillings Sterling for the Officer who shall command from the Time of their setting forth till their Return, and that they send along with them any Process or Evidence they have received of their Guiltiness, and ordains the said Sheriff, Stewart, Bailie, Magistrate, or Commissioner of Militia from Time to Time, to give an Account of their Diligence to Our Council.

Letter to a Minister, 1670. N^o. XXXVIII.

ITake this Occasion very kindly to salute you, and to tell you that I desire to be glad in the Lord, for the most refreshing comfortable Report, after many sad and lamentable ones, that you with your Brethren there are in good earnest at their Work, (as I know some of you have been of a good while) and that a wide Door and an effectual is opened to you of the Lord, though you have many Adversaries, which I nothing doubt but you have laid your Account with, considering, that the serious and suitable Use of such a Mean hath always had a most formidable Aspect on Satan's Kingdom, as threatening to make it fall from Heaven like Lightning, would not miss to meet with the very utmost of his and his Instruments permitted Opposition, which, when met with, will prove but a Confirmation and Encouragement to you, more strenuously, vigorously, and valiantly to prosecute your Work, your Ancestors Work (sweet Work) so much opposed and maligned by the Devil, and wherein Jesus Christ hath such Complacency and Delight, as that which in ordinary Dispensation he useth to bless for bringing about that which he useth to account as satisfaction for the Travel of his Soul. Who knows, if ye will hold his Stirrup, but he may mount on his white Horse yet once more, with his Crown upon his Head, and his Bow in his Hand, conquering and to conquer, even in Scotland, Immanuel's Land, sometime the pleasant Land, nay, the Glory of all Lands, where his Adversaries have audaciously and malapertly essayed to dismount him, and pull his Crown off his Head, and his Bow out of his Hand. It seems it is coming to a pitched Battle between Michael and his Angels, and the Dragon and his Angels there. O Angels of Michael, fight, stand fast, quit your selves like Men, under the Colours and Conduct of such a Captain-general, and so noble and renowned a Quarrel, wherein and in whom it were better (if possible) to be ruined, than to reign with his Enemies, if all Cesars. Let none of their Threatnings move you, and if it should come to that, let not your Lives be dear to your selves, in finishing your Course with Joy, and the Ministry which you have received of the Lord Jesus Christ, to testify the Gospel of the Grace of God. Arise as mighty Men of Valour, go out to your Work as under Saviours upon Mount Zion, in the Greatness of his Strength, and in the Zeal of God; and from pure and unbiassed Respect to his Glory, and to the Salvation of immortal Souls, humbly, sincerely, and seriously cry, Where is the Lord God of Elijah? where are the more ancient and latter famous and faithful Ministers of Christ in the Church of Scotland? where is that Spirit wherewith these Worthies were acted? who knows but he will shew himself to be among you, and restore somewhat of that Spirit again to you? nay, if this be your Mind, he will, without all Doubt, be among you, and act you with another Spirit than we have (alas) for most part been acted with in these fearful and fainting Times; and if you should be imprisoned, exiled, or put to Death, and so should seem (to prejudicate Men) to be overcome, yet ye shall overcome by the Blood of the Lamb, and by the Word of your Testimony, and by not loving your Lives unto the Death; nay, you shall by being thus overcome and conquered, be more than Conquerors through him that loved you. O study to be in case (through close and constant following of that Work) to say to your Adversaries the Prelates, and their inseparable Supporters (against whom in their Course, (if we have not mistaken God his Word and Way) he resolves to have War for ever) in their persecuting you for preaching the Gospel, and because you will not utterly renounce your Master's Commission, and so incur the Hazard of that sad and dreadful Word pronounced against Non-preaching of the Gospel, when he calls to it; I say, study, in following the Lord fully in this Work, and in owning of it, to say to your Adversaries, You think to withstand the Kingdom of the Lord in the Hand of his Son Jesus Christ, and wished well unto by us his poor Servants; with you are, &c. Have you not cast out the Priests of the Lord, the Sons of Aaron and the Levites, and have made you Priests of such as come to consecrate themselves with, &c. But as for us, he is our God, and we have desired not to forsake him, we are the Priests, the Ministers of the Lord that wait on our Business, and we burn to the Lord every Morning, &c. and we keep the Charge of our God, but ye have forsaken him, if so, then you may say humbly, yet boldly, Behold, God himself is with us for our Captain, and we his Ministers in his Name, by the Trumpet of this Gospel which we preach (and dare not but preach while we have a Commission and Call) cry an Alarm against you: Fight not against God, for ye shall not prosper, nay, if they should prosper yet they shall not prosper. This begun Preaching of the Gospel looks (if suitably followed) to be a Beginning of reviving in our Bondage, and though Bonds and Deaths of Persons should follow it, yet it will be a reviving of his Work. O if poor, wretched, sinful, useless I were in Capacity to share with you in this Work, without its Prejudice and yours, I think I should account it my Glory whatever should follow. I know, my dearest Friend, I might have spared this Labour as to you, on whose Heart this Work is so much, and in whose Heart his precious People are so much, even to live and die with them in following of this Work; yet I say to you what is further in my Thoughts (may I say on my Heart) there hath no doubt been along all these Trials, a Spirit of Fainting and Cowardice among us, whereof we will all think Shame when God shall (if ever he shall) restore that poor Church to the Light and Sunshine of his reconciled Countenance in Jesus Christ; and it seems that he is now opening a Door of some Access to you in a good Measure, to make up that which hath been wanting in some Point of Testimony. O Wonder! that after such wavering and declining of Testimonies, he should ever any more give Access to Testimonies, and not send us off the Stage under the just Reproach, that we have not been valiant for the Truth on Earth. Dear Sir, Alarm all your Brethren to observe, and not to let slip so fair an Occasion, so glorious and golden an Opportunity of a Testimony, lest the holy, much provoked, and jealous God be put to swear, that henceforth there shall be no more Time for a publick and joint Testimony. Again, it would be considered, how much we have of a long Time coveted to have our Trial stated on some clear and uncontroverted Thing: Is there not here a wonderful Condescension of God, in stating it thus, even according to Heart's Wish? What more clear Ground of Suffering for a Minister of the Gospel than this, when the long starved Flocks long for preaching, love preaching, and diligently wait on it: Either utterly quite Preaching, though I gave you a Commission to preach, and tho' my poor Flocks are starved without it, tho' I required (says Christ Jesus) as your great Evidence of your Love to me, to feed my Sheep and Lambs, especially when beaten from their Food, and yet seeking after it, either quite (I say) Preaching, and give Bond that you shall do it no more, or go to Prison, yea, or be a perpetual Prisoner. If this be an unclear Ground of Suffering, or if, being clear, it shall, from Lothness to suffer, and to be shaken out of Ease, be darkened and be mist with new framed and forged Distinctions, I am afraid we shall hardly ever meet with that which shall be accounted a clear Ground of Suffering, and will withal manifest that it is mere Fear and Lothness to suffer that's with us all along, tho' palliated with some special Pretences: But I am hopeful there is not a faithful Minister in Scotland, (if not under the Power of a dreadful Temptation) that will come under such an Obligation, he will no doubt make himself a close Prisoner, and put his Soul in Irons, by declining on these Terms to be a Prisoner. Further, it would be considered, that there are several who, though they have their own good Measure of Peace in their Minds, in suffering on some other Accounts, and have some Hopes (that tho' condemned by many Men) yet God will in Christ Jesus graciously accept of them, even as to that Thing, and have withal considerable Acquiescence in, and Satisfaction with their afflicted Lot, they would (had it so seemed to the Lord) wished that their Sufferings had been upon this Account; and if it shall be declined upon this most honourable Account, it may fall to be stated in an Account less for God's Glory, less for his People's Edification and Establishment, less for the the Adversaries Conviction, and less for their own Peace, than either this, or (it may be) some others would have been. O the Jealousie of God ! Moreover it would be weighed well, whether, beside what the Commission to preach the Gospel. and the People's Need calls, yea, cries for, and the humble Confidence that Ministers (though not the greatest Disputants) may have in the Lord, to defend and justify their Practice in this Matter, having therein more particularly the Promise of how and what to say in that Hour ; I say, it would be well weighed, whether this Piece of good and warrantable Policy may not be used in faithful following the Duty, to put the Adversaries to discover themselves, who will in this Case be either much perplexed what to do, and (it may be) constrained to forbear you, or put, when they have nothing to charge you with, but only preaching the Gospel, in prosecution of your Master's Commission, and out of Compassion to the starved and slain Souls of the People, there being nothing that looks like a Way tumultuary and seditious, and rebellious Motions and Practice, with which odious Imputations they have loaded others, put (I say) to declare themselves to the World, to be on a Design of rooting out all faithful preaching of the Gospel by Noncompliance with this cursed Prelacy, and so put all the Godly in the Nation to a Point, as to what may be looked for in their Days, which may be no small Advantage, especially after so much talking of Indulgence and Liberty ; yet suitable, Christian, and spiritual (not worldly and carnal, which hath much hurt us, especially where Suffering appeared) Prudence and Circumspection would be used, and no needless Irritation would be used, nor Noise made, when a more quiet Way may reach the End better, but the Work would be closely, constantly, (and if it be possible) generally and harmoniously followed, though with all Circumspection, that they may know and be convinced, that it is not a few rash and inconsiderable Persons (as they use to call them) that they have to do with, but the very Body and Generality of the serious, sober, nonconform Ministers and People of the Nation. Finally, it is not unworthy Consideration, what a singular and signal Presence of God did wait first and last upon his dying and suffering Witnesses, and what sweet Hours several of his poor Wanderers have had, even the best and sweetest in their Life, tho' most of them have suffered upon Accounts not so obviously convincing and satisfying to many as this. O stir up one another to this good Work, and to this good Expression of Love to Jesus Christ, and say humbly in much Prayer to God, Behold their Threatnings, and grant unto thy Servants, that with all Boldness we may speak thy Word ; and who knows but he will stretch forth his Hand, that great Things may be done by you, as Instruments in converting and building up of Souls by the Name of his holy Child Jesus ? And if it shall come to Bonds, (honourable and desirable Bonds) it may be, through the mighty Assistance and Presence of God with the first Sufferers, many of the Brethren in the Lord may wax confident through their Bonds to preach the Word more boldly : Now, my dear and faithful Friend, to come to a Close of this Babbling beside my Purpose, let me a poor, out-cast, unfaithful, sinful Wretch, beseech and obtest you for Christ's sake, the Gospel's sake, the poor People's sake, the Posterity's sake, your Peace sake, to take hold of this precious Opportunity, wherein many Defects may be made up.

Mr. John Menzies's Testimony, July 12. 1670. N^o. XXXIX.

THAT which hath sadned the Heart, and been Matter of Lamentation to many, is, That when, through the good Hand of God upon us, through the Goodness of our Laws Civil and Ecclesiastick, and through the Faithfulness and Diligence of the Watchmen of the Lord's House, the Abomination of Popery was almost rooted out of our Land, that that noysom and pernicious Weed hath of late Years gotten a great Footing amongst us again : And while not only the noysom Tares of Popery, (being nothing else but a Bundle of the grossest Heresies, Blasphemies, Idolatry, and antichristian Apostacy) are not only sown and under the Clod, but fair above Ground, overpread many Parts of our Land, as the sad Experience of our Bounds doth testify, but also Profanity of all Sorts abounding amongst all Ranks and Degrees of People ; and while many Godly in the Land are mourning in secret for these Abominations, as being a sad Prognostick of the Lord's departing from us, and a judicial Stroke of his Vengeance, punishing us for some former Apostacies, and Neglect of the Exercise of Religion, that the spiritual Watchmen of the Lord's House, to whom the Care of these Things doth principally belong, and, for any thing known to us, while others are weeping, they are not concerned, lying by secure. It is likewise not unknown to some of you, that albeit, at some of the later Synods, I did regret the Growth of these Ills, and did intreat that some effectual Remedy might be made Use of, preventing the further Increase of the same ; albeit much was promised yet nothing hath been performed. I did likewise often represent and regret to you the Reverend Brethren of the Exercise here, the abounding of these Abominations in most Parishes of this Presbytery, and particularly within the Bounds of my Charge, desiring that such Power as God hath put in our Hands, might be used for stopping of these Ills ; and particularly, the last Day I was at your Meeting, I did desire that by an Act of Presbytery (as once before, tho' afterwards slighted) it might be appointed that every one within the Bounds of their several Charges, should proceed against all professing Popery, to the Close of the Process at least, as against the Profane ; and that they should bring in the particular Lists so soon as any made Detectable, on, but was plainly refused that any such Act should be made thereanent that Day, and rather judged impertinent, it being declared not to be seasonable ; and some of you asserting them to be the Presbytery's useful Friends : In Consideration whereof, as I have not kept with you since, so I conceiving my self bound in Conscience to represent unto you this my Testimony against Popery, in the Roots and Branches thereof, and your not enjoying it as a Duty on every Member, to proceed to Excommunication against the People of these Abominations, and that without any Delay, I shall likewise not conceal from you the reverend Brethren here, that my beholding this your Way, hath occasioned my more serious Thoughts of the Course of Conformity with Prelacy : And albeit that Popery and Profanity may be very accidental to the Course of Conformity with Prelacy ; yet beholding that (which is the Observation of People of all Perswasions) these Two pernicious Weeds thrive so kindly in your Soil, it hath moved me now more nor ever to search what of God can be in that Way. And being also called of God by his late Dispensations, to a serious and particular Search of my Way, while in the Use of Means I have sought the Lord for Light herein, this is the Result of what I have attained to, that I, through Scripture-light, and other Engagements, (whatever others do) cannot any longer adhere to Conformity with Prelacy, without the grievous Wounding of my Conscience, upon which I dare not adventure ; and that by the former Conformity, I have exceedingly offended God, and have been a stumbling Block in the Way of People : For the which, as I desire to be humbled before God, so I crave Pardon of all his People whom I have offended. This I declare, upon the Account of no worldly Advantage, for no Shadow hereof can be alledged ; but, my Witness is in Heaven, I do it only for the Glory of God, the Edification of his People, and the Exoneration of my own Conscience. And now not knowing when, where, and how long I may be allowed to advise you, or any of the Lord's People in his Name, to that which, in the Lord's Strength, I mind to practise, my humble Advice is, that you would consider your Ways, and ponder that you are to make an Account of the Exercise of your Talents, before it be long, that your Peace may be well bottomed when ye are to step into Eternity. And since much of the Growth of these Ills has its Rise from the Negligence of such as should be the faithful Keepers of his Vineyard, I shall yet once more obtest you, in the Bowels of Jesus Christ, as ye love the Glory of God, the Credit of the Gospel, the Salvation of these deluded Wanderers, the Security of your own Peace in a Day of Strait, which the Lord may make you meet with, albeit ye now think he hath made your Mountain stand strong, and as ye would clear your selves of that reigning Scandal of a sensible Compliance with the People of these Abominations ; and that then many of your Brethren are cast out, whom the Lord hath made polished Shafts in his own right Hand, for gaining many Souls unto Christ, that such an Oversight should be indulged to these who have been Destroyers of the Lord's holy Mountain, and have laid his Vineyard waste ; that in this Nick of Time ye would bestir your selves for the reducing of some, convincing of others of their Ways, according to your Place, Power and Calling, separate the Precious from the Vile, that they may no more infect the Weak of the Lord's Flock, or pollute or offend any more upon the Lord's holy Mountain ; otherwise it is much to be feared, the Lord will reckon with you for the Blood of Souls, make you contemptible in the Sight of others, make you to be trampled on as unfavoury Salt, yea, make you become vile in the Eyes of these hardned Ones, whom, albeit they walk with you for the present with the Horns of a Lamb, yet afterward ye may hear them speak with the Mouth of a Dragon, and to prove Pricks in your Eyes, and Thorns in your Sides, in the Day when your greatest Straits and saddest Trials shall come. And finally, Brethren, as for Prelacy, whereupon the Lord hath stamped this Mark of his Displeasure, that under it Truth and Godliness have been under a sensible Decay, so that ye would consider and ponder the same impartially, in the Balance of the Sanctuary ; then, who knows but ye shall discover it to be a Plant not set by the Hand of God, but of Man, and which the Lord, in his own Time, may cause to be plucked out of his own Vineyard again. In all which, as I hope not to be mistaken, as designing any more than is exprest, it being the first Fruits of my Self-conviction ; so it is earnestly desired, that this my sober Testimony may be insert and regitrate in your Books of Presbytery ; and I shall remain

Yours, to serve you in the Lord Jesus Christ,

JOHN MENZIES.

Letter from a Meeting of Ministers, 1670. N^o. XL.

WHat grievous Things do afflict the Church of Christ this Day in these Nations, and among our selves, cannot be unknown, to such at least who have made it their Choice rather to suffer Affliction with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleasures of Sin for a Season ; and who, but Strangers in our Israel, can choose but to be affected with, and lament these Things that have come to pass in these Days? The holy and beautiful House of the Lord, where both we and our Fathers have served him, and all our pleasant Things made waste, the Walls of Jerusalem broken down, and the Gates thereof (as if burned with Fire) Zion plowed like a Field, Jerusalem become Heaps, and the Mountain of the House of the Lord as the high Places of the Forest, the Rod of Wickedness lying upon the Lot of the Righteous, and not a few in Hazard to put forth their Hand to Iniquity, our Pastors removed into Corners, and Strangers in the Habitation of the Lord, Plants sure not of the heavenly Father's Planting, idol Shepherds, feeding themselves and not the Flock, who have eaten up the good Pastures, treading down and defiling the Residue with their Feet, thrusting with Side and Shoulder the tender and faithful of the Flock ; so as now by many the Sacrifices of the Lord are abhorred : Are not the Laws transgressed both divine and human, which formerly were in Vigour in favours of the Church and Spoule of Christ, his Ordinances changed, the Covenant broken and made void, of which sometime it was said, Come, and let us joyn our selves to the Lord in a perpetual Covenant, never to be forgotten ? What Restraints have been put upon all, and are still continued, yea, increased upon the most Part of the godly outed Ministry of the Nation, so as they have not only for a long Time been thrust from their particular Flocks, but now are made obnoxious to the greatest Severities, if they shall but dispense the Word in private Families, or any where else, where the Lord in his Providence, by the Hunger and Necessity of his People, may call them to it ? What Impositions are put upon the Consciences both of Ministers and People, by extraordinary and arbitrary Oaths, Subscriptions, and otherwise, as well in the Matter of Hearing as Preaching ? A true and faithful Ministry, suffering (we are bold to say) for the Testimony of Jesus Christ, inhibit, under most severe Punishment, to be heard so much as praying, and a Company of profane Intruders commanded to be countenanced in all their Administrations, who have sufficiently verified it in themselves, that the great Shepherd of the Flock never sent them, and yet they ran, and have so far by their Way made it more than palpable, that they shall not profit his People at all. O how hath the Lord scattered us in the Day of his Anger ! How many of his dear Servants and People made Wanderers, chafed from Mountain to Hill, not having where to lay their Head, no Peace now to him that goes out nor

nor to him that comes in, but rather great Vexations upon all who have any Sense either of the Sins or Judgments of these Times? And what shall be thought of the Case of the poor starved Multitude, who are as Sheep without their Shepherd, yea, of the whole Posterity, while there are so many pregnant Presumptuous of the Lord's leaving the Nations, removing of our Candlestick, and of the quenching of the Light of our Ishael? Have not all Ranks corrupted their Way? many poor, and foolish, and have not (though in the clearest Sunshine of the Gospel) known the Way of the Lord, nor the Judgment of their God; and if we take us to the great and mighty of the Nations, have not these altogether broken the Yoke, and burst the Bands? What Inroachments have been made upon the Crown and Kingdom of our Lord and Master Jesus Christ, the alone King of, and Lawgiver to his Church, as if he were not so faithful over his own House, as to have appointed and left upon Record in his own Word, the clear Warrant and particular Rules of the spiritual Jurisdiction and Discipline therein, distinct from, and independent upon the Powers and civil Governments of this World? And are not all the Inhabitants of the Lands guilty of Ingratitude and Unthankfulness, and slighting of that inestimable Benefit of the glorious Gospel of the Son of God? for which Sin it was the Imprecation of a faithful Witness and Martyr of Christ in this Nation, that dreadful should our Plagues be. And were there no more, who can sufficiently lament the introducing of that abjured Prelacy once and again among us, the doleful Breed and Product whereof hath ever been, and this Day is the Growth of Popery, abounding of Profanity and Atheism, besides all other Miseries we are under? May not all this be a sufficient Evidence of the just Displeasure of the Lord, gone forth against us in no small measure, and gives just Grounds of Fear of its Continuance, till there be no Remedy? And hence we may say, Who is the wise Man that may understand this, and who is he to whom the Mouth of the Lord hath spoken, that he may declare it for what the Land perisheth? Is it not because we have forsaken his Law, which he hath set before us, and have not obeyed his Voice, nor walked therein, but have walked after the Imagination of our own Hearts? For these Things may not our Hearts be faint, and our Eyes be dim? But, which puts on the Capstone upon all the Sin and Judgment we are under, is it not evident that the Lord hath sent his Plagues upon our Hearts? Being made desolate, do we yet lay it to Heart? Being made desolate, do we yet mourn unto him? Are we as Doves in the Valleys, every one mourning for his Iniquity? Is there a Turning to the Lord with all the Heart, yea, with Fasting in our Mourning, and with Weeping? Are the Priests, the Ministers of the Lord, weeping between the Porch and the Altar, saying, Spare thy People, O Lord? Were it thus, then the Lord should be jealous for this Land, and pity his People, but alas, instead of all this, what Impenitency! few so much as reflecting and saying, What have I done? How little Kindness or tender Melting of Heart, either as to sad Things threatened, or presently lying on, and yet even this little bewailed or lamented? How little kindly Sympathy with these who bear the Burden and Heat of the Day? Some more ready to censure the Afflictions of others, even for the Gospel's sake, nor to partake themselves with them therein. What Remissness (may it not be feared) will be found in secret Duties? And how few consider one another, to provoke to Love and to good Works, not forsaking the assembling of our selves together, as the Manner of too many is, but exhorting one another so much the more, as we see the Day approaching; and when at some times a Watch hath been set up, and Time set apart for serious Wrestling with God, and Vows and Resolutions renewed, and, it may be, some began Reformation and Amendment of many Things; yet how inconstant have we been in all these, much of our Diligence falling and rising with the Sharpness and Bluntness of our Trials? And when in the Furnace we are scummed as Dross, and in the Fire our Scum goeth not from us, what may we think shall God do to us, but even gather, blow upon, and consume us by the pouring out of his Spirit? Where also is that uniform Zeal for the Cause of God, the Purity and Peace of Godliness? Where is that Christian and tender Sympathy for our suffering Brethren the Lord's Witnesses, to which we are solemnly tied, and which hath been so often both the Profession and Practice of this Church from our first Reformation from Popery, to this Day, that what should be done to one, should be reckoned and accounted as done to all, in this common Cause of Religion, all this being no other than the due Expression of that native Fellow-feeling, which ought to be among the Members of Christ's Body; yet are not now every one left to do for themselves? Some crouching under the Burden, others sinking as much as ever under the Cares of a present Life, and of their temporal Being, some it may be secretly blessing themselves in their Freedom from the afflicting Things of the Time, when others are tossed 'twixt Wind and Wave: This cannot be the Blessedness we were wont to speak of, when we could sooner have plucked out our Eyes (if we would believe it) to see all these and a pure Ministry and lively Ordinances, than thus before our Eyes (if we would believe it) to see all these sacrificed to the Lust of Men, and given up and betrayed to prevailing Wickedness and Irreligion, and to a Mystery of Iniquity, which is now so evidently working. Alas, shall not this imminent utter Confusion and Desolation awake the Lord's poor Church and People of these Nations? O that the Lord would pour out his Spirit upon all his Servants and People, even upon so many of all Ranks within the Land, who have altogether fallen from their Steadfastness, that with more open Eyes they might discern both the Danger this poor Church is in, and the Remedies thereof. Now, dearly beloved in our Lord Jesus, some few of his Ministers and Companions with you in the common Tribulation, and in the Patience and Sufferings of Jesus Christ, have found it a small Part of that Duty that we owe unto you, to put you in Mind of these Things we have been hinting at, tho' you know them, and to stir you up by Way of Remembrance, and that not only to provoke you and our selves both to a deep Sense of these Transgressions and Sins, whereby we have provoked the Lord thus sadly to threaten us with a Bill of Divorce, to be no more a Spouse to him, but also to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your Faith, that no Man should be moved by these Afflictions which have either happened to you or us, ye our selves knowing that we are appointed thereunto, being even in this set for the Defence of the Gospel: But the Intent of our Letter to you at this Time, is to stir you up to that great Mean and Duty (all that seems now to be left unto us) of serious Prayer, Supplications and Wrestlings with our displeased Lord, both alone and together, as the Lord shall give Opportunity. And because we are not willing to advise any Change of, or Addition to these Times, so many of the Lord's People have been in Use to set apart for that effect hitherto; therefore, we shall only beseech you in the Bowels of Christ, to receive that Exercise upon all Occasions, but now especially upon the Days formerly observed, and to hold more closely and vigorously thereunto, fervent in Spirit, serving the Lord. Need we to recommend such an Exercise unto you, which Christ himself hath so recommended, that we ought always to pray, and not to faint, Luke 18. 2. so much practised by the Saints, especially in particular Exigencies. Acts 12. 5. Prayer was made of the Church without ceasing; an Exercise ever followed with a blessed Success, when seriously gone about. Psal. 99. 6. James 5. 16, 17, 18. Having a sweet Reward in its Bosom; in the mean time, even the Peace of God, which passeth all Understanding, keeping and guiding both Heart and Mind, through Jesus Christ, Phil. 4. 7. We forbear farther to trouble you, from our Hearts commending you to the Grace of him in whom we have believed. Farewel.

Act anent deponing, 1670. N^o. XLI.

FOrasmuch as it is the Duty of all good Subjects, to give their best Concurrence and Assistance, as they shall be thereunto required by publick Authority, for Discovery and Punishment of all Crimes against the publick Laws, or which may tend to the Breach or Disturbance of the publick Peace of the Kingdom; and that it is an high Contempt of Authority, and a signal Evidence of Disloyalty and Inclination to Rebellion, to refuse or shift the same when required thereunto: Therefore, His Majesty, with Advice and Consent of His Estates in Parliament, doth hereby Statute and Ordain, That all and every Subject of this Kingdom, of what Degree, Sex or Quality soever, who hereafter shall be called by His Majesty's Privy Council, or any others having Authority from his Majesty, to declare and depone upon Oath, their Knowledge of any Crimes against the publick Laws and Peace of the Kingdom; and particularly, of any Conventicles or other unlawful Meetings, and of the several Circumstances of the Persons present, and Things done therein, or of the resetting and intercommuning with Persons who are, or hereafter shall be declared Fugitives or Rebels, are obliged in Conscience, Duty, and by the Allegiance of Subjects, to declare and depone their Knowledge thereof, and of all the Particulars relating thereunto. And if any shall happen to be so perversly wicked and disloyal, to refuse or delay to declare or depone, being thereunto required as said is; His Majesty, with Advice and Consent foresaid, appoints their Punishment to be Fining and close Imprisonment, or Banishment, by sending them to His Majesty's Plantations in the Indies, or elsewhere, as His Majesty's Council shall think fit. Likeas, His Majesty with Advice foresaid, doth require His Privy Council to be careful in Trial of the Crimes above-written, and in the speedy and due Execution of the Pains foresaid, upon all such, without Exception, as shall refuse or delay to declare or depone thereupon, as said is. It is always hereby provided, that no Man's Declaration or Deposition against any other Person, shall infer against himself the Pain of Loss of Life, or Member, or Banishment.

Act anent Field-conventicles, 1670. N^o. XLII.

FOrasmuch as the assembling and convocating of His Majesty's Subjects, without His Majesty's Warrant and Authority, is a most dangerous and unlawful Practice, prohibit and discharged by several Laws and Acts of Parliament, under high and great Pains; and that notwithstanding thereof, divers disaffected and seditious Persons, under the specious, but false Pretences of Religion and religious Exercises, presume to make, and be present at Conventicles and unwarrantable Meetings and Conventions of the Subjects, which are the ordinary Seminaries of Separation and Rebellion, tending to the Prejudice of the publick Worship of GOD in the Churches, to the Scandal of the reformed Religion, to the Reproach of His Majesty's Authority and Government, and to the alienation of the Hearts and Affections of the Subjects, from that Duty and Obedience they ow to His Majesty, and the publick Laws of the Kingdom. For the suppressing and preventing of which for the Time to come, His Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, hath thought fit to Statute and Enact, Likeas they do hereby Statute and Command, That no outed Ministers, who are not licensed by the Council, and no other Persons not authorized or tolerate by the Bishop of the Diocese, presume to preach, expound Scripture, or pray in any Meeting, except in their own Houses, and to these of their own Family; and that none be present at any Meeting, without the Family to which they belong, where any not licensed, authorized nor tolerate as said is, shall preach, expound Scripture, or pray: Declaring hereby, all such who shall do in the contrary, to be guilty of keeping of Conventicles; and that he or they who shall so preach, expound, or pray within any House, shall be seized upon and imprisoned, till they find Caution, under the Pain of Five thousand Merks, not to do the like thereafter, or else enact themselves to remove out of the Kingdom, and never return without His Majesty's Licence; and that every Person who shall be found to have been present at any such Meetings shall be, toties quoties, fined, according to their Qualities, in the respective Sums following, and imprisoned until they pay their Fines, and farther, during the Council's Pleasure, viz. Each Man or Woman, having Land in Heritage, Liferent, or proper Wadset, to be fined in a fourth Part of his or her valued yearly Rent; each Tenant labouring Land, in twenty five Pounds Scots; each Cottar in twelve Pounds Scots, and each serving Man in a fourth Part of his yearly Fee: And where Merchants or Tradesmen do not belong to, or reside within Burghs Royal, That each Merchant or chief Tradesman be fined as a Tenant, and each inferior Tradesman as a Cottar: And if any of the Persons above mentioned shall have their Wives, or any of their Children living in Family with them, present at any such Meeting, they are therefore to be fined in the Half of the respective Fines aforesaid, Consideration being had to their several Qualities and Conditions. And if the Master or Mistress of any Family, where any such Meetings shall be kept, be present within the House for the Time, they are to be fined in the double of what is to be paid by them, for being present at a House-conventicle. And it is hereby declared, that Magistrates of Burghs Royal are liable, for every Conventicle to be kept within their Burghs, to such Fines as His Majesty's Council shall think fit to im-impose ; and that the Master or Mistress of the House where the Conventicle shall happen to be kept, and the Persons present thereat, are to relieve the Magistrates as the Council shall think fit to order the same ; it being notwithstanding free to the Council to fine the Inhabitants of Burghs, for being present at Conventicles within or without Burghs, or where their Wives or Children shall be present at the same.

And farther, His Majesty, understanding that divers disaffected Persons have been so maliciously wicked and disloyal, as to convocate His Majesty's Subjects to open Meetings in the Fields, expressly contrary to many publick Laws made thereanent ; and considering that these Meetings are the Rendevouzes of Rebellion, and tend in a high Measure to the Disturbance of the publick Peace, doth therefore, with Advice and Consent foresaid, Statute and Declare, That whosoever, without Licence or Authority foresaid, shall preach, expound Scripture, or pray at any of those Meetings in the Field, or in any House where there be more Persons than the House contains, so as some of them be without Doors (which is hereby declared to be a Field-conventicle) or who shall convocate any Number of People to these Meetings, shall be punished with Death, and Confiscation of their Goods. And it is hereby offered and assured, that if any of his Majesty's good Subjects shall seize and secure the Persons of any who shall either preach or pray at these Field-meetings, or convocate any Persons thereto, they shall for every such Person so seized and secured, have Five hundred Merks paid unto them for their Reward, out of His Majesty's Treasury, by the Commissioners thereof, who are hereby authorized to pay the same ; and the said Seizers and their Assistants are hereby indemnified for any Slaughter that shall be committed in the apprehending and securing of them. And as to all Heritors and others afore said, who shall be present at any of these Field-conventicles, it is hereby declared, they are to be fined, toties quoties, in the double of the respective Fines appointed for House-conventicles ; but prejudice of any other Punishment due to them by Law as seditious Persons, and Disturbers of the Peace and Quiet of the Kirk and Kingdom. And seeing the due Execution of Laws is the readiest Means to procure Obedience to the same ; Therefore, His Majesty, with Consent and Advice foresaid, doth impower, warrant and command all Sheriffs, Stewarts of Stewartries, Lords of Regalities, and their Deputes, to call before them, and try all such Persons who shall be informed to have kept, or been present at Conventicles within their Jurisdictions, and to inflict upon these who shall be found guilty, the respective Fines expressd in this Act ; they being always countable to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, for the Fines of all Heritors within their Bounds. And His Majesty, for the Encouragement of the said Sheriffs, Stewarts and Lords of Regalities, to be careful and diligent in their Duties herein, doth allow to themselves all the Fines of any Persons within their Jurisdictions, under the Degree of Heritors ; and requires the Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council to take exact Trial of their Care and Diligence herein : And if the Sheriffs, Stewarts and Bailiffs shall be negligent in their Duties, or if the Magistrates within Burghs shall be negligent in their utmost Diligence, to detect and delate to the Council all Conventicles within their Burghs, that the Council inflict such Censures and Punishments upon them as they shall think fit. And the Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council are hereby required to be careful in the Trial of all Field and House-conventicles kept since the first Day of October, One thousand six hundred and sixty nine, and before the Date hereof, and that they punish the same conform to the Laws and Acts of State formerly made thereanent. And lastly, His Majesty being hopeful that His Subjects will give such cheerful Obedience to the Laws, as there shall not be long Use of this Act, hath therefore, with Advice foresaid, declared, That the Endurance thereof shall only be for Three Years, unless his Majesty shall think fit that it continue longer.

Act anent Baptisms, 1670. N^o. XLIII.

FOrasmuch as the disorderly Carriage of some Persons, in withdrawing from the Ordinances of the Sacraments in their own Parish-churches, and procuring their Children to be baptized by Persons not publicly authorized or allowed, is highly scandalous to the Protestant Religion, and tends exceedingly to the Increase of Schism and Profanity : Therefore the King's Majesty, with Advice and Consent of His Estates in Parliament, doth statute and prohibit all His Majesty's Subjects, that none of them, of whatsoever Degree or Quality, presume to offer their Children to be baptized by any but such as are their own Parish-ministers, or else by such Ministers as are authorized by the present established Government of the Church, or licensed by His Majesty's Council, upon a Certificate from the Minister of the Parish, if he be present, or in his Absence, by one of the neighbouring Ministers ; and declares, that the Father of any Child which shall be otherwise baptized, shall be liable to the Pains and Penalties following, viz. Every Heritor, Liferenter, or proper Wadsetter, shall be fined in a Fourth part of his valued yearly Rent ; Every Person above the Degree of a Tenant, having a personal, but no real Estate, in One hundred Pounds Scots ; Every considerable Merchant in One hundred Pounds ; Every inferior Merchant, or considerable Tradesman, and every Tenant labouring Land, in fifty Pounds ; Every meaner Burghers, Tradesman, Inhabitant within Burgh, and every Cottar, in Twenty Pounds Scots ; and every Servant in Half a Year's Fee. And His Majesty, with Advice foresaid, requires the Sheriffs, Stewarts, Lords of Regalities and their Deputes, and Magistrates of Burghs Royal, within their several Bounds and Jurisdictions, to be careful to put this Act in Execution ; and that upon Information from the Bishop of the Diocese, or any other, they call before them, and judge the Persons Contraveners thereof, and uplift the Penalties foresaid. Likeas, His Majesty, for the further Encouragement of the said Sheriffs, and others foresaid, to do their Duty herein, doth allow them to retain for their own Use, the Fines of the several Persons abovementioned, except these of the Heritors, for which they are to be countable to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

Act anent Separation, 1670. N^o. XLIV.

FOrasmuch as it is the Duty of all His Majesty's good Subjects, to acknowledge and comply with His Majesty's Government, as it is by the Laws of the Kingdom established in Church and State, and in order thereunto to give their cheerful Concurrence and Countenance to such Ministers, as by publick Authority are, or shall be admitted in their several Parishes, and to attend all the publick and ordinary Meetings of Divine Worship in the same; and seeing the Laws of the Kingdom have declared a withdrawing, and not keeping off, and joyning in these Meetings, to be seditious, and of dangerous Example and Consequence, His Majesty conceives himself also bound in Conscience and Duty to interpose His Authority, that the publick Exercises of God's Worship be countenanced by all His good Subjects, and that such as upon any pretext do disorderly withdraw, be by the Censures of the Law made sensible of their Miscalriages, and by the Authority of the Law, drawn to a dutiful Obedience to it: And therefore, His Majesty, with Advice and Consent of His Estates in Parliament, Statutes, Ordains, and Commands all His good Subjects of the Reformed Religion within this Kingdom, to attend and frequent the ordinary Meetings appointed for Divine Worship, in their own Parish Churches, declaring hereby, that every such Person who shall Three Lord's Days together, withdraw and absent themselves from their own Parish Churches, without a reasonable Excuse, to be allowed or disallowed by the Judges and Magistrates aftermentioned, shall, toties quoties, be liable to the Pains and Penalties following, viz Every Person having Land in Heritage, Liferent, or proper Wadset, in the Eighth Part of his or her valued yearly Rent; Every Tenant in six Pounds Scots; Every Cottar or Servant in forty Shillings Scots; Every Person above the Degree of a Tenant, and who hath a personal, but no real Estate, in Twelve Pounds Scots; Every considerable Merchant, in Twelve Pounds Scots; Every inferior Merchant, and considerable Tradesman, in Six Pounds Scots; Every other meaner Burghers, Tradesman and Inhabitant within Burgh, in forty Shillings Scots. And His Majesty, with Advice and Consent foresaid, doth commit the Execution of this Act, and the raising the Penalties above mentioned to the Sheriffs, Stewarts, Lords of Regalities and their Deputes, and to Magistrates of Burghs within their several respective Jurisdictions, and doth hereby authorize and require them to be careful to see this Act put in due Execution; and in order thereunto, that they examine upon Oath such Persons in every Parish as they shall think fittest, for Discovery of such as shall withdraw, and thereby incur the Penalties above mentioned. And for their Encouragement herein, His Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth hereby allow to themselves the Fines of all Persons within their respective Jurisdictions, below the Degree of Heritors, they being always countable for the Fines of the Heritors to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury. And in case any Heritor, Liferenter, or proper Wadsetter, shall be so froward and obstinate, as to withdraw from their Parish Churches for the space of one Year, notwithstanding of their being fined as aforesaid; it is ordained, That the Sheriffs and other Judges aforesaid, within their several Jurisdictions, delate them to His Majesty's Privy Council, who are hereby authorized to call the said Persons before them, and to require them to subscribe the Bond following. I oblige my self, that I shall not upon any pretext or colour whatsoever, rise in Arms against the King's Majesty, or any having His Authority or Commission, nor shall assist nor countenance any who shall rise in Arms. And if any Person so called and required, shall refuse or delay to subscribe the Bond, That the Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council secure, or banish them, as they shall think fit. And it is hereby declared, that upon such Refusal or Delay to sign this Bond, the single Escheat and Liferent Escheat of the Refusers or Delayers shall fall and appertain to His Majesty, and is to be intromitted with, and disposed of for his Majesty's Use. Likeas, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, are hereby required to call, from Time to Time, for an Account from the Sheriffs, and others foresaid, of their Diligence in putting this Act in Execution; and if they be found negligent, that they inflict such Censures and Punishments on them, as they shall judge fit. And it is further declared, that this Act is to endure only for the Space of Three Years, unless his Majesty shall think fit it continue longer. And it is further hereby provided, That this Act is to be without prejudice of the Censures of the Church, to be used against such who shall be absent from the publick Meetings for God's Worship, conform to the former Acts and Practices of the Church thereanent.

Bishop Leightoun's Proposal at Paisly. N^o. XLV.

I. That if the dissenting Brethren will come to Presbyteries and Synods, they shall not only not be obliged to renounce their own private Opinion anent Church-government, and swear or subscribe any Thing thereto, but shall have Liberty at their Entry to the said Meeting, to declare and enter it in what Form they please.

II. That all Church-affairs shall be managed, in Presbyteries or Synods, by the free Vote of Presbyters, or the major Part of them.

III. If any Difference fall out in the diocesan Synods, betwixt any of the Members thereof, it shall be lawful to appeal to a provincial Synod, or their Committee.

IV. That Intrants being lawfully presented by the Patron, and duly tried by the Presbytery, there shall be a Day agreed on by the Bishop and Presbytery, for their meeting together for their solemn Ordination and Admission, at which there shall be one appointed to preach, and that it shall be at the Parish-church, where he is to be admitted, except in the Case of Impossibility, or extreme Inconveniency; and if any Difference fall in touching that Affair, it shall be referable to the provincial Synods, or their Committee, as any other Matter.

V. It is not to be doubted, but my Lord Commissioner his Grace will make good what he offered, anent the Establishment of Presbyteries and Synods; and we trust his Grace will procure such Security to these Brethren for declaring their Judgment, that they may do it without any Hazard, in contravening any Law, and that the Bishop shall humbly and earnestly recommend this to his Grace.

VI. That

VI. That no Intrans shall be engaged to any Canonical Oath or Subscription to the Bishop, and that his Opinion anent that Government, shall not prejudice him in this, but that it shall be free for him to declare.

Counter-propofal to the former. N^o. XLVI.

I. THAT Episcopacy being reduced to a fixed Presidency in Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies; all Church-matters be managed, decided, and determined by the Plurality of the Votes of Presbyters convened in the said respective Meetings, and that Bishops act nothing, neither in Ordination or Jurisdiction; but by moderating in the said Meetings without a Negative.

II. That it shall not be in the Bishop's Power to refuse to concur in the Ordination of any Persons lawfully presented by the Patron, and duly tried and approved by the Presbytery; and that the Ordination be publickly done by the Concurrence of Bishop and Presbytery at the Parish-kirk; and in case the Bishop, by some intervening invincible Impediment, cannot keep the Day and Hour agreed upon, that a new Day be appointed, and that as soon as possibly can be thereafter, for the said Ordination; and in case the Bishop shall refuse or delay to concur in the Ordination, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council shall, upon Complaint of the Patron, Parish, or Presbytery, direct Letters of Horning, charging him for that Effect.

III. That as General Assemblies, Synods, and Presbyteries are razed and quite taken away, by Act of Parliament for Restitution of Bishops 1662. and the Act for a National Synod, so they be also revived again by Act of Parliament, the Indiction of the General Assembly being reserved to the King, and the moderating in the Synods to the Bishops, as also in Presbyteries when they are present, and, in their Absence; by other Moderators chosen by the Synod.

IV. That outed Ministers, not yet indulged, shall enter into Charges as freely as they who are indulged.

V. Because many godly Ministers cannot be satisfied in their Consciences, silently to concur with a Bishop or a fixed President in the Exercise of Government, that it shall be leifom to them at their first entering into the said Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies, and as oft thereafter as they shall think fit, to protest.

VI. That Intrants to the Ministry have the same Liberty, and be free of the Oath of Canonical Obedience.

VII. That the Oath of Allegiance be cleared, and the King's Power and Supremacy in Ecclesiastical Matters, to be only potestas civilis.

VIII. And lastly, because the Intervals betwixt General Assemblies may be long, to the effect Bishops may be censurable for their Lives and Doctrine, that there be a Meeting yearly of the whole Bishops, with Three or more Ministers, to be chosen by the free Votes of the several Synods, who shall have Power to depose, suspend, and otherwise censure the Bishops, but have no Power to meddle in any other Ecclesiastical Matter.

Act against unlawful Ordinations, 1672. N^o. XLVIII.

OUr sovereign Lord, considering, That the true and regular Way of Ordination to the holy Calling and Imployment of the Ministry is of great and necessary Importance to the Constitution, Peace and Unity of this Church, and for preserving the Reverence and Interest of the reformed Religion profest in it, and for the preventing of the Growth of scandalous Schism and Confusion, arising from various and different Ordinations, doth therefore, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, statute and ordain, That no Person or Persons whatsoever, presume to appoint or ordain any Person to the Office and Work of the Ministry, except these who have Authority approven by the Laws of the Kingdom for that effect, and that no Person take Ordination from any but such as are thus lawfully authorized to give the same; declaring hereby, all pretended Ordinations of any Persons, since the Year 1661. which have not been, or hereafter shall not be, according to the Appointment of the Law, to be null and invalid; and all Persons who, since the said Year, have received pretended Ordination, or shall receive the same any other Manner of Way than as is settled by Law, to be no Ministers. And his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, statutes and ordains, That both the pretended Ordainers, and these who shall pretend to have received Ordination, be seized upon by the Sheriff or other ordinary Magistrate of the Place, and committed to Prison until they be delated to the Lords of the Privy Council, who are hereby authorized and ordained, after Trial, and finding the said Persons guilty, to sentence them by Confiscation of all their moveable Goods, and banishing them, and to cause them find Caution not to return to his Majesty's Dominions. And in case they shall refuse to find Caution, or, being banished, shall afterwards return to this Kingdom, that they shall suffer perpetual Imprisonment, and not be released, except by a Warrant under his Majesty's own Hand. And further, it is hereby statute and declared, that whosoever shall be married within this Kingdom by the foresaid Persons, or by any other Person not lawfully authorized, they shall amit and lose any Right or Interest they may have by that Marriage, jure mariti, vel jure relicta, and that by and attour the Pains and Penalties provided by the Act of Parliament in Anno 1661. against disorderly and clandestine Marriages; which Act is hereby ratified and renewed.

Act anent Baptisms, 1672. N^o. XLIX.

THe King's Majesty, considering, That divers disaffected Persons in this Kingdom, being unwilling to have their Children baptized in an orderly Way, do either delay to baptize them, or pretend that they are not baptized, thinking thereby to escape the Punishment which, by former Acts of Parliament, is appointed to be inflicted upon such as are guilty of disorderly Baptizing, doth therefore, with Advice and Consent of his Estates in Parliament, statute and declare, That such Parents, who shall hereafter keep their Children unbaptized, for the Space of Thirty Days together, or shall not produce a Testificate under the Hand of the Minister of the Parish, bearing that the Children were baptized within the said Space, shall incur, and be liable to the Pains and Penalties following, viz. Every Heritor, Liferenter, or proper Wadsetter, shall be fined in a fourth Part of his valued yearly Rent; every Person, above the Degree of a Tenant, having a personal but no real Estate, in One hundred Pounds Scots; every considerable Merchant in One hundred Pounds; every inferior Merchant, or considerable Tradesman, and every Tenant labouring Land, in Fifty Pounds; every meaner Burghers, Tradesman, Inhabitant within Burgh, and every Cottar, in Twenty Pounds Scots; and every Servant in Half a Year's Fee. And it is hereby declared, That, where Kirks are vacant, the Parents shall, within the said Space of Thirty Days, be obliged to go to the next adjacent Parish-kirk which is planted, and obtain their Children baptized there, under the foresaid Penalties. And his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, requires the Sheriffs, Stewarts, Lords of Regalities and their Deputes, and Magistrates of Burghs Royal, within their respective Bounds, to put this Act in Execution, by calling before them, and judging the Contraveners, and uplifting the Fines abovementioned; and for their Encouragement, they are hereby allowed to retain the Fines of all the said Persons, for their own Use, except these of Heritors, for which they are to be countable to the Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury.

Act anent the Twenty ninth of May, 1672. N^o. L.

THe Estates of Parliament, considering the great Blessing of almighty God, in restoring his Majesty to the Throne of his Royal Ancestors, and thereby liberating these Kingdoms from the Thralldom and Bondage under which they did so long grone, in Acknowledgement of their Thankfulness to God, and of their Duty and Loyalty to his Majesty, and that the Memory of so great a Mercy may never fall in Oblivion or Neglect, do humbly offer to his Majesty, that the anniversary Solemnity be yearly and perpetually kept by all the People of this Kingdom, upon the 29th of May, being the Day of his Majesty's Birth and Restoration. Therefore his Majesty, with Consent of the Estates of Parliament, statutes and ordains, that the anniversary Solemnity, for his Majesty's happy Birth and Restoration, shall, in all Time coming, be kept up on the 29th Day of May yearly; and that ringing of Bells, throughout the whole Kingdom, and other Evidentes of Joy, be observed the said whole Day, with Bonfires at Night; and that all Ministers within the Kingdom, shall preach yearly upon the said Twenty ninth of May, that they, with the whole People, may give Thanks to God Almighty, for his so signal Goodness to these Kingdoms: Certifying, that whosoever shall fail in observing this present Act, they shall be fined, and otherwise punished by his Majesty's Privy Council, and other Judges ordinary, according to their Condition and Estate. And his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, declares that this present Act shall be the Rule and Warrant for the said Anniversary, in all Time coming.

Act against Conventicles, 1672. N^o. LI.

FOrasmuch as the Act past by his Majesty and Estates of Parliament, upon the 13th of August 1670. against Conventicles, and the other Act past in the same Parliament, upon the 20th Day of the said Month of August 1670. against Separation and withdrawing from the publick Meetings of divine Worship, were appointed to endure only for the Space of Three Years, unless his Majesty should think fit to continue them longer: And his Majesty, considering that these Acts have not hitherto received that Obedience which was due unto them, and that the Execution thereof hath not been so duly prosecuted as by the Tenor of the same is prescribed, and that therefore the Continuance thereof will be necessary for some longer Time, doth, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, statute and ordain, That the Two Acts of Parliament above mentioned, against Conventicles and withdrawing from publick Meetings of divine Worship, are and shall endure and continue Acts of Parliament, and publick Laws of the Kingdom, for the Space of Three Years after the expiring of these Three Years abovementioned, and longer as his Majesty shall be pleased to appoint. Likeas, his Majesty considering, that by the said Act against Conventicles, it is statute, That no outed Minister, not licensed by his Majesty's Council, nor other Person not authorized nor tolerated by the Bishop of the Diocese, presume to preach, expound Scripture, or pray in any Meeting, except in their own Houses, and to these of their own Family; and since there may be some Questions and Doubts concerning the Meaning and Extent of that Word Pray, his Majesty doth, with Advice foresaid, declare, That it is not to be understood, as if thereby Prayer in Families were discharged by the Persons of the Family, and such as shall be present, not exceeding the Number of Four Persons besides these of the Family; it is always declared, that this Act doth not give Allowance to any outed Minister to pray in any Families, except in the Parishes where they be allowed to preach. And further, his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, doth hereby also authorize the Magistrates of the Royal Burghs, to call before them all such of their Burgeses as shall be guilty of keeping Conventicles, and to proceed against them by Fining and otherwise, as is at length expressed in the said Act; and that they make Account and Report of the Fines to the Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, and of their Diligence to his Majesty's Council. And his Majesty considering the slow Progress hath been made, in putting these Acts in Execution for the Time bygone, doth therefore, with Advice foresaid, statute and command, that all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Lords of Regalities and their Deputes, and Magistrates of Burghs within their respective Jurisdictions, shall from henceforth be careful in putting these Acts to due Execution against Keepers of Conventicles, and Withdrawers from publick Worship, conform to the Power and Trust committed to them thereby, and that they return an Account of their Proceeding to his Majesty's Council yearly, on the first Thursday of July, under the Pain of Five hundred Merks, to be paid by each Sheriff, Stewart, Bailiff, and Magistrates of Burgh, for each Year's Failure, in not giving an Account of their Diligence, as said is.

Declaration of his Majesty's Favour, or English Indulgence, March 15. 1672. N^o. LII.

Our Care and Endeavours for the Preservation of the Rights and Interests of the Church, have been sufficiently manifested to the World, by the whole Course of Our Government, since Our happy Restoration, and by the many and frequent Ways of Coercion that We have used for reducing all erring or dissenting Persons, and for composing the unhappy Differences, in Matters of Religion, which We found among Our Subjects upon Our Return: But it being evident, by the sad Experience of Twelve Years, that there is very little Fruit of all these forcible Courses, We think Our self obliged to make Use of that supreme Power in Ecclesiastical Matters, which is not only inherent in Us, but hath been declared and recognized to be so by several Statutes and Acts of Parliament: And therefore, We do now accordingly issue this Our Declaration, as well for the quieting the Minds of Our good Subjects in these Points, for inviting Strangers in this Conjunction, to come and live under Us; and for the better Encouragement of all to a cheerful following of their Trade and Callings, from whence We hope, by the Blessing of God, to have many good and happy Advantages to Our Government; as also, for preventing for the future, the Danger that might otherwise arise from private Meetings and seditious Conventicles.

And in the first place, We declare Our express Resolution, Meaning and Intention to be, That the Church of England be preserved, and remain entire in its Doctrine, Discipline and Government, as now it stands established by Law; and that this be taken to be, as it is, the Basis, Rule, and Standard of the general and publick Worship of God; and that the orthodox conformable Clergy do receive and enjoy the Revenues belonging thereunto; and that no Person, though of a different Opinion and Perswasion, shall be exempt from paying his Tithes, or other Dues whatsoever. And further, We declare, That no Person shall be capable of holding any Benefice, Living, or Ecclesiastical Dignity, or Preferment of any Kind, in this Our Kingdom of England, who is not exactly conformable.

We do, in the next Place, declare Our Will and Pleasure to be, That the Execution of all, and all Manner of penal Laws in Matters Ecclesiastical, against whatsoever Sort of Nonconformists, or Recusants, be immediately suspended, and they are hereby suspended; and all Judges, Judges of Assize and Goal-delivery, Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Officers whatsoever, whether Ecclesiastical or Civil, are to take Notice of it, and pay due Obedience thereunto.

And that there may be no Pretence for any of Our Subjects, to continue their illegal Meetings and Conventicles, We do declare, That We shall, from Time to Time, allow a sufficient Number of Places, as they shall be desired, in all Parts of this Our Kingdom, for the Use of such as do not conform to the Church of England, to meet and assemble in, in order to their publick Worship and Devotion; which Places shall be open and free to all Persons.

But to prevent such Disorders and Inconveniencies as may happen by this Our Indulgence, if not duly regulated, and that they may be the better protected by the Civil Magistrate, Our express Will and Pleasure is, That none of Our Subjects do presume to meet in any Place, until such Place be allowed, and the Teacher of that Congregation be approved by Us.

And lest any should apprehend, that this Restriction should make Our said Allowance and Approbation difficult to be obtained, We do further declare, That this Our Indulgence, as to the Allowance of the publick Places of Worship, and Approbation of the Teachers, shall extend to all Sorts of Nonconformists and Recusants, except the Recusants of the Roman Catholick Religion, to whom We shall in no ways allow publick Places of Worship, but only indulge them their Share in the common Exemption from the Execution of the penal Laws, and the Exercise of their Worship in their private Houses only.

And if, after this Our Clemency and Indulgence, any of Our Subjects shall presume to abuse this Liberty, and shall preach seditiously, or to the Derogation of the Doctrine, Discipline or Government of the established Church, or shall meet in Places not allowed by Us, We do hereby give them Warning, and declare, We will proceed against them with all imaginable Severity; and We will let them see, We can be as severe to punish such Offenders, when so justly provoked, as We are indulgent to truly tender Consciences.

Given at Our Court at Whitehall, this Fourteenth Day of March, in the Four and twentieth Year of Our Reign.

Act I. anent the Indulgence, Holy-rood-house, September 3. 1672. N^o. LIII.

THE Lord Commissioner his Grace, and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering the Disorders which have lately been by the frequent and numerous Conventicles, and being willing to remeedy so great an Evil, in the greatest Manner that could be thought on, and his Majesty's Commissioner being sufficiently instructed herein, they do order and appoint the Ministers afternamed, outed since the Year 1661. to repair to the Parishes following, and to remain therein confined, permitting and allowing them to preach and exercise the other Parts of their Ministerial Function, in the Parishes to which they are or shall be confined by this present Act, and Commission afterspecified, viz.

And yet notwithstanding of the said Confinement, the Lord Commissioner his Grace, and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, give full Power, Warrant, and Commission to the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Duke of Hamilton, the Earls of Argyle, Tweddale, and Dundonald, the Lords President of the Session, and Register, Treasurer-depute, and Justice-clerk, with the Bishop of the Diocese, wherein the said Ministers are confined, or any Four of them, within the Space of Six Months after the Date hereof, to alter and change any of the Persons foresaid, from any of the said Parishes to another of those Parishes, or to allow or confine other Persons in their Place, they always pitching in the first Place upon some outed Ministers, from that Diocese wherein the Parishes to which they are to be confined, do lie; and allowing none to preach who were outed before the 1662. or being outed since the Year 1661. are under Certifications or Sentences of any Court of this Kingdom; with Power to the said Commissioners and their Quorum, to confine to, and allow outed Ministers, as said is, in the Parishes of Tarbolton, Barnwel, Stewenson, Lochgumnoch, Inchinnen, and Mearns; and that so soon as the present Incumbents in these Parishes shall be provided, and transported to other Kirks, recommending to Patrons to give them Presentations at Kirks that shall vaik; and particularly to to Patron of the Kirk of Burghouton, to present thereto Mr. William Nasmyth; to Patron of the Kirk of Maclue, to present thereto Mr. Robert Kincaid; to Patron of Gartne, to present thereto Mr. Stuart: And for the Entertainment and Maintenance of the Ministers foresaid, said, confined and allowed by this Act, and of these formerly indulged by the Council, the said Lords do think fit, that the Half of the Stipend of the respective Parishes wherein they are confined, of the Crop and Year of God 1672. be paid to the Ministers formerly indulged therein, and that the other Half of the said Stipend be equally divided amongst or betwixt those formerly, and now allowed to preach in the said Parishes; the said whole Stipends receiving in the future Division proportionably, according to the Number of Persons formerly, and now allowed to preach therein; and where there was no Person formerly indulged, the Third Part of the Stipend of the Year 1672. is to be paid to these confined and allowed by this present Act, in the respective Parishes foresaid; and in case any of the Ministers foresaid shall not serve as they are allowed by this Act or Commission foresaid, their Proportion of the said Stipends are to be holden as vacant, and to be employed conform to an Act to be made in this Session of Parliament, anent the Disposal of the vacant Stipends; and ordain Letters to be directed at the Instance of the several Ministers foresaid, serving, as said is, against these liable for Payment of their Proportions of the said Stipends. And the Lord Commissioner's Grace, and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering the Extent of the Indulgence given by this Act, and that if the same should be any further enlarged, the regular Ministers might be discouraged, and the orderly and peaceably disposed People of this Kingdom disquieted, do declare, that hereafter they are not to extend the said Indulgence in favours of any other People, or to any other Parishes than to those mentioned in this Act, nor to allow outed Ministers to preach in any Kirks not herein exprest, and wherein there are not already Ministers allowed to preach by this Act.

Act II. about the Indulged, September 2. 1672. N^o. LIV.

WHereas by an Act of the Date of thir Presents, and by former Acts of Council, divers Ministers; outed since the Year 1661. have been and are warranted and licensed to preach at certain Kirks therein specified; and it being necessary for the better keeping of good Order, that the Rules following be observed by these Ministers, indulged by an Act of the Date of thir Presents, and those indulged by former Acts of Council; therefore the Lord Commissioner's Grace, and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, do enjoin the punctual and due Observance thereof to the said Ministers, as they will be answerable.

I. That they presume not to marry or baptize, except such as belong to the Parish to which they are confined, or to the neighbouring Parishes vacant or wanting Ministers for the Time.

II. That all Ministers indulged in one and the same Diocese, celebrate the Communion upon one and the same Lord's Day, and that they admit none to their Communions belonging to other Parishes, without Testificates from the Ministers thereof.

III. That they preach only in these Kirks, and not in the Church-yards, nor in any Place else, under the Pain to be reputed and punished as Keepers of Conventicles.

IV. That they remain within, and depart not forth of the Parish to which they are confined, without Licence from the Bishop of the Diocese only.

V. That in the Exercise of Discipline, all such Cases as were formerly referable to Presbyteries, continue still in the same Manner; and where there is no Presbyterial Meeting, that these Cases be referred to the Presbytery of the next Bounds.

VI. That the ordinary Dues payable to Burfars, Clerks of Presbyteries and Synods, be paid by the said Ministers, as formerly.

And that the said Ministers may have competent Time for transporting of their Families, and disposing upon their Goods, the said Lords suspend their Confinement for the Space of Three Months, to the effect in the mean Time they may go about their Affairs, providing, that during the Time of the foresaid Suspension, they do keep and observe the rest of the Orders and Instructions foresaid, and other Acts made anent outed Ministers.

Act III. Holy-rood-house, September 3. 1672. N^o. LV.

THe Lord Commissioner's Grace, and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering, That by the Act of the Date of thir Presents and former Acts of Council, certain Ministers outed since the Year 1661. are confined in Manner therein contained, and that there are remaining divers of that Number not dispensed on by the said Act, it ought also to be provided, that these may not give Scandal to any, by withdrawing themselves from the publick Worship in the Kirks of these Parishes where they reside, nor en- snare others to do the like by their Practice and Example, do therefore give Order and Warrant to Sheriffs, Bailies of Regalities, Bailies of Bailiaries, and their respective Deputes, and Magistrates within Burghs, to call and convene before them all outed Ministers since the Year 1661. and not dispensed on, as said is, and who are not under a Sentence or Censure of State, residing in the respective Jurisdiction or Bourds, or who shall in any Time thereafter reside therein, to require them to hear the Word preached, and communicate in the Kirk of those Parishes where they dwell or repair to; or dwell in some other Parishes where they will be ordinary Hearers, and communicate, and to declare their Resolution herein, and condescend upon the Parishes where they intend to have their Residence, and hear the Word, and communicate; with Power to the said Sheriffs, and other Magistrates foresaid, to seize upon and imprison their Persons, within the Space of a Month after they should be so required: And in case any of the said Ministers shall reside in the Parish where there are Ministers indulged by the Council, they are hereby warranted and allowed to preach in the Kirks of these Parishes where they reside, upon the Invitation of the Minister therein confined and allowed, and not else.

And whereas some within the Kingdom, without any lawful Authority or Ordination, take upon them the Calling of the Ministry, preach, and do other Acts peculiar to those of that Function, and considering, that such Presumption and Intrusion upon the sacred Office, tends to the disordering and disquieting of the Church and Kingdom; therefore the Lord Commissioner's Grace, and the Lords foresaid of his Majesty's Privy Council, do enjoin the said Sheriffs, and other Magistrates foresaid, within the respective Bounds, to make Search for, and seize upon, and imprison such, upon Trial that they have exercised the Office of a Minister, to acquaint the Council of their Names, and Place of their Imprisonment, that such Course may be taken with them as they shall think fit: And further, the said Sheriffs are ordained and commanded to enquire how the Ministers confined and allowed to preach in their several Jurisdictions, do obey the Rules prescribed to them, and contained in another Act of Council, of the Date of this Presents, and whereof Extracts are to be sent to the several Magistrates foresaid, who are hereby appointed to report to the Council thereanent every Six Months, and betwixt and the First of June next, their Diligence in the Execution of the Order contained in the Act; certifying them, that if they shall be negligent or remiss in the Execution of the Orders given to them herein, or failing to give in the said Account, they shall be proceeded against and censured according to their Demerits.

Grievances as to the Indulgence. N^o. LVI.

I. WE the Ministers of Jesus Christ, who have been debarred from our respective Flocks, over which the Holy Ghost has made us Overseers, and restrained from the free Exercise of our Ministry these many Years bygone, do, with all Thankfulness, acknowledge his most excellent Majesty's Royal Favour, in granting to some of us the publick Exercise of our Ministry, there being nothing under the Sun more dear and desirable to us, nor the free Liberty thereof: Yet considering the offered Indulgence, as contrived in the Complex, and cast in its present Mould in Three Acts of Council, to be clogged with many Inconveniences, contrary to our Principles and Consciences, and with many Inconveniencies as to our Persons and Families, and to the Congregations both from which we are separated, and to which we are assigned; we are exceedingly straitened in our Liberty to accept of the same, and that because the whole general Draught of the Three Acts anent this Affair, appears to us to be nothing else but the actual Exercise of Erasianism, in so far as the Council is pleased not only to dispose on Persons and Places, but to make Application of Persons to Places, for the Exercise of their Ministry, as if it were proper to the Magistrate to judge of the spiritual State and Condition of the People, of the Qualifications and Abilities of Ministers, and of the Suitableness of their Gifts and Parts to labour in the Work of the Gospel, among such and such a People; and not only so, but also to form and prescribe Rules to Ministers, relating to the Exercise of their Office, and thus inance and take out of the Hands of the Ministers of Christ, all that Power, and the Exercise thereof, which Christ has committed to them, except what they have precario from the Civil Powers; so that the embracing and yielding to these Acts, may be interpreted to be an homologating with, and subjecting our selves to Erasianism, contrary to our known Judgments in these Matters.

II. Though we disallow all tumultuary and seditious Meetings, of which Sort the Meetings of the Lord's People, for hearing of his Word, cannot be reputed; and, being convinced of the Lord's Blessing attending his People in them, we are not a little grieved that the Narrative of this present Act seems to involve the Accepter into an interpretative Condemning of the same, which we dare not.

III. Albeit there be a very great Necessity of a free Call from the People, both in regard of Ministers themselves, who may judge it necessary, antecedently for the Exercise of their Ministry, among a People, lest they seem to be Intruders, running unsent; and also in regard of the People, who will acknowledge none for their Ministers, nor willingly subject themselves to their Ministry, who want their Call; yet the Indulgence, as contrived, deprives the People of the Liberty of free Election, in so far as Ministers are designed for them, and, by the Council's Act, peremptorily confined to the Parishes, without so much as the previous Knowledge of the People; and so a Necessity is laid upon the People, either to call the Confined, or to want a Minister.

IV. This Way offers great Violence to that special Relation and Union that is betwixt Pastors and People of their peculiar Oversight; so that Ministers formerly by Violence pulled away from their Flocks, and Flocks violently separated from their Pastors, are still kept in a Way of Divorcement one from another, and yet this Union and Relation, being made up only by Jesus Christ, acting in and by his Church, can never be regularly dissolved by any other Authority and Power, than that which made them up.

V. This Contrivance will prove grievous to the most Part of the Kingdom, 1. In that their own Pastors are, without Necessity, shut up from them in a Corner, at such a Time as this, wherein Profanity, Atheism, Popery and Quakerism are so fast springing up and spreading through the Land, by which their Ministers are put out of a Capacity to inform and guard them against the Evils and Errors of the Times: Next, it will prove burdensom to the People they are assigned to, in that they will have several necessary Duties to perform, in order to the Accommodation and Encouragement of Two, which they will judge needless, one being sufficient for the Charge; and 'tis well enough known, that the overburdening of the People in these Things, will render the Gospel wearisom to many Persons, and so mar their Benefit, and beget in them a Loathing both of the Instruments and Means of their Salvation. 3. It will prove afflictive to many Brethren, in that, by it, they are obtruded upon other Mens Labour, without a Necessity, and occasion their Brethren, who have been a long Time under a suffering Lot, to be deteriorated in their necessary Maintenance for them and their Families, and will put all the indulged Intrants to domestick Straits and Difficulties; which Thing being obvious to any considering the Case, we shall not insist on it, being, through the Grace of God, fixed in our Spirits, in preaching of the Gospel, not to seek our own Things but the Things of Christ.

VI. We do acknowledge, that the Magistrate hath the Power of Confinement, and of all other bodily and external Punishment in actu signato, to execute Wrath upon him that doth Evil, for he beareth not the Sword in in vain; but when he is to apply that Power in actu exercito, to any particular Person or Persons, we humbly conceive that the Law of God, the Law of Nature, and Law of Nations, and the Law of the Land requires an orderly Procedure, and allows the Party the Benefit of Defence. But here, 1. This Sentence contains Punishment against Persons without Citations, without a previous Charge bearing Defences, without Demerit, without Conviction of any Crime and Guilt, the like whereof is not done to the grossest of Ill-doers. 2. This Sentence is drawn out not against one Person or Two, but against all the Presbyterian Ministers in the Kingdom, a very few only excepted; and the Number being so great, makes the Practice to be without a Parallel or Precedent in any reformed Church. 3. The Acts carry not only a Confinement of our Persons, (which is hard enough Measure) but a Confinement of our Ministry, the Imprisonment whereof should be, and is sader to us nor any Bondage or Suffering our Persons can be brought under, because hereby the Propagation of the Gospel is obstructed. 2. And we are, to the Grief of our Hearts, bound up from the Discharge of these Duties we owe to our National Church, by virtue of the Relation we stand in thereto. 3. We are deprived not only of all Benefit of mutual Converse, either in the Exercise of Doctrine and Discipline in Presbyteries, but also in more private Communion with one another, for mutual Edification and strengthening of others Hands in the Work of the Lord. All which Evils are so much the more grievous to us, as they are trysted at such a Time, when Papists and Quakers are so vigorously driving on their Designs, without at all being confined, or any real or effectual Restraint put upon them, to the obstructing of such in their Work, which we may, without Hesitation, call the Works of Darkness. 4. Though we know the Confinement will put no Stain upon us in the Account of many precious People in the Land, yet the Nature and Tendency of the Punishment in it self, is weakning of the necessary Reputation and Authority of Ministers of Christ among the People, in that, by the same Breath, Ministers are permitted and allowed to preach, and yet sentenced as Evil-doers: And as this is the proper and native Tendency of the Deed, so de facto it will be found not a little to embolden the more stubborn, loose, and licentious, to cast at our Ministry, when with Freedom we shall speak against their Sin; all which Evils cannot but prove obstructive to the thriving and Propagation of the Gospel, as said is. 5. As these who are appointed to make Choice of Parishes to live in, so all these who are confined to Parishes to preach, viz. all such as get not a Call from the People, who, we suppose, will prove the greatest Number, will be exposed to far greater Difficulties and Sufferings, than formerly, being forced to leave the Place of their present Settlement, whether among Friends or Acquaintances, or where the Place of their Interest is, or where they had fallen providentially, upon the Way of using some lawful Means for the Maintenance of their Families, and forced to go to Places where they are deprived of all these Advantages.

VII. The Declaration in the Close of the first Act, will prove a grievous and disquieting Stroke to the peaceably disposed People of the Kingdom, who have been no less longing for their Pastors, nor these to whom the Favour is extended, when by it they shall see all Hopes cut off of ever recovering them again.

VIII. We will not fall on a particular Consideration of the Rules of the Second Act, only, besides that there is a framing and making of Rules, formerly Ecclesiastical, proper to Church-judicatories, and imposed on us by the Council, which we cannot approve of except we would renounce our Principles, every one of them carries sad Grievances along with them, both to Ministers and People, and all of them appear to be framed in favours of the conformed Party, and to the Disadvantage both of Ministers and People of Presbyterian Perswasion, and some of them will prove very obstructive even to the thriving of the Gospel, and a ready Mean for driving of tender Christians upon the Precipice of a total Separation of Anabaptism, Quakerism, &c. And the Second Rule, enjoining the Communion to be given by all in one Diocese, in one and the same Day, as it is a bad Preparative, so considering the different State and Condition of Parishes, tis altogether impracticable. All which Things, if it were not to shun Tediousness, we would clearly make out; but that which at least may be palpable to all, is this, That as the whole Draught involves us in a Compliance with, or at least interpretative Subjection to Erastianism, so the fifth and last Rules, but especially the fifth, thrusts us under a direct and formal Subjection and Subordination to Prelacy, contrary to our known and avowed Judgment, and, we suppose, contrary to his Majesty's Design in the Indulgence, which is to permit the Presbyterians the Exercise of their Ministry, with a Reservation of their Principles, and Freedom of their Judgments, otherwise it can be no Indulgence.

And it is not a little grievous to us, that, by the Fourth Rule, the Keys of our Prisons should be put in our Prelates Hands only, by which Means, we being straitned by our Principles for making Application to the Bishop for any such Liberty, our Confinement becomes in effect absolute and perpetual, and so attended with the greatest Inconveniencies that may befall a Man either in his Interests, or dearest Relations, or greatest Concerns in a World.

IX. We shall not mention how this Way is disrelieved by the most Part of serious Professors, who understand their Principles, and adhere to the pure Government of the Church of Christ in Scotland; but we may notice that the peremptory Order and Command, given to Sheriffs and Magistrates to enquire how the Ministers, confined and allowed to preach, do observe the Rules, shows that the Ministers who fail in the due and peremptory Obedience to the foresaid Rules, and other Acts made anent outed and indulged Ministers, will be undoubtedly censured according to their supposed Demerits, in contravening the Canons and former Acts; and we, being straitned in our Conscience to give Obedience to these Canons, judge it will be but a further provoking of the Magistrate, prejudicial to the People, and not a little hurtful to our selves, to step in, and, within a short Time, to be thrust out again for our Contravention.

Having thus, in my Singleness of Heart, and (we trust) without any just Ground of Offence, given this short and sober Representation of some of the many Grievances that straiten us in this Matter, for removing whereof we must humbly supplicate, That the most honourable Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, will be pleased simply to take off all former penal Statutes and Restraints put upon our Persons and Ministry, that we and all other our outed Brethren may have Access to our former Charges, and other Congregations, as the Lord shall grant the Opportunity of a free Call from the People, and that we may have free Liberty to meet with our Fellow-presbyters of our Judgment; for the free Exercise of Discipline, and for trying and licensing qualified Persons, and that our Ministry may not be burdened with After-imposition in the Matters of Christ, and we shall ever pray, &c.

Proclamation against Conventicles, April 2. 1673. N^o. LVII.

 Macers, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as by several Laws and Acts of Parliament, and specially by the 5th Act of the 2d Session of this current Parliament, all unwarrantable Meetings and Conventicles, either in Houses or in the Fields, upon pretence of Religion and religious Exercises, are prohibited and discharged, under certain great Pains and Penalties; which Act hitherto hath not received that Obedience which was due thereunto, in regard the Lords of Our Privy Council, the Sheriffs of Shires, and other Judges to whom the Execution thereof is committed, have not had that Information from the Heritors, in whose Bounds these Conventicles were kept, and others, which was necessary, that the Persons guilty might be proceeded against according to Law: And seeing We are fully resolved to use all possible Means for making the said Act effectual, being of great Concernment to Religion, and the Peace of this Church and Kingdom: And it being the Duty of all Our good Subjects, not only to give Obedience to Our Laws, by their own peaceable and orderly Deportment, but likewise in these Places where they have Power and Interest, to use their Endeavours for preventing and suppressing such unwarrantable and disorderly Practices, as Conventicles are, being so far contrary to Law, and destructive of the publick Peace; and in order thereto, to give timely Notice of any such Meetings kept within their Bounds, when the same comes to their Knowledge. OUR Will is herefore, and We charge you straitly and command, that, incontinent these Our Letters seen, ye pass, and in Our Name and Authority command and charge all Heritors, Liferenters, and proper Wadsetters of Lands in this Kingdom, to be careful that no House or Field-conventicle, upon pretence of, or for religious Exercise or Worship, be kept within the Bounds of the respective Lands belonging to them; and in case any shall be kept in any Part of their Lands, so soon as they shall have Notice thereof, that they immediately give Information of the same, of the Persons present thereat, and other Circumstances thereof, so far as consists in their Knowledge, to one of Our Privy Counsellors, or to the Sheriff of the Shire, Stewart of the Stewartry, Lord or Bailie of the Regality or Royalty, or their Deputes, within whose Jurisdiction the Lands or Houses where the Conventicle was kept, do ly; certifying such Heritors, and others foresaid, who shall know of any Conventicles kept upon any Part of their Lands, or in any Houses therein, and shall not discover the same, and what they know thereof, to the Sheriffs and other Magistrates aforesaid, or their Deputes, within the Space of Three Days after the same comes to their Knowledge, that they shall be fined for each Conventicle not delated by them, in the Fourth Part of the yearly valued Rent of the whole Lands belonging to them in Heritage, Liferent, or proper Wadset, within the Shire where the Conventicle shall be kept: And We do hereby strictly require the Sheriffs of Sheriffdoms, Stewarts of Stewartries, Lords and Bailies of Regalities or Royalities, and their Deputes, upon Delation made of Conventicles by the Heritors, or Information given by any other Persons thereant, to proceed to the Trial thereof, and to put the foresaid Act of Parliament to due and vigorous Execution. And We do hereby authorize and require the Sheriffs and other Magistrates foresaid, and their Deputes, to call before them such Heritors, Liferenters and proper Wadsetters, who shall know of any Conventicles kept in their Lands, and shall not discover the same within the Space foresaid, and (their Knowledge thereof being proven either by their own Oaths, or other legal Probation) to inflict upon them the foresaid Fine, whereof one third Part to be applied for the Use of the said Judges, another third Part to the Person who shall give Information concerning these Heritors, and a third Part thereof to be uplifted for Our Use. And it is hereby declared, that if the said Sheriffs and other Judges foresaid, and their Deputes, shall be remiss and negligent in performance of their Duty in the Premises, they shall be called before Our Privy Council, and severely punished. And it is hereby declared, that as for any Conventicles that shall happen to be kept within Burghs Royal, the Magistrates of the Burghs shall be liable to such Fines for every such Conventicle, as Our Council shall think fit to impose, and that the Master or Mistress of the House where the Conventicle shall be kept, and the Persons present thereat, shall relieve the Magistrates, as Our Council shall order the same, conform to the foresaid 5th Act of the 2d Session of this present Parliament, intituled, Act against Conventicles. A true Narrative concerning the Carriage of some Ministers who appeared before the Council in July last, written in answer to a Friend who desired to be informed about that Affair, and what Truth and Falshood was in that Paper scattered up and down among People concerning the same. N^o. LVIII.

Sir,

I Do very kindly thank you for the News you sent me of these Papers scattered up and down, concerning the Proceedings of the Brethren, who appeared before the Council in July last, and for that Copy of one of them, tho' yet I must confess that the Subject Matter is sad, and will be sad to those who are chiefly reflected upon in that Paper, not so much (I suppose in Charity) upon their own Account, (whom

I have known for many Years with Serenity, to endure through Grace such Assaults) as upon the Account of this poor Church, and Remnant in it, who are broken with Breach upon Breach, till they are become a contemptible insignificant Company to their very Enemies, and put out of a Capacity (if sovereign Grace prevent it not) to improve a Mercy, were it put in their Hands : But I forbear to insist upon this Subject, which is one of the sadest Prognosticks we do groine under in the Times that pass over us ; and (in Compliance with your Desire, who may command me in more than this) I shall offer you a brief Narrative of that Affair, yet with an Eye to the Mistakes in the Paper now sent me, the Author whereof seems (I shall not say upon any malicious Design, and intentionally) to misrepresent the Brethren, and that he hath taken his Information at some Second Hand, which Kind of Relations are seldom just.

It is true, That upon Thursday July 3. a considerable Number of Ministers, who have obtained Liberty from the Magistrate to preach publicly, without Hazard of that legal Restraint under which they lay before, did appear (being cited) before the Council, to answer for their not observing the 29th of May. It is not easy nor necessary to tell what was said to, or by every one of them, they being called in one by one : But this is certain, that all of them (except Two or Three, who were dismissed upon their declaring they had preached on that Day only, because it fell to be their Lecture Day) declaring they had not preached on that Day, and did agree in Substance upon this Ground of their Forbearance, that it d.d not flow from any Disloyalty or Disaffection to Authority, but that they had no Freedom to observe any solemn fixed Anniversary for religious Worship, beside the Lord's Day.

This Harmony, in the Conclusion, and in private Conference about the Way of giving in the Answer, did open a refreshful Door of Hope, of more Harmony, and a better Understanding, till an Incident which lay not in the Way of the most of them, did breed very troublesome Exercise.

For after the Brethren were removed, Four of them were called in together upon particular Summons, for baptizing of Children of other Congregations ; to which, among other legal Defences (whereof I can give no particular Account) they gave this Answer, That these Acts relating to that Matter were never intimate to them ; upon which they were told by my Lord Chancellor, that they should get them, and so they were removed ; and all the Brethren were cited by a Macer at the Council-door, to appear on Tuesday next.

In the Interval they did meet daily almost, to consult what they should do at their next Appearance, in case these Acts (called Rules) should be intimate to them : A Paper is produced by some appointed thereto, (which the Writer of the Information calls a Testimony) but it was only relative to the Instructions or Rules, with a Touch of their Reason, for the not observing the 29th of May, to which afterward was prefixed a pretty large Introduction concerning Christ's Power in and over his own Church, and asserting the Magistrate's just Right about Ecclesiastical Affairs, as amply as any Thing Mr. Hutchinson spake, and denied him no more when it was finished than he denied unto him.

The Information tells this Matter very succinctly, they resolve on a Testimony, draw it up, &c. but had the Informer been present, or (being present) resolved to deal candidly, he would have told his Friends, that when that unqualified Clause, that we would not receive from the Magistrate any Instructions to regulate us in the Exercise of our Ministry, was read in the first Draught of the Paper ; it was upon Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, (I remember not if upon Tuesday on the Forenoon also) debated against by several of the Brethren as an Assertion, which being so generally and indistinctly expressed, would not hold Water, nor be found agreeable with the Word of God, or Concessions even of our own orthodox and anti-erastian Divines, concerning the Magistrate's just Right. The Arguments pro and contra, together with the sliding of the Debate from the general Question (which some suppose was determined in the Concessions in the introductory Part of the Paper, wherein the Magistrate's Power objectively Ecclesiastical is asserted) into a Question concerning the Magistrate's antecedent Judgment, &c. here too tedious to repeat, nor is it needful, seeing in Conclusion, upon the Motion of some other of the Brethren, than those who debated against the unlimited Assertion, the Assertion was with common Consent, so far as could be discerned, thus qualified, that we could not receive from the Magistrate Instructions, formally and intrinsically Ecclesiastical, to regulate us, &c. and was also transposed into a siter Place than it stood in the first Draught. This Paper thus drawn up, the Information says, That they could not agree in the presenting of it ; and so it was answered ; thus he puts a wrong Face upon the Matter. The res vere gesta was this : The Question being put concerning the Paper, Whether it should be made Use of as a Direction when they should be called to speak before the Council, (as was made of another Paper they drew concerning the 29th of May) or if it should be subscribed by all, and given in as their Answer and Sense of these Matters ; the Generality were indeed for the subscribing of it, others not, and so that Resolution was laid aside. The Reasons that prevailed with several for Forbearance of subscribing that Paper, were these in part, 1. That beside their own Unclearness for it, there was one of their Number withdrawn from their Meeting since the Thursday, about some necessary Affairs, who had declared, that upon Reasons ponderous to him, he was not free in his Mind to subscribe any such Paper at that Time, and so they judge it not safe, but prejudicial to the Cause and Unity, to break Bulk, and act in a divided Way, when all were ready to concur in the Matter, though they differed in the Form and Manner ; and how inconvenient it was, that Differences about the Manner should be seen in publick, when they were one upon the Matter. 2^{do}. Had they been free to subscribe Papers at that Time, yet they could not look upon that Paper, as it was hastily and crudely patched up, as befitting so many Ministers of the Gospel, to give in to the States as their mature and formed Thoughts, the Introduction taking up near the Half of the Paper, and the rest concerning the Instructions, being mostly huddled up under the Name of Grievances, and but a very little said to them particularly ; and therefore the Draught seeming so rude and so indigested, they were unwilling to present it, as that that was to be a standing Thing for Friends and Foes at home and abroad, to discant upon for Matter and Manner. 3^{io}. There being such a Clashing among Ministers and People, some being for utter Refusal of any Benefit of the late Liberty, and others being free to make Use of it, having given a Testimony in their Station, and that Paper relating only to these Instructions, and not to the whole Cause, they would not but foresee, that the giving in of that Paper could be looked on as a Testimony ; and therefore being so defective, relating only to these Instructions, and not speaking to other Cases, it would raise greater Debates and higher Differences ; and this they were confirmed in, when a Brother coming in among them told them expressly, That Testimony (as it was called) was defective, and would do more Hurt than Good, except it were fuller, yea, certified us upon good Grounds, that if that Paper had been given in, more Tongues and Pens had been awaked, and set on Work against it, than now are against the Forbearance of it: In which Case, albeit I could have heartily wished a full, free, general, and unanimous Testimony were given, yet I cannot see how their Prudence can be blamed, for forbearing that which would certainly have ministred Fuel to that Fire, which is like (if Mercy prevent it not) to consume this poor Church, and may perhaps burn their Fingers who are so eager to kindle and blow at it.

It is true (as the Information tells) that Thoughts of subscribing the Paper being laid aside, it was resolved, that one should be Mouth for the rest, to speak the Sense of these Impositions, in case they were intimate to them, holding him to the Matter agreed upon in the Paper; and the Man (so far as could be discerned in that Haste, they being immediately to dissolve their Meeting, and go to the Council) was (by the Plurality) agreed upon to be Mr. Hutchison, on whom the Informer, as he seems to bear but an ordinary Kindness for the Generality of these Brethren, as the mocking Close of this Paper shows, so he seems to stretch far enough (to say no worse) to reach a particular Blow unto him, and he fallily asserts, that all the Brethren concluded, that he should be the Man first called on, before any of them should be called to receive their Instructions, and then adds, that in the mean time it is presumed, that he went to the President, and got himself to the last Man in that Roll to be called upon. It is like Mr. Hutchison will thank the Informer for so much Equity, that he insinuates, that he does not think he was bound to speak in that Affair, till himself was called upon, while others did condemn him, that he did not speak at the very first, not considering, that besides this Time of speaking was not determined to him by his Brethren, but left to Prudence, which dictated, his own Name being called upon, whensoever it might be, to be God's Opportunity, Season, and called to speak what he had to say; the Thing also it self, and the usual Practice in the like Cases, says it was the most fit Time to speak to the Cause, when all had been gone through, and then when he had spoken his Light in the Matter, the Brethren (as he willed them to do when they named him) might add, diminish or alter as they thought fit, so that it is wondrous that any quarrel him so highly for the Time of speaking, which in all Reason seemed not unfit, had not that sad Accident fallen out that prevented and marred all.

But as for the Informer's presuming, That Mr. Hutchison went to the President for the end above said, I wish he had given some Shew of Probability for that Presumption, lest he be guilty of taking up and spreading a false Slander, and groundless Reproach against his Neighbour; for though I be no Doter on Mr. Hutchison, yet I must do him the Justice to tell you upon good Assurance, that he is not a little wronged in the rash and presumptuous Alledgance, yea, upon as certain Information as Men can have, I can tell you, that he dare not only refer to all the Members of the honourable Council, but, in humble Sincerity, appeal the highest Tribunal, that he never solicited any for any particular Favour to himself in that Cause, whatever he did for others when their particular Case required it, and who of all the Brethren summoned, present, once dream, let be conclude, that he should be first called on, since all of them knew he was last in the Roll, or at least near the last, and had been called on in that Order in the Thursday, it being so (in Providence) ordered by reason of the Messenger's Return of his Executions, or of the Clerk's writing up the Return of the Executions, or some such providential Occasion, so that there was no Need of Mr. Hutchison's soliciting to be last that Day in the Roll, nor any Ground to expect that he should be among the first; and if it had been otherwise, yet sure I am, he could have had no Occasion to speak to any Statesman at that Time, for that or any other purpose, he being named by the Brethren to that Employment, only at their last Meeting, which was immediately before their Appearance, and going with his Brethren forthwith to the Council, and was never out of their Company till they were called in one by one, till they were all together before the Council.

They thus appearing upon the Thursday, their Sentence, for not preaching the 29th of May, was read unto them; after the reading whereof, Mr. Hutchison, addressing his Speech to my Lord Chancellor, did declare, that his Brethren and he did very cheerfully submit to any outward Prejudice they might sustain in following their Light, yet humbly desiring, that the true State of their Case might be remembred by their Lordships, and that they were brought under that Sentence, not upon the Account of any Disloyalty to Authority, but upon a Scruple of Conscience concerning that particular Way of expressing it; withal, not knowing whether these Instructions were to be presented, but rather to obviate them, he added another Desire, that their Lordships would be pleased not to burden them with Impositions in the Matter of their Ministry, wherein they were the Servants of Christ, and they being Men who demeaned themselves as became loyal Subjects.

They being (as they thought) dismissed, the Chancellor forthwith called them again, as they were turning their Faces to the Door, and told them. That seeing some of their Number had said these Papers were not given them, that the Clerk was now to give every one of them a Copy, which accordingly he went about to do. But the Information which you sent me is so brief in this, and seems only to design a Reflection upon some, if not the most Part of these Ministers, I judge my self obliged to rectify his Mistakes, and prevent your being abused by it, by a more exact Account of it.

I confess, he saith Truth when he declares, that near Half of the Brethren, (if not more) viz. all the Brethren cited out of Clydsdale, Renfrew, and some of Kyle were spoken to, and received their Paper, (if they had not gotten them before) or ever Mr. Alexander Blair his Turn came; and I believe they were a few Number (if any at all) of those behind him, that resolved to speak any Thing till Mr. Hutchison's Turn should come, and he begin, as they had agreed upon, Mr. Alexander Blair consenting thereunto as well as they, if Mr. Alexander Blair his speaking had not drawn some of those who had been spoken to before, and others as they were called to thereafter, to speak somewhat; but all stood still in one Body, waiting till it should come to Mr. Hutchison, who was to be their common Mouth to speak their Mind, and they to homologate, add, or alter as they should think fit.

As for that reverend Brother Mr. Alexander Blair his speaking, (as I hope in Charity) his Motive was Zeal and Forwardness, so I wish heartily it had been forborn till its due Season, for hinc illa lacryma, untimous Spurring spills the Speed; and the rather I wish he had not first filled the Field, because that lax Assertion, of which I told you before, of receiving the Instructions from the Magistrate, &c. (albeit it had been qualified and limited by common Consent) yet he, I know not how, repeated it to the Chancellor in terminis, telling, That he would not receive Instructions from them for regulating him in the Exercise of his Ministry, and added this Reason, that if he did so, he should not be Christ's Ambassador, but theirs; which Reason, if it do not as strongly militate against Ministers receiving of Instructions and Rules (for the Prescriptions in that Paper get both these Names) from Church-judicatories, as well as from the Civil, and strike equally at the diatactick Power of both, I leave it to you to judge. After this and some Speeches betwixt my Lord Chancellor and him, (which I remit as not relating to the Cause, though yet he confessed the Council might confine him, which was one of these Rules, and so overturns his own universal Negative) he was committed to a Macer till the rest should be called upon. The Brethren being surprized with his speaking unexpectedly, (beside the common Agreement) and with the Assertion that dropped from him, and affected with the Apprehensions of the said Issue, began to be much afflicted in their Spirits.

The Author of the Information huddlith up the Matter so, as if there had been nothing spoken before the Council anent these Papers, except by Mr. Alexander Blair, till Mr. Hutchison was called upon last of all, but I must help his Memory a little, by telling you, that upon Mr. Alexander Blair's Commitment to the Macer, one Minister told my Lord Chancellor, That he believed divers Ministers of that Company were, upon the Matter, of Mr. Alexander Blair's Judgment, whereof himself was one; another declared, that one of these Rules did bring Ministers into direct Subjection to Prelacy: Mr. Hutchison also thought his Time was not come to speak, yet slept in with them, to see what he could do to remove Mistakes, whose Speech did not contain any Thing of Acknowledgment of Ministers Liberty to preach, nor yet did meddle only with the Magistrate's Right in the Church-matters, as the Information bears, but he spoke according to the Tenor of the Paper agreed upon to that Purpose. He humbly desired their Lordships not to misunderstand his Brother Mr. Alexander Blair, as for Rules intrinsically Ecclesiastical, (I suppose the present Jumble occasioned the forgetting of the other Term formally) for regulating Ministers in the Exercise of their Ministry, he hoped their Lordships intended not to impose any such upon them, who were the Servants of Christ, in those Matters, but for the Magistrate's Power objectively Ecclesiastical, whereby they might judge of Matters of Religion, in order to their own Act, whether they would approve or not of any such a Way, he knew no reformed Divine that denied it to them, judging that was his Brother's Sense in what he spake, did again desire he might not be mistaken. After Mr. Hutchison had spoken this, some, who narrowly marked it, do positively assert, that Mr. Blair was offering to speak somewhat, but was interrupted by a Macer who took him by the Arm and hindered him: It is judged, he purposed to declare his Assent to Mr. Hutchison's Declaration, as a Commentary of his Words, partly because he had assented to the same, as an Explanation of that general Assertion in the Meeting with his Brethren, and partly because Two of the Brethren who visited him in Prison ere they came out of the Town, do declare, that he did declare unto them, he meant no other Thing than what they had agreed upon in that Paper, albeit he happened to express it otherwise; but I being uncertain whether himself will own any such Thing, I leave it in Suspence whether or what he intended to speak, albeit ever since I am informed by Persons worthy of Credit that spoke with him since, that he continues of the same Mind. I do not remember of any Thing spoken by the rest of the Brethren, who were called after this, (except one that told, he could not receive any Ecclesiastical Canons from their Lordships,) but as for civil Significations of their Pleasures under the Hazard of civil Penalties, he would say nothing to that; which Speech another, when called, did homologate. At last, when it came to Mr. Hutchison, who did not (as the Informer tells) receive any of these Instructions publicly, as having seen them before, but spake a Second Time, resuming what he had spoken formerly, concerning a formal Ecclesiastical Power, which could not be allowed to the Magistrates, and a Power objectively Ecclesiastical, which was allowed to him, intimating that the Brethren would either observe, or not observe their Directions, according as they judged of them in their Consciences, upon their Peril. Unto which my Lord Chancellor answered, (as he had also done before) That the King gave them these Instructions by his Council, and if they did not observe them, the Council would punish them. Mr. Hutchison answered, That for the Matter of civil Punishment, they had never denied the Magistrate's Right in them, and that he took Notice from that Answer, their Lordships acted in a civil Way, only competent to them in this their Dealing with Ministers, which they could not decline, hoping their Lordships designed not to stretch their Power beyond their civil Line. After this they were dismissed, and Mr. Blair (being removed a little with the Macer) was thereafter committed to Prison.

I have now at your Desire given you an Account of that Affair, wherein, I assure you, I have made Conscience not to make Lies my Refuge, nor (which at least hath been the Way of this Informer, whose Information ye sent me) have I taken Stories upon Trust to use or to serve any Design of mine own.

As for what he narrates of what followed upon all this, I can say the less to it, that I was not privy to many of these Things whereof he gives an Account, yet I shall offer to speak my Thoughts concerning what he saith of several Parties.

That the honest People of Edinburgh were alarm'd (I shall add, afflicted) with Mr. Blair's Imprisonment, was unquestionably their Duty, and a Duty wherein these Ministers (whom this Informer would reproach) did heartily joyn with them, and did also lay forth themselves to the utmost for his Deliverance from that Trouble; but I can say from certain Knowledge, that not all nor most of the honest People in Edinburgh did judge of the Brethrens Carriage, as this Informer did characterize them; and for others either there or elsewhere, who (being prepossessed by such Informers as this, or otherwise biased) do so judge of them, I wish they may be more busy at home and within Doors, (which I speak not without Ground as to divers) before they be so much abroad about others, that they may pray and repent more, which will lead them to censure these Men less, who are engaged in that same common Cause with them, and are sincerely for God; and designing nothing in their Way but to promote his Kingdom, and want not his Approbation in their Way and Work, and that they may search and examine Matters narrowly, what they say, and whereof they affirm, before they give out their definitive rigid Sentences against honest Ministers; for they cannot but see that these Ministers are reaping none of the visible Encouragements of the Time to bias them, but are looked down upon as others are, and their Liberty to preach is attended with so many Tossings and Disadvantages, that did they consult their own Ease, and were not refreshed with the simple Liberty to preach the Gospel-publickly, so long as they can do it without Sin, it were their outward Advantage many ways to lay it aside: They cannot also but consider, that though these Ministers do dearly love and respect them, and so cannot but be sorely grieved when Mistakes arise, yet being Men led by a Principle of Conscience in what they do, or may be called to suffer, and being bound to maintain the Credit of their Cause by just and rational Means, to the Conviction of their Adversaries, they cannot in those Matters spread their Sails to every Gust of People's Inclinations, were they otherwise never so dear to them, nor dare they cross their own Light nor wrong their Cause, to gratify their dearest Friends, who, by reason of Prejudices, Misinformations and other Causes, may mistake their Proceedings; and therefore good People should be ware lest Satan have an Hand in all this, and get Advantage of them, to learn them to stumble and cast off their faithful Watchmen by Piece-meal, first some, then more, (as he will not be wanting to create Prejudices enow when once that Humour is aloft) till at last they cast off all of them, and turn wild.

That a Minister indulged, but not yet entred among them, should have spoken as this Informer narrates, I can neither affirm nor deny, not having heard it. This I know indeed, that more than one in that Condition spoke somewhat not very edifying, which yet I will not trouble you with, since I know that a Man in Heat and Pang of Passion and Temptation, may speak that which Love ought to cover, and which themselves in cold Blood will not justify; that the Two Ministers that were concerned in that Affair, (as this Informer saith) motioned that one of them did highly resent their Treachery, and wrote that he would not return to his Charge, but would tear his Licence if he had it; that others of them did wish that he had not accepted of the Indulgence; and all of them did hang their Heads for Shame, till at last they conclude to take the Odium off themselves, and to prevent the People's stumbling, by spreading a Report concerning the Fulsness of their Testimony, equal to that of Mr. Blair's, the Incivility of his delivering it being excepted. These are Stories ad faciendum populum, to make out at his Leisure. I know the Brethren were generally dissatisfied with what had fallen forth, and some did desire a new Address to be made in Writing to the Council, when others thought it too late, and did also gather together what had been spoken by any one before the Council; and sure had this Informer consulted these Notes, his Misrepresentation might have been prevented, nor do I know of any other Reports spread by the Brethren in the Country; but that Men do tell simply rem gestam, the true Story, (as here I have done to you) when put to it, to vindicate themselves against Calumnies, Forgeries, Misconstruction, and Misreports, raised by such as this Informer is, which I think is a Duty to which they are bound by the Ninth Command; and for that Brother, who, he says, wrote to his People, that he would return to them no more, but would tear his Licence if he had it, his Regrets and fixing in a settled Way in the Exercise of his Ministry among them, doth plainly declare, that either this Information is slanderous in this, or that the Brother spake it in his Haste, and finds no Ground in his Conscience to bide at it.

But being wearied with being an Historian, and of wiping off the Dirt cast on Brethrens innocent Proceedings, who, in the Integrity of their Heart, studied to approve themselves to God and Man, so far as human Frailty would permit, I hope ye will allow me, in the Close, to speak a little to the Ground of all this Clamour, which is Mr. Hutchison's Speech, in Name of all the rest, to which little was added by any. In it you may perceive an Assertion of an Ecclesiastick Power, to make Rules for regulating Ministers, which was not yielded to the Magistrate, with a Concession of his Power objectively Ecclesiastical, and a Declaration of their receiving Papers from him under that Notion, did not oblige them to observe these Directions, but they were to do therein upon their Peril. In all this, I can see no such Heterodoxy or Novelty, as to give Occasion to the Informer's reflecting Remark, that Mr. Hutchison gives to the m all that the godly Divines give to the most godly and reforming Magistrates on Earth, or that Ministers receiving these Papers upon these Terms, should warrant honest People to think that they gave up the Right of the Church with their own Hand, to the Civil Magistrate, or that any Ministers should highly resent their Treachery, as he tells the Story. I shall not enquire how agreeably he speaks to the Paper that the Brethren agreed on for Directory, since, it seems, the Informer's Design seems to reflect upon the Generality of them. But whoso will read our anti-erastian Writers, will find that they yield to the Magistrate as a Magistrate, (and consequently to all Magistrates be what they will, good or bad, though upon his Peril, and as he shall answer to God for it, if he determine wrong,) a publick, politick, definitive Judgment concerning Matters of Religion, in reference to his own Act about them, or (for they diversify the Phrase) a Power of judging his own Act about spiritual or religious Things, to be observed or not observed by their Subjects; and to make out this, to name no others, you may take one of unquestionable Authority in this Church, the Author of CXI Propositions, who, in his Thesis or Proposition 9th, hath these expresse Words. As to each Member of the Church respectively, so unto the Magistrate belongeth the Judgment of such Things, both to apprehend and judge of them; for although the Magistrate be not ordained and preferred of GOD, that he should be a Judge of Matters and Causes Spiritual, of which there is a Controversy in the Church, yet he is questionless Judge of his own civil Act about spiritual Things, namely of defending them in his own Dominions, and of approving or tolerating the same; and if in this Business he judge and determine according to the Wisdom of the Flesh, and not according to the Wisdom which is from above, he is to render an Account thereof before the supreme Tribunal. This Confession of so famous an anti-erastian Divine, doth (I conceive) so fully homologate what Mr. Hutchison yielded to the Magistrate, (and that even upon Supposition that he is such a Magistrate as is ready to determine Wrong) that I hope no Man in Reason can alledge his receding from the Principles of this Church in that Matter; and for the Orthodoxy of it, so much is printed to the World on that Subject, as may save me a Labour to insist on it with you, who are so well acquaint with, and studied in that Controversy: But one Thing I wonder at, that the Informer was so bold as to hint the Injustice of not using divers Weights and divers Measures, to the good and bad Magistrate, in defining the Limits of their Power and Office, when our Confession of Faith, Chap. 23. Art. 4. defineth the contrary, agreeably to Scripture and Reason, as you know how dangerous it is, if once Stories of Matters of Fact, scattered by nameless Authors, get place and Credit among People, to the prejudice of honest Men; for so, a very Jesuit may step in, and act his Part, and play his Game, for the Behoof of the See of Rome, as they did of late among the Seſſaries; and the deceiving of honest Ministers (tho' but a few at once) and sowing of Differences is no small Part of that Jesuitical Interest; so I confess it is no less troublesom to me to be engaged in examining of such Stories, wherein one Person may make Work for enow, and tell more Stories at Random, than many Men can search into to discuss them; and therefore I shall here close. Only, I wish Ministers, and People otherwise minded than we, may look about them, lest, under Colour of pursuing our common Cause, there be a Turning aside from former sound and sober Principles, and lest we be (by Strickling and Faction) incapacitated, or rather incapacitate ourselves more and more for any Proof of the Lord's Favour, unless it be to cast us into an hotter Furnace, (were it by suffering Popery to prevail) to make any good Metal in us to run together, and unite in sober

Serious-

Seriouſneſs by melting, while we divide and ſcatter in the ſmalleſt Blink of Sunſhine, through our Peeviſhneſs or ſpiritual Wantonneſs, and alſo leſt ſober Men going on for a Time, in Compliances with inſtable Humours, be neceſſitated to make a ſad Retreat, at leaſt with a Non putavi, when they ſee the lamentable Conſequences and Reſult of Matters. And for the Brethren who ſuffer by this Informer's Narration, and others like minded, I wiſh ſuch Uſage may be a Call to be near their Maſter, following their Work cloſely through Honour or Diſhonour, through evil Report and good Report, and keeping up their due miniſterial Authority, and a due Reſpect to People, as believing that Integrity and Uprightneſs will preſerve them, and that the Way of the Lord will be Strength to them till their Integrity deliver them; and that if God ſhall have Pleaſure in us, Judgment ſhall yet return to Righteouſneſs, and all the People in part ſhall ſeek after it. So be it.

Dear Sir,

Farewel in the LORD.

A ſhort Account of Affairs from Scotland, November 1673. N^o. LIX.

THe preſent Shew of Things with us, may be taken up in its Civil, and next in its Religious or Eccleſiaſtical Parts: In the Civil we may again conſider, 1mo. The Body of the People. 2do. The Courts of Judicature. 3tio. His Maſteſty's Revenues. 4to. The Commerce or Trade. As for the firſt Head, touching the Body of the People, our Nobility here do make the greateſt Name, for they are numerous, above a Hundred, but withal ſo generally broken through Miſgovernment, that the full Payment of their Debts would deliver us at leaſt of the one Half; and of the other, there are not Thirty that can be reckoned ſingly to 500 L. per annum, of free Eſtate, and almoſt all of them alſo under great Burdens; now, that our high Titles and low Fortunes muſt incline them to Vanity and Oppreſſion, is too evident: 'Tis true, their Number gives them a greater Sway in our Parliaments, but as we are all at preſent ſtated, under his Maſteſty's Abſence, in place of being ſerviceable to him, their Decay and Poverty doth render them obnoxious to the Will and Pleaſure of the Favourite; ſo that all Things being weighed, it may be truly affirmed, that their Want of Eſtates, and their real Intereſt, makes them uſeleſs and unprofitable to the King and Country; and that therefore the Penſions paid to them out of our Exchequer, is a mere Profuſion.

As for our Gentry, tho' many of them be under the common Calamity of Debt, and moſt of them but of ſmall Eſtates, yet it is among them, that the moſt may be found capable of his Maſteſty's Service, if they were not debarred therefrom, by ſome late unlucky Reſtraints.

After this Deſcription, I ſhould proceed to our Courts of Judicature, were it not that Lawderdale ſtands in the Way; and therefore I muſt tell you, that this Man, under the pretext of being his Maſteſty's ſole Secretary, and having the Advantage of reſiding at Court, is, and hath been, thir Years bygone, not ſo much his Miniſter as our Maſter; for he, being the King's Informer in our Matters, excluding all others with a ſevere Jealouſie, and having the abſolute Diſpoſal of all Places, Gifts, and other Things that concern us, 'tis evident, that not only Perſons, but our Courts alſo muſt depend entirely on his Pleaſure. It is not my Purpoſe here to give you an Account of his Malverſations; his very Place and Power is in effect ſo extraordinarily exorbitant, that we cannot bear it. I might tell you, that a Deputy-king is as abſurd as a Deputy-father in Nature; but this is not the worſt of our Caſe. If Lawderdale did reſide amongſt us, he even would be more tolerable; but he, being for moſt Part abſent as well as the King, doth exerciſe the Power of his own Creatures, ſo that they moving them according as they pleaſed to ſuggeſt, all Men are ſo expoſed to their clandeſtine and partial Informations, that 'tis very certain, that the meaneſt of his Favourites are courted by the greateſt of our Nobles: And, if I may ſay it with Reverence, the Kindneſs of his Valet de Chambre, is more fought after than his Maſteſty's Grace and Favour. If ye demand Evidence for this Allegation, the Proof and the Remedy are the ſame Thing; and all we crave, if without Lawderdale's Leave we dare crave any thing, is, That his Maſteſty would graciously ſignify, that he will receive our immediate Addreſſes.

The Second Head is that of our Judicatories, and, under it, I do only notice the King's Privy Council and the Seſſion, which are the ſupreme Courts of Juſtice: For the Lords of Council, there are ſome of them very weak Men, who are partially put in by Lawderdale. I ſhall only now add, that, conſidering how that Lawderdale doth all at Court, and leaveth nothing to the Council ſave only an obſequious Execution to be managed by his Brother Haltoun, it matters not how our Council be conſtitute. 'Tis well known to all, that Lawderdale, theſe Years bypaſt, doth, by himſelf, without aſking their Advice, 1ſt. Appoint principal Officers of State, Biſhops, General Commanders, Privy Counſellers, Lords of Seſſion. 2dly. Levy and diſband Forces. 3dly. Call and keep on this Parliament now theſe Four Years, and, in fine, doth all Things at his Will; ſo that the Council, though it hath the Name of his Maſteſty's Council, yet in effect is not ſo much his as Lawderdale's.

In the next Place, I am to ſpeak of the Seſſion, which, having the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, is certainly of the greateſt Import to this Nation. This Court conſiſts of Fifteen ordinary Lords, whereof one is conſtant Preſident, Four extraordinary Lords, and the Lord Chancellor. When it was re-eſta bliſhed in the Year 1661. Things went pretty fair, until of late that the Evil is become quite inſupportable: For, 1ſt. Lawderdale, to the ignorant Men that were before, hath added worſe, ſuch as his Brother Haltoun, and the Provoſt of Edinburgh, a Merchant, one Maitland of Pitrichie, a mean Country Gentleman, and Mr. Robert Preſton, an old Country Collector, Men all of them ſo unſkill'd in Law, that if the very Examination ordained by Act of Parliament, had been ſeriously gone about, it would have debarred them in their Entry. But 2dly. Haltoun, weak as he is, ſeconded by Lawderdale's Power and the Aſſiſtance of the Preſident, who is alſo of Lawderdale's making, and by his Place hath an Influence too great for any Court, hath in a Manner an abſolute Sway; and, by his evil Example, Favour, Bribery, and other indirec't Practices, doth ſadly prevail vail to the unsettling of Right and Property; for Proof and Remedy whereof, if it would please his Majesty to call for some of our Lawiers, I am sure that not only what I affirm would be verified, but at least Six or Seven of these Judges rejected, and the Country greatly eased and gratified. The granting of Protection to Debtors against Law, is also an heavy Grievance against Justice, for tho' the Act of Parliament so severely prohibits them, declaring the Lords of Council and Session, who shall presume to grant any such thing, liable to pay the Debt; yet 'tis ordinary at present for insolvent Debtors, to deal by Money with Lawderdale's Servants, and obtain the King's Protection; so that in a manner they are become current for Five Pounds Sterling Price.

The Third Head is that of his Majesty's Revenue, which taketh in our Court of Exchequer. When King James went to England, he willingly distributed the Scottish Revenue, being then very small, among the Lords and others, whose active and unquiet Spirits he thought fit to oblige; but since that Time, both the Condition of Things is quite altered, and the Revenue greatly increased, and yet his Majesty hath no Benefit by it. The King may have a Revenue in Scotland yearly, one Way and other, betwixt Eighty and a Hundred thousand Pounds per annum: To this may be added the great Sums uplifted by the general Fining, in the Year 1665. the Taxation granted the same Year for Five Years thereafter, and Two Years Assessment, one in 1667. and another in 1672. which Assessment alone did amount to above 144000 L. Sterling, and yet of all the said Sums what Account hath his Majesty got? 'Tis true, that since his Return we have had a standing Troop or Two of Horse, and some Companies of Foot, to which were added for about a Twelve-month, in the Year 1666 and 1667. Two thousand Foot and Five Troops of Horse. I allow also honourable Pensions to his Majesty's principal Officers, and other deserving Persons; but 'tis evident that all these Particulars fall short of so great a Charge; and, in effect, when Tweddale and Sir Robert Murray did manage the Treasuries, they, in a short Time, made up to the King a good Cast; but all that is now dissipated, and the whole Revenue expended, which I am sure doth at least merit an exact Search. For Direction whereof, it may be considered, 1. That there are a great many Pensions granted and continued, either without Merit or above Proportion, and, which is yet worse, merely on Lawderdale's Pleasure. Thus there was Five hundred Pounds Sterling, of yearly Pension, given to the Countess of Dyffart, before she was either Countess or Dutches of Lawderdale; for the rest I shall not name them. I have told already, what is the Condition and Deserving of many of our Lords who have Pensions, and that may satisfy; only, there is amongst them a Complaint, that severals, who have indeed suffered for the King, are least noticed. 2dly. Lawderdale's Allowance as Commissioner, is a most gross Abuse. Ye know that he called this Parliament in order to a Treaty of Union with England; and it is also true, that the Parliament did end, in a little more than Two Hours, all that they did about it; and yet he hath kept it up now above these Four Years, and under this pretext gets vast Sums, Sixteen thousand Pounds Sterling for his Equipage, when first made Commissioner; next, Fifty Pounds Sterling per diem, during the first Two Sessions, and Fifty Pounds Sterling per diem, during the Third, as long as he shall please to continue this fourth Session of Parliament, and Ten or Fifteen Pounds Sterling per diem, during all the Time of its Recesses; which Sums being duly calculated make up the Sum of — and will be found to amount to more yearly than our ancient Kings had in Revenue. 3dly. There are great Gifts granted by no other Rule than for Favour, as a Gift of Casualty, due before the King's Return, to Lawderdale and others, and Gifts of all Wards and Marriages, for the Space of Three Years, to the Earl of Kincardin, which Gift is lately renewed, and continued for more Years; a Gift of ultimus heres of the Earldom of Dundee to the Lord Halton, and many others of the like Nature which cannot be reckoned. But the Sum of all is, that when his Majesty's Revenue and Casualties shall be exactly stated, and all necessary Deburfements discounted, I am confident there will remain a Superplus of Balance, at least Three or Four thousand Pounds Sterling per annum, whereof no good Account can be given. I wish his Majesty be not, in plain Terms, defrauded. Thus you see how his Majesty's Revenue is inverted, neither is it to be expected that the Commissioners of the Treasury and Exchequer should provide a Remedy, all of them being at Lawderdale's Reverence by reason of their Pensions, and severals of them Sharers of the Spoils. It is also a great Abuse, that there is not a Gift or Signature that passes his Majesty's Hand at Whitehall, which is not first transacted for in Scotland, and Money paid for it to Halton before it be sent up; and so being thus satisfied, and got to be recommended, his Majesty's Advantage or Detriment is little more minded.

The Fourth Head, is that of Commerce and Trade, for which the Laws lately made have been so grossly perverted, that they seem rather to have been designed for the Benefit of particular Persons, and the Ruin of the Publick, than for any other End. Thus it being declared, in the Parliament 1663. that the Regulation of Trade belongs to his Majesty's Prerogative, which was done for the better composing of Differences with England, his Majesty is lately moved, by virtue of this Act, to prohibit all foreign Salt, and then to grant a Monopolis of inland Salt to the Earl of Kincardin, contrary to the express Advice of the Lords of the Exchequer, and to the great Hurt of the whole Country. 2dly. By virtue of the same Warrant, there is an Imposition of Eight Penies per Pound, laid on Tobacco, and immediately the Gift granted to Sir John Nicolson, and with him both Halton and others are Partakers. 3dly. There being an Act made for the importing of Brandy and Mum, the Gift of licensing them is lately conferred on the Lord Elphinstoun, Halton's Son in Law; and this Gift was impetrate, so that 'tis openly reported that his Majesty was informed of the Thing, as worth no more than Eighty or a Hundred Pounds yearly, whereas it truly renders above Three thousand Pounds. It is also a great Abuse, that since Halton was made General of our Mint, the Country hath been filled with a light Copper-coin, and likewise the Fineness of our Silver-coin hath been debased below the old Standard, for both which, it is said, that he hath secured himself by his Majesty's Discharge and Indemnity. As also the Leg-dollars being current for Fifty eight Pence, were usually imported by our Merchants to the great Good of the Country, and yet of late they have been cried down to Fifty six Pence, for no sufficient Reason, except that they might be brought in for Bullion to the Mint-house, for Halton's Benefit. To conclude this civil Part, I might subjoyn severall Heads of Lawderdale's Malversation, but it would be tedious to reckon them. I only cannot pass, 1. An Act made in 1663. by his Procurement, wherein, under a Pretext of a loyal Offer of our Service to his Majesty, the Country is obliged to have in Readiness at his Majesty's Command, Twenty thousand Foot, and Two thousand Horse, to serve in any Part of his Majesty's Dominions, which, as it may occasion an heavy Burden to us at home, so it hath been and is still to continue a Ground of Division and Jealousie to the Kingdom of England; neither hath it any real real Import for his Majesty's Interest, seeing that his undoubted ancient Prerogative, together with his own old Law, doth give his Majesty sufficient Assurance; so that this late Act can have no other Construction, than that it was devised by Lawderdale, to insinuate into his Majesty's Favour, and render his Grandeur more formidable in the English Court. 2^{dly}. As to more private Concerns, he makes an Act of the last Session of Parliament, about Coats of Arms, in favours of Sir Charles Erskin Lord Lyon, and his Kinsman, which conduceth to the Country's great Trouble of superfluous Expence. 3^{dly}. He moves the King to buy an useless Rock in the Sea, with a small Fort called the Bass, and to give for it an exorbitant Price of Four thousand Pounds Sterling, to his Friend Sir Andrew Ramsay; and then he takes the Keeping and Profit of it, by a new Gift, to himself. Nay further, and upon this Notion, and the bare Pretence that Lawderdale had obtained from the King a certain Gift of the Excise of the Town of Edinburgh, Sir Andrew being then Provost, very gratefully moveth the Town to give to Lawderdale Five thousand Pounds Sterling. 4^{thly}. Within these Two Months, he moved his Majesty to write a Letter to the Town-council of Edinburgh, commanding them to put out the Clerk, and choose another in his Room; and so depriving him of his Office and Rights, without ever being heard, and for no known Reason, save that his Friend Sir Andrew was desirous to have the Clerk removed. And further, the Letter containeth an overawing Insinuation to the Council, for keeping in the said Sir Andrew to be Provost, by a new Election, notwithstanding of the universal Dissatisfaction of the City against him. These are a few Instances of Lawderdale's Abuses and arbitrary Courses, and 'tis certain that a particular Enquiry would not only discover many more, but also satisfy all Men, that there was never a Person of such Quality in Trust, more vexing and disobliging to the Country, and more generally disliked.

Sir, You have here a short Account of our Affairs, which as I do offer only for Direction to a more accurate and full Enquiry, so I am far from expecting, as Things are at present circumstantiated, a thorough and adequate Reformation. All my Wishes are, that this may prove at least an useful Incitement to move Men to adjust Things in some more reasonable and equal Way, for the necessary Relief of a distressed Country; for producing whereof, I shall not presume to offer any other Advice, than that his Majesty would be pleased to call some of the Lords and others of his Council, who are known to be most sufficient, and free of any Lawderdelian Dependence, to give their Opinion both of the Evils, and of their Remedies.

Doctor Burnet's Letter to Lawderdale, December 15. 1673. N : LX.

May it please your Grace,

THE unusual Coldness that appeared in your Looks and Words, when I had the Honour to wait on your Grace last, made me not presume on a nearer Address to ask what I now adventure, and in this Way which I hope shall offend least, which is to know, what is my Crime that hath rendred me so guilty in your Esteem. To serve your Grace, as it was left upon me by my old Father, so was it ever natural to me, that, as in the poor Sphere wherein I have moved these Ten Years since I had the Honour first to know your Grace, it hath been my constant Care, so I made Account of your Grace's Favour as my Birthright; and yet I never pretended to any other Advantage by it, being rewarded by the Pleasure I find in it; but when I find I am of a sudden, and I hope without any great Guilt, fallen not only from any Room I perhaps flattered my self I had in your Grace, but am represented in the blackest Characters, that is a new, though a malicious Proof of the Instability of human Things; yet though I am told I may give up your Goodness for me as irrecoverably lost, I shall with the sinking Man catch hold of every Thing may buoy me up, and do therefore beg once to be heard, before I be for ever condemned. When I went last to London, it was purely the Desire of the Duke and Dutches of Hamilton, and my own Readiness to serve them in publishing the Memoirs that made me go; nor did I see or speak with any but them about my Journey, which I carried so secretly from all others, that only my being gone told I had set out. While I was at London I corresponded with none but Duke Hamilton, and if his and his Dutches their vindicating me to your Grace, from being an evil Instrument; or corresponding to your Grace's Prejudice, do not clear me, I am sure I need not expect it, though I can give many Evidences, how that ever since I had the Honour to know them, I used all my poor Endeavours to preserve in them all just and deep Impressions of your Friendship for them, and to allow no Resentments. My Stay at London was occasioned by your Grace, who found not a Conveniency for some Weeks of proposing the Business I was sent for to his Majesty, and though that Delay was heavy for me, yet I refused to accept of the Offers of some great Persons who were willing to make my Address, and was resolved rather to lose the Journey than to have that Matter proposed by any but your Grace. All the while I was at London I studied on all Occasions to do your Grace Right, which made me pass under the Character of your Agent, which my Lady Myner told me a few Days before I left Whitehall, and my Lord Haltoun the last Night I was there; this seems an Evidence that I did, and spake nothing to your Grace's Disadvantage. And having very clear Expressions of your Favour when you left Whitehall, I did not doubt to find them the same at the Abbey, nor did I perceive any Change till being above Stairs; I was kept waiting above Three Quarters of an Hour in my Boots, and no Access given, though twice desired; I was also told from many Hands, that both your Grace and Lady Dutches had given very diminishing Characters of me, at which I had no Reason to complain, for I desired to lessen my self in my Opinion more as any other can, and so must acknowledge the Justice of undervaluing me; but finding my self out of the Posture I once stood in with you, I resolved to get me quickly home, and saw very few Persons. I well remember with whom I spoke. I am told my Crime is, That I said to some, your Grace durst not return to London. I know well from whom this comes, and with whom these Discourses were, who, if they had as faithfully related all, as they told the worst Part of the Discourse, I needed not apprehend any Censure. Some asked me, How ye stood in England. I told them, As well with King and Duke as ever, but that many in the Court and House of Commons were angry with you, who designed to drive you from his Majesty, but added, My Fears that the Bustling at this Time in England was an Evidence they were neither neither fixed in their Duty to King nor Duke, so that my representing you odious to them, did your Grace as great a Right as I could do. My Error in this could not amount to more than Indiscretion, and so deserves a milder Censure than Traitor and Rogue: But if your Grace and Lady Dutcheffs would remember, I did to both give Hints of my Fears of Rubs ye might meet in Scotland, and told you of the Particulars, but saw my self laughed at as a Fool for my Advertisements and Advices; but sure if you both reflected on all that ever I presumed to say to you, you will not find that ever I abused you in a Tittle, either by giving false Characters of Persons or Things, or by offering to put any Trick upon you: It may be, my too much Freedom hath, if not offended, yet been less acceptable; but when you set all together, you will, it may be, see Reason to mitigate the Severity I have met with from you both against me. As I can attest God, that I neither knew of any Design to oppose you in any Thing before I came to Scotland, so I had no Manner of Accession to it directly nor indirectly, and shall never fail, be it accepted, or not, to render in Spite of Calumny and Jealousie, all the dutiful Service in the Power of

Directed on the Back, For his Grace the Duke of Lawderdale, his Majesty's High Commissioner for Scotland.

Your Grace's most humble, most faithful, and most obedient Servant,

GILBERT BURNET.

Proclamation, June 18. 1674. obliging Heritors and Masters for their Tenants and Servants. N^o. LXI.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; To Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Macers, Pursevents, Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as the keeping and being present at Conventicles in Houses, or in the Fields, are most unwarrantable and disorderly Practices, expressly prohibited and discharged by several Laws and Acts of Parliament, and specially, by the Fifth Act of the Second Session of Our Second Parliament, under certain great Pains and Penalties: Notwithstanding whereof, many Persons continue so disloyal and disobedient, as to frequent these unlawful and seditious Conventicles and Meetings, to the great Scandal of the reformed Religion professed within this Kingdom, and great Reproach and Contempt of Our Authority and Laws, and Disturbance of the publick Peace; and seeing the due Observance of the foresaid Act of Parliament is of great Import and Consequence, (Field-conventicles being declared by the Law to be the Rendevouzes of Rebellion, and House-conventicles the Seminaries of Separation; and both of them tending to the Subversion of all Peace and Order in the Church) and that it might prove an effectual Means for suppressing these Disorders, if Heritors, Masters of Families, and Magistrates of Burghs Royal, would employ that Interest, Power, and Authority, which they have over their Tenants, Servants, and Inhabitants, in procuring their Obedience to the Law. We therefore, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do hereby require and command all Masters of Families, that they cause their domestick Servants, Chamberlains, Griefes, and others entertained by them, give Obedience to the foresaid Fifth Act of the Second Session of Our Second Parliament, in abstaining from all Conventicles, either in Houses or in Fields, and that they retain none in their Service, but such for whom they will be answerable; and in case of their Disobedience, that they remove them out of their Service. As also, We do hereby require and command all Heritors, Landlords, and Liferenters in the Country, to require their Rentallers and Tenants, as well these who have Tacks yet standing unexpired, as moveable Tenants, to subscribe the Bond hereto subjoynd: And (in case there be Necessity) the said Heritors and Liferenters, are hereby warranted to raise Letters under the Signet of Our Privy Council, to charge their Rentallers and Tenants, whose Rentals and Tacks are not expired, to give the said Bond upon a Charge of Six Days, and in case of Disobedience, to denounce them to Our Horn, and registrate the same; for which End, Warrant is granted to direct Letters in their Name against all and sundry their Tenants and Rentallers. And We, with Advice foresaid, do declare, that We will be careful, that the Escheats falling to Us by the said Hornings, shall be gifted and bestowed upon the Landlords and Setters of these Tacks and Rentals, in so far as may be extended thereto; recommending hereby to the Lords Commissioners of Our Treasury, or to Our Treasurer-principal, or Treasurer-depute, (for the Time being) and others of Our Exchequer, to grant the same accordingly; and in case the Tenants be removeable, and refuse to give Obedience, that they warn and pursue them to remove, and obtain Decrees of Ejection against them; and that no Heritor, Landlord, or Liferenter, set their Lands hereafter to any Person, by Word or Writ, but to such as they will be answerable for, as said is; and that they take Surety from them by Provisions to be insert in their Tacks, or otherwise by Bonds apart, (in case there be no Writ) that the said Tacksmen, Rentallers, and others, their Hynds, Cottars, and Servants, who shall live under them upon the said Lands, shall give Obedience in manner foresaid, otherwise, that their Tacks, Rentals, and their whole Interest, Right and Possession shall be void, and expire ipso facto, as if they had never been granted; and that without any Declarator or further Process, and then as now, and now as then, that they shall renounce all Right that they shall have thereto, and shall remove themselves without any Warning; or in case of Failie, the Landlords and others are to charge and denounce them in manner foresaid. And in regard, by the foresaid Act of Parliament against Conventicles, Magistrates of Burghs Royal are declared liable, for every Conventicle to be kept within their Burghs, to such Fines as Our Council shall think fit to impose; therefore the said Magistrates of Burghs Royal, are hereby required to take special Care and Notice, and to be answerable, that their Burgeses and Inhabitants be obedient to the foresaid Act of Parliament; and that they cause charge such of them as they shall think fit, and are suspected, to give Bond, as said is, for the Magistrates own Relief, in case they contravene, and if they fail, to denounce them in manner foresaid. And it it is hereby declared, that all Masters of Families, Landlords, Heritors, and Magistrates of Burghs, who shall not give punctual Obedience, in manner above written, that they shall be liable in the same Pains and Penalties due to the Contraveners, but prejudice always of proceeding against the Contraveners themselves, and inflicting upon them the Pains contained in the said Act of Parliament: And it is likewise hereby declared, that if any Cottars or Servants, for whom Tenants or Rentallers shall be bound, shall be found guilty of transgressing the foresaid Act of Parliament against Conventicles, and that thereupon the Tenants shall be found liable upon the Bonds to be given by them, that they shall have their Relief from the Contraveners for whom they are bound. And to the effect these Presents may be known by all Persons concerned; Our Will is, and We charge you traitly and command, that, incontinent these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and thereat, with all due Solemnities, in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication hereof: And for the better Execution of these Presents, require the several Sheriffs and their Deputes, with all possible Speed, to cause read and publish the same upon a Sabbath-day, at the several Parish-kirks, which ly locally within the Bounds of the Sheriffdom, albeit any of these Parishes do belong to other Jurisdictions, intimating to the Heritors, that they cause their Tenants subscribe the said Bonds, and report them to the respective Sheriffs or their Deputes, who are hereby ordered to return to Our Council an Account of their Diligence, with the Bonds reported to them by the Heritors, within the Times following, viz. The Sheriffs of the Sheriffdoms of Edinburgh, Haddingtoun, Berwick, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, Lanerk, Linlithgow, Stirling, Fife, Perth, and Forfar, betwixt and the last Thursday of July next, and the Sheriffs of the rest of the Sheriffdoms of this Kingdom, betwixt and the first Thursday of September next: And ordain these Presents to be printed, that none pretend Ignorance, according to Justice, as ye will answer to us thereupon. The which to do, We commit to you conjunctly and severally Our full Power, by these Our Letters, delivering them by you duly execute, and indorsed again to the Bearer.

FOrasmuch as the keeping of Field-conventicles, and the intruding upon and invading of Pulpits, are most unlawful and disorderly Practices, tending to the Disturbance of the Peace, and to the Affront of his Majesty's Authority; and notwithstanding the Laws and Acts of Parliament prohibiting the same under high Pains therein mentioned, the Ring-leaders, Promoters, and other Persons guilty of the said Disorders, are emboldned to commit the same, presuming that they will not be discovered and brought to Trial and Punishment: Therefore, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, for the Encouragement of all his Majesty's good Subjects to discover and apprehend all such Persons as are after mentioned, do hereby offer, declare and give Assurance, that if any Person, being of his Majesty's standing Forces, or of the Militia, or any other his Majesty's Subjects, shall seize upon, and apprehend any Person or Persons, who, since his Majesty's late gracious Proclamation, of the 24th of March last, hath convoked any Number of persons to Field-conventicles, or at any Time hereafter shall convocate any persons thereto, or shall apprehend any Heritors or others being at Field conventicles, while the said persons are present at, or coming from the same, so that the said persons apprehended shall be brought to a Trial, and shall be found guilty, and convict of the said Offences, that the Apprehenders of such persons shall have the Gift of the Fines of the said persons given to them: And in case any person or persons be cited for the said Crimes and Offences, and, after Certification is granted against them for their Contumacy and not appearing, shall be apprehended, the Apprehenders of such persons shall have the Gift of their Escheats, and Benefit arising from the said Certifications. And whoever of the standing Forces, Militia, or others his Majesty's good Subjects, shall apprehend any Minister or other Person preaching at any Field-conventicle, or who hath preached since the said Proclamation, or shall at any Time hereafter preach at Field-conventicles, or any of them; and whatsoever person or persons shall apprehend and seize upon any outed Minister, who are not licensed by the Council, or any other person not authorized nor tolerate by the Bishop of the Diocese, who, since the Time foresaid, have invaded or shall invade any pulpit or pulpits, the person or persons apprehending any of the Ministers, or other persons foresaid, guilty of preaching at Field-conventicles, or invading of pulpits, shall, for their Reward, have paid to them the Sum of One thousand Merks; and for the persons afternamed, viz. Mr. John Welsh, Mr. Gabriel Semple, and Mr. Samuel Arnot, the Apprehenders shall have the Sum of Two thousand Merks paid to them. And his Majesty's Subjects are not only warranted to seize upon, and apprehend the said disorderly persons in manner foresaid, but it is further declared by the said Lords of Council, that upon Consideration of the Condition of the persons who shall be apprehended, according as they have been more stickling and active in the said Disorders, and the pains and Diligence of the Apprehenders and other Circumstances, they will also consider what further Reward shall be given to them for their Service. And ordain these Presents to be printed, that none pretend Ignorance.

King's Letter to the Council, against Conventicles, June 23. 1674. N^o. LXIII.

CHARLES R.

Right trusty and well-beloved Cousins and Counsellors, right trusty and well-beloved Counsellors, and trusty and well-beloved Counsellors, We greet you well: We did, by Our Proclamation in March last, grant a most full, free, and general Pardon of all penal Statutes, which We did extend so far towards the Breach of penal Laws, relating to Church-matters, that We at least expected more Moderation, and Temper, and patient Waiting for Our Grant of further Ease towards peaceable Dissenters; but, instead thereof, We find that a desperate and implacable Party, have taken the Boldness to rise to greater Height of Insolence, by invading of Churches, keeping of seditious and numerous Field-conventicles, tumultuous and irregular Petitions, and that in open Contempt of Our Authority, as if it were to brave Us, and those that are in places of Trust under Us. Of all these Disorders We had a full and particular Account, though it was not by any solemn Address, (which was wisely waved by the major Part of Our Council in May last:) And, upon the true Account We had of them, We wrote Our positive Commands, that you should use Our utmost Authority for vigorous suppressing and punishing the Ringleaders of these insolent seditious Practices. This Letter of Ours ye received, upon the opening of Our last Commission for Our Privy Council; and We are well satisfied with the Committee you named, with the Oath of Secrecy they took, and with the Orders were given, as also with the Diligence of some in the Execution of them. We have heard of that seditious Petition of many Women, and of their tumultuary Carriage at the delivering of it: And We have likewise since been informed, that some of Our Guards of Horse were resisted with Arms in Fife, and that some of these armed Rebels had been marked, by which Means, We hope, you will find out who they were; and although We doubt not of your Diligence in discovering and punishing these unparalleled Insolencies, yet We have thought fit to renew again unto you Our positive Commands, That you do vigorously, in the first Place, prosecute the Trial and punishing of these Contemners of Our Authority: We doubt not but they are fomented and encouraged by some who do not appear; and We know that Endeavours are used to alarm Our good Subjects of this Kingdom, as if a present Rebellion were to be expected in Scotland, which We do not at all apprehend, because We are sure you have Authority and Power enough to suppress any such Attempt: Yet, for the better Encouragement of Our good Subjects, We have given Orders for divers Companies and Troops of Our Protestant Subjects in Ireland, to be drawn down to the Sea-side in Ulster, ready to receive Our further Commands: We have also ordered Troops to march to Berwick, to be ready if there shall be Occasion; nor shall We leave any other Means unattempted, for Maintenance of Our Authority, and the Peace of that Our ancient Kingdom. We know that the Ringleaders of those late rebellious and seditious Courses are Enemies to the Church-government established in Scotland by Law, and yet it is not for their Opinions but their traitorous Practices that We intend to punish them. We hope that the greatest Part of the Dissenters from the Church-government, are far from the countenancing such Practices, and if those other had forborn those Ways of Violence and Sedition, the peaceably inclined had found the Effects of Our Grace and Clemency before this Time; but We will not endure a seeming Force to be put upon Us. The whole Kingdom shall see that it is not seditious and tumultuary Attempts, but only Our own Grace and Goodness can move Us to any Indulgence. Let the Ringleaders of these Disorders, which look too like Rebellion, be once brought to punishment, and that seditious Spirit be quelled, and then these that are and will be peaceable, shall quickly find how gracious We are to indulge as far as may consist with preserving the present Government, and may not tend to the perpetuating of the Schism. These Our Intentions We thought fit to declare unto you, to the end you may make them known in such Ways as you shall judge most convenient, for undeceiving the simple, and preventing the peaceable from running into the same Guilt with those who are desperate and implacable. In the mean time, We do again and again require you, to use your utmost Rigour, in finding out, and bringing to just punishment the Ringleaders of the aforesaid seditious and insolent Practices, and for quelling that mad Spirit. We expect your ready Obedience, and a constant Account to Our Secretary of what passes, or what you think fit to offer further for the Ends aforesaid; and so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Castle at Windsor, the 23d Day of June 1674. and of Our Reign the 26th Year.

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

Act of Council anent these pursued for Field-conventicles, July 16. 1674.
N^o. LXIV.

THe Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering his Majesty's Letter, give Order and Warrant to his Majesty's Advocate, to cause cite before the Council such Persons as are informed to have been at Field-conventicles, to give their Oaths thereupon; with Certification they shall be holden as confest: Also they give Warrant to the Advocate, to refer the Libel to the Defenders Oath, and restrict the same to an arbitrary Punishment; and declare, That any Person or Persons, who, being pursued before the Council, shall declare, or be holden as confest, for being at Field-conventicles, or for hearing or respecting of outed Ministers, or others not authorized by Law, or forfeited, excepted, or declared Fugitive, shall never be forfeited or questioned before the Justiciary, or any other Judicatory, for any such Deed referred to their Oath before the Council, or for any Circumstance of the same; but prejudice to his Majesty's Advocate to pursue such Persons before the Justices, before they give their Oath, or be holden as confest before the Council, as the Lords shall give Order thereanent.

Mr. James Mitchel's Libel, March 2. 1674. N^o. LXV.

MR. James Mitchel Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, you are indicted and accused, That forasmuch as, by the common Law, and by the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom, Rebellion against his Majesty's sacred Person or Authority, and the rising in Arms in Rebellion, and joyning and keeping Correspondence with these who are in Rebellion, and all accessory to the same, are Deeds and Crimes of high Treason and Lese-majesty, and punishable with the Pains of Treason, and Forfeiture of Life, Lands, and Goods; and by the common Law and Laws of Nations, and by the Laws of this Kingdom, Murder, and the assaulting and attempting upon any Person or Persons, by way of firethought Felony, & per infidias & industriam, of purpose and design to kill, are most atrocious and detestable Crimes, and destructive and against the Being of human Society, and that Security and Confidence which is the Foundation of all Society, and is severely punishable; but especially when the same is committed upon the Persons of Counsellors, and other Officers who do represent Authority, and are liable to Mistake; or, when the same are committed upon the Persons of Counsellors and other Officers who do represent Authority, and are liable to Mistake and Malice of wicked Persons, for doing their Duty; or, when the same are committed upon the Persons of Churchmen, Bishops and Ministers who are of the sacred Function, and by the Laws of all Nations are privileged and secured, as much as can be, from the Malice and sacrilegious Attempts of wicked Persons. And particularly it is statuted by King James VI. in his 16th Parliament and 4th Act thereof, That whatsoever Person invades, or pursues any of the Lords of Session, secret Council, or any other his Majesty's Officers for doing his Majesty's Service, should be punished with Death. And by the 17th Act, Parliament 111, of his Majesty's Royal Father, in anno 1633. entitled, Anent invading of Ministers, it is statuted, That the same should be extended to all Archbishops and Ministers whatsoever. And by the 4th Act of his Majesty's 2d Parliament, and 2d Session of the same, it is itatuted, That whatsoever Persons shall be guilty of the assaulting of the Lives of Ministers, that they should be punishable with the Pain of Death and Confiscation of their Moveables. And by the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom, the Mutilation and dismembering of any of his Majesty's Subjects, by way of forethought Felony, is an high and capital Crime, and punishable with the Pain of Death.

Nevertheless, having shaken off all Fear of God, and Conscience and sense of Duty, Loyalty, and Allegiance to your sovereign Lord and King, and of Humanity itself, you have presumed to commit the Crimes foresaid, in so far as a great Number of disloyal and seditious Persons in the West, having, in the Year 1666. risen and appeared in Arms, in a most desperate and avowed Rebellion against his Majesty's Government and Laws, and having joyned and modelled themselves in an Army, under Colonel Wallace and others, and having had the Boldness to march through the Country in a military and hostile Manner, towards and near Edinburgh, the chief City of the Kingdom, and to encounter and fight his Majesty's Forces, until the said Rebels were subdued and suppressed; you was involved and enjoined with them in the said Rebellion, and in the Year aforesaid, 1666. and in one or other of the Months of the foresaid Year, and upon the several Days of the same, or one or other thereof, having had Notice from the said Colonel James Wallace, being in Edinburgh for the Time of that Rebellion, you, and the said Colonel Wallace, and Captain Arnot, and divers others, went out of Edinburgh about Eight a Clock at Night, and immediately rode towards Air, and joyned with those who were in the Rebellion in the said Burgh of Air, and stayed and went along with them in Arms, until the said Rebels came near Pentland; and, the Night before the Defeat at Pentland, you came to Edinburgh, at the Desire of Captain Arnot an Officer, and a Person eminent in that said Rebellion, and thereafter forfeited and executed for his Accession thereto, to speak, as you pretended, with one Mr. James Sirling, and Mr. Robert Fergusson, who were then in Edinburgh, and were noted and known to be Persons disaffected to his Majesty and his Government, and that anent and in order to an Address, to be given in to the Council, in behalf of these in the Rebellion; but truly of purpose to propagate and promote the same, by your seditious Practices and Endeavours with those of the same Principles, and that you might deprave and induce to joyne with you therein.

His Majesty having, by his Proclamation, upon the first Notice given to his Privy Council of the said Rebellion, declared all these who had appeared in the said Rebellion, to be Traitors, and having discharged all his Subjects to assist, resist, correspond with, or supply any of them, under the Pain of Treason: And thereafter, in the Year 1666. after the said Defeat at Pentland, his Majesty, by another Proclamation emitted by the Advice of the Privy Council, having discharged and inhibited all his Subjects, that none of them offer to harbour, refect, supply, or correspond to hide or conceal the Persons whose Names are therein exprest, and in special, Maclellan of Barscob, Cannon of Mardrogat, Mr. John Welsh, and you yourself, as appears by a Proclamation, of Date 4th of December 1666. And likewise his Majesty, by a Proclamation dated 1st October 1667. having, out of his Royal Clemency and Tenderneſs, and of his ſpecial Grace and Favour, granted his full and free Pardon and Indemnity to theſe who were engaged in the ſaid Rebellion, excepting always from the ſaid Pardon the Perſons therein mentioned, and in ſpecial the ſaid Cannon of Mardrogat, Colonel Wallace, and Robert Chalmers Brother to Gadgirth, Cannon of Mardrogat younger, and Mr. John Welsh, with you yourſelf.

Nevertheless you, though declared Traitor, and a Perſon excepted from his Majesty's Pardon by the Proclamation foreſaid, and whom his Majesty's Subjects were thereby diſcharged and inhibited to harbour, refect, ſupply, or correſpond with, under the Pain of Treason, you had the Boldneſs, and did preſume to repair and come to Edinburgh, and after the ſaid Proclamations in the ſaid Years 1666 and 1667. and ſubſequent Years, you did ſtay within the ſaid City and Town of Edinburgh divers Months, at leaſt Days, and did converſe, not only with Perſons of your Principles, and who had been in the Rebellion, but with others of his Majesty's Subjects, involving them with the Contagion of your Company and Converſation, and bringing them under the Compaſs of the Certifications contained in the ſaid Proclamations, as Favourers of the ſaid Rebellion, and acceſſory thereto, and guilty of the ſame.

Though you had a long Time for breathing and for repenting of your Rebellion, and treaſonable and wicked Practices foreſaid, and was not brought to condign Punishment for the ſame, by a ſtrict and exact Search and Enquiry which might have been uſed upon you, a notorious and declared Traitor, and excepted, as ſaid is, from all Pardon, yet you was ſo far from making that Uſe which you might and ought to have made of the ſaid Forbearance, that on the contrary you perſiſted in your Wickedneſs, and proceeded to another Step of your Impiety and barbarous Cruelty and Inhumanity, and conceiving a deadly Malice and Hatred againſt the reverend Father in God James Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, a Perſon who had never known or ſeen you, ſo as to take any Notice of you, much leſs had given you any Offence, without any Ground or Warrant, and upon account, only that he was promoted and advanced by his Majesty to be Archbiſhop, and to be of his Privy Council, and did ſerve God and his Majesty faithfully in the ſaid Stations and Offices, you did contrive, reſolve, and deſign the Murder and Aſſaſſination of the ſaid Archbiſhop, and in order thereunto, having bought and provided yourſelf of a Pair of long Scots Iron Piſtols, near Muſket Bore, you did upon the Day of 1668. proceed, and did take the Opportunity to execute and go about your horrid and cruel Deſign, when the ſaid Archbiſhop in the Afternoon of the ſaid Day, did come down his own Stair, and was going into his own Coach, being to go abroad upon his Occaſions, with the reverend Father in God Andrew Biſhop of Orkney, and you having a charged Piſtol with Powder and Ball, did moſt cruelly and feloniously aſſault the ſaid Biſhop, and did fire, diſcharge, and ſhoot the ſaid Piſtol on them, being within the ſaid Coach; and God of his Goodneſs having preſerved the ſaid Archbiſhop, whom you intended to murder, you did by the ſaid Shot grievouſly wound the ſaid Biſhop of Orkney, to the great Hazard and Danger of his Life, ſo that having for a long Time with a great Pain and Torture, and Expence of Blood, languiſhed of the ſaid Wound, being in a moſt dangerous Place, in the Joyning of his Hand and Arm, where there is a Confluence of Nerves and Fibres, he is not recovered, nor ever will recover his Health to that Meaſure and Vigour that he had and might have, if he had not gotten the ſaid Wound, and is mutilate and diſmembred as to his Arm and Hand, ſo that he can make no Uſe of the ſame: And after you had attempted and committed the ſaid Aſſaſſination and Villany, tanquam inſidiator, & per induſtriam, and by way of forethought Felony, you did go away, and eſcaped through the Multitude and Throng that had gathered upon the Noiſe of the ſaid Shot, having another charged and bended Piſtol in your Hand, of Purpoſe and Deſign to have killed any Perſon who ſhould have offered to take and apprehend you. The foreſaid Attempt being without any Parallel, the Circumſtances of the ſame being conſidered, that it was committed by one who profeſſed to be of the Reformed Religion, and who did pretend to be and ſerve as a Chaplain in divers Families, that it was committed upon Perſons of the ſacred Function, and Fathers of the Church, and that it was committed to the great Scandal and Diſadvantage of the Chriſtian Religion, and in ſpecial of the Proteſtant reformed Religion, the Profeſſors and Preachers of the ſame having ſo much declared againſt, and by their preaching and writing having expreſſed their Detestation of ſuch Attempts and Practices committed by Perſons, and owned by Writers of the Roman Profeſſion, and that it cannot be inſtanced, that any of the Proteſtant Religion was guilty of the like Attempt, upon the account of Religion, and that the worſt of Men being aſhamed to commit the Villanies, for covering of the ſame, and for their Security, do take the Opportunity of Darkneſs and Solitude, in Corners and ſolitary Places; your Malice was ſo implacable, that you was prodigal of your own Life, to be Maſter of the Life of the ſaid Archbiſhop, and in the high Street of Edinburgh, in Day-light, and in the Face of the Sun, and before many Perſons near about the ſaid Coach, or about a little Diſtance from it, where you could not but expect to be preſently ſeized upon, you did devote yourſelf, and did adventure to commit the ſaid moſt villanous and wicked Attempt: Yet notwithstanding all the ſaid Aggravations and Circumſtances of Horror, which might and ſhould have poſſeſſed your Conſcience with Horror and Remorſe, you did continue in your implacable Malice, you did converſe and keep Correſpondence with the ſaid Robert Cannon of Mardrogat, and with Welſh of Cornley, and McClellan of Barscob, declared and excepted Rebels and Traitors, and had divers Meetings with them, and upon Diſcourſe concerning that Attempt, every one of the ſaid Perſons putting it upon one another, when it was put to you, you ſaid and uttered theſe and the like Speeches, Shame fall the Miſs, and that you ſhould make the Fire hoter; and after the Time and Attempt foreſaid, in the ſaid Year 1666. and ſubſequent Years, Months and Days of the ſaid reſpective Years, and on one or other of them, your guilty Conſcience diſquieting and purſuing you, you did rove and go abroad ſeveral Times to Holland, England, and Ireland, until divine Juſtice did drive and bring you back to this Kingdom, that Juſtice might be ſatisfied and vindicated in ſome Meaſure, where you had committed ſuch great Villanies.

After your Return, you did proceed to that Height of Boldneſs and Confidence, or rather Impudence, that you did repair to, and live in Edinburgh, and was married there with your Wife, who is yet living, by Mr.

Mr. John Welsh, who is not only declared an excepted Traitor by the Proclamations abovementioned, but is forfeited for his Accession to the said Rebellion; and your Boldness was so great in outdaring both God and Authority, that for a long Time you have been lodged, and has kept a Shop near that Place where the said Archbishop doth and useth to lodge when he is at Edinburgh, until at length you was discovered and apprehended, having upon you when you was taken the same Pistol which you shot when you committed the said Attempt, which was found under your Coat charged with Powder and Three Ball, of purpose to attempt again and execute your bloody Design against the said Archbishop, at least against any Person who should offer to take you.

From all which Premises it is evident, that you are guilty of the said atrocious Crimes of Treason, Murder, and Assassination, by way of forethought Felony, and is a Percussor and Sicarius, and of Mitulation, and other Crimes abovementioned, and that not only as to single Acts of Treason and Rebellion, but of a Complication and a continued Tract and Course of habitual Rebellion and Treason, and you are Art and Part of the same, and of one or other of the said Crimes, and therefore the said Punishments ought to be inflicted upon you as a Traitor and Murderer, and as guilty of the Crimes foresaid, in an exemplary Way, to the Terror of others.

The Copy of a Paper which Mr. Thomas Forrester offered to present to the Brethren of the Exercise at Stirling, containing the Reasons of disowning the present Church-judicatories, and separating himself from them. N^o. LXVI. A.

IT is evident by the present standing Acts touching Religion and Church-government, at and since the overturning of the established Presbyterian Government of this Church, that all Power and Jurisdiction in the present Church-assemblies, either diatactick, critick, or dogmatick, is fountained in, derived from, and ultimately referable to the Magistrate's civil Power; for whereas Anno 1661. the Exercise of Presbyterian Government was declared merely precarious during his Majesty's Pleasure, thereafter Anno 1662. all Church-meetings were discharged, till authorized by the Archbishops and Bishops then nominate by his Majesty, upon their entering into the Government of their respective Sees; the Presbyterian Frame thus razed, as the Foundation of the new Structure, the Disposal of the Government is declared to be the Crown Right, and inherent perpetual Prerogative, and thereupon the Bishops are restored not only to their Places in Parliament, and accustomed Dignities civil, (as in Anno 1612. their spiritual Power by them acclaimed, being by the Magistrate one way or other compassed by packed Church-meetings, which that Act of the Magistrate, of the foresaid Date, doth but suppose and ratify) but likewise to their Episcopal Function, Precedency in the Church-power of Ordination and Censures, and all Church Discipline to be performed by them, with Advice (only) of such of the Clergy, (such) as they shall find (they themselves only being Judges) of known Loyalty and Prudence; and it is expressly declared, that there is no Church Power, Jurisdiction, or Government in Church-office-bearers or Meetings, but what dependeth upon, and is subordinate unto the Civil Power and Supremacy, and is authorized by the Bishops, who are accountable to his Majesty for their Administration. In the publick Act for the National Synod, the Members constituent, Matters to be treated on, whether Doctrine, Discipline, or Worship, the Ratification of the Constitutions, and enlivening them into Church Canons, is solely in the Magistrate's Power, their Work being only to give Advice to the Magistrate without any decisive Suffrage, except what is precarious; and in the Act for the High Commission, the Power of Excommunication is put into the Hands of persons merely civil: Thus all spiritual Power proceedeth from the civil, and is imparted to such persons, and by such Communications as his Majesty pleases. Now, this being the Frame of all the present Church-judicatories, it is infallibly clear that it is merely Erasian, and by our Divines who have written against that Way, convincingly proven unlawful from the Word of God. Amongst many convincing Arguments largely insisted on by them, I hint only these, That these Two Powers Civil and Ecclesiastick, are distinct totò genere, both as to the Original, the Subject Matter, the Manner of working, and the nearest End designed, consequently that they are co-ordinate, not subordinate one to another. 2^{dly}. That these were kept always distinct, distinct Limits being put betwixt them, both in the Old and New Testaments: Under the Law, a standing Priesthood and spiritual Sanhedrim established, who were to meddle with Matters of the Lord, distinct from Matters of the King; that the Judgment on Saul and Uzzias, was for going beyond their Limit: And that under the New Testament, the Lord Jesus, the King, Head, and Lawgiver of his Church, hath a visible Kingdom which he exerciseth in and over the Church visible, by its spiritual Office-bearers given to it as a Church; and therefore distinct from, and independent upon the Civil Power, the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven being by him committed not to the Magistrate, but to the Apostles Successors in the Work of the Ministry, Matth. 16. 19. Jo. 18. 36, 37. 1 Cor. 12. 28. Eph. 4. 10, 11, 12. The Incompatioleness of which Two Jurisdctions in one and the same Subject, and a fortiori, the Absurdity of monopolizing of Supremacy, as to both in one Person, is abundantly clear, both from that Obedience required of all, without Exception, within the Church, to Church-rulers; as likewise the Prohibition of civil Power and Greatness to these Church-rulers, and our Lord, the Head of his Church while in this World, exercising Supremacy in the Government thereof, his peremptory Refusal so much as to give Advice by another Arbiter in a civil Cause, as a Thing inconsistent with his Office. 3^{dly}. That as 'tis clear that this spiritual Power was at first committed to Church-officers, when no Magistrate was so much as a Member thereof, and consequently to be exercised then independently upon him, so 'tis as clear that our Lord hath commanded the Exercise of this Power as intrinck in the Church, whether the Magistrate be Friend or Enemy, upon moral perpetual Grounds, till he come again, in the same Manner it was exercised at first, the Grounds insisted on by our Lord, in his Epistles to the Churches, 1 and 3 of the Revelation, as also by Paul in his Epistles, in pressing the Exercise of this Power, being taken from the Vindication of Christ's Honour Honour, and guarding his Ordinances from Contempt, and keeping and transmitting them pure and entire, the correcting, shaming, and recovering of the obstinate, and the Danger of infecting others, &c. which Grounds are perpetually binding, and no where is the Want of a Christian Magistrate, (which Erasmians lay was the great Ground of the Exercise of this Power, independently by Church-officers at that Time) so much as in the least hinted at, although, according to this Opinion, it had been at that Time a most pertinent pungent Argument. 4thly. The many dangerous Consequences and Absurdities, which they evidently shew, following on the contrary Doctrine, and owned by the chief Patrons of it, as 1. the denying the divine Right of a distinct Gospel-ministry, and of Excommunication. 2dly. That the Magistrate may, pro libitu, dispose of Church-meetings and Matters, as falling within the Compass of his Dominion, which the Apostle expressly disclaims, and is by our Lord discharged to Church-officers, it being clear from Scripture, that the Magistrate's Power is called properly a Dominion, and, according to this Opinion, he is a chief Church-officer. 3dly. That no Church-judicatory hath, in Doctrine, Discipline, or Worship, any inherent, spiritual, decisive Suffrage, being merely called by the Magistrate for Advice, as the Act for the National Synod expressly bears, which cuts the Throat of all Church-judicatories. 4thly. That the civil Power should reach, as being the primary and proper Subject of the Keys, to perform immediately by it self, all Acts of the spiritual Office-bearers, dispensing the Word, administering the Sacraments, yea, to stop any Censure, to introduce any Form of Worship, to handle by its own proper elicite Acts, all spiritual Matters in civil Courts, and lay aside all Church-judicatories, subjecting the Ordinances of Christ's perfect Testament, sealed with his Blood, to the arbitrary Disposal of the Powers, to cut and carve upon, according to their worldly Interest. There and many such like Absurdities, striking at the Root of Religion and Reformation, do clearly follow the forementioned Way. Now, the attending these Exercises, as they are called, being expressly required as a Badge and Acknowledgment of this Power in the Magistrate, and his Ecclesiastick Government, as being contrary to the Word of God, the Confession and Doctrine of this Church, acknowledgeth no Authority or Judgment in or over the Church, but what Christ hath committed to Church Office-bearers under himself; which Judgment of our Church had the civil Sanction added to it in Parliament, the King himself being present, Anno 1640, 41. Therefore, this Attendance cannot but, in these Respects, be sinful and unlawful.

II Reason. I find this Nation and Church, since our Reformation, hath taken on, and is yet under many publick, solemn, sacred Oaths and Vows, against the Episcopal Frame of Government; for whereas the second Book of Discipline, which overturns the Government of the Church by Bishops, was approved in Anno 1577, 1578. by the General Assembly, and the then Bishops, who had embraced the Reformation, ordained to attend as Pastors one Flock, and not to usurp the Power of Presbyteries: And in the Assembly at Dundee, in Anno 1580. Sess. 4 The Office of Bishop was condemned and abolished by a particular Act, declaring it unlawful and void of Warrant in the Scripture, ordaining, under Pain of Excommunication, such as brusk the said Office, to leave off the same, as an Office to which they are not called of God, and cease from Preaching, and Administration of the Sacrament, under Hazard of the same Censure, or using the Office of a Pastor, till they receive de novo Admission from the General Assembly. Which Policy of the Church, thus owned by the Assembly, and contained in the forementioned Book, the King and Council were supplicate by the Assembly to establish, till a Parliament were holden to confirm it by a Law: Thereafter, in the same Year 1580. the national Covenant was sworn, in which Confession and Covenant, we profess to detest, in general and particular Heads, all Kind of Popistry; and as to Discipline, we engage to renounce the Antichrist's worldly Monarchy, and wicked Hierarchy, joining our self to this reformed Church, in Doctrine, Faith, Religion, and Discipline, swearing by the great Name of GOD, That we shall continue in the Discipline of this Church, and defend it all Days of our Life. In the Assembly 1581. it was subscribed by all its Members, and the Act of the Assembly at Dundee was further explained, declaring expressly that the Church did thereby wholly condemn the Estate of Bishops as they were then in Scotland: And then the Confession of Faith sworn before in the Year Eighty is presented to the Assembly by the King and Council, the King, the State, and the Assembly hereby fully agreeing as to this Judgment in Church-government, and this Oath for its Maintenance; for at this very Time the King's Letter to Noblemen and Gentlemen was presented for complete erecting of Presbyteries, and Dissolution of Prelacies. I find this Oath renewed again Anno 1590 and 1591. Again I find it renewed Anno 1638. by that Assembly, and its striking against Prelacy fully cleared from the Tenor of the Church's Proceeding before it, and after the taking thereof, as the Narrative of their explanatory Act fully clearereth, that the Assembly 1639. did enjoyn its Subscription, according to this its genuine Sense by their Authority, and supplicate the Privy Council for an Ordinance for its Subscription, which was granted August 30. And Anno 1640, the Parliament by their Act 5th did ratify this Act of the General Assembly, their Supplication, and the Council's Act thereupon, which was ratified by the King in the large Treaty, and thereafter by his personal Presence at the next Session of Parliament, where all was ratified. I find that thereafter Anno 1643. in that Oath called the Solemn League and Covenant, the whole Kingdom doth again swear to the Preservation of the Reformed Religion of the Church of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, to extirpate Popery and Prelacy, and engaging to continue therein all Days of our Life. I find also that this Oath hath been subscribed by all Authority, both civil and sacred, and supreme Judicatories of Church and State. Now the Matter standing thus, when these sacred, solemn, often renewed, publick, and every way confirmed and authorized Oaths of God, both by Assemblies, Kings, Parliaments, and all Ranks, should be loosed and dispensed with, I profess I see not; seeing in these Engagements, beside the Truth, Morality, and Necessity, objective of the Matter sworn, there is a subjective Necessity of many connected Ties, both of an Oath, a Vow, a Covenant with God and Man, and likewise of a Promise, a Promise (which is a rational Act, whereby a Man declareth and ordereth his Purpose to another, called lex privata, obliging the Soul, morally virtuous and religiously good, to a strict Performance, as it is described by the Schoolmen and Casuists) is clearly included in these Oaths, the Stile of the National, specially the solemn League, being clearly promissory, as we shall endeavour the Extirpation of Popery, Prelacy, &c. an Oath also, (which is defined a religious Act, wherein, for further Security to others of what we believe, have done, or engaged to do, God is called on for a Witness, the Formality whereof lies in the Invocation of his dreadful Name, to attest the Sincerity of our Intent as to the Matter sworn, and future Performances, if the Oath be promissory, which Invocation, as a Piece of divine Worship, addeth highly to the Promise its Obligation) that an Oath (I say) is clearly included in these Engagements; is most evident, there being in the National Covenant express Mention made of our swearing by the great Name of God, to continue in the Discipline of this Church, and defend it, &c. and in the Solemn League the Preamble is concluded thus, With our Hands lifted up to the most High God, we do swear; and the Clause of the last Paragraph thus, And this Covenant we make in the Presence of the Almighty, the Searcher of all Hearts, &c. Allow also (which is by Divines ordinarily described, sponsio facta Deo in rebus Dei, thus differencing it from a naked Promise which is made to Man in his Matters, in which God is not only invoked as a Witness and Judge, as in an Oath, but is the proper Correlate and Party) that these Engagements (I say) do include, it is also evident by the whole Stile of the National and Solemn League, importing a Promise touching Religion and Reformation, which is to God in the Things of God. A Covenant also (including a Promise for these Things on our Part, which his Word revealeth to be our Duty, as they made with God, when, on the Promulgation of the Law by Moses, they said, Whatsoever the Lord speaks we will do; on which Ground, in the Violation of the divine Law, they are so often charged with Breach of Covenant) the Rule of Righteousness being now, God speaking from Heaven to us, our Engagement to these forementioned Oaths, to the stricter Observance of the divine Law, do infallibly conclude them to be formally Covenants with God, and in so far as there are mutual and reciprocal Duties engaged, and a mutual Stipulation betwixt Men, there is also a Covenant with and amongst them, and so all the Strength and Virtue of a Promise resulting from the Truth of Men laid to pawn, not to be redeemed without fulfilling the Thing promised, all the Religion of an Oath, because of the Reverence we owe to the sacred Name of God, who will not hold them guiltless, who take his Name in vain; all the Obligation resulting from a Vow, because of the Faith, we owe to God above all others, all the Force of a Covenant from the Consideration of Truth and Justice; as these, I say, contribute to the Strength of these Bonds, and do evidently (all the Premises considered) enforce their binding Obligation and Force upon the Posterity, they being real and hereditary, like that betwixt David and Jonathan, 2 Sam. 9. 7. and 21. 7. and that betwixt Joshua and the Gibeonites, Josh. 9. the Breach whereof was severely punished on Saul his Posterity, 2 Sam. 2. 12. Besides, there being no Rule or Principle inferring the perpetual binding Force of an Engagement or Oath, but what is clearly applicable to these mentioned, whether the permanent Nature of the Subject, here the Subject is perpetual, the Body of the People and their Representatives, like that of Joshua and the Princes to the Gibeonites, they are real, regal, parliamentary, national Oaths and Vows, Scotland's publick Faith engaged by all Persons in all Capacities, and to the Subject engaging remains while any are succeeding in these Capacities, and Scotland is Scotland, or in case the Principle made Use of for an Oath's Perpetuity, viz. a Clause in the Oath tending to Perpetuity, be here applied, Expressions, especially in the solemn League, point thereat, the Posterity being expressly taken in; or if that Rule touching the Matter it self about moral Duties, under the Necessity of a perpetual Command, having an evident lasting Convenience agreeable to the Principles of Truth and Righteousness: If that Rule, I say, be made Use of, these Engagements will be found perpetual; according to it Reformation, publick and personal, and of the Church in Doctrine, Worship, and Discipline, according to the Word of God, without all doubt, being perpetual moral Duties, according to the Place and Station of the Engagers, and faith under a perpetual Command, the Preservation of our Religion and of our selves from Ruin, that we and our Posterity may live in Faith and Love, that the Lord may be one, and his Name one in the Three Kingdoms, the Preservation of spiritual and civil Liberties from the Invasion of the Enemies of both, being such great Ends as have unquestionably an evident lasting Convenience, agreeable to the Principles of Truth and Righteousness, and so carry along all the necessary Force, whereby they were at first established to the Posterity, even as the Covenant and Oath, Deut. 29. 10. to which Moses engaged Israel upon the forementioned Grounds, is declared by him to reach not only them that stood there, but likewise their Posterity who were not there, it being the special Thing among these Things revealed, belonging to them and their Children for ever, mentioned ver. 29. Nay Oaths and Obligations of far less Moment are found thus obliging, as that which J. seph put on his Brethren for carrying up his Bones, Gen. 50. which their Posterity after, tho' embodied in a politick State, punctually obeyed. The Oath to save the Gibeonites, in which Joshua and Israel were cheated, nay the very Vow of the Rechabites, touching a Matter falling under no Command, is opposite to this Purpose, &c. Now the attending of these Meetings as now modelled and authorized, being an express Acknowledgment of the Abolishment and Loosing all these Engagements against this Frame of Church-government, I see not how these Oaths can be callate, and consequently these Meetings lawful.

III. I have, upon some Search of the Controversy about Church-government, entertained the Perswasion that Prelacy is contrary to that Frame appointed in the Word, and that an ordinary Church-officer assuming the Government of some Hundreds of Congregations, as monopolized in him, and conveyed according to his Pleasure to the Ministers of these Congregations, having sole Power in Ordination and Jurisdiction and Excommunication, with a negative Voice in the Synod, made up of the Preachers in these Congregations, whose proper Work is ruling only, not feeding by Doctrine, that such an Officer is a Monster to the Scripture, and in many respects contrary thereunto; for 1st. It is most evident that the Scripture acknowledgeth no Distinction betwixt a Bishop and a Presbyter, or Minister of a Congregation labouring therein by Word and Doctrine, either in Name or Thing, neither doth it extend the Name of Bishop; and the actual Care of feeding the Flock immediately, nor hath this Office and Relation any Object or Correlate, except the Flock it self, not Pastors of the Flock, Tit. 1. 5. 7. compared with Act. 20. 38. and 1 Pet. 5. 2, 3, 4. that the whole Episcopal Power is in Scripture appropriate to the Presbyters, and they commanded ἐπισκοπεῖν ὃ ποιμαίνειν, 1 Pet. 5. compared with Act. 20. 2^{dy}. That the Scripture mentioneth no Name or Designation, no Ordination, nor Work and Duty, no Operation of any ordinary Church-officer superior to Presbyters, and which is not appropriate to them, they being called Rulers, Governors, Overseers, Bishops, and both Ordination and Jurisdiction appropriate to them, and all ordinary Church-power relating thereto, and included therein, and this without the least Intimation of Imparity amongst them in the Exercise of this Power, 1 Thess. 5. 12. 1 Tim. 5. 17. Heb. 13. 17. compared with 7 ver. 1 Thess. 5. 17. 1 Cor. 5. 12, 13. compared with Matth. 18. 17. 1 Tim. 4. 14. compared with 3 Epist. John 9 ver. and the Text first cited. 3^{dy}. That the Scripture acknowledgeth no Imparity betwixt Officers of the same Kind, no Apostle, no Evangelist above another, but amongst Officers of the same Kind, whether ordinary or extraordinary, a perfect Parity is held forth, and Superiority and Dominion discharged, Matth. 20. 25, 26. compared with 3 Ep. John 9. and consequently (the Force of the preceding Reason taken in) Imparity among Pastors is condemned. 4^{thly}. That Preaching is the Lord's main Commission, and Discipline declared to be dependent on it, and wholly referable to its Ends, and the higher Honour above Ruling, attributed to the labouring in Word and Doctrine, 2 Tim. 4. 1, 2. compared with Acts 20. 28. Matth. 28. 19, 20. compared with 1 Cor. 1. 17. 1 Tim. 5. 17. and consequently to exalt Ruling above Preaching, and separate it from the same, attributing it to certain over-ruling Officers, who are not tied to preach the Gospel to any Flock, must be point-blank contrary to the Lord's Commission. 5^{thly}. That the Apostles, in the first Constitution of the Churches, placed Presbyters therein, as the highest ordinary Officers, to feed with the Word and Government, Acts 14. 23. Tit. 1. 5. with Acts 20. 17. 1 Cor. 5. 4, 12. compared with 2 Cor. 2. 6. And lest these Presbyters, as their immediate Successors, committing their whole Government to them in their last Farewells to the Churches, without the least Hint of any Superintendence of any Officers of an higher Order, Acts 20. 28, 29. compared with 25 ver. 1 Pet. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4. compared with 2 Pet. 1. 14. Hence it may be argued, these whom the Apostles placed as chief in the first constituting of the Churches, and left as their Successors, in their last Farewells they gave the Churches; these had no ordinary Officers superior in the Churches, but they first placed Presbyters, feeding with Word and Government, and to these they commended the Churches in their last Farewells; Ergo, &c. 6^{thly}. That the Holy Ghost, speaking purposely of the several Sorts of Ministers Christ ordained in the Church, 1 Cor. 12. 28. Eph. 4. 11, 12. Rom. 12. 6, 7, 8. where there is an Enumeration of Officers ordinary and extraordinary, and elsewhere, speaking frequently of the Gifts and Duties of ordinary Officers, no Mention is made of the Bishop distinct from the Presbyter, much less superior to him, nor of any Duty or Qualification proper to such an Officer as thus distinguished; which Argument is the more forcible, in that this negative Inference from the Scripture's Silence in these Places cited, is acknowledged by all sound Protestants, valid to exclude the Pope from the List of Church-officers, as no Plant of Christ's planting; and why not also the Archbishop and Bishop, there being no mention made of the one more than the other? and whatever Answer or Evasion be made from the Force of this Argument, will necessarily coincide with these of the Papists, for keeping the Pope from the Last of these Scriptures, as likewise, since the Apostles are punctual in describing the Duty and Office of the meanest Officer, the Deacon, it is without all Shadow of Reason that the Office and Duty of such an eminent ordinary Officer, as the Bishop is supposed to be, should amidst such Distinctions be wholly past over in Silence. 7^{thly}. That the Apostles, Prophets, and Evangelists, are not succeeded in eundem gradum, but their complex Office, and, taken in a formal Sense, died with themselves, this including, as its specifick formal Difference, such Things as are not proper to any ordinary Officer, such as the Manner of the Apostles Mission, the Universality of their Inspection, their proper Work and Duty in founding Churches, and planting the Gospel-government in them, their directive Power, infallible miraculous Assistances, &c. the Prophets extraordinary mediate Revelation by Afflations, Breathings, and Assistances, for opening up the Scriptures of the old Testament, and Application thereof, for confirming the Doctrine of the Gospel, beside the Revelation of Things to come, in some Cases, the Evangelists their planetary Motion from Church to Church, in watering where the Apostles planted, and in carrying Commissions and Instructions from the Apostles to the Churches, and bringing from the Churches Reports of their State to the Apostles, as is demonstrate in the many various Journeys of Timothy and Titus, pointed at in the Acts of the Apostles compared with their Epistles, consequently Pastors, Teachers, Elders, and Deacons are the only ordinary Officers, and no Argument can be drawn for Episcopal Preeminence from either Apostle or Evangelist. 8^{thly}. That the Scripture acknowledges no Majority of corrective Power, and lordly Preeminence and Dominion in one Church-officer over another, but that this Dominion is expressly discharged, 1 Pet. 5. compared with 20 Matth. 25, 26. 2 Cor. 1. 24. 1 Cor. 4. 1. with 3 John. 9. Now in the Episcopal Frame there is a Majority of corrective Power, such a professed Dominion and lordly Preeminence as no Apostle had over Evangelist, Presbyter, yea, or Deacons, or the Church hath over any Member, all her Power being a mere executive declarative Ministry, to signify and execute what Christ out of his supreme Power will have put in Execution. In the Episcopal Frame the Bishop is a Head deriving Power of external Government to others, all in the Diocese being his Substitutes; now what is Antichrist but to be a Head from whom Power of external Government is derived, the Bishop is the same in his Diocese, and what the Pope usurpeth differeth only in Degree and Extent, not in Kind, from what the Bishop arrogates to himself, it not being Universality simply that makes him Antichrist, for the Apostles had Universality of Authority, yet not Antichrist, because it made them not Heads deriving Power to others from their Fulness, a Prince-like Majority of Power, but the Power they acclaimed was steward-like and ministerial only, 1 Cor. 4. 1, 2. 2 Cor. 4. 5.

These with many such weighty Grounds have preponderate with me to esteem the Office of the Prelates contrary to the Scripture, and consequently the Meetings authorized by them, and deriving their Power immediately from them not to be owned.

Mr. Forrester's Remarks on the Synod's Sentence, &c. in a Letter to a Member.
N^o. LXVI. B.

U^Nderstanding that you are going to your diocesan Mock-synod, 'tis judged expedient to give you some Account of that Copy of your pretended Sentence of Deposition which you sent to Mr. Forrester, which is found freighted with Lies, Calumnies, virulent insolent Railings, swelling Words of Vanity, & præterea nihil, more of which in lesser Bounds could hardly be comprised. To give you some short but convincing Instances in Proof hereof, who can but smile at your taking on you the cognoscing of a Minister's Carriage judicially, and passing a formal judicial Sentence of Deposition thereupon, exaudorating of all Parts of

of the holy Function of the Ministry, declaring the Church vacant, intimating the Sentence, &c. ? (which supposes an inherent decisive Suffrage) whereas, by your own Acknowledgment, and the Laws in Force, you meet but only to advise the Bishop, who may make of your Advice what he pleases, whose negative Voice among you, and uncontrollable absolute Power, both as to Proposal and Decision of any Matter, renders this Act as far from being your authoritative Sentence, (as you too wisely call it, and the Bishop mockingly, antecedaneously to his pretended Ratification,) as if a Company of Tinkers or Trone-lords should meet in that Church, and pass such an Act or Sentence: And besides this, your boistrous Charge of Sedition and Schism, &c. (because of withdrawing from your Meetings) supposing the Falshood of all these Grounds offered by Letter unto you, (which if they hold, will fully wipe off this Charge, and found a Necessity of deserting them) with what Forehead can you suppose smoothly the Falshood of these Grounds, and found thereupon your Charge, without taking them to Consideration, and a Disproval thereof ? Which also tendreth your Charge of Contumacy (which supposes going on in any wicked Practice against Convictions) as false and impertinent. The Grounds of this Perswasion and Practice, in opposition to your Ways, being offered to your Consideration, with an Offer to embrace Conviction of Error or Mistake, and never the least Offer of an Answer received from you ; and further, the Erastian Mould of your Meetings, more than ever Erastus pleaded for, both as to Members constituent, Matters treated on, and Ratification of Constitutions, compared with what the Scripture luculently holds out, touching our Lord's spiritual visible Kingdom, which he exercises over the Church visible by spiritual Office-bearers given to it as a Church, his committing and commanding the Exercise thereof to Church-officers upon moral Grounds, till he come again in the same Manner it was exercised at first, will say, that your Meetings have not the very genus of a Church-government, its Root of inherent spiritual Power being pluckt up ; besides that authoritative Mission and Ordination, and exhorting by a judicial Sentence belonging to the same Power, as adequate Acts thereof, ejusdem est constiture & destruere, and both these in Scripture being appropriate to collegiate Meetings of Church officers, 1 Tim. 4. 5 1 Cor. 5. Acts 13. 15. as inseparable Acts of the same Authority : How blockishly inconsequent are you to arrogate the last unto your selves, who, by your own Acknowledgment have no Power in the first, no not so much as by a precarious Vote ? it being your spiritual Lords incommunicable Prerogative, to ordain who may do it alone ; and hence how groundlessly you call Stirling-meeting, or such like, a Presbytery who cannot ordain, is easy to judge, the Scripture attributing expressly Timothy's Ordination to a Presbytery ; and Paul's Presence there rather confirms than invalidates this Authority : And further, since you cannot but grant that this Church in her Representatives, her National Assemblies, and subordinate, hath owned all these Grounds which have been offered to you, commending the same to all her Children, which as all profess to own before the late Change, so some Hundreds of Ministers, and many Thousand Professors stand stedfast adhering thereto, and suffering therefore. It will be a pungent Query to you, Whether these stedfast Adherers or you the Deserters, be Schismatics from the Church of Scotland ? If the Question be thus stated, how can they be Schismatics from the Church of Scotland, who own and walk according to her Principles, Vows, and Engagements, ratified in her lawful, supreme, and unrepealed Assemblies ? especially if it be considered that your Meetings are, in so many Respects, point-blank contrary to her Model, Principles, and Privileges in point of Government, both as to the intrinsic Power to name the Moderator the immediate Fountain of Authority, the Power of meddling with every Scandal, and the Determination by a free decisive Suffrage, the Exclusion of a negative Voice, and the Admission of a ruling Elder and Member constituent, they will be found bastard Meetings, to be disowned by all her faithful Children. And as your Authority appeareth in all these Respects to be lame, so the ensuing Reasons, contained in your Sentence, are found as tall and frivolous. In citing the Letter, what gross Falshood and Prevarication do you discover ? You bring the offering these Reasons to you by Letter, as an Aggravation of the pretended Guilt of disowning the Meetings, yet your Meeting at Stirling demanded Reasons of withdrawing ; and now after the Reasons are offered, they do ipso facto with you make up an Aggravation of the Crime, and ground your Sentence of Deposition before they be disproved. You hint at the first Reason in a large dubious General, that the Letter declared your Church-government to be Erastian, without specifying whether you condemn the asserting it to be so de facto, or that de jure it ought not to be so, how is this Laxness in pointing at a Guilt grounding Deposition, consistent with your Judgment ? In reciting the Second Reason you are taken in a gross and palpable Lie, for whereas it is verum, that (the Prelatick Frame, or Prelacy, is contrary to solemn Oaths and Vows) you shuffle in (the Politick Form) whereas the Letter speaks of Church-government, and expressly of Prelacy. If put to it to shew what is that Government, whereof you mention the politick Form of what your Scope is in that Expression, you will fall under this puzzling Dilemma ; if you understand it of the civil Government, how gross is that Lie, that the asserting Prelacy to be contrary to solemn Oaths and Vows, &c. says, that so is the civil Government ; if of Prelacy, then its politick Form can have no other Sense, than its Subserviency to the civil Policy, and thus the Lie is as gross, that this is the Second Reason of that Letter, which speaks of Prelacy in it self simply considered. Nay, how contrary are you to your selves in quite passing over the Third and main Reason of Prelacy its Contrariety to Scripture-rules of Church-government, abstracting from both the former Grounds. This being a strong Defence if made good, and as to your Scope of mentioning the former Two Reasons, a signal Aggravation of the pretended Guilt of disowning your Meeting, with what Shadow of Ground could you omit this in the Enumeration ? But that your slender Hint at the first Reason, your disguising of the Second, and omitting the Third, says, that you found them too biting to grip them strait, and therefore nibble at them like the Asses, lest they prick your Chaps ; and as blockish and inconsequent are you in hinting a Disproval, forsooth (such as it is) of the Second Reason, and nothing of any of the rest. Since you intended hereby a Discovery of its Irrelevancy, and a Vindication of your Procedure notwithstanding thereof, why ought not the same Grounds to have moved you to offer somewhat against the rest ? If you judged it sufficient for your Purpose to recite them barely without any Disproval, what meaneth your Hint against this, and not so much as your reciting the Third ? If you judged it fit to recite them together with a Hint of Disproval, why was nothing hinted against any of the rest, and the Third neither recited, nor any Thing offered against it ? all Vulcan's Gimmerers will not make these cleave fast. And as for that Hint it self, viz. that the (Assertions in the Letter are contrary to Ordination Engagements) why do ye not specify the Matter of these Engagements, and subsume upon the Assertions to make this apparent ? Nay moreover, since what is offered in that Letter, if made good, will infallibly demonstrate these Engagements, to be materially unlawful and null ab initio, how insignificant and impertinent is your bringing in here this Contrariety betwixt these Assertions of the Letter, and these Engagements which you mention? You grant they are contrary; therefore the one must (your selves being Judges) be stuck unto, and the other deserted: And since the Convictions of these Grounds is asserted in the Letter, and since they must needs be supposed valid till you disprove them, surely the relinquishing these Engagements must be an indispensable Duty; and then how ought you to blush for Shame, to lay down the embracing Convictions of Sin and Duty, deserting the one, and cleaving to the other, as a Crime, and an Aggravation of another supposed Crime, especially since the Grounds of so doing are offered to be made good? to which you having returned no Answer, the Offerer may take it for granted that you cannot. Nay further, since many of your selves cannot deny Engagements at your Ordination, and Declarations under your Hand for Presbyterian Government, for the national and solemn League and Covenant, and have of a long Time preached for and owned all these, both not this Charge of Levity ly home more to your selves in relinquishing these without Reasons offered, than to one who hath disowned the present Corruptions upon Grounds which you cannot answer, with whom consequently this Change is a transitus ad meliora, a laying aside the old Man's corrupt Lusts, a Change which Paul gloried in, By the Grace of God I am what I am; and David, I thought upon my Ways, and turned my Feet unto thy Testimonies; which is in you sinful shameless Backsliding, and Levity. Thus your charging this Contrariety upon him, which you dare not simply condemn, and laying it down as one Ground of your Sentence, before the Reasons be disproved, and wherein the Retortion upon your selves is so palpable, is most shameless self-condemning Impudence; and no better is that you mention of deserting and forsaking the Flock, for since the Letter, and the publick Testimony thereafter to the Points contained therein, not only rendereth liable to the civil coercive Power, and penal Statutes enforcing a Ceding (which after Circumstances of Violence cleared, which put him with an Alarm from the Bounds, before the next Saboath after that publick Testimony) but likewise this coercive Violence in that publick Testimony it self being pointed at, as one Ground of leaving the People, this is but your calumnious begging of the Question, as most of what you offer: And moreover, the many Defects of the Episcopal Ordination, and the Want of the People's Call, which the Scripture allows, Acts 6. 2. 14. 23. and withal, the standing Relation betwixt that People and their own Pastor, ordained and called according to the Scripture-pattern, and only kept from that Watchtower by Prelatick Violence, will clearly infer this Leaving, as a necessary Consequent of retracting and disowning the Episcopal Corruptions, and embracing the contrary true Principles of the Church. But you are so angry at this, that you would have him not only unchristian, but unnatural in this leaving. What? is the Tie natural betwixt a Minister and a Congregation, and not rather founded on positive Institution? Is it not secondary and mutable, and founded upon the immediate primary Tie to this Church universal? What pitiful Folly is it then to call the loosing of this Tie unnatural? Relata se mutuo ponunt & tollunt; and no less impertinent and groundless is that which you furiously come out against that which you call Preaching at Conventicles; since the Person you charge antecedently to your Sentence, is by your selves supposed a lawful Minister of the Gospel, who, by your own Confession, hath an immediate Relation, actu primo, to the whole Church, (unless you embrace independent Principles) and that consequently his Preaching, or administering Sacraments without the Sphere of that Congregation, hath the same Authority as within it, and that the neighbour Pastor's Desire supposeth this, but adds no new Authority. Withal, since Ministers are under many pressing inviolable Commands to preach the Gospel, to be instant in season and out of season, and terrible Threatnings are thundred against the negligent, and unfaithfully silent, especially in a Time of such Hazard: Nay moreover, since you dare not simply and absolutely condemn preaching unfixedly, unless you condemn clear Scripture Instances, even as to fixed ordinary Officers, as Acts 8. and also the Practice of our first Reformers in both these Nations and elsewhere, but must needs acknowledge this lawful, particularly the Cases of Defection and Persecution, what self-contradicting Folly is it, generally and bluntly to condemn this Practice as contrary to the Word? which you dare not deny the Word in these Cases to warrant, and that these Cases are by him you sentence presupposed as inevitably following upon these Principles offered to you, and hence your senseless Impertinency as to what you suggest of (Civil and Ecclesiastick Laws contrary hereunto) luculently appears for the Person you speak of being hactenus a Minister, who may in several Cases preach unfixedly, as is said, and whom you cannot affirm that any civil Statutes, (tho' warrantable as you say) can formally exaucterate, and primario, this being a spiritual Censure to be past by a Church-judicatory, far less can it loose these many Commands touching the Exercise of the Ministry: To say that the Exercise of the Ministry, because of the civil Power its Opposition, is seditious, is a Charge that lights as much on the Apostles and primitive Christians as upon him. Neither will your bare affirming these Statutes you mention to be warrantable, overbalance the palpable Evidence of the contrary, nor can you here assign any Disparity in the Cases, unless you say, Our Rulers do not discharge preaching, but only in such a disorderly Way, &c. Which Disparity is nought, if the Terms on which they only admit preaching be sinful, since this is equivalent to an expresse simple Prohibition thereof, the Condition being morally impossible because unlawful; and as for your Ecclesiastick Laws of your Church, you must know that we deny your Meetings to be the ministerial representative Church of Scotland, and though they were granted to to be, the Church hath no Power but to Edification, for Paul had none but to this end, and Circumstances of mere Order must give place to weighty Duties in Cases of extreme Necessity as this is. Nature it self will invert its Order to eschew a Vacuum: Besides that, you are not able to point us even to a pretended National Assembly, or supreme Judicatory of your Prelatick Church, to enact these Ecclesiastick Laws thereof, since our General Assemblies were discontinued. Neither will your bare lying Affirmation fasten Sedition or Wickedness (as you call it) upon the Grounds of that Suffering and Imprisonment which you mention, nor darken the Beauty of that Testimony to these who can spiritually discern, which was sealed with remarkable Interposings of divine Providence in the Period of that Trial: As for the not comparing upon your Citations, to what Purpose should ye? The Reasons against the Constitution of your Meeting ye arbitrarily condemn without hearing, and all your Answers were Delations to incense the civil Power, and the only Ground justifying a Compareance at your Meeting, was to decline you, upon the old Reasons which ye had already seen, and never answered. Thus being far from Truth in your Imputations of pretended Crimes, you are as far from Modesty in your bitter scurrile Railings, and from Sincerity in your specious Pretences for your Sentence afterward mentioned therein. If the opposing God's Work and Interest, wherein his Glory was so conspicuous, be consistent with Zeal to his Glory, if the fixing an indelible Schism in this Church, in your separating from her sworn Engagements and Principles, be (a Suppressing of Schism) and if the setting up such Babes in Knowledge, and profane ones in Practice, to preach the Gospel, as you do open a Door unto, be (a promoting of the Success of the Gospel) and your overturning the settled Order and Peace of this Church, founded upon the best Foundations of Truth and Righteousness, and by slackning, or rather casting by the Reins of all Government, opening a Door to all Licentiousness in Practice, as well as Error in Doctrine; if this, I say, be your Zeal to (promote the Peace of the Church in this Kingdom, and a discountenancing of Division and disorderly Walking) then you may justly lay claim to these Designs; but if the Tendency of your Principles and Practice infer clearly the abovementioned Evils, these Pretences are not more hypocritical than false, and the Person that you sentence, hath that Scripture-consolation clearly to look to in this Case: Your Brethren who hated you, and cast you out for my Name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified, but he shall appear to your Joy, and they shall be a-banded; but you are also full of Bowels of Compassion, forsooth, to that poor People, whom, ye alledge, he hath left to stray, and become a Prey to Satan, &c. But who knows not, that they with Hundreds of Congregations in this Church, are exposed to all these Evils, by the ravening Wolves, the Rabbies you serve, who have persecute away that People's Pastor, and Hundreds of faithful godly Watchmen from their Flocks? so the Evil which you pretend to remedy owes its Original to your selves, and any Remedy you are like to apply, (if we may take an Estimate from such Creatures as ye have already obruded upon such Congregations) is like to be worse than the Disease.

As for that fine Piece of Pageantry at the Tail of your Paper, viz. the Prelate's touching your Act with his Crosier to make it valid, it doth exactly discover what an exact Leger de main he and such like are, pretending, pro forma, that to be a judicial Synodical Act, which is merely his own Act, who might have done it all in his Chamber, as many of that Fraternity have done before, but he likes to act behind the Curtain of the whole diocesan Cyphers chapterly convened, that you may bear a Part of the Odium with him, and that he may mask his Episcopal Usurpation from the Eyes of the simple. We wonder not that he calls you in the high Stile, Our Synod, but if he had said, Our Vassals, or Slaves of Dunkeld, he had said as right and suitable unto his arrogant, and most antiscritural Stile of Nobility, We Henry, &c. and the Subscription Henry Dunkeld, that is, in plain Language, spiritual Lord, owning a Lordship and Dominion over the Souls, Faith, and Consciences, &c. of both Ministers and Flocks in all that Diocese; and then what Agreement hath this with our Lord and Saviour's Prohibition of assuming the Stile of gracious Lords, and Peter's discharging to lord it over God's Heritage, is easy to judge; but he took these Reasons of the Sentence to serious Consideration, and found them relevant; but the Rule of his Consideration herein is like unto that Authority which he interposes for ratifying this Act, viz. both antiscritural and apocryphal. Only since the pretended (unchristian Forsaking the Flock) is one Ground of that Sentence, and (preaching elsewhere) another, it would seem he might have reflected upon his forsaking his own Flock, to play the domineering Prelate, and preaching no where. In a Word, his having the Government of these Congregations in all that Diocese monopolized in him, and let out, according to his Pleasure, to Ministers, his sole Power in Ordination and Jurisdiction, his negative Voice in the Meetings, his arrogating only (Rule) to himself, and not feeding by Doctrine as his proper Work and Duty, rendreth him a Monster to the Scripture, it owning no Difference betwixt a Bishop and Pastor of a Congregation, either in Name or Tuing, nor extending the Term Bishop beyond the actual Care of feeding immediately; nor hath it any Correlate or Object but the Flock, and not the Pastors of it; nor do the Scriptures hint in the least any Name, Qualification, or Ordination, Work, Duty, or Operation of ordinary Church-officers, Superiors to Presbyters, who are called Rulers, Governors, Overseers, Bishops, and both Ordination and Jurisdiction appropriate to them, and all ordinary Ecclesiastick Authority relating thereto, or included therein, without the least Intimation of Imparity in the Exercise thereof, 1 Thess. 5. 12, 17. Heb. 13. 17. with 1 Cor. 5. 12, 18. Matth. 18. 17. 1 Tim. 4. 14. 3 Epistle of John 9. Tit. 1. 5. Acts 20. 28. 1 Pet. 3. 4. So you see that there's no Reason that Brother be stopt, or discouraged in the Exercise of his Ministry received from Christ, (although through Prelacy's impure Chancel, and now purged from its Corruptions) or in the least shaken as to Perswasion or Resolution, by any Thing presented in this pretended Act or Sentence, but rather encouraged.

King's Indemnity, March 24. 1674. N^o. LXVII.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; To Our Lovits, Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Macers, Pursevants, and Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as the Affection which We have to this Our ancient Kingdom of Scotland, makes Us readily to embrace all Occasions, whereby We may witness Our Zeal to do all Things which may be for the Advantage and Ease of Our good Subjects; and We being informed by Our right trusty and intirely beloved Cousin and Counseller, the Duke of Lawderdale, Our Commissioner, of some Things which have been, and still are troublefom and burdensom to Our good Subjects of this Our Kingdom, We have thought fit, as an Act of Our Royal Bounty, by Our Royal Authority, with Advice of Our Privy Council, to declare Our Royal Pleasure, for the Ease and Satisfaction of Our good Subjects, in manner following.

First. We, with Advice foresaid, do hereby statute and enact, and accordingly do freely and absolutely discharge to Our Subjects all Rests of Assessments, monthly Maintenance, Loan and Tax, Levies, Out-rieks of Horse and Foot, Excise, Tenth and Twentieth Penny; and generally all Impositions whatsoever, due or imposed upon this Our Kingdom, at any Time before Our happy Restoration, excepting all Sums of Money already paid, or Bonds given for Money, (which by Assignations may be conveyed through several Hands;) and all these Particulars abovementioned, We, with Advice foresaid, do now discharge, notwithstanding withstanding of any Commission granted to Sir John Weems of Bogie, or any others for collecting them, or any of them.

We in like Manner, with Advice foresaid, discharge all Rests of the Taxation ordinary and extraordinary, granted to Our Royal Father of blessed Memory, by the Parliament in the Year 1633. comprehending therein the Taxation of Two of Ten of Annualrents, excepting all Sums of Money already paid, or Bonds granted preceeding the Date hereof, and excepting all Sums of Money due by any Person liable for the Relief of those who have made Payment or given Bond: But in regard the Duke and Dutcheſs of Hamilton have a Right to the Rests of the said Taxation, until they be satisfied of certain Sums of Money acclaimed, as yet resting to them by Us, conform to a Contract past betwixt Our Royal Father and the deceased James Duke of Hamilton, and a Commission granted by Us to William now Duke of Hamilton; We do declare, that We are resolved to satisfy the Debt, if any be found due to the said Duke after Count and Reckoning of his Intromission with the said Taxation, that Our Grace and Favour intended hereby to Our good Subjects may be made effectual, and entire to them; but prejudice in the mean Time to the Duke of Hamilton, of his Right and Execution thereupon, ay and until he be satisfied of what shall be found due to him, after Count and Reckoning of his Intromission with the said Taxation.

We do likewise, with Advice foresaid, freely and absolutely discharge all such Parts of the Annuity of Tiers, as were due to Us before Our happy Restoration, and do suspend the charging for, the receiving or paying of any Annuity due since Our Restoration, ay and until the Earl of Lowdon make Account (to any We shall appoint for that Effect) of what he or his Father have received of the said Annuities; to the end We may then declare Our further Pleasure, excepting always from this all Sums of Money already paid, or for which Bond is given upon that account, preceeding the Date hereof; and this, notwithstanding of any Commission granted by Us to the Earl of Lowdon, for collecting of the said Annuities.

We do also, with Advice foresaid, freely and absolutely discharge all Fines imposed by Our First Parliament of this Our Kingdom, excepting such as are already paid, or such for which there is Bond already given. It is always hereby declared, That all Monies received by Collectors or Sub-collectors from their several Entries in all or any of these Particulars, above discharged, or others entrusted for uplifting thereof, are hereby excepted; and the said Collectors, Sub-collectors, and others foresaid, declared accountable for the same, to any who have or shall have Our Commission for that Effect.

And last, We, for a further Proof of Our Affection to Our good Subjects of this Our Kingdom, do, with Advice foresaid, freely and absolutely grant a general Pardon and Discharge of all arbitrary and pecunial Pains incurred by any of Our Subjects, before the Date hereof, through the contravening of any Laws, penal Statutes, or publick Acts whatsoever, except such pecunial Pains as are already inflicted or imposed by Our Privy Council, or any other competent Judicatory, for which Bonds are given, or Money paid; and excepting all Sentences of Banishment, Imprisonment, or Confinement: Declaring always, That this Pardon is not to be extended to any who were guilty of the Rebellion in the Year 1666. and are not admitted to the Benefit of our Indemnity, nor to such as are guilty of capital Crimes. And We having given, as said is, so full Proof of Our Bounty and Goodness to Our Subjects, and of Our full Pardon of all arbitrary and pecunial Pains, extending even to these against Conventicles, withdrawing from Ordinances, disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, We do expect, that this Our unparalleled Grace and Goodness will oblige all Our good Subjects, to express their due Sense of and Thankfulness for the same, by a more careful Observance and due Obedience to Our Laws, from which nothing is to be derogate hereby as to their due Observance in Time coming. And to the end, that Our Royal Clemency and Bounty to Our good Subjects, may be for their full Security made known to them; Our Will is, and We charge you straitly and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and the Market-crosses of all the other Royal Burroughs of this Our Kingdom, and other Places needful, and thereat, in Our Name and Authority, with all due Solemnities, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises. The which to do, We commit to you conjunctly and severally Our full Power by these Our Letters, delivering them by you duly execute and indorſed again to the Bearer. Given under Our Signet at Holy-rood-house the Twenty fourth Day of March, 1674. and of Our Reign the Twenty sixth Year.

Presbytery of Paisly's Sense of the Overtures. September 29. 1674. No. LXVIII.

MR. Hugh Peebles and Mr. William Eccles, are by the Brethren appointed Delegates to the Meeting of Correspondents at Edinburgh, and impowered and commisionate to declare their Agreement to the Overtures and Materials in the Sense underwritten, and in other new Cases to consult and report.

To the First Overture. As we heartily agree that young Men (as Providence offers Occasion of them) upon Trial had of their Piety, Orthodoxy, and Abilities, and being found qualified, be licentiate by Presbyteries as Probationers; so we earnestly wish a Succession of godly and able Presbyterian Ministers may be carefully seen unto in all due Ways. In order to which, it is our Judgment, 1st. That none be ordained ordained without a particular Charge, at least until the Lawfulness and Expediency of ordaining to an indefinite and ambulatory Ministry, be further considered by the Presbyteries, and allowed by the unanimous Consent of the general Correspondents. 2dly. That where a Congregation is vacant, and the People harmoniously calling an approved Man to be their Minister, and engage to maintain and adhere to him as their Minister, and he being willing to embrace the Charge, in that Case (no other manifest Obstruction appearing) he may and should, being tried and found fit, be ordained by the Presbytery of the Bounds: It being always provided, that the whole Business be carried on in an orderly Way, as formerly wont to be, agreeably to our Presbyterian Principles, except where Necessity compells to recede from any of the usual Circumstances.

To the Second. The first Branch thereof we approve, adding that we judge it fit that they and every other Association be fixed and distinct in their Members, as wont to be formerly; and for the Second Branch, as we agree, there be synodical Correspondence, so we think it expedient for the interim, that it be done by Two Delegates from each Presbytery, and Three or Four Times a Year at least, and that their Power be only consultative till further Settlement.

To the Third we agree, it being always provided, that in warning the People of the Evils of the Times, there be no Reflections upon the rest of their Brethren, and that no Association, without manifest and extraordinary Necessity, send Preachers to any People within the Bounds of another Association, without their Consent.

To the Fourth. It is agreed unto, understanding it of an Offer of publick Concern, and providing the Advertisement and Return of Judgments mentioned be done sine mora, at least within the Space of after the Offer.

To the Fifth agrees; yea, that Elders be restored in due Time to their Place in our respective Meetings;

To the Sixth we agree, adding that we think it fit also, that no Stranger take upon them to preach or baptize within the Bounds of any of our Associations, without the Allowance of one or more of the Ministers of the Bounds; nor is any Minister or Expectant to preach or baptize at all, (except occasionally) within the Bounds of a Presbyterian Minister's Parish, without his Consent, nor to go any where through the Country preaching, without the Direction of the Presbytery, whereof themselves are Members, to whose Regulation they should and must be subject herein.

To the Seventh agrees, providing it be not interpreted to oblige Ministers already settled elsewhere, to desert their present Station, and to return to their former Charge, without an open Door of Regrets, at the Judgment of their Brethren; and that upon the other Hand it allow not any to continue unfixed, who may have an open Door to the settled Exercise of their Ministry, at the Judgment of their Brethren.

Addenda.

I. That it be agreed upon and inviolably observed, that the Meeting of the general Correspondents be constitute of Two or Three Delegates from every Classis, and that they meet twice a Year or oftner, pro re nata.

II. That the Names of the Members of each Association be sent to the Meeting of synodical Correspondence, and the Constitution of the Classes be liable to be judged and determined by them.

III. That, for Harmony's sake, and the free Course of the Gospel, there be henceforth no preaching nor writing against one another, nor upon any Matter of common Concernment, without the Allowance at least of the respective Associations.

IV. That at the Ordination of Ministers, they be taken bound to adhere to, and maintain the Reformed Religion of the Church of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, as it is contained in the Scriptures, summarily held forth in our Confession of Faith and Catechisms, and sworn to in our Covenant.

Deliberanda.

I. What is to be accounted a vacant Parish, whereunto a Minister may be ordained.

II. That some Expedients be thought upon for calling the Meeting of general Correspondents pro re nata.

As to the Materials of the Address.

We heartily agree that there be an Address vigorously prosecuted, and that these or other Materials be put into Form; but if an Address cannot be unanimously accorded, that some way of publick Testimony and Warrant be thought upon, and brought as far length as can be, to be remitted to the several Societies to give their Thoughts upon, and to be brought to as speedy a Conclusion as may be.

Articles agreed on at the Meeting of Ministers, January 20. 1675. No. LXIX.

Delegates from the Presbytery of Air, Irwin, Paisly, Glasgow, and Hamilton, being met in a synodical Correspondence, to consider of Matters of their common Concernment, and taking the Overtures propounded by the Meeting at Edinburgh to Consideration, the unanimous Sense of the several Associations, after Collation, is found to be as followeth, which yet was remitted to the several Presbyteries, to be further considered.

As to the first Overture we are agreed, 1st. That Students of Theology, as Providence offers Occasion of them, be carefully seen to in their Breeding, and upon Trial had of their Piety, Orthodoxy, and Abilities, they being found qualified, be licentiate by Presbyteries as Probationers. 2dly. That a Succession of able and godly Presbyterian Ministers be carefully seen to in all due Ways, and by fit Means: In order to which, it is judged proper, 1. That none be ordained without a particular Charge, until the Matter of ordaining to an indefinite Ministry be further considered by the several Presbyteries. 2. That where a Congregation is vacant, and a sufficient Call had of an approved Man to be Minister there, he being willing to embrace the Charge, and the People engaging to maintain, subject themselves, and adhere to him as their Minister, he may and should, being tried and found fit, and no other manifest Obstruction appearing, be ordained by the Presbytery of the Bounds, or in case there be none, by the next adjacent Presbytery. 3dly. That where the Plurality or considerable Part of a Parish does desire a faithful Minister, they be also provided for according to Order, as aforesaid. 4thly. That at the Ordination of Ministers, they be taken bound to adhere to and maintain the Reformed Religion of the Church of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, as it is contained in the Scriptures, and summarily held forth in our Confessions of Faith and Catechisms, and sworn to in our Covenants.

To the Second. The first Branch thereof is allowed, adding, that we think it fit, that these and every other Association be fixed, and distinct in their Members; and for the Second Branch it is agreed there be synodical Correspondence, and thought fit that it be done for the interim by Two Delegates from each Presbytery, and thrice a Year or oftner, pro re nata, and that, till further Settlement, their Power be only consultative pro prima vice in Matters, till their Proposals be taken back to Presbyteries, and the Presbyteries Judgment or Commission to conclude them be had.

To the Third. It is agreed unto.

To the Fourth. It is still left under Consideration till next synodical Meeting.

To the Fifth agrees; yea, that Elders be restored in due Time to their Place in our respective Meetings;

To the Sixth agrees, adding, that we think it fit also that no Stranger take upon them to preach or baptize within the Bounds of any of our Associations, without the Allowance of one or more of the Ministers of the Bounds.

To the Seventh. It is conceived, that the Respect therein mentioned should for the Time reach so far, as that each Minister not already employed either in his own or some other vacant Charge, should repair to his own Charge, or as near thereunto as may be, or as he can attain tolerable Accommodation and Access to the Exercise of his Ministry; yet so as that, in regard of the great Necessity of desolate Places, and Paucity of honest Ministers, he may be ready to help other needful Places as he shall be particularly called, or have the Advice of the Meeting where he resides; and for making this further practicable, that such Ministers preaching elsewhere, deal with these Parishes to invite and encourage their own Ministers home, and deal with others to agree with some qualified Person for their Supply, with the Consent of the Presbytery.

Moreover, the Brethren Delegates thought fit, 1mo. It be agreed upon and inviolably observed, that the Meeting of general Correspondents be constitute of Two or Three Delegates from every Classis, and that they meet twice a Year or oftner, pro re nata. 2do. That the Names of the Members of each Association be sent to the Meeting of synodical Correspondence, and the Constitution of the Classes be liable to be judged and determined by them. 3mo. That, for Harmony's sake, and the free Course of the Gospel, there be henceforth no preaching nor writing against one another, nor upon any Matter of publick Concernment, without the Allowance at least of their respective Associations.

Further, it is recommended to the several Meetings to bring in the Names of the Expectants within their Bounds, to the synodical Meeting.

It is also thought fit, that Ministers that are not in Charge preach sometimes with their Brethren that be in Charge, upon their Invitation, and that these in Charge do sometimes, as Conveniency allows, preach in Congregations that want, upon the People's Invitation.

It is recommended to the Brethren of Glasgow to write to Mrs. Robert Law, Robert Mitchell, James Walkinshaw, and Thomas Melvil, to associate themselves together, to take Care of the Bounds of the Presbytery of Dumbarton.

Recommends it likewise to Mrs. Andrew Morton, Alexander Jamieson, and John Baird, to write a Letter to the Brethren of the East, for drawing on a Meeting of general Correspondence.

It is agreed, that the next general Meeting be at Strathaven, upon the First Tuesday of June.

Lastly, recommends it to Mr. Patrick Simpson to correspond with the Brethren of Argyle, to draw them to correspond with the general Meeting of other Synods.

Exceptions by a particular Minister. N^o. LXX.

AS to the Inscription, they are not the unanimous Sense of the several Associations, on the Overtures, and that because several Particulars in the former Paper were not so much as debated and concluded in some Associations, let be committed to their Delegates as their Sense. As 1mo. That about the Power of synodical Correspondents, that it shall be only consultative, and not authoritative. 2do. The Explication of the Respect mentioned in the Seventh Overture, which seems to restrict it to Ministers who have not accepted of the State's Indulgence.

As to the explicatory Addition on the Second Overture on the Second Branch, it seems not consonant to our Presbyterian Principles, 1st. Because there being a Constitution of Presbyteries by the Election of several Meetings of Ministers, uniting together for the Good of the Gospel, and acting authoritatively for the Good of the same, they are bound, by the Institution of Churches, to associate and meet in more general Assemblies, for the common Good of the Church within their Bounds, to exercise that same Authority to which all are bound to be subject; for it is one and the same Authority, whether it be more extended or restrained as to its Object. 2dly. The meeting of Ministers in ordinary, whether lesser or greater, for the Advantage of the Gospel in the Bounds where they exercise stately their Ministry, have that Authority flowing immediately from their Office, and the Institutions and Precepts of Christ in his Word; and it is not in the Power of Ministers or People by any Agreement to alter the same, their Conclusions agreeing with the Word, do bind all Ministers and Professors to Obedience, so that this Explanation looks not agreeable to Matthew 18. Prudentials are not to be preferred to Commands and Institutions.

Upon

Upon the Agreement anent the Fifth Overture, quaritur, What is meant by restoring of Elders in due Time, supposing as it it were not now?

Upon the Agreement on the Sixth Overture, quaritur, What is understood by stranger Ministers, whether those without this Church, or without the Bounds of the respective Associations, if not fixed Members thereof; the Explanation allowed as to the former, not as to the latter?

Concerning the Explanation of the Seventh Overture, quaritur, Who are understood by Ministers employed in their own, or other Charges, whether these that have accepted the State's Indulgence?

Presbytery of Paisly's Sense of the Articles. N^o. LXXI.

THE Brethren agree to what is overtured in reference to the first Overture, except the Third Article thereof, which is referred to further Consideration; also they think fit, that instead of the Word Meetings in the First Article, be put the Word Presbyteries. What is said to the Second Branch of the Second Overture, is referred to further Consideration.

November 18. 1675.

The Brethren resuming the Consideration of the Overtures at Glasgow agreed further, as follows.

That as to the Third Article their Judgment is, that in this extraordinary Case of the Church, such Congregations as want a godly Presbyterian Minister, where they or a considerable Part of them do desire it, Pains be taken to provide such an one among them, whether an actual Minister that hath not Access to his own Charge, or an Expectant, as aforesaid, in the Sense of the synodical Correspondents on the First Overture.

Further, it is referred to the Consideration of the synodical Correspondents, what is to be done for Supply of Congregations, whose Minister is indulged to preach in another Congregation than their own, and that Congregation is desolate, or have only a Conformist Incumbent that they do not submit unto; also what is to be done by and for Congregations, whose Ministers being by the People and their Brethren desired, do not come to supply them.

As to the Second Branch of the Second Overture, it is our Mind that the Meeting of synodical Correspondents have Power to conclude and decide authoritatively, in Things within their own Bounds; only that any new Case, or of common Concernment, that the several Meetings have not had their Thoughts of, be referred back to their Consideration, that, according to the more general Mind of the Meetings, Things may be the more satisfyingly and unanimously determined in the next synodical Meeting, and submitted to by all accordingly.

What is said upon the Sixth Overture is referred to further Explication, if it extend to occasional preaching of known Ministers among People that have not a settled Presbyterian Minister, or if it be not also with a Reservation of the occasional Supply of such Vacancies on the Desire of the People, by Brethren of our own Presbyteries or Synod.

Unto the First Overture it is added, that we humbly conceive, that where a Congregation desireth to be supplied or settled with a godly Minister, and there are found Difficulties in the Case by the Presbytery of the Bounds, it should be referred to the Meeting of synodical Correspondents; which, if it be interrupted or delayed, or be not to meet so soon as the Case requires, the Presbytery may call some next neighbour Presbytery to joyn with them for their Assistance. (Glasgow Brethren add, that upon a Reference made by the Presbytery of the Bounds to the next adjacent Presbytery, they may go about the same.)

It is referred to the Correspondents what way is to be taken with the Brethren, who in the Bounds of a Presbytery do not associate, and will not keep Meetings with them.

Council's Act for a Fast, July 15. 1674. N^o. LXXII.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, to all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects whom it concerns, Greeting: Forasmuch as the almighty God, in his most wise and righteous Providence, after the sinful Abuse of his most signal Mercies of the blessed Gospel, of Our own and our Subjects wonderful Deliverance from the Yoke of Usurpation and Bondage, by the almost miraculous Restoration of Us to the Exercise of Our Government, and of the long and merciful Continuance of our despised Peace and Plenty, doth, by his Warnings and Judgments incumbent and impendent, manifestly discover his Anger and Displeasure against the grievous Sins of this Kingdom; and particularly by the sad and pinching Dearth, whereby many indigent Persons and Families are reduced to a starving Condition, and by the long and threatening Drought, the Lord, in his righteous Judgment, having so long bound up the Clouds, making the Heavens Brass, and the Earth Iron, thereby threatening Our Subjects of this Kingdom with the breaking of the Staff of their Bread, and with the dreadful Plague of Famine; which Dispensation doth with a loud Voice call upon all Ranks of People for speedy and true Repentance, and the national Expression hereof by deep Mourning and solemn Fasting and Humiliation.

Therefore We, with Advice and Consent of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do ordain a Day of publick and solemn Fasting and Humiliation, to be kept and observed by all the People of this Kingdom, in the several Parishes thereof, strictly commanding and requiring them upon that Day, to cease from all the Works of their ordinary Callings, and to repair to their respective Parish-churches, and there make solemn Confession of their Sins, and implore the divine Mercy for the Land, by praying, mourning, fasting, and such other Devotions, as are requisite and usual upon such Days of publick Humiliation: And more particularly, humbly to confess and mourn for the great Neglect and Contempt of, and Disobedience to the blessed Gospel, and the Ordinances thereof, and the great and lamentable Increase and Prevalency of Atheism, Profaneness, and Irreligion, which is thereby occasioned, and for the sinful undervaluing of the great Blessing of Peace, so long enjoyed by Our Subjects under Our Government. By all which, and many other crying Sins, the Lord's Jealousie and Anger are kindled, and his Hand is stretched out against this Kingdom, threatening the Destruction of the Fruits of the Ground, the necessary Provision for the Life of Man and Beast, that by serious Mourning for, and sincere and hearty Turning from these provoking Sins, the Lord may graciously pardon them, and repent him of the Evil seemingly determined by him, and most righteously deserved by us, and may open the Clouds and grant the latter Rain in its due Season and Measure, reserving for us the appointed Weeks of the Harvest. And for this End and Purpose, We, with Advice foresaid, do seriously recommend to, and require the Archbishops and Bishops, to be careful that this Fast be duly observed by the Ministers in their respective Dioceses, as follows, to the Archbishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow, the Bishops of Edinburgh, Dunkeld, Brechin, and Dunblain, to cause it to be intimated in the several Parish-kirks of their Dioceses, upon Sunday the Twenty fifth, and observed on Wednesday the Twenty eighth of July Instant; and the remanent Bishops, whose Dioceses are more remote, to cause it to be intimated on Sunday the First of August, and to be observed the Fourth of August next. And as to such Ministers, who, by reason of their Distance from Edinburgh, cannot be so soon advertised, that they celebrate this Fast upon the next convenient Wednesday thereafter.

Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Fifteenth Day of July, and of Our Reign the Twenty seventh Year, One thousand six hundred and seventy five Years.

State of my Lord Cardross's Process, 1675. N^o. LXXIII. B.

There being a Pursuit at the Lord Advocate's Instance, against the Lord Cardross and his Lady, before his Majesty's Privy Council, wherein he was convened for keeping of Conventicles in his House, he being present at them in the Months of May, June and July, One thousand six hundred threecore fourteen Years, and since, and that he was accessory to the deforcing of the Party that apprehended Mr. John King, by sending out his Servants, and raising of his Tenants to go and rescue him; and that my Lord did harbour Mr. John King, since his Denunciation, in his House for several Months, and did dissuade orthodox Ministers to officiate under the Bishops, and perswaded them to leave their Charges.

The Lord Cardross having compeared, made his Defences against the Libel, that in so far as concerned his Lady, by no Law he could be obliged to a violent restraining of her, since that might tend to the impairing of conjugal Affection betwixt Husband and Wife; neither by any Law, divine or humane, is the Husband punishable for the Misdemeanour of the Wife, either in his Person or Goods; for it is contrary to the Nature of penal Laws, to tend otherwise than against the Transgressors; and whatever in the late Acts of Parliament against Conventicles might strike against the Husband, being himself free upon account of his Wife, Children or Servants Guilt, can never be looked upon but as a Law of Terror to be a Stop and Hindrance, that those of a Family should not differ from the Order of the Master.

And as to his Tenants, it was answered, That most of them having Leases, and not every Term removing, they might well be, and were answerable and Law-biding for themselves; nor can the not imposing of a Bond, appointed only by the Council to be taken by the Tenants, inforce against my Lord, any greater Guilt than against the whole Kingdom, since by an inevitable Choice of forbearing that, or casting their Lands absolutely waste, all were forced to abstain from pressing of it.

As to the Deforcement it was answered, That the running out of his Servants and Tenants to gaze at a Tumult, which is not to be prevented by any Care, though the Thing were expected, as it was here in this Case by none, cannot infer any Accession, tho' the Deforcement were granted: But in this Case, where the Party of Soldiers which apprehended Mr. John King, were not distinguishable from Robbers or Murderers, being Strangers in that Place of the Country, without their Livery-coats, whereby they ought to be distinguished, without their Muskets or Pikes, the Badges of Soldiers, having only hunting Staves and Dogs, and so assaulting a Person without Production of any Order, and that among a Rabble of rude Commons, who needed all the former Requisites, especially in that Part of the Country, to have made them known to them; it cannot therefore be sustained a Deforcement, and infer the high Punishment thereof, more than the stopping of an alledged Messenger, neither carrying Badge, nor producing Letters, will infer that Guilt. Which Defences, and all others that were proposed, were repelled, and the Libel admitted to Probation by Witnesses, except as to that Part of it anent the dissuading of the Ministers to officiate under Bishops, and perswading them to leave their Charges, which was referred to my Lord's Oath.

The managing of this Probation being referred to the Earl of Murray, the Lord Ross and Haltoun, with some others, to take Trial and examine the Witnesses anent the Libel; which was performed after this Manner.

First. The Pursuer's Interrogatories to the Witnesses, which ought only to have been what was contained in the Libel, was refused to be given up to my Lord Cardross, as is the Custom, to be considered; so that those Lords might examine the Witnesses upon the haill Interrogatories given up by the Pursuer, tho' they had been both irrelevant, extrinsick, and impertinent to the Libel.

Secondly. There being above an Hundred and forty Witnesses summoned, and above a Hundred of them compearing before the Council, yet the Committee did not proceed according to the Roll of those that were present, but on the contrary, did call Fourcore of the Witnesses who were not present, and durst not compear, and first interrogate them, called James Jack and his Son John, Tenants to the Earl of Murray; against which my Lord Cardross complained by a Bill to the Council, and declared that the same was illegal, to examine Witnesses that were not received in Presence of the Council, and against whom he had competent Objections, which ought to cast any Witnesses, and reprobate their Testimony in Law; such as that the Person was infamous many Years, at the King's Horn, not worth the King's Unlaw, as a Diver and and bankrupt Person, and had a cessio bonorum; and for proving hereof did produce the Decree bearing the same, which Objections were never formerly repelled in any Judicatory in Scotland; yet notwithstanding thereof, the Council receives him on the Earl of Albany's suggestion that he had a Bond of his in his Custody, whereupon my Lord Cardross, by a new Bill, complained, shewing, That either that Bond was granted before his cessio bonorum, in which Case it behoved to be disposed to his Creditors, or else he is perjured, in respect he swears that he has no more Goods nor what he disposes to them; or else it was after his cessio bonorum, and in that Case it belonged to his Creditors, in regard he had sworn that he should dispose, whatever he should acquire, to them, and in either of these Cases he could not be a Witness, being a perjured bankrupt Person, and not worth the King's Unlaw; notwithstanding of all which he was received, some alledging it was the casting of the Process to reject him.

Thirdly. It was objected against his Son, That he being not Major, but a Boy, and in his Father's House and Service, who being a Dyer, could not provide his Son of any Thing, neither as Father or Master, so that he could not be worth the King's Unlaw, and therefore by the Act of Parliament he could not be received. This was likewise repelled, and the Boy admitted.

Fourthly. It was objected against the Soldiers, That they could not be accepted as Witnesses, because they were Informers, or rather Parties, being Actors themselves, and their Persons prejudged; and by the Law no Informers can be Witnesses, because they have betrayed their Testimony thereby.

It was offered also to be proven by Witnesses beyond all Exception, that their Corporal did suborn them to depone such and such Things, saying, They would be shamed and affronted if they did not swear what he and they had formerly said at random, and that they answered they would depone in Matter and Manner as he should desire; notwithstanding of which two most relevant Objections they were likewise received.

By thir Witnesses, against whom these most relevant Objections are, there is proven that the Lady Cardross was present at the House of Cardross, when the then Chaplain prayed and expounded Scripture, and that my Lord Cardross was then at home, but not present thereat; but it is not proven that there were more Persons at that Meeting as makes a Conventicle.

Secondly. It is alledged proven, That she was at a Meeting in a Tenant's House of her own, and because there were Two or Three Persons standing at the Door, therefore it is designed a Field-conventicle, altho' it was not proven that these in the House exceeded the Number allowed by the Act of Parliament; so that it could hardly be called an House-conventicle, much less a Field one: And tho' Mr. John King was apprehended at the Boat house of Cardross, where he had not stayed a Quarter of an Hour, but only accidentally went in, in his passing that Way, which was occasioned by its being a common Passage over the Forth; and tho' it cannot infer my Lord Cardross his resetting him upon his Ground, especially seeing my Lord punished the Possessor of the House, by ejecting him immediately from his Tenement.

And tho' it cannot be proven that my Lord Cardross's Servants were at the rescuing of Mr. John King, yet because his Nurse and Two Women went to the Gate to gaze at his apprehending, for which my Lord caused his Lady turn them out of her Service; and tho' the Rescue was Three Miles from the House of Cardross, yet from these, my Lord's resetting of him, and Accession to the Rescue, is concluded, tho' it was offered to be proven that my Lord himself and his Men Servants were all at home, and did not go at all from the House; and my Lord declared to some Gentlemen that were then with him, that he thought the Party being so near his House would call for his Assistance, as is the Custom in the like Cases; which, if they had done, he would have caused the Laird of Leny, who was at Cardross House at the Time with some of his Servants and Tenants, to have convoyed the Prisoner to Stirling; and when this was deponed by some Gentlemen who were present that Day with my Lord, it was alledged by the Committee, that they were my Lord's Friends, and that Part of their Depositions were not written; and yet from my Lord's Two Womens going out to gaze, who were upon that account put out of his Service, it is concluded that my Lord was accessory to the Rescue.

As for the perswading these Two Ministers to leave their Charges, my Lord produced Two Letters under the Ministers Hand, prior in Date to the Time they alledged he was dissuading them from Episcopacy, directed to other Persons, by which it is evident they were either really or feignedly resolved to give over leaving under Bishops; so that it is apparent that it was not my Lord's Persuasion, but their own Inclination, and referred to their Oath if ever he perswaded them to any such Thing. The Council would not take Notice of the Letters, neither would they allow the Ministers to depone, tho' my Lord Cardross referred it to their Oath, as is ordinary in the like Cases, but ordained my Lord to give his Oath, which my Lord refusing to do, being now out of Memory, after so long a Time, to depone upon an accidental Discourse that might have occasionally fallen in: The Council held him as confessing the same, which, tho' it had been true, it not being contrary to any statute Law, it was supposed to be no Ground of imprisoning and fining.

By all the Depositions, there is not only nothing proven against my Lord, that he ever was present at any Conventicles himself, or that he was in the least accessory to the resetting or rescuing of Mr. King, or that he was ever harboured in his House to his Knowledge, only that Dyer and the Boy his Son James, and John Jucks depone, That in Winter last when my Lord dwelt at Kirkhill House with his whole Family, which is about Thirty Miles from Cardross House, Mr. King went and stayed with the Man that had the Keys and keeping of Cardross House, who was only in the Office-houses; but none depones nor can say my Lord or his Lady knew or had any Accession to his being there, but on the contrary, they deponed, tho' it was not insert in the Depositions, That when my Lord was removing his Family in the Beginning of the last Summer from Kirkhill to Cardross, Mr. King fled from those Fields, which is a clear Indent he had no Permission, much less an Order from my Lord for his staying there, otherwise he had not quit that Part of the Country at the Report of his coming; but also little or nothing material is proven against his Lady, as may appear by what has been said, and yet on the same bare Probations, against which my Lord has so much to say in Law, the Council has fined him in Eleven hundred Twelve Pounds Ten Shillings Stirling, to be paid to the Cash-keeper for his Majesty's Use, and that besides imprisoning his Person in the Castle of Edinburgh during his Majesty's Pleasure. The Grounds of which Sentence are here set down.

The Council has likewise appointed a Garison at the House of Cardross, where my Lord and his Family were residing, which was formerly spoiled by a Ten Years Garison under the Usurper, and was newly repaired at a Charge, and that in such a Form as is most unfit for Strength, or for lodging Soldiers, without detaching defacing and altogether marring the Reparation ; and if there be a Necessity for a Garison in that Part of the Country, the King has the Castle of Down within Four or Five Miles of Cardross, which is his own, and is in all respects fitter for a Garison than any Place else in these Fields, neither can it be prejudged by the Soldiers ; also none of a long Time have resided in it, tho' it be in good enough Repair for a Garison. All which was represented by the Council ; notwithstanding whereof they would not alter their Commands, but order the Soldiers to march immediately to the House of Cardross.

Burnet's Examination and Declaration. N^o. LXXIV.

THE Doctor attending according to the Order of the House, was called in, and having answered to the several Questions proposed to him by the Master Speaker, and the House not being satisfied with the Answer, he was called in again to give his last Answer, which he having done, and being withdrawn, and the House not being yet fully satisfied with his Answer, he was again called in to explain himself, and being withdrawn, some Heads of his Testimony, to avoid Mistakes, were drawn in Writ, and being again called, and the same read to him, and having amended it in some Particulars at the Bar of this House, the same is as follows, viz.

That coming into England out of Scotland, the First Saturday of September 1673. he went to visit the Duke of Lawderdale in his Lodgings in Whitehall, where the Duke and he discoursed of the Affairs of England and Scotland, and particularly of the Proceedings of Parliament concerning the Declaration, for suspending penal Laws in Matters Ecclesiastical ; and being afterwards asked, Whether, if Scotland being called to assist the King, they would assist him or not? He answered, He thought they would not ; but the Duke replied, He believed they would, and that his coming into England, would bring a great many. That the Duke asking him of the Affairs of Scotland, he answered, The People in Scotland that were at such a Distance could not imagine what to think of the King's Speech and Declaration ; whereunto the Duke replied, Hinc illa lachryma, and that all had forsaken the King but himself and the Lord Clifford.

Commons Address against Lawderdale, April 27. 1675. N^o. LXXV.

WE your Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons in the present Parliament assembled, do with Humility and Faithfulness acknowledge your Majesty's Care for the Safety of your People, in calling us together at this Time, to consult of the best Means for the Preservation of our Religion and Properties, though we have great Cause to rest assured of the Continuance of your Majesty's Disposition towards us, yet we find, upon serious Examination of the State of this Kingdom, that there are great Jealousies risen, that some Persons of great Employment under your Majesty, have fomented Designs contrary to the Interest both of your Majesty and of your People, intending to deprive us of our ancient Rights and Liberties, that thereby they might easily introduce the Popish Religion, and an arbitrary Form of Government over us, to the Ruin and Destruction of the whole Kingdom. Amongst these who are presently employed under your Majesty, we have just Cause to accuse, for a Promoter of such Designs, the Duke of Lawderdale lately created Earl of Guilford, because we have heard it testified in our House by several of our own Members, that in the hearing, before the Council, of the Case of Mr. Whaley, who had committed Mr. James contrary to your Majesty's Declaration of the 15th of March 1671. he, the said Duke of Lawderdale, did openly affirm in the Presence of your Majesty sitting in Council, and before divers of your Subjects attending there, That your Majesty's Edicts ought to be obeyed, for your Edicts are equal with Laws, and ought to be obeyed in the first Place, thereby, as much as in him lay, justifying the said Declaration, and the Proceedings thereupon, and declaring his Inclinations to arbitrary Councils, in Terror of your good People. And we are further confirmed in this Opinion by late Acts of Parliament, of a very strange and dangerous Nature, which we have observed amongst the printed Statutes of your Kingdom of Scotland, the first whereof was in the Third Session of the First Parliament held there under your Majesty, Cap. 25. and the other in your Majesty's Second Parliament, Cap. 2. the like whereof was never past since the Union of the Two Kingdoms, and are directly contrary to the Intention of an Act past here in the Fourth Year of the Reign of King James, for the utter Abolition of all Memory of Hostility, and the Dependencies thereof between England and Scotland, and for the repressing of the Occasion of Discords and Disorders in Time to come, and of a like Act past about the same Time in the Kingdom of Scotland. By Force of which said late Acts, there is a Militia settled in that Kingdom of Twenty thousand Foot and Two thousand Horse, who are obliged to be in a Readiness to march into any Part of this Kingdom, for any Service wherein your Majesty's Honour, Authority, and Greatness may be concerned, and are to obey such Orders and Directions, as they shall from Time to Time receive from the Privy Council there. By Colour of which general Words, we conceive this Realm may be liable to be invaded under any Pretence whatsoever ; and this hath been done, as we apprehend, principally by the Procurement of the said Duke of Lawderdale, he having all the Time of these Transactions been principal Secretary of the said Kingdom, and chiefly intrusted with the Administration of Affairs of State there, and himself Commissioner for holding the Parliament at the Time of passing the latter of the said Acts, whereby the providing of the said Horse and Foot is effectually imposed upon the said Kingdom, and that extraordinary Power vested in the Privy Council there ; and we conceive we have just Reason to apprehend the ill Consequences of so great and unusual a Power, especially when the Affairs of that Kingdom are managed by the said Duke, who hath manifested himself a Person of such pernicious Principles. We do therefore in all Humility implore your sacred Majesty jeſty, conſidering how univerſal a Fame and Clamour of the ſaid Miſdemeanours runneth openly throughout this Realm, that for the Eale of the Hearts of your People who are poſſeſſed with extraordinary Griet and Sorrow, to ſee your Maſteſty thus abuſed, and the Kingdom endangered, Your Maſteſty would graciously be pleaſed to remove the ſaid Duke of Lawderdale from all his Employments, and from your Maſteſty's Preſence and Council for ever, as being a Perſon obnoxious and dangerous to the Government.

King's Answer, May 7. 1675. No. LXXVI.

C H A R L E S R.

HIS Maſteſty has conſidered of the Addreſs againſt the Duke of Lawderdale, and the Reaſons accompanying it. As to the Acts of Parliament mentioned to have been paſt in Scotland, his Maſteſty obſerves the firſt of thoſe Acts was in the Year 1663. which was long before the Duke of Lawderdale was his Maſteſty's Commiſſioner in that Kingdom, the latter was in purſuance of the former: As to the Words by the Time of Mr. Whaley's Cauſe, his Maſteſty perceives, that if they had been ſpoken they muſt been ſpoken before the laſt Act of general Pardon; and his Maſteſty being ſenſible how great Satisfaction and Security the inviolable Preſervation of the former Act of Indemnity and Oblivion has been to all his Subjects, cannot but apprehend the dangerous Conſequences in enquiring into any Thing that hath been pardoned by an Act of general Pardon, leſt the Example of that might give Men Cauſe to fear their Security under the Act of Oblivion. Given at the Court of Whitehall the 7th Day of May 1675.

The ſame being read, and a Debate riſing thereupon, the further Debate adjourned while Tueſday Morning next.

Proclamation againſt Conventicles, &c. March 1. 1676. LXXVII.

CH A R L E S, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; To Macers, or Meſſengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and ſeverally, ſpecially conſtitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as by many renewed Acts of Parliament, and former Proclamations, with Advice of Our Privy Council, we have maniſteſted Our religious and princely Care and Zeal for the Interests of the Proteſtant reformed Religion, and of the Church: And conſidering, how much it imports the Glory of almighty God, as well as the Interest and Service of Our Crown, that all due Obedience be paid to ſuch Laws, as provide for the ſecuring of the ſame, by Unity in Worſhip, and by procuring of all due Reverence to Our Arch-biſhops and Biſhops, and the other ſubordinate Officers of the Church; and withal, the ſad and ſenſible Decays Religion hath of late ſuffered, and the great and dangerous Increase of Prophaneneſs, through the moſt unreaſonable and ſchiſmatical Separation of many, from the publick and eſta bliſhed Worſhip, and the frequent and open Conventicles both in Houſes and Fields, by ſuch as thereby diſcover their Diſaffection to the eſta bliſhed Religion, and their undutiful Averſion to Our Authority and Government, whereby the Peace of the Kingdom is endangered, and the Church divided, and, under Pretence of Scruple, Faction advanced. And We having Cauſe to apprehend, that theſe insolent Diſorders have ſlowed from their abuſing of Our Royal Clemency and Indulgence, and from the ſlow, remiſs and unſteady Execution of Our good and wholeſom Laws; and being deſirous, that all Our good Subjects may take Notice, how ſerious and reſolute We are to aſſert and maintain the true Religion, and the Unity and eſta bliſhed Order of the Church; do, with Advice of Our Privy Council, require and command all Our Officers, and others intruſted for that Effect, to put the Laws and Proclamations relating to the Church, to due and vigorous Execution, both againſt Papists, and all other ſchiſmatical Diſſenters and Diſturbers of the Peace thereof. And further, We do particularly require the Magiſtrates of the ſeveral Burghs, to ſeize upon any Perſons that are, or hereafter ſhall be intercommuned, and remove out of their ſeveral Towns and Juridiſdictions, the Families of ſuch as are intercommuned, or declared Fugitives or Rebels, and all ſuch Preachers, as with their Families do not attend the publick Worſhip, and that betwixt and the firſt Day of June next: And We do require all Noblemen, Gentlemen, and all other Subjects without Burgh, and all Magiſtrates and other Perſons within Burgh, that they do not intercommune, harbour, nor relieve any of the Perſons who are, or ſhall be intercommuned, under the Pains due to Intercommuners by Law; and declare, that if any Perſon ſhall diſcover any Heritor, Liſerenter, or other Perſon without Burgh, or any Magiſtrate, or other Inhabitants within Burgh, who ſhall intercommune, harbour, or relieve any to intercommuned, ſhall have for ſuch Diſcovery made, the Sum of Five hundred Merks, inſtantly paid to them out of Our Treasury. And where- as, by the Seventeenth Act of the Third Seſſion of Our Second Parliament, all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Lords of Regalities, and Magiſtrates of Burghs, are obliged to give an Account of their Diligence, in putting the Acts relating to Conventicles and Separation, into due Execution, to Our Privy Council yearly, on the Firſt Thuſday of July, under the Pain of Five hundred Merks for each Year's Failie: We declare, that We will call them to an Account of their Diligence, and puniſh their Negligence accordingly: And further, We declare, That the Magiſtrates of all Royal Burghs, wherein any Conventicles ſhall be here- after kept, ſhall be fined in the Sum of Five hundred Merks for each Conventicle, and that by and attour any other Fine to be impoſed by Our Privy Council upon them, for which, by Act of Parliament, they are to have Relief from the Perſons preſent at the ſaid Conventicle; and that Five hundred Merks ſhall be the least Sum to be exacted from any Burgh for every Conventicle, and which shall be augmented on the Burghs more considerable: for which Sum they are to have no Relief, either from the common Good of the Town, nor from the Persons tending there Conventicles. And whereas, by Our former Proclamation, of the Date the Last Day of May, One thousand six hundred and sixty nine, all Heritors, in whose Lands any Conventicles are kept, are made to the Fines, Pains, and Penalties therein contained: We hereby declare, that in like Manner, such Heritors or Homers, within Burghs of Royalty, Regality, or Barony, in whose Houses any Conventicles shall be kept after the first Day of June next, shall be fined in a whole Year's Rent of the said Tenement, where the Conventicle shall be kept, and whereof the Landlord shall have no Relief from the Tenant or Possessor, and this, inter alia, for every Conventicle kept therein: And further, for preventing of all disorderly Marriages and Baptisms, We do hereby declare, That We will take Care that the Thirty fourth Act of the first Session of Our first Parliament; and the Sixth Act of the Second Session of Our second Parliament, be put into due Execution against the Contraveners thereof; and, for the Encouragement of those who shall declare or inform, a proportionable Part of the Fines of these who shall be found guilty, shall be granted and allowed to them for their Service therein. And whereas, by the Fourth Act of the Second Session of Our first Parliament, it is statute, That none be allowed to teach any Schools, or be Pedagogues to Children of Persons of Quality, or Chaplains in any Family, without a Licence from the respective Ordinaries, We do hereby require and command, that none hereafter entertain any Schoolmaster, Pedagogue, or Chaplain, or Person for Performance of Family-worship, who have no such Licence under the Hands of the respective Bishops; and that under the Penalty of Three thousand Merks to be exacted from each Nobleman, and Twelve hundred Merks from each Gentleman, and six hundred Merks from a Burgess, or any other Subject, inter alia, as they shall be found guilty herein. And that Our Royal Pleasure in the Premises may be made publick and known, OUR WILL IS, and We charge you strictly and command, that incontinent, thir Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and remanent Head-burghs of the Shires of this Kingdom, and other Places needful, and thereat, in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication of Our Royal Pleasure in the Premises, that all Our Subjects may have due and timely Notice thereof, and give Obedience thereto, according to Justice, as ye will answer to Us thereupon. The which to do, We commit to you, conjunctly and severally, Our full Power by thir Our Letters, delivering them by you duly execute, and indorsed again to the Bearer. Given under Our Signet, at Edinburgh the first Day of March, 1676. and of Our Reign the Twenty eighth Year.

Brac's Examination, January 29. 1677. N^o. LXXVIII.

Lord Haltoun interrogates, What Man of Trade are you? Answer. Your Lordship would explain what you mean by a Trade. Question. Are you an Heritor? A. If that be the Thing you mean by a Trade, I am. Q. Where lie your Lands? A. In Ross. Q. Are you a Preacher? A. Though by my not acknowledging this, I might put your Lordship to the Trouble of proving it, yet I will give you a clear Evidence of my Ingenuity, by acknowledging freely that I do preach, and though I be of an Extract not altogether despicable, yet I glory more in that, and in serving God in the Gospel of his Son, than in any other Thing I pretend to. Q. Are you in Orders? A. As to what concerns my own Person, your Lordship sees I have been very free in acknowledging what I knew made me culpable by your Law, and that without being circumvented, but forbearing the Hazard since, I likewise acknowledge I preach without any Authority from the Bishop; but as to what concerns others, or may serve to bring them on the Stage, your Lordship will excuse me from saying any Thing in it. Q. If ye glory so much in your Ministry, why do not ye avow it? why do ye not own your Principles? that is not Ingenuity at all. A. I request your Lordship to have no Apprehension of me but as one most ingenuous: But I have owned my Ministry; and any other Principles you pose me on, ye shall find me very free to give your Lordship an Account of them, but why I could not directly answer that Question, I have given your Lordship a Reason already. Bishop. This Gentleman seems not at all to be ingenuous with us, possibly he would be more if he knew the State he stands in, which is not ordinary, for he is of most pernicious Principles, destructive to all Kind of Government, and withal is very active in spreading these, so as there is scarce a Conventicle I hear of, but it is still Mr. Frazer who is the Preacher, and likewise he is at least given out to be a Man of Parts and Learning, and therefore the more to be taken Notice of, since Parts that Way improven are most dangerous. A. I know no pernicious Principles I hold, such as you mean may concern either Church-government or Loyalty; as to the first, I freely acknowledge, as it is now established, I have a very great Aversion from it; as to my Loyalty I would not care much, though you all saw what were in my Heart anent it; as to my spreading of them, I have been preaching Christ, and exhorting People to mend their Ways and repent, and if the doing of that be pernicious, I confess my self guilty of it. Bishop. The greatest Heretick will say so. A. It is not saying, but doing. Bishop. These are fine Principles; you hold that all that are not of your Judgment it is lawful to cut them off. A. If you can produce any famous faithful Witness (false you may) that will say that ever I maintained any such Doctrine, I am content to die presently. Bishop. But you hold that the People may, whenever they think themselves wronged, make a Pretence of Religion, and rise up against the Magistrate. A. I have read pro and contra on that Subject, both Loyalists and Common-wealths Men, and among all that ever I read or heard of, I never knew any that held that Opinion, (upon which Haltoun and some others insisted) and that which we hold concerning that, is nothing but what may be drawn from the Positions of the greatest Loyalists themselves; but that is a ticklish Point, and I desire not to dive in it at this Time. Haltoun. Did you ever preach in the Fields? A. Your Lordship knows that that, according to your Law, is criminal, and I am not obliged to be my own Accuser. It is enough that my Throat be cut, tho' I do it not with my own Hands; if you mind to stage me on that, bring my Accusers, and then proceed as your Lordship thinks fit. Bishop. Tho' these Shifts be taken from others, yet they must not, Sir, be taken so from a Man of Parts. Dundonald. Sir, Ye would gain the Goodwill of the Committee, by being ingenuous and free; I assure you none of us has any ill Will at you, or intend to take any Advantage of you, or of any of your Party, from any Thing you say. A. I thank your Lordship. Haltoun. Did you ever preach at Linlithgow? A. It may be I have. Bishop. Yes, Sir, you have, and in the Fields there too, and that in great Conventicles. A. I desire that may be proven. Haltoun. You seem to be a Wolf, and not one come in at the Door, but at the Window. A. If I had not said I had been in Orders, your Lordship's Consequence had been good, but when I said, I could not directly answer that Question, your Lordship cannot argue from the Negative, as if I had said it. Haltoun. But you are intercommuned. A. When I was cited I was Sixscore Miles from the Place where my Citation was given, so that it was not possible for me to answer it, and it was upon pretended Contumacy, in not appearing on this Citation, that I was intercommuned. Haltoun. But why did you not move in it then? A. Since I could not move in it, for I had none to do for me, my being intercommuned putting me in such a Condition, that they who would do for me were afraid to converse with me, or so much as to take a Petition out of my Hand. Haltoun. Did you ever converse with Mr Forrester? A. It may be. Bishop. Yes, Sir, you have, and ye had still, since he went to the Basis Correspondence by Letters, and you were his Correspondent. A. My Lord Haltoun, since the Bishop says so, I declare ingenuously I never had a Line from Mr. Forrester, yea, nor ever so much as changed a Word with him. Haltoun. You seem to be of the Quakers Principles, for tho' ye give us our due Titles, yet my Lord St. Andrews, whom his Majesty is pleased to honour, ye give him not so much as he gives you, he gives you Sir, and ye give him nothing at all, that is no Civility. A. I came not here to justify my good Breeding, I confess I am a rude Man, but for that I have no Clearness.

Council's Proclamation, with the Tenor of the Bond, August 2. 1677. No. LXXIX.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To Our Lyon King at Arms, or his Brethren, Masters of Council, Pursewards, Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as, notwithstanding of the many good Acts and Laws made in Our Parliaments and Privy Council, for securing the Protestant Religion, the Order and Unity of the Church, and the Tranquillity and Peace of the Kingdom, many do obstinately continue, through Ignorance, Prejudice, or Disaffection, to withdraw from the publick Worship, and to frequent House and Field-conventicles, which we have so often declared to be the Nurseries of Schism, and Rendezvous of Rebellion, tending to debauch Our Subjects from that Reverence due to Religion, and that Obedience they owe to Our Authority; and considering, that these Offenders take Encouragement from their supposing a Remission in the due and vigorous Execution of Our good and wholesome Laws and Acts provided against them: Therefore We, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, in pursuance of Our late Proclamation dated the Eighth Day of June, 1674. Years, commanding all Heritors and Landlords, Liferenters, to require their Rentallers and Tenants to subscribe the Bond hereto subjoynd, and of the Seventh Act of the Second Session of Our Second Parliament, whereby all Our Subjects were discharged to withdraw from the established Meetings of divine Worship, declaring that every Person who should absent themselves without a reasonable Cause, to be allowed or disallowed by the Judges and Magistrates thereunto, should, if they had any Land in Heritage, Liferent, or proper Wadset, pay the Fifth Part of his or her valued yearly Rent, every Tenant Six Pounds, every Cottar or Servant Forty Shillings; as also of the Sixth Act of the same Parliament, all Our Subjects prohibited to cause baptize their Children by any save their own Parish Minister, or such as are authorized by the established Government of the Church, &c. declaring that the Parent Offender should pay the Fourth Part of his valued Rent, if an Heritor, Liferenter, or proper Wadsetters, Fifty Pounds if a Tenant, Twenty Pounds if a Cottar, half a Year's Fee if a Servant; as also of the 34th Act of the First Session of Our First Parliament, discharging all Our Subjects to procure themselves to be married by Jesuits, Priests, deposed or suspended Ministers, or any others not authorized by Law; each Nobleman under the Penalty of One thousand Pounds, each Baron One thousand Merks, each Gentleman and Burgher Five hundred Pounds, and each other Person of an Hundred Merks Scots; and in pursuance of the other Laws and Acts thereunto provided, do, with Advice foresaid, hereby require and command all Masters of Families, to cause their Chamberlains, Grievs, Domesticks, Servants, and others entertained by them, give due and exact Obedience to the foresaid Acts, and, in case of their Disobedience, to remove them out of their Service, under the Pains and Penalties contained in the said Acts. Likeas, We strictly command and require all Heritors, Wadsetters, Liferenters, and Landlords, to require their Rentallers and Tenants to subscribe the Bond hereunto subjoynd, authorizing them hereby to raise Letters to charge them for that Effect, upon Six Days, and to denounce and registrate them to Our Horn, if they be Tenants who have Tacks, and if they be moveable Tenants, that they shall upon their Disobedience recover Decrets of Removal and Ejection against them: And We do hereby discharge the said Heritors, Liferenters, Landlords, &c. to set their Lands hereafter to any Person, by Word or Writ, without inserting the foresaid Surety in Tacks, and taking Bonds apart, in case there be no written Tacks, that their said Tacksmen, Rentallers and others, their Hynds, Cottars, and others who shall live under them in the said Lands, shall give Obedience in manner foresaid, and in case of their Disobedience, that their Rights, Tacks, and Possessions, shall be void and null ipso facto, without any Declarator to pass thereupon. It is likewise hereby declared, that if any Cottars or Servants, for whom the Rentallers or Tenants stand bound, shall be found guilty by transgressing the foresaid Laws and Acts, the respective Masters shall have their Relief off the said Contraveners: And it is further declared, that all Masters of Families, Landlords, and Heritors, who shall not give punctual

Obedience, they shall be liable in the same Pains and Penalties due by Contraveners, but Prejudice always of proceeding against the Contraveners, and inflicting upon them the Pains contained in the said Acts of Parliament: And seeing the single and Lierent Etcheat of such as live within Regalties belong to the respective Lords thereof, We no ways intending to prejudge the civil Rights of Our Subjects, do allow them to have the Benefit thereof, according to Law; but, with Advice foresaid, do strictly charge and command them to use exact Diligence against the Contraveners of the foresaid Laws, within their respective Jurisdictions: With Certification, that if they prosecute them not, without Collusion, within Thirty Days after their Delinquency, We will call them before Our Council, and punish them for the Neglect of their Duty. It is hereby declared, that these Presents shall no ways derogate to the former Proclamation, obliging Heritors and others for their Tenants, Cottars, and others, but that the same shall stand and continue in full Force, Strength, and Effect, to all Intents and Purposes: And that the said Presents may be notified to all concerned; OUR WILL IS HEREOF, and We charge you strictly and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and there, with all due Solemnity, in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication. And for the better Execution of these Presents, We require the several Sheriffs and their Deputes, with all possible Diligence, to cause read and publish the same upon a Sabbath-day, at the several Parish-kirks within the Bounds of their Sherifdoms, albeit some of these Parishes may belong to other Jurisdictions, intimating to the Heritors and others foresaid, that they cause their Tenants subscribe these Bonds, and report the same to the respective Sheriffs or their Deputes, who are ordered to return to Our Council an Account of their Diligence, within the Bounds reported to them, by the Heritors and others foresaid, within the Spaces following, viz. The Sheriffs of the Sherifdoms of Edinburgh, Haddington, Berwick, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, Lanerk, Linlithgow, Stirling, Dunbarton, Renfrew, Perth, and Forfar, betwixt and the Second Thursday of November next, and the Sheriffs of the remanent Sherifdoms within this Kingdom, betwixt and the Second Thursday of December thereafter; and ordain these Presents to be printed and published, that none pretend Ignorance, according to Justice, as ye will answer to us thereupon. The which to do, &c. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the 2d of August 1677. and of Our Reign the 29th Year.

Follows the Tenor of the Bond.

I do hereby bind and oblige me, that I, my Wife, Children in my Family, Cottars and Servants, shall not withdraw from publick divine Worship in our respective Parish-churches, but shall attend the publick Ordinances there at the ordinary Diets thereof, under the Pains and Penalties contained in the Seventh Act of the Second Session of his Majesty's Second Parliament, which is Six Pounds Scots for every Tenant, and Forty Shillings Scots for every Cottar or Servant; as also, that neither they nor I shall contravene the Sixth Act of the same Second Session of Parliament, in having any Children of ours baptized with any save our own Parish Ministers, or others lawfully authorized conform to the said Act, under the Penalty of Fifty Pounds Scots for every Tenant, and Twenty Pounds Scots for every Cottar, soies quotes, and that neither I nor they shall be married by Ministers not lawfully authorized, contrary to the 34th Act of the First Session of his Majesty's First Parliament, under the Penalty of an Hundred Merks, soies quotes, and that I, and my Wife, and my Children in Family, Cottars and Servants, shall not be present at Conventicles, either in Houses or in the Fields, under the Penalty contained in the Acts of Parliament and former Proclamation of Council, contenting thir Presents be insert and registrate in the Books of Privy Council, that Letters and Executicals may pass hereupon in Form, as effects, &c.

Commission for raising the Highlanders, December 26. 1677. No. LXXX.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To all and sundry whom it shall come, Greeting: Forasmuch as Our Royal Government hath been of late much affronted, and the Peace of this Our ancient Kingdom much disquieted, by irregular flocking to Field-conventicles, Nurseries of Rebellion, by withdrawing from publick Ordinances, invading the Persons and Pulpits of the orthodox Clergy, building of Meeting-houses, the killing, wounding, and invading of some that were commanded in Our Name to repress the said Insolencies, We have thought fit, in Maintenance of Our Laws, and out of that tender Care which We have always had of this Our ancient Kingdom, to require and impower the Lords of Our Privy Council to call together, not only our standing Forces and those of Our Militia, but We did likewise warrant them to commissionate and impower such Noblemen and others, as did offer to bring any of their Vassals, Tenants, or Adherents, to the Assistance of Our Forces: And therefore We, with the express Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do hereby impower and require who are to march under his Command on Horseback, and to convocate and draw together the Gentlemen and Heritors of who are to march under his Command on Horseback, and to convocate and raise the Highlanders in the said Bounds, and others under his Command, within his Lands, Property, or Superiority, and to form them in Regiments, Troops, and Companies, as he shall think fit, and to do every other Thing necessary for raising and forming them, as said is; and they being so raised and formed, We authorize and command the said to march with them to Stirling, and to be there with them on Thursday being the 24th Day of January next, and in his and your March there to take Quarter for their Money, and to force Quarter for their Money, in case the same shall be refused: And when they are arrived at the Town of Stirling, the Day foresaid, We hereby command him and them to obey such Orders as shall be sent from Our Privy Council their Committee, or such Person or Persons as We or the said Lords of Our Privy Council shall commissionate to command Our Forces, and to march under their Command wherever they shall be ordered: On which March, We hereby authorize them to take free Quarter,

Quarter, according as Our Privy Council or their Committee shall think fit to order, and, if need be, to seize on Horses for carrying their sick Men, Ammunition, and other Provisions; and for their Encouragement, We hereby indemnify them against all Pursuits civil and criminal, which may at any Time hereafter be intended against them, or any Thing they shall do in Our Service, by killing, wounding, apprehending, or imprisoning such as shall make Opposition to Our Authority, or by seizing such as they have Reason to suspect, the same being always done by Order of Our Privy Council their Committee, or of the superior Officer; and particularly We do hereby give them all such Power and Indemnity, as is usual and necessary for such Forces as are raised by Authority, or are at any Time commanded to go upon such military Expeditions. And lastly, We hereby command any such Persons living within the Bounds foresaid, as shall be pitched upon by the said to arise and march with him under his Command, and there to act and say as they shall be commanded by him, and that upon their highest Peril. It is always hereby declared, that these Heritors and others whom the said shall make Use of to command the Highlanders on Foot, shall be exempted from attending on Horteback. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the 26th Day of December, 1677. and of Our Reign the 29th Year.

Commission to Committee of Council in the West, January 18. 1678. No. LXXXI.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, &c. To all and sundry Our Subjects whom it effairs: Forasmuch as We cannot but too well remember, that whilst We were engaged in a War abroad in the Year 1666. many in the western Shires were so undutiful as to rise in Rebellion against Us and Our Authority; and albeit, after the beating of their Forces, We not only secured them by Our Act of Indemnity, but likewise gratified them above all Our other Subjects, by indulging some Ministers to preach among them, of their own pretended Principles, expecting thereby not so much to have secured the Peace of that Corner of Our ancient Kingdom, as to have obliged these within these Shires to have lived quietly and peaceably under Us, from a Principle of Gratitude as well as Duty, yet they forgetting both what We and they had done, did again return to the Practice of their former rebellious Principles, and by most seditious Courses did disturb the Peace, and contravene Our Laws; and We having again, by a new Act of Grace, discharged all Pursuits against them prior to the Year 1674. they, notwithstanding all these repeated Favours, did again of late, either by themselves, affront Our Authority, as it is now established, by flocking together in Field-conventicles with armed Men, usurping the Pulpits of the regular Clergy, and threatening their Persons, building of Meeting-houses, refusing and following declared Rebels and intercommunicated Persons, who preached downright Treason against Our Person, Government, and Laws, inciting Our People to open Rebellion, or connived at, or hounded out such as did so: Notwithstanding of all which, such was the Clemency of Our Privy Council, that they did both invite and empower the Commissioners of Militia and Excise, and other Noblemen and Gentlemen within these Shires to redress these Wrongs, and to secure Our Government against the same for the future: With Certification to them, if they failed therein, they should employ Our Royal Power and Force for effectuating thereof. And they having met and declared, that they were not able to repress these growing Insolencies, and lest Our other good Subjects in any of Our Three Kingdoms, might be again involved in these fatal Miseries, (occasioned by such Distractions) out of which they have but lately escaped, We have ordered the calling together of Our standing Forces, with some of Our Militia and Highlanders, whom we have commanded to march to these Shires; and to the end that all Things may be done there legally and effectually, We, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do hereby give and grant full Power and Commission to Our right trusty and right well beloved Cousins and Counsellors, the Lord Marquis of Athole, the Earl of Mar, the Earl of Glencairn, the Earl of Murray, the Earl of Linlithgow, the Earl of Perth, the Earl of Wigton, the Earl of Strathmore, the Earl of Argyll, the Earl of Cubness, and the Lord Ross, to meet and sit as a Committee of Our Privy Council in these Parts, with full Power to them, or any Five of them, which is to be a Quorum, to issue out Proclamations and Orders, pursue and punish Delinquents, apprehend and secure suspect Persons, and cause such Bonds be subscribed as they shall think fit; and generally all other Things to do, with that same Power, and in that same Manner as if Our Privy Council were all there personally present, with whose Authority We do hereby invest them conform to the Instructions given them by Our Privy Council, of the Date of this Presents, with full Power to them or their Quorum, to choose their own Preses at such Times, and so oft as they shall find convenient; commanding hereby all Our good and faithful Subjects to attend and obey them, as they shall be required, upon their highest Peril, in the same Way and Manner as they are obliged, and do now obey Our Privy Council, which is settled, and usually sits here at Edinburgh; and We do ordain this Our Commission to last and endure ay and while the same be recalled by Us or Our Privy Council. Given under Our Signet at Holy-rood-house, the 18th Day of January 1678. and of Our Reign the 29th Year.

Minute of some Reasons in Law against the Bond, 1678. N^o. LXXXII.

BESIDES what is spoken of the Sinfulness of the Bond, let us see what may be the Judgment of conscientious Lawyers of it, and of putting out the Militia for the Punishment of Refusers to take it; who, as to the Bond, will say, that it is illegal, unwarrantable, unreasonable, and impresttable.

I. That it is illegal and unwarrantable, 1. Because it is not in the Power of the Council to impose such a Bond, and that it is a great Part of our fundamental Liberty, that no such Bonds be imposed without the Warrant of an Act of Parliament, which may be gathered from the perpetual Customs observed in such Cases, wherein it has been the Work of Parliaments to frame and require such Bonds; and Acts made about them do so exactly design who shall be liable to these Bonds, sometimes more precisely determining, as in the Business of the Declaration, and sometimes making a further Reference to the Council's Pleasure, and authorizing them for that Effect, as in the Matter of the Allegiance, the Bond warranted Act 1670. to be required of Withdrawers for Year and Day, that our Lawyers have all along supposed this Power of Bonds to be their proper and peculiar Right. But 2dly. It is statute by several ancient Acts, as James I. Par. 3. C. 48. James IV. Par. 6. C. 76. and James VI. Par. 8. C. 131. That all the King's Lieges live and be ruled by the Laws of the Realm: Now, if this arbitrary Power should take place, both Laws and the Power of making them might soon be rendred superfluous, and the Council's Power should soon surmount that of Parliaments, for there is the highest Reason that Power of imposing Bonds should only reside in King and Parliament; and that as the King's Prerogative has as yet been no higher screwed than that no Bonds be made amongst his Subjects without his Privy and Consent, so the People's Privilege, not to be imposed upon in this Kind, without their Representatives in Parliament, should also remain inviolable.

But it is said, our Council is warranted to impose this Bond, by virtue of the First Act of Parliament 1669. against Separation, which concludes with Power to the Council to do every Thing they shall find necessary, for procuring Obedience to the Act, and putting the same to punctual Execution, conform to its Tenor and Intent. Answer. In Law that general Provision being only subjoyned to some Particulars premised about the Execution of the Act, it cannot be understood to import more nor these Parliaments, much less to import more than the whole Act amounts to, but doth in effect only concern the better Direction of particular Cases and Circumstances, that might occur in the Execution of that Act. 2do. It were a strange Thing to extend a Clause, so clearly limited, to the Execution of an Act, and according to its Tenor to a plain Derogation to, and Subversion of our fundamental Laws and Liberties, so that by this Rule the Council might as well impose the Declaration or any other Bond they please, relating to Presbytery or Episcopacy, upon all the Lieges without Distinction. 3tio. By the said latter Act 1670. against Separation, there is a Bond therein appointed but only for Persons obstinate Year and Day, and the Council is thereby expressly empowered to require it; by both which it appears that the Parliament was far from thinking that the Council, either of themselves or by virtue of the said Act 1669. had Power to impose the Bond now in Controversy.

II. They will say it is unreasonable, because, 1st. It binds the Takers for Persons not in their Power, such as Tenants, Cottars, and for Persons in their Power, to Things to which their Power doth not extend, such as Matters of Conscience are. A Man may indeed be bound as to others in Things lawful, to use his Endeavours, but here the Thing is both unlawful, and Endeavours do not relieve. The Lord has said, Every Man shall bear his own Burden, and he has expressly commanded, That the Son shall not die for the Father's Transgression, and far less, vice versa, the Father for the Son's. 2do. It is unreasonable, because thereby all that take it are exposed to be wasted and ruined by their Tenants, Cottars, and Servants, who may soon make them incur Fines to the exhausting of their Estates. 3tio. Because, if it should take full Effect according to its Design, it would turn all the Nonconformists in Scotland, either to be Vagabonds or Beggars, neither would this be the End, but even these Beggars may reduce their Masters also to the same Condition, which is doubtless far from his Majesty's Intentions so oft declared, but would be very prejudicial to his Service.

III. They will say that it is impresttable, because the Number of the Nonconformists is very great, and tho' in such Cases it be hard to make precise Reckonings, yet it may be probably affirmed, that almost the whole West, the far greater Part of the South, very many in the East, and many beside, further North, are of this Perswasion, which is more than enough to evince how impossible the Performance of this Bond will be to most of those of whom it is required.

As to the putting out of Militia Men in pursuance of the Ends of the Bond, it may be rationally supposed they will say, speaking consequently, That a Person refusing this Bond from Conscience, cannot lawfully put out his Militia, nor otherwise contribute to the Employment of these Forces, for the Punishment of its Refusers in obtaining of its End. They will belike, say 1st. That a private Person ought not to be inquisitive into the Counsels or Actions of Rulers, nor impertinently strict in the Examination of their Designs and Reasons. 2do. That Subjects ought to entertain all possible due Charity for their Rulers, and be ready to understand their Proceedings with the fairest Construction they are capable of. Nay, 3tio. When Things intended by the Rulers, as to Matter of Fact, are doubtful, and do not fall under the Discovery of a sober Search, that it should neither perplex nor demur the Subjects as to the Point of Obedience: They will say as to the Matter of Fact, because if the Scruple be in Matter of Conscience, then without all Question the best and safest Course is to forbear; but notwithstanding of all these their former Resolution in the Case in Hand is right, seeing these Considerations have not so much as place in it, but the Matter of Fact and Conscience, so was, the Employment of these Forces in a plain Persecution, being so evident, that a Refuser of the Bond, and a Complier with it, doth beyond all peradventure destroy what he has built.

It is true, they will say, the Militia is established by Act of Parliament, and that this straitneth beyond what concerneth the Bond, yet to this reply, That if this Militia (how conveniently soever or not established at first) be now evidently misemployed to Violence, Man's Authority binds not against the Lord: They ful; since it is in effect the same as if he did subscribe to the Law, which nevertheless the Duty of Subjection doth not require; it being clearly a different Case for a Man to profess himself subject to Law, and to subscribe to a Law, and there being many good Subjects which both reason against, and vote against making of Laws. 2dly. This Bond binds a Man for himself, and all under him, that they shall live orderly in obedience to Law, which may be extended to all Sorts of Transgressions, and at least, by renewing of the Bond, to Laws as well to be made as made, and so not only to real Transgressions, but to seeming Transgressions also of unrighteous Laws. 3dly. This Bond binds a Man not to reset or supply those whom Christ commands me to receive; visit, relieve, and assist as himself, and according to the doing, or not doing whereof he hath declared that he will one Day judge the World. 4thly. This Bond throws Fire into Families, and divides the nearest Relations, setting the Husband against the Wife, and Father against the Children, for the sake of the Gospel, and so binding to that as a Duty which our Lord hath foretold, as one of the sadest Evils which the Malice of the World should occasion upon the publishing of the Gospel. Observation. If it be said the Bond contains an Alternative, and binds at most to pecunial Pains; it is answered 1st. That for a Man's self, his Wife and Bairns, the Bond is not alternative, but binds him faithfully that he and they shall abstain from hearing the Lord's Ministers, and conform to Episcopacy. 2dly. Neither doth it contain any Alternative as to the supplying or not supplying, or resetting of intercommuned Ministers, or vagrant Preachers, but binds a Man simply not to supply or reset them, and further to assist to take them. 3dly. The Bond is not, as to any Part of it, alternative, but in effect binds in the first Place faithfully and principally to Conformity, and only to Penalties for greater Confirmation, and for easier Execution. 4thly. The Law of God commands, Exod. 23. 7. That a Man keep himself far from a false Matter, and the Gospel doth often require that Men should confess the Truth before Men, as they would have Christ to confess and own them before his Father in Heaven, which certainly imports that no Man should bind himself against the Truth, albeit only under a Penalty, seeing that this at least is a qualified Denial of it. 5thly. If a Man should bind himself not to worship God, or to worship an Idol under a certain pecunial Pain, would this Alternative of a Penalty excuse him before God, or relieve his Conscience? or if a Man should bind himself to rebel against the King, or to assist his Enemies, or else pay such a Penalty, will this Alternative justify his Loyalty? Certainly no Man of Conscience or of Loyalty can affirm either. 6thly. As the Penalties of their Laws for Conformity are unrighteous, so I ought not to bind my self thereto, much less to exact the same of others, lest I make my self to partake of the Sin of these unrighteous Lawmakers; and it is one Thing for a Man to profess himself subject to the Penalty of an iniquitous Law, and to commit the Event to the Providence of God, and another Thing for a Man with his own Hand to bind himself to this Penalty, and so to the Temptation, which he should rather pray the Lord, not to be led into, and by this Means provoke his holy Jealousie to abandon him to the Sin also. Sir, these Things are in themselves so clear, that I am sure there are Thousands both of loyal and conformable Subjects in Scotland, which dislike this Bond, and would be loth, whatever may be their own Perswasion or Practice, to be the Imposers and Exactors upon other Mens Consciences of the Things therein contained; how much more then ought every true Nonconformist to abhor the very Thought of it? but the greater Regret is, that in effect the most Part that take this Bond do solve all their Difficulties, with a plain Resolution never to keep it, as if it were a Matter of Indifferency for Men to promise any Thing how sinful soever, providing they keep nothing.

But I hope that all true Men will consider, 1st. How that the Promise, with a Resolution not to perform, is a manifest Lie, most contrary to the God of Truth his express Commandment, most pernicious to human Society, subverting common Trust amongst Men, the principal Ground of it; and lastly, most derogatory to a Man's Honour, which ties unto Truth, as the chief Concern of it. 2dly. How just were it with God to abandon such Mockers to their own Delusions, and since they have not the Virtue to refuse a sinful Promise, to deny them also the Strength to perform it? 3dly. The Lord requires that we should confess his Truth before Men, and it is said, that with the Mouth Confession is made unto Salvation, how then dare any Man think to appear before God who dissembles and denies his Confession, with no better Excuse, than that he mindeth to practise otherwise? 4thly. That Bond doth not simply bind, but bindeth faithfully to perform the Things therein contained, which is a more than ordinary Asseveration, and may, in its full Construction, amount to a promissory Oath: But the Matter is so plain, and this woful Shift of resolving not to perform so absurd, that I have exceeded. I heartily wish that the Lord may keep all that are free, both from the Temptation and Snare of this sinful Bond, and am very hopeful that all his true Followers shall be taught by that Anointing which teaches us all Things, as not only to abhor this vile Bond, but to keep themselves also from all Appearance of Evil.

Hugh M'hutchison's Paper upon the taking the Bond. May, 1678. N^o. LXXXIV.

I Need not give an account how in that Time, I was at my own House apprehended by a Party of the Highlanders, and after some three or four Days being kept Prisoner at Maybole and Air, and brought before that Committee, by whom being enquired anent the Hearing of some honest Ministers, and being at their Meetings upon Fields and in Houses; upon confessing of all they posed me with; and I was very hardly threatned by some, and flattered by others, until at length that Bond was presented to me as a most indifferent Thing, the Subscribing whereof would be a sufficient Satisfaction for all the alledged Wrongs I had done, which immediately I subscribed without any further Adviseement, my deceitful Heart suggesting unto me, that thereby I might rid my self from among the Hands of my Adversaries; and yet observing nothing in that Bond, but within little Space thereafter, before ever I came from my Prison, I began to consider what I had done, where my Conscience bearing me Witness, that amongst many Mercies that God had in my time trysted me with, it was a most special one, that ever I had the Happiness to hear the Gospel preached by his sent Servants, called and qualified for that Office, and the Credit to have any of them in my House; and now by that Bond I had given it under my Hand, that I should not only give up with the preached Gospel amongst the Hands of these persecuted Servants of Jesus Christ, but should also turn their Persecutor and Burrier; these and other Thoughts so great upon me, that I could have no Peace, until by these confused Lines, I should publish to the World my Recantation of so horrid an Act. I know that in a short Time, less than a Quarter of an Hour, I did before the Lords of Council, what I can never undo again all my Days; for now it must go to the Grave with me, and stand upon Record when I am dead and gone; that in such a Year, such a Day thereof, I did give it under my Hand, that I should abandon a solemn Part of God's Worship, persecute his Servants, renounce my former Vows and Engagements, and in a Word, acquiesce in all these dreadful Acts and Laws that now stand in Force against the Interest of Jesus Christ in Scotland: I say again, all that I can do, or say, or write, is a very poor Salve for such a Wound, and therefore I reckon sincere Sorrow my best Remedy. Only a Word unto two Sorts of Persons. First. I obtest all in Scotland who have taken that Bond, especially such as know me, and look upon it as a simple indifferent Thing, that they do not think that by my taking of it, they are strengthened in their Way and Peace, either in taking or keeping: For hereby I do declare my Recantation of that Deed, and do proclaim unto the World that Action, and my self in doing of it, both vile and execrable, and do solemnly witness I have had no Peace since my taking thereof, except that I have some far off Looks to have my Interest again restored by the Blood and Intercession of that Saviour whose Interest I renounced in that unhappy Bond. Secondly. I obtest all in Scotland, that have not taken this Bond, that they stand to their Post, and that they be nothing ashamed of the Cause and Interest of the Kirk of Scotland, because that some old Professors of that Cause; and I among the rest, in an Hour of Temptation, through Ignorance, Weakness, Fears, Unwatchfulness and Infirmities, fainted and yielded, but rather let them study more of Watchfulness, Self-denial, and constant Recourse unto the Throne of Grace, that they be not led unto, nor left in Temptation, for that shameful Breach I have made upon my own Peace, my Profession, and upon the Credit of the Followers of that despised Interest of Christ in Scotland by taking of that Bond. I hope the Example of an old doted Man will be but small Ground of Insulting to the Adversary, and no great Ground of Discouragement to the Friends of that Interest. The Example of Peter in such a Case will be but small Ground of glorying to the Profane upon the one Hand, or Relief to the Godly upon the other Hand, if they should precipitate in that Snare, far less the Example of an old doting Man such as I am. I shall say no more, but that all that fear God, and love their own Peace, may stand to their Engagements for the Interest of Christ in the Kirk of Scotland, and that therefrom they do not swerve upon the Example of any, less upon my Example in taking that unhappy Bond: Which Action I do hereby again revoke, and do hereby promise, by the Grace of God, to adhere to the old Interest of the Kirk of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline and Government, according to the Confession of Faith, Catechism, and Covenants of that Kirk. In witness hereof, I do subscribe thir Presents with my own Hand at the Blackrow, the 22 of May 1678. before thir Witnesses.

Proclamation against resetting Tenants, &c. February 11. 1678. N^o. LXXXV.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; To Our Lyon King at Arms, his Brethren, Heralds, Maces of Council, Purservants, or Messengers of Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch

Forasmuch as We have, for the Preservation of the Protestant Religion, as it is now established by the Laws of this Our ancient Kingdom, taken Care that all unlawful Meetings, upon Pretence of Religion, may be restrained, by which many of the Commons of that Our Kingdom, have been for several Years withdrawn from their Parish-churches, and been thereby deprived of the appointed Means for their Establishment in the true Fear of God, and the Duty they ow to Us and Our Government, and have been seduced to keep seditious Field-conventicles in a tumultuous Way, and other disorderly Meetings, where they may and do actually hear declared Traitors, intercommuned and vagrant Preachers, and any who, without Licence or Authority, do impiously assume the holy Orders of the Church, and make it their Business to diffuse amongst the unwary and credulous Multitude, seditious and false Doctrines, and pernicious Principles, which are destructive to all Order and Constitution of Societies, by which these who frequent those Meetings, are observed to be corrupted and poisoned with an open and obstinate Contempt of all Authority, Civil or Ecclesiastick, and to be led into most irregular Practices, which are inconsistent with all Order and Government, and are not to be allowed in any Protestant or Christian Church: For remedying of which growing Evils, and vindicating Our Authority and Laws from such gross Violations and Affronts, We have commanded a Bond to be subscribed, whereby Heritors, Liferenters, and Masters are obliged for their Tenants, Servants, and others living upon their Lands, and they for themselves, for obeying such Laws as may secure against Schism and Separation; and lest the same be eluded, and the Heritors, Liferenters, and Masters prejudged by the Tenants, Servants, and others foresaid, deserting such as take the said Bond, or lest the said Tenants, Servants, or others, may be encouraged not to take the same, upon Expectation that after they are removed by their Masters, or run away from their Masters, for not taking the Bond, or for going to Conventicles, or withdrawing from publick Ordinances, or upon any other account, provided against by the Masters Bond, they may or will be sheltered by others: We therefore, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do hereby require and command, that no Tenants, Servants, or others foresaid whatsomever within this Kingdom, be reset upon another Man's Ground or in his Service, without a Testificate from the Heritor, Master, or from the Minister of the Parish where they live, that they have lived orderly, in manner foresaid; declaring hereby, That whatsoever Heritors, Liferenters, or Masters, shall receive any such Tenants or Servants, or others foresaid, without such a Testificate, they shall be liable to such Fines as Our Privy Council shall think fit to inflict suitable to their Guilt, both for repairing the Damage done to the Heritor, Liferenter, or Master, and for punishing their Contempt of this Our Proclamation. And to the effect Our Pleasure in the Premises may be made known to all Persons concerned, OUR WILL IS HEREOF, and We charge you strictly, and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and thereat, in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, with all Solemnities requisite, make Publication of the Premises, that none of Our Lieges may pretend Ignorance thereof. And ordain these Presents, and the Bond, and Act of Council underwritten, to be printed, and subjoyned hereunto. The which to do, We commit to you conjunctly and severally, Our full Power by these Our Letters, delivering them by you duly execute and indorsed again to the Bearer. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Eleventh Day of February, 1678. and of Our Reign the 30th Year.

God save the King.

Followeth the Tenor of the Bond mentioned in the foresaid Proclamation.

I undersubscribing, do faithfully bind and oblige me, that I, my Wife, Bairs, and Servants respectively, shall no ways be present at any Conventicles and disorderly Meetings in Time coming, but shall live orderly in obedience to the Law, under the Penalties contained in the Acts of Parliament made thereanent: As also, I bind and oblige me, that my whole Tenants and Cottars respectively, their Wives, Bairs, and Servants, shall likewise refrain and abstain from the said Conventicles, and other illegal Meetings, not authorized by the Law, and that they shall live orderly in obedience to the Law: And further, that I nor they shall not reset, supply, or commune with forfeited Persons, intercommuned Ministers, or vagrant Preachers, but shall do our utmost Endeavour to apprehend their Persons; and in case my said Tenants, Cottars, and their foresaids shall contravene, I shall take and apprehend any Person or Persons guilty thereof, and present them to the Judge ordinary, that they may be fined or imprisoned therefore, as is provided in the Acts of Parliament made thereanent, otherwise I shall remove them and their Families from off my Ground; and if I shall shall fail herein, I shall be liable to such Penalties as the said Delinquents have incurred by the Law, consenting to the Registration hereof in the Books of his Majesty's Privy Council, or Books of any other Judges competent, that Letters and Executorials may be direct hereupon in Form as effects, and constitute my Procurators.

Edinburgh, the 11. Day of February, 1678.

THe Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do declare, that the Heritors, Liferenters, and Masters, who have subscribed, or shall hereafter subscribe the Bond abovementioned, obliging them for their Tenants, and others therein specified, shall be only liable for the Penalties by the Delinquencies of their Tenants, and others foresaid, in case the Tenants, and others for whom they are bound, shall be pursued and convicted within Year and Day after the committing of the Delinquencies, without Prejudice to pursue the Tenants, or others foresaid, themselves at any Time thereafter, as accords. Act for securing the publick Peace, February 14. 1678. No. LXXXVI.

THe Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering seriously, that the greatest Part of the Disorders of this Nation are occasioned by a seditious and schismatick Humour in some Western and other Shires, which upon all Occasions inflames them into great Irregularities, and remembring how, albeit it might have been expected after his Majesty's happy Restoration, that the fresh Remembrance of these Insolencies which we suffered under a tyrannick Usurpation, (drawn upon us by the same seditious Principles, which begin now to revive in those Places) would have inclined all his Majesty's good Subjects to live with great Satisfaction quietly under his happy Government, and to believe that the Laws made by his Majesty and their own Representatives, were both the true healing Remedies of these bygone Distempers, and the safest Means for preventing the like for the future; yet many in those Shires did, by a most remarkable Principle of Disloyalty, rise in Rebellion against their native Prince, in Anno 1666. when he was engaged in a foreign War: And though after the beating of their Forces, his Majesty had extended his Indemnity even to these Rebels, and had so far gratified those Shires, as to grant them an Indulgence; yet they continued still to disturb the Peace, and to spread their Infection over the neighbouring Shires, by assembling themselves in Field-conventicles, these Rendevouzes of Rebellion, resetting, maintaining, and hearing intercommuned Preachers, and declared Traitors, who infused in them openly and boldly rebellious and treacherous Principles, by invading the Persons, usurping the Pulpits of the orthodox Clergy, threatening, affronting, and injuring both them and such as adhered to them, and by disobeying and deforcing with armed Men in a hostile Manner, and even wounding and killing such as offered in his Majesty's Name to put his Laws in Execution: And to let the World see that they were fixedly resolved to adhere to these Principles in spite of Authority, and that they had settled themselves in a permanent Form of Government (as they imagined) they did hold Sessions, Presbyteries, and Assemblies, established Correspondencies, and, for perpetuating the Schism, ordained and granted Missions to Preachers, built Meeting-places, and taxed his Majesty's Subjects for their Maintenance: And that they might cut off their Profelytes from all Dependence upon their native Prince, against whose Person and Government they railed upon all Occasions, they at last arrived at so great a Height of Rebellion, as to persuade the People that it was unlawful to take the Oath of Allegiance. Whereupon the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, upon design to prevent these growing Disorders, or the just Severity which the Authors thereof had deserved, did ordain the Commissioners of Excise, Militia, and Justices of Peace within these Shires, to meet and to propose such Means as might effectually secure his Majesty and the Peace of the Country: With Certification, that if they did not, his Majesty behaved to reduce them to their Duty by Force, and would look upon the Heritors therein who refused to secure the Peace, (as said is) as involved in, and Fautors of those seditious and disorderly Courses. To which they returned no other Answer, save that these Disorders were grown to such a Height, that it was not in their Power to redress them; whereupon it was thought high Time to acquaint his Majesty with the present State of these his Affairs here, who, to vindicate his own Authority, and from a tender Care of his People, whose Security with that of his Laws, he did foresee to be under-mined by such pernicious Contrivances and Practices, did, by his Royal Letter, dated the Eleventh Day of December, 1677. declare his Relentment against, and his Detestation of these Courses; and for suppressing thereof, commanded and authorized his said Privy Council, to proceed by Force and Arms, to reduce that Country to their Obedience, and to oblige them to give Bonds for their own and their Tenants living regularly and obedient to the Laws; and particularly, that they should not go to Conventicles, harbour nor commune with Rebels, or Persons intercommuned, and for keeping the Persons, Families, and Goods of their regular Ministers harmless, and that under such Penalties as they should think fit. In obedience to which Letter, a Bond was accordingly drawn, only obliging the Heritors alternatively, either to present their Tenants, or to remove them; and declared, that they should be only answerable for their said Tenants, if they were convicted within a Year after the committing of these Delinquencies. All which Courses proving ineffectual, his Majesty hath just Reason to suspect the Designs of such as have, or shall refuse or delay to take the said Bond, as tending to overthrow his Majesty's Authority, to subvert the established Order of the Church, and to disquiet the Peace of his Majesty's good Subjects: And since every private Subject may force such, from whom they fear any Harm, to secure them by Lawborrows, and that it hath been the uncontroverted and legal Practice of his Majesty's Privy Council to oblige such, whose Peaceableness they justly suspected, to secure the Peace for themselves, their Wives, Bairns, Men, Tenants, and Servants, which are the very Words of all such Bonds, and that under such Penalties as they find suitable to their Contempt, Guilt, or Occasion upon which such Sureties are sought, and suitable to the Qualities of such from whom Caution is craved: Therefore the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that his Majesty hath declared his just Suspicion of those who refuse or delay to take the said Bond in the Terms foresaid; and the said Lords, being from the whole Series foresaid justly suspicious of the Practices and Principles of such as refuse the same, do ordain, That all such Persons as refuse the said Bond, shall be obliged to enact themselves in the Books of Secret Council, that they, their Wives, Bairns, Men, Tenants, and Servants, shall keep his Majesty's Peace, and particularly, that they shall not go to Field-conventicles, nor harbour nor commune with Rebels, or Persons intercommuned; and that they shall keep the Persons, Families, and Goods of their regular Ministers harmless, and that under the Double of every Man's valued yearly Rent, (if he have any) and of such other Penalties as shall be thought convenient by the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, or their Committee, if they have no valued Rent, ordaining Letters to be direct for charging all such Persons as refuse to take the said Bond, to enact themselves in the Books of Privy Council, to the Effect foresaid, and that within six Days next after the Charge, under the Pain of Rebellion, and putting of them to the Horn; with Certification to them, if they fail, the said Space being come and bypast, that they shall be denounced Rebels, and put to the Horn for their Contempt and Disobedience; and ordain these Presents to be printed. Letter on the Lawborrows, 1678. NO. LXXXVII.

Sir,

I Am glad that you have received my last, and I hope you will keep and use it for your self, as I intended it; for these are evil Times, wherein a Man by speaking or writing may far sooner wrong himself than better others. As for this new Act and Certification of the Bond, wherein also you require my Opinion, I will say nothing to its Narrative, it speaks but too much for it self, and all that I find new in the Case, is, that the Council hath thought good to give some Colour to their Procedure from the Form and Stile of Lawborrows: And next, That as they seem to have abridged the former Bond and its obligatory Part, so they have much augmented the Penalty. Thirdly. That from the Pretext and Practick of Lawborrows they also give warrant to charge Men to enact themselves, or take the new Bond, under the Pain of Rebellion. But as to the First, I shall not trouble you how decent or indecent it may be for Rulers to require Lawborrows of their Subjects, the Thing I rather take notice of is, that even our common Lawborrows are not only founded on very clear Reasons, and conceived in very reasonable Terms, but also all expressly warranted by several Acts of Parliament, particularly King Jam. VI. Parl. 7. Cap. 117. anent the Form and Pains of Lawborrows, which is a further Evidence of what I told you in my former, that it is a certain and fundamental Principle both of our Law and Liberty, that neither Bond can be imposed, nor Pain inflicted without the Warrant of an Act of Parliament. Secondly. If the old Act and Form of Lawborrows do warrant the present Proceedings, why did not our Council content themselves therewith, and then prosecute the Contraveners and Contraventions according to Law? But they knew well enough, that neither would Law nor Reason make the Going to a Field-meeting a Breaking of the Peace, at least such as hath always hitherto been understood in the

Cafe

Case of Lawborrows, and certainly in no Case or Construction to infer their exorbitant Penalty of the Double of a Man's Rent: And next, That albeit the Council's Practice had been (as this their late Act says) to cause suspected Persons bind to secure the Peace for themselves, their Wives, Bairns, Men, Tenants and Servants; yet it always hath been understood, and for the most Part is expressed with this qualifying Addition, And others of their causing, bounding out, resetting, Command, Assistance, and Ratihabition, which this late Act of Council industriously omits, albeit neither Reason nor Law can make any Person otherwise liable for another Man's Transgression; and this I think may satisfy you as to the first Head, how little the late Act and new Bond is countenanced either by ordinary Lawborrows between Man and Man, or the Lawborrows and Surety usual to be required by the Council to preserve the civil and righteous Peace of the Realm. Secondly. As to the Bond it self, I see, that albeit Men be not required to enact themselves and the rest under them expressly to abstain from House-meetings, to live orderly, and not to supply vagrant Preachers, but to assist to take them, as in the former Bond, yet all the Reasons above deduced to prove the former either unwarrantable, unreasonable and imprestible, do also strongly conclude against the second Bond; and for the Things that are left in it, they seem to many no less unlawful than the Things left out. For first. How can a Man bind both for himself and all these express in the Bond precisely, without any Qualification, that they shall keep his Majesty's Peace, which is evidently of that Extent that a Man may be made liable for all the Riots and other Disorders against the Peace, that either the Bairn, Tenant, or Servant may fall into, albeit the same fall out never so fore against their Will. Secondly. Many Men doubt at present what and where his Majesty's Peace is, for they see clearly that the publick Peace is broken, the North being in an actual hostile Invasion of the West, and really if Men by binding to the Peace, do become obliged to suffer all that the Highlanders have done, and that they and others may yet further do both there and in other Parts, this may prove too heavy for their Faith as well as to their Patience. I grant it may be said, That if this Peace be broke to any Man thereto bound, it is also broke with him, and that just and necessary Defence against a Breach was never accounted a Breach: But I am far more certain, that this is neither meant, nor could ever be received; but on the contrary to alledge it, would be judged worse than any Violation. But the second Thing in this new Bond is, And particularly that they shall not go to Field-conventicles: And here I am sure is plainly held out such Meaning of his Majesty's Peace, as may not only satisfy any Nonconformist that the keeping thereof is sinful, but may also convince all, that the Extent of this Enacting is in effect almost the whole Import of the former Bond, albeit here couched in more covert Expressions, in as much as it is evident, First, That the not going to Field-conventicles is hereby declared to be a Part and Branch of his Majesty's Peace, and the going thereto a Breach of it. Next. That albeit Field-conventicles be only here expressed, yet it is done in such a Manner, as sufficiently infers, that both going to House-conventicles, and withdrawing from the Curates Kirks, are also understood to be the Breaches of the Peace, for this as well as the former are declared by the Acts of Parliament, 1663 and 1670. to be seditious Practices, and it is upon this account and no other, that the not going to Field-conventicles is made a Speciality of his Majesty's Peace, and not in my Opinion by way of Restriction, but rather by way of Ampliation, and with clear Intimation that all other Things of the like Nature are also here included. But Secondly. Are not these Field-conventicles the very Meetings of the Lord's Ministers and People, sinfully and unjustly disliked by Men, but no less visibly owned and countenanced by the Lord himself, who as he often held and kept such Meetings while here present on Earth, without being so much as once accused, either by the Romans these most ambitious and jealous Dominators, or by the Scribes and Pharisees these most envious and cruel Clergymen, as a Peace-breaker on this account; so are these Meetings now so much the more to be allowed and adhered to, that they appear to be as the Glory of the Lord, not voluntarily removing, but driven away of Men, and standing upon the Mountains, and are also therefore the more persecuted, as if they were the only Remains to complete the Conquest of these, who have long since violently cast out the Lord's Ministers, both from Kirks, Towns and Houses. I grant that there are Laws against these Meetings, particularly the severe Act 1670. but who are they that affirm these Laws to be just? Nay, how few are they in Scotland that do approve, or would consent and subscribe to the Rigours of that Act? and yet this new Bond and Enacting imports no less. I once heard a Nonconformist say, that he could not compare that Act to any Thing better, than that Water cast out as a Flood after the Woman fleeing into the Wilderness, that she might be carried away by it: Can any then, owning his Principles by his own Subscription, bind himself to it? Thirdly. This Enacting binds a Man, not only not to go himself, but that others also, his Wife, Bairns, &c. shall not go, whereby a Man in effect binds himself to be a Constrainer and Pursuer of others, and that in a Matter of Conscience, against all Rules of Christian Love, Tendernefs, Forbearance, and common Ingenuity also. Neither doth it avail to say, that a Man may thus bind, and yet not constrain; for certainly he that thus bindeth, is bound to use his utmost Endeavours according to that Authority which he hath over the Persons for whom he bindeth, which plainly amounteth amounteth to a Constraint; and to say that he will not use these Endeavours, is plainly to say, that he will bind but not keep, which indeed is no better than to renounce all Truth, destroy all Trust, and manifestly mock both God and Man. I know, some think that it may here relieve, that a Man doth bind here only under a Penalty, and may beforehand resolve to pay the Penalty, as the safer Part of the Alternative: But I have already discussed this Subterfuge, which is in truth false, no Pain being properly an Alternative, specially in Matters of this Kind, not capable of a liquid Estimation, and disingenuous, being plainly contrary to the End and Meaning of the Imposers, and that sufficiently expressed and signified, and lastly an open Disavowing of both Truth and Righteousness, when the Lord on the other Hand, is calling to a faithful Confession. The Third Thing in this Enacting is, Nor harbour nor commune with Rebels or Persons intercommuned; and who are here meant every one knows; only to make the Thing more plausible, the Words, Ministers and Preachers, set down in the former Bond, are here left out: But having noticed this Clause sufficiently in my former Letter, I shall only desire you further to reflect, that if these, who receive not and relieve not Christ's suffering Members, be doomed with that sad Depart, Matth. 25. 41. of how much sorer Punishment suppose ye shall they be held worthy, who expressly bind both for themselves and others, that they shall neither harbour nor commune with them? The Fourth Thing is, And that they shall keep the Families, Persons and Goods of the regular Ministers harmless. Why this was adjoined, the Thing being more than much established by the Act 1669. is not easy to determine: In my Opinion it hath been done, the better to answer the Numbers, and to complete the Cadence of a Lawborrows; but the Thing that I think more strange at, is, how that, seeing it is manifest by the said Act, that the same was made to supply the King's Authority, and secure these Counsellors, who had emitted a Proclamation to the same Purpose Two Years before, yet our present Council could adventure without a Parliament, to stretch the Things yet more unreasonably; for they bind a Person by this Enacting, to keep the Minister harmless, not only within the Parish, which is all that the Act of Parliament binds to, but indefinitely where ever he may be. Secondly. The said Act insinuates, that using of Means and Diligence to apprehend the Actors of such Outrages, may exoner the Parishoners, and so the Council hath been pleased to interpret it, but this Enacting binds simply a Man without any such Qualification. Thirdly. The Act commands Men only for themselves, but this binds a Man, that not only he himself, but that his Wife, Bairns, (albeit ordinarily very impotent Folk) Men, Tenants and Servants (tho' never so unable, and perhaps also, never so remote, both from the Master and Minister injured) shall keep the Minister harmless, so that in effect, a Minister, or any of his Family being injured, any Fault may infer against a Man as many Forfeitures of the Double of his yearly valued Rent, as the Number of his Wife, Bairns, Men, Tenants and Servants comes to, let them be all of them never so innocent; and the least Care that a prudent Man thus binding himself can have, is, to provide his Minister with a sufficient Guard at all Times, and in all Places, which I dare say, even the very Framers of this Bond did not intend. The Fifth Thing in the Enacting is the Pain, viz. under the Double of every Man's yearly valued Rent, &c. which first may be understood, for every Contravention that may fall out upon the Bond, and so expose a Man to be ruined by Cottars and Servants in a Moment. Secondly. This Pain is without all Warrant of Law, as to the several Delinquencies that may be reckoned Contraventions of this Bond, which doth no way quadrate with, but may in many Cases exceed the Pains of Lawborrows, albeit that afore these Pains had been long arbitrary, as appears by the Act Jam. VI. Parl. 9. Cap. 117. they are by the Act Jam. VI. Parl. 13. Cap. 166. expressly determined and liquidate. Thirdly. Albeit some of these Delinquencies that may fall under this Bond, be, by Acts of Parliament, left to the Council's Discretion; yet this Pain of the Double of the yearly valued Rent, if understood (as it may, and ought to be, for any Thing that appears to the contrary) toties quoties, is most exorbitant and ruinous. The Third Thing that I remarked to be in the new Act is, that under the Pretext of Lawborrows, it gives warrant to charge Men to enact themselves, as said is, within Six Days under the Pain of Rebellion. But first. Why so peremptory? might not at least Ten or fifteen Days have been granted according to the ordinary Stile of the Council-letters, these being indeed no Letters of Lawborrows. Secondly. I have already fully told you, that the Imposing of both first and second Bond is unwarrantable, and consequently this Charge far more unwarrantable; and certainly if this Practice be good, the Council hath no more to do but to form a Preface, and borrow new Words of common Stile, and so issue out Letters of Horning, charging Men, not only to take this new, or the former Bond, but the Declaration, or any other Bond they please, were it even (for ought I can see) for borrowed Money.

But, Sir, I weary you: Were I charged upon this new Act, and if my Heart did not fail me, sure I am I would try a Bill of Suspension, and albeit I will not say, that I would imploy all the Reasons that I have touched; yet I think that there are several of them, and these the most material, that I both would and might make use of very safely, and perhaps also effectually; but as all the present Proceedings are to me Mystery and Wonder, so there are Two Things further, that I may more especially marvel at, The First is, how it comes to pass, that there being

being so many and great Pains statuted, and so much Power given by Acts of Parliament against Nonconformists, even sufficient, if punctually execute, to exhaust and ruine them. The Council have not contented themselves to keep within these ample Bounds, but have so palpably exceeded and neglected all Warrant of Law, to the exposing of both his Majesty's Authority, which ought to be to all very sacred, and themselves who may be therefore called in question. And the Second Thing is, how it also happens that these Bonds being so unwarrantable, unlawful, unreasonable, and imprestible, as they appear to be, (and that altho' neither Nonconformity nor Conscience were therein concerned) and so many required, and like to be required to take them who are declared conformable, and every way free Men, yet none have as yet adventured to oppose them, by these unquestionable Reasons, and clear Methods, which Law doth so plainly allow, but on the contrary so many even of this Sort have been found to take them; whereas it is evident, that if all had either unanimously refused, or if even these only which remain, should continue fixed, and silently only endure the Hazard, the whole Project of these Bonds and Courtes had been, and would be most infallibly defeat and mistaken; Committers and other Actors undoubtedly would rectify themselves, which is certainly the most desirable and happy Remedy. Adieu.

Instrument, Dutcheß of Hamilton against the Earl of Strathmore, April 5. 1678.
No. XC.

THE which Day, in Presence of me Notar publick undersubscribing, and Witnesses after-named, compeared personally John Bailie Chamberlain of Hamilton, as having Power and Commission from Anna Dutcheß of Hamilton, and to the Effect underwritten, and past to the personal Presence of Patrick Earl of Strathmore, being for the Time in the Dwelling-house of William Hamilton Maltman, Burgeß of Hamilton, and there the said John Bailie in Name and Behalf of the said Dutcheß, shewed the said Patrick Earl of Strathmore, that the said Dutcheß, nor William Duke of Hamilton her Husband, had never seen any Orders for free Quarters to have been made by any Officers or Soldiers in any Troops or Regiments for the Time within the Shire of Lanerk, upon any Person or Persons whatsoever; and that that notwithstanding thereof, a considerable Part of the Regiment of Foot under the Command of the said Earl, sometime more and sometime fewer, had quartered upon the Lands and Property of the said Duke and Dutcheſs, within the Pariſh of Hamilton, from the 16th Day of March laſt bypaſt, to this preſent Day inclusive, without Payment of any Sums of Money; therefore, as alſo that the ſaid Soldiers have exacted divers Sums of Money, or dry Quarters, (ſo termed by them) from ſeveral of the ſaid Duke and Dutcheſs their Tenants, and that by and attour the Entertainment of Meat, Drink, and Bedding they had in the Places where they were quartered; and therefore, and in reſpect there had been no Order ſhewn for free Quarters, or levying of Money, by and attour the ſame, the ſaid John Bailie in Name and Behalf, and at Command of the ſaid Dutcheſs, deſired of the ſaid Earl, that he would either pay, or cauſe make Payment to the ſaid Duke and Dutcheſs their reſpective Tenants, for the Quarters ſuch of his Soldiers had upon their reſpective Tenants, the Space abovementioned; as alſo, that the ſaid Tenants might be reimbursed of all Exactions uſed by his ſaid Soldiers from them. Whereunto it was answered by the ſaid Earl, that the bringing ſuch of his Regiment was at the Command of his Maſteſty's Privy Council, founded upon his Maſteſty's Warrant; and that the quartering made by him of his Regiment, was conform to Order from the Major-general, and that he had never commanded or allowed any Exactions of any Kind, beſide their Quarters; and that the ſame (if any was uſed) was expreſly contrary to his Orders: Whereupon, and upon all and ſundry the hail Premises, the ſaid John Bailie in Name and at Command foreſaid, as alſo the ſaid Patrick Earl of Strathmore, asked and took Inſtruments, one or more, in the Hands of me Notar publick underſubſcribing. True Narrative of the Proceedings of the Council in the Year 1678. No. XCI.

There can nothing be ſo unpleaſant to his Maſteſty's Judicatories, as to puniſh, nor for honeſt Men, than to publiſh the Errors of their own Country-men: And tho' the fatal Conſequences which did lately follow upon the like Diſtempers, may create in all thinking Men, an extraordinary Abhorrence of ſuch Courſes; yet ſince ſuch as find no Safety but in the common Diſtractions, and no Pleaſure, ſave in the univerſal Confuſions of both State and Church, have ſo ſucceſſfully poiſoned ſome, and endeavoured ſo induſtriouſly to poiſon many of his Maſteſty's other Subjects in all his Dominions, it is hoped, that a true Narrative of theſe Proceedings will not be unwelcome.

It is too well known, how, after that Episcopacy was eſtabliſhed by Authority, in both thir Kingdoms, as that Government which was moſt agreeable to the Word of God, and the Practice of the primitive Church, and ſuited beſt with Monarchy, ſome factious Perſons here did much diſturb the Reign of that wiſe Prince King James, and overthrew the Government under that pious Prince King Charles I. in which Rebellion (that grew up by plausible Degrees, too like our preſent Proceedings) under the ſpecious Diſguiſes of Liberty and Religion, God puniſhed us ſo appoſitely, that theſe Parliaments which luſted ſo after boundleſs Liberty, were abſolutely turned out from any Share in the Government, and that new modelled Church, which violently grasped at, even all the civil Government, was rent in Pieces by its own viperous Brood the Remonſtrators, and fell from having any Eſteem with thoſe Uſurpers whom they had raiſed.

Theſe Diſorders did firſt take Riſe, and had their chief Maintenance from ſome Western Shires in this Kingdom, who having been the chief Actors in every Scene of that bloody and tragical Rebellion, were ſo far from wearying or repenting of having oppoſed their native Prince, that they perſecuted both in Church and State, ſuch of their former Associates as reſolved to return to their Duty, and to hazard all in reſcuing their King from that Imprisonment, which they well foreſaw was the firſt Step to the Scaffold: And thir Rebels being inflamed at a Communion in Mauchlin, they moſt rebelliouſly fought againſt his Maſteſty's beſt Troops; and after that worthy Attempt, for reſcuing his Maſteſty from his Imprisonment, 1648. was diſappointed, they did again form their own Tenants in an Army, and therewith invade and plunder the Lothians, and other adjacent Shires: And ſuch as were weary of the Insolence of that Party, having called home our preſent Monarch, theſe Shires, to diſappoint the Opposition made to Cromwel, drew a Remonstrance, and divided from his Majesty's Forces, and declared by an Act at the West-kirk, that if his Majesty would not grant the Concessions then proposed to him, and whereby all his Prerogatives were to be screwed from him, they would not own his Government. And God having suffered his Majesty's Armies to be beat at Worcester, these Remonstrators did, by all possible Insinuations, endeavour to gain the Usurper's Favour, and did persecute such as had owned his Majesty whilst he was in Scotland.

After his Majesty's Restoration, which God had made so miraculous, to confute the insolent Appeals, which those People had always made to his extraordinary Providence, and to disappoint the Expectations of that Party, who resolved to burden his Return with such Concessions as they had formerly extorted in anno 1650. his Majesty and his Parliament, as the Representatives of the Nation, did unanimously restore Episcopacy, but so moderately, that no sober Man could complain: And tho' many, of a different Perswasion, deserted their Charge in the Ministry, yet all, save some Remonstrators, frequented the Ordinances, and lived most peaceably; but the chief of these moderate Men dying, some Remonstrators who were irreclaimable, fearing the Schism might die out, admitted some young Men to the Ministry contrary to the Principle of their own Assemblies, which condemned Ministeria vaga, and contrary to the express Laws of this Kingdom, which make these punishable by Death, and they, with the Help of these hot-headed young Men, having inflamed some of their old Western Friends, (for it cannot be denied, but there are very honest and loyal Persons in those Shires) into a Rebellion in anno 1666. whilst his Majesty was, as they conceived, unable to oppose both them and those foreign Enemies, with whom he was engaged then in a dangerous War, it pleased God to bless his Majesty with a total Victory over them: But yet his Majesty, whose Clemency is as extraordinary as his Restoration, was so far from pursuing his Victory with Revenge, that he yielded to the importunate Intercession of those who promised, 'That the indulging some Parishes in the West, to have Ministers of their own Perswasion, would settle all those Distempers; and tho' his Majesty was pleased to try this, and all other Means of reclaiming those Shires, and to bestow upon these Ministers the Salary due only by Law to the orthodox Clergy, yet those of that Party, finding their Rebellion so successful, concluded that the same Force, which had procured that, might procure more, and so they established new and flying Rendezvous of Rebellion, called Field-conventicles, in which, under Pretext of Preaching, all lawless and disaffected Persons, got constant Occasions of assembling themselves and adjusting their malicious Designs, and of infusing into the People (in such remote Places, far from the Observation of all wise and judicious Men) whatever their Malice could suggest against the King, his Laws, and Government, and from which, as the true Nurseries of Rebellion, it was most easy for them to form and model themselves into Armies, when those Designs were fully ripened, as they had formerly done in Anno 1666. which Rebellion was but a running and continued Field-conventicle, fed constantly by such as came to hear their Ministers, who then governed them, preach upon that long March; they having, in a Field-conventicle at the Glenkens, kept their first Rendezvous, from which they sent a Party to Drumfries, and surprised a Party of his Majesty's Forces, and thence having gone to another Field-conventicle in Cummock, they proceeded to others at Air, Kilmarnock, Mauchlin, Strevin, Lanerk, after which they conventicled on to Pentland, where, by their being beat, this Kingdom was restored to its former Peace and Quiet: And in which Field-conventicles, the Covenant, which is condemned as treasonable by the Law, was constantly preached up, and People taken upon Oath, bound by it to reform England and Ireland, as well as Scotland, and to bring all Delinquents to condign Punishment: Nor was the Church and all Christian Discipline in less Danger from them; for the People were led out to hear such as, for Fear of revealing, they were obliged not to know, and so Jesuits, Anabaptists, and any Sectary might have securely possessed those ignorant Creatures with what they pleased, and frequently did so, and these poor People, being once alienated from the Church and its Discipline, found therein a sweet Liberty of staying from all Churches, and of being subject to no Discipline.

Upon which Considerations, the King, by Act of Parliament, did wisely declare these Field-conventicles to be Rendezvous of Rebellion, the Minister to be punishable by Death, and the Hearers by proportional Fines: Notwithstanding of all which, and that such Meetings are destructive to all Government, unknown to, and unallowed by any Christian Society, and preached against by the sober Part of their own Principles; yet those wild Hill-preachers, did still continue and heighten their Fury to that Degree, that such of their own Party, as took Indulgences from the Council, were railed at, and, in Disdain, called Council-curates; and such as officiated under Bishops, were frequently robbed and assaulted in their own Houses, and threatened with such probable Cruelties, that they were forced to relinquish their Charge. And to possess the People with a Belief of their Establishment, they did, contrary to express Laws, keep Presbyteries, Synods, and other Assemblies, entertain Correspondence with the disaffected Subjects of his Majesty's other Kingdoms, and kept armed Men as Guards for their Ring-leaders, preaching in all Places, the Lawfulness of resisting the civil Magistrate, the Unlawfulness of taking the Oath of Allegiance, that Episcopacy was antichristian, all who owned them were

were perjured, and Enemies to Christ; and the Parliaments and Laws by which they were established were impious and sacrilegious. And to convince the World, what might have been expected from these, if they had prevailed, let any Man read those Books printed by them, wherein, at their lowest Ebb, they invite all Men to oppose Authority, as to a Duty to which they were in the Covenant obliged upon Oath, and to kill all such as served his Majesty, by the Example of Phineas; which Books poisoned so far those whom their former Principles had prepared, that some of them adventured, even to assault his Majesty's Counsellors upon the chief Streets of his chief City here, and in the Face of the Sun, and having in cold Blood maintained it, and died justifying it, are to this Day numbred amongst their best Martyrs.

These Enemies of all Order waiting all Opportunities that might distract, or add to the other Distractions of their native Country, finding in Anno 1674. that some Members of Parliament had in several Things controverted his Majesty's Authority, and differed from his Ministers, they immediately flew out in Fife and other Shires, to such Heights, that they dared to usurp some Pulpits even in Edinburgh, and to convocate in great Numbers about the Doors of his Majesty's Privy Council, with most insolent Petitions, tracing carefully the execrable Steps of our former Rebellion: But his Majesty's Prudence, and the Care of his Privy Council, having quashed those Appearances, his Majesty's Authority did for some Time overaw, tho' not reclaim them; but hearing that his Majesty was like to be involed in a new foreign War, they again assembled in mighty Numbers in October and November 1677. and did violently invade the Pulpits and Persons of the orthodox Clergy, and so threaten all with sudden and great Revolutions, and resisted so frequently and insolently, such as came to them in his Majesty's Name, killing some and wounding many, that the Privy Council thought it necessary to write to the Sheriffs of those Shires, to require an Account of their Diligence in repressing such Disorders; who informed them, that they could not get either Officers to cite the Offenders, or Men to buy their Goods that were distrained, and that their Numbers and Contumacy were such, that they despaired of all Success; and even the Council found, that such as were cited before them, contemned still their Citations, and by constant Absences added to the former Number of Rebels: Nor was it possible to repress those Field-conventicles, by legal Processes, both because the far greatest Part had nothing to pay, and so feared not the Payment of these Fines imposed by Law, and it was impossible to discover who were present at them, because they stooped by armed Men any from coming near them, who were not of their own Principle. Whereupon the Council finding all the ordinary legal Courses fail, they wrote to the Commissioners of Excise, and Justices of Peace, of the Shires of Air and Renfrew, which did comprehend most of the Nobility and Gentry of those Shires, and invited and impowered them to take such Courses as might secure the Peace of the Kingdom, and his Majesty's other good Subjects, against the Jealousies and Fears arising from such tumultuary and illegal Convocations: To which they, in a full Meeting, and after much Deliberation, returned as an Answer, that these Disorders had spread so far, and were so deeply rooted that they thought it impossible either to settle the Country, or answer for their Tenants, except the King would allow them a new Indulgence. Which Answer coming, after the Council's Letters to other Shires, of the like Tenor, were ready to be dispatched, they stopped the same, fearing that the Example of thir Shires might draw in their Neighbours into the like Combination. And it being proposed in Council, whether it was fit to send unto these Shires the few standing Forces of this Kingdom; it was urged by many, and very strongly, That the Commons there had so shaken off all Respect to Authority, that they might probably disarm those few Forces, and thereby both disable to King to make any Defence, and force themselves, for maintaining that Guilt, to joyn all of their Party in an open Rebellion. Whereupon it was thought fitter to arm some of his Majesty's Militia Regiments; and the Marquis of Athol first, and then others having offered their Highland Men, this was thought less expensive, and might prove more formidable; and therefore was chused by the Council, who had resolved, with as little Expence as could be to the innocent Shires, (for the Militia of these only could be armed) to fright these irregular Shires into an intire Submission to his Majesty's Laws, conceiving, that it was much more kind and prudent to prevent early, and by one single Expence, the Increase of those rebellious Principles and Practices which were daily ripening towards an open Rebellion; in which the whole Nation might have wished, but in vain, that it had redeemed it self by so short and small an Expence, from the Payment of such vast Sums, and the Ruin of so many Thousands, as fell in the late unhappy Wars, and to which they found those Disorders leading by the same fatal Steps.

A Proclamation was also issued out in his Majesty's Name, discharging all Noblemen and Gentlemen, to remove, without Orders from the Council, during this Service, which as it hath been constantly practised in Scotland, so was necessary at this Time, both to restrain such as might abstract themselves from his Majesty's Service at that Exigent, and to retain such within the Kingdom, as should be found obliged to secure the Peace, it being most ordinary for such as judged themselves obnoxious, to retire whilst his Majesty's Forces were upon the Place, and then then return when they were gone, whereas, upon the other Hand, it was easy to seek a Warrant, and none was ever refused to such as offered probable Reasons, which might take off the Suspicion of their going away to elude the Proclamation. His Majesty's Forces being assembled, it was resolved, That they should disarm those Shires, a Course formerly taken by the Council in the like Case, in March, 1667. by the same Persons who now complain, whilst they themselves were Counsellors, and leading Men, and which is, by our express Laws, a Part of our King's Prerogative: And in the next Place, a Bond was offered, wherein every Heritor was obliged to answer for himself, his Wife, and his Children, under the Penalties express in the Acts of Parliament, made by the universal Consent of the whole Nation, which obliges a Man to answer for these Delinquencies of his Wife and Children; so that such as object, That no Man can be answerable for his Wife or Children, or for any except himself, do either not understand our Law, or do maliciously endeavour to persuade the People, that our Laws are unjust: And it is observable in all those Fifth-monarchy Presbyterians, that where Law can be any way wrested, they make much Noise of Laws and Customs, but where that cannot be so debauched, they cry out against them as impious and not binding. The Bond did likewise oblige the Masters, either to pay the Fines of their Tenants, or to remove them after they were found guilty of contravening his Majesty's Laws, or else to present them when called for by his Majesty's Judicatures, which was also most easy; for since these Alternatives were in every Man's Power, and since the Council judged this the only Expedient for securing the publick Peace, and that it had been formerly practised in October 1666. even by such as now shun to subscribe this Bond, though in that Proclamation issued out by them, all were commanded and charged under the Pain of Rebellion, whereas this Bond was only offered, and which Proclamation was much more ample and severe, as the Proclamation hereto annexed can clear. It is strange that any Man should refuse to contribute all that is in his Power, to establish Peace where there is such Hazard of Troubles; and the Reason why this Expedient was thought on, was, because the Council was not able to know, nor pursue every private Tenant or Servant: But these knowing that their Masters were bound, and the Masters knowing that they might be overtaken, this would make both very circumspect: And yet the Penalties were only these to which the Tenants were liable, by express Acts of Parliament: And in the last Bond, all was sweetned by the former easy Alternatives, and by the First Act, 3 Session of his Majesty's First Parliament. The Parliament foreseeing, that new Methods would certainly be invented of disappointing the Remedies proposed in that Statute, and that it was not necessary, and would be expensive to convene Parliaments upon all such Occasions, they therefore impowered the Council to inflict, not only the Penalties therein mentioned, but such other corporal Punishments as they should think fit, and to do every Thing that they should find necessary for procuring Obedience to that Act, made by them against Separation and Disobedience to the Ecclesiastical Government, and which Power was indeed very proper to the Council, to whom by our Law the Administration of the Government is intrusted under his Majesty; and which Act they thought a sufficient Warrant of the Proclamation 1666. for obliging the Subjects to give Bonds, and for denouncing of such as refused, and declaring their Leases null: Whereas the Bond now is but only offered; and by the Paper subjoyned to this Narrative, it will clearly appear, that this Council was obliged by the Practices of such as now complain, to do all that they have done, and was more necessary now than then, since these Western Shires had not then risen in Rebellion, before October 1666. and Field-conventions were not then so numerous, whereas now, they are declared the Rendezvous of Rebellion: And how could this Council be answerable to suffer Ten times more than his Majesty's standing Forces, to be assembled in Arms weekly, and in despite of Law, or what Nation under the Heaven does suffer the like?

Yet this Bond was not pressed, but such as refused it when offered, were thereby thought to have given just Reason of Suspicion: And therefore, as any private Man may, upon Presumptions, crave Surety from another, that they shall not trouble them; so the Council did justly crave this legal Surety, called Lawborrows, from those who refused this Bond, which Security is consonant to all Law; and that the State have formerly sought the same as well as private Men upon Presumptions, and are still warranted to do so, is clear by Act 3. Parl. 2. Jam. II. Nor are two Years Rent too great a Penalty, for tho' in private Cases the Pain or Sum be small, because there every Justice of Peace may exact the same, yet in extraordinary Cases the Pains have still been commensurate to the Occasion, by the privy Council and Justice Court, as is undeniable; nor can there be any Security, where there is not a Commensuration betwixt the Surety and the Hazard: And who can deny that Two Years valued Rent (which amounts to little more than one Year's true Rent) is too great Security for the Peace of King and Kingdom; for if the Giver of that Security does Diligence, and lives peaceably, he pays nothing, and if he will not, he can never pay too much where the Hazard is so great.

These Forces having marched, the Council, by Warrant from the King, ordered them to take free Quarter, not absolutely, but according as the Council or Committee should allow; nor gave they ever absolute Order for free Quarter, but on the contrary, they ordained all such as should secure the Peace, to be freed from Quartering, and that the Fines of the Delinquents should be employed for paying the Forces, who voluntarily contributed their Assistance; but it was fit to insert free Quarter in the Commissions, because many emergent Accidents might have made the same necessary. And the King having been put to raise Forces upon the foresaid Tract of Disobedience; and, after all ordinary Courses and Remedies had failed, could there be any Thing more just, than that these who justified the foresaid Presumptions against themselves, in not finding Surety for the Peace, should have been the First Advancers, and quartered these Forces, than that these Quarters should have been paid by the innocent Shires, who sent out the Militia, or by those who voluntarily assisted and raised, and brought their Forces upon their own Expences? And to shew that the King resolved to take no Advantage in this Quartering, but to ease the innocent, his Majesty's own standing Forces paid daily every Farthing. It is likewise offered to the Consideration of all who understand our Government, whether it can be denied, but that the Kings of Scotland had ever the Power to raise Forces for quashing, even the Appearances of Insurrections; for it were too late to prevent them when they are raised, and they never having a constant Cash, nor any suitable Allowance for this Effect, they constantly quartered freely such as were raised upon that Account, nor was this ever quarrelled till now: And as the Council of Scotland never asserted, that free Quarter was lawful in Time of Peace, so no reasonable Man can deny, but that it is fit and necessary in Time of Trouble, or Presumption of spilling the Country by unreasonable and unruliful Men, to raise the Country, as the Act of Parliament foresaid expressly bears; and when raised, was it ever controverted that those Countries which gave Occasion for that raising of Forces, should entertain them, there being no Fund or ready Cash destinated by our Parliaments for that Effect: And since by the 25th Act of the 3d Session, First Parl. Charles II. the Parliaments do, beside the Militia, give a Power to the Council to dispose and manage that whole Affair, so as may best make the Offer there made of their Lives and Fortunes most effectual, and declare that they will hazard their Lives and Fortunes, as they shall be called for by his Majesty, for the Safety and Preservation of his sacred Person, Authority and Government, how can any good Subject deny so small an Assistance to his Majesty, when his Authority was so baffled and endangered, and where nothing was called for to his Majesty's private Use and Advantage, but merely for their own Safety and Preservation? And albeit it may be too well argued, that these Shires were in a State of Rebellion, Field-conventicles being declared by our Law Rendevouzes of Rebellion; but there were not only such Field-conventicles as were punishable by pecunial Sums, but Convocations of the People in Arms, not accidentally or infrequently, but frequently and avowedly, and under the Conduct of many Ministers, who were either declared Traitors for being in that Rebellion in Arms, Anno 1666. or being declared Rebels by legal Sentences since, were intercommuned by open Proclamations, and who in all Countries kept Correspondency, and renewed the treasonable Oath of the Covenant, railing against the King, his Laws and Servants, and, after express Commands and Proclamations, discharging such Meetings, as tending to overthrow the Government of Church and State; and is not this such a Degree of Rebellion, at least as, when all Remedies failed, might have allowed Quartering in such Shires, as entertained these Rendevouzes of Rebellion, without any Opposition? Yet such was the Clemency of our gracious Prince, and such the Moderation of his Council, as that they ordained the Quarters to be paid out of the Fines of the Delinquents, and that all such as offered to secure the Peace, should have none quartered in their Land: And albeit it is impossible to convocate so many Men without some Irregularities; yet so strict Instructions were given by the Council, and so great Care was taken by the Committee and Officers, that fewer were committed from so great Numbers than could have been expected, and none were ever complained of to the Council or their Committee, which were not redressed, and the Clamours are raised by such only as resolve to cast an Odium upon all that serve his Majesty; and yet the Clamours against what is done in the West, are much greater in Edinburgh than in the Shires who are said to have suffered, and greater at London than in Edinburgh. It might well be expected, that these Shires which had taken free Quarter themselves, without any just Quarrel or Order, would not quarrel that Quarter which had the King and Council's Order for its Warrant, and their own Guilt for its Occasion: But such Murmurers ought to consider, that by so doing they discourage others for the future to assist the King freely, which is great Unkindness to the King, and obliges the King to require a suitable standing Force, which deserves little Kindness from the Country, and that all this Noise tends to lessen our Security, and to heighten the Expectations of such as resolve to rebel, and by such Lies the last Rebellion was from a Spark blown to a Flame.

Whereas some assert, That the Council could not legally garison the Houses of private Persons: The Answer is easy; for it were strange, that our King should have the ordering of Peace and War, and yet might not garison Houses, when he sees great Presumptions of Rebellion and Trouble, having no Forts nor Garisons in those Shires, maintained upon the Charge of our Nation; nor were any Houses garisoned here, save where the Proprietors refused to secure the Peace, or were found guilty of breaking it, or had other Houses wherein they dwelt conveniently;

veniently; and albeit the Commissioners of Excise were desired to furnish them with Necessaries, yet these were to be repaid by the King, who could not make present Preparations of such Necessaries, without the Assistance of such as lived in these Shires, and Bond was given for the Re-payment: Our gracious King and his Council here, have never persecuted tender Consciences, punishing only such as, not content to serve God in a sober Way, inflamed their native Country with their irregular Zeal, and it is expected, that such as reflect upon what has been lately done by the King and his Council, should first remember the lamentable Miseries, into which this Nation was thrown by such, and even milder Beginnings and Actors, our Property distressed of arbitrarily by Committees, our Persons dragged to Prisons and Scaffolds, for obeying those whom it had been Treason to disobey, our Nobility and Gentry insulted over by every little Minister, and his own Tenants in Kirk-sessions, our Parliament made ridiculous and ineffectual by their general Assemblies; and if the Council had suffered such Practices to grow up unto open Rebellion, had not our neighbour Nation, as well as our own, just Reason to have condemned our Clemency to these as Cruelty to them, and to demonstrate that Persons, not Things, are aimed at in these Misinformations. It is most observable, that his Majesty's own Officers, as Sheriffs, and others, who ought to have opposed, are these who complain most of the Opposition made to these Disorders, that have been fostered up by their Negligence or Connivence, and that when the King or Council do any Thing to soften or reclaim these embittered and humorous Creatures, it is cried out against as Indulgence; and when they do the least Thing to restrain them, it is railed at, by the same Authors, as Tyranny; but since some in our Nation could not, nor yet cannot be quiet under the kind and gentle Government of King James, King Charles I. and our present Monarch, and whilst the Remembrance of our late Distractions are yet fresh with Us, what can be expected from such Persons and Principles in after Ages?

Observations upon the true Narrative, April 1668. N^o. XCII.

SIR,

MY Expectations were great, when I heard that a Vindication of the late Proceedings (which I never thought capable of any) was at the Press in Edinburgh, and my Thanks to you are proportionable, for your sending the Paper, though with a new Title, to me, wherein I found at First, that the worst of Causes hath got this Piece of Justice, that it is fallen into the Hands of the weakest of Advocates, which is a main Encouragement to incline me to gratify your Request of having my Observations thereupon. The only Difficulty I find is, that the Errata are so many, that but to note them all would swell this Letter to a greater Bulk than the Pamphlet it self. Take these few then, and use them as from and to a Friend. In all Papers of this Nature Four Things are desired and expected, 1st. That nothing but Truth be narrated. 2^{dly}. That Truth important to the Business be not unfaithfully concealed. 3^{dly}. That what Truth is narrated, it be done without Mixture of Falshood in Circumstances: 4^{thly}. That there be Reason for publishing the same.

In all these Four this Narrative is fully peccant. 1st. There are many gross Falshoods in it, as every understanding Scottish Reader cannot be ignorant of; and though the Author's Years and Ignorance of Matters of Fact, Thirty or Forty Years since, may offer some Kind of Apology for his Unfaithfulness in some of his more remote Relations, yet such as were done lately leave him destitute of that Plea. Of this Sort take these among many, 1st. That Episcopacy was restored in this Kingdom moderately, P. 4. l. 21 and 22. All Scotland knows, that in less than a Year after its late Establishment, it arrived to a far greater Height in Pomp, Power, and Persecution, than the former Prelacy did in Forty Years Growth; so that it is hard to conceive, how it could have been more immoderately and excessively inferred, the Convictions whereof were so strong in some of the same Persons, that both then had, and yet have the Exercise and Management of Affairs, that they found it necessary to abridge it in some Things, chiefly in its Power of the High Commission in 1667. 2^{dly}. That many deserted their Charges in the Ministry, ibid. When the certain Truth is, that of the most peaceable and innocent Nonconformists, Hundreds in a Day were most violently ejected, and then they and most of the Nonconforming in the Kingdom (a very few excepted) so pursued with Proclamation upon Proclamation, that it was a Wonder they were not all ejected out of the Nation. 3^{dly}. That all, save some Remonstrators, frequented the Ordinances, and lived most peaceably, ibid. Whereas it is known, that many, not Remonstrators, did never haunt their Assemblies for Worship, and that such as began first to appear publicly in preaching, notwithstanding prohibiting Laws, were neither Ministers nor Men when the Remonstrance was framed; yea, it will be found, that almost all the Ministers who are preaching publicly on their

Hazard

Hazard this Day in Scotland, did enter into the Ministry after both the Remonstrance and Protestation, which the Author doth ignorantly or maliciously confound. 4thly. That they admitted some young Men. ibid. It is most certain, that before 1666. (which is the Time the Author speaks of) and some Years thereafter, neither was there any of the many Nonconformist Probationers ordained, nor any young Man licensed to preach in all the Kingdom. 5thly. The calling the Rising in Galloway 1666. a running and continued Field-conventicle, P. 5. l. 14. is a ridiculous Fancy, and with as much Shadow of Sense, may the Campaign in France and Flanders be called by the same Name. 6thly. That the Jesuits, Anabaptists, and other Sectaries, frequently preach at those Meetings. It is well known to the Nation, and I doubt if dreamed by the Author, that the Jesuits are under no such Necessity to go to the Fields, they have warm Protection in spreading their Doctrine; nor are they such Fools as to try their Hands amongst Scottish Phanaticks, who do daily forsake their Bishops and Curates for their begun Advance to Popery, and other Sectaries are but rare in Scotland, and rarely and gently troubled; it is only the Presbyterian against whom the Strictness of the Law strikes. 7thly. That Field-conventicles are unknown to and unallowed by any Christian. ibid. Hath this Man read the Bible or the History of Scotland or the Netherlands, where Field-meetings have been used to accommodate the Multitude, whom no House could contain, and whereunto the People were in no such Constraint, as the Presbyterians in Scotland are by such strict Laws, fining deeply Lands and Houses where the Meetings are kept? 8thly. That the Council gave not absolute Order for free Quarters, (see P. 10. l. 12.) but it was fit to insert free Quarters in the Commission, because many emergent Accidents might have made the same necessary, l. 16 and 17. It would seem to insinuate to a Stranger in Scotland, that free Quarters were neither ordained nor exacted, but he might have as well denied that a Host of many Thousands of Men without Pay, have been in the West since January 24th, or else truly have asserted, that they lived all the Time upon the Air. 9thly. That his Majesty's standing Forces paid daily every Farthing. ibid. It can be proven, that they did degenerate from their first Civility, by the Influence of bad Example, and the Licentiousness allowed to the Highlanders, and that they often took free Quarters, if not more. 10thly. That so strict Injunctions were given by the Council, and so great Care taken by the Committee and Officers, P. 11. l. 28 and 29. It is a Marvel to see such Words printed by Authority, that there is here such a Heap of Untruths, that there is none of the wild Host, or of the oppressing Committee, or of the oppressed Country, whose Conscience doth not witness against the Falseness of these Extenuations, after that the best Part of the Kingdom is impoverished and almost laid waste, by a Crew of barbarous and savage Men of another Language and Custom; and of no Religion, and so oppressed by free, dry, and assistant Quarters, besides open Robberies, above what the King of France useth in his Conquests: To see all this Rapine and Spoil tush'd at as nothing, may make Men to think that it is the Mind of this Writer, and such as are of his Sentiments, that since the People in the West had not their Throats cut, their Tongues should not complain. 11thly. That the Clamours against what was done in the West are greater at Edinburgh than in the Shires, and greater at London than at Edinburgh. ibid. It is like, that his tender Ears hear these at Edinburgh, and his frightful Heart apprehends the Effects, that the Reports of them at London may produce through the Nobleness and Clemency of the King; but thus to jeer at the Cry of Oppression, (which hath doubtless come to the Ears of the God of Judgment, and when its Account shall be published to the View of the World, will render all them, in whom is ought of Christianity or Humanity, amazed) is the sure Proof of a seared Conscience, and a Heart void of Pity. 12thly. Neither King nor Council have ever persecuted tender Consciences, P. 12. l. 15 and 16. is an Assertion that innumerable Consciences, Carcasses and Purfes, for these Eighteen Years last past, does unanswerably witness against. The only Apology for this Lie is, that he knows not what a tender Conscience is. Thus, Sir, I have given you a round Dozen of Untruths, and it were enough in so many Pages, but I have left as many more to a careful Gleaner.

2dly. Truths important to the Business unfaithfully narrated, as 1st. The great Numbers of Nonconformists in Scotland, and the general Fury of the Body of the Nation, cross to Episcopacy at the King's Restoration. 2dly. The fair-like Claim they have for expecting Toleration, at least by Act of Parliament, King Charles being present in Person, and ratifying therein the Covenants, his present Majesty's Coronation Oath, and many Laws formerly made, securing the Subjects, (if any moral Security would have done it) from the re-entering Oppression of Prelacy. 3dly. What great Afflictions the Nonconformists have endured with Patience for that Persuasion, which would require a Volume to relate fully, and how that under these Pressings their Party grows daily, so that they may well be reckoned the greater Part of the Kingdom, these who conform being generally compliant with Prelacy, rather for their outward Ease and Interest, than for any Conviction of the Righteousness of the Cause, commonly confessing, that they would more cheerfully submit and concur, if Authority did re-establish the former Government of the Church. 4thly. Their peaceable Submission to an hard Oppression, which might rather have found a Reproach for Excess, than a Calumny for the contrary.

3dly. Unfaithful Mixture in narrating Truth, and here I shall not so far trespass, either upon your Patience or your Memory, as to trouble you with the pointing out of the Words, to which these Truths are well known to be opposite. 1st. That it was the active Opposers of the Engagement 1648. that invited and brought home the King 1650. 2dly. That as the Remonstrance was never owned and approved by the superior Judicatories of the Church and State at the Time of its framing and presenting, so there is hardly any Minister in Scotland now alive, that had any Hand in it, and few of either Officers or Gentlemen, except the present President of the Session, whose Interest in it was remarkable; and yet these same Remonstrators fought stoutly against the English at Hamilton, and afterward they and such as came nearest to their Spirit and Principles, kept the greatest Distance from the Usurpers all the Time of the Usurpation, the contrary whereof is falsely alledged by the Author. 3dly. Though any Appearance of Faction and Distance amongst the Grandees, might well give the Nonconformist Encouragement to improve such Seasons (wherein few Reasons of State or Executions of the Law against them did sleep) for preaching and hearing the Gospel; yet it is certain, that the known Naughtiness of the Curates, and the Pride and Opposition of the Prelates, with the visible Successes of the nonconforming Ministers Labours, had still the greatest Influence on the Increase of their Meetings, and that these Assemblies are now greater and more numerous than when Opposition to them was far more moderate. 4thly. The Insurrection 1666. is often and much reflected on, but if its Occasions, and Provocations to it, with the Executions and Oppressions following the Defeat, had been also related, the Reader would have inclined either to justify or excuse the Attempt, or at least to account the Author hugely impertinent to make a Boast of Clemency in this Case, wherein the Height of Rigour and Severity was used on many of the meanest Accessories. 5thly. The Indulgence is several Times invidiously named, but the visible Constraint of Prelacy, rather than of any Compassion or Affection of the Party, which did occasion the Grant of it, and the miserable Cloggs it was attended with in its Second Edition, with the Narrowness of the Plaster for the Sore, do clearly prove its Insufficiency, to Conviction, as is fraudulently passed over. 6thly. The Supplications of a few weak Women in Edinburgh, who were encouraged thereto by a preceding Moderation for some Months, is foolishly and falsely likened to the considerable Addresses made to the Council by Persons of all Ranks. I might add, as a Thing hugely impertinent, that he would fain rank all Persons dissatisfied with the present arbitrary and oppressive Course, in one Clats with the Nonconformists; yea, he likens the present Dissatisfactions, and the native Method of complaining to his Majesty, unto Attempts and Endeavours for casting off Episcopacy in King Charles I. his Reign, both which are groundless and invidious; and since the Author, to shew his Spite, will needs go back Thirty or Forty Years, (which Length of Time brings always a new Generation of Men upon the Stage) to seek out invidious Passages, wherein the present discontented Party had no Interest, and wherewith the Principles of the greatest and most considerable of them have no Conformity; I wish, to render him more ridiculous, he had gone back Sixty or Eighty Years further, and begun his piquant Narrative from Knox's seditious Principles and Practices, and the Field-conventicles at Perth, Carnpat Muir, Carberryhill, and Langside, where the Queen Regent was opposed by Arms, and where her Daughter Mary was taken Prisoner, and deposed, and, after her Escape, was driven out of the Kingdom, which brought her at last to a Block, for alledged Treason against Queen Elizabeth: With which Courses Secretary Livingstone was displeased, and afraid of his Danger for opposing the same, that, as was generally thought, he ended his Days wilfully by Poison, as Spotiswood testifies. These Things had afforded Reflections on a discontented Party, not much more impertinent than Mauchlin Muir, and Whigmore Road, and the Remonstrance do on most Men now alive.

For the last Thing required in a Narrative, the obvious Reason for the publishing it. I am sure the Design (if it has any that is rational) must be Information, which it cannot be, for it is full of Defects and Falshood; or the Author had done better to have remained a thinking Man, and not so unhappily meddle in Writing; and this brings to my Mind, what I heard related about its Name and Title, which was ominous, and in limine cespitare, that after some Hundreds of Copies were printed, the Title (another than this) was found ill contrived and unsuitable, but so hasty were they to send it abroad, and so thrifty of Expence, that they would not destroy the Copies, and reprint them a new, but cut off the first Title Page, and substitute this in its Room, (as is seen in most of the Copies, the first Sheet whereof is divided) and so instead of the much expected and boasted of Manifesto and Vindication of the late Necessity of publishing such a worthy Piece, some would offer a Third Title, and desire it may be called, The Second Part of Arctina, or the First Part of the apostatized Calumniator publicus against that Party or Interest, in whose Service he broke his Leg about Four Years ago, and in deserting whereof shortly after he broke his Faith, neither of which can ever be made straight again: But however, whether or not this Title might fit this Paper, or the Paper fit the Title of Narrative, or rather Invective, this only I would note, that the Publisher isher of such a rude and raw Paper at this Time in this Dress, is justly censurable, for herein is the Act of Oblivion violated, and Principles and Actions (which Time it self might have purchased Oblivion for) again raised, and invidious Comparisons stated betwixt old and present Things, and very dangerous Practices defended, and more dangerous Principles, all which are of very bad Consequence.

You may think strange that I have omitted many Things of the greatest Importance, but it is purposely done. 1st. Because I resolved to crowd all in one Letter, the Bounds whereof I have almost transgressed. 2^{dly}. Because many Things, wrong in this Narrative, are, either by the very Words or explicatory Enlargement of them that are in the Narrative, clear, as of some late Proclamations, the gross Mistakes whereof, it is hoped, that a significant and dutiful Way be taken to discover to his Majesty and the World. 3^{dly}. As for the great Things, the Bond, Lawborrows, Host, free Quarters, Garisons, disarming the Country, and the Grounds hinted for their Justification, some of them worse than the Thing they are brought in Excuse of, as that the West was in a State of Rebellion, and the Compliment of the Subjects Lives and Fortunes, and the Act of Militia may be made a Relative, and disposed of as the Council sees Ocession, since these Things are the Subject of the grand Grievances of the Nation, and I doubt not but will be managed with full Conviction to all the World; I think I am bound in Civility to forbear to meddle in so great a Cause, espoused by so many noble Patriots, and in present Dependence before his Majesty's Royal Throne. Vale.

Defences, Replies, and Duplies in Mr. James Mitchel's Process. 1678. N^o. XCIII.

Curia justitiaria S. D. N. Regis tenta in Pratorio burgi de Edinburgh septimo die mensis Januarii, 1678. per honorabiles viros, Dominos Justitiarium generalem Collington, Strathurd, Castlehill, Forret & Glendoick.

Curia legitime affirmata.

INTRAT

Mr. James Mitchel Prisoner

Indicted and accused for the Crimes of Assassination, and invading of Privy Counsellors and wounding of Ministers mentioned in the Dittay.

His Majesty's Advocate declares he passes from my Lord Justice-general, as Witness in this Cause. Mr. John Ellis Advocate, as Procurator for the Pannel, declares, they sustain my Lord Justice-general to be Judge, notwithstanding of his being cited as a Witness both by Pursuer and Defender.

His Majesty's Advocate produced a Warrant from his Majesty's Privy Council for pursuing
Mr. James Mitchel, whereof the Tenor follows.

Mr. John Ellis produced an Act of his Majesty's Privy Council, empowering Sir George Lockhart and him, to appear for the Pannel's Defence, whereof the Tenor follows.

Mr. James Mitchel Pannel, denies the Dittay and any pretended Confession, alledged emitted by him. Mr. John Ellis for the Pannel, alledges that he cannot pass to the Knowledge of an Affize; and the Conclusion, that the Pannel has committed Murder, cannot be inferred from the Subsumption of the Libel, because by the Laws of this Kingdom, the civil Laws, and the common Opinion of Doctors, and Law, and general Custom of all Nations, nudus cona-tus & affectus sine effectu, even in the most atrocious Crimes, except Treason, Parricide, and other atrocious Crimes excepted, is not punishable by Death. And it were against all Reason, seeing Punishments ought to be proportional to the Crimes, that a naked and simple Design of Murder should be punished as Murder that had taken effect: Et in criminibus gravioribus, viz. adulterium, furtum, sodomia, the naked Design is not punished pœna ordinaria, even by the civil Law; and tho' Lex Cornelia, by an extraordinary Search, does declare, si quis cum telo ambulaverit, yet it is but a statutory Law, and derogate to by the Law of Nations, and the special Law of our Nation, in so far as Murder in our Law, being defined to be, and has only place in interfectis per feloniam, and those who were killed upon forethought Felony. 2^{do}. In so far as the Libel concludes him guilty of Assassination, the same is no ways relevant, it being both a Term and a Crime unknown in our Law; and by the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Nation, the Subjects of Scotland are to be governed by the Laws of Scotland, and tho' the Crime of Assassination were a Point of Dittay by our Law, as it is not, yet it is not, nor cannot be pretended that he was hired for that effect, neither is it libelled.
3^{tio}. In so far as the Libel includes the Pain of Death, for the Mutilation of the Bishop of Orkney. First. It is answered, That the same is no ways relevant, and the said Conclusion can no ways be inferred from the Subsumption, because the Act of Parliament does only declare Disinembration

Dismembration to be punished as Slaughter. Secondly. The said Act declares Dismembration only to be punished as Slaughter, when it proceeds from forethought Felony. Thirdly. The said Act requires another Qualification, viz. that it be pursued by the Party, none of which can be subjoined upon in this Case, because it is not libelled, that the Bishop was dismembred, or had his Hand cut off, but only had a Wound in the Hand; and the Libel does expressly bear, that the Bishop of Orkney got the Shot in the Hand accidentally, when the Discharge was against the Bishop of St. Andrews, and so was not upon forethought Felony, as to him. And lastly, The Bishop's nearest of Kin do not concur, nor are Pursuers, which is a special Requisition by the Act of Parliament: Likeas the said Act is absolute, and in no Register can it be made appear, that any Person was capitally punished for Dismembration, but, upon the contrary, many accused and condemned by arbitrary Punishments, so that the Libel is no ways relevant, as to that Article, for the Reasons forsaid, especially seeing Dismembration is not here so much as libelled or pretended. And whereas it is insinuate, that the Bishop did languish and die of the said Wound; It is answered, That the Libel is no ways relevantly conceived, because it is not libelled, that the Wound was, ex sua natura, lethal or mortal; and it is offered to be proven, that the Bishop lived several Years thereafter, did go about his ordinary Function, as a Bishop, by Preaching, which is a sufficient Ground of Exculpation and Defence.

4to. In so far as the Libel is founded upon the Act of Parliament anent the Invading of Counsellors; it is answered, That this present Case does not fall under the Capacity of the Act of Parliament, because it is not libelled, that the Cause of the said pretended Invasion of the Bishop, was upon the account he was in the Prosecution of his Majesty's Service, but, upon the contrary, it may appear strange to any rational Man, quorsum & quo bono he could have done it.

5to. As to the Acts anent Invading of Ministers, they import no capital Punishment, but only Confiscation of Moveables, and as to which the said Acts are opposed; and as to the Act 1670. it is posterior to the Fact libelled.

In so far as the Libel seems to be founded on a Confession, in so far as the said Confession may be made use of, as a sole or conjunct Probation; the Pannel does object against the same upon the Grounds and Reasons following. First. If any such Confession was emitted by the Pannel, which he has absolutely denied in the Lords own Presence, no ways acknowledging the same, no Respect can be had thereto, and it is not probatory, because the same is extrajudicial, in regard it is not made in Presence of the Assize, who are Judges in the Probation, which is expressly contrary to the Act, 11 Parl. King James VI. which requires the haill Probation to be laid in Presence of the Assize and Party; which Act of Parliament was not only made for Security of Pannels, as to a just and legal Procedure against them, but also as to Assizers, to whom the Trust of the Life of the Subjects of this Kingdom is committed, and who, as to the Point of Probation, might not proceed upon Fame and Report, but upon a clear Probation before them; for if that were not, the Assize would be altogether deprived to know how the Confession was emitted, if spontaneously, or ex constantia, vel trepidatione, or spe venie: And the most that ever was sustained in this Court was, that the Assize did find a Party guilty upon a Confession emitted before a Quorum of the Justices in a fenced Court. Altho' the said pretended Confession should be sustained probative, as, for the Reasons above expressed, the Pannel, with all Submission to your Lordships Justice, humbly conceives, it cannot; yet if any such Confession was, it is null, because it was elicited spe venie & immunitatis, and, for proving thereof, the Pannel does repeat his Exculpation, which he conceives, is relevant in Law, and craves the Witnesses therein to be examined upon the Contents therein. Secondly. The said Confession, being emitted extra judicium & spe venie, as said is, est in se nulla, and cannot be confirmed nor validate by the Testimony of any Witness whatsoever. And to evidence that the Pannel's Life was never intended to be taken upon the said pretended Confession, the same, if any was, is opposed, by which it evidently appears that he was examined upon Oath, as to the most material Part of the Crime, viz. his Complices, which makes it more than evident, that it, being in materia criminali & capitali, in which Oaths cannot be taken by Law, renders the Confession null and invalid, at least makes it evident, that the Libel has been restricted ad civiles effectus.

My Lord Advocate insists, in the first Place, upon the Act 16 Parl. Jam. VI. by which nudus conatus, attempting and invading, though Nothing followed, is found relevant to infer the Pain of Death; but so it is, that the said Mr. James Mitchel did attempt the Killing of the Bishop of St. Andrews a Privy Counsellor, which Attempt devocnit ad actum proximum, the said Mr. James having done all that was in his Power; and as to the Quality adjected in the Act insinuating the Defence, that it must be proven that it was for doing of his Majesty's Service, it is replied, That this Quality is inferred, and can, nor requires to be no otherwise proven than by a presumed Inference; for the Design of the Attempter being an Act of the Mind and Secret of the Heart, it cannot be otherwise proven, but simply by the attempting a secret Counsellor, or any of his Majesty's Officers, against whom the Pannel could have no Quarrel, but

* As to what is alledged against the Acts of invading Ministers. It is answered, That the first Act appoints that it shall be punished with all Rigour, and the Seventh Act Charles I. and the last Act is sufficient, though posterior to the Crime, to declare what was the Meaning of that General of punished with all Rigour; and since our Law makes the attempting of such as are doing his Majesty's Service, capital, that General ought to be extended to Death, since lesser Crimes and other Crimes are for the same Reasons, which are applicable to this, punishable by Death, nor can there be any Hazard in this, since there is a Law for the future, and no Man shall ever die for so great a Crime in our Nation.

Whereas it is alledged, That the Pannel did only confess upon Hopes of Life. It is replied, that, imo. The Promise of Life from a Judge, who could not grant the same, cannot defend, especially where no Threatning preceeded, and where it is clear, that what was confessed was founded upon other Presumptions & indicia. Nor is this relevant, except the Pannel could offer to prove, First. Threatning, to the Fear whereof he yielded. Secondly. That he expressly pactioned, that his Confession should not operate against him, which is very clear from Bossius, Tit. de confessor per torturam, Num. 12. where he states the Case, and concludes that a spontaneous Confession, though Life were promised, does not defend, and is the Guilt less, or the Truth less, that a Judge promise? And if this were sufficient for every Judge to make himself King, and grant Remissions at his Pleasure, and though this may weigh with the Judge who promised, yet the Law considers the Party confessing still guilty, and so does never secure him; & quod potest condemnare tenent, Cimus Cod. de iis qui ad ecclesiam effugiunt. Alciad. lege de verborum significatione; and Clarus himself says, ego suspicor opinionem Ceni esse magis communem; but giving his own Opinion rather as a private Man than a Lawyer, he says, ego tamen non condemnarem ad mortem nisi aliis indiciis fuerit gravatus, ergo reus indiciis gravatus & morte plectendus, which is most just and reasonable, for though the Law be jealous, where a mere silly Innocent confesseth to a Judge who may terrify him, or having Interest in causing him confess, and lay the Blame off his Friends; yet where the Pannel's own Confession proceeded from a Person suspected by all the World, by a Person who publickly in all Places since has owned the Deed, who fled upon that account, who was taken with unlawful Weapons, unfit for his Profession, and the specifick Weapons which committed the Attempt, who condescended upon all the Circumstances, and declared that he gloried in being a Martyr upon that account, in being seen running away immediately upon doing the Deed, with a Pistol in his Hand, in being found out in a Thousand Lies and Prevarications, when he was examined, in having renewed his Confession publickly, it were but to scorn the Law, and massacre Mankind, to think that a Confession so adminiculate, should not bind the Confessor, who can alledge nothing of any Threatning used against him by the Judge to whom he confessed, and Lawiers do in that Case consider the Quality of the Judge, as severe, unjust, or partial; but the Confession is alledged to be made here upon Promise given by my Lord Chancellor, whose benign gentle Temper frees him from all Suspicion: And as the proponing of this Exculpation acknowledges the Deed to be committed by Mr. James Mitchel, against which the Protestation denying the Libel cannot be sustained, being contraria facto, as is evident to any rational Man; and the Pannel cannot either pretend alibi, nor any other Pretence of Error for excusing his Retraction, so his Majesty's Advocate opposes his Confession, bearing no Qualification: And though he is very secure, that the Exculpation cannot be proven, yet since it is notourly known, that he is the Committer, and that this may be a Preparative to other Pannels, against whom no Probation ordinarily is had, but Confessions evicted by Judges with fair and gentle Promises, he mordicus adheres to the Relevancy; for as Bossius says, etsi iudex dixerit, nihil mali eveniet tibi, vel etiam promittat ut liberabitur, magis tamen communis est opinio confessionem valere, quia iudex etiam ita poterat fingere ad veritatem eruendam: And as this is most advantageous for the Commonwealth and Mankind, so there can be no Hazard to a private Pannel, since, if he can but instruct his own Innocence, or the Reason of his Error, by alledging that he was alibi, or that there were severe Threatnings of Torture used, the same will still be allowed to qualify his Confession; but the general Presumption lies, that a Judge will not damn his own Soul, stain his Function, ruine his Fame, expose himself to the Terrors of God Almighty, by alluring a Confession from a poor Innocent.

As to what was objected against the Confession, as extrajudicial, and before an incompetent Judge. It is replied, That Confessions are of all Probations the most infallible, seeing Witnesses may, but it cannot be presumed a Man will wrong himself, and the Rise of that Maxim, That extrajudicial Confessions are not relevant, was only to exclude Probation upon Confessions emitted where there was no Judge, nor no Design of Enquiry; but the Confessor being loose and inconsiderate, and upon no Guard, and under no Reason of Advertence, did at Random own a Deed of which he was most innocent, either for Ostentation, or to please the Company, or in Railery; but to say that a Man should not be judged by what he deliberately confesses, where he knows the Design is to enquire into the Crime, and that the Event must be a criminal Trial, is without all Foundation of Probability or Reason; nor can Judges or Affizers be so much convinced by what Witnesses can say, who may have Malice, or be bribed, or mistaken, as what proceeds from a Man's own Breast deliberately, and in cold Blood, which in effect is often times the Inspiration and Influence of the almighty God, who, to shew his Love to Justice, and Kindness to Mankind, draws even from the greatest of Malefactors the clearest Confessions; and since Men do not use to bring Witnesses when they commit Crimes, nor can the Nature of the Thing allow Probation by Writ, to cut off Confession in these Cases, were to make Crimes for ever pass unpunished, and to make Law, which is founded upon Principles of Reason, and the Good of the Commonwealth, vanish in mere Terms of Art, and hard Words, contrary to the Design of Law, and the solid Principles of sincere Policy.

That this Confession is then judicial, is clear, being taken by the Authority of the Privy Council, the supreme Judicatory of the Nation, and where the Design was to expiate the Truth, and the Pannel knew that he was upon a Trial for his Life; nor can the Incompetency of that Judicatory be herelleged, since as the Session is a Judicatory merely civil, and the Justice-court merely criminal, so the Council is a Judicatory above both, comprehending the Power of both, and being so far competent in the Cognition of Crimes, that they take Precognitions in criminal Causes, they modify and qualify the Sentences of the criminal Court, they determine intricate Cases remitted to them by the Justices in Point of Law, and the King and the greatest Part of the criminal Court being there, it were absurd to think, that a Confession emitted before them should not prove; and if in a Precognition a Party should confess, and so the Trial there cease, what could be more absurd than to think that this Confession should not bind? especially seeing Confessions emitted before the Lords of Session, in Cases of Improbation and Decrets following thereupon, are a sole, a final, and plenary Probation, before the Justice Court: Likeas, that Principle in Law, that Confession (coram iudice incompetente) does not hold, is where iudex is incompetens tam ad inquisitionem quam ad accusationem, as is forum penitentiae, as Kirk-sessions, or forum mere civile, neither of which can be said in this Case, where the Judge before whom the Confession is emitted, is the ordinary Judge of the Inquisition and Trial in criminal Cases, & iudex non solum jurisdictionis pro-regalis, but a Judge who originally and generally examines all the Pannels of Scotland.

My Lord Advocate adds, that this Confession was made in Presence of the Lords of his Majesty's Council and the King's Commissioner, in whom all the Judicatories of the Kingdom eminently reside, and might have sent the Pannel to the Scaffold without an Assize, seeing [in confitentem nullae sunt partes iudicis.]

Whatever Favour may be allowed to Retraction of Confessions factas ex incontinente, ubi potest docere de errore. Yet what Reason can there be where a Pannel denies without Proofs of his Innocency; and therefore Bossius Tit. de Confessione, Num. 64. concludes, est etiam necessarium allegare errorem, ceterum si simpliciter revocaret, confessus non est audiendus, and Num. 70. he adds, quia fateor quod quis non auditur simpliciter, dicendo post confessionem, non est verum quod confessus fui, tamen si per testes constare potest de innocentia, magis attenditur veritas quam confessio. And since Minors in Law are obliged docere de errore, when they revoke, it were absurd to think that the Law was so ridiculous, as that a Man confessing before a grave Judicatory, should have Liberty to retract without shewing any Reason of his Retraction, and the Guilt rather proves per inficiationem, and by, that impudent Lie, then is lessened by the Retraction.

In the Case likewise, where Debates are concerning the Validity of a Confession, Lawyers consider whether, what was confessed, was or can be adminiculate by other collateral Probation, argumenta & indicia, and whether the Probation be verisimilis, whereas this Confession is adminiculate here by many other Circumstances, such as Persons who saw him come away, by his owning of the Principle, since by his Flying, &c. so that here neither can he instruct why he retracts, and the Thing confessed is adminiculate, & circumstantiis & indiciis.

As to the Objections founded upon the Act of Parliament, That all Probation must be in the Presence of the Assize: It is replied, That the whole Form of that Act is grossly mistaken, for the Design of that Act was to correct a barbarous Custom; whereby the Pursuers were allowed to sollicite, and to produce to them, sike Writ and Witnesses, as they pleased, for Probation of the Crime, to preclude the Pannel of what he could say against the same, since false Papers might be thrown in as Confessions and Proofs; but that cannot reach the Case where a Confession is produced before a Pannel, and his Procurators and they being to object against the same: Nor can it be urged by this Act, that no Paper can be relevant, but what is owned by the Pannel in Presence of the Assize; for we daily see, that Letters produced under the Pannel's Hand, tho' he should deny his Subscription, will be sustained, and it will be sufficient to prove by Witnesses, that he did subscribe, or by Comparison of Letters, that he did subscribe. Likeas this Act of Parliament does not exclude, that Confessions before the Lords, in Matters of Falshood and Decrets following thereupon, may not be probative before the Justice: Likeas, Confessions taken before the Justice, tho' no Assize be present, do, without all Controversy and Debate, prove the Crime, and yet, neither can the Justices condemn without an Assize: Nor does that Act of Parliament militate more against that Case, than against this. And in that Case of Finlay M'rab, a Confession taken in the Tolbooth, without a fenced Court, and before one Judge, was found sufficient to infer the Pain of Death, both by the Council and Justices. And it is admired, how it can be thought, that Presumption can be sustained, as the Foundation of a criminal Sentence, as we see daily, and that Witnesses which in effect are but presumptive, and yet a Man's own Confession, emitted seriously, and in cold Blood shall not be sufficient. And as there could be Nothing more dangerous to the Commonwealth, than that Crimes should be thus rendred unsearchable, so what Hazard can there be to the People on the other Hand, or the Pannel when they are made their own Judges? And to take off all Possibility of Danger, it shall be allowed to them to prove Error, Force, Innocence, or Mistake; and this Probation has been in all Ages and Nations sustained as uncontroverted, as David ordained the Person who said he had killed Saul, immediately to be executed without farther Enquiry, giving as the undoubted Reason, that he had condemned himself out of his own Mouth, and which is registrate in Scripture, to secure the Image of God against those who would deface it, and that such Confessions should be sustained in any Case, much more in this, when the Nature of the Crime is atrocious, and the Manner of the Discovery extraordinary difficult, and if either Atrocity or Difficulty prevailed with Lawiers to remit somewhat of its ordinary Rigour in exacting clear Probation: And we see in criminibus domesticis & exceptis, much more, when both these concur against a Man's own Confession to be admitted: And whereas ordinarily Pannels are penitent at first when examined, the Horror of their Crimes softning their Hearts; if their Confessions should not then prove, it were impossible and fruitless to expect, that after they are imprisoned amongst a Company of other Malefactors, and after they have Men skilled in the Law to wait upon them, to teach them the Art of Retraction, and that their Conscience grows callous and acquainted with the Idea of their own Crimes, what sincere Confession may be then expected from them?

My Lord Advocate declares he does not insist against the Pannel, for conversing with Rebels at this Time, and insists upon the Shooting of a Bishop and Minister, before the Act Anno 1670. to infer an arbitrary Punishment, and insists upon Mutilation, as capital, upon the Act of Parliament anent Demembration, which is, reddere membrum inutile; and a Man is as much demembred, when he has an useles Hand, as if he had no Hand, and insists upon the Act 28. Parl. 3. Jam. IV. wherein Slaughter and Mutilation, upon forethought Felony, are equiparant, and the Pannel declared to be punishable with Death upon both these Cases, but reserves the Punishment of Mutilation to be qualified by the Justices, according to what shall be found here proven, and to what has been the Custom of the Justice-court formerly, in such Cases.

Sir George Lockhart replies, as to the Defence founded upon the Fourth and Sixteenth Parliament James VI. that the Libel is not relevant, not condescending upon the express Qualification which the Act of Parliament requires, is no ways elided by the Alledgance contained in the Reply; for imo. The Lords of the Justiciary would be pleased to take Notice, that there is no Speciality in the Case of this Act of Parliament as to Privy Counsellors, but that it extends to all his Majesty's Officers, and consequently the meanest Officer being invaded in the Terms, and under the Qualification contained in the Act of Parliament, might plead the Benefit thereof; and if the Libel should be sustained in general Terms, without the express Qualification, the simple Act of Invasion of a Lyon Herald, though neither Death nor Wounds followed on it, would infer the Pain of Death; but that no such thing is the Meaning, or can subsist with the Act of Parliament, is so clear and evident, that it were impossible for the Wit of Man to express the Qualification to be libelled, and more positively proven in more plain and direct Terms than it is set down in the said Act, in so far as the Act of Parliament requires, by way of Provision and Condition, in the statutory Part thereof, in thir Terms, it being verified and tried, that any of the said Counsellors, Sessioners, and Officers, were pursued or invaded for doing of his Majesty's Service, shall be punished to the Death: And there is great Reason and Necessity for this Qualification, because the Act of Parliament intending, contrary to the Custom that was general in all Nations, and of this Kingdom, in all other Crimes, that conatus & attentatus, which is only relevant in the Crime of Treason, should be reputed crimen consummatum, in case of Invasion of any of his Majesty's Officers; therefore the Law requires this Qualification further in Matter of Fact, that it should be verified, that the Person invaded was doing of his Majesty's Service, in which Case the Crime had a Respect, and in the Construction of Law, as done against his Majesty's Authority, which he was then executing: And here this Qualification in Matter of Fact, that it was for doing of his Majesty's Service, is not so much as libelled; and in the Opinion of all Lawyers, as may appear by Ful. Clar. § p. assassini. Num. 2. ubi agitur de imponenda pana alicujus constitutionis specialis requiritur, quod concurrant omnes qualificationes, de quibus in ipsa constitutione; and Quæst. 85. Num. 9. he says the same Words, Ubi agitur de imponenda pana alicujus constitutionis specialis, oportet quod in illo casu verificentur omnes qualitates in ipsa constitutione expresse, alias pana non committitur, & hæc, says he, est doctrina communiter ab omnibus recepta, and most especially when it is not an intrinsic Quality and Aggravation, but where it is a Qualification required by Law it self, as integrans delicti, and, as Gomes has it, alterutrum pana, and therefore it must be totidem verbis libelled, and positively proven.

And as to that Pretence, that it is to be presumed and inferred from the Circumstances, and the Way and Manner of committing the Fact, and that propositum and Design cannot be otherwise proven, nisi per indicia & conjecturas. It is duplied, The Qualification required by the Act of Parliament is toto calo different from the Design; for if a Person would invade any of his Majesty's Officers in doing of his Majesty's Service, and would pretend that he had no Design to invade, certainly the Pretence were absurd, and in that Case the Design presumitur ex natura attentati; but the discharging of his Majesty's Service is not a Design, but a Matter of Fact, which consisteth in an extrinsick Action, and must be proven, and may and does often occur: As for Instance, if a Magistrate should be invaded in the actual Execution of his Majesty's Authority, or if the Invader should be so transported with Rage, as, when he invades a Judge, to tell him, that it was because he has unjustly decerned, these and the like Cases are indeed in the Terms of the Act of Parliament, and the simple Invasion, though no Wounds followed, being directly levelled against his Majesty's Authority, nudus conatus & affectus delinquendi reputatur pro effectu; and as this is clear from the express Words of the Act, and which being in materia correctoria & criminali, is strictly to be interpret; so it is also unanswerably evinced from the Act of Parliament, King Charles I. of blessed Memory, by which Act it is provided, that the Invasion and Violence done to Ministers, is punishable conform to the Act of Parliament 1587. to which it relates, which is Confiscation of Moveables, and declares that the said Act is to be extended to Archbishops and Bishops: From which the Pannel's Procurators argue thus, If by the posterior Act of Parliament in Anno 1633. the Invasion and Violence done to Archbishops and Bishops is not punishable with the Pain of Death, but only an arbitrary Punishment; how is it possible, that the Fourth Act, Parl. 16. James VI. should infer the Pain of Death upon the Invasion, as it is circumstantiate and libelled? but that the Archbishop was invaded, who was a Privy Counsellor, and with the Qualification that is required by the said Act of Parliament, that it was for doing of his Majesty's Service. And as to that Allegedance, that the Pannel cannot condescend upon any private Ground of Quarrel, or other Reason why he did invade the Archbishop: It is answered, If this Allegedance were sustained, it were contrary to the Act of Parliament libelled upon, which does not require the Pannel to prove, but that it must be tried and verified that the Invasion was for doing of his Majesty's Service, and so his Majesty's Advocate must prove the same by a clear and positive Probation, as a Point in Matter of Fact.

And as to that Pretence, that the Pannel did glory that he had committed the Fact and Invasion libelled, and endeavoured to justify the same, and perswade others that it was lawful: It is duplied, That as the said Qualifications are altogether disowned, so they are no ways the Qualification in Matter of Fact, required by the Act of Parliament, viz. that the Invasion and Violence was for doing of his Majesty good Service, which is indispensably required upon the Reasons abovementioned, otherwise the Act of Parliament should have said no more, but that all Invasion of his Majesty's Privy Counsellors, or other Officers, should be punished with Pain of Death; whereas the Act of Parliament thought it just and necessary, and fit for all Mens Security, that a single Act of Invasion of any of his Majesty's Officers, however it might be punished pana arbitraria, yet should not import or infer the Pain of Death.

In so far as the Dittay is founded upon the common Law, and it is assassinium, in which conatus & attentatus habetur pro crimine consummato: It is answered, The Dittay is no ways relevant, because it is not founded upon any Law or Act of Parliament of this Kingdom, and the common Roman Law cannot be the Foundation of criminal Dittays, whereby to draw in Hazard the Lives of any of his Majesty's Subjects: Likeas, there are clear, express, and positive Acts of Parliament to the contrary, as the 48 Act, Parl. 3. James I. and Act 79. Parl. 9. James IV. declaring that the Laws of no other Realm are to be regarded, especially whereupon to found criminal Indictments; and albeit, by the common Law, conatus in homicidis, especially where it was homicidium dolosum, and designed to be committed proditorie per insidias, was punished as crimen consummatum, yet all Lawyers agree, as may appear by Jul. Clar. Quest. 120. Farma. Quest. 80. and by the Authorities by them cited, that by general Custom of all Nations, in omni genere homicidii affectus, conatus & attentatus, is not punishable pana ordinaria delictus, and so cannot infer a capital Punishment or Pain of Death, as is concluded in his Indictment.

And as to that Pretence, that the Crime libelled is the Crime of Assassination, in which nudus conatus is sufficient, especially si devenerit ad actum proximum: It is answered, imo. That all Laws do agree in this, that crimen assassinii is only when the Person does hire and conduce another to commit the same, interveniente pretio, and for which Jul. Clar. 8 assassinii, where he so describes the Crime, and Matthæus de criminibus does so describe the same, and does expressly assert, that unless Money or Reward intervene, the Crime of Assassination cannot be committed, where the Words are, crediderim tamen nisi merces certa & sceleri proposita, & constituta fuerit, sive in specie seu corpore, sive in pecunia numerata, non posse enim videri assassinium, and there is no other Lawyer extant, that did ever otherwise describe the Crime, and there is great Reason why Money or Reward should be considered in the Constitution of this, because the Law did consider the Crime with respect to the Hazard, and the Hazard lay where Persons were hired and conduted by Infidels, by giving of Money or other Reward to kill Christians: And albeit, even in the proper Crime of Assassination it self, in some particular Nations, where the said Crime was too frequent, as in Italy, conatus is punishable, & Ful. Clar. in the same 8. and others do maintain, that by the general Custom of most Nations, in the precise Crime of Assassination, conatus seu attentatus is not punishable with the Pain of Death; but the Pannel has no Reason to insist on this Matter of Fact libelled, being no ways the Crime of Assassination, but only to commit that which Laws call a Design, to commit Murder proditorie & per insidias, in which all agree, that, by the Custom of all Nations, conatus faciendi non reputatur pro facto.

As to that Point of Dittay, founded upon the Mutilation of the deceased Bishop of Orkney, conform to the 28 Act, Parl. 3. Jam. IV. It is answered, That denying that the deceased Bishop of Orkney was mutilate, so, albeit it could be proven, it cannot infer the Pain of Death. imo. Because it is clear by the said Act of Parliament, that it is not in the Case of Mutilation, but of Demembration; and it were a strange Imagination to think, that if a Party were mutilate, or lost a Finger, that the Pain of Death could be inferred; and there is a great Difference betwixt Mutilation and Demembration, Mutilation being only an Inability or Privation of the Use, whereas Demembration is the intire Loss of the Member; and it is a Principle in Law that Acts of Parliament, especially in casu criminali & capitali, cannot be extended de casu in causam, etiam ex identitate vel paritate rationis, and that cortici verborum adhaerendum est, & casus omissionis habetur pro omisso. And here there is no Parity of Reason, both the Prejudice and Deformity being far greater in the Case of Demembration than Mutilation.

And whereas it is pretended, that tho' the Pannel's Confession had been elicite sub spe impunitatis, that yet it is not sufficient whereupon to liberate from capital Punishment, because a Judge cannot remit a Crime, and that Bossius and others are clear that notwithstanding of any such Confession upon Promise of Impunity, yet a Judge may, and ought to condemn ad panam ordinariam delicti. It is answered, the Pretence does not elide the Defence, because supposing it shall be proven, that the Confession was elicite sub spe veniae, and upon Assurance of Life, such a Confession, so elicite, cannot be Ground whereupon to violate the Faith and Impunity given, and far less can such a Confession, tho' any could be proven, being retracted, be considered as a Confession; and as to which Law and Lawiers are very clear and positive, the Law is, Lex 3. Cod. de custode reorum, and Lawiers, as may appear in Matthaus de criminibus, Quest. 16. where his expresse Words are, Querunt an confessio promissa, impunitate & spe veniae elicita, sufficiat ad condemnandum? Respond. Non sufficere, tamen si enim in iudiciis potestate non sit promittere impunitatem, adeoque ex promissione non obligatur, tamen dolo extorta est, & per hanc fraudem etiam innocentes illaqueari possunt. And Bossius in that Title, de confessis, after he has stated the Case, resolves it thus, Tutius tamen est, ut dicamus requirere perseverantiam, & est ex mente doctorum, & cum ratione, quia negare non potest, quin talis confessio sit obumbrata, and says, it were against Humanity it self, to condemn ad panam ordinariam delicti, in such a Case. And Ful. Clar. cited by his Majesty's Advocate, ego non condemnarem ad mortem, and which is indeed the constant and irrefragable Opinion of all Lawiers and Practice of all criminal Tribunals.

And whereas it is pretended, that Ful. Clar. subjoyns these Words, nisi aliis indiciis sit gravatus, and his Majesty's Advocate condescends upon several Presumptions. It is answered, If his Majesty's Advocate will lay aside the Confession, and adduce such a presumptive Probation, whereupon the Pannel may be condemned, then he may plead the Benefit of that Qualification, but the Presumptions condescended upon are remote Conjectures, and no ways concluding, and the Pannel, after the alledged committing of the Fact, did return and live peaceably for several Years, and denies the Fact, and cannot be otherwise convicted thereof. And if any pretended Confession should be made use of, either per se, or in modum adminiculi, it cannot be divided from the Quality under which it was granted, which the Pannel offers to prove, was upon expresse Assurance.

And whereas it is pretended, That the granting of an Assurance or Impunity, is, upon the Matter, a Remission, which no inferior Judge can do, but that notwithstanding he may, and ought to condemn. It is answered, First. It will appear by the Probation of that Character and Quality the Granter of the Assurance was in. Secondly. Lawiers do not consider, whether a Judge potest veniam concedere, or remit a Crime, but a Confession being elicite sub spe veniae, is not a full and absolute Confession, but a qualified, and cannot be made use of, the Quality not performed and made good, and it were a Prejudice to publick Interest, and a Way to preclude the Ingenuity of all Confession, if notwithstanding of the Interposition of publick Faith, and the Granting of Assurances, and the Eliciting of Confessions, sub spe veniae, the Confession might be made use of, and the Quality and Condition, upon which it was emitted, altogether neglected, neglected, which is downright inconsistent with the Opinion of Lawiers, and the Practices and Customs of criminal Judicatories.

And as to what is alledged, That tho' this Confession had not been emitted before the Lords of Justiciary, yet it was not extrajudicial or irrevocable, because it was deliberately given, and before a Committee, who had Authority from the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council. It is answered, This Point is of extraordinary Importance and Consequence, as to the Lives and Fortunes of his Majesty's Subjects, and as to the Lords of Justiciary and the Procedure of the Inquest, who are Judges to the Probation; and therefore it is represented in behalf of the Pannel, that admitting any pretended Confession should be produced, yet if it was not emitted before the Lords of the Justiciary, it is not a judicial but extrajudicial Confession, & fidem non facit, as to the Probation of the Crime: And as to which, First. There is an universal Concord in the Opinion of all Lawiers, and in the Practices and Customs of all criminal Judicatories, and as to which, the Lords of the Justiciary are desired to cast their Eye upon all who have written upon this Point, and as Clarus says, non invenies dissentientem in mundo, and it is a strange Custom all Lawiers, and the Custom of all Nations should have hallucinate in this Point, for which the Pannel's Procurator cites Jul. Clar. Quest. 55. Farma. Quest. 81. and many other Lawiers are likewise clear, that Confessions emitted præ judice competente, sed non sedente in tribunali, is but an extrajudicial Confession; and much more, when it is confessio emissa coram judice incompetente; and when the Question is, Who is to be reputed judex incompetens? It is positively resolved, that omnis judex is incompetens, who could not proceed ad condemnationem, as to the Crime as to which the Confession is emitted. And certainly tho' any Confession were produced, emitted before a Committee of the Lords of Privy Council, they have no criminal Jurisdiction, so as to proceed ad condemnandum in crimine capitali, that being by Craig, Digest. 8. that ex eorum statutis nec periculum vita, hereditatis, aut omnium fortunarum subire posse.

And whereas it is urged, That the Lords of Privy Council have a mixed Jurisdiction, and may proceed by Way of Procognition, & per modum inquisitionis, and may resolve doubtful Cases, and qualify Sentences. It is answered, That it is not denied, but the Lords of Privy Council, both have and do very well deserve that Jurisdiction; but as to criminal Jurisdiction in capital Cases, it is only competent before the Lords of Justiciary; and Precognitions, or the previous Inquisitions, tend not ad condemnationem, but only as to this, whether to stop or remit to the Lords of Justiciary. And Nothing is considered as a judicial Confession, but where there is formalis processus, and where a Party is called coram judice competente, and he is sub instante periculo vita, and knows that the infallible Import of his Confession, is to that very Effect for his Condemnation, none of which can be pretended, when the Confession is emitted coram judice incompetente ad condemnandum.

And whereas it is alleged, That a Confession, in the Opinion of Lawiers, cannot be retracted, unless the Party could docere de errore, and purge his Innocency, and did it ex incontinente. It is answered, The Alledgance is groundless, for tho' a Confession were emitted coram judice competente in tribunali, it might be retracted ex incontinente, if he were able docere de errore, and there is no Lawier ever required it at other Times, but when the Confession is emitted coram judice incompetente, fidem non facit quoad probationem delicti, either ex incontinente, or ex intervallo, and without shewing of any Error, or purging of Innocence, such Confessions in Law, not amounting to any Probation, no more than as Lawiers argue, if the Depositions of Witnesses should be taken in uno judicio, would fidem facere, either in causa civili, criminali, in alio judicio. And certainly there is less Reason for Confessions where Parties disown the same, and retract them if emitted, and much more here where the pretended Confession was elicited sub spe venia, so far was the Pannel from thinking, that emitting of his Confession was in order to Condemnation; especially, seeing it neither is, nor can be proven, that the said pretended Confession was so much as judicially given in face of the Privy Council, where his Grace the Duke of Lauderdale, being then Commissioner, was present, and the Pannel's Procurator will not debate the Import of the same, but remit it to the Confession it self, in case it be offered to be proven, that the Confession was emitted judicially before the Privy Council.

And whereas it is alledged, that the Act of Parliament, Act 9. Parl. James VI. ordaining all Probation to be led in Presence of the Assize, does not concern the Case, and is misunderstood, seeing here the Confession will be produced in Presence of the Assize. It is answered, The Act of Parliament is clear to the contrary, and can admit of no such Interpretation; for albeit that the Narrative of the Act of Parliament bear, that Abuses were committed, and ex malis moribus bonæ oriuntur leges, the Narrative of the Act of Parliament was only causa impulsiva, and the statutory Part of the Act of Parliament is clear and positive, that all Probation should be deduced in Presence of the Assize; and of all other Probation there is the greatest Reason that the very Act of Confession should be in Presence of the Assize, who are Judges of the Probation, and who are to proceed upon Oath, and whose Conciences are to be satisfied and instructed as to the Way and Manner, and Conditions and Times whereupon such Confessions were elicit, all which are concealed, where there is nothing produced to them, but a Confession taken without their Presence, especially seeing the Pannel alledges and offers to prove the several Points of Fact and other Particulars were confounded upon and declared, none of which are mentioned in this pretended Confession, all which should have been insert, and could not be divided as being in articulo connexa.

And whereas it is pretended, that Decreet pronounced before the Lords of Session is probatio probata, and whereupon Assizes may and ought to condemn. It is answered, The Argument is in materia disparata, and does not concern the Matter of Confession, and is only in a special Case of Falshood, and that upon a special Reason, because the Investigation of Falshood depended upon a Trial, and Concourse of many and violent Presumptions, which may require a long Tract of Time, and Examination of Parties and Witnesses; it were impossible that such Trials could be deduced before an Inquest, these depending several Years many Times before the Session, before they can be brought to a Close, and therefore Law and Custom in that Case has sustained a Decreet of the Lords of Session, as a Probation in iudicio criminali; but it is absolutely denied, that it would hold in any other Crime, and certainly if the Crime of Theft were pursued civilly before the Lords of Session, ad damnum & interesse, the Theft should be proven or confest before the Lords of Session, it would not fidem facere in iudicio criminali, as is evident by the Authority of the Lawiers, who agree that acta probatoria in uno iudicio fidem non faciunt in alio, nay, which is more, acta probatoria in uno processu fidem non faciunt in alio processu coram eodem iudicio: And as to the Instance of the Practick of M'nab, the Pannel opposes the same, when there were Depositions of Witnesses, and these many Times in the Journal-books. The Cases of Confessions emitted have been obtruded, yet it cannot be instanced that ever the Lords of Justiciary, did by Interlocutor sustain the same as probative, but on the contrary, it does appear in the Case of Frazer, in the Year 1641. that Sir Thomas Hope being then his Majesty's Advocate, declared, That a Confession emitted before a Sheriff-depute, who has a criminal Jurisdiction in some Cases in the Things allowed by Law, and who beyond all doubt is Judge competent per modum inquisitionis; yet so convinces less, that that was an extrajudicial Confession, that he only insisted therein ad modum adminiculi, and joyned it with the other Probation mentioned in the Practick, which was per se convincing and significant: As also, since his Majesty's happy Restitution, in the Case of one Robertson, although the Confession was emitted before one of the Lords of Justiciary, and his Majesty's Advocate for the Time; yet he was so convinced of the Insufficiency of the same, that after it was produced per modum probationis, he took up the same, even in that State of the Process, when the Assize were sworn: And as to the Instance of Divinity in David's Practice, it does not concern the Point of Law, and cannot be made appear that the Party retracted his Confession, and it is a Practick that either nimum or nihil probat. In respect whereof, &c.

The Lords continue their advising of this Debate till to Morrow at Two a Clock in the Afternoon, and ordain Assizers and Witnesses to attend, ilk Person under the Pain of an Hundred Merks.

The said Day John Graham Post-master, Patrick Graham his Brother, Keith of Lutquhairn, Matthew Colvil Writer in Edinburgh, Alexander Livingstone Ensign to Captain Windram, Walter Kennay Merchant in Edinburgh, Thomas Hamilton Master of the Coffee-house, James Fletcher of New Cranstoun, Charles Murray Merchant, John Auchmouty Ensign to the Castle of Edinburgh, Robert Baird of Sauchtounhall, each of them unlawed in an Hundred Merks, for not compearing to pass upon Mr. James Mitchel his Assize.

Robert Baird and Thomas Hamilton their Unlaws discharged, to be booked or extracted by Deliverance upon their Petitions.

Mr. James Mitchel's Confession, February 10. 1674. N^o. XCIV.

IN Presence of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Register, Lord Advocate, and Treasurer-depute, Mr. James Mitchel Prisoner, being called, did freely confes he was the Person who shot the Pistol at the Bishop of St. Andrews, when the Bishop of Orkney was hurt thereby, in the Year 1668: And depones upon Oath, That no living Creature did perswade him to it, or was upon the Knowledge of it.

Proclamation for Convention, May 28. 1678. No. XCV.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Scotland, England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all and sundry Our good Subjects, whom these do, or may concern, Greeting: The great Kindness We bear to that Our ancient Kingdom, hath at all times inclined Us to be very watchful over all its Concerns: And considering, that all Kings and States do, at present, carefully secure themselves and their People, by providing against all such foreign Invasions and intestine Commotions, as may make them a Prey to their Enemies; and that it is not fit, That that Our Kingdom should only, of all others, remain without Defence, especially at a Time wherein those execrable Field-conventicles (so justly termed in Our Laws, The Rendezvous of Rebellion) do full grow in their Numbers and Intolerance; against all which, Our present Forces cannot in Reason be thought a suitable Security. Therefore, and that We may be the better enabled to raise some more Forces, for securing that Our Kingdom against all foreign Invasions and intestine Commotions, and to maintain them in the most equal and regular War, and let the World see the unanimous Affection of our People to Us; We have thought fit to call a Convention of the Estates of that Our ancient Kingdom, to meet at Edinburgh upon the Twenty sixth Day of June next to come: And We do hereby Require and Command all Archbishops, Dukes, Marquises, Earls, Viscounts, Bishops, Lords, and Officers of State of that our Kingdom, to be present, and attend that Diet: And also We do require all Our Sheriffs, in the several Shires, and their Deputies, that if there be any new Elections already made for this Year, of Commissioners to Parliament or Conventions, they make timely Intimation to these Commissioners, to keep this Meeting; but if there be no Elections already made, that then, they forthwith call and convene all the Free-holders in the respective Shires, that according to the Laws and Acts of Parliament, Elections may be made of fit Persons, to be Commissioners for this Convention: And that Our Royal Burrows make choice of Commissioners accordingly, and that they and all other Persons having Interest, attend this Convention of Estates, under the Pains contained in Our Laws made thereanent. And that all Our good Subjects may have Notice of this Our Royal Will and Pleasure, We do hereby command Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Herald, Mace, Pursuivants, and Messengers at Arms, to make timely Proclamation hereof at the Market-crosses of Edinburgh, and at the Market-crosses of the Head Burghs in the several Shires of that Our Kingdom. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the Twenty third Day of May, 1678. and of Our Reign the thirtieth Year.

God save the King.

Letter in Defence of Field-meetings, June 1678. No. XCVI.

I Thank you for your Letter of News, with the Proclamation for a Convention, inclosed: But I strange to find mention of Field-conventicles made therein carry you so far beyond your ordinary Moderation. For reflecting upon their late Increase, and some other apparently offensive Circumstances, rather through the Prejudice which this Condition may have excited, than with that juster Consideration ye use to adhibit, ye accuse the Ministers and Leaders, of several Imprudences, and forgetting not only the other Motives couched in the Proclamation, but what the Contrivers of this Proclamation are certainly known to design, you almost conclude us Field-meeters to be the only Troublers of the Land, which being a Charge too uncharitable for you, and too heavy for us, as Christians or good Country Men, I shall endeavour briefly to clear your Judgment of these darkning Mistakes, and then point out to you more solid and satisfying Discoveries. I need not insist with you upon the Engagements that we have in Conscience against Bishops and their Dependents, and to our own outed Ministers: Though our Scripture Grounds were less pregnant, and our Oaths and Covenants fewer, yet I am perswaded, that all sober Men who have rightly considered the Nature, Fashion, and Fruits of these two Sorts of Ministers and their Ministry, will already grant that the very All of our Religion, that is, The glory of GOD, and our Souls Salvation, are most deeply concerned in the Differences. Men dispute about Forms, and amuse themselves with vain Searches: But as Things are now seated, their Agreement and Disagreement to me comes shortly to this, That both serve their own Masters, the Bishops and Curates, infligated by their own Lusts, and set up by Men, do their own Work; and our poor persecuted Ministers, engaged by better Motives, and sent by our Lord Jesus, do accordingly pursue his Will and Pleasure, and how determining this should be to all who mind their Souls Interest, is no hard Matter to judge. This only I am most sure of, that these Things with the great and signal Advantages they have received amongst us, more than in all the reformed Churches besides, should at least plead with our Rulers in our behalf for full and free Toleration and Protection; but how contrarily we have been treated, GOD and the World knows. It was not enough to overturn the Lord's Ministry, and in its Place to erect abjured Prelacy, but as if either Conscience had been a Story, or as versatile as the Weather-cock, all must by their actual Conformity testify their hearty Conformity and Compliance with this new Model; so that even simple Withdrawing is made criminal, and the innocent Withdrawers driven and over-driven to their Churches, until we were driven into the Confusion of the 1666. After that Distress and Extremity we had but a short Breathing, when immediately House-meetings come to be more strictly noticed, and Field-meetings prohibited under the Pain of Death to the Preacher and Convocator, and other grievous Penalties to the Meeters, and yet so rigorous was the Necessity, that we were constrained to venture to the Fields, both because of the Danger of Houses, Paucity of Preachers, and a great Confluence of Hearers. For clearing whereof I need not remember you how Ministers were banished and ejected out of Towns, how Fifty Pounds Sterling was the Fine of every Master in whose House a Conventicle was found, how Officers and Spies were and are set in several Towns to spy out and seize summarily both on Meetings and Ministers; and lastly, how Men and Women both have been dragged, without Warrant of Law, from Meetings in Houses, to Prisons, as if less bailable than Murderers, and some forced to go out at Windows to escape the Inconveniency. These Things, I say, are but too well known: But that which more presseth, and better expresseth the Necessity I plead, is the Paucity of Ministers, which is such, that it is rare to find Two or Three of them together in a Shire, and the great Confluence of Hearers, whose extraordinary Number, neither Houses nor Churches can receive; so that all these Things laid together, I would gladly ask you or any sober Man, what other Cause a poor People under a Pressure of Conscience, and Soul-indigence for such Occasions should take? and what better Expedient they could fall upon, when no Choice was left them, than to imitate our Lord's Example, so great, so good, and so constant a Field-conventicler? Men of late speak against our Field-meetings, as if they were a wild Choice of our own Fancy, and that we had needlessly left Houses when we might have kept them; but as the contrary is too too evident, so I am perswaded that any who considers, how that, whether for withdrawing, or for going to other allowed Churches besides our own, or for House-meetings, or for Field-meetings, or for building Houses to our selves, or lastly, for going unto vacant Churches, we have been always persecute with the same Rigour, will easily be convinced that it is neither this nor that Manner of it, but Nonconformity in whatsoever Form, that is the only Object of the Bishops their implacable Animosity. But you say, there are several scandalous Circumstances in our Meetings that do most provoke, such as our hearing of forfeited and intercommuned Ministers, our meeting in Arms, and our Preachers speaking unsufferably against Authority. But first, I am glad you do not object our hearing of Papists, Anabaptists, and other Sectaries, but I think you make no question that this is but a Calumny, as also that if it were more true, it would be less objected. Next, as to our own hearing of forfeited and intercommuned Ministers, I think even our Enemies will not say, that either Forfeiture or Intercommuning doth unminister, so that since Men, through the Lord's good Providence, have escaped, and are preserved from the Effect of these Law-censures, we see nothing that should hinder us to own and regard them as the Lord's Ministers, and our Pastors, except Law-hazards, which may well make our Reckoning greater, but doth not make it worse: You know that more might be said upon the Grounds and Causes for which these few forfeited Ministers were so sentenced, but I forbear. Only as to the Intercommuned; since the Ground of this Intercommuning was the Mens Faithfulness, and that they therefore have been treated with Severities which used only to be exercised towards the most notorious Criminals, such as wilful Murderers, Thieves and Robbers fugitive from Law, I see not why it should not endear them the more to us, and give our Rulers just Cause to blame themselves for the Contempt of Authority, which in effect is only occasioned through their own first abusing it. As for our Meeting in Arms, you know perfectly that this is only practised in a very few Places, by a very few Men, and yet talked of at a very monstrous Rate; but it is indeed this Fable that I think shall turn one Kingdom to a Fable, for as it was made the greatest Pretence to condemn the West, unheard, into a State of Rebellion, and bring upon it the late hostile and barbarous Invasion, albeit it cannot be instanced that ever at any Meeting in these Parts, his Majesty's Forces were either resisted, or in the least apparent Hazard of being resisted, so now it is blown up with all the Cunning and Industry possible, to make the Kingdom believe that they are in such an imminent Danger as cannot be prevented, except by the Payment of such Sums as are like to prove its undoing. Our Field-meetings were at first soberly called Seditions, then the Style is improved, and they are called Rebellions, but the Design requiring it, they must be proscribed as execrable, and this 3d and last Blast is thought enough to blow us from both our Monies and Liberties, but, Sir, si populus vult decipi, decipietur; it is known to all that these Meetings were generally at first, and are still in many Places so naked and defenceless, that Two or Three idle Fellows, without any Warrant, have at their own Hand fallen upon Meetings of seven or eight Hundred, and scattered them without Resistance, and oft times about Glasgow and other Parts, three or four Redcoats have and may still dissipate Thousands of these Meeters most securely: Which Things albeit they have often happened, and that with such Beatings and Pillagings, and other Insolencies as Law doth not allow, and Flesh and Blood can hardly bear, yet have neither these nor the abovementioned Act of Parliament, making these Meetings capital, as I have said, provoked them for the most Part to any better Posture, and all that can be with Truth alledged, is, that partly to protect three or four Ministers in more special Hazard by reason of a Price set by the Council on their Heads, and partly to prevent the profane Interruptings and Abusings of God's holy Worship, and sincere Worshipers, by the Boldness of contemptible, and oft times non-warranted Parties, some few in remote Parts have been moved to come together in such Condition as might secure them from such Attempts. But if these Things be a little offensive, may it not, think you, be a reasonable Allay to reflect upon all the Violences, even to the wounding and killing of several Persons, that have been committed in our Meetings without any Opposition; and how often have Sheriffs with their Men, and Parties of the Militia, and standing Forces, come to our Meetings, and been encountered by double, yea, triple their Number, who could have eat them up? and yet so great was the Deference to Authority, that all done was to break off and capitulate for a safe Retreat. It is true the Act 1670. calls the Field-meetings Renderings of Rebellion; and this groundless Conceit hath been so much of late talked of, that the simple may possibly believe that they are declared to be such, and the being at them made a kind of statutory Treason; but there is indeed no such Matter, and all the Import of the Phrase is, That the Legislators, in a more passionate than judicious Preface, thought fit to imploy that angry ugly Expression, to render the Thing more odious; but as to the Body of the Act, it is clear and precise enough, and contains no such Thing. In a word, Sir, you may see that neither were the Fields our Choice, nor should our Arms (for since Men call them so, I may comply, albeit it is scarcely without laughing and blushing at their Fecklessness) be farther considered than to move and induce our Rulers to moderate these Severities that have provoked to them: But if Humour take Authority, and so it become determined, were it even against the most ridiculous of all Things, so wit, for Instance, even Laughter, it is certain that neither Pretences even specious enough, nor Disorders and Confusions infinitely greater, would be wanting in the prosecuting of its Discharge. But the Third Thing you object is, That our Ministers speak insufferably against Authority; and I shall not say but Temptations too visible, and Infirmities inseparable to the best, may carry to a little Excess sometimes: But on the other Hand, I may assure you with the justest Confidence, that the Reports that commonly are spread of this, are very false and calumnious, that it is but seldom, and in clearly inviting Occasions that they at all meddle with publick Matters ; and that if Mens most horrible Defections, and most unchristian and unnatural Persecutions were but in the least reflected upon, our Ministers Talkings, were there ten-fold more, would sooner be excused than reproached. I might have intitled longer upon all these Heads, and also have commended these Meetings from the Lord's visible Presence with them, and the most remarkable Fruits of the Gospel that have attended them, above the Discrediting of all the Calumnies of the Adversary, but Wisdom is justified of her Children; only, to evince to you or any reasonable Man that hath not laid aside all Regard to Conscience, and is not wretchedly infatuated with the so much lately magnified Delusion, that Peace and Nonconformity, every where compatible, upon far more different Terms, are only in Scotland incompatible on any Terms, let our Rulers but once apply themselves to any Thoughts of a fair Toleration, and you shall quickly see our Tolerableness. I know they have already tried Indulgences, but is it not also manifest that these were ensnaring to Consciences, so restrictive of ministerial Liberty, so uneasy as to the Persons of Men, and so unindulgent to other Parts of the Kingdom, that it is rather to be marvelled that they have produced so much Quiet? Our ill Willers would have it also believed that some of us are so humourfom that we neither agree with our Brethren that are indulged, nor could agree among our selves in any possible Demand; but albeit we be dissatisfied with the Pretences of the Indulgences, and care little for such clogg'd Indulgences, yet we know well enough, that even ill contrived, and far worse intended Favour may be innocently made use of; and altho' I will not take upon me to be a Proposer, yet this I am sure of, That the simplest Concessions are every way the best, and do nothing doubt but that the Liberty which the Infidels grant to Christians in Turkey, or Papists grant to Protestants in France, or even Prelatists grant to Nonconformists in England and Ireland, may afford very effectual Directions. Nay, I am perswaded, that would our Rulers but assuringly and fairly allow us to meet in Houses, without hindring those that would not enter, to abide and hear without, it would prove a more certain Remedy of all their Jealousies of our Meetings in the open Fields, and with Arms, than all their Hosts, Forces and Conventions ; or if you please to bring the Business yet lower, both for refusing Calumny, and removing all offensive Appearances, let our Rulers only declare, That they will not cause attack and disturb our Meetings in hostile Manner, but content themselves to prosecute us and them by Order of Law, and legal Process, and I am sure the few that come in Arms, would instantly lay them aside. What Reason there is then for a Convention, and all the Burdens wherewith it threatneth the poor, afflicted, distressed Kingdom, let all Men judge, and I hope these concerned will consider. But, Sir, for to make way to these Discoveries that I farther promised, hath not Force already been used by Daniel's Army in 1666 and 1667, and now again by the Highland Host? Hath it not been the Work of our Parliament, and the constant Will of Our Council now these 17 Years, to establish Conformity, and suppress that they call the contrary Disorders? hath not the Bond and Lawborrow also been contrived (and, if you please, you may suppose, that one or both of them had been taken universally) with the greatest Caution and most extensive Provision imaginable for this Effect? and what hath all availed, and what, I pray you, can be promised, from the utmost of this Kind that can be devised? Far be it from me to boast, the Subject is too sad, and I know too well both the Weakness of Men, and the Uncertainty of sublunary Things, to give way to that Vanity; but if my Apprehensions may be received by you with the same Sobriety and Sincerity wherewith I desire to entertain them, I am much of the Opinion, that albeit we should give 5, nay 10 Years Cess, and should order all the Forces it can bear, to be levied, it will not bring the Work of our Meetings to nought, and Men will much sooner weary themselves both of paying and persecuting, than the Lord's People will weary of his Service; and yet for all this the Matter is far from being desperate, for let but a fair equal Liberty be granted, not excluding any Caution that may be reasonable for securing of the publick civil Peace, and I dare engage a Serenity of mutual Peace amongst Fellow-subjects, and pure Affection and Submission from all to his Majesty, shall shine forth amongst us as ever blessed a People; which Things being so hard and hopeless on the one Hand, and on the other so easy and promising, is it possible Men should err in their Choice, were they not under very sinister and pernicious Influences? I need not tell you how Factions have risen, and been driven these several Years in this Nation; and amongst other Things it hath been one of our wicked Calumnies to perswade themselves and others, that the malcontent Lords and we do now understand one another, and that, I warrant you, is dangerous enough, but for what other Reasons or Ends, except it be to involve themselves with us in the same Oppressions, and Miseries I could never conceive. Thus you see the most conformable of them have been pressed with the late Bond and Lawborrow, and that without any Respect either to their own unquestionable Conformity, or their utter Incapacity to undertake for others, or lastly, the certain Insignificance of the Bond as to the Thing pretended to by it. But the Unhappiness of the Affair was, that the best Reason that these Malcontents had for their refusing, viz. Incapacity, and Impossibility was also the strongest, yea, only Reason to urge them to it, seeing that the Imposers did thereby clearly understand that by subscribing or enacting they would be wholly at their Mercy for the full avail of their Fortunes; and now that you know how obnoxious our Governors have made themselves by their late Acts, and what Complaints have been made of them, can you doubt but that the special Motive of the calling of this Convention, hath been that common Maxim, That when Men have run into the greatest Disorders, there remains no Way of doing better, but by doing worse, and the principal End of the Indiction is, to have Money and Forces to secure the Projectors by the Ruin of their Opposers? I confess it is also very probable, that Avarice and Ambition, especially the former, have had a powerful Accession; but this is no further of my Concern then to tell you, that he must be very dull, or infinitely easy and opulent, that can suffer himself to be cheated by such manifest Contrivances of Avarice, Ambition and Revenge, out of both his Money and Liberty, upon thin and Thread-bare Pretences of our so necessary, harmless, and easily remediable Field-conventicles. I thought also to have remarked to you the great Kindness of the Country (so much wasted and disordered) the good Example of other Kings (no doubt the most Christian King for one) for securing themselves against foreign and their own People, (our present Want of Defence against foreign Invasions (when all Men talk of a general Peace) the Unproportionableness of our present standing Forces, against the Danger of Conventicles (when yet Two fair Words, Let them serve God in Quietness, would blow away all the Hazard) and the maintaining of the Forces to be raised in the equal and regular Way (that is, after the exhausting of the West, by an equal acting upon all) which are the rest of the Reasons hinted at in the Proclamation; but seeing I have already said enough for clearing the true Causes, I am loth to trouble you with any Reflections, and do securely leave all to the Wisdom, Fidelity and Courage of these honourable Persons that are to meet in this Assembly, and the sovereign and over-ruling Disposal of the almighty God, who standeth in the Congregation of the Mighty, and judgeth among the Gods. Will they full judge unjustly, and accept the Persons of the wicked? Let them defend the poor and fatherless, do Justice to the afflicted and needy, deliver the poor and needy, and rid them out of the Hands of the wicked; if they know not, neither will understand, if they walk on in Darknets, when all the Foundations of the Land are out of Course, though they be called Gods, and all of them the Children of the most High, yet shall they die like Men, and fall as one of the Princes. Arise, O God, judge the Earth, for thou shalt inherit all Nations. So I bid you Farewel.

Act and offer of 1800,000 Pounds by the Convention, 1678. N^o. XCVII.

THE Convention of Estates of the Kingdom of Scotland, by his Majesty's Authority and Command, at this Time assembled, considering the great Happiness, Peace, and Tranquillity they enjoy under His Majesty's Royal Government, and His fatherly Care for this His ancient Kingdom, in being so watchful over all its Concerns; and that as all Kings and Estates do at present carefully secure themselves and their People, by providing against all such foreign Invasions and intestine Commotions, as may make them a Prey to their Enemies. So it is not fit that this Kingdom should only of all others, remain without Defence, in a Time wherein these dangerous Field-conventicles, declared by Law Rendezvous of Rebellion, do still grow in their Numbers and Insolencies, against all which, the present Forces cannot in Reason be thought a suitable Security. And considering the many frequent and renewed Professions this Kingdom hath made, with their Lives and Fortunes to serve His Majesty, in the Maintenance of His Honour, and Greatness, and that there is a new Opportunity offered to them to make good the Professions of their Zeal, Duty, and Affection: In Recognizance whereof, and in humble Acknowledgment of the same, and that His Majesty may be the better enabled to raise more Forces for securing this His ancient Kingdom, against all foreign Invasions and intestine Commotions; and to the End, they may be maintained by equal and regular Ways: And to let the World see the unanimous Affection of this His Majesty's ancient Kingdom, for the Maintenance of His Majesty's Royal Greatness, Authority, and Government, in Church and State, as it is now asserted and established by the Laws of the Kingdom, and in order to the Entertainment of such Forces, as His Majesty shall raise for the Defence thereof, the Convention of Estates of this Kingdom, for themselves, and in Name of, and as representing this His Majesty's ancient Kingdom, do humbly beseech His Majesty would be graciously pleased to accept the unanimous, ready, and cheerful Offer, and humble Tender of a new Supply of Eighteen hundred thousand Pounds Scots Money, to be raised and paid forth of the Shires and Burghs of this His Majesty's ancient Kingdom, in the Space of five Years, according to the present Valuations, and that as twenty five Months Cefs, in the whole, being five Months yearly, amounting to Three hundred and sixty thousand Pounds Scots, at two Terms in the Year, by equal Portions, beginning the first Term's Payment, being One hundred and fourscore thousand Pounds, at the Feast and Term of Martmas next to come, for the half Year immediately preceeding, commencing from the Term of Whitsunday last, in this Year of God, One thousand six hundred seventy and eight Years, and so forth to continue, and paying termly the foresaid Sum of One hundred and fourscore thousand Pounds Scots, until the Term of Whitsunday, One thousand six hundred eighty and three years inclusive, which is hereby declared to be the last Term of the said five Years, within which Space, the said Sum of Eighteen hundred thousand Pounds Scots, is due and payable, and that at the Proportions under-written respective, being five Months Cefs yearly, by the foresaid Space of five Years, which is two Months and one halt Month's Cefs for every Term.

King's Letter with Instructions about the Militia, with his Letter about the Oath and the Tenor of it, December 19. 1678. N^o. XCVIII.

Right trusty and welbeloved, &c. We greet you well. Having received an Account of your Diligence in the Matter of the new Model of the Militia of that our ancient Kingdom (so earnestly, in Our Letter of the 26 October last, recommended to your Care) We are therewith so well satisfied, that We cannot but return you Our Thanks for the same, and for the cheerful Readiness that appears in you upon all Occasions, to promote Our Service. We have seen the Instructions prepared by you to be given to the Commissioners of Our Militia, with a particular Account of the Division of the Five Thousand Foot, and Five Hundred Horse on the several Shires, according to the Proportion of the Militia appointed by the Twenty Fifth Act of the Third Session of Our First Parliament, in the Year, 1663. And We being very well pleased with both, have now thought fit to let you know, that We do approve the same. And therefore, We do hereby authorize and require you, to enjoin the Commissioners of Our Militia, punctually to observe those Instructions: And We do further authorize you, to add unto them such other Directions and Instructions, as you shall from Time to Time judge needful, for the more effectual Performing that Service. In the mean time, We will give Orders to dispatch the Commissions for the Officers, conform to the several Precincts mentioned in the said Division, to the end no Time may be lost in bringing so good a Work to Perfection. We have received your Letter, dated the last of November, and are very well satisfied with those hearty Expressions of your Duty to Us and Our Government; for which We return return you Our Thanks, being well assured of your Continuance in the same. We bid you heartily Farewell. Given at our Court at Whitehall, the Tenth Day of December, 1678. and of our Reign the Thirtieth Year. By his Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

Follow the Instructions mentioned in his Majesty's Letter, to be given by his Majesty's Privy Council to the Commissioners of the Militia of the several Shires in the Kingdom of Scotland.

His Majesty taking to Consideration the great Dangers which threaten his sacred Person and Government, and all his good and faithful Subjects, both from foreign and intestine Designs, and especially from the hellish Plot of Jesuits and Papists, and turbulent Commotions of seditious People; and his Majesty relying much on the constant Loyalty and Fidelity of this his ancient Kingdom, and laying hold upon the frequent Offers made by them to him of the Militia of Horse and Foot within the same, hath by his Letter to his Privy Council, signified his Royal Will, for putting a Part of the said Militia in a fit Capacity to act for the Preservation of himself: In obedience whereunto, his Majesty's Privy Council have, by an Act relative to his Majesty's Letter, appointed Five Thousand Foot, and Five Hundred Horse, of the Number of these Twenty Thousand Foot, and Two Thousand Horse of the Militia established by Act of Parliament, to be drawn out of the several Shires and Burghs of this Kingdom, being a Fourth Part of the whole (not including the Militia of the Town of Edinburgh) and that these Five Thousand Foot, and Five Hundred Horse be established according to the Rule of Proportion: And whereas the Proportion of your Shire of _____ is _____ Foot, and _____ Horses, you are therefore ordered to sient the Number of Horsemen and Footmen, upon the Parishes, Heritors and Liferenters in your Shire, in the usual Manner, having always a Care to patch upon such as may constantly attend the Service.

You are to appoint all these listed within your Shire to rendezvous and keep together Four Days each Month, at such Times, and such Places, as the Major of Foot, or Lieutenant of Horse shall appoint, whether it be by single Companies of Foot, Squades of Horse, or greater Number, or the whole, as the Major of Foot, or Lieutenant of Horse shall order.

You are to order the Heritors to give Allowance to the Horsemen and Foot Soldiers, for keeping the said Diets of Rendezvous of Four Days in every Month, and that for Ten Months (his Majesty being to pay them for the last two Months) at the Rate of Six Shillings Scots a Day for ilk Footman, and eighteen Shillings Scots for each Horseman, conform to the Act of Parliament; and ready Obedience is expected hereto, seeing they are at no more Expence by paying Forty Days to this Number, than they were at formerly, by paying Ten Days to the whole, which they either did, or should have done.

The Heritors of your Shire are to pay their Proportion of Forty eight Pounds Scots to the Trumpeter, with the Shires who are joyned with them in constituting the Troop; as also your Shire is to pay Twelve Pounds Scots to every Drummer who serves in the Companies within your Shire, conform to the Act of Parliament.

You are to appoint Two of your Number, per vices, to attend the First Day of each monthly Rendezvous within your Shire, and one of your Number to attend the general Rendezvous of your Regiment or Troop when they come together, it being necessary that there be one Commissioner present for every Shire, out of which the Regiment or Troop is taken, to the effect they may give Order for fining and punishing the Absents, and for proceeding against all Deficients, and for Performance of every Thing else incumbent to them, conform to the Acts of Parliament and Council made thereanent, as well in every Company of Foot, and Squadron of Horse, as when the whole Regiment and Troop are together.

These two Commissioners, with the Concurrence of the commanding Officer, present for the Time, of the Foot Company or Squadron of Horse, or Corporalship, and of the Major of Foot and Lieutenant of Horse, or other commanding Officer present, when the Regiment of Foot or Troop of Horse are together, are carefully to cause paynd every Deficient and other Transgressors, conform to the Acts of Parliament and Council anent the Militia; hereby requiring the said Commissioners to do exact Diligence herein, as they will be answerable at their utmost Peril, and certifying these Commissioners who shall be absent, or, being present, shall neglect their Duty hereby and by Act of Parliament entrusted to them, they shall be proceeded against, as Contemners of his Majesty's Authority and Service, and Neglecters of the publick Peace of the Kingdom.

N. B. Several Instructions, not of any publick Concern, are left out.

These Instructions the Council earnestly recommend to you, as you would testify your Care and Affection to the Protestant Religion, and of the Preservation of the Honours, Lives and Fortunes, not only of the present, but of the succeeding Generations, and as you would not dissatisfy or disappoint so gracious and so affectionate a King, who, upon all Occasions, and especially this, hath evidenced so great a Trust in you, and to great Solicitude for your Safety. Approven at Whitehall, December 10. 1678.

The same Day, King's Letter about the Oath, with the Tenor thereof.

RIGHT Trusty and well beloved, &c. We greet you well. We having, for the Security of Our ancient Kingdom of Scotland, and of the Protestant Religion therein, ordained you by Our Letter 26th October last, to draw out Five thousand Foot, and Five hundred Horse of Our Militia Forces of that Our Kingdom, to be trained and disciplined in Manner therein exprest; and being desirous that such as are to be employed in that Service be in a most sure and special Manner obliged to maintain and promote the Protestant Religion, as well as Our Royal Interest (which two We think inseparably conjoined) it is therefore Our Will and Pleasure, that you give Order to Our Major General, in Our Name, to command all Our Forces, who are to be employed in that Part of Our Militia, besides the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, to exact from all the Soldiers, both Horse and Foot, to be employed under them, the Oath in a Paper herewith sent, and that not in the ordinary Way that such military Oaths use to be exacted, by drawing up the Troop or Company together in a Body, but that every Soldier, one after another, shall by himself swear the same. And to the effect this may be a general Rule over all, We have thought it fit, that Our standing Forces, both Horse and Foot, and Dragoons already raised, or that before this We have ordered to be raised, do likewise take this Oath, and in the same Manner that those of Our Militia are appointed to do, in which you are to give the same Order to Our Major General; and so we bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the Tenth Day of December 1678. and of Our Reign the Thirtieth Year. By his Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

Follows the Form of the military Oath.

I A. B. do swear to be true and faithful to my Sovereign Lord King Charles, and his lawful Successors, and in my Station to maintain the present Government in Church and State, as it is now established by Law, and to oppose to my Power the damnable Principle of taking up Arms against the King, or these commissionate by him, upon any Pretext whatsoever, and to be obedient in all Things to His Majesty's Major General or Commander in Chief, authorized by his Majesty for the Time being, and will behave my self obediently to my superior Officers, in all that they shall command me for his Majesty's Service: And I do further swear, That I will be a true, faithful and obedient Soldier, every way performing my best Endeavours for his Majesty's Service, obeying all Orders, and submitting to all such Rules and Articles of War, as are or shall be established by his Majesty. So help me GOD. By his Majesty's special Command, Whitehall, 10th December 1678.

Council's Letter to the King on the Popish Plot, Nov. 30. 1678. N^o. XCIX.

May it please your sacred Majesty,
WHEN we remember the Confusions in which we were involved before your Majesty's happy Restoration, the Slavery and Tyranny from which we were thereby redeemed, your Clemency which then covered, and has since prevented so many Crimes, the Peace that you have procured, the Justice which you have so impartially administrate, and the Benignity of your Temper, we do, with great Horror, Indignation, and profound Amazement, reflect on that execrable and hellish Plot against your most sacred Person, and having a solemn and publick Fast, for imploring the Protection of almighty GOD to your sacred Person, and that he might be pleased in His infinite Goodness to discover and confound all such desperate and damnable Conspiracies: We in the next Place conceived our selves obliged to congratulate, in this our humble Address, the wonderful Deliverance that GOD has bestowed upon these Kingdoms (and us in particular) in securing the Protestant and Reformed Religion, and your Majesty's Royal Person, from such imminent Dangers, as might have left us a Prey to all that our Enemies could have wished, or we could have have feared ; of which Duty we had more early acquitted our selves, if we had not thought, we were first obliged to try, if by any Discovery in this your ancient Kingdom, we could have found any in the remotest Accession to that villanous Guilt, that we might with our Congratulations presented you with these hateful Traitors as Sacrifices : And now, among our other Joys, one is, That as yet we can neither by Papers nor Examinations find, that any of this Kingdom have dipt in that execrable and impious Conspiracy ; nor shall we lessen our Endeavours in that Re-search, since we can never be too diligent, in what can never be repaired, if our Endeavours should now languish, wishing to have our Hands strengthened, and our Care directed by your Majesty's Royal and judicious Commands, whose Protection is the chief Bulwark of the orthodox Church. We have sent your Majesty for this end, an Account of your pious and wise Laws made by your Royal Predecessors against Papists ; for Prosecution whereof in the Method your Majesty shall prescribe, and for the Maintenance of all your Majesty's just Rights and Royal Prerogatives, we do for our selves, offer your Majesty our humble and hearty Endeavours : And we may assure your Majesty, that the far greater Part of your Subjects here, are content to hazard for the Service of GOD, and your Authority, their Lives and Fortunes, with a Zeal that may testify their Devotion and Loyalty. That GOD may protect your sacred Person, and in your Preservation protect this reformed Church, shall be the fervent and daily Prayers of your Majesty's most faithful, most humble, and most obedient Subjects and Servants.

Council's Letter to Lawderdale, Nov. 30. 1678. N^o. C.

May it please your Grace,
WE have thought it our Duty to congratulate his Majesty's happy Delivery from that execrable Plot, which threatened so imminently the Protestant Religion, and the Peace of those Kingdoms : We hope your Grace (upon whose Conduct and Kindness we always rely) will second our Letter with these Assurances of our Loyalty, which your Grace knows we will be ready to make good upon all Occasions, and to which we think our selves more especially tied in this Conjunction of Affairs, wherein every Man finds his own Interest and Happiness involved in his Majesty's Preservation. We had not been so late in this Duty, if we had not thought it convenient to try if we could have discovered any Accession to that Design here, and are glad to find, that none of this His Majesty's ancient Kingdom has been so far deserted by GOD, or has so far abandoned his own Reason (for what we can yet discover) as to conspire against the Happiness of his native Country, in the Person of our incomparable Monarch, at whose Command his Subjects will (we hope) be very ready to hazard all that is dearest to them, and from whom we expect such Instructions, as may enable us to put his Laws and Inclinations in Execution. We have herewith sent a List of these Laws that strike against Papists, as to which no Man can better satisfy his Majesty than your self, who has had the deserved Honour to be so long one of his Judges and faithful Ministers, and whose Fidelity in all that relates to his Royal Interest is so well known to, May it please your Grace, your Grace's affectionate Friends.

FINIS.
